A CAR OF PRISONERS

Lincoln County sends Special Car Loaded with Prisoners to Santa Fe Penitentiary

LARGEST NUMBER IN HISTORY

Thursday morning, Decoration Day, Judge Edward L Medler sentenced twenty prisoners to the Santa Fe Penitentiary to terms of various lengths, all being convicted at this term of court now almost over and which has been in session the greater part of this month. Of the twenty sentenced three were released on bonds, their cases having been appealed to the Supreme Court of the State. After the sentencing, the prisoners were conducted to a special car which was attached to the noon train for the Capitol. Captain Fred Fornoff, M P., Alex Street, M. P., Sheriff Porfiro Chavez, State Chairman A. H Hudspeth, John Haley, Alfredo Gonzales, Walter Winfield, Marcial St. John, and Abel Mirabel went along as guards. Besides the prisoners there were two women committed to the State Insane Asylum at Las Vegas.

APPEALS TO SUPREME COURT

George Eakers, Pedro Analla, and Mrs. Lillie C. Klasner appealed their respective cases to the Supreme Court of New Mexico.

LEGISLATURE COMING ALIVE

The Legislature which has but one more week untill adjournment, came to life in a measure this week and passed a few bills in one house or the other and may accomplish a little something before adjournment after all. The Committee of thirty in the House and in the senate however, cannot agree absolutely and the chances for much legislation is dubious. The much needed relieve for County officers is not yet in sight and the prospects look bad for any Salary Bill to Pass during the present term.

The legislature has been in session for nearly ninty days, the expense being estimated at $500 a day; $45,000 having been spent without practically any return to date. It is noticed however, with pleasure that Jas. V. Tully and Will Blanchard representatives from this county are not alined with those who are holding up legislation and these gentlemen are making every effort to accomplish all they can at this session.

The house in the record-breaking spurt acted upon more than twenty measures Tuesday and the members say the pace will be kept up so long as the calendar has anything on it.

The house yesterday passed house substitute for house bill No. 174, which provides for the listing of property for taxation in the county in which it is situated on March 1 except sheep, which are to be listed where found on May 1.

Members of the state supreme court are said to favor a bill which passed the house yesterday, house bill No. 181, making appropriations for the salaries of the state officials. This bill merely provides for the salaries and would permit the state officials to buy food and clothing at least until the January session, should the appropriation bill fail.

The house passed the mounted police bill which provides for an increase in the police. It is H. B. No. 205, and there were only seven votes against it. House bill No. 154, by Mr. Chaves, to exempt new railroads from taxation for six years to encourage them to build in the state, was passed. The bill evoked some little debate but only three members opposed it.

COURT STILL IN SESSION

Continue to hear Cases and Dispose of Business in Same Rapid Manner

BUT THE END IS IN SIGHT

The District Court for Lincoln County has continued to grind on during the week and has disposed of a number of cases. Not quite so much work has been disposed of this week as there was last but the Court has been at work continually.

The record of this term, which we venture to say is the most remarkable in the history of Lincoln County, stands up about like this and court is not yet adjourned

Seventy-five cases disposed of at this term, with final action. Only four cases in which there have been arrests, have been continued from this term until the next; these for good reasons. Of the cases tried twenty of those convicted were sentenced to the penitentiary; two who plead guilty to perjury had their sentences suspended. Six fines were imposed and five sentenced to the county jail.

The above figures give just a small idea of the clean up that has been given to the Criminal docket by the court officials at this term and we again repeat that it is with pleasure we here praise on every side for Judge L. Medler and District Attorney Hamilton for their work in this county.

CASES OF THE WEEK.

As we went to press last week the State vs Ernest Matthews case was on for trial. The jury after being on the case for twenty-four hours disagreed and were discharged, the case will be tried again next term.

The State vs Mrs. Lillie C. Klasner was tried this week, Mrs Klasner was accused of Larceny of calves, Col. George W. Prichard representing her while J. E. Wharton assisted the prosecution. The Jury returned a verdict of Guilty, and Mrs Klasner has appealed her case to the Supreme Court.

R. J. Woods, Mattie Woods and Ben Leslie charged with abduction were found not guilty by a jury which was out but a short time Thursday.

The Adolphe Sias, Felipe Sias cases in which the Dist. Atty. acted as defendants attorney last term have been transfered to Santa Rosa for hearing.

As we go to press Young E. Hurt is being tried on a charge of Larceny.

—Clement Hightower is down from Capitan this week as a witness.

—H. S. Campbell was called to his home in Wisconsin this week, by the news of the serious illness of his mother. Mrs. Campbell and son will leave today for the same place.

—State Chairman Andrew H. Hudspeth was one of those decorated with a pistol and who went as guards in the special car of prisoners leaving here Thursday.

MRS. ULRICK ENTERTAINS

Last Wednesday afternoon Mrs. George Ulrick entertained the ladies of the Home Mission Society at her home. A very pleasant afternoon was spent and dainty refreshments were served.

In the evening a number of people were also entertained at Whist and a very pleasant evening was spent and refreshments served. Among those present in the evening were: Mr. and Mrs. Frank Elliott, Mr. and Mrs. John Bell, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Rolland, Mr. and Mrs. Truman Spencer, Harry Dawson, L. B. Chase and S. L. Northlane.

THREE YEAR HOMESTEAD LAW STILL IN DOUBT

The Bureau of Immigration is in receipt of advices from development sources in western and northwestern states to the effect that the three year homestead bill, which passed the national house and senate sometime ago and which was referred to the conference committee, is being held up in hope that it can be delayed until Congress meets in December, the object being to give the gentlemen from some of the western and northwestern states whose terms expire this summer, and who desire to return to Washington, an opportunity to tell the voters that they should send them back to congress to get the three year homestead law through.

These advices state that New Mexico's representatives are not in this conspiracy, and it should be promptly called to the attention of those gentlemen who are in Washington in the best interests of their respective states requesting them to make every effort to get the bill through before congress adjourns in June.

Those acquainted with the west and with homestead conditions know that three years residence is ample pay for any of Uncle Sam's domain; they know that life is not an easy one and that it requires intelligent, hard work to make good, besides an outlay of considerable cash. Every resident of this district and state who is interested in the development of this country should make haste and take the matter up with; not only New Mexico's representatives in congress but with other representatives, urging them to see that the bill is passed at once. If passed at once this matter will mean much to the uprising to the new state.

LARGE SHIPMENT OF CATTLE

The Hachets Cattle Company this week shipped thirty six cars of cattle amounting in all to over 1300 head. Carrizozo was the shipping point and the shipment took more than one train. The Hachets company recently moved into this county from Grant County and range on the other side of the Mal Pais, using the old Nabours tank and Moonshine water. The same day the shipment of cattle was made from Carrizozo, four other train loads of cattle passed thru on the Southwestern.

