O. T. Nye Disposes of His Interests in the Newspaper, Real Estate, Land and Insurance Business

DENNY & OSBORN NEW PROPRIETORS

On September 14th, Orville T. Nye disposed of all his business interests in Carrizozo, including the real estate, land, insurance, abstract, and rental business, also his interest in the Carrizozo Outlook, to Jere R. Denny of Douglas, Ariz. and W. H. Osborn of this place, who will conduct the business under the firm name of Denny and Osborn. Mr. Nye has gone to his old home in Iowa for an extended visit, after which he will return here and assume his duties as deputy assessor of the County. It is the intention of the new firm to conduct the real estate, land, abstract, insurance, and rental business at the old stand, and any business you may see fit to place in their hands will receive prompt and careful consideration and proper handling. Both members of the firm have applied for commissions as notaries public, and Mr. Osborn being United States Commissioner, will enable them to take care of all the land, homestead, final proof, and conveyancing business promptly. They are in position to do any kind of stenographic work and will be glad to handle any work of that nature at reasonable prices. The agency for six of the leading fire insurance companies of the world goes with the business, as well as that of the leading bonding company of the State, and the New York Life Insurance Company, the largest in the world.

The Outlook is to be conducted along the lines of an independent Republican weekly, but guarantees no man its support for his political affiliations alone. Its management are firm believers in the general basic principles of the Republican party, and will support its local and national candidates, when they, records and principles are believed to be right. It is hoped to make many improvements in the mechanical end of the newspaper plant, to the end that all kinds of job work may be handled promptly and efficiently, and your patronage along this line is solicited.

DIES OF TYPHOID

Isabel, the 22-year old daughter of Edward Lee of White Oaks, died Tuesday morning at 8:15 a. m. from a prolonged attack of malignant typhoid fever. Miss Lee had been ill for over four weeks at the time of her death, and while during that time her life was several times despaired of, she showed wonderful power of recovery from the attacks of the disease and it was the hope of all that she might recover.

The funeral was held Wednesday morning at ten o'clock, being conducted by Rev. J. W. Hendrix of the Carrizozo M. E. Church, assisted by the choir of his church.

The body was laid to rest in the White Oaks cemetery, being accompanied to its last resting place by a large number of the friends of the family, many of whom paid their last tribute of esteem by beautiful floral offerings.

NOGAL

James Gatewood went to Carrizozo Sunday evening.

The Rev. Humphrey has canceled his engagement at the chapel next Sunday.

Mrs. A. T. Moore returned home the 15th. She has been at Dr. Laws sanatorium quite awhile.

Mrs. A. H. Harvey and Mrs. Kelley visited uncle Tom's garden Sunday, come again.

Two of our citizens were arrested Sunday charged with killing a beef and were carried to Carrizozo.

There were services at the Henley chapel Sunday at eleven o'clock by the Rev. Hoover, and Sunday school in the afternoon.

About ten members of the Nogal singing class met Sunday evening with Miss Sadie May as organist and had a delightful time for one and a half hours. Too much praise cannot be given Miss Sadie.

On last Thursday afternoon at the Peck Hotel, the Rev. J. W. Hendrix united in the holy bonds of wedlock, Lalia, the eighteen-year-old daughter of W. T. Peck, and G. J. Bobier of Clovis, New Mexico. The young couple left for their new home in Clovis on the Golden State Limited the same evening accompanied by the best wishes of their many friends here.

The epidemic of typhoid fever which attacked White Oaks and vicinity a short time ago seems now to be under control. Dr. Lucas of this city has inoculated about forty people in that neighborhood with anti-typhoid vaccine, and the spread of the disease seems to be checked.

Robert Lee a brother of Isabel Lee who died of typhoid on Tuesday morning is much better at this writing and is able to sit up a little.

Miss Fay Lamay of the Noga Mesa has been visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. A. McCall north of Carrizozo for the past two weeks.

S. R. Lamay made a business trip to our city Wednesday.

CARD OF THANKS

I wish to thank the many kind friends and neighbors, as well as the lodges of which my dear husband was a member for their many kindnesses during his recent illness and after his death.

EVERYTHING READY FOR FALL FESTIVAL

The Biggest Time in the History of Carrizozo is Planned by Those in Charge of Field Day Plans

BIG BARBECUE ARRANGED FOR

At a meeting at the office of Denny & Osborn Wednesday night, the various committees in charge of the arrangements for the two Field Days to be held here October 2d and 3d, made their several reports. The program has been tentatively arranged, subject to some changes, and everything points to the most successful "doings" that has ever been pulled off in Lincoln County. At it now stands it is the intention to have two basket-ball games, horse racing, foot racing, base ball game on the first day and a dance at night. On the second day will be held a big barbecue, at which barbecued meat, bread, pickles and other substantial foods will be supplied free to all, and in sufficient quantity to feed the entire county, most of the inhabitants of which are expected to be present. The barbecue will be followed by a basket ball game between the winners of the two games held the day before, which is to decide the basket ball championship of Lincoln County, goat roping contests, another baseball game, foot racing, horse racing and field sports of various kinds, and followed by another grand ball at night.

It has been arranged with the Capitan, Carrizozo and Corona High Schools for a basket ball tournament which will settle in a series of three games the much mooted question of which town has the strongest team in the county. Each team will have its ardent supporters and be accompanied by a bunch of rooters, and the tournament will create widespread interest throughout the County.

Negotiations are under way with baseball teams at Fort Stanton, Mesa, El Paso and Alamogordo, and it is not known as yet which team will be decided upon to cross bats with the local boys, but baseball fans may figure on enough thrills in the baseball line to last them throughout the winter.

The barbecue committee have arranged for beeves and sheep, and for the cooking thereof, and the serving, together with coffee, bread and pickles, and enough will be provided for everyone who comes to partake of a good substantial "feed," everything being free of charge.

It is planned to hold one big stake race on the first day open to all horses under the age of two years with a purse of forty dollars for the winner, second horse taking the entry money. On the second day will be run a free-for-all open to everything running on four legs for a purse of seventy-five dollars, second horse to take entry money, also a cow pony race for a purse of thirty-five dollars under like conditions. There is also a match race or two in sight to further delight those who love to see the "bang tails" in action.

There will be one or two goat roping contests, and with the number of first-class riata experts now in Lincoln county, promises to furnish much amusement and entertainment to all.

The foot racing and other field sports have not been fully outlined as yet, but those who wish to trot a heat are admonished to bring along their track shoes, as an opportunity will surely be provided to use them to good advantage.

The dances each evening will be given in the Exchange Bank building in the room recently remodeled and occupied by the Crystal Theatre the floor put in first-class condition, and good music furnished. CARRIZOZO INVITES THE WHOLE WORLD TO ATTEND.

WEDDING BELLS

On Monday evening at the home of W. M. Reilly occurred the wedding of Mrs. Harriet Pons and Fred W. Getty. The wedding was a very quiet one, no one being present except relatives and a few intimate friends of the happy pair, including Mr and Mrs. George J. Dingwall, Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Crawford John A. Haley and family, Mr and Mrs. A. J. Rolland, and Miss Georgia Lesnet. The knot was tied by Rev. J. W. Hendrix of the M. E. Church, Miss Georgia Lesnet and A. J. Rolland "standing up" as bridesmaid and best man. Miss Pons is well known throughout this section, having lived here for many years, and acted as assistant postmaster here for a number of years, and for the past few months has been acting in a like capacity at Alamogordo. The groom is a railroad man, who has worked out of here for a number of years, and is well and favorably known here. The Newlyweds will be at home to their many friends at their home on Tularosa Avenue, which has been nicely refurnished for their use. The Outlook wishes them a long and happy married life.

CAPITAN

Practically all the houses in town have been rented.

Two church buildings are going up in Capitan now Catholic and Baptist. A number of lots have been sold recently and several buildings are in contemplation.

The high school has ordered a new basket ball and will at once begin to practice and expect to carry off the honors of the county this season.

The County high school at Capitan had an enrollment of 16 to begin with this year which is an increase of 8 over last year. At the beginning of the second week the enrollment has increased to 21 with a bright prospect for several more within the next few days.

