CAPTAN COUNTY FAIR

Fair in September. Race Meet on August 10th. And Good Roads Meeting.

CAPTAN NEWS AND NOTES.

Captain will hold a County Fair in September, prepare for it. Arrangements were perfected Monday evening to have another racing meet and Field day at Captain on August tenth. Committees were appointed to take charge of the work, and no effort will be spared to make the meeting a success, as well as to provide for the amusement and enjoyment of all who may attend. An effort will be made to have an excursion run from Carrizozo for the benefit of people living at that, and other towns on the railroad.

A Good Roads meeting will also be held in the forenoon at the School house or some other suitable place and matters pertaining to the betterment of our County roads will be discussed and a thorough organization perfected. It is greatly desired that everyone interested in this great subject—and who is it that is not—should meet with us on the day appointed and aid in the good work.

Don't forget the date and make your arrangements accordingly.

A. N. Zumwalt and family, for many years residents of this county, departed last Monday for the western part of Socorro County. They are traveling across country by wagon and will go to Carthage and Magdalena.

Allen Johnson spent several days last week at Corona, repairing B. F. Adams' auto.

Al Smith, Carrizozo's crack chauffeur spent several days in Captain overhauling his auto, at the Johnson Bros. Garage and repair shop.

A number of cases of small pox are reported at Arabela and one at Richardson. The affected party at Richardson is under quarantine, but only after the patients father had been put to sleep by a blow on the head with a gun in the hands of the precinct constable; the old man refused to observe the quarantine regulations and resisted the officer who was obliged to resort to strenuous measures.

The road supervisor has a crew of men working the roads in this precinct, the recent heavy rains did considerable damage to the roads and the work was needed very much.

C. D. Wilson left home Monday to cut alfalfa on the Railroad Company's farm above Lincoln.

Senator Tom Catron has introduced a bill in the U. S. Senate, to grant a pension of $40 per month to James Bandy, of Richardson. Mr. Bandy served in the Indian wars of 1854 in Texas.

Judge Bellamy is spending the summer in Captain.

NOTICE

Socialist State Organizer, Andrew Eggert of Rowell, will lecture at Alto Aug. 7th and at Carrizozo the 8th, 7:30 p. m. Every one invited.

UP TO DATE AND NOVEL

ADVERTISING METHODS ADOPTED BY AN ENTERPRISING HOUSE.

That the Carrizozo Trading Company is fast becoming metropolitan in the methods of advertising to call the public's attention to the many splendid values which they are offering, also that they are keeping up with and just a little bit ahead of the times in an advertising respect, is again practically demonstrated by what is perhaps the most elaborate system of advertising ever attempted by any business house in this section, namely, the giving away of the beautiful Upton Piano which is now on exhibition at their store.

This Piano retails at $400.00, guaranteed for ten years. The principal points of superiority of this piano over any other of this class of instruments lie in the three strings in unison with overstrung bass; the splendidly pitched scale and true sounding board, which give the Upton that rich, deep and even tone so much admired.

In a recent interview with the manager of the Carrizozo Trading Company regarding this innovation in advertising, Mr. Evans stated: We have been enjoying the patronage and confidence of the buyers of this community for some time now and by trying to keep our stocks complete, the saying that "you can get it at the Carrizozo Trading Company" has become a household expression. In giving away this piano we are actuated by a double purpose—to show our appreciation of the patronage of our friends during the past, also to encourage new trade and to bring the many splendid values we are now showing in all lines to the attention of every buyer in this community. The plan we are using in giving away this piano is equitable and fair to all, simply this, every person buying one dollar's worth of anything at our store will receive a coupon for 100 votes. The person returning to us on January 24, 1913 the largest number of votes will be given the piano absolutely free of all cost. No favors will be shown. Our reputation for square dealing assures our customers of that fact.

This four hundred dollar Upton Piano is surely a present worth having and we predict a very merry race for votes during the next few months.

The Carrizozo Trading Company are surely to be congratulated upon their broad-minded methods and "Trade Getter" advertising system.

JICARILLA GOLD STRIKE

Rich Strick of Gold Ore is Reported from the Famous Jicarilla District.

LOOKS LIKE MOTHER LODE.

A rich strike has been recently made by Wm. A. Franklin, a mining engineer, who has for twenty years been interested in mining in New Mexico and Arizona, at a point about three miles south of Jicarilla—the Famous Old Placer Mining Camp of Lincoln county.

If the strike is as good as reported to us, it will mean much for mining industries of this district. The location of the strike is only about eight miles distant from the town of White Oaks where millions of dollars in gold has, in the past been produced; consequently it is more than probable that the find will prove to be permanent.

The ore bodies are described as being of tremendous size, covering practically an acre of seventy acres—in fact the entire mountain side appears to be one huge body of ore. The bulk of the ore, lying on the lower slopes of the mountain, is medium and low grade—always, recently made having given returns of from three ($3.00) to twenty ($20) dollars in gold per ton.

A peculiar feature of the occurrence of the ore is that two very strong veins—both of which are more than 20 feet in width—were found paralleling each other splitting through the country rock following a northeasterly and southwesterly trend, and are separated by not more than 100 feet, in which the ore is found, consists of white and monzonite porphyry and granite. Cutting through the formations and veins mentioned are a number of cross leads from one of which some very high grade ore was recently taken. The high grade vein is about four feet in width and the values commence at the grass roots. Numerous pieces of ore exhibited at our office showing gold scattered freely through the quartz. The gold does not appear to be dependent upon iron seams nor streaks of quartz crystals but is found thru all portions of the vein matter. This is believed in itself to be an indication of permanence and persistence in the ore bodies.

A trench over 100 feet in length has been run on the high grade vein and the rich ore continues to show for the entire distance. Seven other open cuts made in the property, and varying from 20 to 40 feet, in every instance shows ore of good value.

Mr. Franklin states that the ore bodies are so extensive that it would be entirely practical to quarry the ore. This refers, of course, to the medium and low grade ores, which open out in places on the surface to a width of over 200 feet. A number of men who have been in the mining business for years and are competent to judge coincide with the lucky discoverer of the property in declaring it to be the greatest body of ore of commercial value ever discovered in the Southwest.

It is expected that this find will create considerable excitement and will cause a rush to the district.

COUNTY SEAT NEWS.

Judge Edmund C. Abbott on last Saturday, July 27th, 1912, heard counsel for Carrizozo in chambers at Santa Fe, at which time evidence was introduced in an effort to show that the sureties on the bond in the Lincoln County seat matter were not qualified for the second or additional $10,000 Bond recently demanded by Judge Abbott. After hearing the arguments of Attorney Hudspeth for Carrizozo and Attorney C. C. Catron for Lincoln, Judge Abbott announced that he would demand a surety company bond in the case if one could be procured and if not procurable, a referee is to be set in Lincoln County and evidence is to be submitted before him showing the actual up-to-date valuation of the parties signing the bond. A third choice was given Lincoln whereby they may produce an entirely new bond, which must be unquestionable good for $10,000 and liable for that much damages to accrue.

In announcing his decision Judge Abbott stated that he believed there were now and would be more damages and that a good bond must be secured, and that if such a bond had not been submitted on or before September 5th at which time he will return from his vacation that he would issue an order dissolving the injunction now restraining the construction of the county buildings at Carrizozo.

Two counties Quay and Taos, sent proxies with M. A. Otero and George W. Prichard, of Santa Fe, bosses of the new party, who had a carefully prepared diagram which the delegates ratified.

FARM AND GARDEN

STUMP DESTROYER IS NOVEL

Solution of Problem of Clearing Land Appears to Be Solved by Washington Genius.

The problem of clearing away unsightly stumps appears to have been solved by a man in the state of Washington. Heretofore this has been done chiefly by blasting, but the apparatus shown in the illustration burns the stump down close to the ground. A vertical hole is drilled through the stump and two lateral holes, reaching to it. The reservoir is then wheeled up to it and two sets of tubes connected with the two side holes. Burning liquid fuel and air under pressure is injected through one hole and an inflammable liquid is injected through the other. When the two meet in the center hole the liquid is ignited and spreads through the entire stump, devouring it until it is eaten through down to the ground, leaving a level surface instead of the tora remains that follow dynamiting.

GIVING PLENTY OF DISTANCE

Common Mistake Made by Many Gardeners Is That of Crowding Plants Too Close.

Many gardeners make the mistake of crowding garden vegetables too close in the drill. Vegetables require rapid growth and quick maturity to give quality and favor to the plants when served. Unless the soil is exceptionally rich, and there is plenty of soil moisture available during the growing season, the plants are apt to be dwarfed and the quality of the vegetables impaired.

In producing vegetables for the market, the grower will endeavor to grow plants of high quality and desirable flavor, and he cannot afford to take any risk. It is far better to produce fewer products and gather vegetables of better quality than to have an abundance that do not command fair prices.

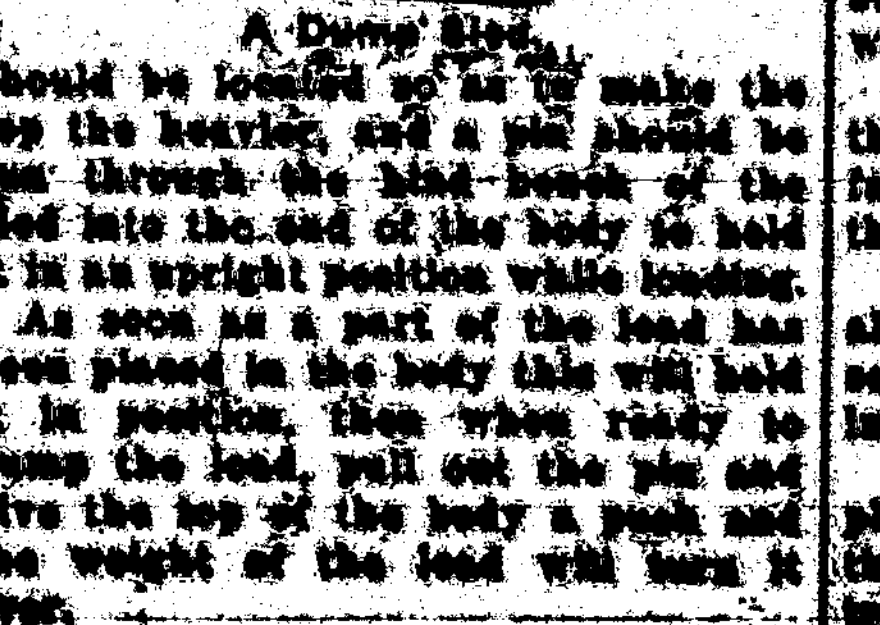

The safest plan is to sow plenty of seeds in order that a good stand may be secured. If the plants are tender and the spring is favorable for the insects, diseases, cold nights, etc., leave about twice as many plants as you desire to grow. When the weather is favorable for the growth of the plants, thin promptly, leaving the required number of plants. Be sure that the plants have sufficient distance to produce vegetables of extra quality.