CIVIC BALL TO-NIGHT

The Largest Social Event of the Season Given by the Ladies Tonight

END OF THE VOTING CONTEST

This evening the Ladies Civic League will close their Popularity Voting Contest with a Ball which is to be given in the present Court Room, the Peoples Building. The dance xerminates a voting contest which the ladies have been carrying on for several weeks, each vote meaning one cent toward the cleaning up and beautifying of Carrizozo. The affair promises to be a grand success and a record breaking crowd is anticipated to be in attendance. Wm Whittingham and S. L. Northlane, the two popular railroad scouts, will lead the Grand March which promises to be quite a feature.

Even the spectators will be charged admission at this dance, the small sum of fifteen cents each, and one dollar to all gentlemen dancing. All the funds go to the Civic Improvement Fund. Mrs J F. Kimbell is chairman of the Committee in charge of the affair.

CUTS BUTTER INTO BLOCKS

Steel Wires Press Through Cake Two Ways, Making Neat Division Into Square Pieces.

For the speedy and neat division of a cake of butter into a number of small square pieces for individual use, the butter cutter designed by an Ohio man seems to fill the bill admirably. A standard has a cutter frame rotable upon it. A platform holds the butter cake, and at the end of the platform is another frame, like the footboard of a bed, with two fine wires bisecting it both ways. The rotable frame has a series of fine wires running across it parallel to each other. The butter is placed on the platform, and this upper frame is pressed down through it, the wires separating it into so many square slabs, about an inch thick. The cake is then forced out through the other frame and divided into four times as many smaller squares.

FLOOR PLAN OF FARM BARN

Cows Are Little Bit Crowded Into Their Stalls of Three Feet, Four Inches Wide.

(By J. C. SHAWVER.)

The illustration presents the floor plan of a barn suitable for about 160-acre farms. It accommodates four horses in roomy stalls and six cows—possibly a little crowded, stalls being three feet four inches wide.

The lofts above the stables and also the decks are extended over the driveway. The hay bay is 32x40 feet, but unobstructed from floor to roof. The buggy room and workshop is a cheaply constructed shed or lean-to ten feet high, and the roof may be either gable or curb, with little difference in cost—just extra sheeting and roofing, as no extra timbers are required.

Handling Milk.

Warm milk should never be poured into cold milk nor should the night's milk be mixed with the morning's milk.

Building Up Dairy Herd.

A man's dairy herd will be just what his ideas of a dairy herd are. If he gives the herd no thought it will be a poor herd with small producing ability. It is the amount of thought and applied energy, says Kansas Farmer, that causes a man to rise above the average, whether in dairying or wheat or corn growing.

A dairy herd can't be built up by growing and hauling feed alone. The man's mind and the things the mind only can do will improve the herd.

These columns give you the best thought of the time in dairy herd improvement, and so does the thinking. If you will apply the thought it will be well worth your while.

Profit of Pure Bred.

The profit of a pure bred herd of cows depends very largely upon the keeper. Some men will make more with ordinary stock than others will make with the very best of breeding.

It is easier to keep specks out of the butter than to get them out. Straining all water that goes into the churn, through a cheesecloth, helps.

COWS SHOULD CALVE IN FALL

Dairy Department of the University of Missouri Recommends This as the Best Practice.

A number of reasons are given for the practice of most dairymen of having cows calve in the fall instead of in the spring. The Dairy Department of the University of Missouri recommends this as the best practice in most cases, for some of the following reasons:

"Prices for milk and butter fat are highest in the winter, and it is desirable that the cow be fresh to give the maximum flow. When she begins to decline in the spring, the fresh grass of pastures will stimulate her to hold up to good production.

"Calves in the first few months of their growth are fed mostly by hand. In winter there is more time to care for them properly. The grass of spring will come along just when they are getting started on a rapid growth.

"The dry period of the cow will come at the time of year when pastures are usually poor in Missouri, and when flies are bad. This will give relief to the cows when they need it, and will be easier for the milkers.

"In cases where a regular milk trade is to be supplied, it is necessary to have the cows calve at intervals so that there will be almost a uniform flow, but where the farmer is selling cream it seems best to have the calves come in the fall."

MILK STOOL STAYS TOGETHER

Troubles and Worries of Milkers Will Disappear After Making Device Shown in Illustration.

Ninety-nine out of every hundred milkers use a one-legged milk stool and every one of them has trouble with the seat board coming loose, says a writer in the Farm, Mail and Breeze. Make your stools like the one shown in the sketch and your stool troubles will forever disappear. D is a ⅝-inch machine bolt, 4 inches long and has a square head. Bore a 7-16-inch hole through A into B, 4 inches deep. Three inches from the top of the leg bore a 1-inch hole into the leg at right angles until past the middle. Place a tap on C into this hole and screw down your bolt.

DAIRY NOTES

How easy it is to forget to wash the calf pails.

You can save time by teaching your cows to go in their proper stalls.

Plan to raise your own protein feeds this year and cut out the high-priced mill stuffs.

Breeding for a special purpose tends to develop an animal that will be in harmony with her function.

The man who is producing milk for the city trade should have a clear mind, clean hands and a pure heart.

Few dairymen now make butter to sell. The price paid for butter fat by creameries takes all the cream from the farm.

With corn fodder, corn silage, and clover, alfalfa or cowpea hay on hand, the dairyman may consider himself ready for business.

Undissolved salt in butter is the result of too little moisture in the butter, too coarse salt, or the butter being too firm when salted.

Don't overstock the pastures the coming season. Better pay a pretty good price to get the young stock pastured before doing that.

A drouthy summer followed by a severe winter are the conditions that will boost the silo next summer as it has never been boosted before.

The hired man who is attached to the farm by his own family, his home and regular work is seldom one who is discontented with his position.

The dairyman has no right to complain of the labor problem unless he is willing to give a good faithful man steady work all the year around.

"Butter don't come!" Well, are you sure you are churning at the right temperature? If not get a thermometer and make sure. They only cost 25 cents.

The most common cause of trouble with a separator is the vibrating of the bowl, due to the machine not being level, or not securely fastened down.

The great need of the day is educated dairymen, men who understand the care and feeding of the cow as well as the successful marketing of her products.

IN CRITICAL CONDITION.

Spokane, Wash., Woman Endures Terrible Suffering.

Mrs. J. A. Schoonmaker, 127 S. Pine St., Spokane, Wash., says: "I grew so weak I could scarcely do my housework and was often confined to bed.

There was a bearing-down pain through my hips and my head ached as if it would split. I knew by the kidney secretions that my kidneys were in a terrible condition but though I doctored, I gradually grew worse, until in critical condition. It was then I began using Doan's Kidney Pills and was entirely cured. I have not had a sign of kidney trouble since."

Missing the Point.

Representative Rucker of Colorado, apropos of a tariff argument about sugar, said to a Washington correspondent: "Oh, well, those men don't see my point. They miss it as badly as the old lady missed her son's.

"'Mother,' a young man said, looking up from the Bulletin, 'would you believe that it takes 5,000 elephants a year to make our piano keys and billiard balls?'

"'Make our piano keys and billiard balls!' cried the old lady. 'Well, I always understood elephants were intelligent creatures, but I never knew before that they'd been trained to make piano keys and billiard balls.'"

Cause of the Row.

