MAJORS CASE SETTLED IN U. S. COURT

Judgment for $2,500 is Rendered in Favor of A Mitchell Majors While Case of H. H. Majors is Dismissed

JUDGMENT SAID TO BE A COMPROMISE

The attempt by Hal H. Major, of Alamogordo, and A. Mitchell Major, his son, to collect life insurance upon the death of H. Eudora Major, daughter of the former, resulted in judgement amounting to $2,500 for the youth and dismissal as to the elder Major. The judgement was reached by agreement of counsel and Judge W. H. Pope, of the United States district court, signed it. An attorney said afterward that judgement was a compromise.

The father was tried at Alamogordo upon the charge of killing his daughter by the administration of arsenic, but acquitted, and the New York Life Insurance company based its refusal to pay upon the accusation against Major, according to its answer, part of the record in the case.

ONE-HALF OF POLICIES TO BROTHER Major and his son filed the case in the state district court in Otero county and it was brought into the United States court by transfer. Their complaint mentions two joint policies, each for $2,500 payable to the survivors upon the death of either the father, son or daughter. They ask judgement for $5,000.

According to the judgement the younger Major is entitled to one half of the $2,500 policies, and sufficient defense as to him, having been pleaded by the defendant. The elder Major and the insurance company each will pay their respective costs.

H. Eudora Major died about two years ago.

SYNOPSIS.

Lieutenant Holton is detached from his command in the navy at the outset of the Spanish-American war and assigned to important secret service duty. While dining at a Washington hotel he detects a waiter in the act of robbing a beautiful young lady. She thanks him for his service and gives her name as Miss La Tossa, a Cuban patriot. Later he meets her at a ball. A secret service man warns Holton that the girl is a spy. Senior La Tossa chides his daughter for her failure to secure important information from Holton. She leaves for her home in Cuba. Holton is ordered to follow her. They meet on the Tampa train. Miss La Tossa tells Holton she is a Cuban spy and expresses doubt regarding the sincerity of the United States. Holton is ordered to remain at Tampa to guard the troop transports. He receives orders to land Miss La Tossa, who is considered a dangerous spy on Cuban soil. At sea he is overtaken by another warship which taken Miss La Tossa aboard and Holton is ordered to return to Tampa. He saves the transports from destruction at the hands of dynamite and reports to Admiral Sampson for further duty. Holton is sent to General Garcia's command in the guise of a newspaper correspondent to investigate Cuban plots against the American troops and to learn the plans of the Spanish navy. He detects a trusted Cuban leader in the work of fomenting trouble among the Cubans in the interests of the Spaniards. Holton is saved by friends of the spy and later is ordered executed as a spy. He escapes and saves the American troops from falling into a Spanish ambush. He learns from Gen. Garcia that the spy is Juan Cenola, one of the most trusted leaders. Holton takes part in the battle at San Juan. Disguised as a Spanish soldier he enters Santiago, goes at night to the home of Miss La Tossa, where he overhears a discussion of the Spanish plans by leading army and navy commanders. He learns that the Spanish fleet will leave the harbor at Santiago on July 3. While attempting to leave the house he is confronted by Miss La Tossa. Holton reveals his friendship with Miss La Tossa by assuring her that the Americans intend to leave the island as soon as the Spaniards are driven out.

"I know, I know," he laughed, "but just the same, I think you had better leave the weapon in its holster. For I have what do you Americans say?—ah, the drop on you!"

The girl stamped her foot.

"Senior Cenola, I command you to leave us; you are a guest here."

"I shall not leave you. On the contrary, I must ask you to slip that revolver from your friend's belt." He stopped, as though struck with a thought. "But you need not mind. I suggest merely that you quit the room; there is about to be an execution."

Holton stood facing the man, immovable as a statue. The girl stepped forward.

"You are lying!" she cried. "There will be no execution."

"Oh, but yes, there will be!" was the smiling rejoinder, "and right before your eyes unless you retire."

"You seditious!" With a sudden, lithe movement she sprang in front of Holton. "Now fire, if you dare!"

Holton placed his hands upon her supple waist and lifted her to one side. The revolver darted forward to aim. The girl uttered a little cry and sprang back, seizing the American's coat with her hands stretched behind her.