DUMP SLED IS QUITE USEFUL

Can Conveniently Be Used for Hauling Manure During Both Summer and Winter Months.

(By J. G. GORDON.)
A dump cart for summer and a dump sled for winter can be used very conveniently on the farm for hauling manure.

A box body may be adjusted to any sled. The pivots that swing the body

SPREAD MANURE EVERY DAY

Practice Greatly Reduces Possibility of Losing Fertilizing Elements—Cart Is Handy.

A careful and intelligent use of stable manure will build up the fertility of any farm. The trouble with the average farmer is that he wastes his manure. The habit of regarding manure as valueless is one of the most expensive a farmer can have.

To properly conserve manure the liquids as well as the solids should be collected. For this purpose it is well to have the floors of the stalls so that they will drain easily into a water-tight gutter at the rear. This gutter should be stopped at both ends, but one end should be lower than the other to allow the liquids to drain to that end.

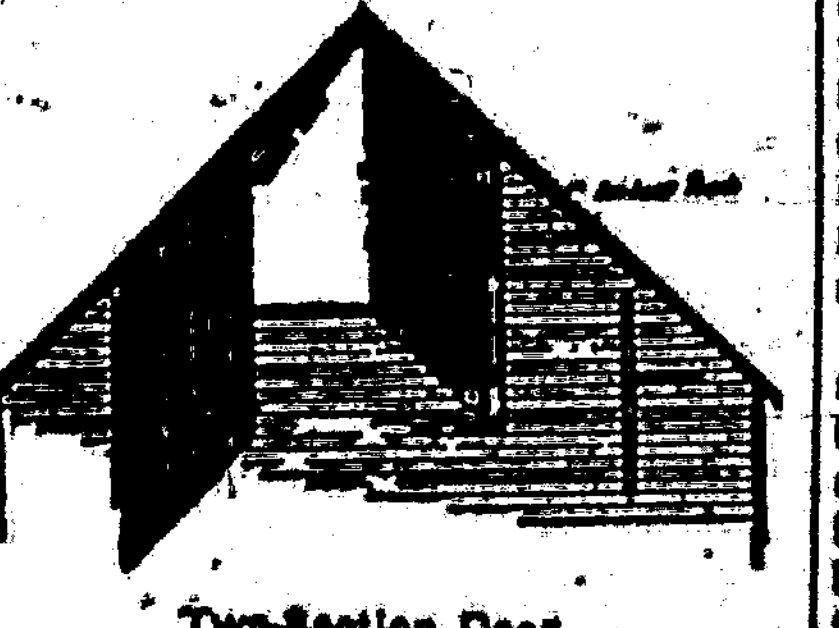

Manure should be spread every day when it is possible. This is very important, as it greatly reduces the chances of losing the fertilizing elements. In summer it can be spread on the field from which the soiling crops have been removed, and in winter on grain fields. Newly seeded fields should not be manured.

A hand cart may be used for spreading manure. Where there are a large number of cattle or horses, a special dump cart, drawn by a single horse, may be used. Daily spreading insures that any leaching by rains shall carry the leached materials into the soil where they are wanted.

PLAN OF TWO-SECTION DOOR

One Illustrated and Described That Has Been Found Entirely Safe to Open or Shut.

We use the two-section door on our barn and have found it successful. Each section is hung on an enclosed barn door track which is bolted to the siding just under the cornice. By cutting the doors at the bottoms at the same angles as the tops we can use stay rollers to hold them in place at the bottom, thus preventing flapping by the wind. We fastened a small side pulley on the inside near the top of each door and a double awning pulley to the first rafter in the comb of the roof, writes R. Schnaake in the Farmers' Mail and Breeds. By threading each cord through these pulleys the doors can easily be raised and lowered by one man. We have never had the least trouble with these doors and have always found them safe, open or shut.

Two-Section Door.

Growing Peas.
Peas grow best when the soil is cool and moist. For these reasons it is important to plant at the earliest possible date. Both the smooth and wrinkled varieties may be planted as soon as the ground can be prepared. Important varieties are Alaska, Nott's Excelsior, Thomas Linton and Gradus.

GARDEN and FARM NOTES

Potatoes after alfalfa are bound to make a fine crop.

The easiest way to kill a weed is never to let it sprout.

Try this rotation: Alfalfa, potatoes, grain. It is a good one.

Hen house cleanings make the best fertilizer for the onion patch.

Wide rows and a cultivator in the garden means less hand work.

Rotation makes use of all the elements of plant food in the soil.

The best time to fight weeds is the very first day they show their heads above ground.

The surest way of getting rid of moles is to set one of the steel spring traps over their road.

Smaller and more frequent plantings of vegetables will lengthen out the garden season.

A row of parsnips, carrots and celery planted now will come into good play next fall after frost.

Beet borrows or buy all the wood ashes you can to use in the garden; work it well into the soil.

If blossoms appear in the newly set strawberry beds, pick them off; this will make the plants stronger.

Cut the clover when a majority of the blossoms are turgid, and the alfalfa when the new shoots start from the crown.

Soil taken from a well-established alfalfa field and spread on land to be sown to alfalfa is a very good way to inoculate it.

Rotation of crops is one of the simplest, practical methods of increasing the productivity of the farm and decreasing losses.

COMFORT IN HOT DAYS

WELL TO LIVE OUT OF DOORS WHEN IT IS POSSIBLE.

Screened Porches Will Help Much to Get Away From the Ill Effects of the Heat—Open Air Sleeping Places the Best.

Most of the advantages of camping but may be enjoyed at home by those who live in houses with grounds about them. When the family owns a tent it may be pitched in the yard early in the summer and the children may be allowed to sleep there whenever they wish, weather permitting. The bedding should be brought in whenever it rains, and kept well aired. An old bed spring and a mattress or old cots provide satisfactory sleeping accommodations. Dark outing flannel pajamas are the best sleeping garments for camping out, and they should be provided for all the children regardless of sex.

The next step is the screening of the back or side porch. An ordinary kitchen table should be moved out there and there the family may eat their meals in comfort in hot weather. They may even spend the evening there in comfort. In the morning the mother may do most of her housework there. It is possible to wash there and even iron with the aid of an alcohol stove, which costs a quarter and which is now part of every camping outfit. The stove must be carefully used, but it accommodates a single iron with safety and convenience.

The same little stove will make it possible to let the range fire go out early in the afternoon and stay out. It is quite possible to cook the single hot fish which is enough for the summer supper on the stove. Toast may be made before the fire goes out and then warmed on the place which covers the fish in which milk, tomatoes or creamed meat is being warmed to spread over it. Breakfast may be simplified to coffee or milk for the children, cereal toast or rolls.

The up-to-date camping party takes along a fireless cooker to supplement the camp fire and alcohol stove, and this the housekeeper should never be without. It will make it possible to do the afternoon cooking without the range, even when a full meal is to be served, for the water for tea or coffee may be prepared on the alcohol stove.

The mother should spend every moment she can out of doors. It is easy to keep a rocking chair on the screened porch and shell the peas and peel the potatoes there, and the baby will be safe there all of the time provided the door is fastened. As a matter of fact, he should take his nap out there all the year round except in rainy or very cold weather.

The sewing machine may be wheeled out for afternoon use, and hand sewing should also be done in the open air. There is no particular virtue in the camping tent. The outdoor air is quite as accessible at home as in the woods.

The screened-in porch may be a blessing, not only by day, but also by night. Its roof, if slanting, may easily be built up level and provided with a board or canvas roof. It should then be screened in like the lower story. The advantage of such an outdoor sleeping place for a delicate child or older person might be very great.

Lemon Syrup.
One and three-fourths pounds of sugar, one quart of water, one ounce citric acid, 15 drops of essence of lemon. Boil sugar and water one-fourth hour, when cold add essence and acid. The citric acid must be finely powdered. Bottle closely, use two tablespoonfuls to a glass of water. This makes an excellent hot weather drink and takes the place of lemonade when it is not convenient to have lemons.

Caramel Pie.
One cup dark brown sugar, one heaping teaspoon of butter and a little water. Let boil till it halves. Prepare thickening as follows: One egg, one pint of sweet milk, two tablespoonfuls flour, a little more than level; stir egg, milk and flour together; stir in the boiling syrup and stir constantly until it thickens. Have baked crust same as for lemon pie. Fill baked pie crust and frost. Frosting: Beat the whites of an egg until stiff; spread on top of pie, sprinkle with granulated sugar.

Danish Hot Cakes.
Mix at night a quart of buttermilk and four enough to make a thin batter, a little salt. In the morning a couple of eggs beaten well; add a teaspoon of baking soda. Stir in the batter and fry your pancakes. Rubby will want them every morning.

How to Mend Graniteware.
Hold your pan over the fire and turn in a little shells. Let it cook on hard. Wipe just as though it was new.

Snappy Age.
The young man breezed into the old man's library.
"I met your daughter," he announced, "at a Fifth Avenue reception. I want to marry her next Friday afternoon at 3:30. She's willing."
The old man turned to his card index.
"Which daughter?" he asked.
"It's Miss Ethel."
"All right," said the old man. "Make it 4:30 and I'll attend the wedding. I have an engagement at the other hour."
It was so ordered. This is a snappy age.—Pittsburg Post.

Reformed Bandit is A Candidate for Office

FROM six-shooter and black mask to briefs, motions and pleadings. Such is the record of "Al" Jennings, erstwhile bandit, soldier of fortune and terror of the express companies in the Oklahoma territorial days. Jennings made amends to society long ago. He was captured by the man-hunters and sentenced to life imprisonment in the Federal prison at Columbus, O. President Roosevelt pardoned him after Jennings had served two years. Then Jennings came back to Oklahoma and began the practice of law in Oklahoma City. Now he is making a brilliant campaign for the Democratic nomination for county attorney of his home county. In announcing his candidacy he issues a remarkable statement in which he acknowledges the sins of his past and tells of his hopes for the future.