"Mrs. Brown had a dreadful quarrel with her husband last night?"

"That so?"

"Yes. She bid eight on a hand that was good for ten, not thinking Mr. Brown would overbid her, but he did. It almost broke up the party."

The Heroism of John Romanes

by L. Warburton

COPYRIGHT by THE RIDGWAY CO.

YOU will not find the name of John Romanes on the scroll of honor, for men win the badge of fame in many ways and there are many degrees of valor and many varying rewards won by its display.

"Peace has her heroes, no less renowned than war," is the assertion of the poet, but this must be qualified by the omission of the word "no." It is so at any date in the case of John Romanes, for his deed was performed in the silence and solitude of the great Australian bush, without a single spectator who could bear witness to its exemplitude of courage of the highest quality, devotion seldom equaled, and a self-sacrifice so rare that few men unacquainted with the perils of the bush can appreciate it.

As the subject of Romanes' heroism it shall be my duty to tell to a wider circle of readers the events which earned for a hero no greater reward than my own undying gratitude and admiration.

It seems strange to me that, so far, few persons outside of Australia have ever heard of the stupendous efforts the government of Western Australia has made to prevent the incursion of the rabbit pest into the farming and pastoral regions of that state and, as my story has to do with that mammoth work, I feel bound to speak briefly of it.

For over fifty years the rabbits, imported to Australia by some misguided immigrant, have been a fearful scourge to the eastern states of the island continent. Net fences had proved a success in the east and the government at once entered on the stupendous task of running a rabbit-proof fence right across the country to act as a barrier to the invading hosts. That fence stands today, a completed and successful obstacle to the inroads of the pest. It is over 1,500 miles long, and stretches from Starvation Boat harbor, in the Great Australian Bight, to Condon, in the Ninety Mile Beach, away in the tropic north. It cost the country over $1,500,000.

To maintain the barrier in a state of effectiveness against the depredations of the hostile natives, the blind attacks of emus and kangaroos and the ravages of flood, tornado and fire, a whole army of men are employed constantly patrolling it.

I was associated in the early days of the construction of the fence with the advanced survey party and, on the completion of the structure, was induced by the high pay to accept the position of inspector of a length of fence in the far north.

It was in April, 1905, that I left Separation Well, the southernmost point of my section of the fence, and proceeded north to the De Grey river, a distance of 200 miles, where I had my main depot. There I was to meet Romanes and his mate Gregory, who had to patrol the last hundred miles of my territory. When I reached the depot, then in charge of two men who were kept there as a relief, I found Romanes in camp, with his mate, who was very ill with malaria and quite unfit to take the track for some time, although his condition was not serious. I was particularly anxious to see the northern section of my part of the fence, because there had been a tropical flood a week or two before and from some overlanding stockmen I had heard that the fence was in a bad state of repair.

When I questioned Romanes, whom I did not know very well—in fact, I had entertained a suspicion of him from the moment the reports as to the state of his particular length came to me—he was rather nettled and challenged me to come out with him without delaying for a week's rest.

Before leaving the depot I asked both Romanes and the man in charge whether the natives were "bad" along the track.

"Queensland Charlie, that 'boy' of Turnbull's at the De Grey station, told me that 'Major' and 'Toby' were loose again and heading this way, but I don't believe it," said Romanes. "They would make back into West Kimberley to dodge the police, and anyway, if they do get down here Turnbull tells me he had word that they are not armed. I don't reckon we'll see anything of 'em, boss."

"Well, I hope not," I said, "but we'll take some extra cartridges and keep a sharp lookout."

It took us eight days to make the one hundred miles of our eastward journey, as we made a careful inspection of the fence, which I found to be in better shape than I expected, although we had to do a lot of strengthening to the temporary repairs which Romanes had effected on his previous trip. At the end of my section near Mount Bruce we met the two boundary riders who had worked south from the next section to the north. They had heard nothing of the movements of Major and Toby and reported everything quiet. We parted company next day, Romanes and myself proceeding on what should have been a six-day trip back and the other men returning north.

We made a good day's march and camped at a rain shed about eighteen miles out, just as it was getting dusk. Not a sign nor a sight of a native had either Romanes or myself seen. In fact, we had not given them a thought. I lit a fire of mulga sticks behind a clump of gidgie bush and was soon busily engaged on the task of making a "damper," or bread baked in the ashes. A flock of Nor' West parrots flew screeching overhead. Romanes hobbled the camels and turned them loose with their bells making a monotonous "clamp-clamp," as they went in search of young and tender spinifex bush.

"How would stewed parrot go, boss?" Romanes asked me as he looked after the rowdy birds, which had settled in a solitary gum tree a couple of hundred yards inside the fence.

"Pretty good," I replied. "Take the gun and bag a few."

Romanes picked up my double-barreled Greener gun, stuffed a couple of extra cartridges into his pocket, and was about to follow up the parrots when I advised him to take the Winchester too, saying that he might bring back the tail of a young kangaroo for soup.

I lost sight of Romanes a minute later and went on with my preparations for our evening meal. The "damper" was made and I was just raking out the clean live coals of the fire on which to bake it, when I heard a rustle in the bush at my back. As I turned a spear whizzed by me and stuck quivering in the "grub bag" of the camel saddle a few feet away!

At the same moment I saw half a dozen savages in all their war paint. I rose and literally threw myself at the nearest saddle, against which a second Winchester rested. With that in my hand I could make a bolt and protect myself in a running fight. But that was not to be. A second spear, aimed with half a dozen others, went through my left wrist, and, as I involuntarily dropped the rifle and grabbed at the spearshaft, a waddy descended on my head and my senses left me.

What actually transpired from the moment I lost touch with mortal existence until I found myself again in the depot I had to glean from the unwilling answers of Romanes to my question, and fill in the blanks from my imagination.

When he left me to follow the parrots, Romanes did not anticipate going more than a quarter of a mile, at most, into the scrub and expected to be back in camp within fifteen minutes at the outside, but before he could get a shot at the birds they had led him on for a mile. It was while he was on his way back to the camp that he heard a shout, which resembled very closely the yell of triumph the natives give when they have captured their game, be it human or animal.

Approaching the camp cautiously, Romanes caught sight of the natives raiding the outfit, tearing open the "grub bags" and generally making themselves acquainted with everything in the camel packs.

Having "tumbled to what had happened, Romanes' first thought was to open fire on the blacks and before the natives knew what had happened a double charge of parrot shot struck them. With a yell they arose, the leader (whom it subsequently transpired was Major) grabbing the Winchester and firing wildly in the direction whence the shot had come. Romanes had taken shelter behind a bush which, while it obscured him from view, gave him no protection against bullets. He fired one shot from his rifle, and, dashing from his cover, made for a tree a hundred yards away, the natives following in a body. Once behind a stout trunk he brought his rifle into play and emptied the magazine with such effect that three of the natives fell and the others, meeting such a stout foe, bolted into the bush.

Not knowing how many natives there were, or whether there were more than he had seen in the neighborhood, Romanes wasted no time in climbing into the tree, there to wait until it was quite safe for him to make a further move, as the superstitious nature of the blacks would prevent them from making any further attack.