Miss Jennie Boon and Miss Helen Pfingston who went to Albuquerque for school this season have already returned to the County High School. They say that the Albuquerque schools can't compare with the County High school at home.

CARRIZOZO SCHOOL OUTLOOK BRIGHTER

Big Increase in Enrollment Over Last Year and Many More are Expected. Total Enrollment 270

LIST OF THE HIGH SCHOOL PUPILS

The enrollment of the school is exactly two hundred and seventy as shown by the latest report. This is a substantial increase over the enrollment shown at any time last year. Many children of compulsory school age, especially among the Spanish-American population are still out of school, but steps are being taken to enforce the law, and when these truants are brought in the number will be materially augmented.

The high school roll shows a total of thirty five pupils. By classes the names of these students are as follows:—Freshman Class, Bessie White, Mae Kennedy, Carleton Mentzer, Don Finley, Gladys Estes, Helen Estes, Rufus Branum, Carroll Johnson, Addie Johnson, Alma Roberts, Francis Goddard, Dorothy Goddard, Wayne Hamilton, Rachel Hughes, and Willie Cole. Sophomore Class, Kittie Tinnon, Florence Spence, Allie Branum, Margaret Branum, William Peters, Bessie Gray, Robert Reynolds, Jonnie Spiller, Clara Brazel, Joe Finley, Allison Stevens, and Ula Edmiston. Junior Class, Zella Mayes, and Louis Adams. Senior Class, Emanuel Anderson, Oliva Kennedy, Lea Kennedy, Iona Stevens and George Barber. Special, Kitty Reilly.

According to announcement in last week's papers, the centenary of the writing of the "Star Spangled Banner" was duly celebrated at high noon on Monday, September 14th. The famous patriotic song was sung by the entire student body under the Stars and Stripes. With uncovered head each one proclaimed their nativity in a land blessed with peace and prosperity and pledged "allegiance to their flag and to the Republic for which it stands." A number of the citizens were present and viewed with enthusiasm the ceremonies of the children.

Remember that you are welcome at the school any time and you are at liberty to come and go at will. All classes are open for public visitation and inspection—we want you to come. Any suggestions for the good of the school will be gratefully received by the principal or any member of the faculty, for we are working as a unit for the good of the institution.

Sincerely,
ANDREW McCURDY.

DR. CODY DIES

Dr. J. W. Cody died at his home in this city at eleven o'clock Monday morning a victim of the great white plague. Deceased came to Carrizozo about one year ago, and had been practicing medicine at Capitan for the past few months. He made an unusually large number of friends during the short stay in our midst, being of an exceedingly happy disposition and was never heard to complain although his sufferings must have been great. The funeral was conducted by the local Masonic Lodge, their beautiful funeral service being well exemplified by its members and officers. He leaves a widow to mourn his loss.

A useful citizen has gone from our midst, one who will be missed by many. May his rest be peaceful.

SYNOPSIS.

Tyrone Dunham, just alighted from a train, is approached by a beautiful girl who asks his protection. She is in fear of pursuit, but declines to give the name of her distress. Dunham takes her to his home and in the absence of his mother and sister borrows a hat and a cloak for her. He takes her to a dinner party at the home of a friend and gives her the name of Mary Remington. Her actions stamp her as a girl of refinement and breeding. After the dinner she requests Dunham to assist her to leave the city. Dunham agrees, but she asks him to put her on a train for Chicago and to supply her with money. Dunham has become intensely interested in the girl and anxious to solve the mystery which surrounds her. Stories in the newspapers of missing girls only add to his bewilderment. Arrived in Chicago the girl buys a cheap clothing in an attempt to disguise and starts out to seek employment. She gets work as a waitress in the home of Mrs. Rhinehart. Dunham receives a package containing the letter which she signed "Mary." Dunham goes to Chicago on legal business and exerts every effort to find "Mary." He is invited to the home of a friend for dinner. As he approaches the house he hears a man giving directions to a man in a dress suit. Individual reactions to some one who goes under the name of "Mary." He recognizes the waitress at the dinner table for an interview with her the following day at the Y. W. C. A. He proposes to her.

CHAPTER IX.—Continued.

She lifted eloquent eyes to his face. "Oh, it is not that," she stammered, a rosy light flooding cheek and brow. "It is not that at all. But you know nothing about me. If you knew, you would very likely think as others do, and—"

"Then do not tell me anything about yourself, if it will trouble you. I do not care what others think. If you have poisoned a husband, I should know that he needed poisoning, and any way I should love you and stand by you."

"I have not done anything wrong," she said gravely.

"Then if you have done nothing wrong, we will prove it to the world, or, if we cannot prove it, we will fly to some desert island and live there in peace and love. That is the way I feel about you. I know that you are good and true and lovely! Any one might as well try to prove to me that you were crazy as that you had done wrong in any way."

Her face grew strangely white.

"Well, suppose I was crazy?"

"Then I would take you and cherish you and try to cure you, and if that could not be done, I should help you bear it."

"Oh, you are wonderful!" she breathed, the light of a great love growing in her eyes.

"Do you think to you could learn to love me?" said the man's voice, with the sweetness of the love song of the ages in its tone.

"I love you now," said the girl's low voice. "I think I have loved you from the beginning, though I never dared to think of it in that way. But it would not be right for me to become your wife when you know practically nothing about me."

"Have you forgotten that you know nothing of me?"

"Oh, I do know something about you," she said shyly. "Remember that I have dined with your friends. I could not help seeing that they were good people, especially that delightful old man, the Judge. He looked startlingly like my dear father. I saw how they all honored and loved you. And then what you have done for me, and the way that you treated an utterly defenseless stranger, were equal to years of more acquaintance. I feel that I know a great deal about you."

He smiled. "Thank you," he said, "but I have not forgotten that something more is due you than that slight knowledge of me, and before I came out here I went to the pastor of the church of which my mother is a member, and which I have always attended, and asked him to write me a letter. He is so widely known that I felt it would be an introduction for me."

He laid an open letter in her lap, and, glancing down, she saw that it was signed by the name of one of the best known pulpit orators in the land, and that it spoke in highest terms of the young man whom it named as "my well-loved friend."

"It is also your right to know that I have always tried to live a pure and honorable life. I have never told any woman but you that I loved her—except an elderly cousin with whom I thought I was in love when I was sixteen. She cured me of it by laughing at me, and I have been heart-whole ever since."

She raised her eyes from reading the letter.

"You have all these, and I have nothing," she spread out her hands helplessly. "It must seem strange to you that I am in this situation. It does to me. It is awful."

She put her hands over her eyes and shuddered.

"It is to save you from it all that I have come." He leaned over and spoke, tenderly, "Darling!"

"Oh, wait!" She caught her breath as if it hurt her, and put out her hand to stop him. "Wait! You must not say any more until I have told you all about it. Perhaps when I have told you, you will think about me as others do, and I shall have to run from you."

"Can you not trust me?" he reproached her.

"Oh, yes, I can trust you, but you may no longer trust me, and that I cannot bear."

"I promise you solemnly that I will believe every word you say."

"Ah, but you will think I do not know, and that it is your duty to give me into the hands of my enemies."

"That I most solemnly vow I will never do," he said earnestly. "You need not fear to tell me anything. But listen, tell me this one thing: in the eyes of God, is there any reason, physical, mental, or spiritual, why you should not become my wife?"

She looked him clearly in the eyes.

"None at all."

"Then I am satisfied to take you without hearing your story until afterwards."

"But I am not satisfied. If I am to see distrust come into your eyes, it must be now, not afterwards."

"Then tell it quickly."

He put out his hand and took hers firmly into his own, as if to help her in her story.

CHAPTER X.