FORMER BANDIT'S ANNOUNCEMENT

"In announcing myself as a candidate for county attorney of Oklahoma county (subject to the Democratic primaries on August 6, 1912) I beg to say that it is not without mature and serious thought that I have done so. I have thought over all that might be objectionable. I have raked through the gray ashes of the past. I have taken a retrospective glance into the dark recesses of days that are gone, and I am willing that God's sunlight be turned full upon every act of my past life. I never wittingly deceived anybody; I never betrayed a trust or violated a confidence, and I would not deny the truth of my past for any office within the gift of the people. I would rather have my record in its blackest hue than to be pointed out as a public 'graffer,' official 'crook' or embezzler, who had violated his oath and prostituted the trust imposed upon him by the people. If the people are willing to confide to my care the office of county attorney of Oklahoma county I pledge my word and honor that I will send the men who have embezzled your money and violated their oaths of office to the penitentiary. AL J. JENNINGS."

Twenty years ago Jennings was the leader of a band of desperadoes who looted trains in broad daylight and eluded posse and United States marshals with ease. In October, 1897, he robbed his last train, a Rock Island passenger near Mingo, Okla., he was betrayed by a comrade, hunted across the state, doubling and turning like a fox, beating off his pursuers in desperate combats, he was finally captured and sent to Federal prison.

He had had a remarkable career. Born in Virginia, he was educated for the bar at West Virginia university, later emigrating to the Indian Territory. The murder of a younger brother under peculiarly scandalous circumstances made him an enemy of all society. He turned outlaw, robbed banks, trains and express offices. For years he was a thorn in the side of the territorial authorities.

"Beas Brummett" of the outlaws was the nickname given him because of his splendid courtesy while holding his victims helpless under the muscles of a pair of six-shooters. He was with a bandit named Hood, living away today what his band had risked their lives for yesterday. His cunning and shrewdness saved his followers from death and capture on many occasions.

On a hot July day in the afternoon Jennings was leading his outlaws in a dash for safety through the Osage reservation. They were being chased at the rancher ran by a posse of heavily armed marshals were outside demanding dinner.

They were at the gate, hardly 100 feet away from the door. There was not a tree in a mile. If the officers came in a bloody fight would ensue. Jennings was afraid of a stampede and a running conflict. The rancher was afraid his wife and children might be killed. The outlaw leader sat quietly at the table.

"Pass the soup, please," said Jennings in a matter-of-fact tone. The tension was broken. His head clipped back into their seats, keeping their hands on their guns. Jennings got up, looked out at the impatient officers and said to the rancher: "Go out and tell those boys that they can't get any dinner here today. Tell them so they will understand it."

Those boys understood. The rancher made it very plain to them that Jennings' band was inside and every man in the posse was covered by a gun. They told him. As soon as they were out of sight the outlaws slipped into the corn fields and continued their fight. They knew the officers were close behind.

They hid there until late afternoon. Just about sundown one of the bandits looked off toward the river and exclaimed: "Well, what do you think of that?" There was the posse descending the river to the Osage side with the sun glittering on their rifles. Later Jennings learned that the warning mark had kept him from riding straight into an ambush where "Bud" Ledbetter, deputy marshal, and a dozen heavily armed possemen were waiting. The first volley would have emptied every outlaw saddle.

This was all in a day's work for the slim young bandit, who long ago gave up outlawry to take up the profession that was then busy hunting him down. He was attorney for the defense in the recent trial of the Craven gang at Guthrie. Oklahoma is beginning to forget the train robber and think of Jennings altogether as a lawyer.

Jennings went adventuring in South American republics years ago. He met O. Henry, that O. Henry whose real name was Sidney Porter, down in one of the "banana republics." Jennings was a fugitive at the time, but he later went back to his "long riding" to the robbing of banks and trains and his hide-and-seek with the officers. Years afterward he and O. Henry renewed their friendship and Jennings spent much time in New York with the short-story writer.

Jennings' quick wit alone saved them from annihilation in the river bottoms. The corn was tall enough to shield the bandits who followed a wagon trail through the field. Near the edge of the field Jennings' quick eye saw a wide mark in the dust of the road. He took it as a friendly warning, and after some argument the band wheeled and rode off through the corn rows to a timbered hill.

They hid there until late afternoon. Just about sundown one of the bandits looked off toward the river and exclaimed: "Well, what do you think of that?" There was the posse descending the river to the Osage side with the sun glittering on their rifles. Later Jennings learned that the warning mark had kept him from riding straight into an ambush where "Bud" Ledbetter, deputy marshal, and a dozen heavily armed possemen were waiting. The first volley would have emptied every outlaw saddle.

This was all in a day's work for the slim young bandit, who long ago gave up outlawry to take up the profession that was then busy hunting him down. He was attorney for the defense in the recent trial of the Craven gang at Guthrie. Oklahoma is beginning to forget the train robber and think of Jennings altogether as a lawyer.

in Canadian county, Okla., where he was county attorney for one term. This was in the first years of his life in the southwest. It was after this promising start in the west that he became a bandit. Now that he has entirely given up his old companions and his love for outlawry, he hopes to get back into the harness of the law.

OBJECT OF ENVY.

A deep sigh of sorrow broke from the lips of little Freddie.

"I wish," he said, plaintively, "I wish I was Billy Smith."

His mother was astonished—shocked.

"Why, Freddie?" she asked. "Billy Smith has none of the nice things you have. He doesn't get any pocket money, and he isn't as big as you, and he's not nearly so strong. His father never buys him presents or—"

"Yes; I know all about that," said Freddie. "But—"

"And then look what a nice home you have, and nice books, and you never have to go out when it's cold and wet to carry papers, and—"

"Yes, I know that," said Freddie, indignantly, annoyed at his mother's strange lack of sympathy and understanding. "But Billy has wiggle his ears, and I can't."—Answers.

Outlets Assistance.

Patient (a sportsman who has been badly peppered)—But, hang it all, doctor, since the accident I've gained two-pound!

Doctor—Ah, but you forget the amount of shot you received in your back.—Tattler.

Quite Facile.

He never does deceive his crew, And here's the reason why! She doesn't trust him, anyhow, And there's no use to try.

GHOSTS EVER BOTHER YOU?

If So, Southern Negro Folks Say These Simple Precautions Will Chase 'Em.

As a part of the folklore of the negro folks the superstitions of slavery days are of great interest. The following are some of the negro's beliefs about ghosts:

To feel a hot breath of air strike you at twilight signified the nearby presence of a ghost. Should you wish to avoid him, stop and turn your coat and trousers and hat wrong side out and the spirit cannot encounter you.

If, however, he is a pugnacious sprite and approaches despite the change, turn and address him thus: "In the name of the Lord, what do you want?" Whereupon he will tell you his business upon earth, then depart and never trouble you again. If, on the other hand, it is a prowling ghost who crawls under the house, humps against the floor, makes strange sounds, and whispers in the midnight hours, you have only to put in a new floor and he will do so no more.

Some ghosts are obtrusive and will not only prow about the house, but creep in through the crack of the door in the wee small hours of the night, and, once inside, expand to vast proportions. To spare yourself any disturbance in this way, sow mustard seed all about the doorstep just before going to bed, or place a sieve on the doorstep.

Before entering the spirit will have to count all the holes in the sieve or all the mustard seeds, and by this time daylight will come and he will have to go. As the counting for one night will not do for another you are always safe.—Southern Workman.

ALMOST FRANTIC WITH ITCHING ECZEMA.

"Eight years ago I got eczema all over my hands. My fingers fairly bled and it itched until it almost drove me frantic. The eruption began with itching under the skin. It spread fast from between the fingers around the nails and all over the whole hands. I got a pair of rubber gloves in order to wash dishes. Then it spread all over the left side of my chest. A fine doctor treated the trouble two weeks, but did me no good. I cried night and day. Then I decided to try Cuticura Soap and Ointment but without much hope as I had gone so long. There was a marked change the second day, and so on until I was entirely cured. The Cuticura Soap we have always kept in our home, and we decided after that lesson that it is a cheap soap in price and the very best in quality. My husband will use no other soap in his shaving mug." (Signed) Mrs. G. A. Selby, Redonda Beach, Cal., Jan. 15, 1911. Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. L, Boston.

"Mug" is Overworked Word.

The most overworked word in the Englishman's vocabulary of slang is "Mug." As a noun it may mean a face, a fool, or a student who prefers reading to sport. As a verb its meanings are still more varied. It may mean to study hard, or to strike in the face. It also means to rob or swindle, and among actors to grimace or make faces. To mug up is also, in theatrical parlance, to make up.

Finally, to mug one's self is to get drunk, the resulting condition being one of mugginess. There is more obvious sense in this last use of the word than in some of the others. For alcoholism, in the eighteenth century, were commonly known as mugghouses. Mug is the English equivalent of the German Zug, which Mark Twain found to mean everything. A new sense of the verb "mug" in the American slang is to photograph a face.

For Forty Years a Hermit.

Isaac Sheath, who has just died in the workhouse at the age of seventy-eight, lived the life of a hermit for nearly forty years at Newport, Isle of Wight. He occupied a mud-bat which he erected on a piece of waste land in the village of Chale, but the hut became so dilapidated that the rural district council ordered its destruction. Sheath was greatly exasperated by the council's interference, and before he left for the workhouse he burned the hut to the ground. Mice and birds had grown so accustomed to the old man and his lonely ways that they used to come and feed from his hand.—London Mail.

The New Way.

"Going to your summer cottage this year?"

"No, we've decided to stay in the city."

"But I thought you were so fond of the country?"

"We used to be, but now we prefer to stay at home, where we can get fresh milk, eggs and butter every morning."

Dodging Trouble.

Miss Bigmitt, the stenographer—Did you fire me just 'cause I misspell a few words now an then an' somethimes get balled up in my notes?

Mr. Littleton—By no means. You see I have an unreasonably jealous wife and she won't allow me to keep a pretty young stenographer in my office.

Looking on the Bright Side.

After the ways and means committee had been compelled to leave its old quarters and go over to a new House of Representatives office building some of his friends were sympathizing with Champ Clark.

"It might have been worse, Champ," they said. "Cheer up. Pretty soon they will have the electric cars running in the subway and then you can ride over."

"Yes," replied Clark. "It might have been worse. Reminds me of an Irishman I knew down in St. Louis who had both of his legs cut off by a railroad train. It might have been worse, Mike," they said.

"Sure, Mike," replied, 'suppose I had been a chorus girl!'"

Studied Human Nature.

Wigley—What, roses? Don't you know a girl never marries the man who sends her flowers?

Oldbach—Sure, I do. That's why I always try to keep on the safe side.

Father's Grace.

