William Ferguson of the Mesa was in town Monday and Tuesday, and attended the funeral of little Tom Haley while here, acting as a pallbearer.

Why not have that old house worked over. Figure with us and see how cheaply you can get a nice, clean, wind proof, dust proof room. —Coomes Bros., Ancho, N. M.

County Assessor Henry M. Corn who has gone into the sheep business in the Rabenton country, and has moved to that point, was in town Saturday on legal business.

Miss Georgia Hinobay and sister of Cincinnati, Ohio passed through last week of their way to Tinsie for a visit with their brother Robt. Hinobay, a prominent stockman of that section.

McGros Read has returned from Mesa, Ariz, where he and his family want to locate a few months ago. They say Lincoln county looks mighty good to them.

S. T. Gray is setting out several new shade trees in the Plaza at Capitan, and with the street grading about done the town is putting on a metropolitan aspect.

Judge John Y. Hewatt was here Tuesday before the Probate Court. The Judge was on his way home from Santa Fe where he has been on a short visit. He is looking fine and is fast recovering his old time vigor.

J. D. Hanna and T. B. Hackett of Fort Stanton passed through Tuesday on their way to their homes in the east. Mr. Hanna is accompanying the remains of M. S. Cator to his home in Jackson, Miss., and will be gone perhaps thirty days.

Doroteo Lucero of Arabella. Probate Judge accompanied by his daughter, came in Monday to hold the regular May term of probate court. Mr. Lucero had the misfortune to lose a valuable horse while here, this being the second that he has lost while holding court at this place.

Walter Woodward, son of dispatolse Woodward of the Southwestern came in Monday night from Columbus, N. Mex., and will make his home here for the present. Mr. Woodward is a violinist of marked ability, having graduated with honors from the Los Angeles Conservatory.

All westbound passenger trains are still running from five to ten hours late owing to the washouts in the vicinity of Tucumcari, and east. It is reported that there are three or four large bridges gone, east of that point and that it will be several days before traffic will be running on time, as it is now all being diverted via El Reno and Amarillo.

Wm. Garvin, resident engineer of the Southwestern pipe line, was in town the first of the week and reports that Mr. Henning, who has charge of the construction of the Eagle Creek pipe line is getting everything in readiness to start the laying of that line, which will be about 22 miles in length, and will probably take all summer to complete. He is assembling men and teams and the camp is assuming a business-like aspect. From an exchange we learn that the New Mexico building at the San Diego exposition is well under construction. It is a reproduction of the adobe mission at Acoma, built in 1699 to replace the first church, which dated back to 1629 when Fray Juan Ramirez began his residence in the Pueblo. The building stands at the edge of the Cabrillo Canon overlooking the laguna, in a most advantageous position.

Rev. and Mrs. Jno W. Hendrix left the first part of the week for a visit to her aunt in Oklahoma City and to attend the session of the General Conference which convened in that city on May 6th and continues in session the major part of the month. It might be well to explain that this conference meets only once in four years and has to do with making the laws for the church at large, and has nothing to do with the appointment of local pastors. On the return trip they will visit her parents at Melrose, N. Mexico. She will stay several days returning the later part of the month, but he intends to return before the fourth Sunday, being away for two Sundays.

Activities at Oscuro Still Continue. Water Being Developed and Improvements go Steadily on

MRS. LANGERACK ENTERTAINS AT ANCHO OSCURO

Mr. and Mrs. G. B. Greer and daughter, were in from their ranch on Saturday.

Dr. Guido Ranniger, was in Alamogordo on Tuesday on professional business.

A dance will be given here at the Boyd Hotel on the 23d of this month.

Thos Keehn is installing a new ten horse power engine over his well here to increase his already large flow of water.

Leo B. Chase and family moved here this week and Mr. Chase is now in charge of the Oscuro Development Association office here

The deep well will be started, it is expected, within a very short time, all things being made ready at this time.

Elias G. Raffety has been in El Paso for the past week or more on business for the Oscuro Development Association. He will return Thursday.

A number of men are employed laying the pipe line from Malagra spring out to the tract to be put into orchard by Governor McDonald.

Considerable water is being developed on the Seth F Crews desert claim about a mile from Oscuro. A well was dug to a depth of 27 feet where water was encountered and then a tunnel has been run under the Malagra hill connecting the well. The water has come in so great a quantity that a larger engine has had to be purchased to pump the water out, to enable the men to work in the tunnel. When the dyke which is thought to hold back more water, is encountered, it is thought possible that the well will be a flowing one as the water already raises near to the surface.

LITTLE TOM HALEY DIES

The entire community was deeply shocked to learn of the sudden death of the little son of Mr. and Mrs. John A. Haley, which occurred at two o'clock Monday morning.

The little fellow had only been ill for about four days, having taken sick at school on Wednesday, and up to Sunday morning, his illness was not thought to be serious. About noon of Sunday it was found that he had developed pneumonia in both lungs, and he rapidly became worse from that time and was unconscious until the end. The attendant physicians and many friends did everything possible to check the progress of the disease, but the attack was of such a malignant nature, that nothing could be done.

Thomas Franklin Haley was born at Alamogordo on August twelfth, 1903, making him ten years and eight months old at the time of his death.

He was very popular with his young friends, and school was dismissed to allow them to attend the funeral services which were held at the Methodist church Tuesday morning. His more intimate friends acting as honorary pallbearers, carried a profusion of beautiful flowers, which had been sent by sympathizing friends.

The local Knights of Pythias Lodge of which Mr. Haley is a member, accompanied the little body to the church where a beautiful and impressive service was conducted by Keys Hendrix and Haywood, after which interment was made in the Knights of Pythias section of the cemetery.

Mrs. Haley has been confined to her home in a serious condition, since the funeral, but is now reported as improving.

OLD NEW HAMPSHIRE HOME

The old New Hampshire Home given by the local Dramatic Club at the School Auditorium Wednesday evening was undoubtedly one of the best performances ever seen in Carrizozo. From the rise of the curtain till the close the audience was given a treat in the way of high class acting, which would do credit to professionals, and specialties in the way of songs, and dialects recitations which were highly appreciated.

The Dramatic Club deserves much praise for their earnest endeavor to give the people of Carrizozo a good presentation of the difficult play, and each individual is to be congratulated on the success that attended their efforts.

Not a hitch was made in the whole performance which is a testimony of the hard work, and tedious hours of rehearsals, that have been endured by the company.

It is hoped the play will be reproduced in the near future. The receipts were $10.700 which go to the Home Mission Society.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to extend our heartfelt thanks to all friends who exerted every aid and comfort during the illness of our darling little boy, and who endeavored, by the sincerest sympathy that was ever offered to assuage our grief at his death.

And to those who were not present but, hearing of our loss, made our grief theirs, sending tender messages of love and sympathy, we wish to accord the same appreciation. May they each and all, meet with the same loving sympathy and kindness as has been given us in our gloom of darkest night.—Mr. and Mrs. Jno A. Haley and Family.

RANCH HOME BURNS; FIND VICTIM IN RUINS

Mrs. Lydia J. Harvey, Mother of County Clerk A. H. Harvey, Lost Her Life in the Flames of her Dwelling

RESCUERS DRIVEN BACK BY INTENSE HEAT

About noon Wednesday, Comrey Brothers of Ancho, who were driving in their auto, discovered the dwelling of Mrs. Lydia J. Harvey, about a mile south of town, to be in flames.

Accompanied by Mr. Duke's neighbor who had noticed the fire about the same time, they hurried to the scene, but by the time of their arrival, the house was a mass of flames, and it was almost impossible to approach.

They succeeded however, in breaking open a window in the front of the house, in an endeavor to locate Mrs. Harvey, but were driven back by the flames, and none of the crowd which had gathered by this time were able to again approach the building, which was totally consumed in about twenty minutes.

As the flames subsided, it was seen that the body of the aged woman lay near the back door where she had fallen, probably in an attempt to escape, and by the time the body could be recovered, it was burned beyond recognition.

A coroner's inquest was immediately held and a verdict of "death by accidental burning" was rendered.

Nothing is known of the origin of the fire, but it is supposed that the deceased was starting a fire, probably with oil, and that in some manner her clothing caught fire, which later ignited the house.

Funeral services were held at the cemetery Thursday at ten a. m., conducted by Rev. Haywood, and were largely attended by members of the various lodges of which the son, A. H. Harvey, is a member, and by many friends of the family.

The floral tokens were many and beautiful, and bespoke the last tribute of many friends, and acquaintance for this great sufferer who had met death in such an awful form.

Mrs. Harvey was born in Kentucky, July 22th, 1834, coming to New Mexico about seven years ago, and taking up the homestead south of town upon which she met her death. She had been more or less of a recluse for several years, and would not allow her son to have anyone to stay with her, or assist her on the place.

Mr. and Mrs. Harvey have made two or three trips daily to attend her needs for years, and it is much to be regretted that the end came as it did, as there was no lack of sufficient attention and care being by her son and his wife.

Our deepest sympathies are with Mr. and Mrs. Harvey, who have done everything possible for the comfort and health of the deceased.

Burglars entered the dwelling of A. C. Wingfield, east of town Wednesday evening and helped themselves to a suit of clothes, but there seemed to be nothing else missing from the place. The thieves have not been apprehended.

The ISOLATED CONTINENT A ROMANCE OF THE FUTURE

SYNOPSIS.

For fifty years the continent of North America had been isolated from the rest of the world by the use of Z-rays, a wonderful invention of Hannibal Prudent.

"I will be glad to hear further from you. You know that I have always taken keen interest in your movements." "With the best wishes—Count von Werdenstein."

Mr. Hale greeted them effusively, then turned to the countess, whose charms were, in many respects, even more fascinating than the President's.

CHAPTER XIV. The New Clynith Dessert. The fact that Rositta found a stranger in the aerodrome, instead of Santos Duprel, was not the result of any suspicion on Napoleon's part.

Her eyes met those of Napoleon, apprehensively. "You are hurt!" she whispered, pointing toward his hand. "It must be a mere scratch, as I have not felt it."

By the time they reached the first suburb it had begun to grow dark. They had to cross the town to reach the Crystal Palace. As they passed under the first street lamp two men who were standing on the corner, near an automobile, peered closely at them.

of any suspicion on Napoleon's part. Santos had received a more important order. The substance "clynith," that wonderful, glittering element that composed all the qualities of glass and rubies, that was a thousand times stronger than steel, lighter than aluminum and absolutely indestructible, was very scarce.

Immediately upon Santos' return from Clynite with Rositta he had been dispatched upon this search, and Napoleon himself started out the next morning. His wound was so slight that it did not interfere with his movements, and he started early, flying toward Italy.

Their Senses of Humor. "Why," asks Gertrude Atherton, "should a woman murder her husband?" It's a difficult question, Gertrude, but our own personal guess is that most of them are actuated by a desire to exploit the delicious fund of humor they possess.

Neighbors.

Not long since a man moved into a certain village. After a week or so a friend called on him and asked how he liked his new home. "Treaty well," he said. "Have you called on your neighbors yet?" "No," he replied; "but I'm going to if any more of my wood is staking."

