CIVIC LEAGUE DANCE

Ladies Give Fine Bazaar and Auction Last Friday Evening.

RECEIPTS CLEAN UP TOWN.

The ladies of the town gave their civic league dance last Friday evening, which was well attended and which netted the Civic League about thirty-five dollars which will finish the cleaning up of the town in every district.

The evening was started off with an auction of unknown packages which the men present bid in at small sums and the packages in every instance contained something of value and usually worth as much as paid in the bidding. Some of the contents of the packages developed to be very amusing.

There was a Candy Booth, in charge of several of the young ladies of the town who sold very fine home-made candy at reasonable prices and there was the Fortune Telling booth over which Mrs. George Ulrick and Mrs. E B. Walker presided and told fortunes during the evening. Upon the stage, in the hall, tables were placed, and refreshments were sold and the ladies in charge of the serving had the 'heavy' work of the evening. Punch was also sold on the dancing floor.

What the ladies cleared did not amount to so much but no one who was present went away feeling they had been burdened with expense and they may now be induced to attend another similar affair. All those present seemed to enjoy themselves to the utmost and the affair was successful from start to finish.

YOUNG LADIES TEA.

The Junior department of the Ladies Home Mission Society gave a tea at the Real's Hall yesterday afternoon which was well attended and the usual nice refreshments were served and the "good will offerings" for the church collected was very fair. Those in charge of the afternoon's function were Miss Kittie Reily, Miss Mildred Peters, Miss Elsie Farley, and Miss Patsy Johnson.

ALTO "ALLUSIONS"

C. B. Lane went to Carrizozo on business this week.

Mrs J. J. Hollen is in Alto visiting friends.

Many of the Altoites took in the ball game at Stanton Sunday among the number were J. W. Stuart and family, Knox Philips, the Misses McMillons, Arthur McMillon, Theresa West.

There is plenty of lumber at both the saw-mills, and with the two stores, and newcomers arriving on an average of one each week, Alto is beginning to feel herself quite important.

Last Saturday night was the regular meeting of the Literary Society, and as usual an enthusiastic crowd gathered.

FORT STANTON 14 CAPITAN 4

The Fort Stanton baseball team crossed bats with the Capitan team on the home diamond Sunday, April 21, and defeated the visiting team by a score of 14 to 4. The regular practice and good team work have improved the working of the team materially and we believe we have a winner for the season. The visitors made one run in the sixth inning when Brockway slipped in attempting to catch the ball and made an out at first and was struck in the face by the ball. The other three runs were made by them in the first half of the ninth when the home team went to pieces for a short time. This is the first game in which our team has tried out its players with signals and regular team work and the results are very gratifying to the manager and the fans.

The following is the lineup of the teams and the runs by innings:—

RETAILERS STATE CONVENTION

The Retail Merchants Association of New Mexico of which the Carrizozo Retailers Association is a branch will hold their state convention in Albuquerque N. M. on May 7th, 8th, and 9th. The committee on arrangements at Albuquerque have planned and arranged a splendid program for entertainment and the business sessions of the association will also undoubtedly be interesting. It is hoped that a number of the members of the Local Association will be able to attend the convention.

DEMOCRATIC CONVENTIONS.

The Democratic convention for Lincoln County has been called to meet in Capitan on the 4th of May, this convention will elect six delegates to the State Democratic Convention which is to meet in Clovis on May 14th. The state convention will elect the state delegates to represent New Mexico at The Baltimore National Convention who will nominate in turn a democratics candidate for President.

LOCAL EVENTS OF WEEK

Happenings of Interest to Our Readers Briefly Told

ATTEMPT ROBBERY.

Wednesday evening an attempt was made to hold up Dee Wilson a well known ranchman of this county. Dee Wilson and George Eakers left the Stag Saloon, and as they passed the telephone exchange building a few doors away, a man jumped out and hit Wilson over the head several times with a six shooter. While making the assault the assailant accidently discharged the weapon and disappeared without having secured any money. Wilson was knocked down and left there. Dan Buillon was arrested a few hours later and arraigned before Justice Massie the following morning and waved examination to the Grand Jury. He was placed under $500 bond.

SMALL FIRE FRIDAY

A fire broke out in a shed in the rear of the Bonito Meat Market building Monday afternoon which totally destroyed the building and might have proven very serious to surrounding buildings if it had not been for the prompt action of the two railroad fire fighting forces. The railroad boys had both sections of their hose out and water upon the building some distance away in short order. Another fire broke out in the evening in the Scotty Dean "shack" only a short distance away but was successfully put out without alarm before it spread. Both fires are thought to be from incendiary origin.

CIVIC LEAGUE MEETING

The regular bi-monthly meeting of the Civic Improvement League of Carrizozo was called to order Tuesday afternoon by President Mrs. George L. Ulrich. A very large attendance of ladies was present amounting to about fifty persons and the membership has been increased to fifty-five.

The main discussion occured over the question of finishing the cleaning up of the town and Mrs Fred Jones and Mrs B. Kolar were appointed to have charge of the rest of the cleaning up of the two remaining districts.

A crusade against the House-fly is to be started at once and those present decided to take kerosen, lime and other disinfectants and place them around their property and to battle against the great mic robe carrier in every practical way.

Mrs. J. F. Kimbell was appointed as Chairman of the next Amusement committee. The form of the next entertainment has not yet been announced.

—The Ladies Civic League are to draw up a petition and circulate same in town and after the signers are procured the petition will be presented to E. P. & S. W Railroad officials, asking them to make a park to stretch along their right of way thru the city. A delegation of women may go to El Paso to interview the officials.

AMATEUR PLAY SOON

Rehersals are already in progress for another amateur show to be produced during May. The receipts from the play going to the Home Mission society. The name of the play is "Too Much Married," a short comedy with five characters only. Those participating are Mrs. A. J. Rolland, Mrs. Frank Elliott, Harry B. Dawson, L. B. Chase, S. L. Northlane. The comedy will be followed during the evening with a number of specialties and musical features.

R. H. LALONDE IS DEAD

Robert H. LaLonde the well known freight conductor, passed from this life at Hotel Dieu in El Paso Thursday morning after making a brave fight for his life against injuries received in an accident at Carrizozo last Sunday.

Mr LaLonde sustained a compound fracture of the left leg, a broken collar bone, concussion of the brain and several broken ribs. There was dim hope for his life at first and he was rushed on the limited train to El Paso attended by company physcian Dr. M. G Paden Trainmaster Fairbanks, Mrs. LaLonde and their baby child, and was taken to Hotel Dieu hospital where every attention was given the injured man.

Just previous to the accident he was chatting with the engineer on train No 34 which was laying on the siding awaiting the arrival of train No. 3, westbound, to pass. Waving a farewell to the engineer LaLonde stepped backward just as No. 3 ran past and the pilot beam of the engine struck him in the back.

FORT STANTON FLASHES

Miss Helen Rice, of Parsons, spent the week with Dr. and Mrs. Smith last week.

C. C. Coe, of Alto was a visitor at the Fort Saturday and Sunday.

Mr. Jim Darby left last Sunday for a week's visit to his ranch near Tularosa.

Mrs. Joe Colman is on the sick list this week.

J. W Stuart and family spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Hollem.

Mrs. and Mrs. Marshal West were circulating among friends at the Fort Sunday

—The Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen will give a dance next Monday evening in the Peoples Building, which promises to be a very nice affair.

—It is expected that Carrizozo will have a baseball team, after all, this season and a movement is already on foot to have a game with Fort Stanton in a week. George Dingwall is instrumental in the organization.

—The Ladies Home Mission held a business session last Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. G. L. Ulrick. Arrangments were made to pay off the last payment of the indebtedness assumed by the organization for the M. E. church.

MEET PATHFINDER CAR

H. S. Drumm Transcontinental Pathfinder Passed Thru County Sunday.

CARRIZOZO PEOPLE GREET HIM

Simultaneously with the leaving of the Transcontinental Pathfinders Car from Roswell last Sunday morning two automobiles left Carrizozo; one left Capitan and one left Lincoln and the cars all met below the Junction of the Hondo, where a conference was held with Harry C. Drumm who was intercepted at this point in his Pathfinder Car on his Coast to Coast trip. Mr. Drumm was accompanied by Dr. T. W. Watson and Mr. Farnsworth. Lincoln County gave the party a hearty welcome and pointed out the merits of the routes thru the country. Mr. Drumm was very receptive and asked those present to log the optional route from the Hondo Junction to Carrizozo via Lincoln and Capitan and thence to Tularosa. There seems to be no doubt but what their will be an optional route thru the county which will include the main towns Mr. Drumm found that it was necessary in order to keep up to his schedule to take the short route up the Ruidosa and thru the Mescalero reservation to Alamogordo but regretted he could not personally go over the optional route as well.

After leaving the Transcontinental party, the Lincoln County committee returned to Lincoln to lunch and in the afternoon held a rousing meeting. The Lincoln County Transcontinental Road Association was formed, with the slogan "A Year Round Route." Dr. T. W Watson was elected President and A. H. Harvey, Secretary. The president is to divide the transcontinental roads passing thru the county into various districts and to appoint a supervisor for each.

A committee consiting of Geo. B. Barber and Lee B Chase was appointed by the chair to urge the state legislature to pass a law allowing each county to issue bonds for the making of roads. This would allow for the talked of $30,000 bond issue in this county.

T. A. Spencer, John Haley and Allen Johnson were appointed to log the road from Carrizozo to Tularosa and their expenses provided for in the work. This committee expect to complete their work this week.

On the matter of publicity and the pointing out, in literature, of the things of national interest within the county borders, a committee was appointed consisting of George Ulrick, S. M. Johnson and George B. Barber.

The literature, maps of the county with the logs which note every house and arroya, etc., on the route will be completed and forwarded to the Transcontinental Touring Club in Chicago within a very short time.

Those who met the Pathfinder car Sunday were: G. L. Ulrick, John Haley, Truman Spencer, J. F. Kimbell, Frank Gurney, Wm Reily, L. B. Chase, Chas. Stevens and Al. Smith of Carrizozo; T. W Watson, Dr. John Laws, Wm. Norman, J. J. Aragon, and G. B. Barber of Lincoln; Allen Johnson, Harry Johnson and Jas. Kinney of Capitan and Dr. Lanzy of Fort Stanton.

HARROW ON DRY FARMS

Homemade Implement Found to be Effective.