When he had spent a couple of hours in his high perch Romanes quietly slipped down and approached the camp, for the main purpose of endeavoring to get a further supply of ammunition, and to secure one of the camels in order that he might get away from the dangerous locality as soon as he had collected anything of value which the natives had left. He expected to find me dead as a doornail and battered beyond recognition, but he got the shock of his life when he bent over me and found me breathing.

Having made me as comfortable as possible, Romanes went in search of the camels, his idea being to strap me to one and get away without delay, for if the natives should return in the morning in increased numbers, neither of us would ever leave the spot. Poor John, he little knew then what a burden he had assumed in finding me alive! Better for him would it have been if I had really died then and he could have buried me, and, unhampered by a delirious man, have hastened to safety. His first disappointment came when he stood up to listen for the bells of the camels, which should have been heard. He failed to catch the faintest tinkle.

His disappointment became alarm when not three hundred yards from the camp he found our pack camel dead, with several spears sticking it, and the other two, fifty yards fuurther on, hopelessly wounded.

His determination not to leave me placed him in this predicament: he had first of all to shift me to a place of safety before morning brought the natives on us again; and alone he had then to get me into the De Grey depot, a distance of nearly eighty miles, the best part of it over waterless country. It was impossible for me to move of my own initiative, for that had left me and I lay like a log, senseless, delirious. If my life was to be saved I had to be moved from the spot where I fell and be carried to a place of safety. That was the conclusion Romanes arrived at and before another dawn broke we were ten miles away.

In the dark hours of the next night Romanes carried me another twelve miles and collapsed beside me near an old native well.

How long into that day he slept, Romanes never knew, but when he awakened, probably as the result of my ravings, he saw a native coming along the fence scarcely two hundred yards away. His first thought was to shoot at sight, believing that the black must be one of our old enemies, but feeling certain that the black fellow could not have seen us in our retreat, he decided to wait till he came right up. The native was apparently following our tracks and was already turning off into the bush just where we had left the fence, when Romanes recognised him as a native he had seen at Turnbull's station.

"Hullo there!" he yelled.

The black fellow stopped, saw the strange and dilapidated white man with a rifle in his hand, and turned with a yell to bolt into the bush.

Romanes called to him to halt and at the same time used Turnbull's name, and dropped his rifle. At the familiar name, and seeing that he was not to be shot instanter, the native stood still while Romanes walked toward him and told him who he was. The black accepted the peace overtures, and when Romanes learned that he was making for the De Grey station with the news from an outstation that the warlike natives were about, Romanes decided to trust him and conducted him to where I was lying.

He inspected my wounds with many grunts and exclamations of concern. He made a native plaster for my wounds, composing it of leaves and sticking it on with wet clay, over which was bound the piece of shirt-sleeve which Romanes had first used to staunch the blood. Then with a message to both the depot and his employer, asking them to hasten to our assistance and telling them where they would find us, dead or alive, the native was dispatched by Romanes.

Romanes then picked me up again, and, footsore and exhausted as he was, carried me another nine miles.

There for three whole days and nights we lay, myself in a high state of fever, happily oblivious to all that happened, and Romanes incessantly on the watch for blacks.

On the morning of the fourth day after our arrival at the shed, relief came.

Three days later I awoke to consciousness and found myself in comparative comfort at the De Grey depot, where the surveying party's cook—a first-rate amateur surgeon—had patched me up and doctored me in great style from the outfit's medicine chest. I was still a helpless wreck, but my brain was clearing, and when I realized where I was I asked about Romanes. They brought him to me and it was harder work for that brave fellow to answer my question as to how I got safe in from Mount Bruce than it had been for him to carry me the best part of the journey.

It was a month before I was well enough to travel down to Geraldton and there convalesce, but before I left I had the satisfaction of knowing that Major and Toby had met with their inevitable fate. They had "stuck up" the Turkey Creek station, and, on being beaten off by the stockmen, ran into the arms of a police patrol, who killed many of the natives, including the ringleaders, and captured the balance. When I was able to report to headquarters a further piece of intelligence pleased me. That was that my rescuer, John Romanes, had been promoted to the charge of an inspector's section and had been assigned to one of the best stretches of fence in the southern country.

THE OLD PLEA

He "Didn't Know It Was Loaded."

The coffee drinker seldom realizes that coffee contains the drug, caffeine, a severe poison to the heart and nerves, causing many forms of disease, noticeably dyspepsia.

"I was a lover of coffee and used it for many years, and did not realize the bad effects I was suffering from its use. (Tea is just as injurious as coffee because it, too, contains caffeine, the same drug found in coffee.)

"At first I was troubled with indigestion. I did not attribute the trouble to the use of coffee, but thought it arose from other causes. With these attacks I had sick headache, nausea and vomiting. Finally my stomach was in such a condition I could scarcely retain any food.

"I consulted a physician; was told all my troubles came from indigestion, but was not informed what caused the indgestion. I kept on with the coffee, and kept on with the troubles, too, and my case continued to grow worse from year to year until it developed into chronic diarrhea, nausea and severe attacks of vomiting. I could keep nothing on my stomach and became a mere shadow, reduced from 168 to 128 pounds.

"A specialist informed me I had a very severe case of catarrh of the stomach, which had got so bad he could do nothing for me, and I became convinced my days were numbered.

"Then I chanced to see an article setting forth the good qualities of Postum and explaining how coffee injured people so I concluded to give Postum a trial. I soon saw the good effects—my headaches were less frequent, nausea and vomiting only came on at long intervals and I was soon a changed man, feeling much better.

"Then I thought I could stand coffee again, but as soon as I tried it my old troubles returned and I again turned to Postum. Would you believe it, I did this three times before I had sense enough to quit coffee for good and keep on with the Postum. I am now a well man with no more headaches, sick stomach or vomiting, and have already gained back to 147 pounds." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Battle Creek, Mich.

JOY, PLEASURE, GLOOM.

LETITIA S. ULRICK

Doth know what joy means?
'Tis faith to say "Thy will be done,"
As each morn we see God's rising sun,
And feel that day most wisely spent
When to some one our hand
was lent;—
This is What joy Means.

Doth know what pleasure means?
To feel the heart in gladness bound
At some pure hope the mind has found
That lifts the earth-worn spirit high
And soars it beyond a sob or sigh;—
This is what pleasure means.

Doth know what gloom means?
To be companioned by a selfish heart,
And in other's lives to take no part,
To feel no tender longing or desire
For human love, or home hearth fire;—
This is what gloom means.

DESPISED DESERT PLANT NOW COMMERCIALLY USED

A new industry is being developed at Tucumcari, N. M. It is the shipment of Mexican soap weed, known locally as "bear grass" This plant grows in great profusion over the high plains and in the mountains of the southwest. It has an exceedingly strong fiber, and experiments have been conducted with it for many years, in the effort to determine its commercial possibilities. Only recently has a practical use been found for it, and now the American Manufacturing company, of St. Louis, is buying carloads of baled yucca in the panhandle of Texas and northeast New Mexico.

