ONE WAY

The habit of sending away or ordering goods that we can buy at a home store seems a very small thing, unless we stop and think about it. The money spent with a home store circulates at home. It helps to make the community grow. Every order sent away retards home prosperity to the amount of that order and helps build up a distant city.

The stores of Carrizozo stand ready to furnish any article in the line they carry at prices guaranteed to be quality considered, as low as can be had anywhere.

TRADE AT HOME.

TOM THUMB WEDDING

Under the auspices of the Junior Civic League, there was given at the Methodist Church an entertainment that was not only unique in the extreme but amusing as well.

Aside from the interest that always attaches to anything of a local character, the dramatic personnel of the presentation were all children under ten years of age.

The Midget wedding with little Jean Riley and Albert T. Roberts as the bride and groom, surrounded by a host of grand parents, cousins, relatives, maids of honor, best men, old maids, minister etc. was a grand success and reflected much credit on the committee arranging the affair. All the little tots played their parts wonderfully and the entertainment was one of the finest of the winter.

The Receipts went to the Junior Civic League.

COUNTY TEACHERS MEET

Lincoln County's Teachers association met in Carrizozo Friday and Saturday last week. A two days session was held and while the attendance was small much good was accomplished.

On Saturday evening the pupils of the county were to have met in oratorical contest; many of the other schools failed to respond and Carrizozo won the three prizes. The prize winners were as follows. Class C pupils under ten years old, won by Barbara Hust, Carrizozo. Class B. Pupils from ten to fourteen years of age won by Tom Gbant. Class A. Pupils over 14 years of age, won by Knox Phillips.

An address entitled "Some phases of Social Education" by Dr. Chas. M. Light, president of the New Mexico Normal School was given Saturday evening.

ALL READY FOR COURT

Preparations for court are steadily going on and by Monday morning when court opens with Judge Edward L. Medler presiding the temporary quarters will be in readiness. Real's Hall is being prepared for a court room, the Commercial Club room next to the Rolland store for a jury room and the fire engine house for a jail. The Lincoln County dockets are both light and will require but about ten days of court but change of venue cases from Dona Ana County will occupy another week of the court's time.

VETOES SALARY BILL

Governor McDonald Vetoes Bill Providing Salaries For County Officers

SENATE PASSES OVER VETO

The County Officers Salary Bill, when presented to the Governor, this week, was vetoed and when returned to the Senate was promptly passed over the Governor's veto. This House, however, has not as yet mustered enough votes to pass the bill over the Governor's rejection and may not be able to do so. It is stated that there is a strong possibility of an extra session following the adjournment of the present Legislature on March 14th if the salary bill fails to pass the House, as it now appears.

The next week will see the passage of many bills in both houses and the closing up of the business of this session.

AMERICAN SPHINX IS CHISELLED

AS America created a sphinx?

A great concrete statue cemented into the solid rock on the banks of the Rock river near Oregon, Ill., has been built by Lorado Taft, the sculptor, with every care that modern engineering can take to make it as permanent as the Pyramids and other famous landmarks of the ages. By his method of applying the concrete Mr. Taft bids fair to accomplish his purpose.

The statue, erected to commemorate the American Indian, represents Black Hawk, chief of the Sacs and Foxes, standing with folded arms, looking down the picturesque valley of the Rock river. The figure is of noble proportions, being fifty feet in height, and crowns the top of a bluff 250 feet above the swirling waters of the river.

The claim of the statue to fame rests in three things: First, any one who runs—even those who run in automobiles—may read its message. As those who are rushing by in autos and steam cars and motor boats stop or turn to look it inevitably recalls the former occupancy by the red men of the places they are now in.

Then the statue's great size places it on a scale with the Goddess of Liberty in New York harbor and the great statue of "The Pilgrim" on the New England coast.

Its third and greatest claim to fame is that it is built to be permanent, and it is believed that it will outlast the sphinx, the Pyramids and the stones erected by the Druids.

It is utilitarian concrete which it is hoped will make the statue of Black Hawk overtake the Sphinx in age by enduring after time has effaced that grim figure. The statue was three years in process of making and represents a new era in concrete construction as applied to the art of sculpture.

While fountains and pergolas and temporary figures for exhibitions have been made of concrete in the past, nothing approaching in magnitude or purpose the present piece of work has ever before been attempted with this material. It was a labor of love with the sculptor, who bore all the expense himself.

Behind the building of the Black Hawk statue lies an interesting story. A few years ago Mr. Taft was watching some workmen build a concrete chimney at the Chicago Art Institute, and there came to him his great idea of the means for making an enduring statue. With the process in mind it was not long until an adequate subject presented itself.

For fifteen years Mr. Taft has had his summer home and studio at Eagle's Nest Camp, near Oregon, the summer seat of the Chicago art colony. Standing for the hundredth time at the highest point of the cliff he never failed to remember that it was from here that Black Hawk was finally driven out of Illinois. So he decided to bring back the famous Indian chief, and now in concrete Black Hawk again surveys his former domain, with an air of "immutable disdain," as one artist has put it.

Black Hawk and his tribes fought on the English side in the War of 1812. He saw sooner than other chiefs that the whites would take all the Indian's hunting grounds from him. He tried everything from war to treaties to check the whites' advance. As he grew old he became more attached to his home along the Rock river and fought against removal to the Iowa reservation by the government. He even tried living in peace with the whites, but he had achieved such a reputation that any depredations that any Indians committed were laid at his tepee door.

Finally he and his people were driven across the Mississippi by Uncle Sam's soldiers. After that, as an old man, he petitioned the government that he might come back and view his old domain on the Rock river. Many members of the tribe were brought with him, and suddenly there was panic among the whites. Whether it was intentional from the first on the part of the Indians or the result of suspicion, a war was precipitated. Abraham Lincoln and Jefferson Davis both fought with the whites and Black Hawk was made a prisoner.

It is characteristic of Mr. Taft that when he went about what he hopes will be his most enduring work in a material way he started with an little face as if it were a small matter. Silently and surely the work advanced as he built in character the approach of an Indian. Even the sculptor's duties at his work as if it were a concert of the moment instead of the project of a lifetime, and proceeds partly in hiding his pleasure in the work.

Mr. Taft did not study any one type or race of Indians in modeling the Black Hawk statue. It is a composite of the Fox and the Sacs, the Sioux and the Mohawks, and was intended to represent the general Indian personality. All the usual Indian trappings, such as the feathers and the buckskin, have been left off. There is even a suggestion of the old Roman in the face, which was necessary to make it suggest a spirit unconquered while still the conquered race.

The head and profile and folded arms appear in perfect detail as they are outlined against the sky and forest from many viewpoints around the country. On a clear day, when the leaves are off the trees, the statue is visible at a distance of twenty miles.

The exact site was selected after much experiment. First a rough twenty-foot model was made and set up, but it was found that the height and distances were so great that the figure had to be enlarged and placed on a more prominent part of the cliff. Finally a light fifty-foot structure was erected on a farm wagon and the wagon was drawn around until the proper location was established.

For the foundation fifteen feet of soil had to be removed before bedrock was struck. Here the top of a natural ledge of stone was reached. The ledge, thirty feet deep, formed of a succession of steps which gave the appearance of being built artificially as they show on the river bluff.

Many engineering difficulties had to be overcome, inasmuch as a great concrete statue had never before been made. The statue contains about two tons of twisted steel reinforcing and approximately 240 cubic yards of concrete, twenty tons of which consists of pink granite screenings, giving it the appearance of a granite statue. More than 65,000 gallons of water was pumped up from the river for maintaining two steam engines and for mixing the concrete. Four hundred and twenty barrels of cement were used in forming the mixture.

The first model was of plaster and only eight inches high, the next was two feet high and the third six feet. This last served as the working model and was enlarged by careful measurement to a frame of scantlings around an elevator shaft. When the whole figure had been framed in lumber wire netting was stretched over the timbers, and this in turn was covered with burlap for a surface. Later the burlap was painted with plaster of paris to stiffen it and then subjected to a coat of clay water to insure its release from the mold later on. Meanwhile the head was modeled in clay and cast by the usual process, the piece mold being saved for use again in casting the concrete.

A three-inch mold was next made over the figure, about ten tons of plaster being used for this purpose, with many heavy timbers for support. The scaffolding was then taken out and a steel reinforcing tower eight feet in diameter was built in its place. This tower ran the entire length of the body, ending in a dome just below the neck, and was designed to support the head and shoulders of solid concrete.

The final work of casting was done in the middle of winter, ten days being required for this work, with two crews of fourteen men each working in day and night shifts. When the mold was full heat was applied for two days, and then the spirit of Black Hawk was left to the elements. With the removal of this mold the following spring there emerged a perfect monolithic concrete statue.

This statue is, in more senses than one, the biggest thing that Mr. Taft has yet done. The statue is immensely ample, the heavy folds of the blanket surrounding the figure suggesting the man's body without following closely its outlines. The dignity, the stoicism and the bitterness of a vanquished leader are there.

An interesting feature of the unveiling ceremonies was addresses by Dr. Charles Eastman and Miss Laura M. Cornelius, or "Wynnogone," both full-blooded Indians and direct descendants of Black Hawk.