One of Prime Requirements for Successful Farming in Dry Areas Is Effective Tillage Machinery at Least Expense.

One of the prime requirements for successful dry farming is effective tillage implements which accomplish the greatest results with the least expenditure of labor. A homemade implement (fig. 1), which has been found very effective in dry farming in Utah, taking the place in a measure of the harrow, disk leveler, and weeder, is described by J. C. Hogenson of the Utah experiment station, as follows:

The implement consists of a rectangle, 10 by 4 feet, made of 2-inch planks, 8 inches wide. To the under side of the 10-foot planks are bolted nine knives made from one-fourth-inch steel, 24 inches long. The steel is bent 2 inches from one end so that it will drop down behind the plank. The knives are bolted to the plank diagonally at an angle of 45 degrees by means of two bolts. The bend is about 2 inches deep, which allows the knives to work that distance below the surface of the ground. The long part of the steel below the bend is sharpened on the front side so that the ground to the depth of three inches and form a perfect mulch.

An improved form of this implement (fig. 2) is described by Prof. Hogenson as follows:

The frame of the implement is made of 4-inch channel steel, 8 by 4 feet. The frame is not made solid, but the 6-foot pieces are fastened to the 4-foot pieces by means of bolts so that the 6-foot pieces can turn freely. To make the frame more solid, two iron-rod braces run diagonally from the front part of one 4-foot piece to the back part of the other. The weeder knives, 14 in number, are made of medium hardened steel, 3 inches wide by one-fourth inch thick. Each knife is 32 inches long and is fastened to the 6-foot pieces at an angle of 45 degrees by means of two bolts. Just behind the 6-foot piece a 2-inch bend is made in the knife, allowing it to drop horizontally below the frame. The front edge of the knife is sharpened. The knives on the front part of the frame, seven in number, slope to the right, while those on the rear part of the frame, seven in number, slope to the left. A lever attachment connects the two 6-foot pieces so that the knives can be raised or lowered at will. One one and one-fourth-inch steel axle, 6 inches in length, is bolted to the inside of each of the 4-foot pieces so that when wheels are put on and the man is riding the machine is perfectly balanced and off the ground. Wheels are used only for transporting the implement to the field. The wheels are 18 inches in diameter with a four and one-half-inch face. The seat is placed on a bent spring on the 4-foot piece, to which the lever is attached.

HORIZONTAL PLAN

Simple Form of a Weeder Harrow for Dry Farms.

Two horses can pull the implement readily. The doubletree is fastened to a ring, to which two iron rods coming from the front ends of the 4-foot pieces are attached. For summer-fallowed ground two of these implements can be run side by side, drawn by four horses, and manipulated by one man.

weeds will be cut, this blade being about 12 inches long. The knives on the front slope to the right, while those on the rear plank slope to the left. This arrangement makes it impossible for any weeds to be missed, or any part of the ground to remain unstirred. The framework levels the land and crushes the clods, while the knives destroy the weeds and loosen

FARM NOTES

The telephone is not a convenience, it is a necessity.

Look over trees and shrubs for final pruning before growth starts.

Sow clean, new crop of clover seed; old seed will not germinate freely.

Many large stones in the way of cultivation, may be lifted out by the plow.

Weeds overshadow cultivated plants, depriving them of light and space in both soil and air.

The covered barn yard is rapidly coming into favor as a necessity to the farmer and dairyman.

The germinating power of the middle kernels of an ear of corn is much stronger than that of the tip and butt kernels.

Feed well and keep good stock or else quit. Half way work never paid anyone in the live stock or dairy business.

No matter whether the corn is bought or saved from your own farm it should be stored in a dry, well-ventilated place.

Experts of the department of agriculture advocate the use of lime in a limited and experimental way in every locality.

A well-bred animal costs very little more to purchase, and generally less to feed, than a bad one, while the progeny is always salable.

Farm labor is high, and some of the hours of winter months can be spent to no better advantage than planning economy of farm labor, particularly.

Good clean feed, pure water, fresh air and clean, surroundings such as gutters and yards will keep stock healthy and increase the profit on the plant.

Whenever smut appears treat the seed grain with formalin solution. Get the formula and method from the state experiment station. The treatment is very simple and effective.

THE SAFE LAXATIVE FOR ELDERLY PEOPLE

Most elderly people are more or less troubled with a chronic, persistent constipation, due largely to lack of sufficient exercise. They experience difficulty in digesting even light food, with a consequent belching of stomach gases, drowsiness after eating, headache and a feeling of lassitude and general discomfort.

Doctors advise against cathartics and violent purgatives of every kind, recommending a mild, gentle laxative tonic, like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, to effect relief without disturbing the entire system.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is the perfect laxative, easy in action, certain in effect and, withal, pleasant to the taste. It possesses tonic properties that strengthen the stomach, liver and bowels and is a remedy that has been for years the great standby in thousands of families, and should be in every family medicine chest. It is equally as valuable for children as for older people.

Druggists everywhere sell Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin in 50c and $1.00 bottles. If you have never tried it send your name and address to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 201 Washington St., Monticello, Ill., and he will be very glad to send a sample bottle for trial.

HANDS BURNED LIKE FIRE

"I can truthfully say Cuticura Remedies have cured me of four long years of eczema. About four years ago I noticed some little pimples coming on my little finger, and not giving it any attention, it soon became worse and spread all over my hands. If I would have them in water for a long time, they would burn like fire and large cracks would come. I could lay a pin in them. After using all the salves I could think of, I went to three different doctors, but all did me no good. The only relief I got was scratching.

"So after hearing so much about the wonderful Cuticura Remedies, I purchased one complete set, and after using them three days my hands were much better. Today my hands are entirely well, one set being all I used." (Signed) Miss Etta Narber, R. F. D. 2, Spring Lake, Mich., Sept. 26, 1910.

Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. L, Boston.

Spendthrift.

Uncle Ezra—Do you think the money young Epk Hoskins made down in New York will last him long?

Uncle Eben—You bet it won't! He's going at an awful pace. I was down in the general store last night, and young Epk was writing $100 checks and lighting his cigars with them.—Puck.

COLDS AND CHILLS BRING KIDNEY ILLS

Colds, chills and grip strain the kidneys and start backache, urinary disorders and uric acid troubles. Doan's Kidney Pills are very useful in the raw spring months. They stop backache and urinary disorders, keep the kidneys well and prevent colds from settling on the kidneys.

Mrs. E. A. Bennett, Johnson Ave., Los Gatos, Cal., says: "If I took cold or overworked, I had such severe pains through my back I could hardly move. My limbs ached until I scarcely knew what I was about, and headaches and dizziness distressed me. I began using Doan's Kidney Pills and was entirely relieved. It is over two years since I have had any kidney trouble to speak of."

Relieves Backache Instantly

Sloan's Liniment is a great remedy for backache. It penetrates and relieves the pain instantly—no rubbing necessary—just lay it on lightly.

Here's Proof.

"I had my back hurt in the Boer War and in San Francisco two years ago I was hit by a street car in the same place. I tried all kinds of dope without success. Two weeks ago I saw your liniment in a drug store and got a bottle to try. The first application caused instant relief, and now except for a little stiffness, I am almost well."

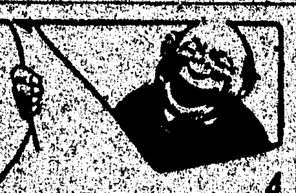
GOOD JOKES



AS ORDERED.

A country tailor recently found himself in an awkward fix. He wanted to order two fattirons of the type known as "tailor's goose," but he looked at the order he had written and shook his head.

"Two tailor's gooses," he muttered; "that don't look right. Two tailor's geese—no, I'm sure that can't be correct."

He pondered the question until he became quite worried, but finally hit on the brilliant idea of writing his order:

"Messrs. ——. Please send one tailor's goose. P. S.—You can send two instead of one."—London Weekly Telegraph.

INCONSISTENT.

The Preacher—Then you don't think I practice what I preach, eh?

Deacon Hayrick—No, sirse, I don't. You've been preaching on ther subject of resignation for two years, and yer ain't resigned yit.

A Mode of Concealment.

"I want to keep the real facts concerning this transaction a secret," said the enterprising man.

"Then," replied the sage counselor, "I should immediately start a controversy concerning it. Then so many theories will be advanced that the facts will never become public."

No Place for Them.

"I see where President Taft has been asked to appoint a woman to the Supreme court vacancy."

"Nonsense! Do you suppose any normal woman is going to take a place where she has to sit still and let other people do all the arguing?"

TO WISH IS CHEAP.

Hix—I never deny my wife a wish.

Dix—I didn't know you were so well fixed financially.

Hix—Tut! tut! It doesn't cost anything to wish.

A Natural Conclusion.

"I am looking for an honest man," remarked Diogenes.

"Well," replied the cynical observer, "a man who has as much difficulty in finding an honest man as you have must have shown mighty poor taste in picking his friends."

Overhead Expense.

"Isn't it awful? Eggs are 40 cents a dozen."

"That's not so bad when you remember you're paying for a year or so storage."

Toward Morning.

Mrs. Schnapps—I have no words to express my contempt of you.

Mr. Schnapps—Tha's th' best news I've heard for a long time, m'dear.

The Dead Restored.

"Was it a good play?"

"I should say so. After the star died he responded to three encores."

The Difference.

"Is your neighbor's garden much cultivated?"

"Yes; but he hasn't."

Just as He Said.

At the good roads convention in Emporia recently Mit Wilhoit was introducing some of Emporia's prominent citizens to the delegates. He told the delegates what each one of the prominent citizens represented in a business way until he introduced the last one. "He represents nothing," Mr. Wilhoit said. "Except myself—I represent myself," said the prominent citizen. "Well, that is what I said," replied Mr. Wilhoit.

Her Help.

"Hilton says he is willing to give his wife credit for having been a great help to him in business."

"I understand she was his stenographer for several years."

"Yes. He insists that he has never had anyone in the office who could equal her in the delicate business of persuading creditors to be patient."

Danger in Liberality.

"A drop of ink makes millions think," remarked the ready made philosopher.

"Yes," replied Senator Sorghum, "but you want to limit your use of ink to drops. As soon as you go to spreading it around in quarts they're liable to get too tired to think."

A Good Record for Both.

"I've driven my car for over a year now," said Bilkins, "and I've never run down anybody."