"Miss La Tossa!" cried Holton. "You—you—"

Cenola's face was working with the rage of a fanatic.

"Out of the way, girl!" he cried, glancing behind him at the door of the opposite room, which he had closed as he left it. "That man is a spy! He has got to die! He is an enemy, a snake in the grass, not worthy of a minute's quarter!"

Miss La Tossa never moved; and Holton, his mind working like lightning, did not attempt to put her aside.

"Out of the way," repeated the Spaniard, with a sort of hissing of the breath. "Out of the way, or, by God! I'll shoot through you."

There was the crash of an opening door.

"What's this—this noise and shouting?" came a deep voice.

Holton, watching his enemy like a hawk, saw the revolver-barrel deflected from him, the man's head turned in the direction whence the voice had come. Springing backward and sideways like a deer, Holton shot across the room.

There was a loud report—a bullet singed his hair. The next instant he had leaped through the window, glass and all, and was on the porch. From here, as two bullets sped after him, he leaped down upon the back of a horse that was being held by a soldier. Striking the animal with the butt of his revolver, he went careering off through the darkness like a rocket.

From the men on the drive, from men on the porch, came a rain of bullets; and Holton, who had learned a trick or two in the way of horsemanship, slipped down along the animal's body, shielding himself almost completely. But the horse was exposed, and a whining bullet pierced the steed to the heart. He suddenly plunged forward, throwing Holton to the ground, then rolled over and was still.

Holton landed on his knees, and, although jarred, was not stunned. He scrambled along desperately, regaining his feet, and struck out for the woods, about a hundred feet away.

He toiled on for two hours, distancing all sounds of pursuit, and then flung himself on the wet ground like a tired animal and fell at once into a deep sleep. When he awoke the sun was shining through the trees.

But it was not this that had roused him. It was the roaring of field ordnance and the racking of small arms. Evidently they were at it again. His one thought was that this was the 2nd of July, and that on the morrow the Spanish warships meant to dash out of the harbor and attempt an escape. His fleet must be warned. That was what he was there for, and this, from now on, must be the single aim of his life, the one thought in his mind, the supreme struggle of his body.

By constant concentration upon the object of his mission, he brought his mental condition into a sort of hysteria. The heat, too, had got into his brain. As he stumbled over a log he would sob or curse, and once, when he tripped and was thrown flat, he lay for a second, weeping like a child.

So he went on until once, upon climbing a tree to ascertain his position, he looked down upon the upper waters of the harbor. He was on the hills to the right, and another hour's journey would bring him within signal of his fleet.

He struggled feebly, and then lay back with the realization that, great as was the exigency, he was not able to meet it. A sort of stupor, partly hunger, partly fatigue, stole over him, and he closed his eyes.

It was night when he opened them again, starlit night. At first he could not recall where he was. Then he remembered, and with a start remembered why he was there.

He sat up and with difficulty got on his feet. Then he walked. He did not know he was walking; he had no consciousness of moving, and no sense of direction; but his subconscious powers were leading him right. A breath of pure salt air blew on his face. He turned toward a line of brush and parted it, and there, below him, lay the Spanish fleet, their lights, reflected in the velvet waters, twinkling and winking. He heard the chug-chug of a steam launch, and several times the murmur of a voice rose to his ears.

Farther down, in the moonlight, he could see the masts and funnel of Hobson's Merrimac. Ships' bells struck as he looked, and the sound floated sweetly to the hilltops.

He turned his face seaward and walked along, partially revived by his rest. At length a sense of openness came upon him, the sensation of a vast void in front of him. He paused, and then stole noiselessly onward, until at last, passing through a growth of manglut, the wide expanse of the Caribbean lay before him.

Here he flung himself on the ground and waited for morning. His limbs were aching with almost unbearable pain. His eyes burned with fever, his head throbbled. And yet all these things he regarded lightly, for the Caribbean was in front of him, and the American fleet would receive his warning as soon as God brought the dawn.

CHAPTER XII.

Destroying a Fleet.