Making Tomorrow's World

By WALTER WILLIAMS, LL.D.
(Dean of the School of Journalism of the University of Missouri)

FREE HOLLAND'S SLAVE ISLANDS

Batavia, Java.—Kechill was only six years old. Slight of figure and short of stature, she appeared even younger. Her name in Javanese meaning "Tiny One," had been given her at birth, not because she was small, but as an expression of endearment. The Javanese, a smiling, bright-eyed, brown-skinned race, are devoted to their children. In dead, when Sina, who was Kechill's oldest water, the first-born of the family, came to the Java home, her parents' names were changed, according to ancient native custom, and they were thereafter known by words that mean in our prosaic English, Pa Sina and Ma Sina. The baby is an important personage in the Javanese home life. Practical Peonage Enforced. When Kechill went to work in the sorting room of the big tea estate she was scarcely five years of age. Labor was needed at the tea estate, however. The Dutch rulers of the East Indies archipelago have a century-old system of imprisonment of labor which, technically abolished in some islands and for some purposes, exists in actual practice almost to peonage in districts of the tourists' beaten track. Nowhere in the Dutch archipelago is there a child-labor law. Nowhere is there compulsory school attendance. Why seek to compel the attendance of children at schools when there are not schools enough provided to accommodate those who go voluntarily? Why have a child-labor law when it would interfere with the profits of the Dutch-owned estates? The very idea seemed ridiculous to the courteous manager of the estate. As for sending girls to school—bah! That might do in Europe and of course in America, where he had heard they even sent black girls to school, and did other mad things, or possibly in Batavia and the big towns, but not in the country districts, no, indeed.

No Protection for Laborers. Nor is there a minimum wage law or any other legislation which gives protection to the native laborer, young or old, in Java. "It isn't hard work," said the manager, "this sorting of tea. The baskets with the tea are light. These handled by the young girls weigh but a few pounds. The hours are only from six in the morning until four in the afternoon, with time for lunch." There may be a difference of opinion as to the work. To shake a sieve holding ten pounds of tea, more or less, for nine or ten hours a day, in a climate of tropical heat, might be regarded by some persons as rather hard work. In the sorting room with Kechill were a hundred other laborers, girls and women. "The wages," replied the manager, "we pay according to the work done. Our scale of wages is about a half cent higher than that usually paid. Some of the more skillful women can earn 50 or 40 cents a day, Dutch money (in American money, 20 to 24 cents)." Kechill, the Tiny One, had been working a year. She was paid the equivalent of four cents, American money, a day.

The Overseer's "Housekeeper." Kechill's mother and two sisters work in the factory. Her oldest sister, Sina, had worked there. She did not now. She had a dash of rose-color in her rounded cheeks, was graceful and pleasing to look upon, with the merry laugh and chatter characteristic of the Javanese. One evening the overseer called Sina into his bungalow. She struggled, but of no avail. Her father appealed to the magistrate, but with no more success. The double standard of justice exists in Java—one standard for the Europeans and another, more in a few notable cases, for the natives. Sina remained as "housekeeper" in the overseer's bungalow, her predecessor being her longer pleaser in the master's sight. She did not return to the tea factory, nor did she labor return to her cheeks.

Kechill's father and brothers, Javanese of intelligence and strength, could relate, if they dared, stories of their own enslaved labor which make the Dutch islands in the Far East, mistakenly called model colonies, seem slave islands. Her father could tell—and did tell, under pledge of secrecy as to his name—some things from his own experience and others from the common stock of native knowledge.

Few more fertile countries are to be found in all the world than Java. Its inhabitants are born farmers, skilled in irrigation methods and with expert acquaintance with hydraulics, and yet, living in a land where the richest harvests come with scarcely an effort, large territories are periodically visited by famine. "The cause of this," said J. F. Schellems, "has to be sought in a system of colonial exploitation which made the natives raise products for the European markets by forced labor and deliver them into the government storehouses whence they were shipped to Holland and sold at an enormous profit. This system, called after Count van den Bosch, on whose recommendation it was introduced, to meet Holland's financial difficulties, has now been abandoned, though the corvée, the calling out of the villagers in unpaid service for the mending of roads, etc., continues as before. Even now, however, it would be too much to say that native toil, when demanded by direct or indirect pressure, always commands wages sufficient to keep body and soul together. The word 'coffee' still has an especially ominous sound in native ears, for it reminds them of the oppression connected with the growing of that commodity for government purposes. Rice, the principal food of the people, if they can afford it, is also their principal crop, and yet, for reasons closely connected with the government's methods referred to, the production does not come up to the consumption.

Java, thanks largely to the official tourist bureau, is the best known of the islands constituting the Netherlands East Indies. It is also the best governed, the most prosperous and the one where the most consideration, slight though this may be, has been shown by the Dutch government for the welfare of the natives. Java has a population of 35,000,000, more than one-third the population of the United States. Six hundred to a square mile live on the island. Borneo, Sumatra and Celebes, all islands in the Dutch archipelago, exceed Java in size. In these the conditions are even less favorable to the development of the native population.

Have No Political Rights. In Java the primary schools open to natives are few and inadequate, and, except recently for doctors, there are no higher institutions of learning. The native wishing higher education must go to Holland. Taxation is high, particularly for the native, and the returns he receives therefrom are few indeed. He has no voice in any administration of the island's affairs. He cannot vote nor hold office of any importance.

The Dutch government, sterner in administration in the archipelago than the Holland officials at home believe or wish, has been forced to take cognizance of the awakening demand for liberty and justice. The Mohammedan organization, though its chief aim is religious, has had some effect in disclosing conditions and urging social and political reform. Moreover, in a country where the discussion of politics is not merely discouraged but by law forbidden, it is hopeful to find a political society, well organized, with more than 12,000 members, the Indische or Indian party, the avowed purpose of which is equality before the law for all inhabitants of the islands. This society includes in its membership all classes and is doing an excellent educational work though, present as its leaders are in the main, it comes frequently into collision with the local government. The organ of the society is the Java Express, edited at Bandung by H. C. Kakebeke, a Dutchman by birth, a resident of Java, but by naturalization a citizen of the United States. The Express is the best edited newspaper in Java, and has the largest circulation. Kechill, Sina, their father and brothers and the 25,000,000 of the same race are not without a strong advocate.

Aims of Reform Society. "The object of the Indische party," explained Mr. Kakebeke, "is to awaken the patriotism of all Indians for the soil that nurtures them, to create a desire for political equality in an Indian fatherland and thus prepare the way for independence." It was this aim at possible future independence that caused the governor-general to decline to permit the incorporation of the society under the terms of law. "The Indische party purposes," said Mr. Kakebeke, "to teach the history of these people to them in order to awaken the latent national sentiment. We would abolish all special privileges that attach to race or caste. We are opposed to religious sectarianism or strife. We seek the establishment of technical schools that the natives may become skilled to do their own technical work rather than be compelled to import men to do it. We wish free education for all, morally taught in the schools and no difference in education because of race or sex. We favor one law for Europeans and natives alike. We desire to enlarge the influence of the native in the government by giving him the right to participate in it. We wish to equalize taxation, to protect the laborer, to improve economic and social conditions, and to do all these things within the law."

Robbery by Tax-Collectors. Conditions far worse than those which the Indische party seeks to remedy in Java exist in the other islands of the archipelago: Borneo, Sumatra, Celebes and the smaller ones. In these the native is a peon, half-savage and half-slave. The exceptions are not numerous. Take the matter of taxation in Borneo, as the one sufficient example of the general rule. Let an intelligent, high-minded, patriotic Dutchman tell the story. "I lived for some time among the primitive population in Borneo," he said. "Away in the interior the different tribes of the so-called 'Dreadful Dajaks' were my helpers. Shy at first, they soon became friendly when they found that I was not after their slender belongings but paid fair wages. One day a government tax collector came. When you and I pay taxes we get something in return, police protection, courts, justice. These Borneo natives get nothing in return. The tax collector kept at his work until there was not a fellow in the whole camp that had a dollar left except myself. He stripped the camp and the native village bare of everything of value. His boats carried it all down the river—as taxes. The Dajaks, who still are uncivilized and cut off their enemies' heads, when they hear of the visit of the tax collector to any tribe, immediately attack those thus visited, knowing they will have nothing left with which to make defense. Is it strange that the tax collector is sometimes the victim of the enraged natives? I do not blame him for his tax-collecting. The stay-at-homes must have revenue, and he must produce it for them. It is a rotten system of avarice and greed."

Rebellion Mercilessly Suppressed. Occasionally even the light-hearted, happy-go-lucky Javanese rebel against such treatment and there is blood shed. The Dutch speedily and mercilessly suppress the insurrection and the outside world, so rigid is the control of the press, hears little or nothing of it. In the other islands, particularly in Sumatra and Borneo, where the natives are less gentle than in Java, there is constant strife. In Timor the natives arose in wrath the other day at the exactions and heartlessness of an official and well-nigh toppled the entire government of the island, half Dutch and half Portuguese, into the sea. Though there are many excellent and unselfish men in the Dutch administration of the East Indies, the system is one of exploitation primarily. It shows well of the bank books, but not in the liver of the native men and women.

Kechill's face brightened into a smile. She had begun work early that Sunday morning—the exploiter of Java, has no Sabbath in his calendar—and she might earn the enormous sum of five cents for her ten hours' labor. The stern overseer, too had smiled at her—visitors were in the room—and the gentle Javanese are quick to respond in kind to generous humor. Suddenly the baby worker's face hardened into a frown. Perhaps the overseer's smile suggested her sister's fate.

Enthusiasm. Enthusiasm is faith in action. "Faith beareth in all things." Enthusiasm puts that belief to the test. The enthusiast believes that the thing can be done, he has faith to believe that it ought to be done; he has enthusiasm to do it. To the unthinking, enthusiasm is but the foam on the deep ly stirred waters. In truth, it is the striving of the waters themselves. It is the very life of effort.—From "The Power of Mental Demand," by Herbert Edward Law.

How to Become a Poet. "The art of writing poetry is very difficult at first, but it becomes easy by practice," says an English writer. "The best way for a beginner is to take a line from another poem; then he should construct a line to fit it, then, having won his start, he should strike out the first line (which, of course, does not belong to him) and go ahead. When the poet has written three verses of four lines each, he should run out and find a girl some where, and read it to her."

IN SOFTER GARMENTS

NEGLIGES OF ALL KINDS ARE UNUSUALLY LOVELY.

Many of Them Are Made Along Empire Lines—Dainty Robes of Striped Challis Have Comparatively Simple Trimming.

Negliges garments of all kinds, from kimono to tea-gown, from the simplest of combed sacks to the most elaborate "matinees," are unusually lovely this season. Crepes, chiffons, soft silks and shadow laces are the materials mostly used for the new negliges garments, and tulle is also made up into lovely negliges, tea-gowns and petticoats and sack combinations.