"That's nothing," said Mrs. Bilkins. "I've attended the meetings of our sewing circle for five years and have never run down anybody."—Harper's Weekly.

MEAN.

The Artist (showing new picture)—This is the best thing I ever did.

The Critic—Oh! well, you mustn't let that discourage you.

Alas!

Oh, hark! The postman's whistle,
This life's all burr and thistle.
A merchant from my pittance
Demands a quick remittance.

Advance in Art.

"So you think our national artistic sense is improving."

"Yes," replied the cruel critic. "Our statuary is far from what it should be. But we have at least taken the wooden Indians from in front of the cigar stores."

No Market.

"Time is money," quoted the Wise Guy.

"Possibly," replied the Simple Mug, "but it isn't always an easy matter to effect the exchange."

Wants to Find Him.

"My doctor advises me to go south for my health."

"Who is your doctor? My fool of a doctor advises me to sleep outdoors for my health."

Literally.

"You often read of flames shooting up."

"So you do."

"But that case the other day was the only time I ever heard of their doing it with pistols."

Appropriate.

"What did Klinkle call his burlesque show that he took out west?"

"'The Kangaroos.'"

"Why that name?"

"The company had to make so many long jumps."

A New Disease.

IDEA AN AMERICAN ONE

DEVELOPMENT OF THE TRAIN DISPATCHING SYSTEM.

Like Most Railroad Improvements, the Scheme Was Evolved and Perfected in This Country—Its First Workings.

The train despatcher is an American development of railroading. While Europe finds it feasible to move trains by "staff" from station to station, United States conditions have indicated a totally different method.

In 1851 two passenger trains were running toward each other on the Erie railroad between Jersey City and Port Jervis. On the east-bound train, says the Railroad Man's Magazine, rode the general superintendent of the road, Charles Minot.

A telegraph line had recently been erected along that stretch of road. It was considered a great curiosity. Some people believed that in time it would prove to be of service. The majority were content to hold the opinion that it was a useless freak contraption.

The two trains were scheduled to meet at Monroe. Trains at that period traveled by time table and prearranged schedule. Imagination had not progressed to the point of conceiving a disarrangement of programs.

On this occasion the east-bound train found on arriving at Monroe that the other was half an hour late. There appeared nothing to do but remain there, according to custom, and await the tardy one.

Nothing else appeared possible to anybody except General Superintendent Minot. He refused to be bound by tradition. He promptly wired to the west-bound train to wait at Turners, the next station, until the east-bound met it. Then he wrote an order for the conductor and engineer of the latter to proceed to Turners.

The engineer, it is said, refused to obey the order. Disobeying the time table seemed to him to be like fracturing the Decalogue. He declined to take the risk. Thereupon the general superintendent climbed into the cab and himself drove the engine to Turners. This is said to have been the first time the movement of trains was directed by telegraph in America.

DINING CAR IS THE HEAVIEST

Some Interesting Comparisons Between Its Weight and That of the Other Coaches.

The heaviest of all the cars in a "limited" train is the dining car, which is, ordinarily, of a weight in excess of the other cars by 10,000 or 15,000 pounds. Between the car construction and the necessary kitchen equipment and icebox contents, a full-size standard dining car tips the scales at 140,000 pounds when ready to make its customary division run. Therefore, on the principle that in case of collision a passenger is safer in the strong, heavy coach in the center of a vestibuled train, the dining car is a good place to remain. A sixteen-section sleeping car may weigh from 110,000 to 125,000 pounds, while the buffet-library car of the transcontinental type comes next in weight at 107,000 pounds. The baggage car, weighing 85,000 pounds, may be the lightest in a train, but the postal car next to it weighs on an average 103,000 pounds, a reclining chair car is full weight at 87,000 pounds, while the ordinary passenger coach weighs 93,000 pounds. With a locomotive and tender weighing 280,000 pounds, one may estimate, by these figures, the enormous weight of some of the through railway trains of seven cars.

MADE PRETTY POINT OF LAW

Astute Lawyer Secured Verdict From Railroad Company by His Convincing Argument.

The story is told that in the early days of the railroad in the west there was a farmer who owned two well-bred and useful dogs, named Major and Tige. The dogs one morning chased a stray hog down the road and stopped to play at the railroad crossing, with the result that Tige was struck by an engine and killed. The owner promptly brought suit for damages against the road.

Damage suits were a new thing at that time, and there were many neighbors and sympathizers present at the hearing. The engineer swore that he gave a sharp blast of the whistle as he approached the crossing. It looked as if the railroad company was "to go scotfree," but the attorney for the farmer knew his justice.

"Your honor," he said, "it is required by the statutes in such cases made and provided that when any person or domestic animal is up a railroad and is seen by the engineer, he must sound his whistle. In this instance, your honor, there were two domestic animals innocently playing on the track, and the whistle was sounded only once, when it is a positive legal requirement that it should have been blown twice, once for each dog."

So convincing was this argument that the country justice would not even give the railroad attorney a hearing, and awarded the plaintiff the full amount of damages sued for.—The Green Bag.

SAVED THE OVERLAND FLYER

Much Courage and Presence of Mind Shown by Seven-Year-Old Girl of California.

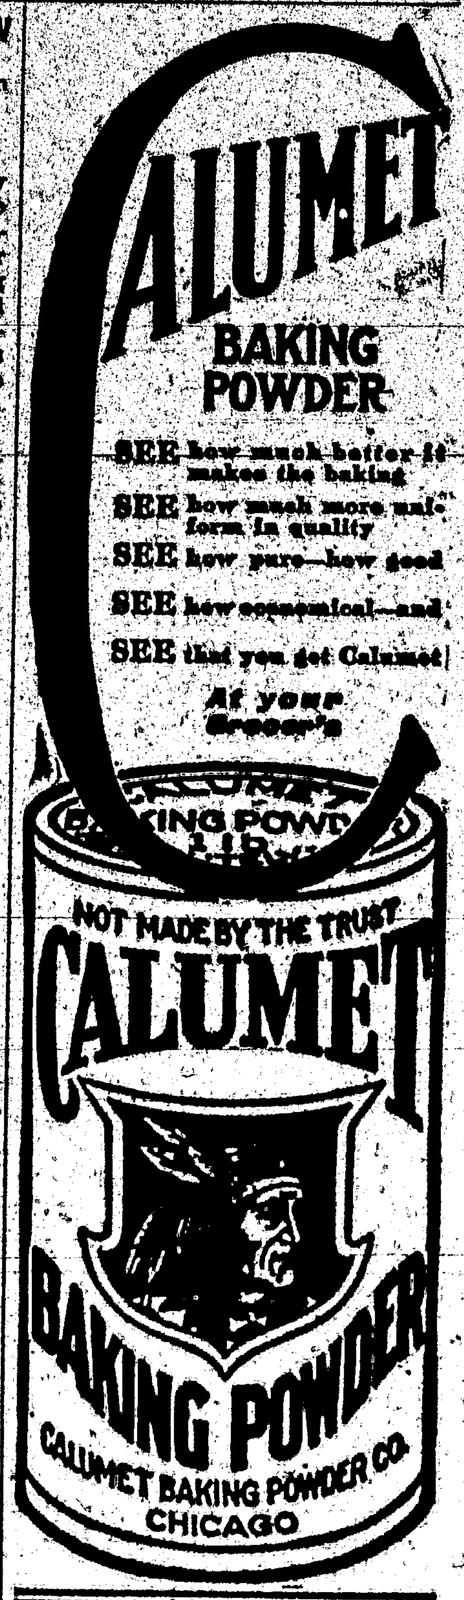
But for a seven-year-old girl, the second section of the eastbound Overland Limited would have been wrecked at Alta, Cal., recently. The heroine is Ileen Martin, daughter of Alfred Martin, a section foreman of the Southern Pacific. She flagged the train just before it reached the broken rail. The Martin girl and her little sister have been in the habit of watching for the block signal, near their home, which tells them when trains are approaching. After the train enters the block they have ample time to go to the station and watch it come in, and later get the Martin mail. One day the children set out to watch for the signal. Before reaching the block Ileen discovered a broken rail on the main line near a switch. Realizing the danger, the clever child hurried back to her home. Her mother and older sisters were out. With rare presence of mind she telephoned the telegraph office at Towle. The telegraph operator replied that the train had already entered the block and that he could not stop it. By this time Ileen's 14-year-old sister, Alma, had returned. The two girls then ran to the railroad track and succeeded in flagging the Overland flyer when it was but a short distance away from the broken rail.

Pig's Journey on Cowcatcher.

The engineer of a Panhandle passenger train, on arrival at Logansport, Ind., recently, found a curious passenger on the cowcatcher of his locomotive, in the shape of a live pig. He said the animal had probably been trying to find a warm place and had climbed on the cowcatcher at some of the stations along the route. When found the pig was half frozen, but recovered when put in a warm pen.

Public Welfare in Publicity.

The possession of the news, the knowledge of the world's daily life, thought, movement, constitutes the most effective weapon for the protection of society. Justice and truth flourish in the light of publicity. Iniquity and wrong dread it and are ultimately cured by the influences which flow from its illuminating rays.—Samuel Bowles.



OR THREE OR FOUR.

Green—I wouldn't marry a widow. They are always looking after number one.

Wise—I differ with you. I think they are usually looking after number two.

His Business.

"That man indulges in shocking language."

"Influence of his trade. He's a telegraph lineman."

If a can is honest he doesn't have to use a megaphone to advertise the fact.

NO WORDS WASTED

A Swift Transformation Briefly Described.

About food, the following brief but emphatic letter from a Georgia woman goes straight to the point and is convincing.

"My frequent attacks of indigestion and palpitation of the heart culminated in a sudden and desperate illness, from which I arose enfeebled in mind and body. The doctor advised me to live on cereals, but none of them agreed with me until I tried Grape-Nuts food and Postum.

