DON'T FORGET THE SHUBERTS

The Ladies of the Home Mission Society have their arrangements perfected for the excellent musical treat to be given by Shuberts Symphony Club and ladies quartette on the evening of April 15th (Tuesday) The society do not expect to make any profit from production but offer the evening as a musical treat strictly. The price will be but seventy-five cents, at the Methodist Church.

"Thomas Valentine Purcell was the violinist chosen unanimously by the American Guild of Violinists to play upon the violins entered in the contest before that body of artists More than twenty violins were tested, and their aggregate value was over $100,000. Mr Purcell was chosen for this arduous task because he is universally acknowledged to be the peer of nearly all artists in producing a full, beautiful tone from almost any violin He played upon the instruments blindfolded and the test was absolutely fair, the same selection being played upon all the violins. It is interesting to note that one of his own violins, a Jacobus Stainer valued at $7,000, was slipped into the contest informally without his knowledge, and passed through his hands as "No. 15" without his recognizing it, and winning marks entitling it to third place if it had been formally entered. It was Mr. Purcell who created a furore twenty years ago as a five-year-old prodigy, and with his wealth of inherited talent, trained by the foremost masters of Europe and America, he is today a real violinist as well as a great artist. He will appear here with the Schubert Co , on April 15, at the M. E. Church.

SAFETY MEETING

The El Paso and Southwestern Safety Committee held a regular meeting last Sunday evening in the new Railroad Men's Club Room, recently completed but not as yet completely furnished. The meeting was fully attended and the members considered many proposals as to how to make the railroad work more safe. The discussions and actions lasted way into the night. This safety work is to be a great thing for the railroad men and means a considerable expense to the railroads, but the Southwestern is going at the matter in earnest and will do anything reasonable to make the work of their employes as safe as possible.

One of the suggestions submitted by some of the Carrizozo men was to have the tracks in the local yard set further from each other, in order to make more room between tracks. This question received considerable discussion and was referred to the central committee at El Paso.

A number of Carrizozo people were spectators at the meeting and took the opportunity of seeing inside of the magnificent club building for the first time.

—James L. Moore of Santa Rosa was a business visitor here the first of the week.

ELECT SENATORS DIRECT

Majority of States Adopt Amendment to the Constitution

HEREAFTER TO VOTE DIRECT

Direct election of United States senators became one of the provisions of the constitution Tuesday by Connecticut's ratification of the amendment to that effect.

Thirty-six states, the requisite three-fourth, have approved the change. It remains only for the governors of all states which have acted favorably to formally notify Secretary Bryan and for him to issue a proclamation announcing the change.

The amendment to the constitution is the second within the last few months.

The new amendment to the constitution, for the popular election of United States senators, is the seventeenth to be adopted. It reads:

"The senate of the United States shall be composed of two senators from each state, elected by the people thereof, for six years; and each senator shall have one vote. The electors in each state shall have the qualifications requisite for electors of the most numerous branch of the state legislatures.

"When vacancies happen in the representation of any state in the senate, the executive authority of such state shall issue writs of election to fill such vacancies, provided that the legislature of any state may empower the executive thereof to make temporary appointments until the people fill the vacancies by election as the legislature may direct."

The amedment primarily transfers the power of electing senators from the state legislatures to the people at the polls. To effect this change it was necessary to alter the machinery for the filling of vacancies in the senate

SCHOOL ELECTION

Considerable interest was manifested in the local school election last Monday when two electors were elected. One to succeed Frank Sager and one to succeed Clarence Spence. Pete Johnson and John Bell were elected for the two vacancies and Mr. Peters the old member holds over on the board. Of the 137 votes cast 37 were cast by women. The total votes cast were as follows: P. M Johnson, 119; John E. Bell, 82; Jno A. Haley, 34; Clarence Spence, 6; F. J. Sager, 16; Mrs Tiffany, 2; S. F. Miller, 1; C. S Jones, 2; J. F. Kimbell, 3; Clark Hust, 1; Jno. Doering, 1.

LADIES MEETING

It is requested that the ladies meet at the M. E. Church at 3 o'clock Friday afternoon April 11 to make plans for opening of the new Club Room. All railroad ladies invited.

—Dr. D. R. Scott of Capitan passed through Thursday on his way to Magdalena where he will locate permanently.

The seat sale will be on in a few days, and more definite announcement will be made next week Besides the production of the play "After All" there will be several specialties by members of the cast.

TO ADJUDICATE WATER

U. S. Brings suit which will Adjust all water rights in Lincoln County

NAME OVER 400 DEFENDANTS

One of the largest suits to be brought in this part of the country in some years, has been instituted by the United States through the reclamation service against the citizens of Lincoln county holding water rights along the Hondo stream system which includes the Bonito, Little Creek, Eagle Creek, Ruidoso and Hondo streams.

The El Paso and Southwestern railroad is made a party to the suit also and the matter will involve the right of said railroad to certain waters used by them on the Bonito.

If each one of the defendants hired an attorney and made an individual appearance as required, with the customary deposit of $20 00, a great hardship would be felt by all the defendants.

In view of this condition a general meeting was held in Lincoln on Tuesday at which time Senator Thos. B. Catron was present. Senator Catron will go before the United States Court at Santa Fe, and ask Judge Pope to grant the defendants a right to answer as a unit or all in one, and also to give them more time than 20 days in which to answer. If this is granted it will allow the people of the County an opportunity to get their claims to their water rights in proper shape and present them to the government.

The railroad, as a matter of course, will look after their rights in the case and Edwin Meechem of Alamogordo is already on the ground for that purpose.

While the service on over four hundred defendants is not complete in every instance, nearly all have been served by the U. S. Marshalls.

The suit will be a long drawn out affair at the best and the testimony of the individuals will undoubtedly be taken before a referee. The matter will take several years at the very best and it may be a heavy burden on some of the smaller claimants. However, when the suit is terminated all the water rights of that portion of the county will be clear and free from further litigation which will be a great benefit.

MAY TOWN CLEANING

The Carrizozo Civic League at a meeting held Tuesday made arrangements for a spring cleaning campaign for Carrizozo the first of May. The league will repeat their work of last year and the town will be cleaned from end to end. The people will be asked to contribute teams and labor to assist in the public work

The children will be asked to continually help keep the town cleaned up by putting waste papers etc in barrels to be placed in prominent places in the business district.

The Secretary of the League would like for all members to pay their 1913 dues of $1 00 as soon as convenient.

For the LITTLE ONES

PHOTOGRAPHIC FILM WASHER

Hose Arranged to Connect With Spigot of Bathtub and Sprays Strip—Handy at Home.

For the convenient handling of photographic films at home an Indiana man has invented a film washer. This consists of a rubber tube that connects with the spigot of the bath tub as a bath spray does and has a slot attachment on the other end. This attachment consists of two flat lips that work on the same principle as a paper clip. They hold one end of the film and the hose is then hung over a gas bracket or towel rack or some similar object so that it is some distance above the tub and the film can dangle its full length below. The water is then turned on and is sprayed gently over the film, washing it thoroughly and without the fingers touching it anywhere. Any spigot in the house will do quite as well, but a bucket should be provided over which the film can be hung.

LITTLE SLEEP FOR ELEPHANT

Beast Never Lies Down in Its Whole Life, Is Common Theory—Always on Feet.

It is doubted whether, in the wild state, elephants ever lie down, says a writer in Harper's Weekly. Gordon Cumming thought he had found evidence, in marks upon the ground, that the adult bulls did stretch themselves out at full length for a few hours' rest at about midnight; but he contended that the young and the cows always remained on their feet.

Another authority, Selous, has expressed doubt whether even the old bulls lie down. He tells of one herd that was known to have kept moving and feeding throughout the twenty-four hours. "Except when rolling in mud and water," he says, "it is likely that an African elephant never lies down in its whole life."

However this may be, the most competent authorities seem to agree that this animal sleeps less and more lightly than any other. J. L. Kipling, the father of the writer, has estimated the period of slumber taken standing up to average about four hours in the twenty-four, and this estimate has been employed by the son in an amusing passage for one of his stories, "Moti Guj," wherein the sleep of the elephant is represented as consisting of an hour's fidgeting on one side and a similar period's fidgeting on the other, followed throughout the rest of the night "by long, low, rumbling soliloquies."

PETS FOR THE GROWING BOY

Rabbits, Pigeons and Especially Bantam Chickens Are Dear to Heart of Developing Lad.

(By PROF. JOHN WILLARD BOLTE.)

Farming might be defined as the art of producing valuable crops from the soil and disposing of these soil products in a profitable manner. This definition is lame, academically, but it carries our idea.

The backyard farmer must include a great many other factors in his operations, as the pecuniary profits he derives are of much less importance than the beautifying of his surroundings and of the lives of his entire family. No intelligent person can live amid beautiful ennobling scenes without being influenced for the better, even though it be unconsciously. In the same manner, bare, sterile, uninteresting homes tend to have an adverse effect upon their inhabitants, which will affect them throughout their entire lives.

Thoughtful people are realizing more and more that unless the mind is in sympathy with nature, unless the garden of each person's inner self is fertile and responsive to cultivation, there is small hope of betterment from outside influence. The adult mind which has been denied helpful influences may become impervious to them in time, but the hope of the race lies in his children.

The child's mind is a fertile garden, which cannot produce its own flowers and fruit, but which responds readily to the treatment it receives, and bears fruit or evil weeds according to what we plant therein and how it is cultivated.

One of the most beautiful and hopeful things about the whole scheme of creation is, to our mind, the fact that every normal child is born square with the world. He inherits neither his parents bodily or mental diseases. But from the instant he first cries, his future depends almost absolutely upon the care he receives.

Parents of children have wonderful opportunity to better themselves and the entire world by making their own children better than their parents, physically and mentally. This is the only way we have of repaying to our parents their sufferings and deprivations in bringing us to manhood and womanhood.

There comes a time in every boy's life when the childish amusements no longer suffice, and he seeks interests out of doors. This is the time when the mother ceases to have an eye on his every movement and he begins to associate with other boys of his own age, but of totally different bringing up, in many cases.

As far as possible, your boy should be kept under observation at this time, as he is at the crucial stage. Make his home more interesting and have his playmates there, so that you can see that he is associating with helpful children, rather than harmful ones.

Nothing serves to make home interesting to boys at this age so much as pets of their own. It is a calamity to have a boy grow up without having owned a dog of his own.

Rabbits, pigeons and especially bantam chickens, are dear to the heart of the developing lad, and he is just as much entitled to the helpful companionship of pets as he is to a school education. Let him have full responsibility for them, and the results will take care of themselves.

TWO ODD OPTICAL ILLUSIONS

Actual Measurement of Two Figures Shown Will Prove That They Are of Exact Size.

The picture on the left represents two figures in a gallery. At first sight no one would doubt that the man at the top of the illustration was by far the taller, but an actual measurement of the two figures will show that they are precisely of the same height.

The picture on the right gives the impression that the two thick black lines are curved, but on examination it will be found that they are perfectly parallel. The lines which diverge from that center cause the illusion, for they lead the lines of vision away, making it appear that the black lines are further apart at the center than they are at their ends. If the drawing is held edgeways to the eye it will be seen that they are exactly true.

TREATMENT OF BUTTER

Important Factor in Washing Is Temperature of Water.

Primitive Method of Performing Task With Hands Is Highly Unsanitary and Spoils Both Grain and Appearance.

(By F. RASMUSSEN.)

Only pure well or spring water should be used for the washing of butter. If the buttermilk is well drained from the butter, one washing, filling the churn at least as full of water as it was of cream when churning was begun, is sufficient. If for any reason the first wash water looks milky, a second washing may be necessary.

One very important factor to be considered in washing butter is the temperature of the water. If the churning temperature has been right and the butter has come in good condition, the temperature of the wash water should be the same as that of the buttermilk. If the butter comes soft, it may be necessary to use a lower temperature, and if too hard a higher temperature. Extremes should be avoided in all cases, as too warm water will cause a soft, greasy butter, while too cold water will make the butter appear brittle and tallowy and cause difficulty in getting the salt well dissolved.

