BUILD UP YOUR TOWN

The Menace of the Mail Order House to a Village and Community

WHAT'S DUE HOME MERCHANT

That the mail order houses in the large cities have become a menace to the smaller cities, towns and communities is proved by the large patronage they enjoy from all over the entire country, and further substantiated by the number of packages carried by transportation companies, which under the law must bear the name or some mark of identification by which the shipper is known.

This mail order business got its inception from men who made a habit of buying up second-hand goods, stocks from bankrupt firms and fire damaged or salvage goods from fire losses. To these were added goods that were culled by manufacturers and graded seconds and thirds.

These were shrewd business men, men who believed in advertising, and, realizing the possibilities of advertising, commenced their business entirely along these lines, and to prove the success of advertising no better evidence could possibly be offered than the fact that nearly every weekly—farm, industrial, social or religious—carries their advertisements and also that they send out catalogues of enormous size, beautifully illustrated and embellished, costing hundreds of thousands of dollars to publish.

Today they have grown to such enormous size that they own and control factories, while they contract to sell the entire output of other factories.

However, the plants they control and operate manufacture what is termed in commercial parlance as competitive goods—something that every merchant can sell at a low price to meet the demands for cheap merchandise.

But as to standard and high class goods made by large and reliable firms you never see these goods advertised by mail order houses, or if you do the price is just the same as fixed by the manufacturers for all dealers.

Therefore when one orders articles of the low priced and cheaper kinds he is sure to get just what he buys—cheaply made goods and seconds and no cheaper than he can buy right at home when freight charges, money order fees and postage are added.

Thousands of dollars annually are being sent to these mail order houses from this vicinity, thus depriving the home merchant of his rightful patronage. And yet, no matter how much the merchant may be dependent on the patronage of members of his community, he is supposed to give and to aid in every work undertaken for the material betterment of his town, and he does, being often coerced into giving by the demands of his customers, fearing to offend them because of the fear of loss of patronage.

There can be no question but that all of our people are in duty bound to patronize home merchants. To them you owe allegiance and support, and we now ask you candidly: Are you giving it to them?

If you are buying goods out of your home town—more particularly from mail order houses and merchants in other cities—you are undermining the home merchant and likewise the very foundation of your own well being. Every dime that you send to a mail order house makes that much harder the success of your home merchant and likewise retards the growth of your town. The money you send to mail order houses is taken entirely out of local circulation—is gone forever.

Whereas, if you spend it with a home merchant he in turn will spend it with some one else—perhaps pay it back to your father, your son, or brother, sister or daughter as salary, and thus it comes back into the family, doing a universal good.

That many of our home people are ordering goods from mail order houses is a well known fact. One has but to visit the depot and express office to find therein daily many packages addressed to them and likewise bearing the name and address of certain mail order houses. These people are known to our merchants, and that's a fact. These packages consist of clothing, dry goods, groceries, drugs, toilet articles, furniture, hardware, carpenter's tools, farm implements and what not, all of which could be purchased from our own home merchants, quality considered, freight charges added and time in transportation, just as cheaply as from any mail order house in the country.

Supposing the merchants should band themselves together and refuse credit to those who patronize these mail order houses and further refuse to employ members of families who do this or refuse to buy the wares of these people? Wouldn't they find living mighty hard?

Why do communities become towns and cities?

Have you ever asked yourself this question?

Did you think they just happened, or had you ever thought that there was a special need for them?

In the beginning of time—as far back as history takes us—we find that men have banded themselves together for many and obvious reasons, chief among which are the benefits to be gained from organized society as a social, intellectual, spiritual and commercial center.

Collectively we are strong, forceful and aggressive and possess power and means to attain a growth which will give us and our progeny opportunities for better living—to develop our moral, spiritual and intellectual life.

Therefore the success and happiness of every citizen of any community lies in the interest he takes in that community and the good work he can do to assist its upbuilding.

If we are to succeed as individuals and as a community we must not only strive for our own personal success and welfare, but must give of our work and substance unselfishly to help the others.