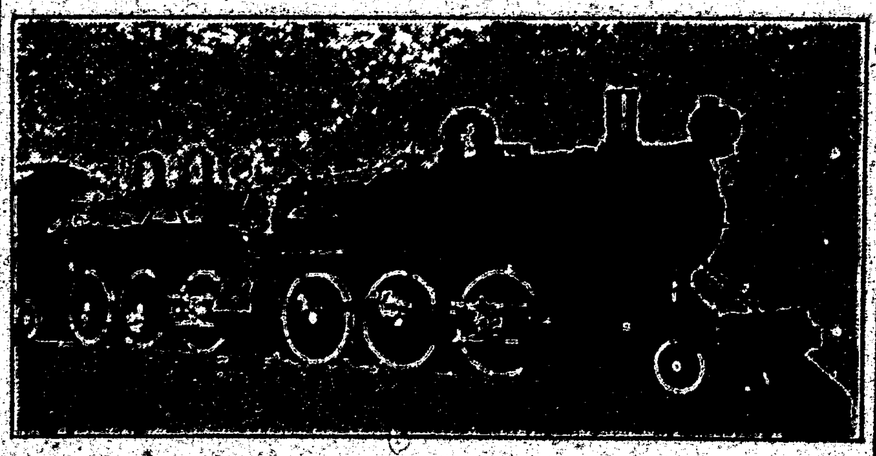
"The more I used of them the more I felt convinced that they were just what I needed, and in a short time they made a different woman of me. My stomach and heart troubles disappeared as if by magic, and my mind was restored and is as clear as it ever was.

"I gained flesh and strength so rapidly that my friends were astonished. Postum and Grape-Nuts have benefited me so greatly that I am glad to bear this testimony." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

"There's a reason," and it is explained in the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in Pkgs.

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

FLEXIBLE LOCOMOTIVE



This locomotive has been built by an American railroad company and tested but a few days ago. Its peculiarity consists in the boiler which on account of its length had to be jointed in the middle, to enable it to take all the curves of the road. Conservatively estimated this locomotive with the tender together is about 75 feet long. This is the first and so far the only locomotive of this kind.

OPPORTUNITY AND RESPONSIBILITY.

The first state legislature has a large opportunity; it also has a great responsibility.

The next few weeks must demonstrate whether its majority consists of statesmen or of mere politicians who in the scramble for self aggrandizement forget the needs of their constituents and of the state at large.

Before each man, naturally, the desires of his own particular community, the wishes of his particular friends, loom largest. Whether this fact is to obscure real public duty and the wider patriotism remains to be seen.

There may be some satisfaction in a little personal triumph, or in putting it over the other fellow, but that will not place New Mexico in the forefront as it was expected this legislature would do. The Constitutional convention performed its task well—a sound argument for a single house instead of the bicameral system. It is for the present legislature to realize the hope and justify the confidence that the people manifested by electing the members.

There is many a man who would be proud of the opportunity to write upon the statute books the first state laws and to fashion them with a wider view than merely local or personal considerations; who would be proud to co-operate with the other legislators and the executive, irrespective of party to lay the foundations for the prosperity and advancement of a great state.

It is taken for granted that every member of the House, every member of the Senate, every state official, is animated by the desire to do the best for the commonwealth This being the case, it should be easy to find some common basis for action, to get together in dignified manner. Personal rivaly and petty politics have had their day, now give statesmanship a chance!

OH! YOU LIFE

Man comes into this world without his consent and leaves it against his will. During his stay on earth his time is spent in one continuous round of contraries and misunderstandings In his infancy he is an angel; in his boyhood he is a devil: in his manhood he is everything from a lizard up In his family duties he is a damn fool; if he raises a family he is chump: if he doesdent raise a family "Teddy" Roosevelt swears at him. If he is a poor man he is a bad manager and has no sense; If he is rich he is dishonest but considered smart; if he is in politics he is a grafter and a crook; if he is out of politics you can't place him—he is an "undesirable citizen". If he goes to church he is a hypocrite; if he stays away from church he is a sinner. If he donates to foreign mission he does it for show; if he doesen't he is stingy and a tight-wad. When he first comes into the world everybody wants to kiss him—before he goes out everybody wants to kick him. If he gets sick and recovers, his friend the undertaker is mad at him If he dies young there is a great future in front of him; if he lives to a ripe old age he is in the way, only living to save funeral expenses. LIFE is a funny proposition after all.

The Story of the Santa Fe Trail

by Walter Williams

THE Santa Fe Trail was the maker of men as well as the maker of states. Only real men survived the dangers and hardships of the trail, but real men grew in strength and stature because of hardships and the dangers. The sham perished in the desert, but the genuine marched the trail unhurt. The story of the trail is the story of great frontiersmen. There were giants in those days. Strong men and weaklings were attracted by the pot of gold which the rainbow stories of the trail located in Santa Fe, the end of the trail, where the rainbow touched the ground. The weaklings fell by the weary way side or fled back to the silken comforts of civilization. The strong stayed. Courage was a characteristic. Fear was foreign to the frontiersmen. They knew how to fight, to fight at close range, and to fight hard. They did not know much about books, but they knew of men and the open sky and the trail. They lived out of doors. They were honest. "Hide my gold?" said one old-timer talking over his yesterdays, "I never hid my gold. No thieves traveled in the caravans." They were hospitable. They would share the last pipeful of tobacco. Dangerous as was the life the early travelers upo nthe trail necessarily led, they found fascination in the very danger. "I would like to go again," said Judge John D. Turley, one of the Indian fighters of yesterday, rising from his chair and tapping with his cane the elm under which we had been seated. He seemed 20 years young instead of 85 years old. "I certainly would go again if the railroad had not taken away the danger and spoiled the fun."

Kit Carson

The most conspicuous figure among the frontiersmen on the trail was Kit Carson—"Gen. Carson," as he is spoken of, almost with reverence, by Daniel L. Taylor, six times mayor of Trinidad, Colo., who has given $5,000 to erect a statue to Carson in that bustling border town. Kit Carson lived and died upon the trail and was there buried. The automobile travelers, following the old trail, found reminders of this foremost frontiersman from Franklin, Mo., to Taos, N. M. Ready and willing to talk of Kit Carson were the old-timers who had known him. "Of all the great men on the trail," said Mayor Taylor, who knew him intimately for years, "Gen. Carson was the chief." Not all the old-timers agred with Mayor Taylor. "Kit Carson was not an extraordinary man," said Capt. Smith H. Simpson of Taos. "There were many others who were better and older Indian fighters. It was Gen. John C. Fremont's reports that made Kit Carson's reputation."

It is not strange that the trail abounds with stories of Kit Carson and his adventures. In Howard county, Missouri, where the trail really began, he lived as a lad. At Pawnee Rock he had his first fight with the Indians. At various posts on the trail he was stationed as Indian agent. He married on the trail. His body, buried Lyon on the trail. His body, buried first at Las Animas, on the trail, was and in a cemetery in this quaint Spanish town in the mountains now rests. Kit Carson was part and parcel of the old trail and much of the romance of the trail is interwoven with his name. He was only 17 years old when he left his father's home in Howard county, Missouri, to join a Santa Fe Caravan. From that time until his death on the Arkansas river in 1868 the Santa Fe trail was his home. Many stories are told of Carson, some of which are doubtless apocryphal, but all illustrate the character. At Great Bend, on the Arkansas river, he amputated a man's arm to save his life, using as instruments all that were available, a razor, a saw and the king bolt of a wagon. At Bent's Fort he was the chief hunter for eight years, providing game for food for the 40 men in the fort. He was on intimate terms with the Indians, who admired, respected and feared him. He could make peace as well as war. "The Sioux, one of the most numerous and warlike tribes," relates Mayor Taylor, "had encroached upon the hunting grounds of the southern Indians, and the latter had many a skirmish with them on the banks of the Arkansas river along the trail. Carson, who was in the upper valley of the river, was sent for to come down to help them drive the obnoxious Sioux back to their own stamping ground. He left Fort Bend and went with the party of Comanche messengers to the main camp of that tribe and the Arapahoes, with whom they had united. Upon his arrival he was told that the Sioux had 1,000 warriors and many rifles, and the Comanches and Arapahoes were afraid of them on account of their great disparity of numbers, but that if he would go with them on the warpath they felt assured they could overcome their enemies. Carson, however, instead of encouraging the Comanches and Arapahoes to fight, induced them to negotiate with the Sioux. He was sent as mediator and so successfully did he accomplish his mission that the intruding tribe consented to leave the hunting grounds of the Comanches as soon as the buffalo season was over, which they did, and there was no more trouble.

In the adobe dwelling house at Old Fort Lyon, where Kit Carson died—now part of the United States Naval hospital near Las Animas—Luke Cahill, the only person now living who saw the great frontiersman die, told the story of his death. "It was on May 23, 1868," said Cahill, "that Gen. Carson died here. His head rested near this window and he had been looking out through the window at the world outside. He semed to want to get out of doors. He had been ill across the Arkansas river, where he had been living for a time. As he grew steadily worse the fort physician, Dr. Tilton, and others of his friends had persuaded him to permit himself to be brought to the fort for medical treatment and hospital attendance. He had come very reluctantly. All was done for him that could be done, but it was no use. He grew steadily worse. There was a smile on his face as, with his hand in my hand, he looked out of the window at the glowing sunshine and died. When he died the last page of the last chapter of the heroic days of the Old Trail was finished. He was the great man of the trail."

The most memorable military expedition up the Old Trail—indeed, the most marvelous military expedition in the memory of the United States—was that led by Col. Alexander W. Doniphan, in 1846. The thousand Missourians, under Col. Doniphan's command, formed part of the Army of the West, under Gen. Stephen W. Kearney, which left Fort Leavenworth June 26, 1846, over the Old Trail for Santa Fe. "This body of men," wrote William Cullen Bryant, "conquered the states of New Mexico and Chihuahua and traversed Durango and New Leon. On this march they traveled more than 6,000 miles, consuming 12 months. During all this time not one word of information reached them from the government, nor any order whatsoever; they neither received any supplies of any kind nor one cent of pay. They lived exclusively on the country through which they passed and supplied themselves with powder and ball by capturing them from the enemy. From Chihuahua to Matamoras, a distance of 900 miles, they marched in 45 days, bringing with them 17 pieces of heavy artillery as trophies." It was this expedition, which decided that New Mexico and Arizona should become states of the American union.

Richens Lacy Wootton, "Uncle Dick" Wootton, as all trail travelers knew him, deserves high place in any account of the historic personages of the trail. Col. Richard Owenby has restored near Trinidad the old Wootton toll house where the frontiersman, having built a road over Raton mountain, levied tribute upon all who traveled thereupon.