"My father died when I was only a young girl. We had not much money, and my mother's older brother took us to his home to live. My mother was his youngest sister, and he loved her more than any one else living. There was another sister, a half-sister, much older than my mother, and she had one son. He was a sulky, handsome boy, with a selfish, cruel nature. He seemed to be happy only when he was tormenting some one. He used to come to Uncle's to visit when I was there, and he delighted in annoying me. He stretched barbed wire where he knew I was going to pass in the dark, to throw me down and tear my clothes. He threw a quantity of burrs in my hair, and once he led me into a hornet's nest. After we went to live at my uncle's, Richard was not there so much. He had displeased my uncle, and he sent him away to school; but at vacation times he came again, and kept the house in discomfort. He seemed always to have a special spite against me. Once he broke a rare Dresden vase that Uncle prized, and told him I had done it.

"Oh, You Are Wonderful!" She Breathed.

Mother did not live long after Father died, and after she was gone, I had no one to stand between me and Richard. Sometimes I had to tell my Uncle, but often I tried to bear it, because I knew Richard was already a great distress to him.

"At last Richard was expelled from college, and Uncle was so angry with him, that he told him he would do nothing more for him. He must go to work. Richard's father and mother had not much money, and there were other children to support. Richard threatened me with all sorts of awful things if I did not coax Uncle to take him back into his good graces again. I told him I would not say a word to Uncle. He was very angry and swore at me. When I tried to leave the room he locked the door and would not let me go until I screamed for help. Then he almost choked me, but when he heard Uncle coming he jumped out of the window. The next day he forged a check in my Uncle's name, and tried to throw suspicion on me, but he was discovered, and my uncle disinherited him. Uncle had intended to educate Richard and start him well in life, but now he would have nothing further to do with him. It seemed to work upon my uncle's health, all the disgrace to the family name, although no one ever thought of my uncle in connection with blame. As he paid Richard's debts, it was not known what the boy had done, except by the banker, who was a personal friend.

"We went abroad then, and everywhere Uncle amused himself by putting me under the best music masters, and giving me all possible advantages in languages, literature, and art. Three years ago he died at Carlsbad, and after his death I went back to my music studies, following his wishes in the matter, and staying with a dear old lady in Vienna, who had been kind to us when we were there before.

"As soon as my uncle's death was known at home, Richard wrote the most pathetic letter to me, professing deep contrition, and saying he could never forgive himself for having quarreled with his dear uncle. He had a sad tale of how the business that he had started had failed and left him with debts. If he had only a few hundred dollars, he could go on with it and pay off everything. He said I had inherited all that would have been his if he had done right, and he recognized the justice of it, but begged that I would lend him a small sum until he could get on his feet, when he would repay me.

"I had little faith in his reformation, but felt as if I could not refuse him when I was enjoying what might have been his, so I sent him all the money I had at hand. As I was not yet of age, I could not control all the property, but my allowance was liberal. Richard continued to send me voluminous letters, telling of his changed life, and finally asked me to marry him. I declined emphatically, but he continued to write for money, always ending with a statement of his undying affection. In disgust, I at last offered to send him a certain sum of money regularly if he would stop writing to me on this subject, and finally succeeded in reducing our correspondence to a check account. This has been going on for three years, except that he has been constantly asking for larger sums, and whenever I would say that I could not spare more just then he would begin telling me how much he cared for me, and how hard it was for him to be separated from me. I began to feel desperate about him, and made up my mind that when I received the inheritance I should ask the lawyers to make some arrangement with him by which I should no longer be annoyed.

"It was necessary for me to return to America when I came of age, in order to sign certain papers and take full charge of the property. Richard knew this. He seems to have had some way of finding out everything my Uncle did.

"He wrote telling me of a dear friend of his mother, who was soon to pass through Vienna, and who by some misfortune had been deprived of a position as companion and chaperon to a young girl who was traveling. He said it had occurred to him that perhaps he could serve us both by suggesting to me that she be my traveling companion on the voyage.

"I really did need a traveling companion, of course, having failed to get my dear old lady to undertake the voyage, so I thought it could do no harm. I went to see her, and found her pretty and frail and sad. She made a piteous appeal to me, and though I was not greatly taken with her, I decided she would do as well as any one for a companion.

"She did not bother me during the voyage, but fluttered about and was quite popular on board, especially with a tall, disagreeable man with a cruel jaw and small eyes, who always made me feel as if he would gloat over any one in his power. I found out that he was a physician, a specialist in mental diseases, so Mrs. Chambray told me, and she talked a great deal about his skill and insight into such maladies.

"At New York my cousin Richard met us and literally took possession of us. Without my knowledge, the cruel-looking doctor was included in the party. I did not discover it until we were on the train, bound, as I supposed, for my old home just beyond Buffalo. It was some time since I had been in New York, and I naturally did not notice much which way we were going. The fact was, every plan was anticipated, and I was told that all arrangements had been made.

"We had been sitting on the observation platform, and it was late in the afternoon, when I said I was going to lie down, and the two men got up to go into the smoker. In spite of my protests, Mrs. Chambray insisted upon following me in, to see that I was perfectly comfortable. She fussed around me, covering me up and offering smelling salts and eau de cologne for my head. I let her fuss, thinking that was the quickest way to get rid of her. I closed my eyes, and she said she would go out to the observation platform. I lay still for awhile, thinking about her and how much I wanted to get rid of her. She acted as if she had been engaged to stay with me forever, and it suddenly became very plain to me that I ought to have a talk with her and tell her that I should need her services no longer after this journey was over. It might make a difference to her if she knew it at once, and perhaps now would be as good a time to talk as any, for she was probably alone out on the platform. I got up and made a few little changes in my dress, for it would soon be time to go into the dining-car. Then I went out to the observation platform, but she was not there. The chairs were all empty, so I chose the one next to the railing, away from the car door, and sat down to wait for her, thinking we would soon be back.

"We were going so fast, through a pretty bit of country. It was dusky and restful out there, so I leaned back and closed my eyes. Presently I heard voices approaching, above the rumble of the train, and, peeping around the doorway, I saw Mrs. Cham-bray, Richard, and the doctor coming from the other car. I kept quiet, hoping they would not come out, and they did not. They settled down near the door, and ordered the porter to put up a table for them to play cards.

"The train began to slow down, and finally came to halt for a longer time on a sidetrack, waiting for another train to pass. I heard Richard ask where I was. Mrs. Chambray said laughingly that I was safely asleep. Then, before I realized it, they began to talk about me. It happened there were no other passengers in the car. Richard asked Mrs. Chambray if she thought I had any suspicion that I was not on the right train, and she said, 'Not the slightest,' and then by degrees there floated to me through the open door the most diabolical plot I had ever heard of. I gathered from it that we were on the way to Philadelphia, would reach there in a little while, and would then proceed to a place near Washington, where the doctor had a private insane asylum, and where I was to be shut up. They were going to administer some drug that would make me unconscious when I was taken off the train. If they could not get me to take it for the headache I had talked about, Mrs. Chambray was to manage to get it into my food or give it to me when asleep. Mrs. Chambray, it seems, had not known the entire plot before leaving Europe, and this was their first chance of telling her.

"They had arranged every detail. Richard had been using as models the letters I had written him for the last three years, and had constructed a set of love letters from me to him, in perfect imitation of my handwriting. They compared the letters and read snatches of the sentences aloud. The letters referred constantly to our being married as soon as I should return from abroad, and some of them spoke of the money as belonging to us both, and that now it would come to its own without any further trouble.

"They even exhibited a marriage certificate, which, from what they said, must have been made out with our names, and Mrs. Chambray and the doctor signed their names as witnesses. As nearly as I could make out, they were going to use this as evidence that Richard was my husband, that he had the right to administer my estate during the time that I was incapable. They had even arranged that a young woman who was hopelessly insane should take my place when the executors of the estate came to see me, if they took the trouble to do that.

Washington.—President Wilson, as head of the American Red Cross, appealed to the American people to contribute money for the relief of sick and wounded soldiers of the warring European nations. The appeal was: "To the people of the United States: The present wars in Europe are certain to impose on the Red Cross of the nations engaged a burden which demands the sympathy and aid of the world.

"The American Red Cross is earnestly desirous of assisting its sister societies in their endeavors to alleviate distress and suffering among the combatants, and therefore appeals for funds to be expended impartially for the relief of the sick and wounded soldiers of the nations at war.