It was well past dawn when Holton awoke. He was in a panic of fear that he had permitted valuable time to elapse. He rose to his feet stiffly and broke through the bushes until the blue sea lay beneath him. His eyes were strained to the left, where the stern of the flagship was swinging toward him. He noticed black smoke belching from the funnels. Evidently the New York was leaving her station when the ships of the enemy were preparing to come out of the harbor where they had been bottled up for so long.

Cold sweat stood out upon Holton's forehead, and, hastily throwing aside his coat and tearing off his shirt, he took from beneath it a white signal flag, which he had carried around his body for days against just this emergency.

Breaking off a branch and knotting the corners of the flag to it, he sprang tensely into position.

The flagship was leaving beyond peradventure. Her stern was still toward him, and it was growing smaller.

The admiral going away, of all times! In desperation he raced along the hill, trying to catch "an angle where his signaling would be seen.

Finally, seeing the futility of further running, Holton stopped, and began swinging the flag right, left, right, left, with frantic energy. For five, ten minutes he repeated the T. E. call, but without eliciting the slightest response, and so, ceasing his exertions he watched the New York move away with tears springing from his eyes.

The Brooklyn had swung broadside to him, and the picturesque ram bow and the tall funnels were as cleanly cut against the sea as a cameo. Admiral Schley, he knew, was on board her, and must of necessity be the commander-in-chief pending Sampson's return. So it was to this rakish craft that he now turned his attention.

Walking to a point as nearly abreast of her as he could get, he began snapping the flag right and left, in the effort to attract her attention. If he could only get her now, and could deliver his message, there was no doubt that the New York could be recalled by a signal gun. So simple did this seem that he wondered why he had not thought of it before.

He swung his flag with fresh ardor, but it was as though he were signaling to Mars, so far as any answer was concerned. Holton could see a launch leaving the Indiana for the Massachusetts. Everything was peaceful. From the city drifted the sweet notes of the matin bells and through the trees he could catch glimpses of the red roofs and the blues and greens and browns of the houses of Santiago.

Holton redoubled his efforts with the flag. It seemed as if he had moved his arms to and fro for an hour without response. He had to rest. He lowered the flag and was leaning on the staff when suddenly from the bridge of the Brooklyn he saw a flutter of bunting.

As he looked he read that vessel's call letter. No doubt now they had seen his signal and were making inquiries. Quickly raising his flag over his head he repeated his E. E. call and then, as he caught the answering flashes of white from the Brooklyn, he began his messages. And this is how it read:

"Message to admiral from Lieutenant Holton."

"All right. Ready."

"Cervera's fleet will leave the harbor this morning."

There was a pause. Holton waved his flag frantically.

"Did you get it?"

There was still no answer. Finally it came.

"Repeat."

Holton scowled.

"Cervera's fleet will leave the harbor this morning."

There was another pause.

"Who are you?"

"Lieutenant Holton, United States navy."

After a short wait the flag on the Brooklyn flashed again.

"The admiral sends his compliments—and his thanks."

There followed several up and down movements of the flag, indicating that Admiral Schley had received all he wanted to know and that his mind was already turning to more important matters of the hour.

As Holton threw his flag aside and turned shoreward he saw two tall columns of black smoke arising from the direction of the harbor. They were coming!

He dashed for his flag, but even as he did so he saw the flash of a tier of guns from Morro and Socapa, and then suddenly, as he glanced down toward the mouth of the bay, he saw a leaden-colored cruiser, with yellow and red flag of Spain snapping defiantly from her jack-staff, appear from behind the hills, and then, as a panther dashes from a cave in the mouth of which hunters have kindled a fire, she turned to the right and dashed into the open sea.

It seemed an age, but it was not more than a few seconds, when a terrific roar shook the waters, and a burst of flame and gases rolled from a turret of one of the American ships.

Holton marked the course of the great thirteen-inch shell, saw the great, dark shape dart with lightning speed toward the Vizcaya, saw it hurtle over the deck, ricochet on the water, and explode in the woods beyond. Then the earth shook with fearful noise.

From all the American ships, and from those of the Spaniards, great guns vomited forth their messengers of death and destruction. The sky grew dark, and a yellowish pall settled upon the sea.