Canine Code of Etiquette

Certain Lines of Conduct Which It is Asserted No Dog Dares Overstep.

Every animal lover can tell numerous stories illustrating the devotion of animals to their human protectors. Anecdotes of one animal risking its life to save another are rare, but still sufficiently numerous and authentic to leave no doubt as to the occasional existence of a deep love between animals. But any close observer of nature will know that there exists throughout the brute creation a sort of rough moral system which, in the case of domestic animals, translates itself into what really amounts to a code of etiquette.

The old proverb, "The dog with a bone has many friends," is nothing else than a recognition of canine etiquette. It does not matter how small is the dog with the bone. It may be a Pomeranian surrounded by mastiffs. They will hover round the Pomeranian, perhaps whining for a morsel (which is never offered), and eagerly picking up any splinter that may be dropped, when nothing would be easier than to bowl the little dog over and seize the bone.

You will notice, further, that the little dog becomes allied with a new courage, presumably in the moral consciousness of the justice of his claim, and will growl and even snap at a dog he otherwise fears if the latter should come too close.

But the moment a dog drops his bone a new rule of etiquette operates, for it becomes the property of the first dog who comes to pick it up. True, a splinter will sometimes arise as to whether the bone has actually been dropped "within the meaning of the act." But once this is clear the law of the bone will be observed by all save the exceptional "hooligan" dog.

met with occasionally, who outrages all the laws of dogdom, even to the biting of his master. Although a dog is quite entitled to rush suddenly upon a foot and take him unawares, he may not do so if the other is eating or drinking.

Carlyle's Good Mother.
 Carlyle once wrote these words of his mother's religious influence over him as a boy, and of the purity and nobility of her Christian character: "My kind mother did me one altogether invaluable service. She taught me, less indeed by word than by act and daily reverent habits, her own simple version of the Christian faith. My mother, with a true woman's heart, and fine though uncultivated sense, was in the strictest acceptance, religious. The highest whom I knew on earth I saw bowed down with awe unspeakable, before a Higher One in heaven, especially in infancy, reach inward to the very core of your being; mysteriously does a Holy of Holies build itself into visibility in the mysterious depths, and reverence, the divinest in man, springs forth undying from its mean development of fear."

So Brains Gets Honey.
 Brains has a sweet tooth. If you go to the Jardin des Plantes you can see him of an afternoon drinking hydro-mel, honey and water, with the nearest approach he can make to a sensible smile. It is only lately that he has been given this luxury. How he came by it is interesting. It is now possible to sell to the public flowers grown in the gardens and the profits on the sales are devoted to buying luxuries for the animals. Thus, like the bees, Brains derives his honey from the flower, which seems in the likeness of things.—Paris Letter in the London Telegraph.

LITTLE TOY MOST AMUSING

Figures of Two Pugilists Swing Back and Forth Under Impact of Their Own Blows.

The lower portion of the fighters—from waist down—is drawn on the card, but their torsos and heads are in separate pieces, pivoted at the waist, so that they swing freely. There is a stop, however, so that if one of the men gets an unusually vigorous punch in the jaw he will only bend back to a certain point and will spring forward again to the fray.

Small Animal Desires to Collect Pennies From Twelve Windows as Speedily as Possible.

The thoughtful expression worn by the monkey is due to the fact that his master has ordered him to visit the 12 windows and return with his crop of pennies as speedily as possible. Joko is calculating the shortest route which will take him past all the windows and back to his master's shoulder. Now, if you were in Joko's place, in what order would you visit the sockable looking residents? Joko's shortest route in visiting the 12 windows and returning to his master's shoulder is as follows: Nos. 10, 11, 12, 8, 4, 2, 7, 6, 3, 1, 5, and 9. CAR "DON'TS" FOR CHILDREN

Exhibition to Teach Them How to Avoid Accidents—Text Book Contains Many Warnings.

The American Museum of Safety is going to try to teach the children of New York to exercise more care when they are in the streets, so that there will be fewer accidents. When the children get to the museum they will see little trolley cars and dolls to teach them certain dangers, and how to get on and off a car. The children will also get a little text book of "Don'ts" that contain these cautions: Don't hang on behind the car. Don't stand on the car steps. Don't touch a wire; it may be a live one. Don't put your head or arms out of the car window. Don't run across a car track in front of an approaching car, automobile or wagon. Don't cross immediately behind a passing car; there may be another car or wagon approaching closely in the opposite direction. Don't jump on or off a moving car. Don't get off facing rear of car. Don't cross street without looking both ways for passing automobiles and wagons. Don't fall, when leaving car, to look both ways for other vehicles. Don't play in the street where car tracks are. Don't cross a street except at a crosswalk. Don't take a chance. The museum folks are hoping to get the Interboro to carry the children to and from the museum free of charge.—New York Times.

MANNIKIN IS AMUSING TOY

German Invention Is Operated by Boy Drawing in Breath and Blowing Through Small Tube.

An amusing variation of the jointed mannikin that flings its arms and legs about when a string is pulled has been designed by a man in Germany, the home of toys. The figure is made and joined in the same old way and the joints are even connected with a central cord, but there the resemblance to the old toy stops. This central cord is fastened to a plunger that moves up and down in the upper section of a rectangular suction pipe. To make the mannikin dance, a boy takes the tube in his mouth and alternately blows through it and draws in his breath. This causes the plunger to move rapidly up and down and the cords that are attached to the arms and legs are relaxed and drawn out with the result of moving those members.

RIDDLES.

- Where does charity begin? At O (sea).
- Which is the strongest day in the week? Sunday, because all the rest are weekdays.
- Which is the easiest to spell—iddle-de-dee or iddle-de-dum? The former, because it is spelt with more's's.
- What do we do when, to increase the effect, we diminish the cause? Snuff the candle.
- What word will, if you take away the first letter, make you sick? Music.
- What chins are never shaved? Ur-chins.
- Who are the most wicked people in the world, and why? Pan makers; because they make people steal pens and tell them they do write (right).
- Why is a pretty woman like a lock? Because she is a thing to a door (adore).
- Why is a short man attempting to kiss a tall woman like an Irishman going up Vesuvius? Because he is trying to get to the mouth of the crater (creature).
- In case of an accident, what is better than presence of mind? Absence of b.o.d.y.
- What did the spider do when he left the ark? He took a fly and went home.

GOOD JOKES

SETS HIM RIGHT.

"A nice young couple in our crowd was married this summer," relates a nice young fellow in the same crowd, "and when they got back from their honeymoon they went to housekeeping in a certain apartment-house in the East End. They had one servant—a little girl whose mother used to do the washing for her folks, and who, therefore, know all about them and came cheap and willing. Well I went to call on them the other evening. 'The little maid met me at the door. She had known me when I called on the girl before she was married, so she smiled when she noticed—who I was. But I was very polite. 'Are Mr. and Mrs. Smith at home?' I asked. 'Yes, Mr. Brown,' says she. 'Are they engaged at present?' 'Why, Mr. Brown!' cried the little girl, blushing, 'they're married!'—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

WHY THEY RETIRED.

Two gentlemen who were playing cards at a club recently were annoyed by other members who stood behind their chairs and interested themselves in the game. Finally one of the players asked a spectator to play the hand for him until he returned. The spectator took the cards, whereupon the first player left the room. Pretty soon the second player followed the example of the first. The two substitutes played for some time, when one of them asked the waiter where the two original players were. "They are playing cards in the next room, sir," was the waiter's reply.—Tit Bits.

WITH THE BOYS.

"When we are married, we will often go out for a little skate." "If you are like most married men, you will often go out for one."

Know Some Steps.

He cannot dance the two-step, but do not think him dumb. Just ask him some plain question—You'll see him side-step some.

Moral Certainty.

"That pome you had in the paper the other morning about a man trying to walk upstairs straight and silent like when he comes home late at night with a bun on reminds me of an experience of my own," postcards a contrib. "Not that I get buns, but I tried to get in the other night without disturbing my wife. She heard my stealthy steps and it scared her almost voiceless. 'Is—is th-th-that you, S-s-steve?' she squealed. 'Yes, dear,' I answered. 'Are you sure?' she persisted. 'Well, as I said before, I don't bring home buns, so I was reasonably sure.'"

Why Consider Them?

"I think the school teachers in this town ought to get more money than they do." "What put that kind of an idea in your head?" "Why should we expect the people who are educating our children to work for $70 or $80 a month, when we pay our chauffeurs at least $100 and furnish them with board and lodging besides?" "But what does school teachin' amount to, anyhow? Look at most of the teachers. They ain't got nothin' but education."

IN THE HOUSE.

The Fair Visitor—How funny it is to call the man speaker, when he hardly says anything at all! Her Escort—My dear girl, most people who say little are considered the best conversationalists.

CAUGHT.

"Johnny, won't you help me get out?" "Ain't youse de cheap skate wot calls on sis? Well, cough up a quarter if you want yer life saved."

Slipping.

There is a man in our town who has a wondrous thirist: He has not had a single drink since Jan. 1.

Words Fall.

"What do you suppose that brute did? Wanted to measure my finger." "For a diamond ring, eh?" "For a thimble. No wonder us women are on the war path these days."