The Trail attracted the young man. Kit Carson went west upon the Trail at the age of 17 years; Doniphan and his soldiers war mere youths, Wootton was but 18 years of age when he "hit the Trail," and James Bridger, the foremost mountaineer, was only 16 years old when, under the leadership of William H. Ashley, the fur merchant, he went out on the Trail. The early age at which the frontiersmen left home for the wilds of the west was one reason for their lack of the education which the school gives. They had the training of the west, which gave them rough, uncouth exteriors and unselfish hearts. Jim or Maj. Bridger, born in Washington City, left the nation's capital to travel "out West" and become guide, scout, map maker through the Rocky mountains. Bridger's pass in the Rocky mountains bears his name. Jim Bridger, it is claimed, first among the white men of America, saw Salt Lake in the winter of 1824-5. Bridger was in the employ of the United States government for some years and served under Gen. John C. Fremont as a scout. He also gave valuable assistance to the surveyors of the Union Pacific railroad.

The Bents, St. Vrain, Maxwell, Jim Baker, the Coopers, the Gentrys, James P. Beckworth, Bill Williams, Tom Tobin, James Hobbs—these are among the famous soldiers, traders, trappers and frontiersmen whose names are intimately associated with the romance and history of the Santa Fe Trail. Near Arrow Rock, Saline county, Missouri, yet resides John D. Turley, 85 years old, who was a famous trader on the Trail, as was his father before him. The lifetime of father and son covers the entire period of the Old Trail. Judge Turley's last trip was in 1851, when the Trail was yet in large use.

"We fought Indians across the entire continent and carried on a most profitable trade in merchandise with the Mexicans," said Judge Turley. "We bought whisky from the distilleries in Missouri at 16 to 40 cents a gallon, and sold it in Taos at $3 a gallon. It was terrible stuff, too. We diluted it with water, making two gallons out of every gallon, but even then it was terrible. The ox teams had six yoke of oxen and the ordinary load for a wagon was 7,200 pounds. A load of 3,000 pounds is a good wagon load now. We took our merchandise to Taos or Santa Fe, opened a regular store, and would sell out our entire stock in two or three months. The remnants of our last stock my father traded for Mexican sheep at $1 a head, took the sheep to California, and sold them at $10 a head. I sold sassafras root at $1.50 a pound in Taos. We traveled about 25 miles a day. The last trip took 49 days. We met on that trip Rose, said to be the handsomest Indian woman in the west. My father made his first trip in 1825, and the Turleys stayed on the Trail until nearly the opening of the Civil war. Various tricks were played on the Mexicans. There was a tariff on every load of goods brought into Mexican territory. The tariff was so much a wagonload. If the wagon was empty, it was admitted duty free. Some traders would load the goods just outside the Mexican territory into half the wagons and drive in with half the caravan made up of empty wagons, thus paying but half the duty. The fandango—a kind of public dance—was the chief form of social entertainment. The Spanish girls at the fandangoes were sometimes treated to ice cream and whisky. It is a devilish combination."

The story of the Old Santa Fe Trail is the story of its Bents, Carsons, Doniphans, Bridgers, Woottons, Turleys, and the rest. They were men cast in heroic mold. Made by the Trail, they were makers of the west.

Some Mourner.

Down in Georgia a negro, who had his life insured for several hundred dollars, died and left the money to his widow. She immediately bought herself a very elaborate mourning outfit.

Showing her purchases to her friend, she was very particular in going into detail as to prices and all incidental particulars. Her friend was very much impressed, and remarked:

"Them sho is fine close, but, befo' Heaven, what is you goin' to do wid all dis black underwear?"

The bereaved one sighed:

"Chile, when I mourns I mourns."—Harper's Magazine.

Business Instinct

Salesman Should Be Good Judge of Values

By T. RAYLE BRUCE

ONE day a crippled lad wandered into a country store and thus accosted the proprietor: "Can I sell you some lead pencils today? I have some nice ones at 25 cents a dozen."

The merchant sold pencils himself, and was therefore not a likely purchaser, but as business was not particularly rushing at that moment he indulged in a little good-natured chaff at the boy's expense. He examined the pencils carelessly and asked in feigned amazement, "What, 25 cents a dozen for these? I have a better pencil in stock that I sell for 15 cents a dozen," and he reached over to the show case and pulled out a package of pencils for which he had actually paid 45 cents a dozen only a few days before.

The boy took them in hand, examined them critically, reached down into his pocket, passed 15 cents over to the proprietor with the remark, "I guess I'll take these," and calmly walked out of the store.

Nor did the merchant stop him and explain that it was a joke. It was done in such a businesslike way and the youngster had taken it so seriously that he won the other's admiration and the merchant admitted in telling the story on himself that it was the best case of business instinct he had seen for many a day.

The crippled boy had a quality in his makeup that meant success. This attribute was keen judgment or business acumen. He so quickly recognized the value of the pencils that he acted in his own interest at once. It is as important for the salesman as it is for the merchant that he should know how to determine values.

In almost any business you can find employees who have grown gray in the service whose judgment of values has not grown with their years. Younger employees, with less experience, may have it. The latter have that inestimable treasure, business instinct—the former never will have it. The latter will succeed in a business where buying and selling are the factors; the former will not.

The man who has not in him the business instinct which makes him a judge of values had better get out of a business that calls for buying and selling and into another line of work where it is not required.

Plan for Starting Honest Men on Farms

By WILLIAM EISEN, Chicago

The newspapers at the present time are crowded with inducements and offers of farms. The present cry is: "Back to the farm!" Meetings are held, organizations convene, all in order to help the overflow population to go to farming. The government opens lands, and, in fact, everything is done to "boost" the country life. But who goes there? Who gets the land? Only people possessed of at least some means, like the farmer or the small merchant, who has a bank account after selling out.

The extremely poor man who longs for the country, who would joyfully till the soil, has to take a back seat. He has not the means to travel the distances or to acquire the first requisites.

I myself bought, years ago, ten acres in the east, intending to go there and raise small garden truck, but fate kept me here, until now, when, because of high expense, I am totally unable to go.

So we see that with all their good intentions the different organizations have not got at the root of the evil.

There should be institutions which furnish to willing and honest men the first substantial means to start them on land which they own, taking such lands for a certain length of time as security for the amount received.

There are thousands who could thus be happy to become farmers and raise the food supply for the cities.

The government should advance to those the means needed and not compel them to spend the little they have saved for traveling hundreds of miles only to find out that their lottery ticket did not win.

Time for Play is Growing Shorter

By Frank Crane

One of the proofs that the world does move is that amusements are growing shorter.

The ancient Romans sat at their feasts for hours, and invented various devices for prolonging the gustatory pleasure.

The European dines for two hours, impeding his digestion by wine; the American dines in thirty minutes; and the latter is consequently healthier and wealthier.

The very essence of play, of any kind, is that it be brief. Extend the moment of rapture past a certain point and it turns to pain or nausea.

Those who try to play all day, to say nothing of playing all year or all one's life, are about the unhappiest people on earth.

All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy, but all play and no work makes him an idiot.

For the essence of play is dash, foam, high spirits, bounding blood, excitement. We all need it. It humanizes us. It preserves our sanity. But to be good for us it must be occasional, and we must learn the fine art of quitting before we are through.

We can work till we are tired and be all the better for it, can sleep well and eat well. But to play until we are tired is dangerous. We can tire muscle and brain, but to keep our appetites ready, keen and fit we must learn to nip them off just before satiety.

This is the secret meaning of that paradox of Hesiod: "The half is greater than the whole."

COYOTES IN MONTANA

A MONTANA COYOTE

SINCE the transformation of prairie into grain fields by a host of eager farmers, nearly all the wild creatures have disappeared. To the old-time rancher, riding home from the distant post office at sundown, the careless coyote, as it slinks across the crop-dividing lane, seems a last link with a bygone era, and its evening serenade becomes a howl of sympathetic protest against the roar of gasoline engines. For the coyote is not panic-stricken by advancing tides of hyper-civilized life like its large congener the wolf, but adapts itself to altered conditions, and probably finds in the latest boom of the poultry yard some compensation for the disappearance of sheep, writes E. S. Cameron in Country Life. I have somewhere read that the cat which can strike an octave is the only musician among mammals, but I think the coyote can excel the tabby in this respect. It can do anything it likes with its voice and, with the ease of a light operatic soprano, can shriek in altissimo or rattle out staccato at top speed, besides barking and howling in all the variations peculiar to a dog of its size. When several coyotes affect orchestral combination the effect is indescribable.

Recent systematists assign eight species of coyotes to the United States, and four more to Mexico, but in the present account I refer only to Canis latrans. Coyotes, like foxes, differ very much in size, but an average male coyote in Montana weighs 25 pounds and stands about twenty-five inches at the shoulder, with a total length from tip to tip of 44 inches, of which the tail occupies 16 inches. The prevailing hue of our coyote is ash color, which darkens on the back owing to the profusion of black hairs, and turns gradually to reddish yellow at all the extremities, excepting the tip of the tail, which is usually black, but occasionally white.

Aid to Farmers.

If the farmers are wise, the coyote will date a new lease of life from the new agriculture; for where there are no sheep, the quondam foe becomes a valued friend and ally to keep down the hordes of jack-rabbits, gophers, prairie dogs, field-mice and other pests which destroy the crops. Owing to an epidemic among the once abundant cottontail-rabbits, coyotes, in default of carrion, subsist during the winter chiefly upon mice. Among the latter are included the voles (Microtus), which are very destructive, and (as ably demonstrated by Mr. Stanley M. Piper of the Biological society) so prolific that, in the absence of natural checks, they might multiply to a plague every four or five years. The Nevada vole plague within recent memory forbids a doubt that unless the threatened extermination of hawks, owls and coyotes can be averted, the result must be disastrous to the farmer, yet "he declines" (I quote the eminent naturalist, Dr. A. K. Fisher, Yearbook, United States department of agriculture) "to give a mere pittance in return for value received, and visits indiscriminate persecution on the humble and faithful workers that have helped to save his harvest or orchard." That coyotes may develop into confirmed poultry thieves is indisputable, but in my experience these crafty robbers of the henroost are either females with hungry pups dependent on them, or individuals of feeble type, whom age or injury precludes from hunting in a wider field. The raids are made at night or early dawn, and it is thus a simple matter to safeguard the birds by shutting them up when they retire to roost. Turkeys, however, must be excepted, their vagrant habit rendering them an easy prey. Coyotes with a taste for chicken know by instinct when the homestead is untenanted or insecurely watched, and the persecuted beast forthwith becomes extremely bold. At the time of writing, a neighbor (Mrs. Hagen) happened to be alone on her ranch in the early morning hours without companions other than her little girl and an old blind dog. Hearing a terrible outcry among her fowls, she rushed to the barn where they were gathered for the night, and surprised a coyote in the middle of its gory work. One headless pullet already stained the ground, and a second was just saved from a similar fate by her sudden appearance, which alarmed the murderous brute, causing it to retreat without its booty. Meanwhile the thoroughly terrified fowls scattered wildly in all directions, and one bewildered hen alighted in the center of a near-by pond. Bravely the owner breasted the flood to save her favorite from a watery grave, and cleverly on the instant the watchful marauder, returning at full speed, captured a second pullet, which it proceeded to devour within full view of the house. Nothing short of destruction will prevent a chicken-stealing coyote from persevering in its raids until all the accessible fowls are gone. An adult trapped coyote, for example, which escaped from us with a collar on, was caught in another trap within a few days.