The salt should be added before working is begun, then it is possible to get the salt distributed evenly with a minimum amount of working.

Clean, Convenient Method of Working Butter.

As a rule, one ounce of salt to each pound of butter is sufficient. The use of cheap, coarse salt should be avoided, as it often contains chemical impurities and dissolves with difficulty. The salt must be stored in a clean, dry place, as it readily absorbs moisture and foreign odors from the air.

The object of working butter is to uniformly distribute the salt and give the butter a plastic consistency. The old primitive method of working butter by the hands is still in vogue in some places. It is very undesirable in all cases to get the hands directly in contact with the butter. It is not only highly unsanitary, but it spoils both the grain of the butter and its appearance. When the hands come in contact with the butter it melts, making it oily and greasy, at the same time giving it a dead, dirty gray color. Many farmers making only a small amount of butter use a bowl or tray and paddle, which is a great deal better than using the hands.

Poultry Most Profitable.

When given the proper attention and rightly managed, the investment made by a farmer in poultry and poultry appliances is the most profitable one on his farm. One reason the receipts from poultry often make a poor showing in comparison with other products of the farm is that the fowls have been neglected, while much time and labor have been bestowed on the other features of farming. Another reason is that many farmers refuse to learn that it costs just as much to raise a dunghill as it does a thoroughbred.

Planting Trees.

Too much care cannot be given the operation of planting trees. No matter how well the land is prepared, nor what classes of trees one has, if they are not well planted the best results will not be secured.

Treating Oat Seed.

If you had any smut on your oats last year, better treat the seed grain with formaline before seeding. The cost is small and the treatment is effective.

RADISHES GOOD MONEY CROP

They Are Easy to Grow, Develop Quickly and There Is Little Expense in Producing Them.

For the gardener who lives near a good market early radishes often prove a money-making crop. From the open garden, radishes are the first crop in the spring that can be turned into money. They are easy to grow, develop quickly and there is little expense in producing them.

The first sowing should be made very early—the first day the ground dries off a little on top. Make another sowing a week or ten days later, and a third a week after that. If one sowing fails another will come on all right. Even though all three sowings produce crops, these successive sowings are necessary in order to provide crisp, tender radishes for several weeks, writes W. F. Purdue in Farm and Home. Most varieties grow very quickly and soon become woody and unsuitable for use.

The seed can be sown broadcast or drilled in rows a foot apart. Either way is all right because a crop will make itself before any weeding is necessary. Use seed at the rate of about six pounds per acre and more nice specimens will be produced than if sown thicker.

As soon as the first radishes are ready to pull, select the largest and nicest, wash them well and tie in bunches of six or twelve. Early in the season the stores pay us five cents per bunch of 12, a little later ten cents for three bunches, and finally two cents per bunch, when it no longer pays to bother with them. The remainder of the crop may be plowed under and the ground put to something else.

The little turnip-rooted sorts are preferred in most markets and pay well. The only expense in producing radishes is the seed, which costs from 10 to 15 cents per ounce, and the work of sowing the seed and harvesting the crop.

SURE CURE FOR BROODINESS

Swinging Coop, Accommodating About Five Hens Without Crowding, Insures Quick Results.

(By W. R. GILBERT.)

A sure cure for broodiness in hens is said to be a swing-coop. It is easily made, all that is required being two box-ends about three feet square, and some ordinary laths.

The mode of construction is as follows: Stand the box-ends up and nail on laths 2½ inches apart for the bottom and two sides—the top is covered with canvas, tacked along one edge and tied on the other.

This curtain is raised when the intended sitters are placed in the coop, or when they are removed later. Now bore a hole in the ends a trifle above the center, and pass a pole or piece of pipe through. The ends of the pole should extend about one foot beyond the coop. The coop is one lath long, or four feet. It is now ready to hang by dropping the ends into two forked posts. It is impossible for a hen to sit on the slatted bottom. If she tries it, the rocking and tipping of the coop makes her give up in disgust.

The only steady thing about the coop is the pole passing through the center, and the most persistent broody hen is usually glad to roost on it the first night. When a hen has perched for two nights, she may be considered cured. The coop will accommodate four or five hens without crowding, and insures quick results.

Beans at Their Best.

To have beans at their best, enrich the ground well with well-rotted manure and plant a foot apart in rows, and the plants four inches apart. Sow seed every two weeks to keep up the supply.

Prices for Ducks.

In the east the lowest prices in the duck market are from the first of July to the first of September; from then on to November the price always goes up from two to five cents the pound.

Control San Jose Scale.

San Jose scale may be kept in control easily as any other pest of the orchard by adopting proper spraying methods.

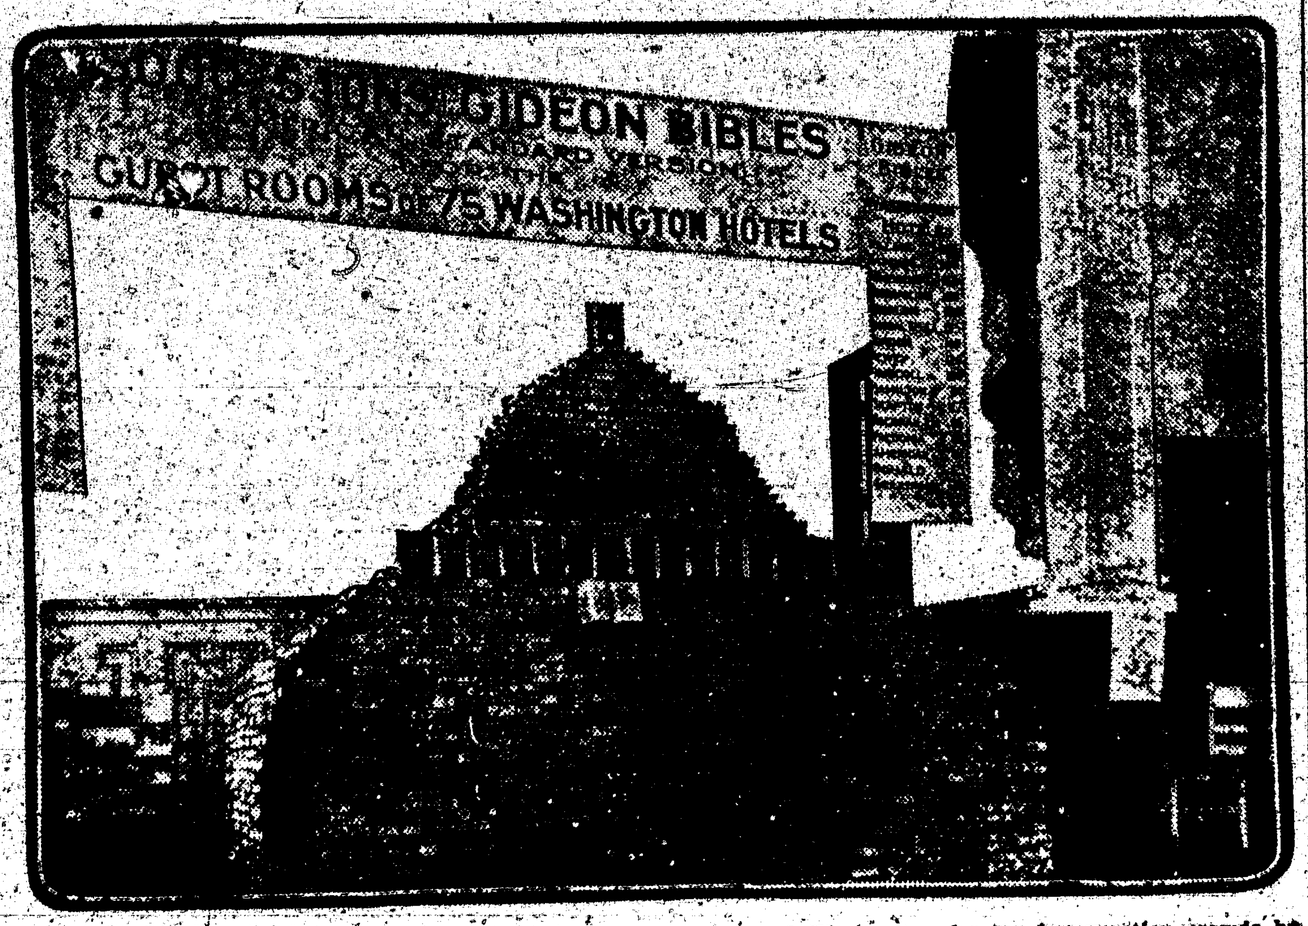
Decreases Egg Production.

Hens will not lay when permitted to run about the farm in the wet and cold.

San Jose Scale.

Trees that are badly infested with the San Jose scale appear as if they had been dusted with ashes.

FIVE THOUSAND BIBLES FOR WASHINGTON HOTELS



The Gideons, an organization of Christian traveling men, prepared Washington for the inauguration crowds by distributing among the hotels this stack of 5,000 Bibles. The books weighed five tons.

OLD DAYS RECALLED

Joseph Cisler Was One of Michigan's First Settlers.

Pioneer Was Related to Gen. Winfield Scott and Told of Incidents Not Recorded in History.

Detroit, Mich.—By the death of Joseph Cisler at his home south of Middleville, the last link connecting Barry county of the present day with the very first settlers of the early days has been severed, writes a Hastings (Mich.) correspondent.

Joseph Cisler, who resided in Monroe when the common topics of conversation were the battles in that vicinity during the war of 1812; who knew intimately the historic chiefs of the Ottawa nation; who was a companion of Albert E. Bull, a noted trader of three counties; who received an academic education, and who was at one time one of the most widely known men in Barry county, died in obscurity.

Cisler was a genuine product of the early days. He conversed about the early days and prominent personages of those times as though they were present.

Cisler was born in Lycoming county, New York, Feb. 7, 1825. His mother was Rachel Scott, cousin of Gen. Winfield Scott, noted leader in three wars. In making the journey to Buffalo Cisler's mother carried him upon her back as she traveled afoot. His parents settled at Sandy Creek, near Monroe, in 1830. Everywhere were the ruins of houses burned by the Indians and British, but new houses were being erected among the ruins.

As a boy Cisler was intensely interested in local history and spent much of his time digging for relics among the ruins.

At Knagg's tavern, about eight miles from Monroe, the Cislers were acquainted with a Frenchman who sympathized with the Americans during the war, and he related an incident of unusual interest and one which is not recorded in Michigan history. The British offered rewards for the scalps of Americans, and savages lay in ambush near all of the settlements, waiting to pick off any one who appeared. The government offered a reward for carrying the mail through the enemy's lines and the Frenchman and two other men started on horseback to deliver the mails. They had gone only a few miles when they found a fire on the trail. Apprehending at once why the fire had been placed there, the Frenchman shouted to his companions, "Follow me!" and dashed through the flames. His companions, unheeding his command, went round the fire. Two rifles were fired, and the men were never again seen.

The vicinity of Monroe was rapidly settled, and Houston Cisler, loading his goods into an ox cart, made his way along the wilderness trail leading to Gull Prairie in 1836.

They left Bronson, now Kalamazoo, and followed the old road to Yankee Springs, the famous hostelry on the Grand Rapids stage road. The Cislers located on Bull's Prairie, in Irving township.

Here young Cisler led the life of all pioneer children. He entered the employ of Albert E. Bull of Massachusetts, who conducted stores at White Pigeon, Bronson and Prairie Ronde, or Schoolcraft.

Cisler made the acquaintance of all of the pioneers of this section, and mingled with the Indians, whom he knew intimately.

During the Black Hawk war the Cislers did not join the throngs of frightened settlers who returned east. They had no fear of the Indians, whom they often doctored when they were ill.

Grand Rapids, Gull Prairie and other places were known only by their Indian names. Chicago was one of the important trading points for the settlers in this vicinity.

Mr. Cisler prospered. He owned large tracts of land, and was one of the leading men of his community. But all of his property dwindled to nothing and he spent his last days on a small sand farm in Yankee Springs township, across which ran the trail his long vanished red brethren traversed years ago. He was married five times. Until the last few months he refused to leave his unprofitable farm, where he resided alone, until one of his sons succeeded in persuading him to reside with him.