As Holton stood tense, following the combat as in a trance, he heard a tremendous explosion, and saw the Marie Theresa list sharply, and then saw her turn in toward the land, where she soon grounded. He could see men clinging to her decks.

It was clear that the American vessels were overhauling the enemy's ships, although Holton had understood that, as regards speed, our vessels were inferior. The discharge of guns was incessant. Almost directly beneath him he saw two Spanish destroyers disengage themselves from the larger vessels and swing about, evidently with the intention of returning to the harbor; but, like a hawk, a long, rakish American craft, a converted yacht, pounced down upon them, letting fly with her machine guns and six-pounders as she came.

The torpedo boats fought back with all the venom of maddened serpents, but gallant Wainwright and the Gloucester were not to be denied, and, under the fury of his onset, the two destroyers succumbed like craft of cardboard, disabled and sinking within the course of what seemed to Holton a very few minutes.

He could see two or three of the larger Spanish vessels aground now, flames seething from hatchways, the men of the crew leaping into the sea. Lifeboats from the American vessels were among them, attending to the work of rescue as diligently as, but a few moments before, they had set themselves to the task of dealing death to their foes.

SUFFERED FOR FOUR YEARS.

Mr. J. M. Sinclair of Olivehill, Tenn., writes: "I strained my back, which weakened my kidneys and caused an awful bad backache and inflammation of the bladder. Later I became so much worse that I consulted a doctor, who said that I had Diabetes and that my heart was affected. I suffered for four years and was in a nervous state and very much depressed. The doctor's medicine didn't help me, so I decided to try Dodds Kidney Pills, and I cannot say enough to express my relief and thankfulness, as they cured me. Convenience.

"Yes," said Mrs. Scraggs across the fence, "we've changed all our old bedroom furniture. We gave away the black walnut stuff and put in mahogany dressers and brass beds."

"Single beds?" inquired Mrs. Baggs. "Yes; they're ever so much more convenient. When my husband hides under one of them I can reach him with a broom."

King's Speech Criticized.

Perhaps the most candid criticism of a "king's speech" was one uttered by a king himself. There is that story of George III., who, leaving the lords after opening parliament, turned to his lord chancellor with the remark: "Lord chancellor, did I deliver the speech well?"

"Very well indeed, sir," was the reply.

"I am glad of that," said the king, "for there was nothing in it."

George II., too, did not always feel himself bound to praise his ministers' efforts. In 1756, for instance, when a spurious speech was circulated, he pleaded for mercy for the printers of it, because, he said, he had compared the spurious with the real, and, so far as he could understand either, he "infinitely preferred the former to his own."

Some men remind us of a comic opera without any plot.

DOCTOR KNEW Had Tried It Himself.

The doctor who has tried Postum knows that it is an easy, certain, and pleasant way out of the coffee habit and all of the ills following and he prescribes it for his patients as did a physician of Prospertown, N. J.

One of his patients says: "During the summer just past I suffered terribly with a heavy feeling at the pit of my stomach and dizzy feelings in my head and then a blindness would come over my eyes so I would have to sit down. I would get so nervous I could hardly control my feelings."

"Finally I spoke to our family physician about it and he asked if I drank much coffee and mother told him that I did. He told me to immediately stop drinking coffee and drink Postum in its place, as he and his family had used Postum and found it a powerful builder and delicious food-drink."

"I hesitated for a time, disliking the idea of having to give up my coffee, but finally I got a package and found it to be all the doctor said."

"Since drinking Postum in place of coffee my dizziness, blindness and nervousness are all gone, my bowels are regular and I am well and strong. That is a short statement of what Postum has done for me."

Few New Inventions. While the English patents court is being kept busy by the campaign to capture German trade, the number of applications for patents for new inventions has fallen off considerably. In times of peace six hundred, on an average, are dealt with weekly at the patents office. For the week September 14 to 19 only 253 were registered. The drop is ascribed officially to the absence mainly of continental applications, and, secondly, to the fact that people are thinking twice before risking their money.—Pall Mall Gazette.