Build Own Homes.

Large wolves do not care to excavate for themselves, and usually inhabit rocky caves; but coyotes tunnel into a bank, or on level ground, wherever a badger hole or small washout may offer a beginning. Their dens, in which from four to nine pups are born, resemble fox-earths, planned, as a rule, with a long main channel, from which several side branches diverge. Few animals are better equipped by nature to keep their larder well supplied than the omnivorous coyote, which can make a meal of grasshoppers or wild plums when unsuccessful in the chase. It is gifted with the cunning of the fox, almost the speed of the greyhound and the co-operative instinct of the Cape hunting dog. It will pounce upon the unsuspecting jack-rabbit as he squats in the grass, or overtake him by coursing in deep snow. At first the hare obtains a long start by a succession of spurts, followed by high bounds out of the drifts, all its legs quivering and crossing each other in mid-air. This eccentric gait, however, is too exhausting for the snow white fugitive to maintain, and when perforce he settles down in his normal stride, he is easily overtaken by the long-legged pursuer.

Swift as the coyote undoubtedly is, it has been not infrequently lassoed from horseback, and once from a mule. Coyotes are most destructive pests to the sheep-farmer, and the various means of protecting sheep from their ravages have been set out in a very able bulletin ("Coyotes in Their Economic Relations," by David E. Lantz), issued by the United States department of agriculture. It is here alleged that "in nearly all the states west of the Mississippi the sheep industry has declined . . . and one of the principal causes given is losses from coyotes." Heavy as the toll unquestionably is which the coyote inflicts on sheep, it is, nevertheless, inconsiderable when compared with that levied by grey wolves, and may almost invariably be traced to the carelessness or indolence of shepherds. Sheep are run here in bands of thousands, attended by a single "herder," and if small, roving detachments are overlooked and not brought into the "bedground" at night, coyotes will work havoc with these strays.

Ship at Sea Runs Into Sand Storm.

With its decks covered with an inch or more of sand and the officers and crew looking as if they had returned from a desert trip the schooner Alvena, twenty-seven days from Columbia river, in command of Capt. Abrahamson, arrived in San Diego this afternoon. While the vessel was coming under a fair wind seventy-five miles off shore and 125 miles north of San Diego, last Sunday, it became enveloped in a cloud of fine sand. The sea was smooth and the wind from the southeast. The dust seemed to drop from the sky.

This condition prevailed for two days according to the crew, and not until Point Loma was sighted late yesterday afternoon did they get out of the dust. From that time until the schooner got into port the crew was sweeping the accumulated sand off the lumber cargo and decks and getting the fine particles of grit out of their eyes and hair.—San Diego correspondence San Francisco Chronicle.

Too Ready With His Excuse.

A man wrote to a friend in Greece, begging him to purchase books. From negligence or avarice, he neglected to execute the commission; but, fearing that his correspondent might be offended, he exclaimed when next they met: "My friend, I never got the letter you wrote to me about the books."

Grandfather Holds the Record.

There has been much progress, of course, but still we doubt if the young man who licks up the ground with a six-cylinder snorter thinks any more of himself than did his sturdy grandfather who could make four yokes of oxen perform in front of a big load of freight out of old Jefferson.—Galveston News.

VETERAN PLAYERS PROVE VALUABLE ASSETS

Trio of Old Timers.

Big league clubs make no mistake in carrying such men as Robinson, Farrell, Jim McGuire and other veterans. These old heads have a good influence on the young players and can steer the boys over the hurdles safely. The time will come when every well-organized club will have a veteran player on the pay-roll. They give the youngsters confidence and strengthen the hands of the manager.

JOHNSON WON'T MISS STREET

Manager Griffith of Washington Team, Believes Ainsmith and Henry Can Handle Walter's Shoot.

"If the only thing standing in our way of winning the pennant was the fact that we had no one to catch Johnson, I would have the flag pole in the center of the right field now," remarked Clarke Griffith in commenting on the expressed fear that with Street gone the team had no one to catch Johnson.

"Nothing could be more absurd," he continued. "Let Henry and Ainsmith start to handling Johnson's delivery from the time that the team goes into training, and they will catch him as well as any other catcher.

"Johnson, to my way of thinking, is easy to catch for the reason that he is true. The fact that he has a lot of speed matters not, for a fast ball is easier to handle than a lot of shoots and curves. I'll stake my reputation that Johnson's delivery will be as well handled this season as it ever has been before. Incidentally, Walter should have the best season of his career. He will have a careful preparation because he will not be asked to do a lot of work in the spring. He will report a week later than the other pitchers and then gradually work himself into shape. I wish that trying to find a man who can catch Johnson was all we had to worry about. It would be soft picking indeed."

Baseball Blunders.

Some gent with a liking for acid baseball history has compiled the 20 greatest blunders in baseball. Here they are:

When Cincinnati traded a kid named Mathewson for a great pitcher named Rusie.

When St. Louis traded Three-Fingered Brown to Chicago for Jack Taylor.

When Charles Webb Murphy stood in the lobby of the Waldorf and called Rajah Brennahan a policeman.

When John Anderson stole second with three men on.

When Jack Chesbro lost a world's championship on a wild pitch.

When Merkle failed to touch second and lost a pennant.

When Marquard grooved one for Baker.

When Charles Webb Murphy panned the national commission.

When Clark Griffith allowed Miller Huggins to leave Cincinnati.

When Sherwood Magee belted Finneman on the bugle.

When Pittsburg and Detroit passed up Grover Cleveland Alexander.

When Cincinnati allowed Marty O'Toole to get away without a trial.

When Hughey Jennings underestimated Babe Adams in 1909.

When Umpire Jack Doyle twice misinterpreted the infield fly rule.

When Brennahan made faces at Umpire Billy Klemm.

When Horace Fogel switched his famous Herrman-Murphy letters.

When McGraw parted with Mike Donlin prior to the 1911 world's series.

When Lou Criger touted Ty Cobb as a bonehead.

CHILLED MEAT FOR AN ARMY

France Tries It With Success for Short Periods and Will Make Further Tests.

The use of chilled meat for the French army is being started, according to the Revue Generale du Froid. France has used frozen beef to a considerable extent, just as do the British and German armies, but the difficulty that is presented with chilled beef is that it is not known how long or how well it will stand the frequent handling necessary to army transportation.

To further this trial cold storage depots were established in the last year at Paris, Epinal, Toul, Verdun and Belfort. When the hot weather of the summer arrived the chilled meats from these depots were carried to the camps in motor trucks and distributed thence to the various regiments by horse drawn vehicles. Very satisfactory results are said to have been obtained.

The temperature in the cold storage was from 32 to 34 degrees Fahrenheit. The meat was encased in antiseptic muslin bags when taken out for delivery to the army.

The limit within which chilled meat could be handled satisfactorily seemed to be about two days.

Problem in Mathematics.

There is a certain instructor in mathematics in a Washington institution who is beginning to wonder whether his five-year-old son is going to inherit his mathematical temperament. On one occasion the father and mother of this younger, while visiting a resort near the capital, were watching the boys and girls swing the circle on a merry-go-round. The father commented upon the sight presented by one small-sized youngster astride a huge lion, and, as he did so, noticed a serious look on the face of his own offspring, who was standing beside him. "Why such a solemn expression, Tom?" asked the father. "I was just wondering," said Tom, who had had one ride and, having a ticket for another, wished to use it to the best advantage, "whether I would get a longer ride than I had on the horse in the inside circle if I rode on one of the lions on the outside row."—Judge.

Appraising Its Value.

The great emotional actress was laboring under intense excitement.

"My diamond tiara has been stolen!" she exclaimed.

"How much is it worth?" asked the press agent callously.

"That is up to you," replied the G. E. A. "It ought to be worth at least a column."—Puck.

Studying Shakespeare.

"Well, wifey, what did you learn at the Shakespeare club today?"

"I learned that it is a good thing to lead off with an ace. It gives you control until the dummy hand is exposed."

Wit is the power to say what everybody else was just going to have said, if they had happened to think of it.

Great things are just ahead of you, but you must reach out for them.—Horace Fletcher.

AROUND THE BASES

It is said Pitcher Buck O'Brien of the Boston Red Sox received a boost of a thousand dollars over his contract of last year.

Manager Fred Clarke has but ten pitchers all told on his roster, and that includes Leifield and Noel, neither of whom are sure.

Jack Glasscock, old National leaguer, is said to have professed "conversion" at the religious revival held in Wheeling by Billy Sunday. Nine thousand people cheered him as he walked to the front of the hall.

NO MAN'S LAND A ROMANCE

By LOUIS JOSEPH VANCE

ILLUSTRATIONS BY RAY WALTERS

COPYRIGHT, 1910 BY LOUIS JOSEPH VANCE

SYNOPSIS.