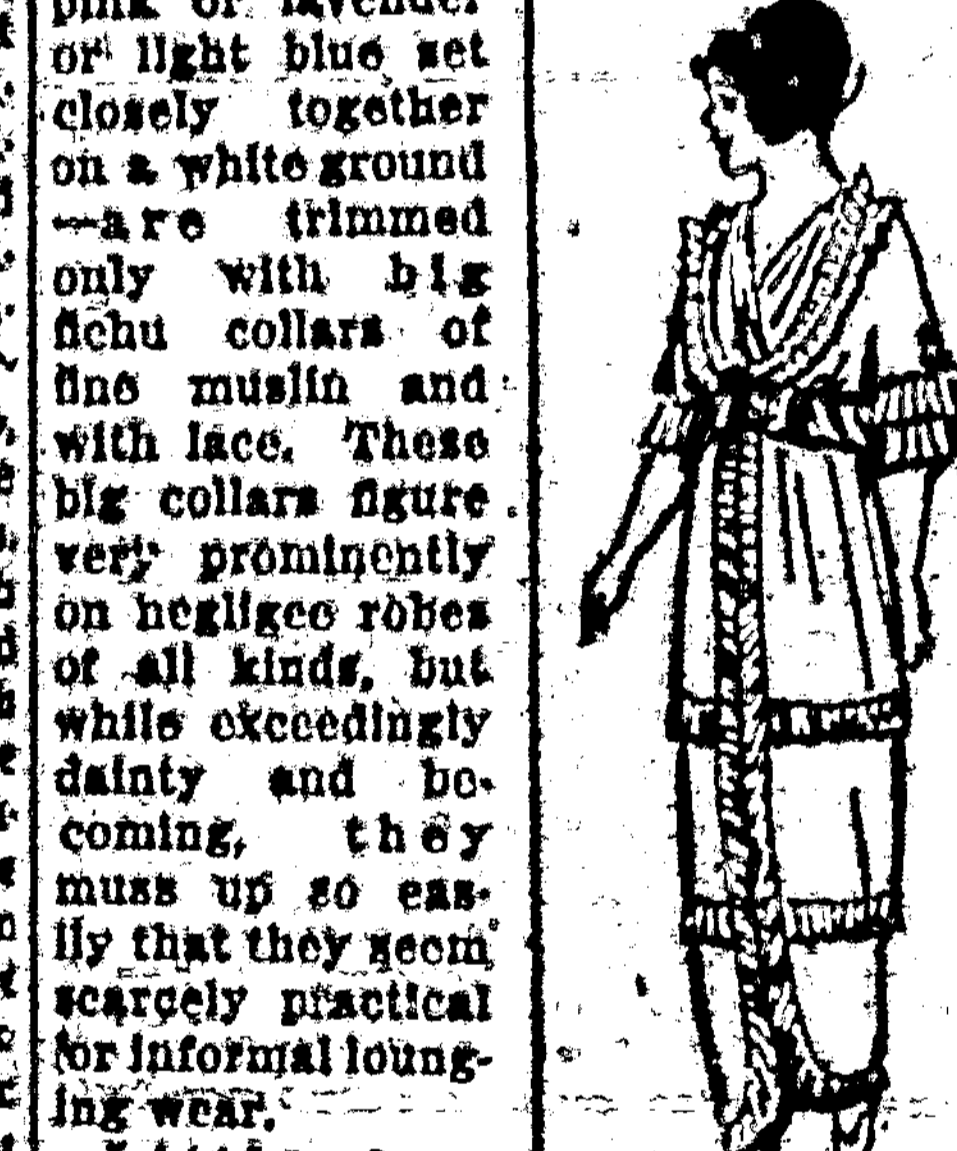

Pale Pink Chiffon.

Among the simpler negliges and indoor garments there are innumerable pretty things in crepes and lingerie materials, and many of them take on empire lines instead of falling quite loose. An attractive little morning gown was of pale pink crepe trimmed with plaited ruches of the material beaded with cords or pipings of the material. The gown had a blouse bodice with high waistline finished at the bottom with a plaited frill. A double frill of the material trimmed the neck and side front of the bodice and was finished at the waistline at the front with a large button material covered.

There was a crossed vest of fine net. Ruffles of the material extended down the front of the skirt from waistline to hem; joining the front frills at each side were two frills about two feet apart, which surrounded the skirt. The sleeves were trimmed with frills and a loose bow knot of pale-pink ribbon.

Some particularly dainty and inexpensive little robes in striped challis—hairline stripes of pink or lavender or light blue set closely together on a white ground—are trimmed only with big fichu collars of fine muslin and with lace. These big collars figure very prominently on negliges robes of all kinds, but while exceedingly dainty and becoming, they muss up so easily that they seem scarcely practical for informal lounging wear.

Pink Creps.

Little loose robes of white cotton crepe, whose surface is decorated with small bouquets of roses, are dainty and pretty; such garments have no trappings save little turned-down collars and turnback cuffs of lingerie and lace.

FASHION'S FANCIES

The tunic idea is carried out in separate skirts. Elbow sleeves are frequently frilled with lace. The new serge coats have daring and plaited skirts. The Gloucester collar is a little like the old-time Byron style. It stands up in the back and rolls over a bit. The skirt drapery of a belted afternoon gown is caught up the front with tassels, with a charming classic effect. The front slash of the new waist necks is changing. Now there is a tendency to squareness instead of the familiar V point. Kimono sleeves have actually gotten into babyland. Small children's coats have them; also the set-in sleeve.

Floral Bands and Hats. Floral millinery trimmings are steadily mounting in favor. Clusters of roses arranged as to form huge pompons are especially smart. Compact bands of small flowers are used across plaques, at the edge of brims and halfway up crowns. Hats made of small flowers are being shown by some of the leading houses. By means of these played at some clever angle it is possible to transform a tailored hat into a dress

Model of natural reed trimmed with wings. Oranides and Mulls. Oranides and embroidered mulls are going to have first place among the summery dresses, and these dainty materials will be made up with tassels and soft silks. And there will be ruckings of the old-time style, trimming the overskirt effects of flowered silk dresses just as they appeared in the wardrobe of the young society girl of olden times. Hat Demost. Some of the new hats show bandeaux, but women fight shy of these items as they lead to headgear unmanageable in a high wind.

SMART PLAIDS AND CHECKS

Seems, If It Is Possible, That These Materials Are Smarter Than Ever This Season.

It is quite in the accepted order of things that plaids and checks should put in an appearance for spring, but they have never made a more attractive bid for favor than in the case this year. Among the various styles shepherd's plaid, in both large and small designs, is very determinedly to the fore, not only in the more familiar black and white expressions, but also in such varieties as white and chestnut brown, mole gray, violet, Natifer, hunters' green and navy blue. These plaids make up into the smartest little tailor-made suits imaginable, the dominating color picked up and accentuated in a velvet collar facing and round ball composite buttons. Then we get a wealth of silken plaids doing yeoman's service as the relieving note on gowns and costumes of navy serge and other plain materials. A case in point that most ably demonstrates this departure occurred with a simple navy serge country suit, the plain skirt made high about the waist, and finished at the back with a few slight gathers held by a half-strap, as is the way with nine out of every ten tailored models this season. And with this there went a dainty little shirt of Rob Roy tartan silk, the same also requisitioned to line the straight, perfectly cut coat. A regular service serge was employed, and the sudden flash of parrot-coloring revealed when the fronts of the coat were thrown open was extremely effective.

Oranides and embroidered mulls are going to have first place among the summery dresses, and these dainty materials will be made up with tassels and soft silks. And there will be ruckings of the old-time style, trimming the overskirt effects of flowered silk dresses just as they appeared in the wardrobe of the young society girl of olden times. Hat Demost. FRIDAY, MAY 8, 1914

Alamogordo is to have a big celebration on the Fourth, and from the bunch that they have on the various committees, it looks as though they would have some program. Her citizens are getting together, and the town will shortly assume its rightful place among the coming towns of New Mexico. The example set by our sister town in the past few months is one worthy of emulation by our own citizens, if we expect to put this section "on the map" as it should be.

The Fourth of July celebration proposition has not been agitated for Carrizozo, and now that there is to be such an affair in Alamogordo it is hoped that our citizens may attend in a body, and while there do everything to boost the Carrizozo Fall Festival. If our people attend the Alamo "doits" well and let them know that we expect to put on a show of our own in the fall, they will no doubt return the compliment two-fold and give us a large delegation at the festival.

Another thing that the Alamo people are doing and which should be gotten under way in this county is the organization of a permanent County Fair Association. The organization of such association will entitle us to the yearly appropriation of $500 from the State to be used for any purposes wanted except for speed prizes, and if completed there is no reason why we cannot have a good fair ground of our own, with good buildings, in a few seasons.

Spring is with us and the time for the annual sis map of the city at hand. Already the festive fly is beginning to swarm in our midst and will soon be distributing disease germs into scores of our homes unless we await him now. When one thinks of the millions of germs of various contagious and infectious diseases that one small pile of garbage harbors, and that a few flies roosting thereon can easily take the germs into a dozen homes, possibly causing an illness that will not the Dr. and possibly the undertaker a goodly sum, while a few cents and a little labor expended would have prevented the infection. It is plain that being unsanitary is surely expensive, but many people fail to realize it even when the arguments against it are as conclusive.

Now that the road from El Paso to Roswell via of the Ruidoso is in good shape for tourists, and its permanency assured; and the road from Carrizozo to Tularosa is a sure thing, let us do some boosting for the Carrizozo-Guan-Quivira-Mount Tularosa road. We need it, and with concerted effort we believe that three miles of road can be remedied and a good road established.

As we go to press we learn from an authoritative source that the Huertaists have taken Peruna.

Two decisions handed down by the Supreme Court last week in regard to the use of County Funds to pay for land necessary for the laying out of a public road, and for necessary supplies used in the construction of public roads, make it the duty of the County Treasurer to honor warrants drawn by Boards of County Commissioners for these purposes.

IDEAS FOR HOME BUILDERS

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to the subject of building, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 127 Prairie Avenue, Chicago, Ill., and only enclose two-cent stamp for reply.

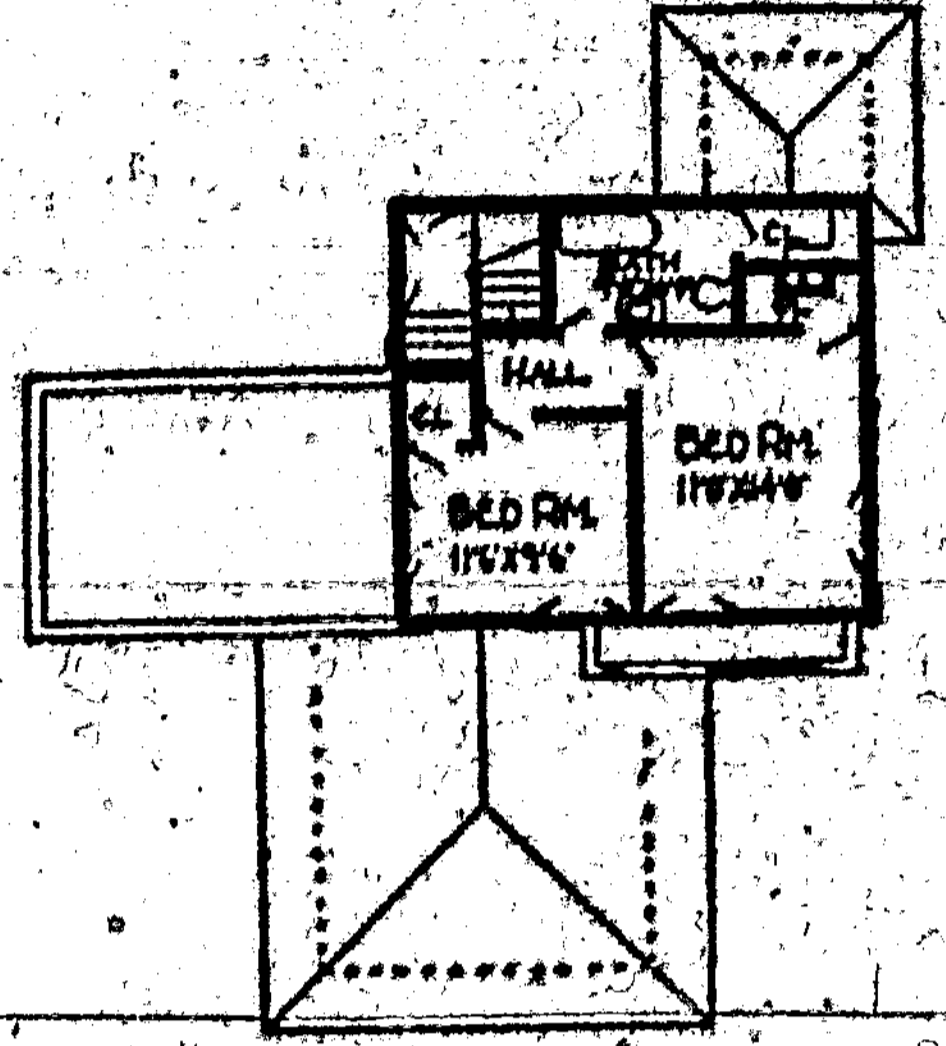

It is surprising to one who has not given the matter thought, how many little points there are connected with the planning of an up-to-date convenient residence that can be gotten all wrong if the architect is not exceedingly careful or doesn't know his business, and the house resulting be almost ruined, so far as comfort and the conveniences of housekeeping are concerned.