Shipments from Tucumcari and vicinity this summer will reach in the neighborhood of 100 car lots; local buyers pay $7 to $8, per ton for the plant.

Homesteaders who have time find it profitable to go out over the prairie and cut down the plant. It is cut off at the ground with a sharp cleaver, split and left to dry on the prairie for several weeks. When thoroughly dried it is ready for shipment. The cutting does not destroy the plants, as they come up again the following year.

M. Goldenberg, a Tucumcari, business man, who buys large quantities of yucca for the St. Louis concern, contemplates experimenting with it as a cultivated crop. It will grow even on the poorest soil and it is so hardy that weather conditions will not destroy it. The plant is always green, even in the driest season.

It is used in making cordage, and also for the manufacture of paper, but in the producing territory no information can be obtained concerning details of its manufacture into commercial products The Tucumcari chamber of commerce is investigating the proposition, with a view to establishing a factory at that point for reducing the plant to fiber.

NO MAN'S LAND A ROMANCE

By LOUIS JOSEPH VANCE

ILLUSTRATIONS BY RAY WALTERS

COPYRIGHT, 1910 BY LOUIS JOSEPH VANCE

SYNOPSIS.

Garrett Coast, a young man of New York City, meets Douglas Blackstock, who invites him to a card party. He accepts, although he dislikes Blackstock, the reason being that both are in love with Katherine Thaxter. Coast fails to convince her that Blackstock is unworthy of her friendship. At the party Coast meets two named Dundas and Van Tuyl. There is a quarrel, and Blackstock shoots Van Tuyl dead. Coast struggles to wrest the weapon from him, thus the police discover there. Coast is arrested for murder. He is convicted, but as he begins his sentence, Dundas names Blackstock as the murderer and kills himself. Coast becomes free, but Blackstock has married Katherine Thaxter and fled. Coast purchases a yacht and while sailing sees a man thrown from a distant boat. He rescues the fellow who is named Appleyard. They arrive at a lonely island, known as No Man's Land. Coast starts out to explore the place and comes upon some deserted buildings. He discovers a man dead. Upon going further and approaching a house he sees Katherine Thaxter, who explains that her husband, under the name of Black, has bought the island. He is blind, a wireless operator and has a station there. Coast informs her that her husband murdered Van Tuyl. Coast sees Blackstock and some Chinamen burying a man. They fire at him, but he is rescued by Appleyard, who gets him to the Echo in safety, and there he reveals that he is a secret service man and has been watching the crowd on the island, suspecting they are criminals. Coast is anxious to fathom the mysteries of No Man's Land, and is determined to save Katherine. Appleyard believes that Black and his gang make a shield of the wireless station to conduct a smuggling business. Coast penetrates to the lair of Blackstock's disguise. Katherine enters the room and passes him a note which tells Coast that neither his life or her own are safe. Coast feels that Blackstock suspects him. Appleyard and the Echo disappear. Coast and Katherine confer.

CHAPTER XV.—(Continued.)

"I'm afraid so. After he had consulted specialists in Berlin we spent some time at Monte Carlo and later at Ostend and Trouville. Douglas—went frequently to the casino with friends. He spoke once or twice of winning, but—"

"But never of losing."

She shook her head. "But what has all this to do—?"

"Don't you see, Katherine? . . . The man pretended to be well to do; in fact he had nothing. He married you for your money, and what you were to inherit. Disappointed in the latter, he took the former and gambled it away. That's why you're here, why he's making this desperate attempt to recoup. Appleyard guessed it down to the last detail!"

Bewilderment clouded her eyes. "But, Garrett, I'm afraid I don't understand. What 'desperate attempt to recoup?' Who is this Mr. Appleyard, and why should he concern himself with my affairs?"

"I'll tell you." In few phrases Coast sketched succinctly Appleyard, his connection with the secret service bureau, his theory as to the smuggling conspiracy and the part Blackstock played therein, together with the selection of No Man's Land as a strategic base and distributing depot.

"The thing's plain as a map," he wound up in a glow of triumphant reasoning, himself momentarily unmindful of their greater and more intimate trouble. "Appleyard was right in every guess he made. . . . The location of the island is ideal for the purpose, just far enough north off the main-traveled lane to be convenient; the steamer has only to swing a few points off her normal course to find herself in lonely waters, where she can make a transshipment without detection or noticeable loss of time. The wireless station is essential, enabling Blackstock to pick up the steamer on her approach and pass on the news to the schooner, which sets out, meets the steamer, takes off its consignment of dutiable goods, returns to No Man's Land under cover of darkness, the better to dodge the lookout on Gay Head, and leaves before morning to continue her innocent fishing trip. Other boats, small boats, call by night and remove the goods piecemeal, landing them at this small harbor or that—just as Appleyard figured it out. . . . And so we have them."

"You have them!" the woman repeated, perplexed.

"It's a practical certainty the schooner left New Bedford night before last; we saw her go, unless Appleyard is greatly mistaken. . . . And hasn't there been an unusual amount of wireless signaling going on the past day or so?

"That is so. The day of the fog either Douglas or Mr. Power was constantly in the operating room. I remember now that as the fog continued Douglas seemed to grow more and more irritable . . ."

"Because it was keeping the vessels from finding one another. Since then there has been the storm to blow the schooner off shore. Most probably she will try to make a landing tonight."

The woman moved a little away, as if suddenly sobered and brought back to realization of her position; again her eyes sought counsel and consolation of the sea.

"And since then—he has been busy!" Coast pursued, heedless.

"Yes—and more irritable. That night he had been drinking more than usual; I attributed his bad temper to that. Almost all that evening he spent with Mr. Power in the wireless room, the door closed. . . . It was stupid of me, but I attached no especial importance to it. Now and then their voices sounded excited, but it wasn't anything unusual for them to quarrel, especially when Douglas was—drinking. I interrupted once, and Douglas caught my arm and put me out of the room. It was then he hurt me—as you saw. After that they quarreled more fiercely than ever—I think partly on account of the way Douglas had treated me. Mr. Power seemed to resent Douglas' roughness toward me. . . ."

"It wasn't an uncommon occurrence, then?" The rage smoldering in Coast's heart thickened his utterance.

She noticed and understood, and turned back to him quickly, offering her hand, her eyes beseeching. "Don't, Garrett," she said, brokenly; "don't think about that. It is over now—now that I know. I couldn't bear ever to have him touch me, again." She struggled a moment against a rising tide of emotions, while he held her hand imprisoned in his own. There was despair in the face upturned to his that wrung his heart, so that he feared to trust himself to speak. "But, oh, Garrett, Garrett!" she cried forlornly. "What is to become of me. What am I to do—?"

He drew her to him. "Why," he said, tenderly, "that is why I am here, Katherine—to watch over and take care of you, to see that no harm comes to you. That is why I insisted on returning before Appleyard went farther in his plans. I should have gone mad with the thought of you here, alone, defenseless, last night. . . . If you will only trust me. . . ."