Garrett Coast, a young man of New York City, meets Douglas Blackstock, who invites him to a card party. He accepts, although he dislikes Blackstock, the reason being that both are in love with Katherine Thaxter. Coast fails to convince her that Blackstock is unworthy of her friendship. At the party Coast meets two named Dundas and Van Tuyl. There is a quarrel and Blackstock shoots Van Tuyl dead. Coast struggles to wrest the weapon from him, thus the police discover them. Coast is arrested for murder. He is convicted, but as he begins his sentence, Dundas names Blackstock as the murderer and kills himself. Coast becomes free, but Blackstock has married Katherine Thaxter and fled. Coast purchases a yacht and while sailing sees a man thrown from a distant boat. He rescues the fellow who is named Appleyard. They arrive at a lonely island, known as No Man's Land. Coast starts out to explore the place and comes upon some deserted buildings. He discovers a man dead. Upon going further and approaching a house he sees Katherine Thaxter, who explains that her husband, under the name of Black, has bought the island. He is blind, a wireless operator and has a station there. Coast informs her that her husband murdered Van Tuyl. Coast sees Blackstock and some Chinamen burying a man. They fire at him, but he is rescued by Appleyard, who gets him to the Echo in safety, and there he reveals that he is a secret service man and has been watching the crowd on the island, suspecting they are criminals. Coast is anxious to fathom the mysteries of No Man's Land, and is determined to save Katherine. Appleyard believes that Black and his gang make a shield of the wireless station to conduct a smuggling business.

CHAPTER XII.—(Continued.)

The other vessel was entering the mouth of the channel, at the moment that Coast put the helm over and brought the Echo's green starboard eye into view. A mile or so lay between them. Appleyard lifted the hatch and opened the throttle full, before setting out the port light.

A shower of spray swept over the Echo's counter as she bucked the tide.

"That's the stuff," said the little man. "Now they're wondering what particular variety of darn fools we are. Hold her as she stands—steady."

Two throaty blasts from an automatic whistle floated down the wind.

"What'd I tell you?" chuckled Appleyard. "She's slowed down already," he announced, although Coast was unable to discern any change in the speed of the nearing craft. "It hurts to do this." The little man jerked the whistle lever and echoed a single, prolonged, derisive blast. "Lord! they must be cussin' a blue streak!"

By this time the Echo had worked well up into the channel, the other vessel being about midway through. To a second signal, a solitary blast, Appleyard replied with two, in utter defiance of every rule and regulation for the prevention of collisions at sea. A husky shout of wrath answered this manifestation of landlubberly foolishness. Appleyard responded with three short barks of the whistle, the same signifying what was obviously untrue—that he had reversed his engine and was running full-speed astern; for at the same moment, in obedience to his low-toned command—"Starboard, starboard your helm!"—Coast again put the wheel over and the Echo swung smartly on her heel, showing her port light and making as if to cut across the other's bows at a moment when they were but a few lengths apart.

There was an instant of suspense as the boats drew swiftly together. Coast held his breath and prepared to jump should the threatened happen; it seemed certain that the sharp stem of the motor cruiser would crash into the catboat's side. Even Appleyard lost something of his customary aplomb and betrayed the strain upon his nerves.

"Sit tight—all tight!" he whispered between his closed teeth. "Don't give an inch—they've got to—they don't dare—ah-h!"

The last was a sigh of relief as the cruiser swerved sharply in toward Pasque, shot forward a couple of lengths and brought up suddenly with a churning screw—hard and fast aground.

A moment later the Echo rounded gracefully to port within two yards of her enemy and simultaneously Appleyard, leaning far out over the combing, made an exceedingly cunning cast with a coil of line which Coast had laid in against the possibility of a broken halyard. The flying loops settled accurately into the water, just above the foam kicked up by the cruiser's propeller, and in another instant its motor stopped with a strangulated gasp.

Out of the mouth of profanity that smoked up from the cruiser's cockpit flew first one heavy spanner, then another. Both splashed heavily alongside the Echo. Not until they had drawn well out of range did Coast and Appleyard rise from the shelter of the coamings.

"Fine, splendid," commented Appleyard soberly, staring astern. "I reckon that, between the furrow they ploughed in that shoal and several yards of good hempen rope gumming up the shaft and screw, they'll bide where they are a wee. Till the storm blows over any way. It ought to take a good diver or a marine railway to free that shaft. . . . Now, if you'll give me the wheel, we'll go about and get ready for business. That was child's play, alongside of what's to come. Get the sail up, please."

For a space thereafter Coast had his hands full; the Echo was swinging out of the channel, past the hollow, despondent clanging bell, and the wind had found her with a swoop of fury and a wolfish howl. By the time he had trimmed the main-sheet the catboat was sweeping onward at a rate little short of incredible.

Steadily the guiding longshore lights swung round them, marking their progress: to starboard Cutty-hunk shining steadfast as a low-hung star, to port Gay Head lifting up its lofty beacon, astern, low down, a glimmer, frequently lost—Nobska. No nearer lights were there to bewilder; wise coastwise mariners hugged snug harbors on such a night as that; the Echo took her chance alone. . . .

Touching Coast's arm, Appleyard

The Echo Took Her Chance Alone. . . .

drew his attention to a tiny glint of light in the south, where No Man's Land beckoned them from afar, across a weary waste of broken waters.

Coast nodded, with a set, grave face, knowing that his hour drew nigh.

CHAPTER XIII.

About midway between the eastern and western extremes of the north shore of No Man's Land, a little sandy spit juts out, forming, according to Appleyard, "what you might call a sort of cove, if you don't care what you say." To the west of it lies the only good anchorage near the island—one that can be termed such solely when the winds blow from the south.

Into the poor shelter of this courtesy harbor, under the pilotage of Appleyard (who asserted that he found his way half by guess work and half by sense of smell) the Echo fought her way and as her anchor bit into the bottom and her cable tautened brought up staggering, like a spent runner at the close of a long race.

Only seamanship of a sort not inaptly to be called superb (but not less so than the courage exhibited by both men) eked out by Appleyard's intimate acquaintance with the waters thereabouts, could have brought the Echo through in safety.

Coast took aboard with him a new sense of respect and admiration for his companion. What emotions, if any, Appleyard entertained, remained inscrutable.

Driving the boat through a quartering run of surf, they made an uncomfortable though not dangerous landing on the west side of the sand spit, drew the dory up and set out for the other side, wet and weary for that Coast knew—as they had anticipated—by common consent, the abandoned fishing village.

They stumbled up to and through its empty street, a little wondering, a little apprehensive, more than a little alert and inclined to seek the touch of each other's shoulders. They were, in the good old phrase, taking their lives in their hands in this phase of their adventure; and the sense of this clutched at their hearts with fingers of ice. That they would be recognized (save Coast by Katherine) as the men who had been on the island in the fog seemed little likely; so far as they knew neither had been seen but by the Chinaman whom Appleyard had stunned; and it was improbable that he had caught clear sight of either. There remained, however, a hundred masked dangers growing out of Blackstock's certain distrust and misgivings, with a far-fetched possibility that the men stranded on the shoals off Pasque would find some means of escape and communicate with Blackstock by wireless from the mainland. It was not more than an improbable possibility, but none the less it held its meed of danger, and they might not forget it, though Appleyard had argued and contrived plausibly against mischance.

If the crew of the grounded vessel (he explained) chose to land on Pasque, they would better their condition not at all—merely exchange a comfortable cabin for the questionable freedom of a little two-by-four island cut off from Nashon and its habitations by the deep, swift currents that scour Robinson's Hole. In another direction, it would profit them as little to seek the cheerless shelter of the life-saving station on Nashawena; it would require more than man-power to free the cruiser from the sticky clutches of the shoal, and their chances of obtaining a tow before the storm abated were positively nil.

"You can tie to this," Appleyard had summed up; "they'll stay put till morning. And then a while. That'll give me time to 'tend to their cases properlike. Even should I fall down there, we've got at the worst reckoning a clear eighteen hours. And if that's not long enough for us to frame up a suitable last act for this thrilling drayma of errrime and hodmen hearts, we ain't fit even to dope out a scenario for a moving-picture film; and I for one will make up my mind to shake the legit, and try to make a deal in the two-a-day."

From which pronouncement Coast drew what comfort he could.

The bungalow occupied what was apparently the brow of the island's highest ridge, something like a quarter of a mile to the south of the farm-house and near the southern shore. As they drew nearer Appleyard slowed down to a cautious walk. At a fair distance from the lighted window both paused, as if seeking some final words; then, without speech (it would have been necessary to shriek to make oneself heard in that exposed spot) Coast caught the little man's hand and gave it a long, friendly pressure. He turned and moved a few paces toward the house. When he looked back Appleyard had melted into the darkness.

He passed a window so misted with moisture that he could have seen little within had he wished or stopped to look. He turned a corner, moved past another window, and came to a door before which he stopped a long minute, not hesitant, but pulling himself together, realizing but on the whole not sorry that he now stood alone, had only himself to look to whatever the emergency the next few hours might give rise to. On the other side of those panels were the only two beings in the world who could strike upon his heart-strings a very chord in the gamut of the emotions; and he must be prepared to experience them all and show himself unmoved, at least outwardly. . . .

Lifting his hand, he knocked loudly, and, without waiting turned the knob and entered. A tearing blast of wind accompanied him, for the door faced the east. He had a brief struggle with it before he got it closed and faced the light—his heart in his mouth, if the truth is to be told.

To Coast's unspeakable relief he found Blackstock alone. Apparently the man had been sitting by the table, his feet on a near-by stool; but when Coast discovered him he was standing in that dogged, forceful pose of strength and preparedness which seemed somehow peculiarly his: with his feet well apart, his heavy body inclining forward from his hips, his broad shoulders a trifle lifted, his round and heavy head thrusting forward on its thick, strong neck.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Giving the Public a Chance.

"I propose to preach a sermon next Sunday that will startle the members of this congregation—one, in fact, that will scare the whole community," announced the new minister.

"Go easy, my son," advised the old preacher.

"Go easy? What would you suggest, then?"

"A compromise. Just go half way the first time you preach."

"But how can I go half way in holding a man up to scorn?"

"Just hold him up."

A Great Economic Problem.

Uncle Eben—"I tell ye, the present poor quality of immigration is drivin' out the native born Americans."

Nephew Eben—"Right ye are, uncle! Look at this town, for instance. What with drummers in the spring, city boarders in the summer, surveyors in the fall, and actors in the winter, a feller who's born and raised here don't stand any chance with the home gals at all."—Judge.

Fool-Humorist Hurt.

One of those wedding humorists, who was going to light a cracker under the carriage of the bridal pair, had his hand blown off by the same. If it must happen to someone—as it apparently must—then, more justly, to the humorist himself.

Got More Than He Expected.

"Did your wife turn out to be all your expected her to be?

"More. While I married her she was as slim as a young gazelle. Now she weighs nearly 200 pounds."

Man of Fallen Fortunes

He Was Stirred to New Ambition by the Act of a Cigar Salesman.