It has frequently been suggested that architects doing residence work should seek advice of the women concerning many points, and find out from first-hand testimony just how the housekeeper wants to have the many features which mean so much to her, but which mere man knows very little of. Some of these points that have been suggested are as follows:

What woman would put in laundry tubs so deep that the luckless worker who is of short or medium stature is in constant danger of pitching forward upon her head, while the tall woman can at least reckon upon a headache or backache as the result of a few hours work; or, who but man would make the ledge between the tubs so wide that no ordinary wringer can be fitted to it? Would any woman dream of standing a kitchen range so close to the wall on the side where

A clever woman assisting in planning houses or apartments would see the advantage of plain moldings and woodwork, oiled kitchen and bath-room floors, and washable walls. Another feature that might be easily introduced in the kitchen, laundry and bath-room floors is a drain, so that they could be flushed with water that would run off through connections with pipes.

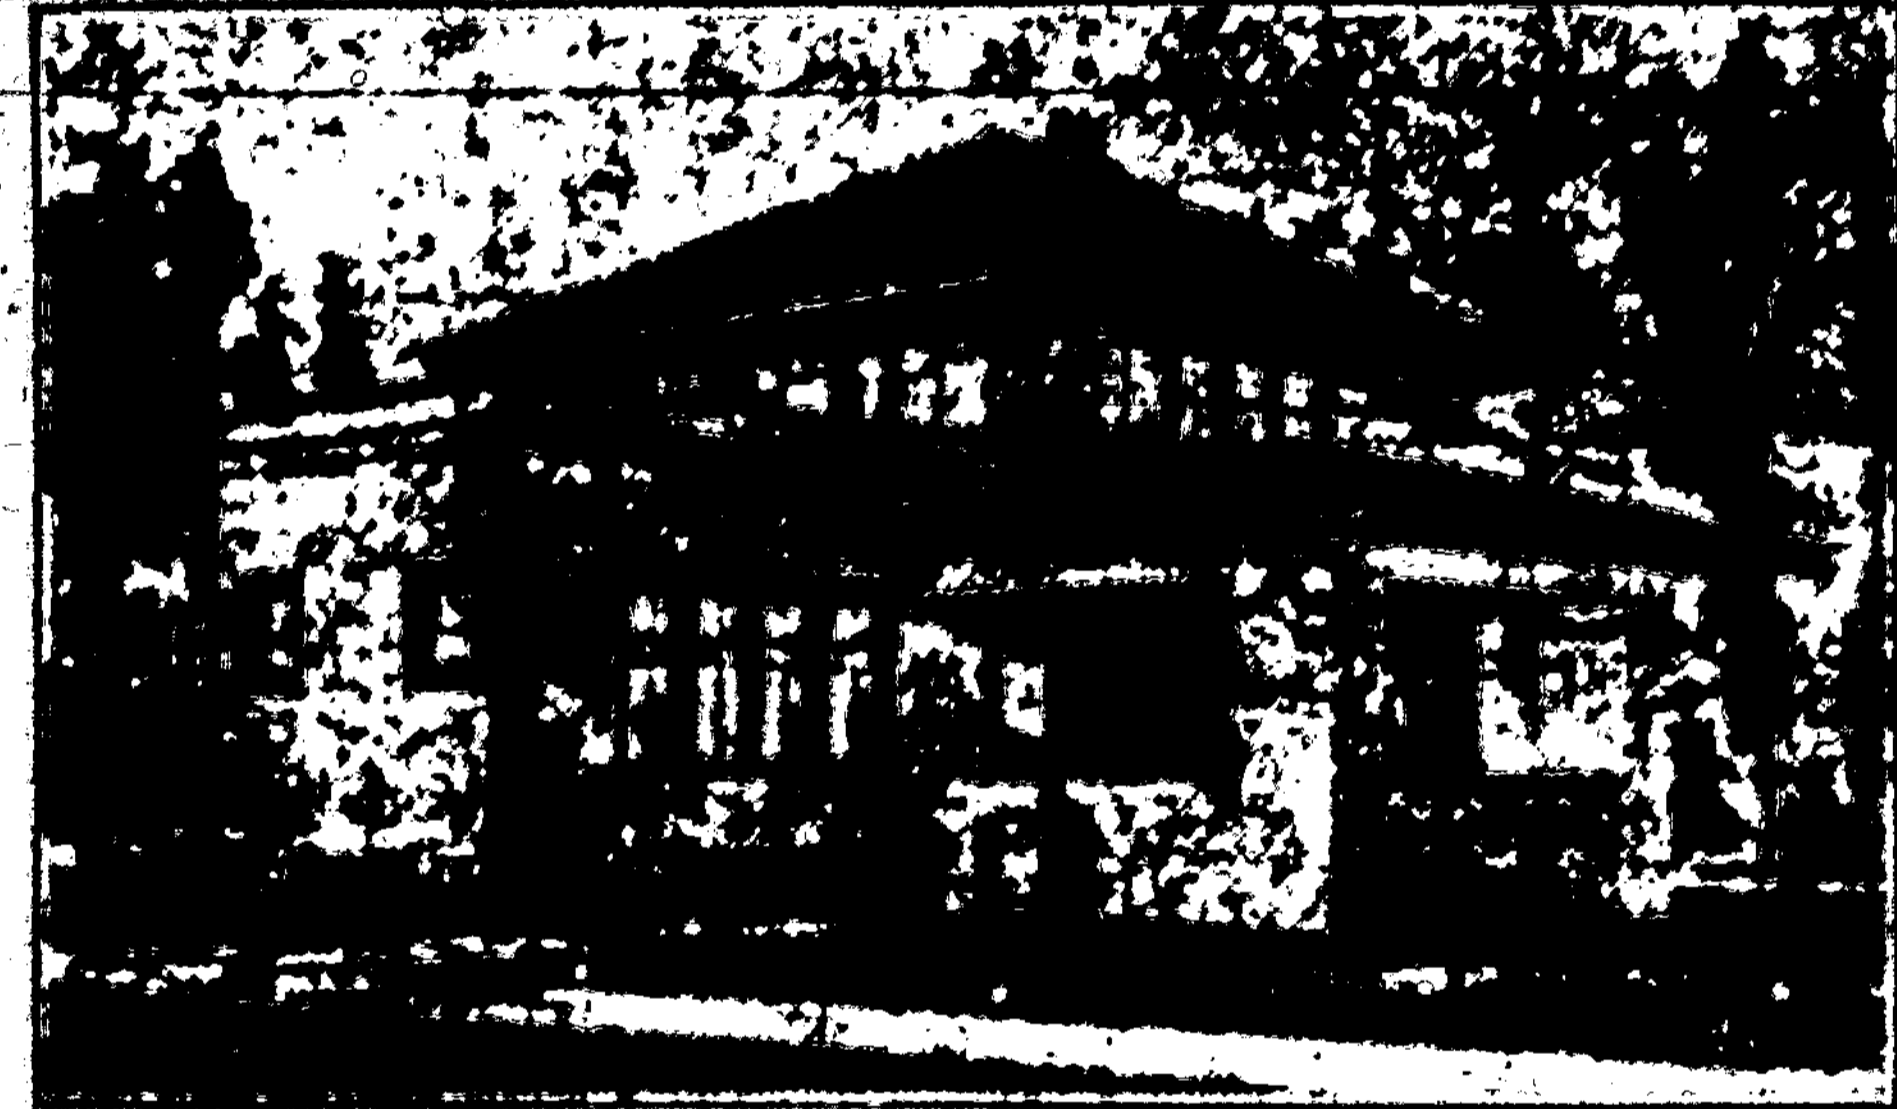

In the more luxurious homes, dish and clothes washers run by electricity would help materially to render the work less disagreeable and to induce the servant problem to settle itself. Fireless cookers, now used by not a few up-to-date housekeepers, might also be built in.

Indoor drying rooms for use on snowy or rainy washdays are another convenience that might easily be provided for in the cellar, but are generally lacking. These are but a few of the things that a woman assistant could keep before the eyes of an architect in the domestic branch of the work.

In buildings that are to be rented, it should be made an invariable rule to put in as many permanent features as possible, such as towel and soap racks and medicine chest in bath-rooms, utensil shelves and hooks in kitchen and pantry, as well as curtain hooks and portiere poles, in addition to shades and screens for windows and doors. For, where this is not done, each succeeding tenant adds his mite to the disfigurement of walls and woodwork.

In the design illustrated herewith, many of these suggestions have been taken advantage of, and this design is offered as embodying numerous desirable features and labor-saving conveniences which the women appreciate.

First Floor Plan.

An extra toilet and laboratory should be provided on the first floor.

There is no good reason, either, for setting a bathtub in a room where the floor, thus leaving a space underneath which is almost inaccessible and yet must be kept clean for sanitary reasons. Then, too, if the demand were imminent enough, manufacturers might see it to market a washstand so made that a woman's hair would not inevitably catch upon the basins every time she washed her face.