Everything we do to help in the upbuilding and advancement of our city we do just that much toward our own personal success. No man can live and prosper on himself alone, for we are interdependent, and, realizing this, if we as citizens will all unite and pull together for the common good we will prosper as a city and consequently as individuals.

The success of a town depends on the success of its business men, while the success of the business men depends on support they receive from the people at large, each being, however, dependent on the other.

No merchant can succeed without the patronage of the public. He is absolutely and entirely dependent on the custom of each and every individual who has a penny to spend, the little mite of each, taken in the aggregate, making the volume on which he runs his business. The merchant, having plenty of competition, must, in order to get the people's patronage, figure his prices close and offer to them the very best inducements possible.

LINCOLN COUNTY NOTES

The Sunday service and basket dinner at Angus was well attended by people from the Upper Bonito. A shower prevented the dinner being served in the open.

Mr. Ferguson of the Mesa discovered a bear in his corn field one day last week. Mr. Kelsey was with him when the discovery was made and after an exciting chase the bear was killed with a shot gun. He ran some distance after being shot and climbed a tree from which he dropped soon afterward.

Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Kimbell and Mrs. Scott were guests of the Rice family for a few days this week. They were accompanied by Miss Ruth Edminsten of Carrizozo and Miss Frances Wilson of Big Springs, Texas. Miss Harriet Kimbell who has been visiting here for the past week returned home with the party Tuesday.

Last Saturday was set aside by those interested in the cemetery at Angus as clean-up day. While the merchant pays large rentals, taxes, insurance, besides employing many clerks and assistants, in order to maintain and conduct his business in such a manner as to meet your approval, and to succeed he must have your patronage to make his business pay.

This community has some as fine stores—every kind—and conducted by as fine a set of men as you will find anywhere on the face of the globe—liberal, big-hearted, progressive men. No better retail stores, no better banks, no better mills, no better schools, no better churches can be found anywhere than right here in your home town, all—absolutely all—made possible only by and through the co-operation and giving of the business men.

But with all of these extraordinary accomplishments, there are some things being done today which are stumbling blocks in the path of our greater growth and further development—differences, if you please, which we must reconcile and overcome if we are to continue to grow and prosper.—C. P. Downs.

men pulled weeds, mowed the grass and improved the looks of the place generally the ladies prepared a basket lunch and all enjoyed a social time after their work was accomplished. The cemetery at Angus is the best kept burying ground in the county and the people who keep it so deserve much credit.

LIBERAL LAND LAWS

Senate Passes Bills to Reduce Cultivation Required on Homesteads

IMPROVEMENTS SUBSTITUTED

A bill has passed the United States Senate, as mentioned in the Outlook last week, which provides that in lieu of cultivation required under the Homestead act that the improvements on a homestead can be given in proof at $1.50 per acre per year on 160 acre entries and 75c per acre on 320 acre entries.

While the bill has not passed the House as yet Senator Fall of New Mexico in a letter to the editor this week stated that "It took a strong combined effort on the part of the senators from the public land states to secure favorable action of the senate on this measure. Recognizing the importance and the benefits to homesteaders in New Mexico in this act, it is my intention to follow same to the House of Representatives and do all I can to secure its passage through that body."

There is no indicated a possibility of the law passing and if it does become effective it will be a great aid to the homesteaders in New Mexico, especially those who are in the stock business primarily and do not wish to plow up their land, without having sufficient water to irrigate the required area.

The Bill as it passed the House is as follows:

To amend an Act entitled "An Act to amend sections twenty-two hundred and ninety-one and twenty-two hundred and ninety-seven of the Revised Statutes of the United States, relating to homesteads."