A young lady, who taught a class of small boys in the Sunday school, desired to impress on them the meaning of offering thanks before a meal. Turning to one of the class whose father was a deacon in the church, she asked him:

"William, what is the first thing your father says when he sits down to the table?"

"He says, 'Go easy with the butter, kids; it's 40 cents a pound,'" replied the youngster.

Pickled Peppers.

"Now, dearie," said the nurse, "I want you to learn this nice little poem about 'Peter Piper Picked a Peck of Pickled Peppers.'"

"Shan't!" answered the Boston child, much in the manner of other children.

"Oh, naughty, naughty! Why Waldo, why won't you learn this pretty poem?"

"For two reasons," answered Waldo. "In the first place, the alliteration of the line you quote is so excessive as to destroy any literary finish that such adventitious aids to metrical composition might lend if used more sparingly. And, in the second place, consider the impossibility of picking peppers which have already pickled. The whole thing is beneath the attention of any intelligent person."

Sized-Up Wrong.

"Good morning, madam—"

"We don't want no sewin' machines."

"No?"

"No! no patent clothes wringer—"

"Indeed?"

"An' we got two gran' planners an' a cabinet organ."

"Yes?"

"An' every room has a clock an' all on us bez watchin'."

"How about pictures?"

"Kain't sell no none o' them, neither, stranger. They ain't a wall in th' house ye kin see for the raffs o' oil painting's hung on 'em."

"I suppose you have a dog?"

"Pap bez mor'n' forty, an' all bloodid."

"How about carriages?"

"Baras fall on 'em. An' we don't buy no horses on this ranch."

"Mornin'—say, tenderfoot, who bees ye, anyhow?"

"I'm the tax assessor."

Cause for Hurry.

It was on an occasion when a President of the United States was making a swing around the country. A man who was carrying the mail on a weekly route between a Missouri county seat town and a little post-office out at a country store came dashing madly down the road in the direction of the town. A farmer who saw him coming and wondered at his great haste, halted him and said:

"What's the matter, Jimson? What's your great hurry this mornin'?"

"Hurry!" Jimson repeated, "why, don't you know the President is to be in town to-day?"

"Oh, I see," the farmer replied, "you want to get there in time to see him."

"It's not that that makes me hurry."

"If ain't?"

"No, sir! You may not know it, but this working for the government is a mighty ticklish business, and a man has got to be awful careful, or he'll lose his job. Now suppose the President gets off the train down there and asks about me and I ain't there, and he finds out I'm late. Don't you see, there'd be trouble right off, and I might be asked to resign?"

"I see."

"Yes, sir. So I ain't taking no chances. When the President stops off the train and asks the crowd, 'Where is Jimson?' I'm going to be there, so I can step right out and say: 'Here I am, sir.'"

REPUBLICAN TICKET.

For President,
WILLIAM HOWARD TAFT.

For Vice-President,
JAMES SCHOOLCRAFT SHERMAN.

COMMUNICATED.

Which shall it be? the question to be answered by the laboring man next Nov. with his vote.

Three political parties have met in conventions and given to the people the promises for which the voters are expected to exchange their votes next fall. Each party has all ready spoken for itself. For there is an old saying, that "Actions speak louder than words" and this is remarkably true of the political parties at this time.

The socialist party was the first in order, to meet in convention.

On the 15th of May the Socialist party met in the City of Indianapolis in National convention. Both men and women who were elected as delegates by referendum vote of the membership of the socialist party, whose credentials had been sent to the National Secretary by the state secretaries of the various states and Territories, as well as fraternal delegates from Old Mexico and B. Columbia and were all seated by the committee on credentials without a single contest.

The "Rules" as adopted were clear brief and comprehensive, such as laboring men and women could readily understand.

And their fairness to all can be clearly seen from the following.

A chairman and vice chairman to be elected at the beginning of each days session. Discussion limited to 5 minutes for each speaker. Chairman of committees to have 20 minutes to report in. No delegate to speak twice on the same subject until all delegates desiring to do so had a chance speak. The "Unit" system of voting received its death blow in the convention. No "Smoking or chewing tobacco was allowed in the hall, (so much for the lady delegates) speeches of welcome was limited to five minutes, and all nomination speeches were forbidden.

All resolutions offered from the floor of the convention were referred by the chairman to the proper committee without discussion, but all delegates interested in the subject were welcome before the committee.

Discussion on any one subject was limited to four hours.

These constitute the main rules. But with all the precautions (thus takes the whole work of the convention is referred to the members of the party for their final endorsement.

The foregoing is a brief review of the Socialist party convention from which it may be clearly seen that if any member of the party failed to have a voice in the shaping of the party policies, he has no one to blame but himself. The laboring man's interest was the only interest represented in then convention. The only interest considered in the Socialist party platform, is the interest of the laboring man, and the only vote asked for in the coming election is the vote of the laboring men.

The next in order to meet was the Republican convention which met in Chicago, in June. The proceedings of this memorable convention is known to all who was in any way interested in political affairs. And we are willing to let the contesting factions of the Republican party speak for themselves. We only wish to ask the laboring man if he can see where his interest was represented in that convention.

As to whose interest was represented, we would refer Mr. laboring man to Mr. Roosevelt, who declared the convention was representing what he was pleased to stigmatize, as "Corrupt Big Business". And it looks very much like there was something "Big" behind the movement considering the amount of money that was spent. And we might venture to ask Mr. Laboring men, if he had been called on to "Donate" and if not don't you feel a little bit hurt at Mr. Roosevelt's insult hurled at your masters who has so graciously financed your part of that record breaking convention and it's preliminary campaign. Or are you beginning to suspect that the "Big Biz" only advanced the money to do the work, and that the most of that money was borrowed on your credit, and that you will have to pay it all back with a hundred per cent interest within the next four years in the form of high living and low wages? In short, are you seeing thru the scheme as being a great political "Dough-nut", where "Big Biz" gets the dough and the nut, and labor gets the hole.

But if you can't see where your interest comes in or where it is left out, you may get some satisfaction in the old saying that "Where ignorance is bliss, it is folly to be wise."

Next in order comes the Democratic convention which met in Baltimore made millions of laboring men watched the proceedings of that "August" body of the peoples champion. But alas, it could be said of the laboring man, "blessed is he who expects nothing for he shall not be disappointed", Mr. Wm. J. Bryan made the statement on the floor of the convention that the same interests that dominated the convention at Chicago, was more in evidence at the Baltimore convention. And although Mr. Bryan, Mr. Wilson and their supporters was persuaded to put the lid back on the "pot" the stink that was emitted in that short time reached the nostrils of all who have not lost their sense of smell.

And we would ask Mr. Bryan why the "preditory wealth" as he called the influence that had been working in the Republican Convention at Chicago, and which was in greater evidence at the Democratic convention at Baltimore, did not succeed in ousting him from the party as it had succeeded in doing Mr. Roosevelt at Chicago? Is it not a fact that "preditory wealth" made some concessions to Mr. Bryan and his followers, just to keep them from bolting the convention and joining forces with Roosevelt in the formation of another party? And were they afraid the new party would be a laboring man's party, and put the grafters out?

It is a fact that "Big Biz" made some concessions to the progressives when they could have as easily kicked them out as the Republicans did.

Roosevelt at Chicago, But it was not because "Big Biz" was afraid she would loose her job, oh, not at all. The fact is, that "Big Biz" does not want too many political children in her family, it requires too much time to attend to them, and they fall out among themselves and tell family secrets. Just as the Democrats and Republicans are doing.

But Mr. laboring man, we are once more press to ask, "Where does your interest come in, in all of this scramble for positions at the public counting.

But many laboring men think they see a "Star of hope" rising on the political horizon, that is destined to "Open the prison doors of labor and to break every year, and to let the oppressed go free." But it is only a political will-o-the-wisp.

I refer to the political egg that was placed in the incubator by the Roosevelt followers after the split in the Republican party at Chicago. The egg is expected to hatch a "New" party chick, some time in August.

And we wish to drop a word of warning to you Mr. laboring man. Some one has said, "The hand that rocks the cradle, is the hand that rules the world" Whether that is so or not, one thing is certain as death, and that is, "The hand that rocks the party cradle rules the political child."

And the interests that put up the one and a half million of dollars for the Roosevelt fight, will not forsake him now. So Mr. laboring man, can't you see that the "New Non-political party, is to be None of yours? All the part you will ever get to play in the game will be to furnish it with food and clothes, just as you have been doing for the other members of the Capitalist family.

They are all Political "Dough-nuts" and "Big Biz" gets the doughnut and you get the hole. But with out your vote no party can live, and again I ask, Which Shall it be, A Reader.

Prison Reform in the Philippines

IF YOU go sight-seeing in Manila the guides do not fail to show you the Carcel de Bilibid. They do so with a great deal of pride. Once Bilibid, within almost a stone's throw of your hotel, was the most hated place in existence to the natives; now it holds no more terrors than the best of prisons in the states. Bilibid, in fact, has been transformed from a house of torture to a model and sanitary prison wherein the convicts are not only kept in good physical condition, but are required to labor at occupations which, in their later life, often prove profitable.

Why the original constructors of Bilibid designed it on lines which suggested the most sanitary conditions and yet turned it into the filthiest of institutions is a circumstance which made the United States authorities ponder, in the midst of the old city, lying within a circle more than a mile in circumference, nineteen long low buildings converge on an open space surrounding a large circular building and from what is said to be the largest prison in the world. There is plenty of air space between the buildings. Beside the 19 prison quarters which radiate outward from the circular guardhouse in the center there are five other buildings, composing the administration offices, the commissary and quartermaster's storehouses, and the ice and electric plants, all within the great circular area.

Topping in height each of these buildings there are guard towers from which can be poured any number of steel death-dealing missiles within the great inclosure and for a great radius without. There is one large tower in the center above the main guardhouse, a score or more surround the inclosure at equal intervals, and there is not a nook or corner in Bilibid which does not come under the eye of the watchful sentinels.

The long, low buildings of Bilibid comprise the prisoners' quarters. Here the American occupation of the islands, the great prison has been divided in two parts by a great stone wall. One-half is set apart for the American military and civilian prisoners, the remainder for the native Filipino and the Spanish, Chinese, Japanese and other prisoners of different nationalities. The great prison has heretofore been given two names; the former the Presidio de Manila, the latter the Carcel de Bilibid. The whole prison is under military command, but the native section is directly supervised by native officials.

Clean and Ventilated.