CORN CONVENTION MAN 104

North Dakotan of Great Age Is Registered as a Student of State's Convention.

Grand Forks, N. D.—William Huggins, one hundred and four years old, has enrolled as one of the students at the North Dakota corn and clover convention, to be held at Grand Forks soon. Mr. Huggins is a pioneer of this state, having come here from Canada many years ago. He is interested in diversified farming and says that "a young man should always keep up with the times."

WOULDN'T TAKE ANY CHANCES

Woman Surely Could Not Be Accused of Having Any Lack of Caution.

One day a very nervous, timid-looking woman, accompanied by a robust farmer, speared on the platform of a little railway at a remote country town. For a time she devoted her attention to the time table, but she did not find there the information she sought, and she stepped up to the station master as he came out of the office.

"Will you please tell me if the three-fifteen train has gone yet?" she asked, in apparent concern.

"Yes, about twenty minutes ago," he replied.

"And when will the four-thirty be along, do you think?"

"Why, not for some time yet, of course."

"Are there any expresses before then?"

"Not one."

"Any freight trains?"

"No."

"Nothing at all?"

"Nothing whatever."

"Are you quite sure?"

"Certainly I am, or I wouldn't have said so."

"Then," said the timid woman, turning to her husband, "I think we'll cross the tracks, William."—Youth's Companion.

FRANK GIRL.

"When you proposed to her did she say 'This is so sudden?'"

"No; she was honest and said 'This suspense has been terrible.'"

Got His Answer.

Standing by the entrance of a large estate in the suburbs of Dublin are two huge dogs carved out of granite. An Englishman going by in a hack thought he would have some fun with the Irish driver.

"How often, Jack, do they feed those two big dogs?"

"Whenever they bark, sir," was the straight-faced reply.

IN A SHADOW.

Inveterate Tea Drinker Feared Paralysis.

Steady use of either tea or coffee often produces alarming symptoms as the poison (caffeine) contained in these beverages acts with more potency in some persons than in others.

"I was never a coffee drinker," writes an ill. woman, "but a tea drinker. I was very nervous, had frequent spells of sick headache and heart trouble, and was subject at times to severe attacks of bilious colic.

"No end of sleepless nights—would have spells at night when my right side would get numb and tingle like a thousand needles were pricking my flesh. At times I could hardly put my tongue out of my mouth and my right eye and ear were affected.

"The doctors told me I was liable to become paralyzed at any time, so I was in constant dread. I took no end of medicine—all to no good.

"The doctors told me to quit using tea, but I thought I could not live without it—that it was my only stay. I had been a tea drinker for twenty-five years; was under the doctor's care for fifteen.

"About six months ago, I finally quit tea and commenced to drink Postum.

"I have never had one spell of sick headache since and only one light attack of bilious colic. Have quit having those numb spells at night, sleep well and my heart is getting stronger all the time." Name given upon request.

Postum now comes in concentrated, powder form, called Instant Postum. It is prepared by stirring a level teaspoonful in a cup of hot water, adding sugar to taste, and enough cream to bring the color to golden brown.

Instant Postum is convenient; there's no waste; and the flavor is always uniform. Sold by grocers everywhere.

FREE ADVICE TO SICK WOMEN

Thousands Have Been Helped By Common Sense Suggestions.

Women suffering from any form of female ills are invited to communicate promptly with the woman's private correspondence department of the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence. A woman can freely talk of her private illness to a woman; thus has been established a confidential correspondence which has extended over many years and which has never been broken. Never have they published a testimonial or used a letter without the written consent of the writer, and never has the Company allowed these confidential letters to get out of their possession, as the hundreds of thousands of them in their files will attest.

Out of the vast volume of experience which they have to draw from, it is more than possible that they possess the very knowledge needed in your case. Nothing is asked in return except your good will, and their advice has helped thousands. Surely any woman, rich or poor, should be glad to take advantage of this generous offer of assistance. Address Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., (confidential) Lynn, Mass.

Every woman ought to have Lydia E. Pinkham's 80-page Text Book. It is not a book for general distribution, as it is too expensive. It is free and only obtainable by mail. Write for it today.

USE FIREMEN IN BIG RAIDS

Higher Up Circles in New York Gambling Fraternity Are Upset by Ruse.

New York.—Higher up circles of the gambling fraternity were upset by raids which were made simultaneously upon eight big alleged gambling establishments in the Fifth avenue and theatrical districts. Several features of the raids were spectacular and novel. For the first time in the history of the police firemen were used to assist in the raids. As the police in eight taxicab parties, under command of Inspector John F. Dwyer, swooped down upon the suspected places firemen gained entrance by either pretending to be inspecting the buildings or by shouting "Fire!" If successful in getting in the police squads followed; if not, axes and crowbars forced entrance.

But in all of the eight places there was no one to arrest. In some mysterious manner the alleged proprietors had all been "tipped off" and suave butlers left in charge. The collection of gambling instruments and furnishings, however, was one of the finest the police ever laid hands on. The seven vanloads carted to station houses were valued at $25,000. Some of the "stuff" was from the place formerly occupied by Richard A. Canfield. Relics of his de luxe parlors, including rare paintings and tapestries and other art treasures, were found still to adorn the walls.

NOTICE

Carrizozo, New Mexico,
March 21st, 1913.

To the Honorable Board of County Commissioners, County of Lincoln

Gentlemen: I am in receipt of your paper entitled "Citation," under date of March 4, 1913, and served on me March 5th, 1913, and in response thereto, beg leave to state that I have decided to proceed to complete the construction of the Court House, and I will begin actual operations just as quickly as I can get men and materiel on the ground; however, you are hereby notified, that in completing said Court House under the terms and provisions of our contract of March 8th, 1910, I have sustained serious and heavy damage on account of the expense and delays caused by your stopping the work on or about the 10th day of October 1910, and by your refusing on or about said time to meet the installment payments, under the terms and provisions of our contract; that I have suffered the loss of my own time, damage to materials, damage by reason of holding men, teams, etc., in readiness for work, loss of interest upon profits and upon installments due, attorney's fees, etc., and loss on account of the advance in the price of material to be used in the completion of said contract, all of which is more specifically set forth in my communication to you under date of March 4th, 1913.

This communication is to notify and inform you that by the resumption of said work, and by proceeding with the same to completion, I do not in any way intend to waive my right of action against you or any bondsmen on the injunction suits against you or myself, or both of us, but that, on the contrary, I expect to hold the County of Lincoln, as well as the principal and all sureties on said bonds responsible for all of my loss and damage caused on account of such delays, expenses etc., incident to your violation of the terms of our contract, and of their wrongful suing out said Writ of Injunction.

Yours truly,

LINCOLN COUNTY NOTES

FT. STANTON NOTES.

Mr. M. Sweeney the popular night nurse at No. 10 is spending a few days in El Paso.

A number of the patients are preparing to return to their respective homes and posts for the summer.

The Chaplain spent Thursday the guest of Father Girma at Lincoln, he was accompanied by Ben J. King of No. 4.

Mr. Cater president of the Bonito Publishing Co. will make a business trip down in Alabama, leaving here about April 17th.

The most Rev. Arch-Bishop Pitaval, D. D. of Santa Fe, will visit the Fort Sunday May 4th, and officiate in Sacred Heart Chapel the same evening.

The new billard table arrived at No. 4 this week, and there is something doing every moment. The boys are having some very interesting contests.

The base ball season is on at Ft Stanton Last Sunday the Capitan Team opened the season with us and gave quite an exhibition. The Ft Stanton team is going to make good, as it is made up of professionals from every part of the country.

Charles H. Irwin of No. 3 is confined to his bed for the past ten days with a severe attack of La-Grippe. However we are pleased to learn of his being on the road to recovery and will soon be out. We miss Charley and his cheerful disposition very much.

We beg to note an oversight in the write up of the Minstrel Show in last week's issue the names of Mrs John Able who gave a cabaret number, as well as Mr. F. S Schaffer the cabaret dancer both these were warmly applauded. Also Captain Lorenz who gave several excellant numbers on the Banjo.

A part of No. 11 is being fitted up for a billard hall for the patients Messers Carr and Lindsay have purchased the billiard table formaly at No. 4 and will be in charge. A nominal rate per cue will be charged and the patients in general are very much enthused over the prospects of having a place to pass away the time in amusement.

NOGAL NOTES

The prospects for a bumper apple crop here were never better.

Lovers of strawberries can be accomodated at the Rosedale garden this year, blossoms will soon be out.

The Singing class had a full attendance last Sunday and they rendered some really good music.

A force of workmen are still at work at Watson Lake in an effort to stop the leaks

School opened here on the first of the month with thirty children in attendance, the prospects are bright for one of the best terms here in many years.

E. W. (Cap) Henley left on the 7th inst. for Oscuro where he will consult Dr. Ranniger, as to internal troubles which are very serious and an operation may be necessary.

PARSONS PICKINGS

Ed. Keller and family, his mother and sister, spent Sunday at the home of J. M. Rice.

Miss Mary Alexander is visiting her sister Mrs. Reddy of Krout Gulch.

Tom Carnett who has rented the Byrd place for the summer made a business trip to Capitan during the week.

Ranchers about here who have had their cattle over on the "West Side" for the winter months have returned their herds to the mountains.

Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Weber and daughter Alice who have been guests for the past week of Dr. and Mrs. Smith at Fort Stanton have returned home.

The farmers are all busy doing their spring ploughing and getting in their early vegetables A few warm sunshiny days has put new life into the community.

Mr. Consbruch the oldest inhabitant of the Upper Bonito Valley appeared bright and early Monday morning at the postoffice and cast the first vote at the polls.

Miss Helen Rice has returned from Dawson where she went to assist her sister get ready to go to Rochester, Minn., for treatment Mrs. Welch will remain east all summer.

A school election was held in Parsons postoffice Monday, April 7, to elect a director in place of Mr. Grafton whose term has expired. Mr. Grafton was unanimously re-elected to serve another term. Quite a number of ladies appeared at the polls. In fact their votes numbered more than the men's. This denotes, in this district at least, that the women take more interest in school affairs than the average man.

CORONA CLIPPINGS

Mr. and Mrs. Felton Gray of Georgia are visiting Mrs. Grays parents Mr and Mrs E. G. Raffety.

Mr. George Castle has finished setting out his orchard. It now contains 600 trees

Well at last the question of constable is settled The results of last Friday election are Earl Black 18 Tom Moody 11.

We can also report a quiet school election. Mr E F. Jones candidate to succeed himself was unanimously elected. Mr. Jones was the only candidate. A numder of the ladies took advantage of their rights and were taken to the polling place and cast their votes.

One of the most enjoyable dances of the entire season was participated in by a large number of our citizens and friends last Saturday evening at the home of Mr and Mrs. Joe Ashford. The dancing was in the building next to Mr. Ashford's store At 12 o'clock the guests were invited to the dining room where delightful refreshments were served by the hostess.

POLLY PARAGRAPHS

Some of our residents have been improving the springtime by setting out fruit and shade trees, and berry bushes of various kinds.

Mr. Hust of Nogal, was a brief visitor here last week while looking for some missing stock.

Fred Funk attended the entertainment at the County Seat Friday night and made a pleasant trip to Oscuro next day, to attend a social gathering, returning home Sunday.

C. F. Coddard was at home for a few days at the week's end, but left Monday for Ancho accompanied by Mr. Freidrich, to do some windmill work in that vicinity.

DEFINITIONS OF SOCIALISM

(Contributed)

Definitions of Socialism taken from encyclopedias and dictionaries.

A theory or policy that aims to secure the reconstruction of society, increase of wealth and a more equal distribution of the products of labor through the public ownership of labor capital and the public management of all industries.
—Standard Dictionary.

The ethics of socialism are identical with the ethics of Christianity. —Encyclopedia Britannica.

Socialism is a theory of society that advocates a more precise orderly and harmonious arrangement of the social relation of mankind than that which has hitherto prevailed.—Websters Dictionary.