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the provisions pertaining to cultivation by entrymen of homestead lands as set forth in the section of the Act approved June sixth, nineteen hundred and twelve, entitled "An Act to amend section twenty-two hundred and ninety-one and section twenty-two hundred and ninety-seven of the Revised Statutes of the United States, relating to homesteads," be amended to read as follows:

"Provided further, That the entryman shall, in order to comply with the requirements of cultivation herein provided for, cultivate not less than one sixteenth of the area of his entry, beginning with the second year of the entry, and not less than one-eighth, beginning with the third year of entry, and until final proof, except that in the case of entries under section six of the enlarged homestead law double the area of cultivation herein provided shall be required: Provided, That the entryman in lieu of cultivation required herein may make improvements upon his entry by constructing fences or buildings, by slashing, clearing, or in other ways preparing the land for cultivation, by planting orchard, or by otherwise making the homestead habitable or capable of production, said improvements to aggregate an amount each year of not less than $150 per acre, except that in cases of entries under section six of the enlarged homestead law the amount of improvements shall be not less than 75 cents per acre: Provided, That the above provision as to cultivation shall not apply to entries under the Act of April twenty-eighth, nineteen hundred and four, commonly known as the Kinkaid Act, or entries under the Act of June seventeenth, nineteen hundred and two, commonly known as the reclamation Act, and that the provisions of this section relative to the homestead period shall apply to all unperfected entries hereafter made upon which residence is required."

ETON SPORT BRUTAL

Cruelty in Weekly Run of Hounds and Horses.

Canon Defends the Practice, Declaring That He Thinks It Good and Keeps Cruading Spirit From Undesirable Activities.

London.—Almost under the walls of Eton college a scene was enacted recently, which, for sheer brutality, it would be hard to beat. A hard pressed hare which the boys of the college had been hunting with a pack of hounds (for beagles), maintained at the college for this purpose, twice swam the river with the pack close behind and a half hundred boys yelling like fiends on the banks, and was in the act of swimming it a third time when it was pulled under and killed amid the enthusiastic cheers of the young Etonians who, of course, are mostly the sons of noblemen and other aristocrats, and form the nucleus of the ruling class of the future in this country.

This termination to the regular weekly run of the Eton beagles was a little more brutal than usual, but not much more. The Eton beagles, which are supported by subscriptions, nearly always succeeded in killing, as the phrase goes, when the carcass of the slaughtered hare is whirled triumphantly round the head of the chief boy whip and torn to pieces by the yelling pack, amid whoops of triumph from a gloating field. A similar triumph of the Eton beagles, it may be remembered, was recalled by that noble sportsman, Lord Rosemore, in his recent book of reminiscences in these words: "One of the prettiest things I ever saw was a hare, very hard pressed, that took to the water and swam right out into the middle with all the hounds after her, but she was, unfortunately, so beat that she was drowned from sheer exhaustion half-way across."

The latest exhibition of brutality at Eton has shocked humanitarians, and an influentially signed petition was presented the other day to Canon Lytton, the revered head master of Eton college, begging him to do away with the practice of hare hunting at Eton, on the ground that its effects is "to stimulate cruelty among the young." This, by the way, is by no means the first petition of the kind that has been laid before a head of the famous college with a similar object, others in the past having been signed by Herbert Spencer, Sir Frederick Treves, Sir A. Conan Doyle, the late Lord Wolseley and other famous men, but all without avail.

After due reflection Canon Lytton, who himself is the son of a lord, has replied to the petition in a letter in which he declines to do away with the beagles, and an exceedingly remarkable letter it is. To begin with, this man of God, who, before becoming head master of Eton, was the honorable canon of St. Albans, and who is the author, among other books, of one called "Studies in the Sermon of the Mount," asserts that far from there being an increase of cruelty among English boys, "many educators are not without misgivings at the almost unnatural gentleness of the modern schoolboy compared with his forefather."