GIVE QUAIL A CHANCE

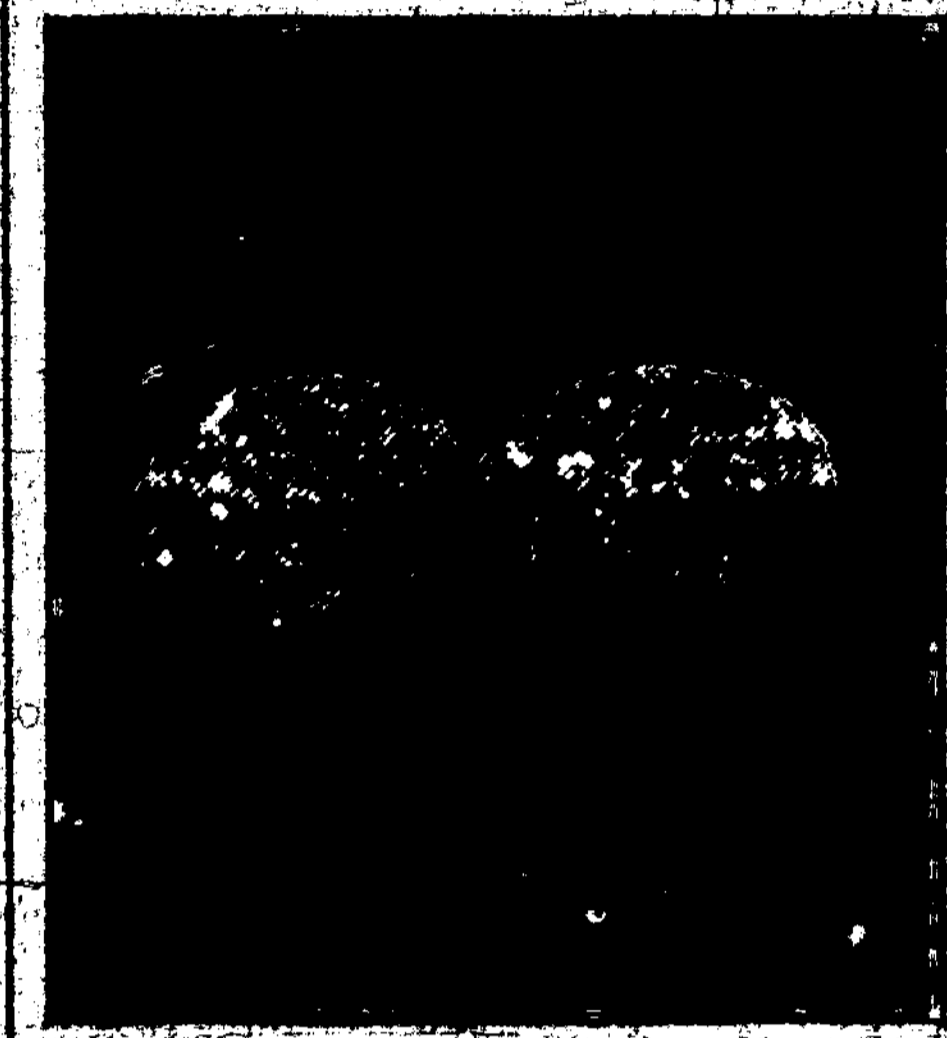

IS FARMER'S FRIEND AND MONEY-SAVER EVERYWHERE.

Sportsman in Destroying Birds of Such Direct Economic Importance Does Damage Which Cannot Be Estimated in Dollars.

Careful and conservative students of its habits have rated every quail as worth five dollars to the farmer. Few turkeys yield so much, yet the farmer would feel insulted to have a sportsman ask—or take without asking—the privilege of shooting some of his domestic fowls.

The man with the gun may not maim or even frighten his horses and cattle, though he frequently does injure them more or less through the latter's cause if not the former, but in destroying birds of such direct economic importance he does a damage which cannot be estimated in dollars and cents.

Quitties of even a little trespassing charged to its cousin, the ruffed grouse or pheasant, that of feasting on young twigs, sprouts and buds, it has never been convicted of real damage at any season of the year.

It is a diligent gleaner in stubble fields, but there is no evidence that it destroys either sprouting or ripening grain.

Few birds, save the rose-breasted grosbeak, will devour Colorado potato bugs like the quail. The moth and larva of the cut-worm are eaten with relish. Chick beg, cotton worm, cucumber beetle, wireworm, cloverleaf weevil, army worm, cotton bollweevil, rose bug, grasshopper, locust and tobacco worm butterfly are among the ingredients of its flesh diet. Few birds eat so large a proportion of injurious insects.

Just the money value saved to us by this intervention cannot be even approximated. But when we consider the fact that figures show the loss from the boll worm in some years at $15,000,000; potato beetle, $10,000,000; cotton worm, $30,000,000; chinich bug and Rocky Mountain locust each $100,000,000, it is very evident that birds which make them a considerable portion of their food are too valuable to be killed just for sport.

As a seed- and weed-destroyer, its mission is scarcely less important. The food capacity of each bird is estimated at a half ounce per day.

Some one, taking Virginia for the basis of computation and allowing four quails to the square mile, finds that in that state alone 572 tons of seeds are consumed by quails during the months from September 1 to April 30. Some of our worst weeds are also included in the list, as grab grass, black plantain, cockle, orange hawkweed, rag-weed, fox tail, wild morning glory and bindweed.

The farmer who weathers grain freely about the yard in time of heavy snow will find that they are as regular feeders as his domestic fowls, and the little care given for the short period required pays in pleasure as well as in dollars and cents.

Remedy for Farcy.

I have a recipe for the cure of farcy that is so common to horses. I have tried it and have never known it to fail. Here it is: One pound of sulphur; one pound cream of tartar; one ounce salt-petre; one ounce resin. Mix this together and give a table-spoonful in the feed once a day for three days, then after three days give two doses of the same. You will find that it will bring your horses out all right. This remedy will remove all pin worms also.—W. Byrton, Grantsdale, Mont.

Modern Farming.

The term "general farming" or even "farm" is no longer of fitting application, for our very best and most successful farmers raise either beef, grain, hedges, mutton or pork, but not all of these.

Convenient Feed.

Shredded fodder is much more convenient to feed than the stack fodder. The time and labor saved in feeding shredded fodder about corresponds for the time and labor taken in shredding.

GARDEN WORK FOR SEEDTIME

Many Insects Attack and Injure Potatoes, Cabbage, Cucumbers, Radishes and Other Plants.

(By FRANK H. SWEET)

Watch out for these. The potato bug attacks potatoes, egg plants and tomatoes. Use paris green and other arsenic poisons.

The cabbage worm attacks cabbage, cauliflower and turnips. Hand picking is best in small gardens.

The cutworm attacks small plants of cabbage, beans, corn, tomatoes, etc. In small gardens dig around the plant which has been cut off. The worm may be found in the soil and killed, or the transplanted plants may be wrapped with a cylinder of tough paper reaching one inch below ground and three inches above.

The striped cucumber beetle attacks squashes, cucumbers and melons and the newly hatched worms do damage to corn roots. Sow extra seed. Dust the stems and leaves with air-slaked lime after every rain.

The flea beetle attacks radishes, tomatoes, cabbage, turnips, etc., when the plants are young. Keep the plants dusted with air-slaked lime or plaster, mixed with a little paris green, or similar poison.

Plant lice or aphids, green and dark-colored, attack lettuce, eggplants, peas and beans. Use kerosene emulsion or tobacco-water.

The paralytic worm attacks celery, carrots and parsley. Hand picking is the best for the small garden.

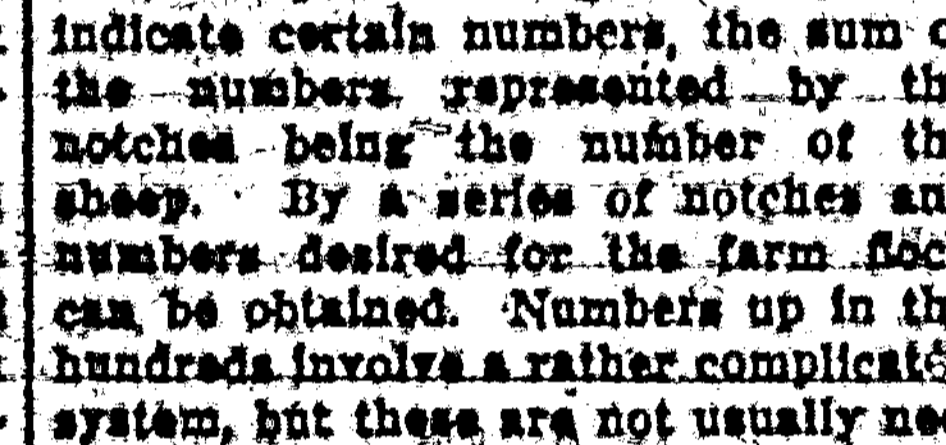

The squash vine borer attacks stems of cucumbers, squash and melons. Cover the first joint of the vine with earth.

SCHEME FOR MARKING SHEEP

By Series of Notches Any Numbers Desired for Farm Flock May Be Easily Obtained.

Notching is a good way to mark sheep, and it is quite frequently used. Notches upon certain parts of the ears indicate certain numbers, the sum of the numbers represented by the notches being the number of the sheep. By a series of notches any numbers desired for the farm flock can be obtained. Numbers up in the hundreds involve a rather complicated system, but these are not usually necessary on the farm. To avoid a complex system, each crop of lambs may be numbered from one upward. In this way it will not generally be necessary to notch higher than 100. This system is sometimes used as a check for ear tags in case the latter become torn out.

POTATOES IN DISEASED SOIL

Fungus Causing Blight and Rot Does Not Survive Freezing, Says a New York Bulletin.

The question is frequently asked, "Is it safe to plant potatoes on a field where blight and rot have been destructive the previous season?" The New York Agricultural Experiment station answers, in bulletin No. 327, that the fungus causing blight and rot does not survive freezing in the soil; so that, under all ordinary conditions, it is as safe to plant potatoes in a field where these diseases have prevailed during a past season, as in any other place. Those interested can secure the bulletin by writing to Geneva for it.

Machinery is Cheapest.

Some farmers declare that it is cheaper to hire men to run the farm than to buy machinery. Maybe it is but nobody can prove it. Besides the machines never go to town on Saturday and fall to come back on Monday, but are always right on the job when needed and the wife does not have to seek and wash for them.

Beef Supply.

This country will have to supply the world with a large part of the beef in the future and this will come from the farms now that the open range no longer exist. This means that a farmer who makes a close study of beef breeding and cattle feeding now will have a good start when the hour comes.

Factor in Soil Conservation.

Every land owner who leases his farm should introduce a system of forest burning in connection with fireweed growing and feeding. Long leases with live stock feeding would prove a mighty factor in soil conservation.

TWO WOMEN AVOID OPERATIONS

By Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Chicago, Ill.—"I must thank you with all my heart for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I used to go to my doctor for pills and remedies and they did not help me. I had headaches and could not eat, and the doctor claimed I had female trouble and must have an operation. I read in the paper about Lydia E. Pinkham's Veget-table Compound and I have taken it and feel fine. A lady said one day, "Oh, I feel so tired all the time and have headache." I said, "Take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound," and she did and feels fine now."—Mrs. M. R. Karschner, 1438 N. Paulina Street, Chicago, Illinois.

The Other Case. "Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound relieved me of pains in my side that I had for years and which doctors' medicines failed to relieve. It has certainly saved me from an operation. I will be glad to assist you by a personal letter to any woman in the same condition."—Mrs. J. W. Sherris, 125 Cass St., Dayton, Ohio.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

Civic Betterment

U. S. Bureau of Education Plans Citizenship Training.

With Co-Operation of National Municipal League Government Will Undertake Comprehensive Study of the Entire Problem.

Washington.—With the co-operation of the National Municipal League and other organizations long interested in the problem of education for citizenship, the United States Bureau of Education is undertaking a comprehensive study of the whole problem of civic education.

In this field of activity the government bureau of education hopes to do officially and systematically what has heretofore been attempted by a member of organizations working independently.

One of the most pressing problems in citizenship education is that of properly equipped teachers. There are few teachers that have had the requisite special training.

Present methods of teaching civic will be carefully investigated. Whether it is sufficient that children should know how the president is elected, or that they should be able to recite the constitution; to what extent modern social and civic questions—clean streets, pure water, milk supply, fire protection, means of transportation, co-operation, suffrage, divorce, etc., are to be considered: These are the sort of questions to which the new corps will have to give attention.

Special effort will be made to report the many attempts on the part of progressive communities to give all-school subjects a more definite civic value. In Kansas City, Kan., for example, the chemistry course in the high school is in effect a course in practical civics—such things as water and milk analysis, with their significance in community life, are emphasized, and high school students serve in the municipal laboratories.