At the Ladies' Club.

"So you didn't enjoy the club meeting?" "No, it was very dull." "Wasn't there a quorum present?" "Every member was present." "I should think that would have meant an interesting meeting." "Silly. With every member present there was no one for us to talk about."

Artistic Enthusiasm.

"I always have stage fright," apologized Mr. Stormington Barnes, "when I assume a new role." "Don't get nervous," replied the manager of the Crimson Gulch opera house. "Only don't play anything but comedy. The last time tragedy was tried here the boys got excited and took sides in the fight."

Very Likely.

Reginald Vanderbilt has rented a $7,000 flat in New York. "What's the matter with Reginald? Does he also find it too expensive to buy coal and hire a man to run the furnace?"

It has been published here for several winters and hundreds of the worst cases cured by it in a short time. From your drug-gist get one ounce of Toris Compound (in original sealed package) and one ounce of syrup of Sarsaparilla compound. Take these two ingredients home and put them into a half pint of good whiskey. Shake the bottle and take a tablespoonful before each meal and at bedtime. Results come the first day. If your druggist does not have Toris Compound in stock he will get it in a few hours from his wholesale house. Don't be influenced to take some patent medicine instead of this. Insist on having the genuine Toris Compound in the original one-ounce, sealed, yellow package. Published by the Globe Pharmaceutical Laboratories of Chicago.

WOMAN SICK FOURTEEN YEARS

Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Eikhart, Ind.—"I suffered for fourteen years from organic inflammation, female weakness, pain and irregularities. The pains in my sides were increased by walking or standing on my feet and I had such awful bearing down feelings, was depressed in spirits and became thin and pale with dull, heavy eyes. I had six doctors from whom I received only temporary relief. I decided to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial and also the Sanative Wash. I have now used the remedies for four months and cannot express my thanks for what they have done for me. If these lines will be of any benefit you have my permission to publish them."—Mrs. SADIE WILLIAMS, 455 James Street, Eikhart, Indiana.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotic or harmful drugs, and to-day holds the record of being the most successful remedy for female ill we know of, and thousands of voluntary testimonials on file in the Pinkham laboratory at Lynn, Mass., seem to prove this fact.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

KEEP YOUR CHIN UP

"Keep Your Chin Up" is the first commandment in the Decalogue of Winning, according to the Raton Range, which further says: Get busy at the first job that you run into or that runs into you. Tackle it "on all fours" if necessary. Center your whole enthusiasm in it. Drive your very heart interest into it.

But don't forget to keep your chin up. People who look down never get much of an idea of the sky where the stars are set. And the fellow who doesn't hitch at least one or two of his wagons to a star never gets very high up. Get your eye off the ground. Look ahead.

Keep your chin up. For, after all winning is a thing within—then out. No other man will or can win for you. No other man in all the world, no matter how exalted, has the ability and power that is concentrated in your waiting for some match of action to touch it off. But you alone must find the thing and do the work. It's great fun, too, if you—

Keep your chin up. It is easier to win than to fail. Everybody sides with the winner. But the failure walks alone.

Keep your chin up. Remembering that to win is to do your best—today. The thing delayed or put off is the thing undone. Start right now. Straighten your shoulders. Set your eyes ahead. Clench your fist—close your jaw, and—

Keep your chin up. And you will win.

THREE-YEAR HOMESTEAD ELECTION—ACT OF AUGUST 24, 1912.

The following instructions were issued by the Department of the Interior, General Land Office, at Washington, to registers and receivers of United States Land offices, October 1, 1912:

"Sirs—Your attention is directed to the following provision in the act approved August 24, 1912 (public, No. 302), making appropriation for sundry civil expenses of the government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1913:

"That the failure of a homestead entryman to give notice of making his proof as required by the act of June 6, 1912, being an act to amend sections twenty-two hundred and ninety-one (2291) and twenty-two hundred and ninety-seven (2297) of the revised statutes of the United States, relating to homesteads, shall not in any way prejudice his rights to proceed in accordance with the law under which such entry was made.

"In view of the foregoing paragraph 22, circular No. 142 of July 15, 1912, (41 L. D., 103), is no longer in force.

"In this connection you will observe the following provisions of paragraphs 18 and 19 of said circular:

"(18) By the section I am authorized, under rules and regulations to be prescribed by me, to reduce the required area of cultivation. Acting thereunder, I have prescribed the following rule to govern action on proof where the homestead entry was made prior to June 6, 1912, but, through failure of election, must be adjudicated under the new law.

"Respecting cultivation necessary to be shown upon such entry, in all cases where, upon considering the whole record, the good faith of the entryman appears, the proof will be acceptable if it shows cultivation of at least one-sixteenth for the next year and each succeeding year until final proof, without regard to the particular year of the homestead period in which the cultivation of the one-sixteenth was performed.

"(19) The new law also requires that the proof shall be made within five years from date of entry, and if the entry is to be administered under that law the department is not authorized to extend the period within which proof may be made, but when submitted after that time in the absence of adverse claims, the entry may be submitted to the board of equitable adjudication for confirmation.

"Very respectfully,
S. V. PROUDFIT,
Assistant Commissioner.
Approved: SAMUEL ADAMS,
First Assistant Secretary."

TROTS IN LIFELIKE FASHION

Foy in Form of Galloping Horse Invented by Kentucky Man—Operated by Means of Crank.

An amusing toy in the form of a galloping horse has been designed by a Kentucky man. It is particularly appropriate these days when mechanical toys are absorbing the youth of the land. The body of the horse is fixed to a standard rising from the base, but the forelegs and hindlegs are pivoted to the body and at their middle joints. The tail and neck are also pivoted to the body and the body of the jockey is pivoted at the hips. The horse's feet are fastened to swinging shafts that operate in the base by means of a rotatable gear. As one shaft is pushed forward the other comes backward, each carrying with it a foreleg and hindleg on the same side of the animal. The gear is operated by means of a crank and this faster the crank is turned the faster the horse trots, bobbing his head and waving his tail, while the jockey seems to urge him.

A Sugar Trust.
A sharp boy in Orangeburg walked into a grocer's shop.
"Please, mister," he said to the proprietor, "mother told me to ask you whether there is such a thing as a sugar trust?"
"Of course there is," was the answer.
"Well, then, mother wants to be trusted for two pounds."

She Admitted It.
Little Moll's father was an eminent author, and one day while he was at luncheon the little girl occupied a chair in his study. Shortly a caller was ushered in, and with a pleasant smile inquired:
"I suppose you assist your father in entertaining callers?"
"Yes, sir," replied Moll, gravely.
"How do you assist?"
"I assist by sitting on his lap."

SOME QUEER TABLE MANNERS

In Ancient Times People Were Told Not to Pick Their Teeth With Knife or Fork.

"Until the middle of the seventeenth century," writes Rose M. Bradley in the English Housewife, "forks were a luxury, treated rather as toys, elegant, with jeweled handles, wherewith the ladies might pick daintily at their sweetmeats." Before the carving fork was introduced paper covers were placed over those portions of the meat which had to be grasped with the left hand. The paper frills, sometimes seen nowadays on cutlet bones are said by the author to be a survival of the old custom. After smarting under foreign criticisms on their table manners, Englishmen turned to French "Rules of Civility," and others were compiled in English.

Readers were warned "not to wipe knife or fork on bread or the cloth, but on napkins." They were also requested "not to pick their teeth at table with knife or fork." "Lady Rich's Closet of Rarities," published in 1653, begs each gentlewoman to "observe to keep her body straight, and lean not by any means with her elbow, nor by ravenous gesture discover a voracious appetite."
Nor must she talk with her mouth full of meat nor "smack like a pig," nor eat spoon meat so hot that the tears stand in her eyes. "It is very uncomely," the author adds, "to drink so large a draft that your breath is almost gone and you are forced to recover yourself. Throwing down your liquor as into a funnel is an action fitter for a juggler than a gentleman."

FUNNY MAN AT PICNIC PARTY

Wooden Horse Can Jump as High as Eiffel Tower, He Says in Spinning Latest Yarn.

Being a funny man, he was at it again. Seated on the grass in the midst of the picnic party, he was spinning the latest yarn.

"I say," he remarked to those assembled, "I bet you can't answer this riddle."

"Well, what is it?" asked a chorus of voices.

"Can you name an animal that has eyes and cannot see, legs and cannot walk, but can jump as high as the Eiffel tower?"

All racked their brains and there was a deep silence for a moment.

"I don't know," remarked some one. "I give it up."

The rest of the party also signified inability to solve the riddle.

"The answer," said the funny man, "is a wooden horse. It has eyes and cannot see and legs and cannot walk."

"Yes, but how does it jump as high as the Eiffel tower?" came the triumphant shout.

"The Eiffel tower," said the funny man as he made preparations for hurried departure, "can't jump at all!"—

PUZZLE OF SPINNING WHEELS

Object is to Find Smallest Number of Straight Lines in Which Each Wheel May Be Enclosed.

What is the smallest number of straight lines which can be drawn within this square so as to isolate each of the wheels within separate boundaries?

This diagram shows that the seven wheels, which spin so merrily when the paper is rotated in the hand, can be divided off into separate inclosures by only three straight lines.