"How insignificant, then," says the canon, "must the influence of this kind of hunting be in the opposite direction." The reverend canon ends his letter by declaring that, "as far as possible, all cruelty has been banished" from the hunting and killing of hares by the Eton boys. Needless to say, his shuffling apology, as it is termed, has called forth a broadside of withering sarcasm. One of those who pay their compliments in the canon in no uncertain terms is Sir Philip Burne Jones, while among the reverend headmaster's critics are several old Etonians, one of whom, after recalling Lord Rosemore's "pretty sight," remarks: "That's my idea of how the youth of the nation should be brought up, and that's why I am in hearty sympathy with Canon Lytton's reasoning. Let him go on as he is going, then he will run no risk of offending Lord Bung, or Sir Gorgias Mitas, or other influential people who have their sons at Eton. I was nearly seven years there myself, and was never troubled by any stupid humanitarian teaching."

MUST SWIM FOR DIPLOMA

Columbia University Student Faced Other Tests, but Sinks at Swimming Pool.

New York.—Columbia university has taken a new stand in the matter of graduation requirements. The authorities declined to award a diploma to Felix Metzger Rosenstock at the commencement exercises unless he could prove himself cured of sarcocysticercosis.

In other words, there is a rule at Columbia that no college degree can be won unless the candidate has learned to swim the length of the pool in the gymnasium. The only exception allowed in case of physical disability, attested by a physician's certificate.

Rosenstock, who passed all the other examinations, completely balked at swimming throughout his college course, and as an excuse declared he was suffering from a terrible skin disease known as the sarcocysticercosis. He obtained a physician's signature to this statement. The physical director could not do

JEALOUSY IN MONKEY CAGE

Susie Breaks Betty's Leg Because Baldy is Too Marked in His Attentions to Her.

New York.—Miss Jealousy seems able to slip right through the iron bars of a monkey cage. She performed this feat at the Bronx zoo. Susie, Betty, a popular five-year-old chimpanzee, is laid up with a broken leg.

Gossily, as it was handled about animal circles, had it that Baldy, Lethario of the chimpanzee cage, of late has been overindulged to Betty. This attitude of Baldy has made no great hit with Susie, a more than intelligent chimpanzee.

Betty, apart on a bar, was quietly making ready for an afternoon's diversion. Susie, who was swinging on a trapeze, noted her. Susie thereupon jumped from the trapeze, giving it a vicious peek that sent it crashing into Miss Betty, at her toilet. Doctor Blair put Betty's leg in splints.

Misunderstanding goes on like a fallen stick in a stocking.—Gotha.

ROOSEVELT TO REDUCE FAT

Strenuous Colonel Will Ride Horse back and Hunt Last Indians in Arizona.

New York.—Ease and an office chair and too much sugar on his cereal have done the trick for Colonel Roosevelt. He's getting fat—again. There's only one course possible to the vigorous colonel when this bulbous condition of the equator develops. He at once determines to get out where he can ride a horse and holler and work that superfluity down to a hollow. So that this summer, according to the gossip that has fixed up from Oyster Bay, he will go out to Arizona and hunt for a lost tribe of Indians. Incidentally, he will rediscover the last hole in his belt.

"Lost Indians in Arizona?" said Doctor Goddard of the department of anthropology of the Museum of Natural History. "Not precisely. But it is true that there are some out there that have never been found."

It appears that there are Indians scattered all over Arizona—the Wall-pais and the Hopis and the Pinas and the Papagoes and the Apaches, and chief of them all the Navajoes. A good many of them earn an honest living by giving an aboriginally modified Bill show for the benefit of summer tourists. Others keep sheep and screen every time one touches schedule K. Still others peddle Massachusetts blankets in bright colors to persons from Boston. And others live out in the mountains, far from the maddening white man, just about as their ancestors did about the time that Cortez discovered the toehold as a means of getting rich quickly.

"The wildest lot," said Doctor Goddard, "are the Navajoes. They are perfectly peaceful, but we have had no report on the tribes in the western part of Arizona. There are men twenty-five years old who have never seen a white man. No doubt a visit to them would be entertaining and instructive."

It will be if the colonel is the visitor.

BANISHED

Coffee Finally Had to Go.