When you fully realize how easily this new state of society can be attained you will instantly wish to join this greatest crusade of all the ages now organizing for its world mission its name is socialism a beautiful word, a noble expresion a divine ideal.

For the first time in human history, a great fraternal movement is sweeping across the face of the earth and its million of loyal adherents, social crusaders in the true sense of that term, are clasping hands across the border line of all nations, and in joyous acclamation, voicing the inspiring sentiments.

"We are brothers all," and "War shall curse and stain fair earth no more."

YAAK "SPECIAL"

The Newest Beautifier

WONDERFUL FOR PIMPLES, COARSE PORES, FRECKLES, AND BLACKHEADS

PLUMPS WRINKLES OUT

KEEP YOUNG LOOKING FOR YEARS

An astonishing product for plumping out wrinkles, hollow cheeks, to a velvety, smooth, exquisite complexion, and keep young looking for years. The Chicago fair sex have suddenly become beautiful and fascinating.

Everywhere you look, walk or turn, you hear women and men talking—"Yaak," "Yaak," "Yaak" special. The Chicago beauty seekers have rushed about to get the latest beautifier called "Yaak." Judging from their desperate effort in the department stores and druggists, that "Yaak" (special) is quickly gobbled up by the mad rush of women, and impossible to supply the enormous demand. "Yaak" is delicate, harmless, and fascinating to the skin, absolutely free from dangerous drugs "Yaak" (special) is purely vegetable Herbs, Oils of Nuts, Lily-bulb Juice, Cerasine, Olive Oils and Cocanut Chips, which give the face a healthful, glowing appearance. Apply a little at night, and every morning; you will quickly see a surprising change. The newest, irresistible, brilliant complexion beautifier has suddenly made a tremendous stir among the wrinkled faces, pimply faces, freckled faces, and coarse pores. It is said to be the greatest preparation in the wide world to remove forever those ugly facial blemishes, and with amazement, makes the face satin-smooth, plump, and pearly-white. For those who have pimples, blackheads, and coarse pores of long standing will be astonished how quickly they can get rid of those homely features with "YAAK" (special). It never fails to give quick results. No samples given; the ingredients are special products A large shipment of "Yaak" (special) reached Chicago, and it was quickly gobbled up in a few hours. Many disappointed women, failing to get it, left their names with cash for the next shipment of "Yaak" (special) expected in a few days. "Everything gone," "Yaak" is all sold out," "Will have more in a few day," are the short answers from clerks. Many society women, beauty parlors, and residences have telephoned in their orders thick and fast to the department stores and druggists. Heavy mail orders from out-of-towns are coming in fast for "Yaak" (special). The demand has been enormous. "Yaak" (special) gives the face an extremely brilliant, fascinating, plump, youthful glow. An exquisite refined complexion. It comes it two sizes: $1.00 per box, and also 50 cents per box. But if your facial blemishes are of long standing, then get the larger size box, you will surely need it for permanent results. Your town druggists can probably get it for you from the wholesaler. Or else send your money orders to any of the Chicago business firms. Will be shipped to you promptly by mail.

AT THE FORGE FIRE

Why an Old Blacksmith Heeded the Appeal of an Escaped Convict.

By H. M. EGBERT.

The hunted man who had emerged from the mangrove thickets that fringed the road stopped, straightened himself, and passed the sleeve of his ragged coat over his eyes to wipe away the sweat that blinded him. Not fifty yards ahead he saw the red blaze of a smithy fire, its bright tongues darting among the cloud of whirling sparks that spun like midges in the darkness. Beside it the black silhouette of a huge old man bent over the anvil, the flail-like arms threshing upon a red-hot shoe.

The hunted man crept forward. The fine white dust of the roads had powdered him, ooze from the lagoons had plastered him, so that the pattern of his suit was indistinguishable; it would have been hard, too, to tell whether he was old or young, negro or white.

Though the warm February night gave promise of a Florida spring, though he dripped sweat, the man stretched out his hands toward the blaze as though to warm them. What he desired, however, unconsciously symbolized by the action, was rather the warmness of human intercourse. It was days since had heard a human voice.

At that moment there sounded, very musical and very far away, the bay of a hound. The man's straining ears caught the sound; he hesitated no longer but, gripping his knife, filed from a soft iron bar too short for any other offensive use, he slouched toward the smithy and peered in at the door.

"Can you give a stranger a shakedown, mister?" he called to the smith.

"Come in, friend," answered the smith, not looking up. "Sit down beside the fire and rest you a spell."

The man obeyed, taking his seat in the shadows and pulling the ragged hat well over his eyes.

"You be from Tampa, friend?" inquired the smith, pausing in his work and looking up for the first time. Something about the man's appearance arrested his attention and he surveyed him again with a casual glance which, nevertheless took in all details.

Was Days Since He Had Heard a Human Voice.

"It's a goodish walk from Tampa," he continued, without waiting for the other to reply. "Nigh upon five and twenty miles it must be."

"You are a Cornishman!" exclaimed the other, rising from the stool which he had occupied. "I was born in Bodmin. I haven't heard the speech in seven years. I—"

The hound's note sounded again, far over the marshes, and another hound took up the call, and another.

"You're from the convict camp, I reckon," said the smith quietly, as he began to hammer again. "When did you get away?"

"Five nights ago," the stranger cried, advancing into the glow of the fire. The smith could see the hideous stripes plainly now, the shaved head, and the heads blistered with resin. "You'll help me?" the stranger pleaded in eager, rapid accents. "You'll tell them I'm your help and give me some bread and put an old suit about me? I wouldn't have asked you if you hadn't been a Cornishman. I'd have took what I wanted. Look!"

He showed him the sharp knife and then replaced it in his vest, running it between the lining and the cloth.

"Friend," said the smith, laying his hammer down and approaching the other man, "you've time to answer a question or two before I answer you. I've heard those camps are hell on earth, but there's men hellish enough to deserve to suffer in them. What was your crime and how long did they send you away for?"

"They sent me up for life!" shouted the convict. "That was seven years ago and I've been in hell all that time. I guess I've paid the price."

"What was your crime, friend?" the smith continued inexorably.

"Murder!" the other shouted. "I killed a man, the lowest and meanest vermin that ever crawled."

The smith stood facing the convict quietly, but the kindliness in his eyes had given place to loathing.

"I'll give no help to a murderer!" he cried. "Whoso sheds man's blood, by man his blood shall be shed. That's in the Good Book. Be you gone, for you'll get no help from me."

Standing there defenceless, he yet cowed the man who had the knife in his coat. The fugitive did not even remember it.

"You'll hear me first," he pleaded. "If ever murder could be justified, this was. Wait, now! I'll tell you everything there's time to tell and then I'll go, if you won't help me." He went on rapidly, disregarding the old man's threatening gestures. "I was raised in Bodmin and came to this country eight years ago to marry my girl, the girl who was pledged to me. She'd come here first as lady's maid. There was another Bodmin man. I told him of Milly before he set sail to work in the mines."

"The mines, you say!" shouted the smith, staring into the other's face. "What mines?"

"The phosphate mines at Hicks Crossing. He came here. I'd sent Milly a message by him, the black-hearted hound! I heard no more of them, but when I reached the town I found them both. They had been married four months. They had a cabin in the fields. I met her at the door. Her eye was blackened and her arm bruised. He'd done that the night before. I found him in the mines and put my knife through his heart."

"Whose heart?" screamed the smith, trembling violently. "What was his name? Whose heart?"

"Hinman's. I tell you—"

The old man's hand fell heavily upon the shoulder of the convict and in his eyes was a strange look of peace.

"There's an old suit behind that curtain, friend," he said in an expressionless voice. "Put it on; then sit by the fire. After a while I'll have a bite for you. Haste you! Hark!"

The hounds were giving tongue along the road.

"But—but—" stammered the convict, "you knew Hinman?"

"He married my girl," answered the old man quietly.

Nothing to Fear.

Two chums were spending an hour in intimate chat at the club. The conversation veered round to the love affair of the disconsolate-looking one.

"Why don't you propose to her?" ventured his companion.

"I'm afraid."

"Afraid. And yet she loves you?"

"Oh, awfully."

"You agree with her father in politics?"

"Yes."

"You agree with her mother in religion?"

"Yes."

"You agree with her brother as to which is the best football team?"

"Yes."

"Then, hang me, old man, if I can see what you're afraid of."

Largest Water Tank.

The water supply system of Calcutta includes the largest water tank in the world. It covers an area of two and one-third acres, and the total weight when it is full of water is 72,000 tons. There are 32 miles of steel joists in the vertical columns and bracings, and in the foundations 30 miles of steel joists and tie bars.

The capacity of the tank is 2,000,000 gallons of water. The tank acts as a balancer and to assist the pumps when they cannot send sufficient water into the mains to meet the demand. During the night hours, when the pumps provide more water than is required, the excess quantity goes into the tank; when the demand is greater the water from the tank flows automatically into the mains.

Worth Knowing.

Tennis balls can be cleaned with pipe clay mixed with enough water to form a smooth paste; add to this a melted tallow candle and allow it to cool. Then brush all the dust off the balls, take a lump of the pipe clay tallow mixture and dissolve it in cold water to the consistency of cream. Apply to the balls with a sponge, let dry and wipe off gently.

The Reason.

"A horse is the most sensitive and feeling of animals."

"Indeed?"

"Yes. If you notice, one will always listen to a tale of woe."

POINTS ON PANCAKES

MUCH APPRECIATED DISH ADAPTED TO EVERY POCKETBOOK.

Batter Should Be Mixed Two Hours Before Being Used and Should Be Beaten For at Least Ten Minutes.

There is no reason why pancakes should not be served very frequently, since they form a much appreciated dish which can be adapted to every kind of housekeeping pocketbook. The batter for making pancakes can be mixed in a few minutes, but it is well to mix it about two hours before it is used, so that any lumps of unwetted flour may disappear before the batter is cooked.

If pancakes are to be light mere mixing will not do. The batter must be thoroughly beaten for ten minutes. The frying pan ought to be made of iron or black steel. The fire must not be too fierce, or the under surface will burn before the pancake is set, yet a fair amount of heat is required that the pancakes may cook quickly without getting stodgy.

Plain Pancakes.—Sift one cupful of flour into a basin, add quarter teaspoonful of salt, one unbeaten egg and half a cupful of milk. Mix till smooth, then begin to beat. Beat with a wooden spoon for a few minutes, then gradually add another half cupful of milk and continue beating till a good many air bubbles rise to the top. Set the basin aside until the pancakes are to be cooked. Fry the pancakes quickly in a hot buttered frying pan, sprinkle wih sugar and lemon juice, roll up, and serve on a hot dish.

Rich Pancakes.—Cream two heaping tablespoonfuls of butter and work it into one cupful of flour and quarter teaspoonful of salt. Add two well-beaten eggs and sufficient milk to form a stiff batter. Use a little butter when frying them. Do not roll them, but spread each one with raspberry jam which has been warmed. Serve them in a pile with granulated sugar sprinkled over the top.

Orange Pancakes.—Half a pint of milk, four ounces of sifted flour, half a teaspoonful of salt and two eggs, omitting the white of one; make the pancakes thin. As each one is finished it must be kept hot, either in the oven or over hot water. Have ready two or three oranges, cut in small square pieces, without skin or pith. When all the pancakes are fried, place upon each one a tablespoonful of the orange, sprinkle with sugar and roll up. These pancakes may be served with strawberries, raspberries or stoned cherries.

Italian Pancakes.—Beat well together two eggs, one ounce of flour, one tablespoonful of sugar, half a cupful of sugar, half a cupful of warm milk; then add a few drops of lemon extract and two ounces of melted butter. Divide the mixture quickly into buttered saucers, bake in a hot oven for twenty minutes. Serve piled up sprinkled with sugar.

Chocolate Pancakes.—Beat together the yolks of four eggs, one tablespoonful of sugar, two ounces of flour, a pinch of salt and two tablespoonfuls of milk; when light add two tablespoonfuls of cream. Just before using mix in the stiffly beaten whites of two eggs. Cook, browning on one side only; then slip onto a hot plate, sprinkle thickly with grated chocolate, place them on a buttered tin and bake in a moderate oven for fifteen minutes.