Since October, 1898, when the American officials took charge of the prison, Bilibid has undergone a most beneficial transformation. Those quarters known as the dormitories are not the congested cells of the old Spanish regime, but have been cleaned and ventilated until there is now a free circulation of air in each. Looking from one end of these buildings to the other you can see long rows of coils behind sections barred off with thick bamboo rods, and neatness and order prevail throughout. Twelve wide windows line each side of each building, and in the roofs of each there has been built a continuous line of suction ventilators.

The workshops, kitchens, lavatories and hospitals have been likewise improved, each being equipped with the most modern sanitary appliances. Bilibid, therefore, instead of being called the "House of Torture," as named under the old Spanish rule, is being looked upon with a sort of pride by the native Filipino as one of the model institutions of its kind in the world.

Its reconstruction has, in fact, educated the Filipino to a considerable degree, because while the discipline of the American officials is strict, the method of treating and caring for the prisoners within its confines has done more to demonstrate that the American people are a humane race than all other means.

Bilibid has a daily routine much like other prisons. The prisoners are roused in the morning by the call of the bugle at 5:45. Breakfast follows a certain amount of exercise, and after that the prisoners go to the workshops until the noon hour. Then comes a light lunch, a rest for an hour, more work until 5:30 p. m., then dinner, and they are locked up for the night.

Twice a week the inmates are compelled to bathe, and twice a week they are given clean clothes, not always secured by many of them while on the outside.

There are four classes of rations issued to the prisoners, depending on their nationality. The Americans receive the ration of the regular army, which costs about 25 cents; the Europeans receive food at the rate of about 14 cents; and the Filipino eats to the amount of 3 cents. This is not discrimination; nor is there partiality shown in the quality or the amount. All of the food is palatable, well cooked and cleanly served; but that which would suit the native element would not suit the American contingent, nor the reverse. Clothing of the regulation prison character is supplied to each convict at a cost of about 60 cents a man.

Death Rate Low.

The employment of the prisoners consists of laundering, manufacturing bamboo furniture, weaving baskets, curtains, screens and hammocks, making rope, engraving on wood, horn, shell and silver, making fancy and useful articles from horn and shell, and wrapping coach whips; and there are also carpenters, wood turners, blacksmiths, stone masons, bricklayers and tailors, and occasionally an artist or two is found among the number and given a canvas.

The articles thus manufactured are placed on sale, and from the revenue thus derived the prison often accumulates a surplus for the year. The average amount of receipts from this means is about $12,000 a year.

One of the greatest testimonials to the conduct of Bilibid is the low death rate since the beginning of the American administration. Under the Spanish rule it sometimes reached as high as one in five, while under the American direction it has never gone above one in sixty.

Bilibid has seen many exciting days, and, under the Spanish rule, has had its walls so crammed at times that it seemed as if no more could be forced in. Yet they were. Its capacity was originally designed to accommodate 2,000, but the records of its days when revolutions existed against the Spanish government show that as many as 2,600 prisoners were confined there at one time.

The prison was, in fact, designed for this purpose more than a hundred years ago, and political prisoners have outnumbered the criminals each year since, according to the captured records of the prison. When Gen. F. A. Hughes took charge of the prison for the United States government in October, 1898, he found over 2,400 prisoners confined there against whom no formal charges had been recorded. He found the condition of these men and women most revolting.

"A great many of them," he said, "were heavily ironed—most cruelly ironed. For instance, there would be a man chained to the wall of a stone cell in which there was no light except through two loop holes high up and about two inches wide and a foot long. We also found some with bars of iron about three feet long to which were attached two iron hoops that were fastened around their ankles, and they had to carry these bars every step they made. The feet around their ankles was worn altogether to the bone in many cases."

In his report of that inspection General Hughes also said that two hours after the prison had been turned over to the American authorities the iron which had been knocked off the prisoners were piled up, and the resulting accumulation measured more than a cord and a half in size.

are a few passages from the contribution: "Cora Brown was fortunately the possessor of a birthday, for she was the daughter of rich friends." "But all this time a cloud was gathering over Mrs. Delaney, which grew large as years went by, and that cloud was full of grasshoppers." "My father desired me to marry a bank president, a handsome, reckless man, fond of naught save the gambling-table." "Vat I tell you, vat I tell you," shouted the Irishman. "As she weighed the room a cold, damp smell met her sight."

Humorous Court Happenings.
Judge M. W. Plunkett at a recent banquet of lawyers recommended with two stories to show that there is some humor associated with such a serious thing as the law. In Dawson City a colored man, Sam Jones by name, was on trial for felony. The judge asked Sam if he desired the appointment of a lawyer to defend him. "No, sah," said Sam. "I'm wiser to throw myself on the ignorance of the state." Here is a story credited to O'Connell, and illustrating the severe penalty imposed under the old criminal law of England as well as the gruesome humor of the early English judge. The jury had returned a verdict of guilty in the case of a man accused of stealing a valuable watch. The judge in sentencing the prisoner, said, "You're robbin' for time and found eternity."

Sparrow Travels 3,000 Miles.
The most interesting traveler that came to port yesterday was a perky English sparrow that flew about the steamship Austrian Prince, in New-castle, England, and made the 3,000-mile voyage to this country in the rigging. Captain Davies said the bird flew down to the deck for its food and at night perched on the rigging of the steership, where it was warm.

City People Kaitigout.
Kansas City, Mo., ranks next to Philadelphia among the large cities of the country for its religious habits. A census recently taken enumerated 11,000 names, and among these 17 per cent were affiliated with some church. Philadelphia is one per cent higher.

ON SAFE GROUND.

Whenever, on one of his rare holidays, Captain Goldby went to the city, he took some young relative with him as a special treat. On one such occasion he told his seventeen-year-old grandson, whom he had with him, that they would "dine at a real restaurant, and get a taste of fancy cooking."

When they were at last seated in the great dining room, the grandson waited impatiently while the captain read the bill of fare completely through without omitting a single article, whether domestic or foreign in title. At last he sighed and handed the card across the table to the boy.

"You choose what you like, sonny," he said, with a sigh. "As for me, I reckon as I've already eat more herring than any other man livin', I might as well blow away a little more. It's always agreed with me so far." Youth's Companion.

OUTING SUIT DESIGNS

SHORT SKIRT A MARKED FEATURE OF FASHION.

Neck and Arms Always Displayed—Flannel "Blazer" One of the Best-Liked Garments for the Season of Vacation.

Most of the outing suits provided for women and girls are of the short-skirted species, the waists always showing neck and arms in the cuts. But if the garment is made at home, it is a simple matter to add an inch or two to the model while cutting out, for, after all, a wee bit more in a skirt length takes nothing from its smartness and heavy-limbed figures undoubtedly need the addition.

A Flannel Blazer of This Sort is a Convenient Garment for the Season or Country.

One of the most convenient garments for vacation use is a flannel blazer of the sort shown in the illustration. These useful and stylish jackets have taken the place of other wraps for boating, yachting, golf, tennis, etc., and they are kept by all the good shops, selling from four dollars and a half up. It seems scarcely worth while to make one when the garment can be bought so cheaply and will display a good cut and finish as well, but there is no use denying that the home-made garment means a certain saving of money, and since the outing blazers fit loosely many domestic sewers will be able to turn them out very nicely. Blue and white or black and white striped flannels are always used for the shop-ones, but there is no objection to a plain flannel, and for very youthful wearers it could be in a bright red. The blazers are always fastened with flat, white pearl buttons and the pockets are applied patch fashion, that is, sewed to the goods instead of being set in as formerly.

In several of the shops, where the latest touches of fashion are seen, outing hats are shown in the same material as the blazers, and the matching of these to the blazer certainly gives an added smartness to that garment. Suitable flannels for the coats can be had from fifty-nine cents up. Only a flannel wide enough to make the back of the coat without a seam should be considered, as this defect is required for the style of the garment.

MARY DEAN.

FOR THE SMALL DAUGHTER

Dainty Lingerie Hats, So Popular Just Now, May Vary Well Be Made at Home.

Now is the time to fashion dainty lingerie hats for the small daughter. There are so many attractive models newly arrived from Paris, which may be duplicated by any one who can sew. These smart, summery articles of headgear may be fashioned of batiste, lace, net, finest linen or chiffon. Ribbon in dainty shades and flowers adorn these fascinating bits of millinery.

Purchase a wire frame the desired shape and cover with a plain lining of lawn. Over this place a covering of dotted batiste or eyelet embroidery.

Gather the batiste about the extreme edge of the hatband, allowing a half-inch heading, which forms a frill.

Shirr this close at the base of the crown and draw together at the top. To make a neater finish, sew a medallion over the top of the crown.

A yard and a half of batiste or eyelet embroidery is required to make a medium-sized hat.

Trim the hat with light-blue or pink ribbon, folding it softly about the crown. Arrange a chain of the ribbon to adorn the left side.

The quaint little Breton hats are, as a rule, becoming, and are not difficult to make. The puffed crown is made of a circular piece of allover embroidery or lace. This should be slightly over a half yard in diameter.

Gather and sew this to a straight band which fits the head. A pleated frill of the lace or embroidery frames the face.

Three quarters of a yard of plaiting is sufficient. If desired, the frill may be of embroidery edging. A wreath of tiny flowers adorns the band.

Hat Wraps.

A rough coat.
A coat of ribbed silk.
It must have lace collar or light revers.

A silk or chiffon coat for lingerie gowns.
A scarf of lace liberty satin, flowered chiffon or changeable taffeta.

ORNAMENT FOR TEA TABLE

Cozy in Odd Shape Is a Pretty Addition to the Other Parts of the Service.

A four-sided tea cozy is quite the most sensible shape in which to make that useful article, as it is so much more easily placed upon or taken from the teapot than the old-fashioned flat, two-sided cozy.

Our sketch shows a cozy trimmed in a very novel manner with bands of floral ribbon. It was carried out in pale pink satin, cut in four pieces and sewn together at the edges; the seams afterwards being hidden with a pale green and white silk cord and finished off at the top with three little loops.

Each side was trimmed with three bands of white ribbon ornamented with a design of tiny green leaves and pale yellow blossoms, and it was lined with soft white silk, and made a very handsome cozy for special occasions.

For every day use, the same suggestion might well be carried out in less expensive and more servicable materials, and it is a pretty idea to make a cozy for the hot water to match that for the tea-pot and in selecting the colors of the materials, the color of the tea service with which it is to appear should be taken into consideration.

Unless you keep on telling them, how can your customers ever know the qualities of your wares?

Mary Anne's Hero

By Barr Moses

(Copyright, 1912, by Associated Literary Press.)