The way some persons cling to coffee, even after they know it is doing them harm, is a puzzle. But it is an easy matter to give it up for good, when Postum is properly made and used instead. A girl writes: "Mother had been suffering with nervous headaches for seven weary years, but kept on drinking coffee. "One day I asked her why she did not give up coffee, as a cousin of mine had done who had taken to Postum. But Mother was such a slave to coffee she thought it would be terrible to give it up. "Finally, one day, she made the change to Postum, and quickly her headaches disappeared. One morning while she was drinking Postum so freely and with such relish, I asked for a taste. "That started me on Postum and I now drink it more freely than I did coffee, which never comes into our house now."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Write for booklet, "The Road to Wellville." Postum comes in two forms. Regular Postum (must be boiled.) Instant Postum doesn't require boiling, but is prepared instantly by stirring a level teaspoonful in an ordinary cup of hot water, which makes it right for most persons. A big cup requires more and some people who like strong things put in a heaping spoonful and temper it with a large supply of cream. Experiment until you know the amount that pleases your palate and have it served that way in the future. "There's a Reason" for Postum.

"Temple in Sphinx" Found To Be Hoax

Diagrammatic View of the Discoveries Reported to Have Been Found in the Sphinx and Which It Now Appears Was a Great Hoax.

It is not often that the serious science of archaeology is enlivened by a hoax, but one of a daring kind has recently caused considerable annoyance to Egyptologists in general, and to one well-known scholar, Dr. E. Reissner, in particular.

Some weeks ago there was printed all over the world an account of some astonishing discoveries made in regard to the famous Sphinx at Gizeh. It stated that Dr. Reissner, who has for some years been working on behalf of the University of Harvard, had made some most astonishing discoveries in the interior of the great statue of the Sphinx, which for centuries has been the guardian of the royal necropolis at Gizeh.

Had it not been for the unjustifiable use of the name of Dr. Reissner, who is well known as an explorer and one of the great authorities on the prehistoric antiquities of Egypt, the account would have been treated with the ridicule it deserved.

According to the account published extensively in England and America Dr. Reissner had discovered a large temple over 100 feet long within the body of the Sphinx, and, connected with this by a tunnel, a second small temple, some 60 feet long by 14 feet wide, in the head of the Sphinx.

The larger temple was described as the tomb of Menes or Menes, the first of the Pharaohs, and a drawing was given of an ebony tablet inscribed in archaic characters which was said to have been found in the temple.

The announcement of this startling discovery caused immediate inquiry. The chief authorities at the Cairo museum, Prof. Sir Gaston Maspero and Captain Weigall, the inspector of antiquities for the Cairo district, both denied the slightest basis for the report. No attempt to explore the interior of the Sphinx had been made, nor would any such explorations be allowed, as the nature and character of the monument are already well known. Moreover Dr. Reissner has not been working in the Cairo province this season, having been, as for the last few years, in Nubia and the Sudan. The absence of Dr. Reissner from Cairo was no doubt the reason for the selection of his name in connection with the hoax.

The true story of the Sphinx, which is very simple, remains, therefore, unchanged. The great limestone block out of which the colossal figure is hewn forms the eastern termination of the limestone platform on which the pyramids are built. No doubt in the remote prehistoric times the projecting rock had become weathered into the rude outline of the human head and face. There are many similar wind-worn rocks to be seen on the banks of the Nile, and there is usually a superstitious sanctity attributed to them by Arabs, no doubt inherited from the old Egyptians.

In early historic times, certainly before the age of the pyramid builders, some 4,000 years before our era, the figure was improved by human hands, the head and beard being carved, while in later ages the whole was painted red, which gives it the appearance of sandstone.

Portions of the serpent, which adorned the forehead of the Sphinx and of the beard are to be seen in the British museum. The nature of the stone and painting are clearly to be seen.

The Sphinx of Gizeh figures little in Egyptian literature, the chief reference to it being in the time of Thothmes IV., of the eighteenth dynasty, B. C. 1450. It was this monarch who built or restored the small temple between the fore paws. In the large tablet at the end of the temple Thothmes tells an interesting story. The king had been hunting in the district and, being tired at noonday, lay down to rest beneath the shadow of the Sphinx.