Blanquet of Veal.

Remove the bone from a brisket of veal, chop into small pieces and fry. Brown a chopped onion and a little flour in a saucepan and add the fried veal with a little water, some green onions, parsley, thyme, cloves and garlic. Add half a cup green peas, and when all is thoroughly cooked add the yolks of two eggs beaten in water.

Cress Sandwiches.

Wash and dry fresh watercress. Chop it and mix it with finely chopped hard boiled egg. Season with salt and pepper, spread on thin white bread and butter and sprinkle with a dash of lemon juice.

A Suggestion.

"The fellow who is rapping at your door must have a good opinion of himself."

"What makes you think that?"

"Don't you hear how he is knocking on wood?"

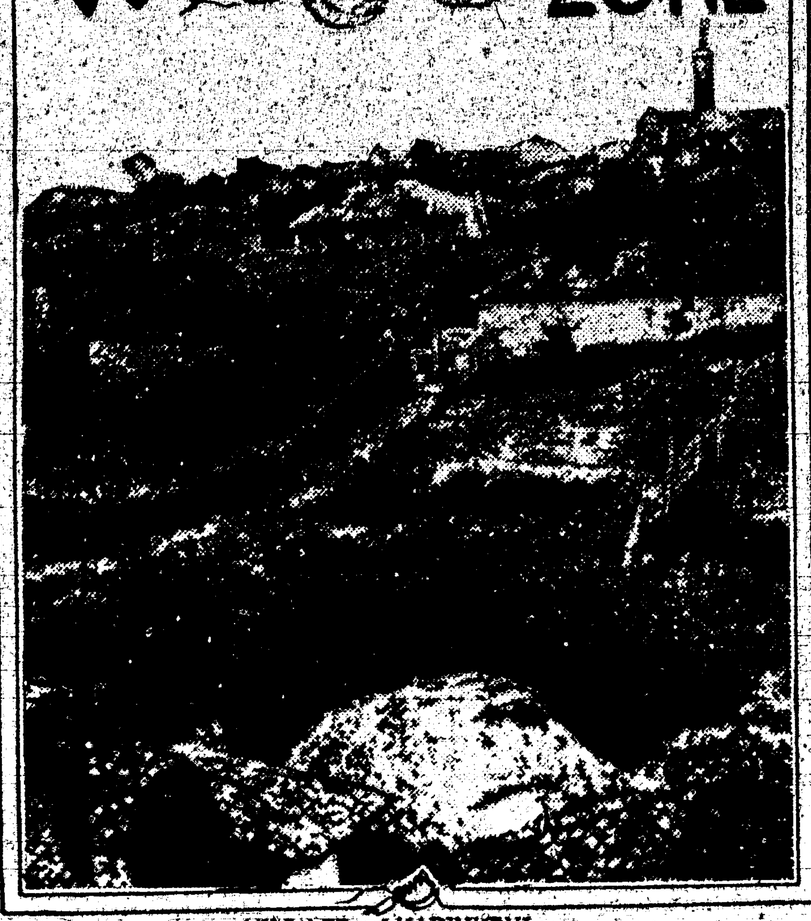
Cream Tomato Soup.

To one quart of boiling milk add half a pint of tomatoes; strain to remove skin and seeds; butter the size of a walnut, cayenne pepper and salt to suit the taste. Just before serving stir in the well-beaten white of one egg.

Shrimp Sandwiches.

Break the shrimps in bits. Moisten them either with mayonnaise or whipped cream flavored with pepper and salt. Spread between thin slices of white buttered bread.

OVER War-Swept ZONE



VILLAGE OF KADINKENI

THE line of travel from the Bulgarian frontier to Tchatalja runs the length and cuts the very center of the Bulgarian field of campaign. This journey we had the good fortune to be permitted to make during the armistice. Now that fighting has been resumed, it is again impossible. The entire distance is something like 275 miles. We completed it by train in about five days, exclusive of voluntary stopovers, but this unusual speed was due only to the fact that we were able to make good connections, writes Paul S. Mowrer in the Chicago Daily News.

Despite its interest as revealing the setting of a great modern war, the trip was hardly a pleasure excursion. Most of it was not even picturesque. Suppose that from the hills out around Aurora, Ill., every house and barn and fence and road and tree, and even every sign of cultivation, were removed; suppose in addition that the grass were afflicted with something resembling the mange; that is how this country looks. It could be a garden; it is nearer a desert. The villages—low clusters of stone huts roofed with brown tile—are far apart and invariably distant from the railroad. Many have been burned. To see any human beings except groups of ragged Bulgar troopers is a rare thing—a thing worthy of comment.

Bulgars Seen Everywhere.

The Bulgars, however, are everywhere; for practically every able-bodied male of that nation has been ordered into Turkey in one capacity or another. Their tentless camps, their wagon transports, their worn and grizzled persons are almost the only variation of the monotony. An armed Bulgar peasant in homespun guards the track at every 200 yards. You see some standing before the huts they have built of brush or before the holes they have hollowed in a bank. These common soldiers have not been able to wash or shave properly, or to take off their clothes, since the war began. They sleep unsheltered on the ground, without even blankets to cover them; and they live exclusively on bread and cheese, except at a few favored spots where there are soup and an occasional stew.

But if the military diet is scant, that of the traveler is even scantier. Two great armies have passed here. To speak in an expressive Irish idiom, there was nothing to begin with; the Turkish army took all there was, and the Bulgars took the rest.

The railroad is a single track line, adequate enough for such travel and commerce as there used to be here, but utterly inadequate for the supply trains of an army of 600,000 men. For this reason the way was everywhere blocked by lines of cars. The few sidings were continually full to running over. The wonder is that the Bulgars have been able to feed their forces at all. There were, of course, no passenger coaches. We rode in freight cars, changing trains every little while. For every two miles we went forward we went one mile back; for every hour we were on the move we were at a standstill five, and as nobody ever knew just where the train was going, when it would start, or where it would stop, we never dared stray more than a step from it for fear of being left behind.

The train on which we set out from Philippopolis, in addition to carrying supplies in the cars, carried soldiers on top of them—mostly young fellows newly drafted. At every watering tank we stopped an hour or so—nobody seemed to know just why. At one village we waited so long the soldiers all climbed down to get the cramps out of their legs and, after wetting their throats at the boiled water barrel, began to sing, much to the embarrassment of a group of village girls:

"How delicious is my love
For the parson's pretty daughter,
And the parson's pretty daughter,
How delicious she!"

Not as naughty as many soldier songs; but nevertheless the maidens hastened away blushing. The youths laughed. Night came on and the train, with a steamy sigh, resumed its course.

Foretold Fate of Turkey.

We now found ourselves squeezed into a dark corner of the car beside an official who was going down to take charge of the Bulgar postoffice at Salonika. He confided to us, though with the skeptical air of a man of the world, how certain signs had foretold the fall of Turkey, even before it was known the war was imminent. For instance, a tent which had been erected for the sultan at a military review in Constantinople, was caught in the teeth of a wind storm and flung flat—just what had lately happened to the whole Turkish army! And again, the crown prince of Turkey, Issuf Izzedin, while on a recent visit to Constanza, had made a misstep from the gangway and had got a tumble into the chill waters of the Black sea—just as the empire itself had since got a tumble into the cold waters of defeat. To all of which we nodded our heads, and nodded, and nodded, and were falling fast asleep, when, about 10 p. m. the train drew up with a jolt greater than usual, and a gruff voice from the black of the night informed us this was as far as we went.

Out we dragged our baggage onto the ground.

"Please, sir, where do we get the train for Tchatalja?"

Thus we inquired of every one we saw except of those who inquired of us first. Nobody knew. Nothing to do but pile into the railroad station, where the waiting room had been turned into a sort of cafe.

The place was crowded with hungry, thirsty soldiers. We sat at a table beside a man who did not care to talk; he had just got news his brother had been killed. Opposite us, reminding one of a couple of pompous bears in uniform, were two veterans of the Turkish war of 1878, their breasts bright with medals, their beards bristling with valor and their heads all but lost in huge fur hats, whose long hair fell fiercely over their eyes. Being too old for the regular army, both were volunteers; both had been wounded and were returning. One, whose name was Nicola, carried a captured Turkish Mauser rifle, of which he was very proud, and his brass-mounted belt was stuck full of Turkish cartridges.

"I have a son at Tchatalja," he explained, swallowing with a friendly growl a glass of hot, yellow liquid miscalled tea. "I am going down to tell him never to fall back."

However, it was not long before old Nicola himself fell back—in a stupid doze, in that smoky, overcrowded room.

HAD BEEN PRETTY

And Had Also Seen 35 Summers When the Unexpected Proposal Came.

BY GEORGE MUNSON.

Miss Agatha Browne was thirty-five and looked older. She had been pretty when she was a girl—that could easily be seen from the regular contour of her face, her soft, clear skin, and the gray eyes which even her detractors allowed would be beautiful if she did not hide them behind those hideous round spectacle lenses. Miss Agatha Browne was professor of economics at Ledham seminary, which, as most people know, receives only selected girl pupils from among the first families of the south.

Prof. Sampson Boylett instructed the same select young ladies in Roman history. He was forty-five and looked his age. He was a short-sighted bachelor who lived for his hobby, the customs of the Romans. When he was not thinking about them, he was usually not thinking about anything.

When the professor passed Miss Browne he was entirely oblivious of that fact. If they met face to face in an exceedingly narrow alley he would discover an obstruction, slowly raise his short-sighted eyes until they fixed themselves upon Miss Browne's spectacles, and then retreat hastily with an apology and a timid expression.

The select families of the south were not so different, in their individual membership, from families that flourish and die like mute, inglorious wallflowers. Some of the young ladies of Ledham seminary might have been seen with their heads very close together one evening after the professor had concluded his lecture. He had been expounding "The Marriage Customs of the Samnites."

"Mustn't it have been dreadful in those days!" said Miss Philippa Clark, reading from her note-book. "Just think! Among the Samnite ladies it was not an uncommon thing to take the initiative in the proposal of a matrimonial alliance. When gentle glances and hints failed to accomplish their purpose the Samnite woman did not hesitate to address herself openly to the backward suitor."

"Er—Among the Samnites There Existed a Custom."

"Dreadful?" exclaimed Miss Mary Campbell, one of the most select of the young ladies. "Why, I think it was grand!"

"Well, now just listen to this," interposed Miss Millicent Day, who was taking the economics course. "The custom which restrains the female half of the community from taking the first step leading toward the marriage contract is of economic origin and due to the fact that, in our modern civilization, the male is the bread-winner. When the earning capacities of both parties are equal this archaic survival should be, and often is, abrogated."

"Miss Browne said that?" inquired Miss Mary breathlessly.

"She surely did," answered Miss Millicent.

"Oh!" exclaimed the chorus breathlessly.

Professor Boylett appeared unusually preoccupied on the second day afterward. His lecture on Roman history, in fact, was distinctly an absent-minded one.

"Er—one moment, ladies," he began as the class waited its dismissal. "Can anyone tell me whether there is a—er—any attache of this institution whose initials are A. B.?"

"Miss Agatha Browne, professor of economics," chanted the class, and the professor, after staring speechlessly at them for an instant, suddenly bolted through the door.

At that instant Miss Browne was saying:

"A most insulting thing has happened to me, girls. I hesitate to mention it, and should not, did I not fear it is some practical joke engineered by some unworthy member of this seminary. I have received an anonymous letter containing—in short, a proposal of marriage."

"Oh, no, Miss Browne!" exclaimed the class in horror.

"Ladies, your attitude does you credit," said the professor of economics. "Er—by the way, is there any person connected with this seminary whose initials are S. B.?"

"Prof. Sampson Boylett," shouted the class in economics in unison.

Then an extraordinary thing happened. Behind Miss Browne's large spectacles a reddish hue, arising in the neighborhood of either ear, spread and expanded until it completely covered her face.

"Dear me, this is very painful!" murmured Miss Browne. "The class is dismissed."