"Contributions for this purpose may be sent to the American Red Cross, Washington, D. C., or to local treasurers of the society in other cities. I confidently hope that the humanity and liberality of the people of the United States, so often manifested in the past, will cause them to respond promptly and generously to this appeal."

RISE IN FOOD PRICES

Ordered Probed by President in Letter to Attorney General.

Washington.—President Wilson personally, by letter, called the attention of the attorney general to the general and apparently abnormal inflation of food prices and asked the Department of Justice to conduct an investigation to ascertain corrective measures and whether there is a conspiracy. The President's letter was as follows:

"The rapid and unwarranted increase in the prices of foodstuff in this country upon the pretext of the conditions existing in Europe is so serious and vital a matter that I take the liberty of calling your attention to it.

"I would be very much obliged if you would advise me if there is under the existing law any action which the Department of Justice could take either by way of investigation or legal process and what federal legislation, if any, would, in your judgment, be justifiable and warrantable in the circumstances.

"I feel that this is a matter that we cannot let pass by without trying to serve the country. Certainly the country ought to be defended, if possible, against men who would take advantage of such circumstances to increase the price of food and the difficulties of living."

En Denver algunas personas quieren que la semana del 1 de septiembre sea designada de semana de reparación general. La Señora J. J. El pueblo de Colorado no tendrá la oportunidad de expresar su aprobación o desaprobación de la ley de utilidades públicas votada por la legislatura pasada, aunque muchos hombres votaron por peticiones de referendun y reclamaron que el asunto fuese referido a los electores al momento de las elecciones generales próximas. El Juez George W. Allen, en la corte de distrito, después de haber oído la evidencia tendiendo a probar que millares de firmas en las peticiones de referendun eran fraudulentas, dió una orden impidiendo al secretario de estado de ordenar un referendun sobre la ley.

Los socialistas están primeros en el campo para la campaña política en Nuevo México. Ellos designaron a W. P. Metcalf de Albuquerque para el Congreso. La caída fenomenal de agua de 11.55 pulgadas durante julio en la localidad de Raton es un acontecimiento sin precedente desde que se estableció la oficina de meteorología en 1909. J. E. Eskimo Sleds for Stefansson. When Vilhjalmur Stefansson started on his Arctic expedition which was brought to an abrupt end January 16, 1913, by the sinking of his ship Karluk in the ice floes, he carried dog sleds made by Eskimos at Nome, Alaska. The plans were furnished by the explorer, but the work was left entirely to the natives under the guidance of a mission priest. Strength and lightness were the two essential features in the construction work. A minimum amount of lumber was used, but every joint was braced and reinforced. Eight of the snow vehicles were made, and when completed they were strong enough to carry all that could be loaded into them. Makes the laundress happy—that's Red Cross Bag Blue. A well-known comedian who is noted, among other things, for his ability to stow away highballs without outward evidences of the same was standing before a New York bar stirring the ice in his glass. Another actor, who cannot take many drinks without showing the effects, drifted in. "Hello, Hank," he hailed. "How about you and I taking a drink or so together?" "Charley," said the other, "I'll spot you five."—Saturday Evening Post. Chinese Forest Reserves. The Chinese national conservation bureau is considering reforestation at the headwaters of the Yellow river. The government report shows that this will ameliorate the torrents and cause a more regular flow from the now denuded uplands. It is acknowledged, however, that this reforestation may not have an appreciable effect within the lifetime of the present generation.—Popular Mechanics. Proves Arctic Was Hot. Corroborating the report of soundings in the Arctic sea made by the Karluk expedition that revealed the presence of coral is a recent note in science that the fossil coral of the icy climate show the presence of abundant and luxuriant ferns and palmlike plants produced by the tropical conditions of late-paleozoic and middle cenozoic geologic time. P. H. Knowlton of the United States geological survey has published a description of such plants found about Capo Lisburne, 100 miles north of the arctic circle on the western coast of Alaska. Just what is the object of attempting to inject the race issue, so called, into the present campaign, is difficult to determine, and yet certain journals of the state are attempting to do that very thing. When is the time coming when the question of a man's nationality is going to be lost sight of in the light of his fitness and ability? Is it true that because a man is of Spanish descent and is of that race known in this state as a Spanish American, he must therefore be unconsidered as a fit candidate for any office and the matter of his nationality shall become an issue in the campaign? So long as certain politicians and certain newspapers of New Mexico continue to carry on this policy, just so long will the state be held back and her progress. There is no valid cause for a distinction between the American and the Spanish American in this state, as all are citizens of the great commonwealth, and have at heart the well being of all the people in it. The one thought and the one qualification should be, in a selection of a candidate, his fitness and his ability.

The thought of race should never be brought into the contest, and the men and the journals who attempt to introduce it should be blacklisted by the voters. It is a strange condition of affairs when a party should be condemned because it puts on the ticket a candidate who bears the name indicating Spanish origin, and regardless of his qualifications, he must be fought for this reason. The time has come when we should place the man before the nationality, and the present campaign should have no other issue in it than the fitness of the different candidates for the positions to which they have been nominated.

In bringing into the campaign this question of nationality, those who are doing so are guilty of unpatriotic and un-American action. "A man's a man for a' that," and all that should be thought of in relation to blood, is whether it is the blood of a true and tried and patriotic citizen. We did not stop to think of the nationality of the men who went into the late contest when this nation was in the throes of war, and the roll of those who responded shows the patriotism and the true heartedness of those who bear the Spanish-American name. If they were willing to risk their lives in a battle for the defense of Old Glory, they are worthy of the recognition in the political field, without thought as to their names, whether they indicate the Spanish or the American ancestry.

By J. Hernandez was placed on the Republican ticket for the reason that he is a true hearted American citizen, and has the respect, confidence, and regard of the people of the state. He is fully equipped for the position from every standpoint, and that is the only thing to be regarded by those who believe in the principles of the Republican party, and want to uphold its tenets, and see it again in power. There is absolutely no cause for the injection, at the present time, or any other time, of the so-called race issue. It is not here. It should never be here. This is a question of men and an issue of principles, not of nationalities. Those who attempt to introduce the question of race into the present contest should be wholly disregarded, and relegated to the class of the unpatriotic and un-American.

One of the most important departments of our state government is that of the corporation commission. It deals with those questions which touch so closely the relationship of the people and the great economic bodies which so largely control our affairs. We want men on this important board who are capable, honest and experienced. Such a man is presented to the people of the state in the person of Hugh H. Williams, present member of the board, and a candidate on the Republican ticket, for re-election. All of those qualities demanded have been shown by Hugh Williams again and again, as he has faithfully and conscientiously served in the capacity of member of this influential board. He is deserving of the support of the people of the state, in the coming election. There is no valid reason for the breaking in of a new official for this place when it is so ably and efficiently filled by the present member.

Miss Edith Wells left for Capitan Friday morning. She will teach there this fall and winter. Miss Bertha Wells will enter high school at that place.

PROMINENT RAILROADER DIES

The sad news reached this city Saturday morning about the death of F. D. Vinall, one of the oldest conductors on the E. P. & S. W., who died at Cedar Falls, Iowa, after a short illness.

It will be remembered that Mr. Vinall hurt his back about a year ago and was under the doctors care for a few weeks when it was thought he had fully recovered and he returned to his work. About two months ago he complained that his back hurt him and he quit work but could get no relief so he decided to go to the hospital at Rochester, Minn. He and his family left a few weeks ago for a visit with home folks in Iowa and he went to have his case attended to at once. It was then not until he reached the hospital that he thought his ailment very serious, the doctors at that institution telling him they could do nothing for him. It was said that he had kidney trouble and an enlarged spleen. He returned to Cedar Falls, where he gradually grew worse and died after severe suffering.

Mr. Vinall was always the very picture of health and the news of his death came as a surprise to his many friends and associates here — The Tucumcari News.

THE IRISH AND THE DUTCH

The Clovis News says: A good joke was perpetrated on one of our leading business men of German extraction the other day when a bogus telegram worded about as follows was delivered to him:
Berlin, Aug. 29, 1914

Mr. ———
"Recruit and send us 500 German fighters at once (Signed) "The Kaiser."
"P. S. If you can't get 500 Germans, send 25 Irishmen. They will do."