While solving this, rotate the paper in your hand and see the wheels spin.

FALL PLOWING ON DRY FARM

Fourteen-Inch Gang Plow Should Average Five Acres Daily or 150 Acres in Month.

(By W. R. PORTER, Superintendent North Dakota Demonstration Farm.)
Fall plowing should be done as early as possible, as more weed seeds are started in early plowing. The stubble decays better and more nitrates are formed and other plant food is liberated in larger quantities. Early fall plowing can be plowed deeper than late fall plowing without so much soil at once from below. Early barley stubble can be plowed to good advantage before the general wheat harvest. A 14-inch gang plow traveling 18 miles a day will plow five acres. In a week it would turn over 20 acres of land. If there is any delay in threshing or stacking the grain due to wet weather or high winds, the gang plow should be started, even if the shocks are on the field. They can be set over on the plowed land with but little difficulty by the operator of the plow. From 75 to 125 shocks will have to be set over a day or from four to seven shocks per mile the plow travels. A shock can readily be set over in from 60 to 90 seconds, thus taking from four to ten minutes per mile. The horses should have this much time to rest, so there is practically no loss of time in plowing land before the shocks are removed. It is simply an inconvenience for the operator of the plow, as he has to stop frequently and set a grain shock over on the plowed land. Set the gang plows going as early as you can and keep them going every day you possibly can until the fall plowing is done. A 14-inch gang plow should average five acres a day, or 150 acres a month. On lands that are not inclined to drift or pack down hard a section of a harrow can be hauled after each plow to very good advantage.

WEEDS REDUCE CROP YIELDS

Interesting and Instructive Experiment Conducted at North Dakota Agricultural College.

(By W. C. PALMER, Agricultural Editor, North Dakota Agricultural College.)

That weeds reduce yields is evident. To get some idea of how much weeds might reduce yields I selected a field that was weedy with pigeon grass, the wheat was ripe. I measured out a square yard at several places, pulled the weeds carefully so as not to disturb the wheat. The weight of the weeds without roots was as follows: 91 ounces, 84 ounces, 84 ounces, 84 ounces, and 80 ounces, making an average of 84 ounces per square yard. The first one is quite a little above the average. If that is left out the average will be 66 ounces to the square yard, or three and three-fourths pounds. This would make 14,820 pounds to the acre. A sample of weeds was dried and gave 21 per cent. dry weight, or 3,648 pounds of dry matter, one and one-half tons, or enough to reduce the yield of wheat 25 bushels, provided wheat could have made as good use of the moisture and plant food. One thing is certain, and that is that the growing of these weeds used up 2,100 tons of water, the equivalent of 18 inches of rainfall and that is rain that was actually in the soil where the wheat could have secured it. It is an expensive thing to have on the farm.

Disking Stubble Field.

If you have any stubble ground that wasn't plowed last fall go over it with a disk before plowing next spring. This will not only aid in conserving moisture, but it will also enable you to produce a better seed bed later on.

The best farmers are disking before plowing as well as after plowing nowadays. The great problem is to save moisture. Your crop may be measured by the amount of moisture you conserve in your soil. There isn't going to be an overabundance next year.

Wintering Cattle on Alfalfa.

A Nebraska bulletin says: Under conditions existing on most farms a ton of good, bright alfalfa hay is worth about the same as a ton of wheat, brass or shorts, possibly more. Missouri reports that for wintering yearling cattle alfalfa in its best condition is without doubt more efficient than either clover or cowpea hay. The New Mexico station fed two-year-old range steers, averaging 542 pounds, on alfalfa alone and secured a gain of 206 pounds per steer in 120 days. The Utah station reports a test in which 100 pounds of gain from feeding alfalfa hay to cattle cost $3.76; from timothy, $4.71; from corn fodder, $3.31.

Drugs for Horses.

Never give drugs to a horse, any more than you would to a baby, unless he is downright sick. Blasting off his feed will cure many minor ills.

Keep Out Snappers.

See that the sleeping quarters of the pigs are so arranged that no rain will drift in and cause dampness to settle there.

FARMER BURNS MEETS CHAMPION GOTCH

"Farmer" Burns and His Famous Pupil.

FARMER BURNS was given the surprise of his life on December 19, 1899, at Fort Dodge, Ia. That surprise package was in the form of an agile, bouncing youth labeled "Frank Gotch, from Humboldt, Ia." The "Farmer," accompanied by an "Americanized Turk," was out meeting all comers, and the country lad, untutored in the fine points of the game, happened to be the "comer" who came forward, among several others, to try to get some of "Farmer" Burns' money.

A delegation of Humboldt townsmen and country folk who had seen Gotch defeat Marshall Green, the chicken picker, and had watched him give battle to Dan McLeod for nearly two hours, accompanied Gotch to Fort Dodge to watch him battle Burns.

McLeod had told Burns about the wonderful young wrestler he had encountered at Luverne, and Burns decided not to risk defeat for his Turk, whom he had dressed for the occasion.

"You had better not tackle that Turk, my lad, he will kill you," said Burns to Gotch.

Gotch says that he knew "Farmer" Burns' protest was not a genuine "Terrible Turk," but he let the "Farmer" think he was scared. "It was Burns, not his Turk, I wanted to wrestle," he said, "and Burns wanted to wrestle me, so everyone was satisfied."

"I was surprised at Gotch's strength," relates Burns.

"I had never encountered a young wrestler of his remarkable agility and strength, but at that time he knew absolutely nothing about wrestling. I decided to rough him for a time, tire him out and then fasten some effective hold to pin his shoulders to the mat. Gotch was eager to remain fifteen minutes and draw down the $25 I had promised to forfeit to the wrestler 'sticking' that time."

Burns soon discovered, to his dismay, that the youngster knew more about "roughing it" than about wrestling; and then rushed in and slammed him to the mat with a leg and arm hold, but Gotch was up in a flash.

"Stay with him, Frank," yelled a Humboldt backer. "Stick, Frank," chorused a hundred other friends, eager to see their "find" make good.

Burns shifted from one position to another with lightning like rapidity until he put Gotch down with a leg hold. Then he tried a half nelson but discovered that he could not budge the Humboldt lad. Hammerlocks, bar arms, head locks and many other holds were tried on the "comer" in rapid succession, and by sheer strength Gotch broke every grip his experienced opponent fastened to him.

Finally Burns fastened the double nelson grip to Gotch's arms and neck, locking his fingers over the youth's head. Gotch wriggled around until his feet dangled over the footlights. He hooked his toes over the edge of the platform and as Burns tried in vain to tip him, the crowd roared with laughter. Glancing down Burns saw what the youngster had "pulled" on him and shoved Gotch away from his position of vantage. Then ensued a struggle the spectators have never forgotten. Gotch, by sheer strength, lifted "Farmer" Burns off the floor while he had the double nelson, bringing prolonged cheers from the Humboldt fans.

Burns shifted to a crotch, and as he tipped Gotch over on his shoulders for a moment the referee patted the veteran on the back in token of victory. They had wrestled eleven minutes and forty seconds, Burns, coming to the footlights, addressed the crowd as follows:

"Ladies and Gentlemen: I have never met an amateur wrestler like the like of this fellow in my life. If he will go with me, I will make him champion of America in a few months." Burns later made good on that promise.

HIS DEEP SCHEME

Peter's Philanthropy Proved to Be Rather Two-Sided Affair.

BY JANE OSBORNE.

When pretty Marion Drew, after three years in society, took up settlement work and gave up her Saturday mornings at the country club for the sake of teaching the "little mothers" of the tenements the art of sewing, a decided damper was cast on country club activity. Half a dozen young men who had shared the honors of Marion's companionship on the links, and on the courts, tried in various ways to dissuade her from her philanthropic activities. She would catch something, get some terrible germ from one of her children—that was the first argument. She would be unable to teach them anything they didn't know; she would make a public spectacle of herself, get her name in the papers, have to associate with "a lot of freak philanthropists." None of these arguments had the slightest effect on Marion.

The strange thing about it was that the young man who had hitherto enjoyed more of Marion's society than his less favored rivals, the most ardent lover of Saturday morning sports, Peter Meeker, made no effort to dissuade Marion. The fact is Peter had deeper schemes.

Two weeks after Marion had begun the "settlement game," as Peter and his friends referred to her activities, Peter also discovered a set of long dormant humanitarian motives somewhere in his make up, and decided to go into settlement work, too. So while Marion taught the art of sewing with the view of making more useful mothers and wives of the little girls in her class, Peter was teaching their none too tractable brothers the art of basketball with the aim of making more useful citizens out of them. That is, that was his avowed motive. Peter taught his boys on Friday evenings and Marion taught her girls on Saturday mornings, so they seldom saw each other at the settlement house. Meantime, Peter became friendly with all the authorities on settlement work he could manage to meet, informed himself on the intricacies of teaching basketball and useful citizenship and, on all occasions, spread the story of Marion's wonderful success as a settlement worker.

"She began two weeks ago with only ten little girls," he would tell their mutual friends, "and since then her class has grown to twenty." He didn't add that the reason for this increase in membership was an ice cream feast served on his order.