PREACHER WHIPS BIG BULLY

Brooklyn Clergyman Then Has Drummer Who Beat Cripple Sent to Workhouse.

New York.—Rev. Dr. I. W. Henderson, an Episcopal clergyman, 51 Pierpont street, Brooklyn, is about six feet tall, weighs about 200 pounds and in his younger days was an amateur boxer.

In the baggage room of the Grand Central terminal, he saw John Stern, a big traveling salesman of Schenectady, quarrelling with James Brennan, a hatter from Danbury, Conn., who is small and a cripple. The dispute was about the ownership of a bag that Brennan had picked out of a pile of baggage.

Dr. Henderson saw Stern knock Brennan down and begin to beat him. Then the clergyman took a hand. The result, witnesses say, was one of the prettiest little fights ever staged outside the ring, and it ended when a special officer interfered to save Stern from further punishment.

Stern was arrested and taken to the night court. Magistrate Corrigan, after sentencing him to the workhouse for ten days, complimented Dr. Henderson highly for his practical demonstration of Christian defense of the weak.

LAETARE MEDAL TO JUDGE

Chief Justice White Honored by Notre Dame University of Indiana.

Notre Dame, Ind.—Chief Justice Edward Douglas White of the United States Supreme court received the Laetare medal from Notre Dame university.

"It is for the meritorious services which Chief Justice White has rendered to law that the medal was awarded to him," said President Cavanaugh. "Every year the university bestows the Laetare medal on some person as the premier American Catholic appreciation of beneficent endeavor in arts, letters, science, religion or civilization."

The awarding of the medal is an American adoption of the Papal Golden Rose of Rome.

The medal is a large disk of gold pendant from the colors of the university, gold and blue. On one side are the Latin words for "Truth is Mighty, and Will Prevail."

CAPTURES GEM THIEF AT SEA

Flying Boat Overtakes Steamer on Which Man is Fleeing and Arrest is Made.

Miami, Fla.—Flying 21 miles in Harold McCormick's hydroplane, Harry Schade, a detective of this city, overtook the steamship Miami after it had left this city and, boarding it, arrested a negro hotel employe, recovering a missing brooch belonging to a woman prominent in New York society, then flew back to this place with his prisoner. Schade landed his boat without difficulty in making the open outside of the steamer's back of Miami, and the prisoner was released. The brooch was returned to its owner.

Jobless Ask Pastors to Quit.

Staten.—Eight hundred unemployed men and women adopted resolutions at a mass meeting recently, calling upon clergymen of all denominations to resign their positions and hold the workless ones to find something to do. Later they marched to the Algonquin club in the possession of a book by pastor. Their leader, Stephen I. Smith, was allowed to speak after a fight his speech started away on his behalf. Smith told them they should have two things: "To get what is coming of the good things of life and to make the rich leaders work."

TROLLEY CAR MUTINY

By MARY ROBERTS RINEHART.

(Copyright.)

The reason for the quarrel has nothing to do with the story; it was the usual affair, in which the Girl declares with every appearance of sincerity that she hopes she will never see him again, and the Man gnaws his lip—feeling having abolished the mustache—and declares sayingly that she need not worry, she won't.

The only unusual feature was that the Man was handsome, and did not know it, and the Girl, who was charming, and knew it, was quite unspooled. Perhaps it was the rain that had ruffled the current of true love.

As he held his umbrella over the Girl, they were as far apart as the poles; the drip was falling on the rim of his hat, and his head being thrown well back—he was very much injured—a little stream of water ran down between the shoulders of his gray rain-coat. From one pocket protruded the corner of a gift tied package, and the little widow who stood just back of them smiled and sighed.

When the Wilkinsville car came along he assisted the Girl in ceremoniously. On the platform she turned and spoke to him.

"You have my purse," she said, lolly polly. "May I trouble you for it?" Which meant that she wished to pay her own fare; he was not to dare to do it.

The Man looked uncomfortable, and fished out of one of his big pockets a dainty little patent leather affair with a monogram on it.

The Girl went to the extreme end of the car and sat down; the Man made his umbrella an excuse to stay on the platform.

The car was comfortably full, but not crowded. In fact, as they discovered later, there were precisely twenty-six passengers.

The rain was beating down mercilessly now—the penetrating, all-pervading rain of February. The windows were steamed and opaque and the tracks were twin canals of sluggish yellow water. The car stopped with a jerk, and the conductor thrust his head in.

"Car ahead, please," he said solemnly.

With a sigh the women began to pick up their bundles and gather their skirts. This was an imposition under which the Wilkinsvilleites had long groaned. The car, designated plainly for Wilkinsville, would, toward the rush hours of the evening, take its passengers only a certain distance. Then, relying on the toleration and lack of spirit of the average suburbanite, the passengers were transferred to another car, which might or might not be waiting ahead, and the original car was hurried back to town.

The Man took a hand. When one has just quarreled with the only girl, and she has just told him, quite frankly, that she does not care for him any more, he is in the best possible condition to take up a public grievance.

"Look here," he said, stepping into the doorway, "don't get out, you people. It says Wilkinsville on the front of this car, and we ought to stay on it until it takes us to Wilkinsville."

The conductor reached his hand to the bell rope. The motorman had taken his place at the reverse end of the car, which was now ready to start toward the city again.

"All out for Wilkinsville," said the conductor. "Take the next car ahead."

An Irish laborer got up and picked up his dinner bucket.

"Come on," he said. "You'll do it, anyhow, either the other car's gone. The great American people is mighty independent—on the Fourth of July."

He went out then, but the shaft had told. One passenger stopped in the aisle.

"I demand," he said, "that this car take us to Wilkinsville. If it doesn't there will be trouble."

"I guess there will be," said the conductor, "if mislaid your dinner will be trouble."

Then the Man spoke again.

"Anyone who wishes to should get out now and take the car ahead—if there is one. Those who would like to make this a test case will remain on the car and motor that it go to Wilkinsville."

He glanced at the Girl, but she did not move. A woman with a baby got up irascibly, looked out at the porch, and sat down again. No one got out; it was wholly, unaccountably the wrong time. The conductor jerked the bell rope and the car started back to town.

Quotational comments got in, hung on a string for a time and got off. When it reached the down-town street the car began to vibrate, but the original passengers remained their seats, and gradually the car was divided of all else the Wilkinsvilleites. Conductor's face became general and subsided.

again; at the car barn a company inspector boarded the car, and to him an appeal was made. He sustained the conductor, however, and then discreetly departed.

Two drummers getting on soon afterward gazed electrified at the interior of the car.

"Just run over somebody?" one of them asked the conductor, as a burst of general conversation came through the partly open door.

"No," he said, sulkily.

"Well, what is that in there—Sunday school convention, or trade union?" the other man asked facetiously.

"There's twenty-six of 'em," he said, disgustedly, "and they're as crazy as a sky-rocket in a snow storm."

There had been some demur about the second fare, but after consultation it was decided to pay it.

The passengers were becoming better acquainted. When a messenger boy took a flying leap and managed to scramble to the platform, he beheld the amazing spectacle of a car full of people in animated conversation with one another.

"Say," he said, pointing through the glass of the door, "what's the trolley party?"

"Lot of damn innuities," shared the conductor, and lapsed into morose silence.

At the end of the line the conductor opened the door with a jerk.

"All out," he said. "This car is going back to town."

"We'll get off at Wilkinsville, and no place else," said one firmly, and amid a silence broken only by the snapping of watch cases as the trolleyites consulted the time, the car started back to town. The Man came in and sat down not far from the Girl.

The conductor and motorman were not so mythical now; there was an air of grim determination about the twenty-six that made the cold night air warm and comfortable by comparison.

In the meantime a common trouble was bringing the people inside closer together. It developed that the woman with the baby had a whole bagful of her coat containing three hundred and fifty-five pennies—"one for every day of his life," she explained amiably; "I brought them along, it isn't safe to leave them."

So the pennies were brought out and suitably exchanged, and the next time the fares were paid in copper, leaving the conductor white with rage and violently bulging.

It was eight o'clock when the car began its next trip from town. The passengers were growing hungry, and when the last transient had gone, leaving only a space of empty seat between the Man and the Girl. The little widow eyed the gap disapprovingly, but the Man stoically read the advertisement for somebody's pork and beans, and the car, after another request from the conductor, a little less courteous this time—that they move into the car ahead—started back to town.

The Girl was feeling very lonely and unhappy. Once or twice she looked at the reluctant profile near her, but it was unresponsive classic. Not for worlds would she have shown less spirit than the other woman in the car, and got out. But she was stiff from sitting, her head was aching from excitement and hunger—and just a little from the quarrel.

As for the Man, it is very possible to gaze steadily straight ahead, and yet see clearly every movement of a girl some distance to your left. He had an ache, too, but it was a lonely sort of headache.

As for the little widow, she pulled her black veil over the rim of her hat, feeling very sad and alone, and wondering if she had ever been so foolish when she had some one to love her.

At the barn the car switched off and rolled slowly, eologically into the dimness of the building. There it was stopped with a jerk, the conductor switched off the light and heat, and with the motorman made his way to the office.

The little widow shivered. What if the Man should go? It would be so like a man to leave at this psychological moment, when the Girl was hungry, and lonely, and forlorn; for the first time she had been lost on the woman behind the veil.

The countess shuffled out and struggled through the darkness toward the faint beacon of the office light. After a time they reappeared, led by an epigrammatic man with a lantern.