During his slumber, the god Ra Heru Khuti (Harmachis), to whom the Sphinx was sacred, appeared to him in a dream and ordered him to clear away the sand which had then, as now, been wind driven to such an extent as to bury the temple.

This task Thothmes accomplished, but by the time of Ramses II. the temple was again buried in the sand. In recent years it was cleared by M. Mariette but is now nearly buried by the desert dust again.

A strange romance of the east lies hidden behind the history of a collection of Persian lustre tiles that will be on exhibition in London next week. In the Maidan Mosque, at Kasan, there once stood a great Mihrab, or praying niche, that was made by the most cunning artists of the thirteenth century. Fifty years ago the tiles, which were made by a process of which the secret has long been lost, began to disappear. One by one they passed out of the mosque at irregular intervals. No one knew how they vanished or who took them, and when a guard was set to watch over the sacred treasure by night he was found in the morning strangled in front of the Mihrab.

Far away, in Teheran, an Englishman, who was interested in Persian pottery, received occasionally beautiful glazed tiles from a mysterious native who could not or would not tell him where they came from. He continued to buy these tiles for fifteen years; one day he discovered that some of them, when placed next to one another, had readable Kufic and Neakhy inscriptions from the Koran.

He began a great game of jigsaw with the tiles, and ultimately built up with but few tiles missing, the famous lost Mihrab.

The collection, which belongs to Mr. John Richard Freese, the Englishman in question, contains some other extraordinary relics, including a part of the tomb of the Prophet Daniel, covered with crude carvings, and an Armenian altar-piece of twelfth-century workmanship, in which all the divine and human figures are splashed with blood.

One of the most valuable things in the exhibition is a carpet made for the Shah Abbas, who reigned from 1587 to 1628 A. D. This carpet is thirty-one feet long by twelve feet wide, and its pattern reproduces the features of an old-time Persian pleasure garden. It is said to be insured for $5,000.

They Hate to Think.
"If a man will only keep his wits about him, he can avoid many unpleasant experiences."

"Perhaps so, but keeping their wits about them is in itself a very unpleasant experience for some people."

Inattention.
She—The speaker at our club today told of a lot of things we poor wives go through.

He—Did she mention their husband's pockets?

Gathered Smiles

SAME WITH HER.

Eleven o'clock was the hour, and the lady was both tired and bored. He was paying his addresses to her, but she was not very sweet to him, and yet she did not know how to dispose of him kindly and gently.

Half an hour later he was still rambling on, and then he turned to that ever-effervescent subject, his health.

"Yes, Miss Mollie," he said, "I know I'm not well. Seldom, indeed, do I feel myself. It's only my nerves that keeps me up at all."

She was a nice girl, but she couldn't resist the temptation. It was too, too much.

"Oh," she said, meekly, "that's funny! That's what's keeping me up, too!"

Then he departed, slowly, sadly, for ever and a day.

An Exception.

"George, dear, what's all this trouble between the Californians and the Japanese?"

"Why, the Californians don't want the Japanese in that state to become citizens and hold property."

"But, George, I noticed that all the students in the graduating class at a California theological school this year are Japanese. Why should the Californians permit this?"

"Oh, that's all right. Theological students are never expected to hold any property."

Pat and the Turkey.

Not long ago, in a western market town, I chanced to observe an Irishman with a live turkey under his arm. The turkey was squawking and gobbling in a distressed way, a racket to which the Irishman did not at first pay any particular notice. Finally, however, the disturbance got on the Celt's nerves. Giving the bird a poke in the side he exclaimed:

"Be quiet, you! What's the matter wid ye, anyhow? Why should ye want to walk whin I'm willin' to carry ye?"

—Harper's Magazine.

TRIFLE SUSPICIOUS.

Mrs. Borderhouse—Why don't you have some soup, Mr. Skinnle? It will not hurt you.

Mr. Skinnle—I'm afraid of it, ma'am. I think it should be re-strained!