STARTING A PARCEL POST MARKET FOR EGGS

There are in our cities and towns many housewives who would be glad to make arrangements for receiving a supply of fresh eggs direct from the farm throughout the year. Just at this time, when eggs are scarce and the demand far exceeds the supply of newly laid eggs there is a good opportunity for the farmer, even though he has but few eggs to market, to make contract with some city or town family to supply them with eggs. The farmer's supply at the present time will not be great enough; possibly to satisfy the demand of the city family, but if the matter is explained it will be easy to make arrangements to market eggs by parcels post now and continue to do so throughout the year. In other words, it will be much easier to make arrangements to ship eggs now, when everybody wants them, than to do so in the spring when they are in abundant supply and when the housewife can secure good, fresh eggs in the market anywhere at a nominal price. A satisfied winter customer can be made a profitable all year customer if proper price adjustments are made when eggs again become plentiful (Farmers' Bulletin 594, "Shipping Eggs by Parcel Post," can be obtained from the Division of Publications, U. S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.)

Once having secured a parcel post market for eggs, it will be very easy to market many other things by the same method, such as butter, poultry, fresh and cured meats, sausage, fruits, vegetables, honey, and so on.

THE PATRIOTIC

CONGRESS DECREES DOLLARS IN-DULGING IN LUXURIES MUST FIRST SALUTE THE FLAG.

War Revenue Tax of $105,000,000
Levied—Beer Bears Brunt of Burden.

Congress has levied a war tax of $105,000,000 to offset a similar amount of loss on import revenue due to the European disturbances and of this amount beer is the heaviest contributor, having been assessed approximately $50,000,000; a stamp tax on negotiable instruments, it is estimated, will yield $31,000,000; a tax on the capital stock of banks of $4,300,000 and a tax on tobacco, perfumes, theater tickets, etc., makes the remainder.

Congress has decreed that the brewer, the banker and the investor must shoulder the musket and march to the front; that millady who would add to her beauty must first tip Uncle Sam, and a dollar that seeks pleasure must first salute the flag; that Pleasure and Profit—the twin heroes of many wars—shall fight the nation's battles and by an ingeniously arranged schedule of taxation congress has shifted the war budget from the shoulders of Necessity to those of Choice and Gain, touching in its various ramifications almost every line of business.

All hail the dollar that bleeds for its country; that bares its breast to the fortunes of war and risks its life to preserve the stability and integrity of the nation's credit.

The market place has always been a favorite stand for war revenue collectors. The trader is a great financial patriot. His dollar is the first to rally around the star-spangled banner and the last to hear the coo of the dove of peace. He is called upon to buy cannon; to feed and clothe the boys in blue and each month cheer their hearts with the coin of the realm. Men can neither be free nor brave without food and ammunition, and money is as important a factor in war as blood. Many monuments have been erected in honor of heroes slain in battles, poems have been written eulogizing their noble deeds and the nation honors its soldiers while they live and places a monument upon their graves when they die, but very little has been said of the dollar that bears the burdens of war.

Honor to the Dollar that Bears the Burdens of War.

All honor to the dollar that answers the call to arms and, when the battle is over, bandages the wounds of stricken soldiers, lays a wreath upon the graves of fallen heroes and cares for the widows and orphans.

All honor to the industries that bend their backs under the burdens of war; lift the weight from the shoulders of the poor and build a bulwark around the nation's credit.

All honor to those who contribute to the necessities and administer to the comforts of the boys who are marching; cool the fever of afflicted soldiers and kneel with the cross beside dying heroes.

A dollar may fight its competitor in business, industries may struggle for supremacy in trade and occupations may view each other with envy or suspicion, but when the bugle calls they bury strife and rally around the flag, companions and friends, men mates and chums, all fighting for one flag, one cause and one country.

The luxuries in life have always been the great burden-bearers in government. We will mention a few of them giving the annual contributions to the nation's treasury: Liquor, $250,000,000; tobacco, $103,000,000; sugar, $54,000,000; silks, $15,500,000; diamonds, $3,337,000; millinery, $2,470,000; furs, $2,024,000 and automobiles, $870,000. We collect $665,000,000 of internal and custom revenue annually and $450,000,000 of this amount classifies as luxuries, and to this amount we should add the $100,000,000 war tax now levied.