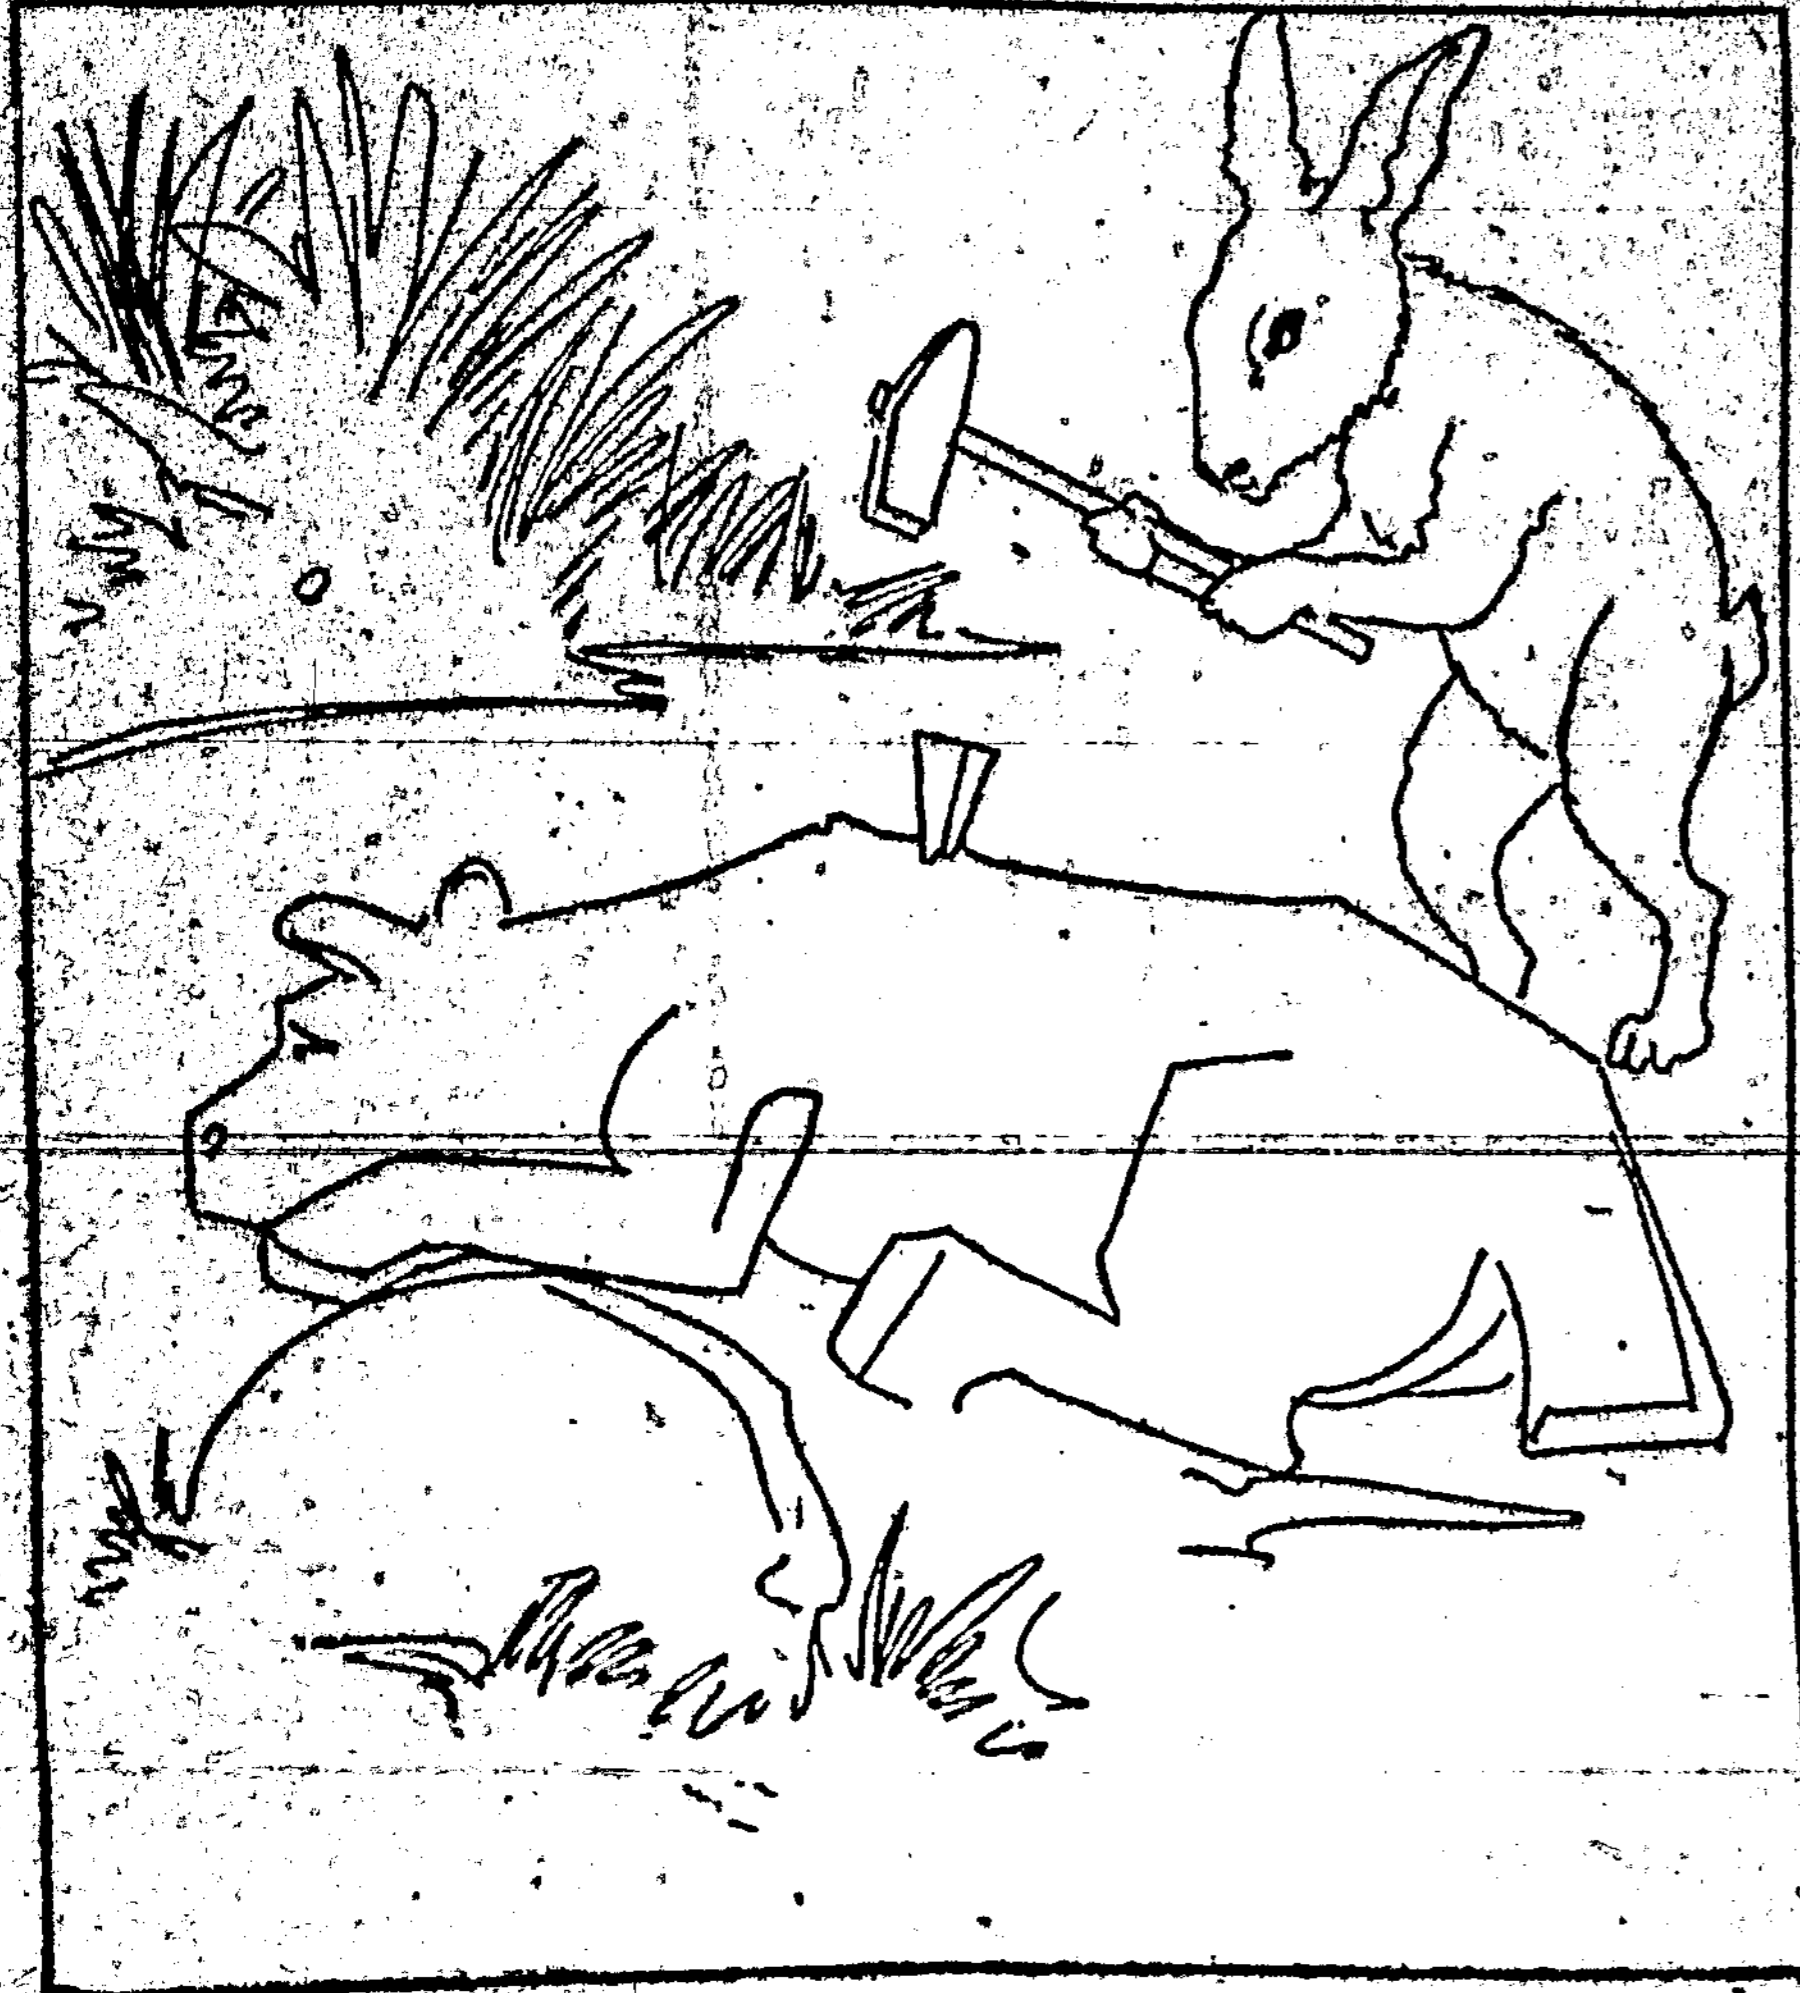

When the whole scene was sighted—she could have sworn it was the Girl, and then for a great burst the light came on again. The little widow gasped and smiled. For across the way the Man and the Girl sat, side by side, their faces radiant.

The little widow smiled through a mist of tears, then she slipped her hand to the pocket of her black gown and bravely touched a lock of a photograph, which hung there.

New Indian Animal Stories

How the Rabbit Destroyed Flint

By JOHN M. OSKISON

Children, Color the Above Sketch to Suit Yourself. Save All the Sketches and Make a Book of Them.

(Copyright, 1914, by the McClure News-Paper Syndicate.)

Long time ago, when the Indians of the wooded mountains used to tip their arrows with pieces of sharp flint, the little children who watched the old men at work chipping the flint and blinding the pointed bits of stone into the ends of the arrows with deer sinew, would hear this story:

Once the animals all came together in council to talk about how they could destroy Flint, the awful fellow who lived up on the mountain and killed so many of them. One after the other, the animals stood up in the council and told about how Flint had come down from the rocky ledges of the mountain and carried off some of their relatives. The Great Bear said it; the long-pronged deer said it; the oldest gopher said it; and finally the Great Otter said that somebody must go and kill Flint in order to save the lives of the rest of the animals.

But who would dare to go up to the mountain and undertake to destroy Flint? No one wanted to go, though the Great Otter, who was at the head of the council, said that great honor would come to the one who succeeded. At last when it came time for the rabbit to answer, he said that he would go and destroy Flint if he only knew the way to his house.

"Oh!" said all the animals at once, "we will show you the way." And so they all came out of the council and took the rabbit to a high knoll. When they were all gathered on the knoll, the Great Otter stood beside the rabbit and pointed to a house way up on the side of the mountain. They could just barely see it.

"There," said the Great Otter, "lives Flint," and he told the rabbit just how to get up there.

It was a long road, and the rabbit sat down to rest before he got to Flint's house, and he planned what he would do. Then he got up and went on.

Flint was standing in the door of his house as the rabbit came up and said to him:

"Hiya (hello)—are you the fellow they call Flint?" And the rabbit said it just as if he meant to bite his head off right there!