His arm closed round her and for a moment she was very close to him, her head upon his bosom, her slender body rocked and torn with sobs. He held her so, compassionate and pitiful, striving as best he might to soothe her—the while joy sang in his soul.

"Only trust me," he murmured—"trust me a little, Katherine; and all shall yet be well. . . . It is not the end, my dear, but just a beginning. . . . Have faith a little . . ."

Gradually her transports stilled. "I do trust you, Garrett." Tears gemmed her eyes like stars. "I do—and shall . . . but, oh, be kind to me, for if I have been foolish and headstrong and—mad, I am paying for it, paying heavily for it. It's all so dark and hopeless, Garrett—I see no light. . . ."

"Yet there is light," he said; and again confidently: "The light is there."

"I know . . . I know."

She drew away and dried her eyes. "I must go," she said in a steady voice, "before he wakes. He was up late last night and I'm afraid drank a great deal. I left him sleeping heavily."

"The servants can't see you return to the bungalow from this direction, can they?"

"No. . . ."

"I'll make a detour. We must be careful for a little while. Can you bear up, do you think?"

"A little while—?" She smiled forlornly.

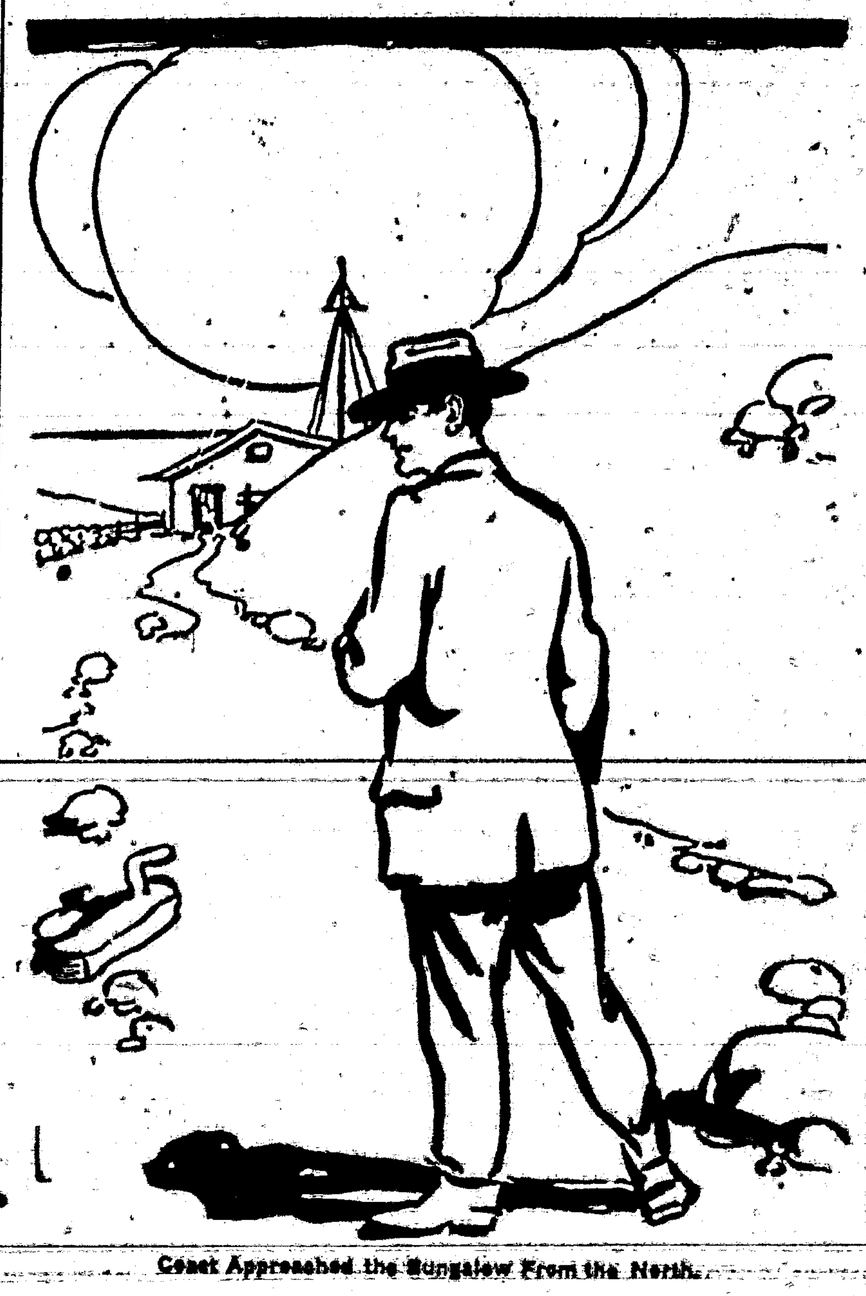
"Appleyard will be back with the Echo by night."

"I will try, Garrett, and I don't think I'll fail. I've got something to cling to." She hesitated an instant, looking up to him with her wistful smile. "I think," she said, slowly—"I think I see, far off but clear, Garrett, just a glimmer of the light."

CHAPTER XVI.

Taking a roundabout course eastward, which practically completed the circuit of the island, Coast tramped back to a lonely breakfast in the farmhouse.

During the remainder of the morning he saw nothing more of Katherine. Without giving the matter really definite thought he had assumed that Blackstock would send for him when he was wanted. Nothing of the sort happened, although he could not doubt that Blackstock was up and about; about mid-morning both coolies went to the bungalow to set it to rights, and intermittently throughout the slow dull hours he heard the drum of the wireless spark, its whip-lash crackling from a distance resembling a smart fusillade of pistol shots.



Coast Approached the Bungalow From the North.

The sound filled him with apprehensions. It was quite possible that Blackstock would think to settle any doubts he might entertain about the identity of his new aide by questioning Voor, his via wireless. In such event the tissue of falsehood upon which he had bolstered up his position on the island would almost certainly be exposed. And then . . . ?

But however disturbing it might be to contemplate, the possibility of such a contretemps was not a stranger to Coast's calculations; he was prepared to face it. Should the wind veer in that quarter, he would simply have to fight. Only . . . He would have given much to know positively.

Some time after noon one of the coolies found him strolling aimlessly along the beach and called him to luncheon.

Late in the afternoon he found himself dawdling in the neighborhood of the bungalow, drawn thither irresistibly, the dictates of prudence and discretion to the contrary of no avail to hold him back. The suspense had become rather more than flesh could endure. He felt that he would presently do something desperate if he did not learn how it was with her, how her day was going. A thousand fears for her were driving him to distraction.

Coast approached the bungalow from the north—the direction opposite the end in which the wireless station was installed. As he rounded the corner, with purpose to go directly to Blackstock, he passed out of observation from the farm-house and simultaneously caught sight of Katherine through one of the living-room windows.

Moving silently to the main entrance, he waited there where she could not but see him when she turned back into the room.

From beyond her came the rumble of her husband's voice. He was speaking quickly and with force, but Coast could not hear what he said.

The woman waited, moveless, until his voice dropped. Then she said quietly, in an ordinary tone: "Is that all?" To which apparently he assented. She added: "Very well. I'll be ready."