The war tax is immediately effective. Tramp! Tramp! Tramp! the industries are marching $100,000,000 strong and beneath the starry flag they will fill the treasury again while they shout, "Hurrah for Uncle Sam!"

In every field of human activity the demand for more competent men and women is growing every day. Especially so in agriculture.

Home pride is a mighty valuable asset, and the farmer who has none is carrying a heavy handicap on the road to success.

PHANTOM BATTLE IN AIR MARKS
DIRIGIBLE'S END

How "Republique" Went to Her End Graphically Described by Writer.

BOMBS DROP FROM CLOUDS

Terror-Stricken Citizens See French Machine Burst Into Flames After Spectacular Fight, Then Go Out in Darkness and Night.

The following word picture portraying a phantom night battle between dirigibles, and the terror of a municipality under an aerial bomb attack, comes from Berlin, although it was written on the scene described herein. Owing to the strict European censorship, however, the correspondent was not permitted to give the name of the town about which he writes so graphically.

Berlin.—The little French town is lying asleep. It can do so in safety, because the patrols are awake. But on the other side of the mountain there is no sleep. The place is humming like a beehive. But there is perfect order. Every one is at his place. They are preparing for the march.

Patrols have returned with the report that the plain is free from the enemy. The little town is the place they mean to march to. They think the town is empty. The fact that the French had come in had not been made known. They came out of the forest, through which they marched during the night; and early in the morning they marched in, hidden by the vineyards.

Now the town is a small camp. Every house a fortress. The superior officers have taken up their quarters in the city hall. All lights are out.

The mayor asks: "Why?" He is told: "Because the Germans have airships."

The mayor makes the sign of the cross. He has heard of the Zeppelin. "But we also have airships," the mayor says.

The French captain nods: "One of them will go up this night. It will fly over the hills to visit them over there."

At night the officers are entertained by the town. All townfolks of distinction are present. The notary makes a passionate speech about the brave army. The colonel thanks him in the name of his comrades. He speaks highly of the town and its hospitality. Two hours later, only the men on guard are still on their legs. But the mayor did not go to bed; also, the clergymen and notary are waiting. What for? For the Republique.

This is the famous aeroplane of which the captain spoke.

Night Dark and Windy.

The sky is dark and overcast with thick clouds. Only from time to time he dim light of the moon steals through these dense masses. But quickly it grows dark again. The wind whistles through the forest and through the vineyards into the town, banging shutters and doors.

Where is the Republique? The townfolks have been waiting now for an hour, with their eyes fixed on the dark sky—but nothing—nothing.

Now they hear a peculiar noise rounding through the darkness from above. They stretch their necks. But their eyes are unable to penetrate the darkness. They listen intently.

The humming and buzzing become more distinct. It sounds as if a gigantic bird were rapidly moving forward on his wings. Now they see something—or do they only believe they see it?—floating through the air like a torpedo. The French mayor would like to shout for joy, "Vive la Republique!"

Now the buzzing has turned into rattling and crackling. It seems to the mayor as if he saw small lights, flickering, extinguishing and flaring up again. Now all has disappeared again in the darkness; only the buzzing still is heard—the heavy stroke of the wings of the gigantic bird.

But behind the mountain the Germans are on the lookout. The guards at the aviation post don't know sleep. The eyes of the officer at the telegraph are as bright now as at noon. Now a spark and the writing lever splutters dashes—dots.

He has sighted the Republique! A shrill whistled signal gives the alarm in the station.

The Republique must not pass over the mountain. They will try to catch her or drive her back at least. Brief commands are given—precise instructions. A few minutes later a heavy biplane stands ready to start.

A short examination of the wires and supports, then the pilot and observer take their places. The motor is started, the apparatus staggers in wide jumps over the ground, and suddenly it shoots up with a last powerful pull. It disappears into the dark. The compass needle shows the way.

They fly higher and higher; the ridges of the mountain become visible as a long, dark strip. Now the biplane passes over them in smooth flight. It keeps in the dark. The wind blows against it. The apparatus goes still higher. Now the moon breaks through the clouds for a moment, giving a quickly disappearing track of light, enough to show the Republique at a distance.

The enemy is discovered.

Now caution and courage are needed. Perhaps the French airmen have likewise seen the German. Then there will be a life and death struggle.