"Marion is a wonder at that sort of work," he would go on, "and I have no doubt that she will make it her life work."

News of the ice cream party spread through the neighborhood with wonderful effect and in another week the twenty had increased to thirty. Marion was glad they appreciated the treat, she told them. It had been given to them by a "friend of theirs," and she wanted the secretary of the little club to write a letter of thanks to this "friend." This Marion did in order to instill habits of politeness and gratitude in her small charges.

"But, teacher," said one of the class to Marion, "you ought to thank the friend—cause the friend must have done it for you. The friend has never seen us, and people don't give parties to people they haven't seen."

This was sound logic certainly, but Marion met it.

"But this friend has heard a great deal about you. Now I am sure our little secretary can write a nice letter."

The bright-eyed little secretary was pensive for a few minutes. Then she raised her hand and asked:

"Teacher, what must I call the friend?"

"Oh," said Marion, with a blush that did not escape the keen eyes of her little secretary. "I think you won't need to use the friend's name. I will deliver the letter for you."

The secretary chewed the end of her pencil in thought. "Yes, but, teacher," she finally asked, "is it a lady friend or a gentleman friend—cause on account of the 'Dear Sir' or the 'Dear Madam' at the top. The teacher at school said we should begin letters that way. Before long the letter was written. 'Dear Sir,' it began, 'we thank you for the grand ice cream you gave us. Our mothers and fathers say, 'What a nice teacher we must have to have such a rich friend to give us such a treat.' We hope you will come to see us soon sometime.'"

Marion read the letter and, though, it was not quite what she had expected, she put it in her knapsack, and that night posted it to Peter without comment.

Thus encouraged, Peter ordered another ice cream treat for the following week; but this time the roll of the class had reached forty, and as news of this second treat went the rounds of the neighborhood, the same result ed sixty. It was really a marvelous success. Never since the settlement house had been established had any one had such a popular class as had Marion. But it would have taken a far more resourceful settlement worker than Marion to keep sixty little girls busy sewing without feeling the strain.

"Say, teacher," said one of them to Marion one day, as she encircled Marion's slender waist with her little arm. "We wished you taught us school."

"Yes, teacher," added another little girl. "We were saying how grand it would be if you taught us school. And, say, teacher," she whispered in confidence to Marion, "my father knows a policeman who knows an alderman, with a pull and maybe he could get a teaching job for you. You don't get paid for teaching here, but at real school teaching you get rich."

A prominent member of the sewing class poo-pooed the idea. "Teacher don't have to work. She is going to get married. Aren't you, teacher? Sure, teacher is going to marry the rich gentleman that sends the ice cream. Aren't you, teacher?"

Marion was still blushing from the effects of this remark when an auspicious silence fell on the crowd of children and all eyes were focussed on the door. Then a chorus broke out. "Teacher, here is your friend. Here is your gentleman friend," and Marion turned around to see the beaming face of Peter.

Poor Marion was never so confused in her life as she was at this minute. Of course, she was glad Peter had come, but having to speak to him with 120 bright and eager eyes fixed upon her made her for the time being wish she had never gone in for settlement work. However, Marion managed to welcome the visitor and introduce him to the class. Then to Marion's surprise he stepped before the class and smiled and started to talk. He was proud, he said, to know the sewing class. He had decided to give them a picnic. He would arrange to charter a little steamer and would take them for an all-day sail next Saturday. They were all to come and bring their brothers and sisters, he told them, and he would ask Miss Drew to see that they had a good time.

Marion gasped, but no one noticed it, for the class of children was off come with joy and excitement. Finally, at the stroke of the hour for dismissal, Marion got the little girls, with some difficulty, to file out of the building. Then she came back to Peter waiting for her in the class room.

"Peter," she said, holding two hands out to him. "You are the kindest man in the world. I never knew it was in you. It is so wonderful to feel that you take pleasure in this, too, when everyone else criticizes me for it." There were tears of weariness in her soft brown eyes, that made them glow with more warmth and sympathy than Peter had ever seen in them before.

He had intended to make a clean breast of it, and tell her the truth, that he wasn't interested in the work at all, but had done it all because of his interest in her; that he had sent the "parties" to the children so that the class would get too large for her to handle, and she would be forced to give it up and so come back to the club activities; that he had told people of her success so that they would weary her with their comments—but now as he looked at her he hadn't the heart to spoil her enthusiasm over his interest. Besides he had really enjoyed the sewing class and the prospect of spending next Saturday with Marion. Making a boat load of poor children happy was much more alluring than the prospect of sharing her society with a half a dozen other young men at the club.

"Marion dear," Peter said, encouraged by what she had just said to him, "I know you meant what you said when you said 'No' before, but won't you give me another chance?"

Marion was perplexed, and then the sound of childish voices was heard again in the hall.

"I knew he was a swell when he sent the first party," one of the little girls was saying, "but I never knew he was such a big swell till I saw him."

Another voice broke in. "Say, isn't teacher lucky? Maybe they are married already."

Peter smiled at Marion, and Marion looked up with happiness in her eyes. "Yes, Peter," she whispered. "I am lucky, but let's escape before they see us."

Tip From the Admiral.

Admiral George Dewey, complimented on his superb health on his seventy-fifth birthday, smiled and said: "I attribute my good condition to plenty of exercise and no banquets. We eat, you see, too much. One-third of what a man eats enables him to live."

"In that case," said the reporter, "what becomes of the other two-thirds?"

"Oh, that enables the doctor to live," Admiral Dewey replied.

LIKE JEAN VALJEAN

Boy Escapes Reformatory and Turns Over New Leaf.

Youth, Now Married, Writes Mother—Superintendent of School He Escaped From Causes His Arrest and Governor is Asked to Pardon.

Denver, Colo.—Victor Hugo's story of Jean Valjean in "Les Misérables" is duplicated in many of the circumstances surrounding an eighteen-year-old Colorado boy who three years ago ran away from the industrial school at Golden, worked himself into a good position and then, a year after he had been married to a Des Moines, Iowa, girl, found his past rising behind him, relentless as Hugo's Inspector Javert.

Six years ago Rosie E. Sheldon's father died at Glenwood Springs. A year later the boy was sent to the industrial school for boys at Golden as incorrigible. The intervening year the mother had lost all control over him and it was at her request that he was taken in charge by the state.

The state made a poor job of reforming Sheldon, its method of curing high spirits did not succeed, and Sheldon ran away. The first few times he ran away he was caught and brought back. Early in 1910 he managed to slip away and stay lost. The officers looked for him a few weeks and then gave up the search, although they did not forget.

Sheldon went to Des Moines, Iowa, and there started out to do what the big state of Colorado had not been able to do. He started out to reform himself.

He got a job in the big Cowles glove factory at $10 a week, commenced to save his money and to go to night school. Before long his salary was raised, and then pretty soon it was raised again, and he was given a responsible position.

FINGER PRINT IS OUTDONE

Accused Burglar Comes to Grief in France When Imprint of Tooth in Butter is Viewed.

Paris.—Even the finger-print method of obtaining evidence against criminals has been outdone by the police in establishing a burglar's identity from the tooth marks which he left in a pat of butter.

Pierre Bessand, held on a charge of burglary, broke into his former employer's premises at Montreal-Bon-Bois. Failing to discover any valuables, he went to the kitchen and had a feast. When arrested he denied the charge, but the police found the marks of his teeth, including one which was broken, exactly reproduced in a lump of butter into which he had probably bitten by mistake in the dark.

Bessand still protested his innocence, but when the magistrate before whom he was arraigned, sent for some butter and made the prisoner bite into it, the same irregular impression was obtained.

NEW YORK CAPITAL OF VICE

S. H. London So Calls It—Finds 4,100 Men Take Profits of 25,000 Women.

New York.—With his evidence reduced to the matter of fact form of a card index, Samuel H. London, formerly prosecuting attorney of El Paso, Tex., who said he was semi-officially connected with the department of justice at Washington, has laid before the alderman committee which is investigating police conditions here the result of his seven years' study of the white slave traffic. He called New York the capital of commercialized vice and said that, with the assistance of fourteen agents placed at his disposal by the government, he had carried on investigations "from Fairbanks in Alaska to the canal zone."

Mr. London declared that his census in New York revealed that there were 6,100 men profiting from commercialized vice, in which 25,000 women were involved. He charged that the police officials aided the traffickers. He believed that only individual policemen were concerned in the business and doubted that the number of these officers would exceed 100 out of 19,000 men on the force.

He promised the boy that although he couldn't let him go he would take an appeal direct to the governor of Colorado and ask him to grant a pardon to the runaway boy who had made good.

Governor Shaforth said that he would act in the case as soon as it was officially called to his attention and would take whatever action the facts might warrant.

Superintendent Fred L. Paddelford of the school declared that the boy must be returned to the school "for the sake of discipline."

"The fact that Sheldon is married and apparently doing all right now can't be taken as any excuse," the superintendent said. "The only way we have to preserve order here and to prevent the boys running away whenever they get tired of staying is to make severe example of them when they are caught."

"If Sheldon were made an exception

BURNING COAL FIELD FOUND

Seams of Blazing Fuel Discovered in Duchy of Altenburg, Germany.