Not in the Nature of Things.
"Colonel," said the man with the hunted look in his eye, "you resided in the far west for many years, did you not?"

"I did."
"Was it a matter of common knowledge and observation out there that landslides happened oftener early in the month of May than at any other time in the year?"

"It was not, so far as I know."
"Then May 1 is not the natural and heaven ordained moving day! That is what I have always contended! Thank you, colonel!"

The Optimistic Author.
"How are you getting along with your new book, Scribbles?"

"Oh, first rate, I've some of the happiest sub-titles for the chapters imaginable."

"Have you thought up anything to put into the chapters?"

"No, but the titles are so felicitous that I am confident of being able to write a capital book."

Wise Jinx.

"I don't know what to make of Jinx."

"How's that?"

"I just met him and asked him what he thought of my new book, and he said to call him up some time and he would tell me over the phone. What do you think of that?"

"I think Jinx wishes to avoid a fight."

What He Was.

Miss Chatterton—I hear you've been operating in the stock market. Were you a bull or a bear?

Mr. Smatterton—Neither. I was the goat.

Contingency.

"There is one cruel possibility about a maiden speech."

"What is that?"

"That it may also be a miss."

Old Story.

"He never believed in banks."

"I see. Did the rats make a nest of his money, or was it burned up in the parlor stove?"

Wrong Place.

"Try the new clerk in the tableware department."

"I am afraid that would not do for him. He makes too many breaks."

Literally.

"A dressmaker can soon tie an extravagant woman up."

"Yes, especially with the new hobbie skirts."

USUAL THING.

Joak—My brother went fishing yesterday.

Hoax—How many did he bring back?

"About half a dozen."

"Ferd?"

"No, fish stories."

Weary—Look at dat signpost, Clarence. Let's retrace our footsteps quick.

At the Circus.

"I should think graffics would make a very exciting race, more so than horses."

"Why so?"

"Think of the point where any of the entries would be running neck and neck!"

Something to Break.

"This article says we should keep our servants interested and amused. I believe I'll get our cook a set of books."

"I think a set of new china would amuse her more."

Adopting the Suggestion.

"Shorty, you gourdhead, you're carrying three perfectly good umbrellas under your arm, and it's raining hard! Why don't you put up one of them?"

"Gosh, that isn't a bad idea, Squinchley! I believe I'll put up all three of 'em."

Whereupon Shorty executed a quick sidestep into a pawnshop that happened to be convenient.

Deciding Point.

"What do you think of the first work in this new house?"

"I think that depends entirely on the disposition of its prospective mistress."

His Other Name Hl.

Griggs—I wonder if Roller is living within his income?

Griggs—Within it? Why, he's living so far beyond it that they may be said to be really living apart.

Doubtful Proposition.

"Don't you believe graft should meet with unflinching resistance?"

"Well, that depends on what chances there are for finching."

WHY EDITORS EDIT

George Fitch, the well-known humorous writer, has written a vest pocket essay on "The Editor." Fitch began his newspaper career as a reporter at $8 a week, but today is a litterateur at many times $50 a week. The last sentence of his observations which are printed below, probably explains why Mr. Fitch gave up editing for contributing.

"An editor is a tired nervous man who decides what shall go into a newspaper and explains why it got in afterwards.

"The editor works upstairs at an antique desk entirely surrounded by old papers, and produces the results which enables the business manager to sit down stairs in a room with mahogany furniture and a Persian rug and to respond to the toasts at great banquets in solemn state and a dress suit.

"It is the editor's duty to feel the pulse of the world and hold the stethoscope to business; to assist at the birth of history, to translate the present, refute the past and arrange the future; to illuminate ignorance, reward merit, put the spotlight on villainy and the pulmotor on reform; to make statesmen and desecrate demagogues, to elect presidents, crown heroes and secure bigger salaries for baseball pitchers; to act as an alarm clock for public opinion, as an elevator for political candidates, and as a goat for every man who says something in a careless moment and who repents later by declaring that he was misquoted; to embalm truth, annihilate error, to bring the national tear for great misfortunes and the national laugh at great foolishness.