But as a matter of fact the Republique has no warning of the approach of the German biplane, which is flying as swift as an arrow, going higher and ever faster.

Like two birds of prey swooping upon one another they come. The biplane is more easily handled. The observer looks into the darkness with sharp eyes; the apparatus moves forward in roaring and rushing flight.

Where is the Republique?

Hurls Bombs on Town.

Another hour passes. Then the German biplane is directed earthward. Below lies the little town like a dot. The apparatus descends lower and lower. The searchlight sends a flash over the ground like lightning.

The mayor, who has not yet gone to bed, hastens to the window. Another flash of light. He looks up, sees only a shadow. But they in the aeroplane have seen enough—men and guns. And now something falls down from the height, like a stone, not aimed, but yet a hit. The missile bursts, a fire sheaf throws up sparks, splinters, cracking. The mayor start, back, thunderstruck, cries, rushes out. Flames break out on the market; more cries; walls fall into ruins; the people are bewildered.

Soldiers receive commands. Now shots go whizzing up toward the German biplane.

Another bomb is thrown to the ground, causing death and destruction, and leaving paralyzing horror.

The German biplane, however, has disappeared in the aerial ocean. It is in full flight. It tries to come up with the Republique. It ascends in a wide curve. Suddenly there is a buzzing noise before it. It must be the Frenchman. It seems that he got lost in the dark. A yell of triumph escapes the observer. The apparatus mounts quickly in a spiral curve. Indeed, it is the Republique!

The German airship Victoria now is like a hawk, measuring the distance. Now the searchlight plays, and it sends flashes of light over the Republique.

Bombs are thrown. The observer watches them in the quick light. One sinks into the night; another one also; but the third one makes a hit—it strikes the stern!

The Republique, unable to fly over the enemy, moves along with diminishing speed.

Now the Victoria is preparing for the finishing stroke. It swoops down like an eagle, sure of its prey. The airship seems to stand on end.

And now bomb after bomb drops down with almost mathematical exactness. The Republique groans and writhes from her gaping wounds. She is mortally hurt. The linen covering the wings hang about the rods like flesh cut to shreds. Now it blazes up—a gigantic firework. Then the French airship goes out in darkness and night!

Kaiser Confers Death Emblem.

Berlin.—Emperor William has conferred on the pioneer company of a Lorraine battalion the right to wear the skull and crossbones on the cap, which heretofore has been a distinction monopolized by the famous Danzig Death's Head hussars. The action of the emperor was taken at the instance of the crown prince, who reported the valor of the pioneers in building bridges and constructing earthworks under particularly dangerous circumstances.

BREEDING OF ALFALFA

Interesting Experiments Made at South Dakota Station.

Tests Not Only Important in Discovery of Varieties Adapted to Arid Conditions, But to Cultivation.

Co-operative tests by drought-resisting alfalfa from Siberia have been made by hundreds of farmers in South Dakota under the direction of N. E. Hansen, horticulturist of the experiment station at Brookings, S. D. The experiments have been important not only in the discovery of varieties adapted to arid conditions, but also in working out better methods of cultivation. The results are given in Station Bulletin 141, and seem to indicate transplanting of one year roots, instead of seeding, in getting a stand on dry land. Readers desiring a complete report should obtain a copy of the bulletin.

My experience, says the author of the bulletin, is that by raising alfalfa plants in well inoculated soil, every plant is abundantly provided in the course of the first season with nodules containing the nitrogen-gathering bacteria so essential to the growth of the plant. This reason alone would be a very strong one in favor of this new method, since there is much complaint due to lack of inoculation in many soils, and the farmer can see the nitrogen-gathering bacteria nodules with his own eyes.

My belief is that the present methods of diskling are extremely injurious; that we should not mutilate alfalfa plants by diskling and harrowing. This is in distinct contradiction to the present recommended practice, but examination of many plants that have been split through the heart with the disk or harrow shows they heal with difficulty, and many are blackhearted or diseased, giving free access to bacteria. An alfalfa plant should be good for at least four centuries, but this means that the heart of the plant must be held sacred. A field set out in plants can be cultivated one way like fodder corn and then laid by for the season. By giving each plant just the right amount of space in the beginning, this useless mutilating of the plant is avoided. At Ipswich I found 25 plants to the square foot; at Huron, in a garden, I found 13 plants on two and one-half square inches—all of them being as big as a darning needle.