The class, released from its duties, rushed to the windows and looked out upon the campus. It saw Miss Browne emerge from the portals of the famous institution of learning with a hurried and yet furtive step, if such a term could be applied to any quality or attribute of Miss Browne. With her umbrella folded in her hand, the professor of economics picked her way down the gravelly walk toward the entrance. Then the class and Miss Browne simultaneously perceived a second figure, a bent, irresolute, middle-aged figure approaching the same portals from the classroom in Roman history.

And then occurred a peculiar phenomenon such as had never been known to happen during the memory of the class. For Miss Browne, instead of continuing upon her resolute way toward the gate, made a short cut across the soggy grass—Miss Browne, whose state of health was always known to be exactly commensurate with the hygienic condition of her overshoes.

And, as an immovable body encounters an irresistible force, so Miss Agatha Browne encountered Professor Boylett beside the portals of the Ledham Seminary for Young Ladies. The professor saw her, straightened himself, and spoke.

"Er—among the Samnites there existed a custom"—he began.

"I have always told my class," Miss Browne remarked at the same moment, "that the custom which restrains the female half of the community—"

"Which I would be the last to condemn—"

"From taking the first step—"

"When hints and gentle glances failed—"

"Leading toward the marriage contract—"

"To effect a matrimonial proposition—er—"

"Oh, professor!" exclaimed Miss Agatha, and could say no more.

Inside the seminary there was a great bustle at this moment.

"Milly, Milly," cried the voice of Mary Campbell, "I've got a dandy pair of opera glasses upstairs."

"Don't need them," shouted her friend. "Oh, Mary, didn't you see? Look! Look! Professor Boylett has kissed Miss Agatha. Isn't it dreadful?"

"Dreadful?" answered Miss Mary. "Why, I think it's grand. And just think: Next term the classes in economics and Roman history will be merged!"

Putting the Matter Squarely.

Ben Butler was once chairman of a meeting at which Rufus Choate was booked for an address. Mr. Choate was about to begin his address when a man crawled up to Butler, and whispered to him that the joists in the floor and the supporting beams were giving way because of the heavy pressure on the floor, and they were likely to collapse any moment. Butler turned to the man and whispered to him: "Keep quiet." Then turning to the audience, he said: "A man has brought me information that outside of this hall there are not less than twenty thousand people clamoring for admission. I propose to adjourn this meeting to the common, where all can hear Mr. Choate. Now just see how quickly we can empty this hall." Meanwhile Choate was tugging at Butler's coat tails, saying: "Ben, don't! Stop, Ben. Why, I can't see to read on the common; my voice won't carry in the open air; I can't make them hear," and so on. After most of the audience had left, Butler turned around to Choate, and said: "Say, Choate, would you rather deliver this speech here in this hall or in hell?"—San Francisco Argonaut.

Wasted Time.

"Well, what did you do when the problem came up?"

"Wasted time. Went out and asked the advice of 17 friends."

"What did you get?"

"Seventeen different solutions."

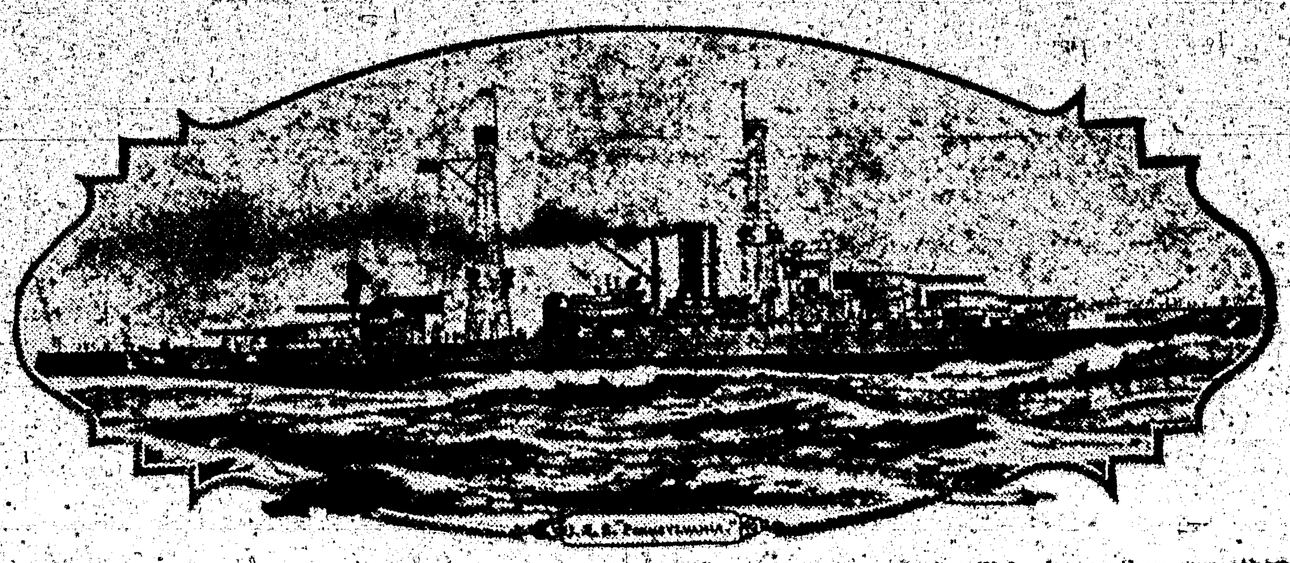
"And then?"

"Then I took the advice of an eighteenth friend and won out."

"And who was your eighteenth friend?"

"Myself."—Cleveland Plain Dealer

WILL BE THE WORLD'S BIGGEST BATTLESHIP



This is the navy department's official sketch of the battleship Pennsylvania, which will be larger than any other warship ever built by any nation. Its tonnage will be 31,000, its length 600 feet and its beam 97 feet, which is almost the limit for safe passage through the Panama canal locks. The total cost of the Pennsylvania ready for service will be about $14,000,000.

GRAVE POST FOUND

Marker at Burial Place of Illinois Pioneer Uncovered.

One Present at Ceremony Tells of Weird Rites of Fox Indians in Placing Memorial Over Grave of Col. George Davenport.

Rock Island, Ill.—An old cedar post placed at the head of the grave of a murdered Illinois pioneer by friendly Fox Indians, who mourned the settler's death, has been uncovered in a heap of musty legal papers in the office of an attorney here. Though worm-eaten and partially decayed at the ends, the unique grave marker still shows weird traces that once were crude sketches symbolical of grief and battlefield achievements.

A band of prairie brigands swooped down upon the home of Col. George Davenport, a wealthy settler who owned the island in the Mississippi on which the government arsenal is now built, and murdered him. The crime, committed July 4, 1845, is recalled by old residents in Rock Island and Davenport, Iowa, which town, by the way, is named after the victim. About the same time that one of the murderers was hanged for the bloody deed some Fox Indians who, through their dealings with Davenport, had come to have a deep friendship for him, fashioned this old cedar grave post and erected it at the head of his grave.

For some years the post marked the grave of Colonel Davenport. Then his body was removed to a family lot in Chippianock cemetery, south of Rock Island, and for years the old grave post of the Indians was thought to be lost. Recently it was discovered when the musty contents of an old law office were moved into modern quarters. The founder of the firm had been Davenport's attorney.

The weird rites with which the Indians planted the grave plot are narrated by one who was present at the ceremony and to whom, according to his statement, the facts stand out in his memory as clearly as ever.

"It was on a Friday afternoon, about the middle of the year 1845, that I went to the island where the Davenport homestead was and where Col. George had been buried. Arrived there, I beheld a band of Fox Indians, with whom he had always been very friendly, lying in a circle about his grave. In the center of the ring of prostrate Indians, the head of the grave, rose a new white cedar post.

"The ceremony began when two of the braves arose and drew weird figures upon the post. Others did the same in pairs and in turn. A third Indian, carrying a war club, advanced and drank to the health of the decedent, then walked three times around the grave, delivering himself of most earnest exhortations. This was repeated until each Indian had taken part in the ceremony. The pictures that were drawn upon the post were to represent the crowning achievements of him who drew them and at the same time were meant to display the grief of the Indians at the loss of their friend.

"Following the ceremony of planting the post a huge feast was set upon the grass. A health was drunk invoking the Great Spirit to open the doors to admit their friend Colonel Davenport. Then meat of various kinds was brought upon the table. After the dinner several Indian dances were indulged in. I left the braves as nightfall came, gathered about a camp fire, preparing further to do honor to their murdered friend."

WOMEN PLAN A UNIQUE BANK

Suffragettes of New York to Have Financial Institution With Only Their Sex Employed.

New York.—According to proposals and plans now under consideration here, New York in the near future is likely to have the country's first suffragette bank, a real financial institution which will operate like any other except for the fact that from president down to office boy, or rather from presidentess to office girl, only women will be concerned with its management and operation.

Many attempts and proposals have been made before by women identified with the suffrage movement both here and in England to start such an institution, but for one reason or another they have failed to be productive of any definite results.

The women behind the present plan, however, believe that this time they will be successful. Just what the plan is they refuse to disclose until the big meeting at which it is to be made public later in the month. As its backers are women of wealth, there is much curiosity as to just what they propose to do.

It is pointed out, however, that if they adhere to the plan of having no man connected with it, the bank will be unique in more ways than one, since it will have a board of directors none of whom serve on any other bank directorate—that is, unless Mrs. Hetty Green is made a director—and will thus be free from the criticism of interlocking directors.

Of course if a few of the city's more prominent bankers should be asked to serve, this claim to distinction would be lost, but even at that financial circles are expressing considerable curiosity over the plans for a real suffragette bank.

CABARET SHOWS ARE BARRED

Philadelphia Police Act on Theory That "Beer and Music Do Not Mix."

Philadelphia, Pa.—"Cabaret" entertainments are placed under the ban by a police order issued recently by Director of Public Safety Porter. More than a quarter of a century ago a license court judge in this city laid down the dictum that "beer and music do not mix." Of late years this injunction has been obeyed more in the breach than in the observance. The presence of music has not been objected to by the authorities until recently, when the prevalence of "cabarets" caused the director to order an investigation and the issuance of the order.

The police served notice of the order on the big hotels and cafes as well as the smaller saloons. Managers of the former, however, declare that they are not affected and their orchestras continued to play.

ONION SCORES BIG VICTORY

County Attorney Refuses Warrant for Man on Woman's Complaint Against Vegetable.

Iola, Kan.—The onion won a legal skirmish here when County Attorney Forrest refused to issue a warrant for Willis Thompson, charged by Miss Lucretia Campbell, a neighbor, with permitting the cooking of onions in his home, the odors from which filled her rooms, causing her great discomfort. Miss Campbell declared that the odor of onions was poisonous to her, and upon that contention she based her demand that Thompson be arrested.

"The state of Kansas will not lend its aid to banish the onion from the home," said the county attorney. "Miss Campbell's remedy is an injunction issued in the district court, if she can obtain one."

Mr. Forrest paid a high tribute to the healthful properties of the onion, quoting Hetty Green as saying she attributed her health and wealth to eating the vegetable daily.

QUEEN FOR DRESS ECONOMY

Mary Frowns Upon Costume Balls and Says Women Should Keep Within Bank Roll.

London.—To the relief of those whose pocket-books are not so large as their ambitions, the word has gone around in the select circle of society which regulates such functions that this season's balls are to be of a simple character and without the slightest suggestion of "freakiness." The reason is that no hostess who encourages anything "daring" in the way of costumes is likely to receive Queen Mary's patronage.

The queen has not issued any official instructions, but her comments on several recent extravagant costume balls and other functions of an unusual character have been duly passed on by the royal ladies in waiting. Herself a simple dresser, Queen Mary has the strongest possible objection to extravagance and extreme fashions. For this reason the hobble, directoire and panier skirts are never seen in her entourage.

She has no real objection to fancy dress balls, but the queen's caustic comments on what she termed the immodesty of the costumes worn by dancers at the recent Arabian Nights, Post-Impressionist and Four Arts balls gave little pleasure to the culprits, but great joy to the retailers of court gossip.