Grimby's new shoes pinched his feet. The road was dusty and the dust mingled with the yellow pollen of the ragweed, was making sad work of the lower part of his natty trousers.

"Confound Mary Anne!" exclaimed Grimby.

Mary Anne was his cousin and he was on the way to her wedding. He liked Mary Anne the least of all the forty-seven first cousins whom he was so fortunate as to possess, but she was, nevertheless, the only one of the list for whose wedding he would have felt it necessary to put himself to so much discomfort and expense. This was because Mary Anne was vain and ambitious and adored Grimby as her one wealthy and city-bred relative.

He knew that to her mind her wedding would be but a poor affair if she could not have him and his present to display to her assembled friends, and being abnormally considerate of the feelings of others, he had consented to go, and had spent far more money than he felt justified in doing in the purchase of a set of sterling silver tableware in a neat wooden case, which he had at that moment under one arm, and which was very heavy.

In addition to the wedding present he was encumbered with an umbrella, a suit case and a raincoat.

"What a fool I was to write Mary Anne not to send to the station for me," he growled.

"Now I wonder how the deuce Mary Anne ever found a man to suit her in this sleepy hollow, where nothing ever happens? She always had her heart set on a hero, a man with good red blood in his veins, a doer of deeds."

By this time Grimby had arrived at a bit of sequestered woodland through which the dusty road wandered in an aimless fashion, as if it had no clear notion concerning the direction which it wished to pursue. Hardly had he entered this wood and turned the first curve before a man, dressed in a ready-made and ill-fitting black frock suit and wearing a stiff-bodied white shirt, a tall straight collar and a pair of cuffs which fell down to his thumbs, strolled out from the shelter of some tall bushes, presented a revolver and remarked curtly:

"Money's yer life! Hands up!"

Craven fear surged through Grimby, his knees knocked together and he felt a strange, creeping sensation up to his hat.

"Don't shoot!" he gasped, finding it impossible to obey the command regarding his hands promptly and dropping to his knees instead. "Don't shoot! I'll hold up my hands as quick as I can."

He grasped his coat and umbrella in one hand, slipped his thumb through the heavy cord with which the package containing the wedding present was tied and taking it and the suit case in the other, managed to execute the maneuver clumsily.

"Huz!" said the highwayman, respectively, "you might have put them down. It would have been easier."

Then he walked up and unhooked the wedding present from Grimby's extended thumb.

"That's all I want," he said laconically, and walked off.

For a moment Grimby remained on his knees, with his vacillating hands still raised aloft, then he slowly lowered them and rose tremblingly to his feet.

The highwayman shutting off down the road looked over his shoulder.

"Going to the wedding?" he called. "Cause if you be, you might as well come along with me."

In silence he walked by the highwayman's side until they reached the front door of Uncle Nathan's abode. Then the highwayman, throwing the door open with a certain nonchalance, rather amazing under the circumstances, said:

"Walk right in mister," and then called more loudly, "Mary Anne! Here's Mr. Grimby!"

Before he had time to reflect on these proceedings Grimby was enjoined in his best cousin's loving arms.

Mightily bewildered, he had not time to puzzle over the explanation of the matter, for a whisper ran about that the fatal moment had arrived and he found himself huddled up against the wall with the other guests and waiting in hushed expectancy, while Mary Anne's sister began to draw a wedding march on the organ and everybody kept still and breathed hard.

After an age, and a struggle about three rods apart, the wedding party appeared and took places before the gray-haired clergyman in the corner.

The bridegroom's turn came, and he made an awkward, sliding entrance through a narrow door.

"Hah!" exclaimed Grimby, then coughed confusedly and blushed.

The bridegroom was the highwayman of the wooded curve in the road.

"Why on earth?" thought Grimby, and "What on earth?" and "Who on earth?"

Then he lapsed into semi-unconsciousness as the wedding march came to the end and the clergyman cleared his throat.

The preliminary parts of the ceremony were soon gone through.

"Martin," said the minister, turning to the bridegroom, "wilt thou have this woman to be thy wedded wife, to live together after God's ordinance in the holy estate of matrimony? Wilt thou love her, comfort her, honor and keep her, in sickness and in health; and forsaking all other, keep thee only unto her, so long as ye both shall live?"

"I will," responded the bridegroom, distinctly, but he didn't look like it.

"Mary Anne," resumed the clergyman, turning to the bride, "wilt thou have this man to be thy wedded husband, to live together after God's ordinance in the holy estate of matrimony? Wilt thou love, honor, and keep him, in sickness and in health; and forsaking all other, keep thee only unto him, so long as ye both shall live?"

"I will not," said Mary Anne, and the emphasis was on the not.

There was a sensation, but it wasn't as much of a sensation as it would have been, if the assembly had not been composed wholly of Mary Anne's lifelong friends and acquaintances. It was not consternation, but restrained hilarity, which made the guests breathe deeply and away to and fro.

The clergyman paused, closed the book over his thumb, pushed his spectacles back on his forehead and looked reprovingly at the refractory bride.

The bridegroom did not seem either surprised nor annoyed.

"Mary Anne," began the clergyman sternly, "did I understand you to say that you wouldn't?"

"You did," affirmed Mary Anne emphatically, with flashing eyes.

"But she will just the same," declared the bridegroom with confidence.

"I will not," reiterated Mary Anne.

"Now, Mary Anne, my dear young woman," expostulated the clergyman.

"What does this mean? How does it come that when we have all assembled here to witness your marriage to Martin, that you flatly refuse him? You must explain yourself or I'll go right ahead and pronounce you man and wife anyway."

"I'll explain, Mr. Cutright," declared Mary Anne proudly, "I'll explain gladly. I have been the victim of an imposition. When Martin asked me to marry him I told him that I had only one objection, and that was that he wasn't a hero, a man to stir the hearts of those with good red blood in their veins. Martin said he was a hero, only he'd never had a chance to show any of it around here, where things was always so quiet. But he promised me solemnly that if I'd have him, he would do something real heroic before the solemn hour and article of the wedding."

"Now, Mr. Cutright, that solemn hour and article has come. I gave Martin up to the very last minute. He has failed to do the deed and I won't marry him, so there. He has deceived me. He has failed to keep the promise that he made."

Mary Anne turned and pointed at her betrothed husband dramatically, and in excellent imitation of a tragedy queen she blessed the one word: "Coward!"

"I ain't, neither," said Martin emphatically, scratching the place where his stiff collar sawed his neck most, "and I hain't failed to keep my promise, and I can prove it by Mr. Grimby, over there in the corner."

He swung half way about and caught Grimby's eyes, then swung back and faced the clergyman.

"Mr. Grimby will testify that no later than this very day I done a brave and heroic deed and he sees me. I don't like to brag and I won't say what it was and I won't ask Mr. Grimby to say. All I ask is that he will solemnly before this here assembled congregation declare that what I say is so."

"Is this true, cousin Harold?" demanded Mary Anne, facing about eagerly.

Grimby in his corner, finding all eyes upon him, blushed and stammered.

"It—It's true, Mary Anne," he cried excitedly, "It's true all right. I'll swear that Mr.—Mr.—" for the life of him he couldn't remember the bridegroom's surname—"that Mr. Martin is—is a—hero—and a gentleman."

"I can believe my cousin Harold," declared Mary Anne proudly, turning back to the clergyman. "I am satisfied."

"Ahem!" interrupted the clergyman, opening his book again. "I suppose, then, that I may resume the ceremony?"

"You may," agreed Mary Anne, blandly, "and I change my answer from 'I will not' to 'I will see.'"

"Jehoshaphat!" muttered Grimby.

DESTROYING NEARLY $5,000,000 A DAY

THIS is a photograph of the committee of the treasury department whose duty is to see that all old money is destroyed. The woman is Miss Louise Lester, the only one of her sex who has served on the committee. She was appointed from Maryland by President Taft. The old money, at the rate of nearly $5,000,000 a day, is thrown into the receptacle shown in the foreground. Below it is a machine that cuts up the bills into tiny bits. Later the mass is mixed with a solution that takes out all coloring matter and the pulp then is sold to makers of novelties.

BEGIN LONG TRIP

Couple From Brooklyn, N. Y., Expect to Circle Globe.

Daniel Pearl and Beatrice Garten Plan to Wed When Youth Secures Employment—Brothers Start on 10,000-Mile Auto Tour.

New York.—With but one lonesome dollar as their wealth and less than half a dozen articles of wearing apparel as their luggage, a young man and a girl, his sweetheart, left on one of the Hudson river boats recently on their first leg of what they hope will be a trip around the world.

The man is Daniel Pearl of 752 Quincy street, Brooklyn. His companion is Miss Beatrice Garten, eighteen years old, and pretty, who lives with her parents at 1123 Washington avenue, the Bronx. As they stood on the pier at the foot of Christopher street, waiting in vain for Louis Mannheim, another young man who promised to accompany the two, Pearl told of his prospects and how they decided on the trip.

"I have long desired to make a trip around the world. About a week ago I met Miss Garten, who was employed at one of the local department stores. We fell in love with each other at first sight, you might say. I told her of my resolution to tour the earth, and dared her to accompany me."

"And I would not take the dare. That's why I am here to make the start," put in the young woman, and she eyed nervously with her sweet-heart's lie.

"We decided that we would start with one dollar as our capital. We will leave the boat at Saugerties, and from there by walking, and riding when I have earned money, will head for San Francisco. When we arrive there we hope to have earned enough money to take passage to Japan. If not, I will look for a job on one of the ships."

"But the first money I earn," he added, with a sparkle in his eyes, "shall be for the purchase of a marriage license. That I hope will be soon."

To this final remark the girl nodded her head. "That was one of the stipulations of the dare," she said.

New Haven, Conn.—E. D. and A. N. Mead, brothers, of Orange, left here in their automobile, and will encircle the United States before they return. A third member of the party on the 10,000 mile jaunt is their dog, "Bob."

The auto will be their home during the trip. They carry on it, besides their clothing, a tent and camping and cooking utensils, besides a supply of food. They intend to camp as the fancy strikes them, pitch their tent, cook their meals and stay as long as they please.

Their route is down the Atlantic coast to the Gulf of Mexico, thence along the gulf and into Mexico, where they will stay several weeks. From there they will run up the Pacific coast to British Columbia and eastward through Canada, finishing up by a dash down the Hudson river.

Bob is a very important member of the combination. One of his uses will be to split any herds of cattle that

"SWAN SONG" IN TRAGIC KEY

Violinist Who Outdid Himself Found Suicide in Closet—Family Trouble Caused Act.