WAS HATER OF CONNECTICUT

Lewis Morris Carried to His Grave a Bitter Grudge Against That State.

A grudge against Connecticut seems to have been the ruling passion, strong in death, of Lewis Morris of Morrisania, who died in 1816. Part of the will of this Connecticut hater is printed in Case and Comment as follows:

"My desire is, that nothing be mentioned about me, not so much as a single line in a News Paper, to tell the World I am dead; it is my Desire that my son Gouverneur Morris may have the best Education that so it be had in England or America, but my Ex- interwoven in their constitutions, that he never be sent for that purpose to the Colony of Connecticut, Least he should imbibe in his Youth that Low Craft and Cunning, so Incidant to the People of that Country, which is so interwoven in their constitutions, that all their art cannot Disguise it from the World. Tho' many of them under the Sanctified Garb of Religion have endeavour'd to Impose themselves on the World for Honest Men."

Encouraging Horse Breeding.

One way in which the New Brunswick government has encouraged farming progress lies in the importing of cattle and horses of approved breeds and selling them to farmers at cost price, in some instance time being given on part of the purchase price.

Certain of Success.

I mean to make myself a man, and if I succeed in that I shall succeed in everything.—Garfield.

His Reason Is Returning

Insane Man, Formerly Member of National Guard, Drills Other Inmates of Asylum.

A Chicago man with a large acquaintance became insane within a year, and is now an inmate at a state asylum. One of his friends telephoned the hospital the other day to find out about him.

"He's the happiest man here," said the doctor, "and I look for his cure. He is getting big and strong and ruddy and he is doing wonders for 12 other patients."

"In conversation with him, I found out that he had been in the National Guard, and I asked him how he would like to drill a company. 'Fine,' he said. So I got him a uniform and a sword and gave him a canceled beer stamp for a commission.

"In good weather he marches those 11 men all over the grounds as if he were the marshal of an army on parade. The soldiers are just as much interested as he and keep step proudly. I think they march four or five miles a day.

"When they are off duty and see him coming they step to one side and salute.

"Their physical condition is perfect, and I hope to see their reason come back."—Chicago Post.

Cook Without Pans.

A missionary in an account of life in the South Pacific says: "The problem of cooking without pots or pans is already proved. The natives of the South Pacific cook their food in a hole in the ground, a wood fire being made at the bottom and covered with stones. On these the food is placed, wrapped in leaves, and the whole covered with earth. The result is delicious. When cooked the food is served on leaves, thus doing away with the necessity of crockery. I lived in the South Sea islands without crockery, cutlery, chairs, tables or beds."

A Large Hairpin Holder.

Mrs. Nagget—I watched your sister fixing her hair the other day, and I must say she's not the most refined person in the world.

Mr. Nagget—You don't approve of her, eh?

Mrs. Nagget—Well, you never saw me with my mouth full of hairpins.

Mr. Nagget—Of course not. What would you want with so many hairpins?

His Abusive Eyes.

Aunt Caroline and the partner of her woes evidently found connubial bliss a misnomer, for the sounds of war were often heard down in the little cabin in the hollow. Finally the pair were hailed into court and the dusky lady entered a charge of abusive language against her spouse. The judge, who had known them both all his life, endeavored to pour oil on the troubled waters.

"What did he say to you, Caroline?" he asked, according to Lippincott's.

"Why, Jedge, I jes' can't tell you all dat man do say to me."

"Does he ever use hard language?"

"Does you mean cussin'? Yassuh, not wif his mouf, but he's always givin' me dem cussory glances."

Not So Strange.

"It's strange that you never met the Count Spaghetti before," remarked the heiress.

"Oh, not at all," replied the disappointed suitor.

"But he tells me he has been in New York for quite a number of years."

"Yes, but I always shave myself, you know."

An Occultist Cook.

When a certain Mobile man stopped for luncheon at a small railway station eating house in a Mississippi town, an old darkey shuffled up and and announced in a gruff voice the bill of fare consisted of ham, eggs, cornbread and coffee.

After due deliberation the traveler stated that he would like some ham, eggs, cornbread and coffee.

Such a pretentious order for one person only appeared to stagger the aged surveitor. But he soon recovered his equanimity and started toward the kitchen. Then he turned and came back with the inquiry:

"Boss, how will yo' hab dem eggs, blind or looking at yer?"

Advice.

Medill McCormick, president of the Illinois Progressive-Republican league, was talking at a dinner in Chicago about certain old-fashioned campaign methods.

"Those methods," said Mr. McCormick, "seem as cumbersome to us as the methods of the mover seemed to the undertaker.

"As an inebriate rested against a lamppost a mover passed him. The mover, an economical chap, was doing the moving by hand, and he had on his back a huge grandfather's clock.

"The inebriate stared vacantly at the sweating figure bent under the weight of the great clock and then hiccoughed and hailed him.

"'Hey,' he said, 'hey,—hic—there!'

"The mover stopped, turned slowly.

"'Well, what is it?' he asked.

"'Take my advice, young fel,' said the inebriate, 'an' buy 'shelf—hic—a watch.'"

Colorado, top of the world, known everywhere as the greatest mining state in the Union, is making amazing strides in its agricultural development. The story of its wonderful progress during recent years and its exceptional farming possibilities is tersely told in an attractively illustrated pamphlet, "The Fertile Lands of Colorado," just published and now being distributed by the Passenger Department of the Denver & Rio Grande Railroad. The text is by that well-known authority on all things agricultural, Mr. Clarence A. Lyman, of Loma, Colorado.

Gathered Smiles

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

If cockroaches reappear after you have once exterminated them, send a package of insect powder to your next door neighbor.

In case of fire in your house, retain your presence of mind and let your fire insurance policy be the first thing you carry out.

There are preparations that will kill the odor of tobacco smoke in your parlors, but as a rule, they smell worse than the tobacco smoke.

Never give a house party when painters and decorators are at work in the house.

The only sure way to keep the children from hearing you swear is to cut out the swearing entirely.

Never build a spite fence. It doesn't deaden the sound of your neighbor's piano in the slightest degree.

Spurring Him On.

A local business man has just taken his son, a former football star, into his office. Recently the following dialogue ensued:

"You don't seem to tackle work like you did football, son."

"The surroundings are different, father."

"I guess that's so. Maybe it would help if I instructed the other clerks to give your college yell at regular intervals."

The Main Point.

"Why is Clara going so much with that young college fellow? She is the only one apparently who can see anything attractive about him."

"Oh, she thinks he is a perfect bore, but his college colors are so becoming to her complexion, when she wears them at the football games."

They Were Not Mates.

The mother of Bessie had instructed her to get a pair of clean stockings for her father. The child returned in a moment with two of a different kind—one black and the other red.

"Here's some, mamma," she said, "but they isn't twins."—Judge's Library.

Things Unprintable.

Willie—Mother always carves when we have company to dinner.

Bobby—Isn't your father able to?

Willie—Guess he ain't able to without sayin' things.

VERY LIKELY.