Berlin.—What is described as a burning coal field has been discovered at Haselbach, in the duchy of Altenburg. Engineers declare that the fire beneath the ground has been going on for years. Mysterious fissures appeared beneath a factory and shafts were sunk. At a depth of 15 feet seams of blazing coal were encountered.

Should the insured leave Germany permanently during the first ten years, he has no claim for the return of premiums paid and loses his rights to benefits under the act. As the majority of foreigners remain only two or three years, coming largely for the purpose of studying, few will have claims on the premiums paid.

Only such persons as were insured in foreign insurance companies doing business in Germany are exempted from the provisions of the law. There is but one American company doing business in Germany.

Girl Has Narrow Escape. Baltimore.—Mildred Arthur, aged thirteen, lay on the bed to study her lesson, a lighted candle at her side. She fell asleep. She was roused by Papa Arthur and the bedclothes and mattress landed in the gutter outside. Damage slight.

RESENT TAX IN GERMANY

Complaint by Foreigners on New Insurance Levy—Workers Especially Feel Burden.

Berlin.—Foreigners employed in Berlin and other German cities whose salary or income is $100 a month or less are complaining bitterly over the new government insurance law which went into effect the first of the year.

This new law suspends all private sick insurance, which is replaced with a government insurance system. It is compulsory on foreigners residing in the empire as well as on Germans. So far as foreigners are concerned, it affects principally teachers, government, office employees, etc. The annual cost varies from $4 a year for those whose salary does not exceed $155 a year to $70 annual premium for those whose salary is between $160 and $165 a month.

The law provides that half of the cost of insurance must be paid by the employer and half by the insured. As a salary of $100 a month also falls for an annual income tax of $70, such an employe is compelled to pay $8 a month for tax and insurance.

Should the insured leave Germany permanently during the first ten years, he has no claim for the return of premiums paid and loses his rights to benefits under the act. As the majority of foreigners remain only two or three years, coming largely for the purpose of studying, few will have claims on the premiums paid.

Only such persons as were insured in foreign insurance companies doing business in Germany are exempted from the provisions of the law. There is but one American company doing business in Germany.

AN IDEAL SUNDAY NEWSPAPER

Recent issues of Sunday Record-Herald remind one that Chicago may fairly lay claim to producing the best newspaper in the world, not excepting those of New York. The Sunday Record-Herald, in foreign news alone, has its own special cable service in addition to those of the New York Herald, World, Journal of Commerce and Associated Press. This is a fair example of the completeness of the paper in every department.

Aside from the regular news features, there is something in The Sunday Record-Herald for every member of the family. The sporting pages, both daily and Sunday give the latest authentic news in every line of sport. The woman's section is filled with illustrated articles on the newest wrinkles in fashion and domestic science. "The People's Institute of Domestic Economy," filling a whole page every Sunday, is the newest and best household department in any paper. Dame Curtaey's "Novelties in Entertainment" is a valued feature. The dramatic and musical pages, written by James O'Donnell Bennett and Felix Borowski are admittedly their equal in the west. The array of splendid special articles by skilled writers, finely illustrated, also is typical of the high literary quality of The Record-Herald. In the way of humor there is the comic colored supplement for children, besides S. E. Kiser's delightful "Alternating Currents" for everybody.

But the thing that lifts The Sunday Record-Herald most emphatically above all its rivals is its magazine section—a real magazine, full of stories and articles by the most famous writers of our day. Illustrated by celebrated artists, its recent $10,000 prize contest has attracted to its pages the work of the best short story writer in our language. No wonder The Record-Herald is regarded as the ideal Sunday newspaper!

SYNOPSIS.

Harding Kent calls on Louise Farrish to propose marriage and finds the house in great excitement over the attempted suicide of her sister Katharine. Kent starts an investigation and finds that Hugh Crandall, auditor for Katharine, who had been forbidden the house by General Farrish, had talked with Katharine over the telephone just before she shot herself. A torn piece of yellow paper is found, at sight of which General Farrish is stricken with paralysis.

I stopped in the hall to examine the telephone book, hoping it might give me his home address, but it contained only the office of his firm. However, I had no difficulty in finding in the library the volume I sought—the club directory—and turning to his name I saw that he was a member of both the University and the Harvard.

As I was a member of the University myself I had no difficulty in getting Crandall's address over the telephone. Loath as I was to leave Louise alone, I felt that prompt action was demanded, so I took my departure at once.

"If I find Crandall I will bring him back with me so that you may hear all he has to say. Whether or not I succeed, I will return within an hour. My friend, the post office inspector, lives somewhere but in Jersey, but I will see him—the first thing in the morning."

The grateful look Louise gave me as I left imbued me with a new and wholly delightful sense of responsibility. The ten minutes it took me to reach Crandall's rooms were filled with that incoherent bliss that comes to every man who realizes for the first time what it means to have a woman's confidence entirely his.

Crandall lived in one of those remodeled mansions so common in that part of Fifth avenue from which the families have fled before the advance of traffic. The basement and first floor were given over to shops and the upper floors to bachelor apartments. I had no difficulty in finding among the doorplates the name I sought, but repeated ringing brought no response. Determined not to leave until I had learned his whereabouts I gave the janitor's bell a vigorous push.

"Where can I find Mr. Crandall?" I asked as soon as he appeared. His manner made it evident that he considered my question an impertinence, but I had met Fifth avenue janitors before.

"I am a lawyer," I persisted. "I must see Mr. Crandall tonight on an important matter."

"You won't," he replied, almost respectfully it seemed to me.

"Why not?" I demanded sharply.

"What do you mean?"

My manner was not without its effect.

"He's gone away," the man explained a little more respectfully.

"Gone!" I exclaimed. Here was a new mystery, or perhaps the explanation of the first one. It may have been his departure that had depressed Katharine so.

"Where has he gone? When did he go? How long will he be away?" I yelled.

Exasperatingly he delayed his reply. At last it seemed to occur to him that I was not making these inquiries purely for his amusement. Somewhat more politely than at first, he answered: "Only an hour or two ago—about three o'clock it was—he came raking down into my room with his keys in his hand. 'Mike,' says he, 'I'm going away tonight. I may be gone a week and I may be gone a month. I don't know how long. Here are my keys and don't let nobody into my rooms while I'm away, on any pretext whatever.' And wid that he was late a taxicab and off before I could be saying my thanks for the bill he left in my hand."

Crandall suddenly gone. Katharine dying by her own hand, General Farrish stricken, all within two hours. I knew now there must be some connection between these events. More than ever I was anxious to find Crandall, yet I felt that the janitor had told me all he knew. I could see in the young broker's departure guilty knowledge of the shadow descending on the Farrish home. Surely his flight was conscious.

There was nothing to be gained by further questioning of the janitor. From the manner of Crandall's departure it would be useless to look for him at either of the clubs to which he belonged. I might try to trace him through the taxicab, which he had probably called from the University last night, but that could wait until later. Just now I felt it my duty to hasten back to Louise and tell her of this new development.

As I turned from the door a news-boy with an armful of evening "extras" thrust one at me. Impatiently I waved him away.

"All about the suicide," he bawled as he darted off after another passer-by.

Quickly I pursued him and fairly snatched one of his papers from him. Had the reporters, after all, learned of the tragedy in the Farrish home? Doctor Wilcox and I had discussed the matter of notifying the police and the coroner. We both felt that it would be wiser not to communicate with them, for such a course would inevitably bring publicity.

There was enough agony in the Farrish home without having this sorrowful secret blazoned to a curious world in three-inch type, without having a horde of reporters and camera men constantly surrounding the house. Besides, if Katharine recovered, sooner or later she would be sure to learn what the papers had said. The knowledge that her foolish crime against herself had been thus sensationally proclaimed would be a blow from which the sensitive girl—hitherto jealously shielded—would never recover. If she should not recover—Doctor Wilcox and I were trusting to chance to find a way of explaining her death. The servants—all of them trustworthy and long in service—had been cautioned not to talk to anyone about the afternoon's events. The doctor's aides and nurses, of course, had been silent. This in part of their business. How, then, had the papers obtained the news so quickly? I could think of but one possible way. More than likely some telephone girl who had heard Louise calling Doctor Wilcox had given it to the press. Even in the half-darkness of the middle of the block where I stood I could read the word "S-U-I-C-I-D-E" stretched across the page in letters of red. I hastened to the corner where the double globes shed down a brilliant light, anxious yet dreading to read what the paper said. At the first glance I breathed a sigh of relief. The article was not about Katharine Farrish. I had not thought of the possibility of there having been another suicide that day, but there it was—

Mystery in Self-Murder of Aged Lawyer.

Ordinarily I pay little attention to stories of crime. But the afternoon had given me a new and bitter appreciation of the meaning of suicide. Standing there under the light of a Fifth avenue corner I read the hastily written article word by word.

Andrew Elser, the article explained, had lived for many years in a West Twenty-third street boardinghouse. Little was known about him there except that he was a lawyer. Several years ago he had given up his downtown office. Most of his income was derived from his fees as custodian of an orphan boy's estate. About four o'clock in the afternoon the landlady had heard a noise in his room like that of a body falling. On entering she had found him lifeless on the floor. She had called a policeman, who sent for an ambulance. The ambulance doctor found that Mr. Elser had taken poison.