New York.—There was no music in the restaurant on the ground floor of 330 Fulton street, Brooklyn, where for years Arthur Thomason, a violin maker, has displayed his skill between 12 and 1 o'clock, nor was the violinist in the restaurant the day before.

His absence was remarked, and then guests commented on the fact that Thomason had played the "Swan Song" in most effective style on his last appearances. The musician never had been absent all the years he played at the restaurant.

A waiter was sent to his small factory, on the floor above, and found his body in a closet, which was filled with gas. He was sitting on a chair, and across his lap was his favorite violin.

The police say Thomason, who was fifty years old, committed suicide. His brother told the police that Arthur had been very unhappy for two months because his wife left him.

Carelessness Causes Death of Three.

Jacksonville, Ore.—Louis Bogden, a laborer employed at a quarry near here, smoked a cigarette while preparing a charge of dynamite. In the explosion that followed Bogden and two other laborers were blown to bits.

Bully of Pacific Is Killed

Japanese Cook Slew Sea Captain Noted for Brutality After He Is Abused by His Master.

San Francisco.—Tales of lawless ways on ships in the Pacific told by the fiction writers are well borne out by the story that lies behind the detention here on a charge of murder of S. Okulu, a Japanese, who was cook on the schooner Americana. He slew Carl Benson, the captain, on a voyage from Australia. Members of the crew testified that he was justified, and prominent Japanese here will see that he is ably defended.

Captain Benson, a native of Sweden, forty-three years old, had a reputation throughout the Pacific of being a bully. Big and strong and with a quick temper, he frequently came to blows with his men, and in the recollection of followers of the sea he never returned from a voyage without having to face charges of brutality. Several times he has come into this port with some of his men in irons, and once both his first and second mates were so confined.

When he left Puget sound on his last voyage to Australia Okulu shipped as cook, and the men who were on the vessel say that the little Japanese was efficient in his galley and courteous and peaceful in his dealings with others. Captain Benson, however, continually baited him and cast aspersions on the Japanese, and, angered by his non-resistance, physically ill-treated him. When Newcastle was reached all but two of the crew left the ship, saying they could not stand the ill treatment they had received, and Okulu also tried to quit, but was restrained by Captain Benson.

On the return journey, according to the seamen, Okulu was subjected daily to taunts and violence. There was no witness to the shooting, but the cook says the captain entered his galley and accused him of waste and dishonesty. His denial was followed by revilings and then by a blow that felled him. He arose and was knocked down again. Fearing for his life, he jumped up, ran to his bunk, took out a pistol and fired five shots at the captain. The bully ran after the first shot and died on the main deck.

It was five days before the officers left in charge put Okulu in confinement by chaining him to a table in the dining room, and then he was well-treated by all.

NO-MAN'S LAND A ROMANCE

By LOUIS JOSEPH VANCE

SYNOPSIS.

Garratt Coast, a young man of New York City, meets Douglas Blackstock, who invites him to a card party. He accepts, although he dislikes Blackstock, the reason being that both are in love with Katherine Thaxter. Coast fails to convince his friend that Blackstock is unworthy of his friendship. At the party Coast meets two named Dundas and Van Tuyl. There is a quarrel, and Blackstock shoots Van Tuyl dead. Coast struggles to wrest the weapon from him, thus the police discover them. Coast is arrested for murder. He is convicted, but as he begins his sentence, Dundas names Blackstock as the murderer and kills himself. Coast becomes free, but Blackstock has married Katherine Thaxter and fled. Coast purchases a yacht and while sailing sees a man thrown from a distant boat. He rescues the fellow who is named Appleyard. They arrive at a lonely island, known as No Man's Land. Coast starts out to explore the place and comes upon some deserted buildings. He discovers a man dead. Upon going further and approaching a house he sees Katherine Thaxter, who explains that her husband, under the name of Black, has bought the island. He is blind, a wireless operator and has a station there. Coast informs her that her husband murdered Van Tuyl. Coast sees Blackstock and some Chinamen burying a man. He rescues a man, but he is rescued by Appleyard, who gets him to the Echo in safety, and there he reveals that he is a secret service man and has been watching the crowd on the island, suspecting they are criminals. Coast is anxious to fathom the mysteries of No Man's Land, and is determined to save Katherine. Appleyard believes that Black and his gang make a habit of the wireless station to conduct a smuggling business. Coast penetrates to the fair of Blackstock's disguise. Katherine enters the room and passes him a note which tells Coast that neither his life or her own are safe. Coast feels that Blackstock suspects him, Appleyard and the Echo disappear. Coast assures Katherine of his protection and she informs him that they are to abandon the island immediately. The blind man and his coolie servant overpower Coast, who afterward escapes and is met by Katherine, wishing to flee. They discover a way, but before they can reach it the coolie disables the craft. Black appears and tauntingly states that he is no longer blind. He is empowered, and Coast and Katherine fly from the spot, and go to a remote part of the island and signal a boat which they see in the distance. Appleyard and the Echo appear. Blackstock comes rushing to the boat, claiming he is dying, and is taken on board.

CHAPTER XXI—(Continued.)

Sloping low to escape the banging of the boom, Coast stepped over the Chinaman's body and went to Blackstock. He had some trouble overcoming his physical repugnance to the task, but resolutely forced himself to touch the man, seizing a shoulder with one hand, while with the other he lifted his head and exposed his face to the light. It shone a ghastly white, but the jaws were set and in their sockets the prominent eyes moved and lifted to Coast's face, with a dim, pale glimmer of recognition. But it was evident at a glance that only his tremendous vitality and force of will sustained the man; the blood soaked bosom of his flannel shirt told too plainly the tale of a terrible drain upon his strength.

"Appleyard—"
"No; this one's first—he's done for completely," interrupted the little man with prompt decision. "We've got to get him out of the way before we can move. 'Tother can wait."

"But he'll die—"
"I'm satisfied. Here, lend me a lift at this, won't you?"

Together with considerable difficulty, they managed to raise the body of Chang to a side seat and then over the rail. A splash and a shower of spray, melted silver in the moonlight, were all his funeral rites.

"And now for the quick," said Appleyard; "and quick's the word."

But as they approached Blackstock the man, drawing upon some unsuspected reserve of nervous force, deliberately if with torturing effort, pulled himself together, lifted a leg over the wheel and slipped off the box to the seat to leeward. A grin sheet of a smile skewed upon his face, and for a fugitive instant there shone from his eyes a gleam of their one-time mocking luster, a little proud and disdainful, altogether unrepentant. Then with a long sigh, his chin dropped down on his breast again.

"Thanks," said Appleyard, cautiously; "you've saved us a deal of trouble and exertion, I'm sure. Coast, take the wheel, will you, while I get Mr. Blackstock a drink and see what can be done to save his worthless hide for a more arduous end."

Obediently Coast placed himself on the box. "Any idea where we are?" he asked.

Blackstock stared at the query and raised his head, staring round the horizon. "Vineyard sound," he croaked hoarsely, with a nod to leeward; where, against the pale blue splendor of the sky the twin red masts looked because of the light vessel watched them, several miles ahead.

Coast resumed Appleyard's face. "Not Bedford?" he asked, tersely. "The little man nodded. 'Best for all concerned,'" he added; "especially if this festive hydrophobia is to get proper attendance."

With a start of distrust he moved to Coast's side, and thrust the sheet, as the latter swung the Echo off upon her course, then turned and went forward to the companion door, descending to the cabin.

Thereafter for a little Coast heard indistinctly the murmur of Appleyard's voice, civil and pleasant but firm, contending with Katherine's. He understood that she was arguing against her own wishes and natural instincts, insisting she must go to her husband's aid, while the little man was insistently refusing to permit anything of the sort. And confirmation of this deduction was furnished when the detective's small, blonde-thatched head appeared against the light.

"Don't worry, madam," he was saying in conclusion. "Leave him to me; I'm an old hand at first aid to the injured, and I can do for him infinitely more than you'd dare attempt. If there's the slightest need of you, I'll be the first to let you know."

"Too Late," He Said. . . . That's All. "G'd-Night. . . ."

He wagged his head obstinately and came on deck, grumbling privately some refreshingly personal opinion as to the general and perverse intractability of the feminine sex.

Balancing himself before Blackstock, who in the interim had sunk into a semblance of lethargy, he measured out a good half glass of brandy to an equal amount of water, tucked the bottle, securely corked, beneath his arm, and roused the wounded man with a touch as gentle and considerate as his attitude and words were rough. "Here," he said; "get this down, and we'll make an examination. Blackstock."

Appleyard holding the glass to his lips, Blackstock drank greedily. "Thanks," he muttered hoarsely as the little man took away the glass drained to the final drop.

"Don't thank me—don't my brandy. If it was, I doubt I'd give you any." He moved off and placed the bottle and the glass in a corner, where they were in no danger of overturning, now that a trained and steady hand was at the helm and the Echo moving smoothly and easily to a leading wind. "Now, hark a mo'," he continued. "I'm going to get this motor going—and with this he dropped into the open engine-pit—and then I'll have a look at your wounds." He bent over and began to look the flywheel.

Slowly the warming spirit worked a change in Blackstock, lending him a drollish and grotesque sense of strength. He straightened up against the back of the seat, a faint tinge of color dyed his cheeks, and with a peculiar hark-a-mo! watched the little man at work.

"What's the use?" he asked abruptly in a voice more clear than hitherto.

"Of troubling with me—trying to save my life?"
"Oh—"
With a sudden cough the motor began to hum; Appleyard sat down on the edge of the hatch coaming, folded his hands before him and continued to eye the wounded man. "I don't know," he said with an air of open confession. "I don't know, I'm sure. Business, so far as I'm concerned; commonplace humanity with Coast; I presume; all that sort of nonsense. Why? Don't you want to be helped—saved?"

Hoarsely Blackstock shook his heavy head. "No," he said evenly. "What's the use? I'm at the end of my tether, as far as getting any of the savor out of life's concerned. . . . Can't see the profit of clinging to what's going to be only a burden to me from now on. . . . Prefer to be let alone."

He swung his head as though it were lead; to bring his gaze to rest on Coast; for a full minute he eyed him steadily, wonderingly; then with a little nod he moistened his lips with his tongue. "Besides," he said, with more perceptible strain, "I'm only in the way. With me out of it, everything'll run more smoothly for all of you."