The Naturalist—The horse is man's best friend.

The Sport—I guess you never bet on a horse that came in last in a race.

Her Ingenuity.

Mettle—If Miss Larksbur made no reply when you proposed to her, on what grounds is she suing you for breach of promise?

King—She claims that her silence gave consent.—Judge.

Not Sanguinary.

"Grace and Bella had another tilt yesterday."

"Too bad."

"Oh, it might have been worse. Although they looked daggers at each other and made cutting remarks, there was no bloodshed."

When He Studies.

Mrs. Bacon—Does your husband know anything about forestry?

Mrs. Egbert—Oh, he must. You know he takes to the woods every year when we begin housecleaning!

Popular Magazine Pose.

"Just a moment, please. I'd like to have another look at that picture on the page you have just turned over."

"Ah! I thought it was a woman with the toothache, but I see it is merely a tragedy queen holding her face with both hands."

A Profound Thinker.

"Who is that old chap who borrowed a nickel from you?"

"That's Muggley. He's a close student of political, social and industrial conditions."

Largely a Matter of Guesswork.

Inquirer—What do you estimate to be the total expense of finding the south pole?

Information Editor—That can't be ascertained until the lucky discoverer has figured up his gross receipts from lectures and the sale of his books. You'll have to wait a few years for the complete estimates.

HE TURNED THE GAS OUT.

Her Father—Clara, do you know that young man's intentions as yet?

Clara (quite a joker)—No, papa. He's keeping me completely in the dark.

No Changes.

"Why don't you work up some improvements?" demanded the proprietor.

"Well, sir, the work has always been done this way. Could I have an increase of salary?"

"Why should you? The job has always drawn $8 a week."

Always a Republic.

"Why do you consider a republic the only permanent form of government?" asked one Chinese citizen.

"Because," replied the other, "it's the only form that permits you to change all its leaders and all the governmental institutions without changing its name."

Hopeful View.

He (despondently)—Our marriage will have to be postponed. I have lost my situation, and haven't any income at all."

She (hopefully)—That doesn't matter now, my dear. We won't need any. I've learned how to trim my own hats."

Caught in the Act.

"Pipkin says he remembers distinctly the first time his father ever held a smoker."

"How does he happen to remember that?"

"Pipkin was the smoker."

Large Size.

Mrs. Styles—When you see a muff coming down the street look again. Nine times out of ten you will find a girl behind it.

Mr. Styles—You must have seen one of the smaller sizes. I saw a muff coming along with a girl and two men behind it.

Auto Aristocracy.

"He has a grudge against the plain people."

"On what score?"

"Says they wear so many rubbers that it forces up the price of tires."

Proof.

"Does he love his wife?"

"Devotedly. If he held out so much as a nickel of his salary his conscience would hurt him so he couldn't sleep."

Wishing He Were There.

"Mr. Plinker has a voice like a fog horn."

"Yes. I'm sorry the resemblance ceases there."

"What do you mean?"

"Fog horns, as a rule, stay out in the ocean."

Rialto Chat.

"Times is fierce," declared Susan Brett. "Half the managers on Broadway owe me money."

"Back salary or alimony?" politely inquired Yorick Hamm.

The Dilemma.

"Is there any chance of a young man's escaping loss the first time he goes into Wall street?"

"Well, it is a toss-up if he escapes the bulls and a tight squeeze if he gets away from the bears."

On Duty.

"Now, then, young man," demanded the park policeman, "why do you hang around this park every day?"

"I have been assigned to get an interview with the first robin," the cub reporter explained.

STATE TAKES HAND IN FIGHT

New Jersey Leads in Advanced Legislation Designed to Check Speed of Tuberculosis.

What is designed by the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis as the most advanced legislation in the campaign against tuberculosis that has been enacted by any state in the United States, if not by any country in the world, is found in a bill recently passed by the New Jersey legislature and signed by Governor Wilson. The new law provides that tuberculosis patients who refuse to obey the regulations laid down by the state board of health concerning the prevention of their disease, and thus become a menace to the health of those with whom they associate, shall be compulsorily segregated by order of the courts, in institutions provided for this purpose. If such a patient refuses to obey the rules and regulations of the institution in which he is placed, he may "be isolated or separated from other persons and restrained from leaving the institution." The law further provides that all counties in the state of New Jersey shall within six months from April 1st make provision in special institutions for the care of all persons having tuberculosis in these counties. The state treasury will subsidize each county to the extent of $3 a week for each person maintained in these institutions, except those who are able to pay for the cost of maintenance.

BABY'S TERRIBLE SUFFERING

"When my baby was six months old, his body was completely covered with large sores that seemed to itch and burn, and cause terrible suffering. The eruption began in pimples which would open and run, making large sores. His hair came out and finger nails fell off, and the sores were over the entire body, causing little or no sleep for baby or myself. Great scabs would come off when I removed his shirt.

"We tried a great many remedies, but nothing would help him, till a friend induced me to try the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I used the Cuticura Soap and Ointment but a short time before I could see that he was improving, and in six weeks' time he was entirely cured. He had suffered about six weeks before we tried the Cuticura Soap and Ointment, although we had tried several other things, and doctors, too. I think the Cuticura Remedies will do all that is claimed for them, and a great deal more." (Signed) Mrs. Noble Tubman, Dodson, Mont., Jan. 28, 1911. Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. L, Boston.

In the Dark.

"Has that boy of yours who graduated from college last year found a job that suits him yet?"

"Nope. He's still looking for one."

"Where's he looking?"

"Well, I don't just know. He seems to do most of his looking nights."

THE SECRET OF LONG LIFE.

Do not sap the springs of life by neglect of the human mechanism, by allowing the accumulation of poisons in the system. An imitation of Nature's method of restoring waste of tissue and impoverishment of the blood and nervous strength is to take an alterative glyceric extract (without alcohol) of Golden Seal and Oregon grape root, Bloodroot, Stone and Mandrake root with Cherrybark. Over 40 years ago Dr. Pierce gave to the public this remedy, which he called Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. He found it would help the blood in taking up the proper elements from food, help the liver into activity, thereby throwing out the poisons from the blood and vitalizing the whole system as well as allaying and soothing a cough.

No one ever takes cold unless constipated, or exhausted, and having what we call mal-nutrition, which is attended with impoverished blood and exhaustion of nerve force. The "Discovery" is an all-round tonic which restores tone to the blood, nerves and heart by imitating Nature's methods of restoring waste of tissue, and feeding the nerves, heart and lungs on rich red blood.

Mrs. Denie.

"I suffered from pain under my right shoulder blade also a very severe cough," writes Mrs. W. Denie, of New Brookland, S. C., to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y. "Had been different doctors and none did me any good. Some said I had consumption, others said I would have to have an operation. I was bedridden, unable to sit up for six months—and was nothing but a live skeleton. You advised me to take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. When I had taken one bottle of the 'Discovery' I could sit up for an hour at a time," and when I had taken three bottles I could do my washing and tend to the children. I took fourteen bottles in all and was then in good health. My weight is now 167 pounds.