It struck me as a peculiar coincidence that two persons so far apart in the social scale as Katharine Farrish and Andrew Elser should have chosen the same hour of the same day to seek death. Was there something in astrology after all? Had the stars decreed that both should die? Had the same hour were more than a mere coincidence. Was it possible that the same shadow had fallen on both these lives? Had the same mystery driven them to a death-pact?

It seemed absurd. It was unlikely that Katharine Farrish had ever heard of Andrew Elser. If the family had known him Louise would have mentioned it. And yet—why had these two persons sought to die on the same hour of the same day? The question would not let me sleep that night.

CHAPTER III.

The Second Clue.

"I can't do it, Harding. You are asking an impossibility."

I was sitting in Inspector Davis' room in the post-office building. The first thing in the morning I had gone there to enlist his aid in clearing up the mystery that hung over the Farrish home. With the confidence based on a friendship that had its beginnings in boyhood-association I felt sure he would do all he could to help me. I wanted, if possible, to learn through him whence had come the yellow letter.

Miller Davis, though only a year older than I, already had become one of the government's most trusted secret agents. His rise in the service had been phenomenally rapid. The robbery of the post-office where he was employed had given him his start. A little later, with the merest thread to follow, he had run to earth a skillful band of stamp-counterfeiters, and three of its members were now serving long terms. Only a year ago, when all the other inspectors had failed to find the flaw in the registry service that permitted a red-striped sack with two hundred thousand dollars' worth of registered mail to disappear, Davis, putting his keen, analytical mind on the case, within a week had discovered the flaw in the system and only a few days later had arrested the ex-convict who had profited by it.

With the natural interest of an old friend I had followed his career and was familiar with most of his brilliant achievements. Even though the scrap which was puzzling me had no envelope and bore no postmark, so confident was I in his far-reaching powers I would hardly have been amazed if he had told me all about it as soon as I showed it to him. Imagine, then, my disappointment at his absolute refusal to take up the matter at all.

"Don't you see how important it is?" I cried. "This little scrap is the key to the whole mystery."

He was sitting with his back to the light—a trick most business men have these days, so that they can see your face in full light, while you have difficulty in reading theirs—yet from his tone I felt that he was inwardly amused at my anxiety.

"I'm afraid you overrate my detective ability and my powers as a post-office inspector," he said. "While I am inclined to agree with you that this bit of paper may have some bearing on the case, there is nothing to show from what post-office it came, through whose hands it passed, or by whom it was received. It may not have come through the mail at all. More than likely some messenger brought it. Before I could I would win out. That's the secret, old chap, of my success, of everybody's success. Don't tackle things you can't do, then you never fail."

Davis' refusal was a greater blow to me than I cared to admit. Louise and I in our final conference the night before had decided that there were three undertakings: first, that it had come through the mail; second, that there was some evidence that the mails were being used for an unlawful purpose; and third, I would want to be certain before I began the investigation, that steps that would take us far into the light.

First, I was to try at once to find Hugh Crandall. I was to ask him to explain the rupture with Katharine, the attitude of General Farrish toward him, his knowledge of the yellow letter, and why he had called Katharine on the telephone the afternoon before.

Second, failing to find Crandall, I was to make some pretext for visiting his rooms. His sudden departure and his cautioning the janitor to admit no one had a suspicious look. While neither Louise nor I had discussed what might be there to explain the mystery, I was thinking that in all probability I would find a bundle of letters from Katharine, some of which might furnish a clue.

Third, I was to ask Inspector Davis to help me trace the yellow letter.

I had anticipated little difficulty in ascertaining Crandall's whereabouts. A broker of standing does not vanish overnight without informing his business partners. Before coming to the inspector I had telephoned to Crandall's office. Great was my amazement to learn from one of his partners that they were as much puzzled as I over his sudden going away. They had merely received a telegram saying that he had been called out of town unexpectedly and did not know when he would return. The telegram had been sent from an office near his rooms the night before. There was no business affair that would take him away, so they supposed, that it was some urgent personal matter.

While I chatted for a moment with Davis over our boyhood days I was thinking what step I should take next. The problems of learning Crandall's whereabouts and gaining access to his rooms did not seem so simple as they had the night before. A clerk entered with a card for Davis, and I rose to go.

"Don't go yet," he said. "It's only a man from police headquarters. His errand will probably take only a minute."

As I resumed my seat Detective Dowd was ushered into the room. He was the typical police sleuth, thick of head and foot, ready to suspect the suspicious and to see the obvious. In appearance, in speech, in manner of thought, he and the inspector were almost exact opposites. One was a grizzled, blue-eyed man of fifty whom even the clumsiest criminal could not have mistaken for anything but what he was; the other, young-looking for even his thirty years, might have been readily mistaken for a college tutor or an alert reporter. It amused me to see with what deference the man from headquarters approached him.

"Beg your pardon for disturbing you, Inspector," he said, nervously twisting his hat, "but I've got a little matter here the chief wanted me to put up to you."

He turned toward me with a suspicious glance, but Davis hastened to assure him that he could speak freely before me.

"It's this," he explained, "the old man wants to know about."

As he spoke he drew something from his inner pocket and laid it on the inspector's desk. As my eyes followed his hand I gave a sudden start. With difficulty I restrained an expression of amazement. The object about which he had come to inquire was a torn yellow envelope.

Height of Diplomacy

It was at the British embassy at Washington. A distinguished Englishman was delivering a lecture, and in his audience were many big diplomats and high-society people. Just as the lecturer spread on the ambient atmosphere his most gorgeous verbal picture, a large German tried to sit down quietly in a chair. He did sit down, achieving a transfer from the chair to the floor with a great clatter, which peered the lecturer and aroused the guests, who were all anxious to get the talk over and organize a stampede for the punch bowl. Everybody in the room turned around and gazed in the direction from which the noise had come. But that German was too smart for them. Having buried himself against the floor he stayed there, breathing a fine mixture of wax and meal which had been rubbed in preparatory to the dancing that was to come later.

After the lecture was over, Mr. Bryce, the British ambassador, found and shook hands with the astute German, remarking:

"Your fall and subsequent recovery position were the most exquisite piece of diplomacy I ever saw in Washington."—Popular Magazine.

So deep was the impression made on me by the coincidence that I took the paper with me and read the account of Elser's suicide in London. Even as I read it stood, the incredible thought came to me with startling force: Suppose that these two suicides at Munyon's Paw-Paw Pills are unlike other laxatives or cathartics. They coax the liver into activity by gentle methods, they do not scour; they do not gripe; they do not weaken; but they do start all the secretions of the liver and stomach in a way that soon puts these organs in a healthy condition and corrects constipation. They invigorate instead of weaken; they enrich the blood instead of impoverishing it; they enable the stomach to get all the nourishment from food that is put into it. Price 25 cents. All Druggists.

Literary Metrothal. Inscriptions in complimentary copies of learned works do not always serve the graceful purpose to which one was dedicated by the celebrated Professor Wilson of Edinburgh.

When the auditor for the hand of Professor Wilson's daughter had gained the young woman's approbation, she of course referred him to her father. Having stated his case, the young gentleman was asked to bid the young lady to come to her father. Her obedience was prompt.

Professor Wilson had before him for review a ponderous volume, on the fly-leaf of which was duly inscribed, "With the author's compliments."

He tore this fly-leaf out, pinned it to his daughter's dress, solemnly led her to the anxious lover—and went back to his work.—Youth's Companion.

Backache Is a Warning

Thousands suffer kidney ailments — not knowing that the backache, headache and dull, nervous, dizzy, all tired condition are often due to kidney weakness alone.

Anybody who suffers constantly from backache should suspect the kidneys. Some irregularity of the secretions may give just the needed proof.

Doan's Kidney Pills have been curing backache and sick kidneys for over fifty years.

Fuller's Earth.
Fuller's earth, so named from its earliest use in fulling wool, is a rather rare, soft, friable rock whose value depends altogether on its texture and its filtering and absorbent properties. It has no definite composition, mineralogically. Its physical properties rather than a chemical analysis determining its commercial value. Fuller's earth was first produced in the United States in the early nineties.

A DIFFERENCE.
It Paid This Man to Change Food.

"What is called 'good living' eventually brought me to a condition quite the reverse of good health," writes a N. Y. merchant.

"Improper eating told on me till my stomach became so weak that food nauseated me, even the lightest and simplest lunch, and I was much depressed after a night of uneasy slumber, unfitting me for business.

"This condition was discouraging, as I could find no way to improve it. Then I saw the advertisement of Grape-Nuts food, and decided to try it, and became delighted with the result.

"For the past three years I have used Grape-Nuts and nothing else for my breakfast and for lunch before retiring. It speedily set my stomach right and I congratulate myself that I have regained my health. There is no greater comfort for a tired man than a lunch of Grape-Nuts. It insures restful sleep, and an awakening in the morning with a feeling of buoyant courage and hopefulness.

"Grape-Nuts has been a boon to my whole family. It has made of our 2-year-old boy, who used to be unable to digest much of anything, a robust, healthy, little rascal weighing 35 pounds. Mankind certainly owes a debt of gratitude to the expert who invented this perfect food." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. "There's a reason."