"No woman should dress beyond the limits of her bank roll," is Queen Mary's motto and, although the dressmakers are by no means pleased, there has been a distinct slump in costly entertainments lately.

Burns Barns to Hear Cows.

THE CRIME OF BEING POOR

In the April American Magazine Mayor Brand Whitlock, of Toledo Ohio, gives a most interesting picture of Golden Rule Jones, the famous Mayor of Toledo of a few years ago. Following is an extract:

"He was always going down to the city prisons, or to the workhouse and talking to the poor devils there, quite as if he were one of them, which indeed he felt he was, and as all of us are, if we only knew it. And he was working all the time to get them out of prison, and finally he and I entered into a little contract by which he paid the expenses incident to their trials, the fees for stenographers and that sort of thing—if I would look after their cases Hard as the work was, and sad as was, and grieviously as my law partners complained of the time it took, and of its probable effect on business (since no one wished to be known as a criminal lawyer!,) it did pay in the satisfaction there was in doing a little to comfort and console,—and what was so much more, to compel in one city, at least a discussion of the grounds and the purpose of our institutions. For instance, if some poor girl were arrested, and a jury trial were demanded for her, and her case were given all the care and attention it would have received had she been some wealthy person, the police, when they found they could not convict, were apt to be a little more careful of the liberties of individuals: they began to have a little regard for human rights and for human life,

"We completely broke up the old police practice of arresting persons 'on suspicion' and holding them at the will and pleasure of the police without putting a charge against them; two or three trials before a jury, the members of which could very easily be made to see, when it was pointed out to them a few times in the course of a three days' trial there is nothing more absurd than that policeman should make criminals of people merely by 'suspecting them,' and sending them to prison on that sole account It annoyed the officials of course, because it interfered with their routine, It was no doubt exasperating to be compelled to hang around two or three days and try some wretch according to law, just as if he were somebody of importance and consequence in the world, when they would so much rather have been out to the ball game, or fishing, or playing pinochle in the guard-room at police headquarters with the detail that had been relieved. Jones managed to get himself fined for contempt one day, and he immediately turned the incident to his own advantage and made his point by drawing out his check-book with a flourish, writing his check for the amount of his fine, and declaring that this proved his contention that the only crime our civilization punishes is the crime of being poor.

NEW ANTI-GAMBLING LAW

Approved March 13, 1913

Be it enacted by the Legislature of New Mexico:

Section 1. That any person who shall play for money or other thing of value, any game of chance, by whatsoever name known, or howsoever played, upon conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine of not more than one hundred dollars or by imprisonment for not to exceed three months or both.

Section 2. That any person who conducts or operates any such game, or who knowingly permits any such game to be played upon premises of which he is the owner, lessee or occupant, upon conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine or not more than five hundred dollars or by imprisonment for not more than six months or both

Section 3. That any officer charged with the enforcement of this act who shall knowingly and willfully fail to prosecute violations hereof, upon conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine of not more than one hundred dollars or by imprisonment for not to exceed three months, or both.

Section 4. That it is necessary for the preservation of the public peace and safety of the inhabitants of the State of New Mexico that this act become effective at the earliest possible time, and, therefore, an emergency is hereby declared to exist and this act shall take effect and be in full force and effect from and after its passage and approval

As Sheriff of Lincoln County, New Mexico, it is my duty to enforce the provisions of the above law

SYNOPSIS.

Harding Kent calls on Louise Farrish to propose marriage and finds the house in great excitement over the attempted suicide of her sister Katharine. Kent starts an investigation and finds that Hugh Crandall, suitor for Katharine, who had been forbidden the house by General Farrish, had talked with Katharine over the telephone just before she shot herself. A torn piece of yellow paper is found, at sight of which General Farrish is stricken with paralysis. Kent discovers that Crandall has left town hurriedly. Andrew Elser, an aged banker, commits suicide about the same time as Katharine attempted her life. A yellow envelope is found in Elser's room. Post Office Inspector Davis, Kent's friend, takes up the case. Kent is convinced that Crandall is at the bottom of the mystery. Katharine's strange outcry puzzles the detectives. Kent and Davis search Crandall's room and find an address, Lock Box 17, Ardway, N. J. Kent goes to Ardway to investigate and becomes suspicious of a "Henry Cook." A woman commits suicide at the Ardway Hotel.

CHAPTER VI.—(Continued).

I was thoroughly disgusted with the drivelling way in which the proceedings were being carried on. I could see little hope of any discovery that would establish connection with the similar events in New York. I turned from listening to the witness to studying the face of the man Cook. Could it be possible he was Hugh Crandall? I saw that he was watching the testimony with eager interest. Against my will I had to confess that his face was one that attracted rather than repelled me. While there was a shrewdness about the eyes, the chin was square and firm and the skull well-balanced. I tried to read in the shape of the mouth or the curve of the ears some sign of the criminal, such as I expected to find written on the countenance of Crandall, but it was not there.

"She was sitting there crying."

A sentence of the maid's testimony suddenly thrust itself forward from my subconsciousness as if demanding my attention and I listened intently to what she was saying.

"That was the way it happened that I didn't make up the room the day before. When I went in to do it she was sitting there crying and tearing a letter to bits."

A letter! It came on me in a flash that here was the clue, that this was the connecting link with the other two cases.

I pushed my way forward into the room, determined to learn all there was about this new phase of the case. The proceedings stopped abruptly at the bustle my movement made, and everybody, coroner, jurors and spectators, gaped at me.

"I am a lawyer," I said. "May I ask the witness one or two questions?"

Still the coroner gaped and I waited no longer for his permission.

"Was it a yellow letter?" I asked.

"Now that you speak of it I kind of remember that it was."

"Has the letter been found?"

"She was tearing it in pieces."

"Where are the pieces?"

The eyes of everybody present began roving about the room, as if in answer to my question. The constable instituted a hasty search, in which I myself, the coroner and the jurors joined. I felt that if we could only find those pieces, the mystery might be solved. While the room was being ransacked I kept my eye on Cook. As I asked the question about the letter's color I noticed that he looked startled. I was amazed now to see him edging toward the door. I was tempted to demand that he be restrained and searched. I felt almost sure that if the pieces of the yellow letter were to be found anywhere it would be in his pocket. Yet second thought advised against such rash action. I had no positive proof that Cook was Crandall. Until I had, surely it would be unwise to accuse him. I remembered that there was no train by which he could leave the town until late in the afternoon, so there was little prospect that he could escape me.

"How did you know it was a yellow letter?" the coroner asked me suspiciously, pausing suddenly in his search.

It was an awkward question. I realized that my impetuosity had placed me in a predicament. I was by no means ready to tell him the whole story, and yet the fact that I knew or suspected the color of the letter that she was tearing up certainly indicated that I knew something about the woman.

"I didn't know it."

"Well, what'd you ask the question about it for?" he demanded, his suspicion of me rapidly increasing.

I was thinking quickly what I could ask that would divert his thoughts. I noticed with annoyance that the eyes of every one in the room were on me and that they were curiously awaiting an answer. I assumed an air of mystery and drew the coroner to one side.

"I am perfectly willing to tell you everything," I said. "I am out here on another matter that is something of a mystery in which a yellow letter figures. The letter has disappeared. I never saw or heard of this old woman before, but when the witness mentioned that she was tearing up a letter a sudden notion came to me that it might be the one of which I was in search. A detective who is working on the case will be out here this evening and then I can tell you more about it."

I spoke the last sentence in a whisper so low that it reached only the coroner's ear. He pondered over my statement and then abruptly announced that the inquest was adjourned until nine o'clock the next day. I would have escaped him if I could, but I saw that he was determined to worm out everything I knew or suspected. I decided that activity would be the best remedy for his curiosity. Accordingly I invited the coroner and the constable to come up to my rooms where, without waiting for them to question me, I began firing questions hot-shot at them, suggesting things for them to do, simple things that would have been the first thought of the police of New York or any other large city, but which they had not thought of. Had they telephoned a description of the woman to the Bridgeport police with her name to see if she could be identified as any one who was missing from that city? Had they examined her clothing to see if there was any mark on it that might identify her? Had they studied her writing on the register to see if it gave any indication of being assumed or disguised? Had they examined her pocketbook to see if it contained any clue to a motive? Had they considered whom she might have come to this town to see?

"That idea of calling up the Bridgeport police ain't such a bad one," said the coroner. "Suppose you do it now," he said, turning to the constable.

"I'd like to know who's going to pay for it if I do," the constable objected. "There ain't enough fees in this office for me to be spending my money that way."

"You go ahead and do it and I'll see that you get the money back."

"If you're going to pay it out of your own pocket I'll do it, but if you expect me to wait till you put it through as a lawful expense I ain't taking no chances."

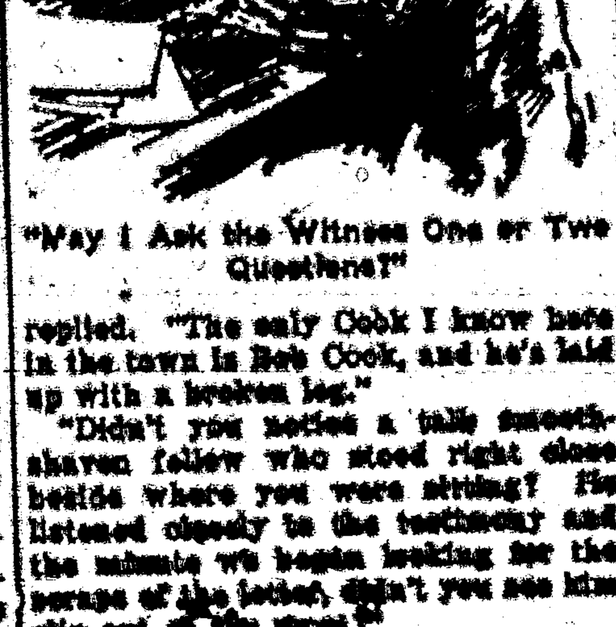
Their petty wrangling over such a trifling amount exasperated me not a little.

"Here," said I, pulling a five-dollar bill from my pocket, "take this and pay for it and tell them to telephone you as soon as they can what they have found out. This ought to cover both the message and the answer and if there is anything left get yourself some cigars with it."

The constable needed no second bidding. As soon as he had disappeared I turned to the coroner:

"Did you notice that man Cook at the inquest? Who is he?"

"I don't know who you mean," he



"May I Ask the Witness One or Two Questions?"

replied. "The only Cook I know here in the town is Bob Cook, and he's laid up with a broken leg."

"Didn't you notice a tall smooth-shaven fellow who stood right close beside where you were sitting? He listened closely to the testimony and the minute we began looking for the scraps of the letter, didn't you see him slip out of the room?"

"Come to think of it," said the coroner, "I believe I did notice him, but I can't say as I seen him going out. Maybe 'twas one of the guests of the hotel."

"I think he is, and I'm pretty sure he's registered in the hotel as Mr. Cook, too, but I'd like to know more about him."

"Let's go down and ask Mahlon. If there's anybody in his hotel he don't know about it's something unusual."

We found Mahlon Williams in the little boxed-off corner behind the hotel desk that was labeled "Private Office." The curious crowd was still gaping at the door of the room where the suicide had taken place, at least such of them as had not adjourned to the bar to talk it over, so that we were alone in the office.

"Mr. Williams," I said, "what do you know about this man Cook, who is stopping here in the hotel?"

"No more than I know about you," said he, "and not as much, in fact, for he didn't ask no peculiar questions at the inquest. Speaking about that letter—"

"How long has this man Cook been in the house?" I interrupted, determined not to let either him or the coroner annoy me with questions.

The hotel-keeper, plainly provoked at my attitude, stared thoughtfully at me for a minute and finally decided to answer my question as the only hope of getting me to answer his.

"He came just the night before you did—got in on the seven-two train."