"Yes, I'm Flint," answered the wicked one who lived on the mountain, but he didn't invite the rabbit to come inside. So the rabbit said:

"Is this where you live?" And Flint answered:

"Yes, this is where I live." And then the rabbit said:

"Well, my name is Rabbit. I've heard about you, and so I've come to invite you to visit me."

"Where do you live?" asked Flint. "My home is in the broom grass by the river," said the rabbit.

"Well, I will be pleased to come and visit you in a few days," said Flint, and he looked as if he wished the rabbit would go away.

"Why not come with me today and have supper at my house?" asked the rabbit, who had made his plans.

"All right, I will," said Flint. "Just wait till I cover my fire with ashes so it will keep till morning."

So the two came down from the mountain together, and they came to the rabbit's house by the river. The rabbit said he'd make a fire down by the water, where it was cooler, and then they ate their supper on the grass.

It was a good supper the rabbit cooked, and afterward Flint said he was sleepy and would take a nap. And when Flint lay down the rabbit hunted round for two big sticks. Then he got out his knife and began to whittle on the sticks. One he whittled in the shape of a hammer and the other he shaped like a wedge.

"What are you doing that for?" asked Flint sleepily.

"Oh, I always have to be doing something," said the rabbit. "Besides, these may come in handy."

Soon Flint was fast asleep. The rabbit spoke to him, but he did not answer. The rabbit went over and kicked Flint, but even that did not wake him. Then the rabbit put the sharp wedge against the body of Flint and drew back as far as he could with the hammer and sent the wedge deep into Flint's body.

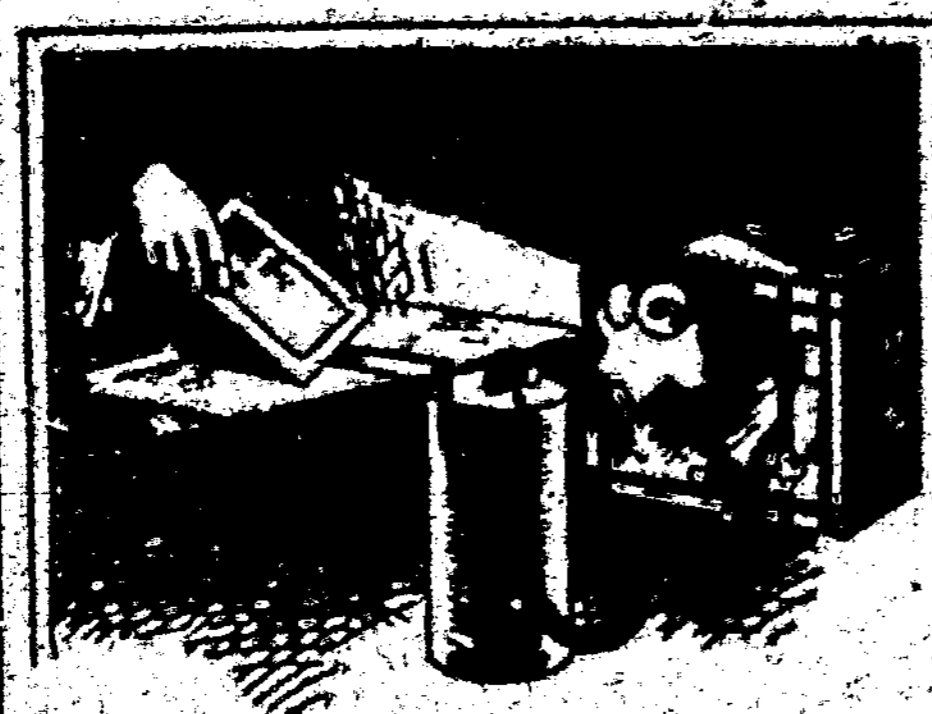

As he struck, the rabbit turned and ran as fast as he could to the door of his house. Just as he got inside he heard a great explosion and struck his head out to see what it was. The wedge had broken the body of Flint to bits and the pieces were flying all about.

It was one of the pieces that came flying straight at the rabbit and cut his upper lip before he could pull his head inside his door. And to this day you can see in the upper lip of the rabbit the little split made by the piece of Flint.

small ruby lens, and removed the film holder, says a writer in the Popular Electricity. In this space was placed a small tungsten battery lamp. A few feet of flexible wire was attached to the lamp socket terminals and a dry battery furnished the current.

His Parental Excuses.

Teacher—You were absent from school yesterday?
Tommy—Yes, ma'am. I was sick.
"Have you any excuses for being sick yesterday?"
"Yes, ma'am. It was the pie, ma'am. I mean have you any excuses from your parents for being sick yesterday?"
"Yes, ma'am. It was the what mother made what made me sick."

SMILES

HAD A MUSICAL SOUND.

Gov. Allen M. Fletcher of Vermont recently handed this one across the banquet board when reference was made to the enthusiastic way in which young girls describe scenes and personages.

"Some time ago," so ran the story of the governor, "a young Vermont girl who had just returned from her summer vacation, was telling her girl chum of the happenings of the happy weeks. Eventually she mentioned a young man that she had met.

"And, oh Della!" she enthusiastically exclaimed. "He was simply grand. So square! So upright! So highly polished! There seemed to be a sympathetic tone."

"Say, Gladys," interrupted Della, with a merry twitter, "are you talking about a young man or a piano?"—Philadelphia Telegraph.

Slight Mistake.
"I believe Fanny is making up an afghan," said the youth. "I was calling there last night, and she was working on it; but she wouldn't tell me who or what it was for."
"She told me. It is for you, but it is not an afghan. It's one of a pair of ear tabs."—New York Sun.

One Reason.
Marcella—I read in a paper today that the importation of sulphur matches has been prohibited by India. I wonder why?
Waverly—I have an idea it's because the men don't wear enough clothes to strike them on.—Youngstown Telegram.

Fussing.
Jack—Talk about trials and tribulations! I was having a fine time in kindred pursuits and I had to come back to college.
Jill—"Kindred pursuits?" What do you mean?
Jack—Oh, fussing my pretty cousin!—Yale Record.

Wifely Thrift.
"A penny saved is a penny earned."
"How now?"
"I saved a dime on marked down lace and 17 cents on bargain ribbons."
"I see the idea. Why don't you take over the entire stock and make us rich!"

POOR FELLOW

Heapeck—Hear about the awful affliction that befell your friend Spragins yesterday?
Henderson—No; what was it?
Heapeck—My wife eloped with him.

Modes of Travel.
Five blocks, she says, is very much too far.
For her to go without a motor car? Set a tachometer would surely show she danced that day, eleven miles or so.

That Made a Difference.
She—No, George, I am afraid I cannot marry you. I want a man who possesses a noble ambition; whose heart is set on attaining some high and worthy object.
He—Well, don't I want you?
She—O, George! I am yours!—Ladies' Home Journal.

In Technical Terms.
"What was the matter with that fellow, doctor?"
"Nothing."
"Did you tell him so?"
"Well, yes, in Latin."

Peace at Any Price.
"That's the fourth time you have seemed with your wife."
"Yes," replied Mr. Meekton; "I try to choose the lesser of two evils. While she is taunting she can't talk."

Insult to Injury.
Mrs. Hemmshaw—Some one broke into the Beanbrough homestead while they were away and stole half their furniture.
Hemmshaw—Well, that surely is tough luck.
"But it wasn't the loss of the furniture that worried Mrs. Beanbrough the most."
"What do you mean?"
"It nearly broke her heart when she learned that the robber sold the goods to a junk dealer."—Youngstown Telegram.

Modern Marathon.
Hicks—I fail you, Smithers. I'm a most resourceful man.
Ricks—How so?
Hicks—He heard yesterday there was a run on his bank and he hired two sprinters to make a dash there for him.

WITH OR WITHOUT
Bella—I've made up my mind to one thing—I won't marry a man without money.
Della—It's pretty hard nowadays for a girl to marry a man without money.

Fate.
"Pa, what is fate?"
"Fate, my boy, is that mysterious something which leads you to pick out of 400 people in the ballroom the one man who has a personal interest in the homely woman you are making fool comments about."—Detroit Free Press.

Just the Man.
"One of the taxmen blew out the gas last night," announced the sheriff. "We brought him around, though."
"Which one was it?" inquired the attorney for the defense.
"That pale fellow over yonder?"
"Just the man for jury duty," commented counsel with enthusiasm.

May Never Recover.
Hicks—Isn't Withington a long time getting well? They told me that three weeks ago he was convalescent.

Nones in Sight.
Mother—Well, Bobbie, I hope you were a good boy at Mrs. Bond's and didn't ask for two pieces of pie.
Bobbie—No, ma, I didn't ask for two pieces; I only asked if there wasn't goin' to be any.—Boston Transcript.

Toning 't Down.
Talkington (pleased)—So your friend, Miss Gusher, said that I was a wit, did she?
Miss Keen—Yes, but Alice is so given to exaggeration. Now, I should call you merely a half wit.

Lloyd-George Smiles.
The caustic tongue of David Lloyd-George recently caused Sir John Randles to move in the house of commons: "That this house contemplates with regret the repeated inaccuracies of the chancellor of the exchequer and his gross and unfounded attacks on individuals." When the motion was debated Lloyd-George responded with what T. P. O'Connor declares was the most brilliant speech of his career. The motion was not carried.

Deferring to Expert Opinion.
Representative Richmond P. Hobson, who was the hero of the big boat-sinking in Santiago harbor during the Spanish-American war, and who later had his reward in being kissed by the longest and loveliest line of girls known to history, was cross-examining Miss Minnie Bronson, an anti-suffragist, at a hearing before a congressional committee.
"So you don't think women would do as well as men in politics?" asked Mr. Hobson.
"Emphatically do not," replied Miss Bronson.

"Well, tell us why. We would like to hear more of that."
"For one thing, women are much more emotional than men?"
"Certainly."
"Can that be possible?"
"Nobody should know that better than you, in view of your experience directly after the Spanish-American war."—The Popular Magazine.

UPWARD START

After Changing from Coffee to Postum.

Many a talented person is kept back because of the interference of coffee with the nourishment of the body. This is especially so with those whose nerves are very sensitive, as is often the case with talented persons. There is a simple, easy way to get rid of coffee troubles and a Tennessee lady's experience along these lines is worth considering. She says:

"Almost from the beginning of the use of coffee it hurt my stomach. By the time I was fifteen I was almost a nervous wreck, nerves all unstrung, no strength to endure the most trivial thing, either work or fun.
"There was scarcely anything I could eat that would agree with me. The little I did eat seemed to give me more trouble than it was worth. I was literally starving; was so weak I could not sit up long at a time.
"It was then a friend brought me a hot cup of Postum. I drank part of it and after an hour I felt as though I had had something to eat—felt strengthened. That was about five years ago, and after continuing Postum in place of coffee and gradually getting stronger, today I can eat and digest anything I want, walk as much as I want. My nerves are steady.
"I believe the first thing that did me any good and gave me an upward start, was Postum, and I use it altogether now instead of coffee."
Name given by the Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Postum now comes in two forms: Regular Postum—must be well boiled. 15c and 25c packages. Instant Postum—is a soluble powder. A teaspoonful dissolves quickly in a cup of hot water and, with cream and sugar, makes a delicious beverage instantly. 30c and 50c tins. The cost per cup of both kinds is about the same.
"There's a Reason" for Postum.—sold by Grocers.