METAL BOTTLE TOP REMOVER

Ordinary Table Fork Will Perform Operation With Neatness and Dispatch—Knife Also Used.

Everybody is familiar with the little metal tops used on bottles. But the general opinion is that a top can not be removed without the aid of a specially designed opener. A Philadelphia man was recently confronted with the problem of removing one of these tops without the official instrument. This is the way he did it: He took an ordinary table fork and placed one of the outside tines beneath the edge of the cap. He then took a knife and inserted the end of the blade between the other outside tine and the center one. By pressing down on the knife handle he secured just the upward pull on the edge of the crown top that is needed to dislodge it. An ingenious and simple substitute.

GOOSE LAYING SEASON HERE

Advisable to Start Upon Small Scale and Run Two Geese With Each Gander—Get Early Eggs.

One of the best seasons for purchasing geese is during the latter part of the year, for then the birds have a chance to settle down properly before the laying season, which in the case of geese begins at the end of January. It is advisable to start upon a small scale and to run two geese to each gander. They should be housed in roomy, dry floored quarters that are well ventilated without being draughty. Use dry straw as litter and renew frequently.

When the birds are of the right type the young usually take after them in this respect, but to assure size it is necessary that early eggs be produced, for unless the young are hatched early they have no time to develop before the cold days are encountered. The way to produce early eggs is to see that the birds are well fed during the autumn, a time when much of the natural food picked up is apt to be short of nutriment.

Sickness Among Fowls.
The causes for sickness among fowls can be traced to lice, filth, no grit, over-fat, sour food, leaky roofs, lack of exercise, crowded quarters, cracks in the wall, exposure to hot sun, cold houses in winter, hot houses in summer, irregularity in feeding, damp houses and runs, nor enough bulky food, impure drinking water, poorly ventilated houses, exposure to bad weather, and too much heating food in summer.

Making Stables Comfortable.
Stop the cracks and chinks in the stables. The horses and cows will not get cold outside if it isn't raining, but in the stable, with the wind blowing in through some little hole, they will actually suffer. Get in a warm room and let the cold air from outside reach you through just one little opening, if you don't believe it.

Shoing the Colt.
The first shoeing of a colt is the most important, not only in the fit of the shoes, but also in seeing that the colt is not badly scared by the forge, the unusual handling and new sounds. Horses mean to shoe are generally the result of improper handling at early shoeings.

Feeding Brood Sows.
A high protein ration increases the birth rate of the young and faster gains are made after birth than where sows remain on a ration low in protein.

Slobber in Horses.
Cabbage will sometimes cure slobber in horses, caused by eating white clover; but it is better to keep the clover away from the horses.

Needless Cruelty.
To tie up a horse so short that he cannot comfortably lie down is a needless cruelty.

Pure Bred Boar.
At any rate get a pure bred boar. Then you have half the doves thoroughbred anyway.

ECONOMY OF STEEL WHEELS

Seems to Have Large Measure of Common Sense Back of Claims Advanced in Its Favor.

The agricultural college and experiment station of the University of Wyoming has proved the value of steel wheels to its complete satisfaction, and in a recent bulletin one of the experts of that institution said:

"Low, wide-tired steel wheels will give any farmer better equipment for his work. Under all conditions of the field and nearly all conditions of the road it is estimated that broad-tired steel wheels pull from 30 to 100 per cent lighter than the narrow tires."

The steel wheel for farm use seems to have a large measure of common sense back of the claims that have been advanced in favor of it.

From the standpoint of convenience the farm wagon that has been made over into a low-down vehicle with wide steel tires has a strong appeal. It is easily loaded and overcomes all the objections to high wagons of the old type.

Users of steel wheels say their economy cannot be denied, as they make a much lighter draft, are therefore easier on the team, and, moreover, soon pay for themselves in the elimination of tire troubles, so common to wood wheels.

Their practical value is further vouched for in the experiences of those who find that wide-tired steel wheels do not cut up the pastures, do not become "mired" in soft fields or muddy roads, and do not cause the heavy pulls that "rutty" roads have always meant for narrow tires.

RAISING PONIES FOR PROFIT

Little Fellows Always Find Ready Sale in All City Markets—Cost of Rearing is Small.

Did you ever investigate the raising of the little ponies that are the delight of every child's heart? The cost of keeping the ponies would not be a great deal for a farmer who has other colts and horses to raise, and these little fellows find a ready sale in the city markets. Your own children would be made happy by the possession of a beautiful little pony, and then, of course, your neighbors' children would have to have one—so your profits would begin at once by the creation of a market for them right at home.

Pleasure and Profit.

Pigs in Clover.
Generally speaking it may be said that an acre of red clover should support eight to ten hogs for three to four months. Alfalfa should pasture twelve to twenty head for the same length of time. Alfalfa should not be pastured so closely that mowing will not be necessary. The rule should be to put on only enough hogs to allow one cutting of hay to be taken off during the pasture season.

Frogs' Legs.
Frogs' legs, at which people turned up their noses in disgust only a few years ago, have now become so popular an article of diet that no fewer than 5,000,000 frogs a year are killed in Minnesota alone to supply the demand. The northwestern frogs are the most delicate, but the biggest are the southern bullfrogs. The latter are not so sweet or tender as the former.

Mining Mules Pay.
What are called mining mules are being raised profitably in the middle west. There are two classes necessary for the occupation—the surface mules and the pit mules, the size and weight of the latter determined by the size of the tunneling. These animals are wanted to range from 600 pounds to 1,250 in weight, and twelve to sixteen hands in height. They must have deep bodies, good feet and those from five to eight years are preferred.

Harm of Too Much Grain.
It never occurs to the average farmer that the effect of a long continued diet of grain is as injurious to fowls as to cattle, nor that the concentrated grain food gives the best results when diluted or mixed with some bulky succulent material.

Reasons for Eating.
The hen has three reasons for eating: To repair the tissues of her body, to keep herself warm, and to make eggs. It therefore follows that her diet must be varied and plentiful.

Are You Subject to Constipation

Here is a Simple Way of Correcting it Instantly Before it Becomes Chronic.

Very few people go through life without some time or other being troubled with constipation. Thousands injure themselves by the use of strong cathartics, salt mineral waters, pills and similar things. They have temporary value in some cases, it is true, but the good effect is soon lost, and the more one takes of them the less effective they become.

A physic or purgative is seldom necessary, and much better and more permanent results can be obtained by using a scientific remedy like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It does not hide behind a high-sounding name, but is what it is represented to be, a mild laxative medicine. It is so mild that thousands of mothers give it to tiny infants, and yet it is so compounded, and contains such definite ingredients that it will have equally good effect when used by a person suffering from the worst chronic constipation. In fact, among the greatest endorers of Syrup Pepsin are elderly people who have suffered for years and found nothing to benefit them until they took Syrup Pepsin.

It is a fact that millions of families have Syrup Pepsin constantly in the house, homes like those of Mrs. G. B. Pruitt, Berea, Ky., who used Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin as a laxative tonic. Mrs. Pruitt writes that it so strengthened and cleansed her system that she was quickly relieved of a severe cough which had troubled her for months. The special value of this grand laxative tonic is that it is suited to the needs of every member of the family. It is pleasant-tasting, mild and non-gripping. Unlike harsh physics it works gradually and in a very brief time the stomach and bowel muscles are trained to do their work naturally again, when all medicines can be dispensed with.

MRS. G. B. PRUITT

You can obtain a bottle at any drug store for fifty cents or one dollar. The latter size is usually bought by families who already know its value. Results are always guaranteed or money will be refunded.

If no member of your family has ever used Syrup Pepsin and you would like to make a personal trial of it before buying it in the regular way of a druggist, send your address—a postal will do—to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 203 Washington St., Monticello, Ill., and a free sample bottle will be mailed you.

A couple of days later the photographer submitted proofs for her approval.

"Not one of those pictures looks anything like me," the woman insisted. The photographer tried in every way to pacify her, but finding this an impossibility, lost control of his temper: "Madam!" he exclaimed, "did you read my sign?"

"Yes."

TWO CARBUNCLES ON NECK

Veterans' Home, Napa Co., Cal.—I was afflicted with two carbuncles on the back of my neck. The doctors said they were the largest carbuncles he ever saw. I suffered the most intense agony, so much that I could not rest or sleep for about a month. One was lanced four times. When the first began to get better another broke out and was equally as painful as the first one. I heard of Cuticura Soap and Ointment being good for such things, so I procured a box of Cuticura Ointment and a cake of Cuticura Soap. I washed both the carbuncles with Cuticura Soap frequently whenever any pus began to gather, and applied the Cuticura Ointment. I felt relief after the first use of Cuticura Soap and Ointment, and in a week's time both carbuncles were gone and I was completely cured. I have not been troubled since.

"I also had eczema of the scalp. My scalp itched fearfully and pimples began to break out which swelled pus, and my head became sore and scaly. I had dandruff also. I used Cuticura Soap for a shampoo with hot water, and used the Cuticura Ointment on my scalp, and it afforded instant relief, followed by absolute cure." (Signed) George H. Wetwell, Dec. 11, 1911.