"For doing all this some editors get as much as $200 a month.

"An editor can lower a tariff, head off war, harness the wrath of the whole people and raise a million dollars for flood sufferers.

"And some editors are so powerful that they can raise their own salaries $10 a week.

"Editors are seldom praised, but they do not mind that. If the red-faced man who is seeking an editor fails to find him and has to lick the janitor instead, the editor is well satisfied with life.

"Editors do not often ride in automobiles and if they save any money the business office feels as cheap about it as if it had paid too much for printer's ink.

"Some men are born editors, but more of them die at the job."

BIBLE STUDY ON WOES, ANCIENT AND MODERN.

Amos 6:1-8—June 22.

"Seek good, and not evil, that ye may live."
Amos 5:14.

IT is safe to say that everybody is seeking good, and not evil. Everybody is seeking pleasure, and not misery—happiness, and not woe. The difficulty is that our judgments are more or less perverted. Some have greater wisdom than others; but there is none perfect, "none righteous, no, not one." All come short of the glorious standard which God has set.

The difficulty is that we were all born in sin, and are all misshapen. Not only our bodies are imperfect, but our brains are unbalanced—some one way, some another. Consequently young men and maidens, looking forth from childhood upon the problems of life, have various conceptions of happiness, and make various resolutions and endeavors respecting the filling of their cup with blessings—long life, riches, honor, etc.

The teachers of our schools have a most wonderful opportunity for influencing the course of humanity. We rejoice that they are striving nobly for the fulfillment of gracious, benevolent ideals, and are using their opportunities for blessing their pupils. Yet evidently many of them have but a slight appreciation of their privileges. Some, of course, like the remainder of their work from the business standpoint—so much work, so much pay. The first and chief responsibility for children rests upon their parents, the majority of whom, no doubt, to some extent recognize that responsibility in God's sight and man's. But they labor under the difficulties of their own ignorance. They know not the proper course to take for themselves. Their lives have been a succession of blunders, and they presume that their children must blunder similarly. Not seeing the principles underlying life's experiences, they are unable to guide their children intelligently. Here teachers find their opportunity. But how little any one seems able to accomplish, and how discouraged philanthropists become!

On the whole, however, a broad view of the past fifty years shows progress in many directions. Our cities are cleaner—both physically and morally—at least so far as outward appearances are concerned. No longer does vice flaunt itself in the face of society. The battle against intoxication and the social evil is making progress in that it has made former conditions impossible. In some states the progress has been more than in others.

New Issues Now—New Temptations.
Our lesson tells of a time in the history of Israel when many of the nation's wisest and most brilliant people had settled down to ease and luxury—self-gratification. They considered that they had won in the battle of life, and would now enjoy the fruits of their diligence. The Lord through the Prophet upbraided them, declaring He was not pleased with such a course. He told them that woes would result.

The mission of Amos was to call attention to the fact that aggressive selfishness had accumulated great riches, that the wealthy were living in luxury, and that these conditions fostered pride and moral laxity amongst the wealthy; while the poor were being filled with avarice, losing respect for God, religion, truth and mercy. Society was on the edge of a volcano, and God declared that an eruption was at hand.

Present Day Conditions Correspond.
Our lesson is not inappropriate to our times. Notwithstanding the progress made, notwithstanding the philanthropic sentiments of many, inside and outside Christian denominations, nevertheless there is danger. First of all, let us consider the danger of the rich. The wealth of today reaches to a certain extent to the very humblest, and scatters blessings. But the bulk of the world's wealth is in the hands of the few.

The inordinately rich are in great danger of injuring themselves. Some cannot devise means by which to consume even their incomes. Luxuries of every kind are tasted in hope of finding happiness. Not succeeding, they still pursue it. Wealth brings increased opportunity for sin in its various forms, including debauching.

People had settled down to ease and self-gratification.