His answer settled everything in my mind. Cook was Crandall. The arrival of Cook in the village coincided with the departure of Crandall from New York. The haste in which he had departed was explicable by the arrival of the old woman on that train. Evidently he wanted for some reason to arrive in the village at the same time that she did. What had been his motive was still a mystery to me. It flashed across my mind that perhaps, after all, her death might not have been suicide. A clever criminal might easily arrange things to look as though she had hung herself. I determined to make an investigation to see if there was any evidence to prove this, but I said nothing of my suspicions as yet. I already regretted my precipitancy in asking about the yellow letter. The questions of the landlord and the coroner might be deferred for a while, but sooner or later I would have to make some explanation, and I had none to give.

"What is Cook's business?" I asked the landlord hastily, anticipating a question I saw forming on his lips.

"I don't know. He kind of looked to me like a traveling-man—or a lawyer. What was—"

The return of the constable from telephoning saved my answering the question he was about to ask.

"There ain't no woman missing from Bridgeport that the police know anything about," he said sententiously.

"Did ye tell them her name?" asked the coroner.

"Yep. They say there's only three families of Tellers in the telephone book and only four in the directory, and they are going to look them up and telephone inside of an hour."

"Maybe her name wasn't Teller," suggested the hotel-keeper. "I recollect seeing her kind of hesitate as she went to write in the register."

"That's just what I was thinking," I cried, glad to divert his attention once more. "Let us go and look at the register and then examine her clothing. Maybe there are some marks on it."

"That's a good idea," said the coroner. "Wonder we didn't think of that before."

The hotel register showed us little save the name "Mary Jane Teller" in the tremulous old-fashioned hand little used to handling the pen. There was perhaps a little more space between the last two names than after the first—as if she hesitated a moment while deciding what name to use or perhaps with an honest woman's natural aversion to assuming any other name than her own.

"Let's look at the clothing," I suggested, eager for an opportunity to see whether there were any indications that would point to anything other than suicide.

The four of us hastened to the room again. To my annoyance I noted that the rope had been removed from the rafters, though the woman's outer clothing still lay piled on the chair. There seemed to be nothing about the inexpensive black suit to identify the owner, no mark of any kind except the label of the concern in New York from which it had been purchased.

"Where's the black bag she carried?" asked the coroner.

"There was some money in it," Mr. Williams replied. "I put it in the safe."

As we left the room to return to the hotel office I gave a hasty glance at the corpse. From the condition of the face and throat it was all too plain that death had been by strangulation, still, I reasoned, a powerful man might have strangled the woman first and hanged her afterward to conceal his crime. I determined to put the theory up to Davis as soon as he arrived.

Twirling the knob of the ancient safe that stood in the corner, the hotel-keeper reached in and drew out a well-worn hand-bag of black leather and upset the contents on the desk. There were three one-dollar bills, neatly folded, three dimes and eight pennies—a meager amount that suggested the hoarding of pennies for this trip, whatever its purpose. There was a half-ticket, the return stub of a ticket from Bridgeport and another one from New York to Ardway, and that was all, save two neatly folded black-bordered handkerchiefs.

"Looks like she came from Bridgeport, after all," the constable volunteered.

"Maybe she did," said the landlord, unfolding one of the handkerchiefs and holding it up to our gaze. "Maybe she did come from Bridgeport, but her name wasn't Teller—not Mary Jane Teller by a long shot."

In the corner of each handkerchief was a neatly embroidered "S."

It gave me quite a shock as I looked at that mute evidence of her assumed name, to her effort to mask her identity.

Could her name have been Elser?

Was this the way in which she was connected with the two suicides in New York? But even so, suppose she was the sister or relative, or even the unrecognized wife of old Andrew Elser, what possible connection could these two humble people have with Katharine Farrish?

The mystery was growing deeper. How I wished that Inspector Davis would come.

Small Consolation.

In Dunoon (Scotland) the other afternoon one of the municipal employes had a free bath. He is a veteran who drives the cart for watering the roads. While filling the tank of the vehicle the long hosepipe came off the tap, with the result that the water rushed high into the air as if it were anxious to do the aeroplane act. There was no way to get the water turned off except to go straight into the middle of it. The waterman had many trials before he managed to throttle the impromptu fountain. And when he had made it tap the mat, and came out soaked to the skin, he was not cheered up by the remark of a witness of the Homeric contest, who said—"Ach, Donal, never mind; it'll no' dae ye ony harm; it's saut water."

Whale Boat Catches Shark

Marine Monster, Weighing Approximately Eight Tons, Harpooned Off Vancouver Coast.

While scouring the ocean for whales one of the little steamers working from the Kyuquot station landed a thirty foot shark.

The "wolf of the sea" is claimed to be one of the largest ever seen in northern waters and weighed approximately eight tons.

The whaling steamer had been searching vainly for whales for several days and the lookout had grown tired of scanning the surface of the ocean. He was suddenly aroused to action by observing the dorsal fin of a monster shark cutting the water about [illegible] yards on the port bow. As the big sharks yield considerable oil, the ship's officers decided to try for this one in view of the lack of whales.

Steaming to within thirty yards of the shark with the boat, the gunner fired the harpoon from the gun and struck the monster at the first shot. After a terrific fight to hold the struggling sea animal it was hauled aboard and cut up, the steamer resuming her search for the larger mammals.

Officers of the Tees declare that the shark was the largest they had ever seen. It was of the species common to the Pacific coast, but not quite so far north.—Vancouver Sun.

Practical Idea.

As I live in a coke country and have much dirt to contend with, I find that I save much work by putting all dishes not in constant use into paper bags, leaving out one to put on top as a sample, says a correspondent of the Pictorial Review. This plan saves washing when extra dishes are needed.

A Good Defense.

"How could you tell that ugly girl she had a complexion like peaches and cream?" "No lie about that. I meant yellow peaches and sour cream."

Why a certain parrot never learned to talk, Current Opinion tells in these words:

Kerrigan went on a trip to South America, and while there bought a pretty Spanish parrot as a present for his friend O'Brien. He shipped the bird to O'Brien at once, and when he got back home he said:

"Dinny, did ye get the fine parrot I sint ye from Rio Janeiro?"

"I did that, Kerrigan, and I want to tell ye that I never put me teeth into a tougher bird in me life!"

"This patient looks harmless."

"He is. That's the one we call the sonnetteer."

"And did making sonnets drive him insane?"

"No. I am told his trouble originated in the fact that he wrote a peculiarly beautiful sonnet called 'On Visiting the Scenes of Happy Days,' and that the printer accidentally omitted a line. When the poet saw he had put his name to a thirteen-line 'sonnet' he went stark mad."

"Unhappy fellow. He has a kind face."

So back we went later. He had found them.

EDITOR PAUSES TO INQUIRE

Seems to Have a Feeling That He Is Making an Argument Against Woman Suffrage.

Enemies of votes for women, in search of arguments to confound the orators of the case, may use for what it is worth the following incident which happened in Madison square one day last week:

A young woman of pleasing and picturesque aspect came northward from Twenty-third street across the square. She struggled under the weight of a dog-hamper, and inside one could see a bright-eyed, restless fox terrier, eager to be let out. The woman carried a leash in her left hand, and the dog had on a collar with a snap. An interested observed followed the woman. She struggled on six blocks up Madison avenue before she reached her destination, a residence on the east side of the street. Then she unlocked the hamper, snapped the leash on the dog's collar, and took him inside the house. Why had she carried an able-bodied, 25-pound fox terrier, who wanted to be let out, all that distance?—New York Evening Post.

Where It Happened.

A seven-year-old colored boy was before Judge Taylor in juvenile court not long ago for shooting at his playmate with a rifle. As is customary in all such cases the attorney in questioning the boy asked:

"You were in the state of Indiana, Marion county, when this happened, were you not?"

The little fellow studied a minute and then answered:

"No, sah. Ah was on th' front po'ch."—Indianapolis News.

HOW TO TREAT PIMPLES AND BLACKHEADS

For pimples and blackheads the following is a most effective and economical treatment: Gently smear the affected parts with Cuticura Ointment, on the end of the finger, but do not rub. Wash off the Cuticura Ointment in five minutes with Cuticura Soap and hot water and continue bathing for some minutes. This treatment is best on rising and retiring. At other times use Cuticura Soap freely for the toilet and bath, to assist in preventing inflammation, irritation and clogging of the pores, the common cause of pimples, blackheads, redness and roughness, yellow, oily, mothy and other unwholesome conditions of the skin.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment sold throughout the world. Sample of each free with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. L, Boston." Adv.

Healthy Old Age Is What Dr. Hartman Advocates

S. B. HARTMAN, M. D.

See here, young man, I heard you complaining the other day of being nervous, sleepless, brain fagged, and the like. A young man, hardly in the zenith of your life, complaining of such things!

And this is very common, too. You are not the only one. Probably three out of four of the young men of today have just such symptoms as you describe. What does it mean?

Look at me. I am eighty-two years old. Sound as a nut. Tough as hickory. Do not know what it is to be tired. While I cannot do as much physical work as I used to when a young man, I can do a great deal. Probably twice as much as the average young man of today.

What has kept me so strong and well? I will tell you. I do not use tobacco. I do not use alcoholic stimulants. I do not use tea or coffee habitually. I go to bed early. I get up early. I am always doing something; something that occupies my body and mind. I love to work. I take a cold water towel bath every morning, winter and summer. It is these things that have kept me well and strong. You could be just as well and strong as I am if you would do as I do.

You may ask, do I never get sick, have I never had occasion to take medicine at all? Yes, I have got sick. Sometimes I feel a little touch of climatic trouble, like cold, malaria, slight catarrhal symptoms, but my only medicine is Peruna. I always keep a bottle of Peruna in the house. I keep a bottle of Peruna on my desk in my office. Once in a while I take some. I do not take it habitually. Take it only when I feel a little out of sorts. One swallow will perhaps be all that will be necessary, but it is always handy by.

It is a sorry sight to see the young men of today begin to peter out physically when they ought to be in the glory of their manhood and the height of their vigor. Eat plain food. Live frugally. Give up all weakening habits. Live as God intended you to live. Take Peruna when you do not feel as well as usual.

If you want me to I will send you a book which will tell you a great many more things about yourself and about matters that may be of great value to you. Enclose a two-cent stamp for postage and the book will be sent in a plain wrapper and you will not be troubled with any follow-up letters or advertisements.

Peruna is for sale at all drug stores.

A WONDERFUL DISCOVERY.

In this age of research and experiment, all nature is ransacked by the scientist for the comfort and happiness of man. Science has indeed made giant strides in the past century, and among the—by no means least important—discoveries in medicine is that of Therapion, which has been used with great success in French Hospitals and that it is worthy the attention of those who suffer from kidney, bladder, nervous diseases, chronic weaknesses, ulcers, skin eruptions, piles, &c., there is no doubt. In fact it seems evident from the big stir created amongst specialists, that THERAPION is destined to cast into oblivion all those questionable remedies that were formerly the sole reliance of medical men. It is of course impossible to tell sufferers all we should like to tell them in this short article, but those who would like to know more about this remedy that has effected so many—we might almost say, miraculous cures, should send addressed envelope for FREE book to Dr. Le Clerc Med. Co., Haverstock Road, Hampstead, London, Eng. and decide for themselves whether the New French Remedy "THERAPION" No. 1, No. 2 or No. 3 is what they require and have been seeking in vain during a life of misery, suffering, ill health and unhappiness. Therapion is sold by druggists or mail $1.00. Fougera Co., 90 Beekman St., New York.

Woman Is As Old As She Looks

No woman wants to look old. Many in their effort to look youthful resort to the "beauty doctor's" prescriptions. Their mistake is that they visit the wrong department in the drug store.

Beauty depends upon health.

Worry, sleepless nights, headaches, pains, disorders, irregularities and weaknesses of a distinctly feminine character in a short time bring the dull eye, the "crow's feet," the haggard look, drooping shoulders, and the faltering step.

To retain the appearance of youth you must retain health. Instead of lotions, powders and paints, ask your druggist for

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription

This famous medicine strikes at the very root of these enemies of your youthful appearance. It makes you not only look young, but feel young.

Your druggist can supply you in liquid or tablet form; or send 50 one-cent stamps to Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N.Y. and a trial box will be mailed you.