He refused to consider it a joke and says he can whip 25 Irishmen himself.

STATE NEEDS MONEY

The state board of equalization reconvened on Tuesday afternoon to cope with the serious question of devising ways and means for securing sufficient revenue to run the state during the fiscal year 1915. Two propositions were evident: "That the taxable assessment lacked $13,000,000 to provide the estimated expenses and that the Board was handicapped by limitations that seemed unsurmountable." The legislature will be appealed to, but the Board is not altogether confident that its appeal will be heeded. A number of methods are suggested to tide over 1915, including a statute placing the receipts of the one mill road levy into the general fund and also retaining the insurance money paid by fire companies in various municipalities for the salary fund.—Deming Headlight.

UNDER-GROUND WATER

United States Geological Survey Report Tells of the Possibilities for Irrigation in Estancia Valley, New Mexico;

One of the most interesting remnants of a prehistoric lake in the United States Geological Survey, is that now known as Estancia Valley, which lies south of Santa Fe and east of Albuquerque, New Mexico. From examination of the deposits in this section geologists are of the opinion that this lake existed at the same time as Lake Bonneville, in Utah, and other ancient lakes of the arid West, during the cold, humid glacial period.

The theory of the existence of an ancient lake in the valley is based on the presence of shore features and lake sediments. Sea cliffs, terraces, beaches, beach ridges, spits, and bars are found on all sides of the lake flat, at altitudes between 6,100 and 6,200 feet above sea level.

During recent years insufficient rainfall has caused crop failures and has created an urgent demand for an investigation of the feasibility of irrigating with ground water. In response to this demand the valley was examined by Oscar E. Meinzer of the United States Geological Survey, and a report on the subject has been issued by the Survey as Water-Supply Paper 275.

CONSIDERABLE WATER CAN BE DEVELOPED

In spite of the high cost of fuel, pumping can under favorable conditions be made profitable, according to Mr. Meinzer. Though the underground supply is not large enough to irrigate all the arable land, it is sufficient to add greatly to the agricultural product of the valley. The water will be put to its best use when employed to supplement dry farming and stock raising, its value at critical times of drought being out of all proportion to that of its ordinary crop-producing power. Even where the depth of water is great every farmer should obtain a supply sufficient to irrigate a few shade trees, a small orchard, a small grass lawn, and a garden for vegetables, shrubs, and flowers. These things will contribute much to the comfort of farm life and the garden will be of substantial value in supplying food for the household.

A copy of this report may be obtained without cost on application to the Director of the Geological Survey, Washington, D. C.

GOOD JOKES

GOOD WISHES FOR JUDGE.

William Hahn, alias Smith, of the "Old Dutch gang," was sentenced to ten years for burglary, ten years for larceny and sixteen years on an old sentence.

It will keep Hahn in prison until he is seventy-nine. Going out, Hahn was heard to mutter.

"What's that he says?" demanded Judge Rosalsky.

"He says he hopes you will sleep well after that," responded the court attendant.—New York World.

Sense of Immunity.

"Why do you assume to criticize affairs of public importance which everybody knows you don't understand?"

"That's why I feel so free to criticize," replied Mr. Jabbles. "Everybody knows I don't pretend to understand 'em, and therefore nobody ought to take offense."

Process of Elimination.

"What is the trouble with your motor car?"

"Something wrong with the carburetor," replied Mr. Chuggins.

"How do you know?"

"Because the carburetor is the only thing about the machine that I haven't had repaired within the last three weeks."

Looking Ahead.

"My baby is very intelligent."

"How so?"

"She keeps examining her toes."

"How does that denote superior acumen?"

"Why, the intelligent child evidently realizes that one must have perfect toes. If one proposes to tango creditably."

A HOT ONE.

Mr. Borem Gudo—I but wear a smile over an aching heart.

Miss Causitque—From your expression I thought it was your face that ached.

The Henpecked One.

She threw things at him all his life. And one day Mr. Henpeck said: "Your aim's good now, but dear friend wife, I hope you'll miss me when I'm dead."

Noble Soul.

First Citizen—We have at least one man in this town who devotes his life to the uplift movement.

Second Citizen—Who is he?

First Citizen—The village baker with his yeast.

An Exception.

"They tell me, professor, that you are a wonderful linguist. Is there any tongue you have found particularly hard to master?"

"Oh, yes; my wife's."

Appropriate.

"Why did Miami take the Turkish situation for the subject of her graduation essay?"

"Why, you see, she thought it would be such a good match for her minaret gown."

No More Victories.

"Up until ten years ago," related Danny, "Ol had bin in one hundred fights an' wuz niver licked."

"An' after that?" queried Pat.

"After that, me boy," continued Danny, "Ol married."

Old Saying.

"England doesn't take to baseball."

"Pity, too. They could play all kinds of innings."

"What do you mean?"

"Why, I've often heard that the sun never sets on the British empire."

A Puzzle.

"The equal suffrage orator said that woman ought not to allow man to keep on dictating to her."

"But what's she to do if she's his stenographer?"

RECEIVED A BLOW.

"It is more blessed to give than to receive."

"Where did the fellow hit you?"

Obit.

Passed from this life in his fortieth year: Something went wrong with the steering gear.

Rescued From Temptation.

"There's one thing that we can congratulate ourselves on," said Mrs. Cornossel, "and that is the fact that our boy Josh doesn't nurse any of these fool notions about running away and being a pirate."

"No," replied her husband. "Josh hasn't any such thought in his mind. He has been readin' up on pirates lately, an' has got some idea of how hard a pirate has to work in order to hold his job."

Preferred His Company.

He—You were getting ready to go out, and I'm afraid my call is inopportune.

She—Really and truly, I would much rather stay here and talk with you than to keep my engagement this afternoon.

"I am delighted, but can the engagement be broken without causing hard feelings."

"Oh, yes. The dentist won't mind."

Play in Two Scenes.

Miss Wyse—And I may really keep this photograph of you, Mr. Simpkins?

Simpkins (flattered)—Delighted, I'm sure!

Miss Wyse (later, to her maid)—Marie, take this photograph and whenever the original of it calls, tell him I'm not in.

Paw Knows Everything.

Willie—Paw, are there only ten commandments?

Paw—There are only ten for single men, but there are ten times that many for married men, my son.

Correct.

Professor (to horticultural class)—Upon what kind of trees do the first peaches grow?

Young Man (bashfully)—Family trees.—Judge.

A Fair Utilitarian.

Madge—What are you doing—studying that warship?