By a mysteriously reinforced effort he lifted himself suddenly to his feet and stood swaying while Appleyard stirred. "No; nothing like that, I'm not that sort—"

"No; I'm just a bad loser—that's all. I've played the game I liked—which you can't understand either, for you played on the other side—and I've lost out. It's over—and paid for as much as I intend ever to pay."
He smiled again his curious, secret smile. "That's all."
Obituary: Here lies a bad loser. R. L. P. Gentlemen—
He leaned heavily on the coaming. "Kindly convey respects to wife—and regrets."

With an exclamation of awakening comprehension Appleyard tried suddenly to lift himself out of the engine-pit. Blackstock smiled strangely and pityingly down at him.

"Too late," he said. "That's all. G'd-night."
Before Coast had grasped an inkling of his purpose the man, placing a foot upon the seat, put forth his final ounce of strength and plunged over the side. Coast put the wheel down hard and swung the Echo up into the wind. A glance at their wake showed him a spot of yeasty, churning water, silver upon the black.

As the boat came up he would have leaped from his place, but Appleyard was too quick for him.
The hand of the little man struck flat against his chest and thrust him back upon the box. Simultaneously Appleyard seized the wheel and sent the spokes spinning round to leeward. With a jerk the boom shot off and the mainsheet tautened.

"No!" cried Appleyard, his small, wizened face singularly white and solemn in the moonlight. "No, let him go—let him go the way he wants to go, I tell you—to whatever God he owns, with this, at least one decent act to plead for mercy on his soul!"
[THE END.]

Price of Tobacco Down in France. Devotees of "My Lady Nicotine" will learn with undisguised satisfaction that the French minister of finance has submitted a decree to the president for signature reducing the cost of "Corporal superieur" to its former price, namely, 80c. for 50 grammes as at present. Cigarettes of the same brand will be reduced to 60c. instead of 85c. This measure is due to the fact that the public simply boycotted "Corporal superieur" when the price went up and the French finances suffered heavily thereby.—Petit Parisien.

Sent By the Sun. The towering Washington monument, solid as it is, cannot resist the heat of the sun, poured on its southern side on a midsummer's day, without a slight bending of the gigantic shaft which is rendered perceptible by means of a copper wire, 174 feet long, hanging in the center of the structure, and carrying a plummet suspended in a vessel of water. At noon in summer the apex of the monument, 555 feet above the ground, is shifted, by expansion of the stone, a few hundredths of an inch toward the north. High winds cause perceptible motions of the plummet, and in still weather delicate vibrations of the crust of the earth, otherwise unperceived, are registered by it.

Friendship Too Costly. "Are you going to send the Sparkler girl a wedding present?" "No, old Sparkler and I had a squabble yesterday." "That's too bad. What was the cause?" "I can't afford his friendship. He has five marriageable daughters."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Influence of Salt Water

It induces Some to Drink, Others to Be Profane, and Others to Tell Falsehoods.

When riding on the harbor steamboats use your ears. Then you will not need your eyes for your brains. By paying heed to the intentionally audacious remarks of your neighbor it will be possible to pick up more inaccurate information than in any other place in the city. The deck of a ferry or the rail of a steamer acts curiously on the human mind. If it does not know, it will risk a guess, and the wilder the guess the more willingly risked.

It is well known that salt water acts in freakish ways on the conscience. To some it brings an overwhelming impulse to get drunk; to others it brings a disposition to the freest use of profanity; and still others, who would never think of fibbing from the windows of a railroad train (dear old gentlemen, and innocent young girls), the instant they get off from the wharf begin to tell the most shocking whoopery.—Boston Transcript.

Rothschild's Valdeletory. One day in September, nearly a hundred years ago, an old Jew lay dying in a garbled house that bore the device of a red shield in the ghetto of Frankfurt-on-the-Main. Creeping around him were five stalwart sons. In a firm voice the father in Israel admonished his children to be loyal to the faith of Moses, to be true to the law of the Lord.

to intermarry, and to obey their mother in all things.

"Observe these rules," he declared, "and you will be rich among the richest, and the world will belong to you."
Such was the earthly valdeletory of Mayer Amshel Rothschild.

As everybody well knows, that death-bed prophecy came true long ago. The world's only billionaire dynasty is evidence of its wisdom and foresight. Emperors, cabinets, whole royal successions have arisen, had their brief imperial day, and tottered to their fall; kingdoms of trade have developed and declined; but the reign of the Rothschilds has continued. Their scepter has been gold; their royal decree, the banknote.—Munsey's Magazine.

Inadequate. The American tourist in France clapped his bootman guide on the shoulder and scoldingly pointed to where, a few yards away, several fishermen were tugging at their lines and making a splendid haul from the sea. "What are they catching?" asked the American tourist.

"Fish" was the prompt reply.

Rather an Open Secret. A very important citizen was drawn on a jury, a week or two ago, and I met him after he had been discharged. He seemed to think that he was entitled to be on the bench, at the very least.

"What was your verdict in that case?" I asked.

"The defendant was unanimously acquitted on the first ballot."

"Indeed? And how did you vote?"

"That, sir, is one of the sacred secrets of the jury room."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Wanted to Know the Culprit. The following story was told recently by Austin Haines to a party of friends he entertained at luncheon:

"Down in a little Florida town two negro families live in shanties about a stone's throw apart. They obtain their drinking water from a shallow open well located midway between the two houses. A fence which separates the two yards is built up to the well on both sides. Every evening after her day's work is done, it is the custom of one of the negro inmates to pick up buckets and go to the well for water. One day the owner of the property moved the fence back about ten feet from where it originally stood. That evening when Miss started out with her pail she fixed her eyes on the fence and made straight for it. Walking hurriedly along the beaten path, she plunged into the shallow well with a splash. Her screams brought immediate assistance, and as she climbed out and spied the fence ten feet away she indignantly exclaimed: "Now, who does moved dat well?"

DUBIOUS

About What Her Husband Would Say.

A Michigan woman tried Postum because coffee disagreed with her and her husband. Tea is just as harmful as coffee because it contains caffeine—the same drug found in coffee. She writes:

"My husband was sick for three years with catarrh of the bladder, and palpitation of the heart, caused by coffee. Was unable to work at all and in bed part of the time.

"I had stomach trouble, was weak and fretful so I could not attend to my housework—both of us using coffee all the time and not realizing it was harmful.

"One morning the grocer's wife said she believed coffee was the cause of our trouble and advised Postum. I took it home rather dubious what my husband would say—he was fond of coffee.

"But I took coffee right on the table and we haven't used a cup of it since. You should have seen the change in us, and now my husband never complains of heart palpitation any more. My stomach trouble went away in two weeks after I began Postum. My children love it, and it does them good, which can't be said of coffee.

"A lady visited us who was usually half sick. I told her I'd make her a cup of Postum. She said it was tasteless stuff, but she watched me make it, boiling it thoroughly for 15 minutes, and when done, she said it was splendid. Long boiling brings out the flavor and food quality." PROPER CARE OF KITCHEN

Small Things Well Worth Remembering—Easy Method of Removing Mildew Stains.

Always empty the water out of the kettle after using it and rinse it thoroughly before filling with fresh water. This prevents the thick white sediment from forming at the bottom of the kettle that so soon cakes the side of the kettle if not rinsed.

The omelet pan must never be washed or scratched in any way and should be used only for omelets. When done with, rub well inside and out with pieces of soft paper till clean. Then rub with a dry cloth. If any pieces of eggs have stuck to it, put in a tiny piece of dripping and allow this to get hot over the fire. The pieces can be removed without any trouble.

Mildew stains can very often be removed quite successfully in the following way: Mix a small quantity of soft soap with the same proportion of powdered starch and salt and the juice of a lemon. Apply this mixture to both sides of the stain with a small brush; and, if possible, let the article lie on the grass all day and night until the stains have quite disappeared. Then wash it in the usual way.

SOMETHING NEW IN JAMS

Rhubarb, When Properly Prepared, is One of the Most Delicious Made.

To every pound of rhubarb allow one pound of loaf sugar and the rind of half a lemon. Wash and wipe the rhubarb perfectly dry; take off the string or peel, and weigh the rhubarb, putting it into the preserving pan with the sugar. Mince the thin yellow rind very finely, all to the rhubarb, and place all over the fire. Stir until the sugar is dissolved, then cook steadily till done, keeping it well skimmed. Stir it occasionally with a wooden or silver spoon (do not use iron or tin). Pour it into scalding preserve jars or pots, and seal or cover with paper wet with white of egg. While the rhubarb is young and tender it will cook in from three-quarters to one hour, reckoning from the time the whole starts to simmer equally. Old rhubarb requires from one and one-fourth to one and one-half hours.

Light Bread

Three or four medium size potatoes peel and boil, when boiled mash fine; put in two gallon jar with potato water; put in one handful of salt, one cupful of sugar; stir good; pour in as much water as needed, but not too cold or too hot. If a cold night, wrap up good with old cloaks or blankets to keep warm. Then in morning take out quart of yeast for next setting; then stir in flour enough to make a good paste. Set in warm place to rise, but not too much. Then put in large bread pan with lots of flour with one handful of salt, one handful of lard; stir together until hard dough; put in jar; let rise till light; put in pans; rise again; put in oven, let bake one hour 35 minutes with medium fire. Take out, empty on clean cloth, grease with butter or lard. It makes pretty good bread.

Quick Sponge Cake

Three eggs beaten very light, one cup sugar, one cup of flour, one teaspoonful baking powder, one teaspoonful lemon extract, one cup boiling water; stir up quick and bake in hot oven. Turn upside down in pan when taken out of oven and let it steam loose from pan; then serve. This same cake is good for jellyroll also.

Serving Sardines

When a box of sardines is opened it should be drained of all oil possible, and then the little fish turned out and sprinkled with lemon juice. They should be drained again before serving. The lemon will out the remaining oil and make the sardines more palatable.

Pineapple Pudding

Place in a saucepan to melt three ounces of butter. When melted add three ounces of flour and one pint of milk. Bring to the boil, stirring all the time. Take off the fire and add three ounces of sugar, the yolks of two eggs and pineapple juice. Put in a pie dish the contents of a small tin of pineapple chunks; then pour the mixture over and put in the oven to set. Beat the whites of the eggs to a stiff froth and spread over the pudding; then return to the oven for a few minutes until a nice brown color.

Halfroad Pudding

Half cup of lard and butter melted, one-half cup of molasses, one cup of milk, one-half cup raisins, one-half teaspoon of cloves and cinnamon, pinch of salt, one teaspoon of soda, three cups of flour. Steam at least two hours.

Methersome Paint Spots

There is a simple and effective way of removing spots of paint from shoes. Moisten the end of a parlor match and rub it on the spots. Then rub off with a dry cloth.