"Cigars of the brand I used to smoke," said the man of fallen fortunes, "are, like those of many others, made in various shapes and sizes, to be sold at various prices, and of my favorite brand there was one particular size and shape that especially pleased my fancy and that I always smoked. Stogies I usually smoke now, but occasionally, when I feel that I can spare the money, I go in and buy a few of those fine cigars.

"For out of these occasional real smokes I went in this morning and, looking down into the case, I missed my brand and reaching into the case the salesman brought out a box. But these were not of my size and shape; I indicated the ones I wanted and the salesman brought out that box—seven of six for a dollar, of which I now took three. I noted casually the card on the box which the salesman had first brought out, and that card I confess gave me a little thrill of pleasure and then, what was better, a stir of ambition.

"The cigars in that other box were three for a dollar, and had not the salesman brought them out to me confidently as if I were that sort of a customer? He certainly had, and I must look it. And if I looked it, why should I not be it? Why should I continue to be a single man? Why should I not retrieve my fallen fortunes and far surpass them—come to be not merely a six but a three for a dollar man?"

Infectious Laughter.

Some of our prominent scientists are so impressed with the germ peril that they go around looking pretty solemn all the time, on the theory that laughter is both contagious and infectious.

Financial Cripples.

They were taking the visitor from up-state around Manhattan, showing him the sights. The big automobile rolled past many wonderful buildings, all of which the host pointed out with some feelings of civic pride. At last they chanced to pass by the Municipal Lodging house.

"What's that place?" asked the rural visitor.

"Oh, that's one of New York's home for cripples," was the reply.

"What kind of cripples," was asked.

"Financial," was the reply, as the car sped on.—New York Herald.

The Young Housewife.

A quartet of market men had gathered in the Faneuil Hall market and were discussing the probable famine in butter, when a pretty young woman, whom they adjudged to be a new housewife, interrupted the convention by the statement that she had come to buy some butter.

"I wish to get three pounds," she said.

"Roll butter, ma'am?" the individual in charge of the butter and cheese stall asked politely.

"No," answered the shopper promptly, "we wish to eat it on toast; we seldom have rolls."

The Only One.

There came a time when ideas were all on a paying basis and commanded a price in the open market. Then it was that one arose and cornered the market and placing the ideas in cold storage calmly waited the result.

Thereupon a great hubbub was raised.

"What shall we do without ideas?" asked a young and ambitious politician, who had not been in power long enough to know the ropes.—Life.

Well Paid.

A lively-looking porter stood on the rear platform of a sleeping car in the Grand Central Station, when a fussy and choleric old man clambered up the steps. He stopped at the door, puffed for a moment, and then turned to the man in uniform.

"Porter," he said, "I'm going to Chicago. I want to be well taken care of. I pay for it. Do you understand?"

"Yes, sir; but——"

"Never mind any 'buts.' You listen to what I say. Keep the train-boys away from me. Dust me off whenever I want you to. Give me an extra blanket, and if there is any one in the berth over me, slide him into another. I want you to——"

"But, say, boss, I——"

"Young man, when I'm giving instructions I prefer to do the talking myself. You do as I say. Here is a two-dollar bill. I want to get the good of it. Not a word, sir."

The train was starting. The porter pocketed the bill with a grin, and swung himself to the ground.

"All right, boss!" he shouted. "You can do th' talkin' if you want to. I'm powerful sorry you wouldn't let me tell you—but I ain't goin' out on that train."

SELF-FEEDER SHEEP MANGER

Material Entering Into Construction Can be Found on Almost Any Farm—Device Is Handy.

This manger for feeding sheep is but another application of the self-feeder principle to a sheep manger. When the grain is not fed in the manger it serves about every purpose, says a writer in the Breeder's Gazette. The material that enters into its construction can be found on almost every farm, and for that reason its cost of construction is very low. Two-by-fours and one-inch boards are all that are needed. The demands are very different from those of the ordinary type that require new material to properly construct them.

These mangers have no bottoms and for that reason are light and easy to handle. They are of fairly large capacity and for that reason are very handy for the man with but few sheep, and for the man who sometimes wishes to keep a little hay before his sheep while the pasture is short. They can be put in corners and out of the way in a manner that cannot be done with the ordinary type. When throwing hay down from the mow they are much easier to hit than the common kind as they are far wider at the top. In length, we usually make them about eight feet, as we have more boards of that length around than of any other.

The dimensions are: Corner posts, 2x4 inches, cut on a slant; bottom cut 18 inches long and top cut 27 inches long; open space, 9 inches wide; total width, 42 inches; total height, 54 inches; total length, 8 feet.

Freedom Needed for Pigs.

Young pigs must have unbounded freedom in direct sunlight, and pure air for healthy, normal growth, says Swine Breeders' Journal. They must be able and induced to run and play at large range, for upon a strong physical constitution depends the future health and growing and fattening power of the older hog.

Pigs confined in a small pen or house, where they are compelled to lie in bed all day or simply walk about a little, can not exercise enough to develop bones, muscles and all vital organs. All young animals must play during the early growing period, and the man who does not know this natural necessity and permit them wide room for play will soon be disappointed in growing them.

Buy the Best Ram.

Better buy the best rams you can secure. A few extra dollars on a ram makes a lot of difference on the looks of the flock. The mutton part costs the same, the extra money expended all goes to buy the quality and we cannot get too much of that.

Tankage for Hogs.

Meat meal or tankage is worth a great deal to balance a corn ration, developing the frame of the hog so big gains are made.

The Iowa experiment station reports that meat meal, which is very similar to tankage, in texture at least, may be fed to hogs with excellent results mixed with water alone. In the experiments conducted at that station one quart of meal was mixed with about a gallon of water. This makes a thin slop that does not stick to the hogs' feet nor to the troughs; the animals consume it eagerly.

Feeding tankage in this way saves grinding a part of the grain, and thus saves needless expense, for it has been determined that shoats up to 200 pounds in weight make more economical gains on ear corn than upon corn fed in any other way. Spring shoats may be most economically fed on ear corn right through to marketing. This make it all the more desirable that none of the corn be ground.

Look out for drafts under and through the doors. They are about the worst kind.

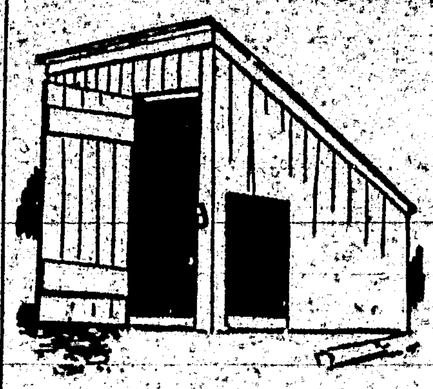
INDIVIDUAL HOUSE FOR HOGS

Improved Shelter for Swine Should be Built as Closely as Possible—Good Dimensions.

For twenty years the A style of individual house has been in use. We were well satisfied with them until we saw a neighbor using something that we liked better. Then we were anxious for some of the old ones to go to pieces so we could build a few of the new style to give them a trial.

Recently we built three and liked them so well that we shall take to pieces the balance of our old-styled ones and make them go as far as they will in building the new ones.

The most satisfactory dimensions are as follows: Six feet square, two and one-half feet high at the back and five and one-half feet at front. The front always to the south. The creep door, 18 inches wide and two feet high, cut in east end, six inches from the southeast corner. The larger door,



Improved Hog House.

18 inches wide and four and one-half feet high, cut in south side at east corner. Should be built of the best matched lumber, battened or tongued and grooved of best quality. If metal is used for the roof it should be laid over paper or felt of some kind to prevent moisture forming on the under side of the roof, which keeps the floor wet.

It should be built as close as possible. The only ventilation and sunshine needed can be had at the doors. When the weather is too cold for safe farrowing a lantern can be hung to a rafter on the high side with a short bridle across the doors. There is no need of crow-fishing to get away from an angry sow.—John M. Jamison, in American Swineherd.

PURE-BRED SIRES IN DEMAND

Man Raising Really Meritorious Horses Need Have no Fear of Overstocking the Market.

The reports of the various state stallion boards show by actual statistics that from 45 to 65 per cent of the sires in use are grades. As it is admittedly true that a considerable number of purebred sires now in use are too inferior to be long continued in service, it seems safe to say that not to exceed one-third of the draft stallions in service are purebred horses of such conformation, size and quality as to warrant their continuance in the stud.

Admirable Farm Type.

The man who is producing really meritorious horses, however, need have no fear of the supply of such horses exceeding the demand, at least not within the next 40 or 50 years.

Blanket warmly, and brush well to thoroughly clean and stimulate the skin.

Horses that have heavy coats of hair should be clipped now just before the new hair starts.

It is seldom necessary to grind corn for work horses unless they are old and have poor teeth.

Quick, intelligent attention will often save a lamb or a pair of them, and often the ewe as well.

Too much corn has caused the loss of many a fine litter of pigs, and often the loss of the sow as well.

In a case of twins one is often weaker than the other, and would die if not assisted to nourishment.

It is a common prophecy that cattle will never be cheap again and it surely seems that such a prophecy is based on good grounds.

CRITICAL TIME OF WOMAN'S LIFE

From 40 to 50 Years of Age. How It May Be Passed in Safety.

Odd, Va.:—"I am enjoying better health than I have for 20 years, and I believe I can safely say now that I am a well woman. I was reared on a farm and had all kinds of heavy work to do which caused the troubles that came on me later. For five years during the Change of Life I was not able to lift a pail of water. I had hemorrhages which would last for weeks and I was not able to sit up in bed. I suffered a great deal with my back and was so nervous I could scarcely sleep at night, and I did not do any housework for three years.

Woman's Power Over Man

Woman's most glorious endowment is the power to awaken and hold the pure and honest love of a worthy man. When she loses it and still loves on, no one in the wide world can know the heart agony she endures. The woman who suffers from weakness and derangement of her special womanly organism soon loses the power to sway the heart of a man. Her general health suffers and she loses her good looks, her attractiveness, her amiability and her power and prestige as a woman. Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N.Y., with the assistance of his staff of able physicians, has prescribed for and cured many thousands of women. He has devised a successful remedy for women's ailments. It is known as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It is a positive specific for the weaknesses and disorders peculiar to women. It purifies, regulates, strengthens and heals. Medicine dealers sell it. No honest dealer will advise you to accept a substitute in order to make a little larger profit.