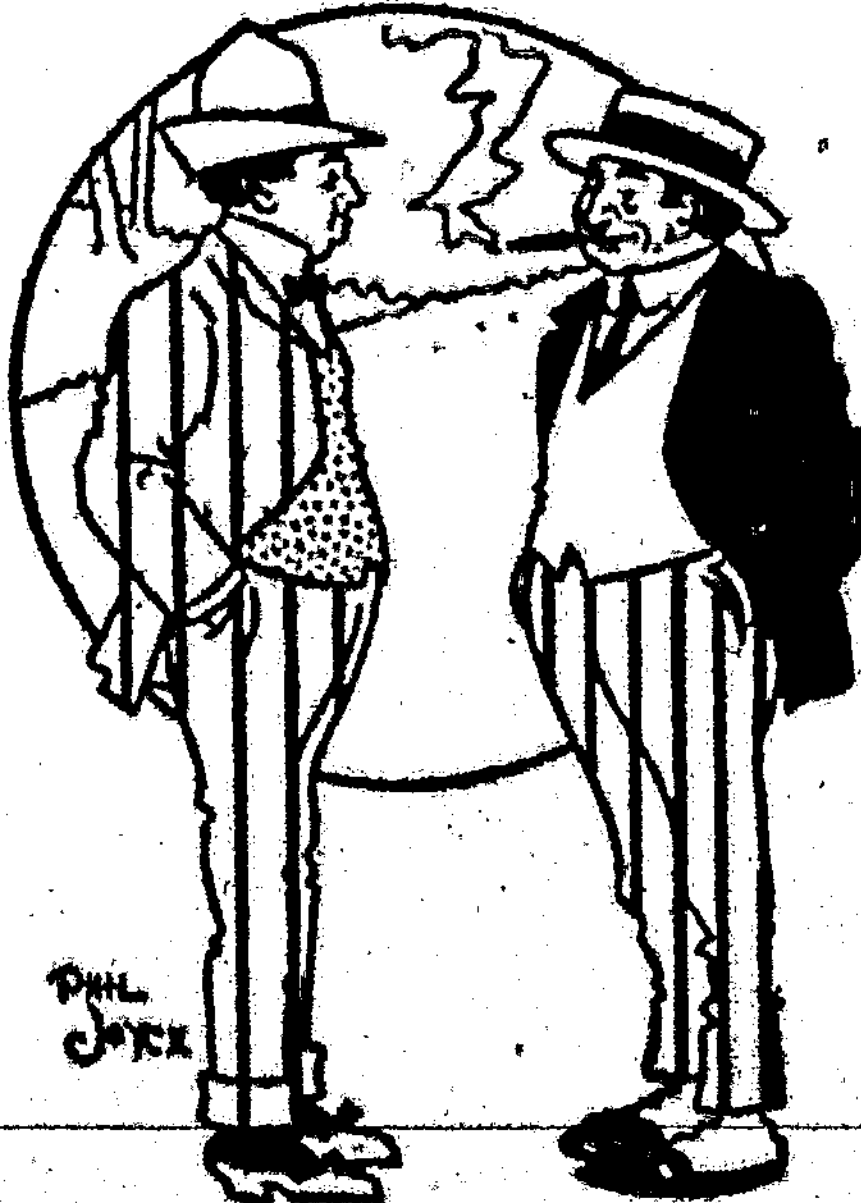

Marjorie—I was just thinking what lovely names those Mexican words would make for new dances.—Puck.

Might Work.

"What do you want with that old dress suit, Hiram?"

"I'm figuring on an experiment with the crows. Going to try the effect of a scarecrow in a Tuxedo."

THE PESSIMIST.

"I saw an old-fashioned picnic party starting off this morning. It made me feel glad."

"Glad to see others enjoying themselves, eh?"

"No, glad because I didn't have to go."

WITH THE AFTERNOON TEA

Appetizing Drinks to Serve When the Weather is Something More Than Just Warm.

In hot weather not all guests at afternoon teas care for warm tea. For such the punch known as Hongkong cooler is easily prepared.

Four one quart of boiling water over three tablespoonfuls of Ceylon tea; let it steep five minutes and then cool. While it is cooling add four tablespoonfuls of sugar and three slices of lemon, two cloves and a tablespoonful of Maraschino cherries. When ready to serve fill tall glasses half full of shaved ice and add a dash of rum and a cherry to each glass. Place a spray of mint on top of each glass.

Cafe frappe is a very acceptable tea dainty and is not difficult to make. Pour one quart of boiling water over eight tablespoonfuls of ground coffee. Let it stand ten minutes, then strain and add three-quarters of a cupful of sugar, half a pint of warm milk and half pint of cream, and then partly freeze the mixture. Serve with whipped cream in tall glasses with a cherry on top of each.

Fanchonettes are made like the old fashioned custard pie, only they are the size of tarts. Prepare the crust in little patty tins and fill with a custard made of four yolks of eggs, two ounces of butter, two tablespoonfuls of sugar, two beaten whites of eggs, three dessertspoonfuls of flour and three-quarters of a pint of milk. Blend smoothly and bring to boiling point in a granite saucepan, then fill the tarts and bake in a medium oven. When done, whip the other two whites of eggs with two tablespoonfuls of sugar for a meringue, and let it lightly brown in the oven. When cold serve on a dolly garnished with strips of angelica.

AROUND THE HOUSE

To scale fish quickly dip them in boiling water.

If you have a chimney that does not draw well, open the windows in the room for ten minutes before the fire is lighted, and see if that will not help the draft.

Gold lace on embroidery can be cleaned by brushing it clean of dust and then rubbing powdered alum well into it. Leave this on for several hours, and when you brush it off the tarnish will be gone.

To make the windows bright and shining, add a small quantity of bluing to the water when you are washing them.

Sheets of tinfoil placed under dollyes upon which glasses, pitchers or vases of water are set will prevent the dampness from soaking through and staining polished tables.

Warm a lemon before squeezing it and you will obtain nearly double the quantity of juice.

In washing delicate laces never use starch, but if a slight stiffening is desired two lumps of sugar in a basin of warm water will give all that is needed.

Dainty Refreshment.

A fruit salad is made of chopped celery as the main ingredient and mixing sliced apples and bananas and white grapes. This also is served with mayonnaise salad dressing. Always remove the seeds of the white grapes before serving. This salad or any salad, in fact, served with nut bread will be found a most satisfactory refreshment for an afternoon affair or any gathering of people where light refreshments are served.

Delmonico Potatoes.

Cut five cold potatoes into fine dice. Make a white sauce from one tablespoonful butter, one tablespoonful flour, one cupful milk and salt and pepper to season. Toss the potatoes in the sauce, turn into a baking dish, sprinkle the top thickly with one-half cupful grated cheese and bake until it is a light brown.

Use Meat Scraps.

What to do with small scraps of beef and fowl is a common household question. The fragments may be collected and made into timbales, hash or shepherd's pie for lunch, with boiled rice or sweet potatoes as an accompaniment.

About Scrubbing Brushes.

When through using the scrubbing brush, put it to dry with the bristles downward. This saves the brush, as it prevents the water from soaking into the wood and rotting the bristles.

Mince Rhubarb Pies.

Three cupfuls rhubarb, one cupful raisins, two cupfuls sugar, two tablespoonfuls cracker crumbs. Chop rhubarb and raisins; mix sugar and cracker crumbs and add to this. Dot with bits of butter and bake between two crusts.

Blueberry Ice.

Two quarts of blueberries, five teaspoonfuls of sugar, two quarts of water, boil for 15 minutes, strain and cool; then freeze in freezer and pack away for three hours.

GARDEN IN BACK YARD

EXTRAORDINARY RESULTS PRODUCED FROM SMALL TRACT.

Plot of Ground About 30 by 40 Feet in Size Proved Itself Worthy of Time, Effort and Small Expense Put Upon It.

Fifteen miles from the busiest district of the busy city of Chicago, there is a small kitchen garden which has produced extraordinary results. It is planted in a plot of ground about 30 by 40 feet in size, and has proved itself worthy the time, effort and small expense put upon it.

Almost all of the ordinary table vegetables and fruits can be found here, and this small piece of ground has been the means of a distinct saving in the summer bills.

Lettuce, radishes and onions were the first arrivals, and came in such quantities that the neighborhood usually shared in them. The amount of choice lettuce that can be raised in a 4 by 6-foot bed is surprising, and this one afforded a constant supply of fresh salad material all the summer season.

Onions of several varieties were raised, and those that were planted in the fall afforded an early crop before others were even out of the ground.

In July the beets and cucumbers were ready for use, and again one may put forward the argument in favor of the small garden on suburban lots, namely, that there is no comparison between the drip-up, expensive store products, and the fresh, ever-ready vegetables of your own growing.

In the early part of August the tomatoes ripen, and by raising two varieties there is a constant supply of them until the frost cuts off the ripening process, but leaves many green ones which may be pickled.

A small border of parsley, and a little patch of mint will do all the garnishing and flavoring that are necessary. Carried away by the automobile fever, the old horse was sold and a machine purchased in his place. This left the runway empty, and in order to utilize every inch of the ground it was planted to potatoes, peas and beans, all of which grew well.

Of the fruits that were grown in this little garden, the strawberries were the first to come. The bed is about 10 by 20 feet in size, and has borne continually during the season. Not a single box was purchased, and the berries were large and juicy. The total amount produced was 50 quarts.

A wonderberry had proved very successful also, and this new fruit is rightly named, in that the number of berries borne on one vine is wonderful, when the size of the vine is considered.

Raspberry and current bushes, also bore well, and so it was—one fruit after another all summer long. There are some grape vines which are as yet too young to bear, but are very promising.

The financial side of this enterprise has been very satisfactory. The surplus crop of cucumbers and tomatoes netted $10 and the products of the strawberry bed were worth $6.25, the currants and raspberries were worth another $3.

Not to go into further detail, it is fair to estimate that this small garden planted at an expense of not more than $1 for seed, has made a return of about $30, beside affording many hours of healthful exercise to the family.

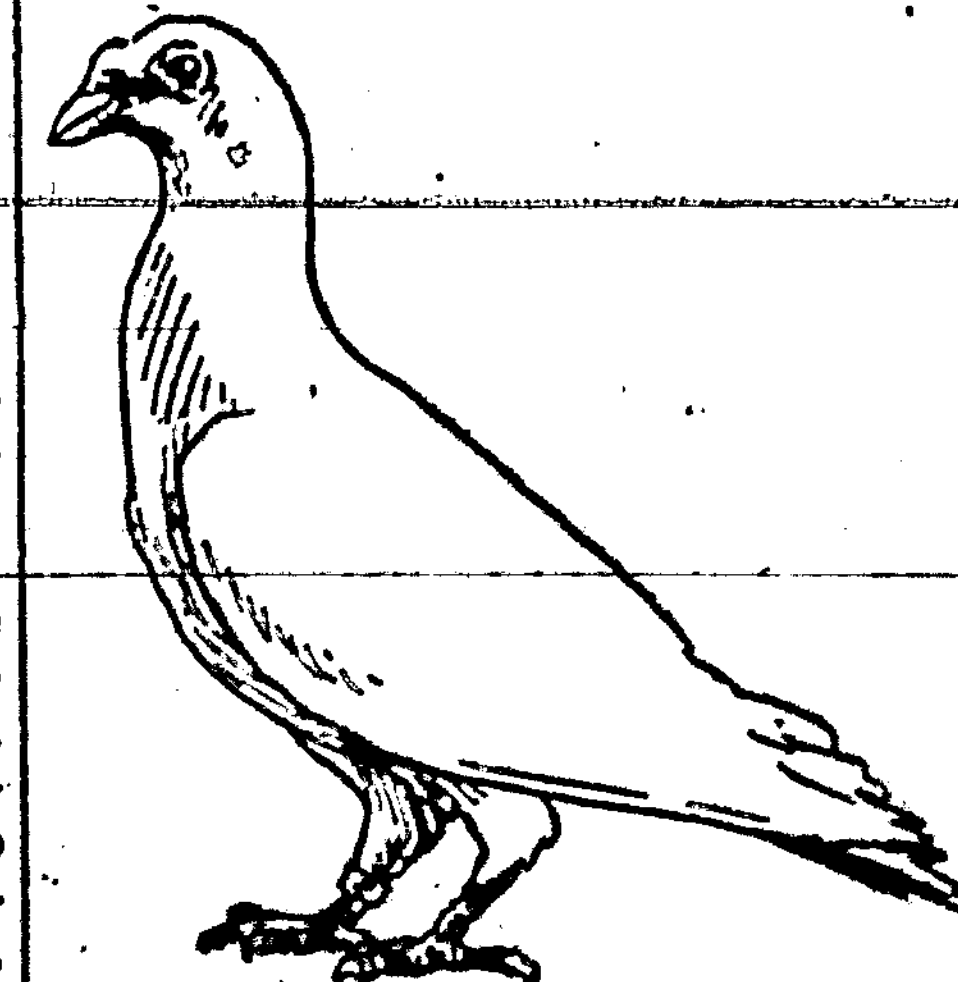

These results show how a little "pin money" could easily be made by utilizing the back yards of suburban or city homes.

RAISING SQUABS FOR PROFIT

Fancier Should Purchase Birds From Some One With Whom He is Personally Acquainted.

Pigeons depreciate in value with age. They are considered to be at their prime when three years old, and there are very few pairs that pay for their feed after they are seven years old. Professional dealers in breeding stock have been known to buy these old pairs for from sixty to seventy-five cents, and then sell them to the unsuspecting public as guaranteed mated birds (which they certainly are) at from two or three dollars a pair. Such birds, as a rule, will breed pretty well for the first few months in their new quarters, but after that they are only a source of expense.

For this reason a man should buy birds from some one with whom he is personally acquainted, or else from some person who is willing to give a guarantee not only as to the birds being mated, but also as to age. If they are mated birds there is no reason why a salesman should not furnish particulars with them, giving the numbers on the leg bands, and if he has bred them, which most breeders claim to have done, he ought to be in position to give a fair estimate as to age, but as there is no way of verifying this statement, the only safe plan is to buy young birds and mate them yourself.

There are many varieties of pigeons that are used for squab producers, but probably the most common is the Homer. These are often crossed with Runts, Dragoons, Teals, Duchesses and Maltese. The Runt is a very heavy bird. The Duchess gives a feathered leg squab, but has a tendency to increase the weight.

Increase Farm Capacity.

The building of silos and feeding ensilage will increase the capacity of the farm for raising beef and dairy cattle.

Most Profitable Animals.

The most profitable animals are the ones that are matured in the shortest time.

Profitable Practice.

Some of our most enterprising farmers keep their cattle, except the cows at milking time, in a commodious shed where, being well bedded, it is claimed that they keep cleaner than when they are constantly kept in their stanchions. Their excrements being well mixed with and absorbed by the bedding, and not subjected to the winter rains and snows, there is little or no loss of fertilizing elements.

Best Cuttings of Alfalfa.

Although but little scientific experiment work has been conducted to determine the relative value of different cuttings of alfalfa as feed for dairy cows, it is pretty generally believed that the third and fourth cuttings are more valuable than either the first or second.

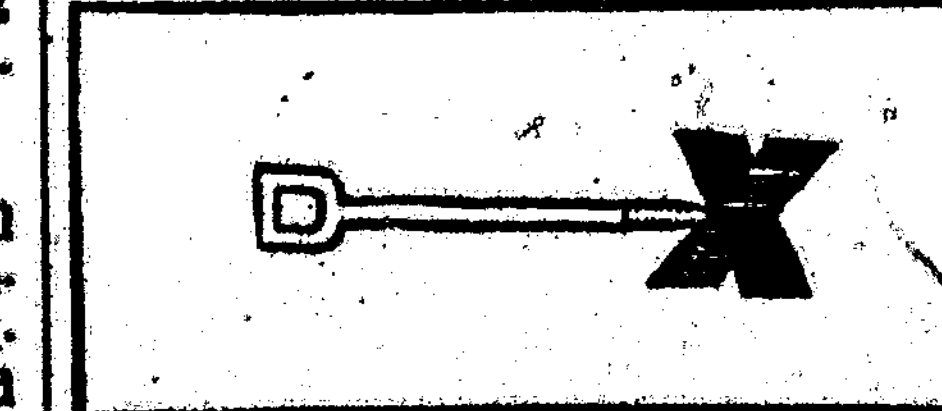

Before Shipping Geese.

Don't ship geese unless you know your market. There are cities with a good demand, and others with none at all. The same applies to ducks. Get the views of your commission man before shipping.

USEFUL CHOPPER FOR ROOTS

Any Blacksmith Can Make Device by Following Suggestions Given in Illustration Herewith.

It's a slow and tedious job chopping roots in large quantities, and if they are to be fed to animals, a great deal of time is required. Your blacksmith will make a good root chopper by following the suggestions in the picture herewith. Take to him an old handle of some kind and have it inserted firmly in the chopper and fastened with screws.

The edges of the chopper should be very sharp and the blade should be strong enough not to bend under vigorous chopping.

Backache Is a Warning

Nature always gives fair warning whenever anything is going wrong inside the body. When warned of kidney weakness by an aching back or disordered urination, give the kidneys prompt help and avoid more serious troubles.

Kidney trouble is a dangerous thing, because the kidneys are the blood filters, and when they fail, the whole body is affected, causing rheumatic attacks, gravel, dropsy and Bright's disease.

Doan's Kidney Pills is a most reliable kidney remedy. Doan's are used successfully all over the civilized world and publicly recommended by thousands of grateful people.

A Colorado Case.

Mrs. J. Brumley, 114 Twelfth St., Greeley, Colo., says: "I believe I would be in my grave, if it weren't for Doan's Kidney Pills. Doctors failed to cure the awful pain in my back. I also had blinding spots. My feet and legs were swollen terribly and the swelling reached my hips. I was in a critical condition, but Doan's Kidney Pills brought me out all right. Ever since I used them, I have been without a sign of disordered kidneys."

Escapes.

Dr. Hillary Roberts Mason of Portland, the well-known authority on eugenics, said on the Atlantic City boardwalk:

"Look at all these thousands of bathers. Do you see one shapely and beautiful human form among them, male or female? No!

"This woman is too heavy-hipped and too narrow-chested. That man protrudes where he shouldn't—in the chest. And so it goes. Among all these thousands not one perfect specimen."

Dr. Mason ended with an angry laugh:

"The survival of the fittest may be a true doctrine, but, dear me, what a lot of escapes there's been!"

Both Changed.

"You used to sit and hold my hands before we were married."

"And you used to sit and hold your tongue."

Rechauffe.

"Walter, this pudding is quite cold."

"Impossible, sir! This is the fifth time it has been warmed since morning."

PULQUE-NATIONAL DRINK OF MEXICO

Know you not that pulque is a liquor divine, And that angels in heaven Prefer it to wine?

SING the Mexicans of their national drink, a beverage whose history dates from the earliest times, yet to which the millions of modern Mexico swear as faithful allegiance as did the ancient Toltec nearly a thousand years ago.

Daily trips are necessary because pulque will not keep any length of time. In 24 hours it loses every trace of its former divinity and becomes a nauseating mess that smells to high heaven.

Pulque is a fermented liquor containing about 6 per cent alcohol. It is made from the sap of certain kinds of maguay. In the United States we call it the "Century plant," because of the saying that it blooms only once in a hundred years.

The maguay is a variety of cactus, of which 33 kinds are given the general name of maguay. They thrive on the Mexican plateau, and, if we except cigarettes, represent about all that the average Mexican cares for in life.

Into a maguay field he may go hungry and naked. From the edges of the leaves he can procure a thorn-like needle, to which is attached a strong thread; while from the leaf itself he gets the material to make the cloth for a suit of clothes.

On the Plains of Apam, near the city of Mexico, the maguay is said to attain its greatest perfection. There, on the great plantations, the huge, spiky, greenish-gray plants, looking for all the world like monster artichokes, stretch away in symmetrical rows for miles and miles.

Millions of dollars are invested in the pulque business. The man who goes into it must either buy a matured plantation, which costs a princely sum, or purchase many acres of land, secure young shoots from some old field, and then wait from seven to ten years for the plants to produce.

Comes flowering time, and from the center of the cluster of great fibrous leaves, some ten feet long a foot wide and almost as thick at the base, maguay sends up a giant flower-stalk. This stalk grows rapidly to a height of from twenty to thirty feet.

At the right instant, which only the experienced harvesters know, the flower stem is cut off short and the heart of the remaining stump is hollowed out to form a basin as wide as a wash-bowl and from one to two feet deep. Into this basin flows the sap that nature intended should give life and beauty to the flowers.

The tlachiquero thrusts one end of his gourd pipette into the liquid, now called aguamiel, or honey-water. With his mouth he draws on the other end and the honey-water is sucked into the gourd. Then it is emptied into the pigskin, which the harvester carries slung across his shoulders.

From plant to plant the harvester goes until the pigskin is filled. Then, with much grunting, he shifts the bulging pigskin to an easier position, and, with the four pig-legs stuck out in ludicrous positions, the Mexican shuffles away to where his mule waits with two stone jars or tin cans slung across his back.

The finished pulque is whitish in color, but otherwise is unlike anything else under the sun. It has a taste and odor decidedly its own. The taste, to the Americans, is indescribable, but reminds one of spoiled buttermilk, only sweeter. The odor is very much like that of ancient eggs.

The Mexicans claim that pulque is good for the stomach, and they gulp down great quantities with gusto. Americans do not readily learn to like it. By holding one's nostrils very tightly closed, it is possible to get some of the stuff down; but quite often, when the nostrils are released, the pulque comes back up.

The finished pulque is quickly run into large casks and loaded on to trains. There are a number of long trains, carrying nothing but pulque, that wind their way out of the maguay plantations each morning and hasten into the City of Mexico, where the liquor is quickly transferred to the pulquerias.

These pulquerias are not at all difficult to find. Over the front door there is usually strung a lot of varicolored tissue paper, reminding one of carnival days back in the states. Where the tissue paper is missing, the odor of the pulque serves as an unfailing guide.

And, after all, pulque may be said to be the drink of the masses. Its cheapness makes it so. You can lean out of the car window in almost any city or village in central Mexico and buy a drink of pulque for a penny.

At times the Mexican desires a stronger drink than pulque. Then he may drink tequila, also made from the maguay, but of a different variety. This is a fiery liquor that is distilled from the roots of the plant.

the tequila industry has reached its highest development, and millions of pesos worth of the liquor is shipped out annually.

Or the man with a thirst may have mescal, a fiery, colorless liquor, which is also distilled from the maguay. Both tequila and mescal are harmless-appearing drinks, but they have a "kick" like an army mule.

Notwithstanding the popularity of mescal, tequila, aguardiente, rum, wine and beer, and in spite of the fact that Mexico imports each year over $6,000,000 worth of liquors, much of which is champagne for the gilded youth of the cities, the consumption of the "divine" pulque goes on unabated.

When was pulque first made? Quon sabe? There is a tradition that about a thousand years ago, when the warlike Toltecs held sway in Mexico, a certain man one day discovered a field mouse gnawing at the flowerstalk of a growing maguay.

By the time the girl arrived at the king's palace the fluid had fermented and was what is now called pulque. The king tasted it. It was good. But over the golden bowl from which the king drank, his hungry eyes feasted upon the lovely maiden who had brought the gift.

While the king was making the maiden a prisoner in his harem, the servants gathered round and drank up the rest of the pulque. They were unused to the liquor, of course, and presently each one of them felt that he himself was as much a king as any man who ever walked.

In due course of time the maiden bore a child for the king. By that time the whole Toltec nation, including the king himself, was worshipping at the shrine of the blanco nentli, as they called the pulque. And so they named the infant the "Child of the Maguay."

I once knew a woman who wrote books, a woman who was very learned in the matter of French and Latin and German and Greek. Often when her nights were dark and dreadful and sleepless, she would lie awake and think of words—what language they were derived from and what their original meanings had been.

The Young Idea.

Johnny was putting some questions to his father on the subject of astronomy, in the course of which he asked if the moon was inhabited.

"Oh, yes," said the parent; "there are people living in the moon."

"Are there many?" queried the youngster.

"Yes, lots," was the reply; "far more than in this world."

"Why, then," said the youth, "aren't they crowded a good deal at half-moon?"

Coffee Ails Vanish Before Postum.

It seems almost too good to be true, the way headache, nervousness, insomnia, and many other obscure troubles vanish when coffee is dismissed and Postum used as the regular table beverage.

The reason is clear. Coffee contains a poisonous drug—caffeine—which causes the trouble, but Postum contains only the food elements in choice hard wheat with a little molasses.

A Phila. man grew enthusiastic and wrote as follows: "Until 18 months ago I used coffee regularly every day and suffered from headache, bitter taste in my mouth, and indigestion; was gloomy and irritable, had variable or absent appetite, loss of flesh, depressed in spirits, etc."

"I attribute these things to coffee, because since I quit it and have drunk Postum I feel better than I had for 20 years, am less susceptible to cold, have gained 20 lbs. and the symptoms have disappeared—vanished before Postum."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Postum comes in two forms: Regular Postum—must be well boiled. 15c and 25c packages.

Instant Postum—is a soluble powder. A teaspoonful dissolves quickly in a cup of hot water and, with cream and sugar, makes a delicious beverage instantly. 30c and 50c tins.

The cost per cup of both kinds is about the same. "There's a Reason" for Postum. —sold by Grocers.