Alfalfa plants in this spring's demonstrations were set two feet apart in the rows, with rows three feet eight inches apart so that the common corn cultivator can be used. My opinion is that they should be given cultivation one way just like fodder corn but perhaps check row machines will be devised to make feasible cross cultivation in early spring and after each cutting.

The plants should be raised the first year in good garden soil that is well inoculated. They may be transplanted in the autumn of the first year but the bulk of them should be kept in outdoor cellars, such as used for storing potatoes or trees, or they may be heeled in close together in furrows made with a plow. In 1910 at this station on a piece of good garden soil 60x165 feet, 50,000 Orenburg plants were raised, which is about two hundred and twenty-thousand plants per acre. Probably much more could be done if no cut worms, etc., appear. These were raised in drills, much like carrots and beets. For the purpose of raising the most seed, perhaps single plants in hills 2x4 feet may be better than sown close together in rows. At this rate, if set 2x4 feet, or 5,445 plants per acre, one acre would raise enough plants to set 40 acres. Of course the best method for the maximum seed production will develop with further experience.

SAVING THE SOIL MOISTURE

Mulch Blanket on Surface Will Prevent Evaporation Through Cracks and Insect Holes.

Moisture is conserved or prevented from escaping through surface cracks and insect holes by maintaining a soil mulch blanket on the surface. This can be done in corn by running a mulch harrow between the rows or by using a surface cultivator. The mulch should be formed as soon as the ground begins to dry or bake after rains. Unless the farmer is watchful, one or more inches of water will escape during one hot, windy day.

In grain fields the mulch can be formed either with a harrow or a corrugated roller. The harrow gives the best results in hard ground where the roots are deep, but if the soil is loose the corrugated roller forms a retaining mulch and at the same time packs the soil about the grain roots. Either implement can be used to good profit even when the grain is beginning to joint.

HER SON FIGHTS FOR BRITAIN

German Woman Encounters Lad by Chance in Railway Station in London.

London.—A well-known German woman, who is married to an Englishman, had a curious experience in London. Her son, fifteen years old, is a cadet in a British naval school, and it was her intention to get her son and take him to France to study French.

She reached England in the first days of the mobilization. As she got out of her train at Victoria station she saw a procession of naval cadets pass along the platform. She stopped one of the youngsters.

"Are you not from the — school?" she asked him. Upon his replying affirmatively, she asked what the cadets were doing in London.

"Why, we are being mobilized," was the reply.

"Mobilized! You are not going to the warships?" she demanded.

"That's what they say."

GANGRENE MICROBE IS FOUND

American Ambulance Service Surgeons in France Make Discovery of Greatest Importance.

Paris.—A microbe causing gangrene in bullet and shrapnel wounds has been discovered by Drs. James Scarlett and Georges Desjardins of the American ambulance service.

Previously initial cultures all were impure, leading to the belief of scientists that the disease was caused not by a single germ, but by a combination of germs. After much research and experimentation on horses and guinea pigs, a single bacillus has been discovered and isolated and the serum is being prepared by Dr. Henri Weisberg of the Pasteur Institute.

The discovery is expected in medical circles to have world-wide importance. The serum is being injected into patients on the battlefield in the early stages of infection, obviating amputations and preventing a great loss of life.

Slept in Asparagus Beds. Ostend.—A wounded Belgian soldier here is extremely proud of the fact that he slept in the asparagus beds about Malines. For two days he slept in the fields after being wounded. "Malines has the best asparagus in the world, and I slept on it," he said proudly.

German Build Lighters. Copenhagen.—Two shipyards at Kiel, the Germania and the Howard, are building 30 armored lighters capable of carrying 500 men each and traveling at the rate of nine miles an hour, to proceed to the river Scheldt should events permit the landing of German troops on the coast of England.

BIRD SANCTUARY IN ORCHARD

Farmers and Fruit Growers Urged to Plant Trees to Provide Nesting Places for the Robin.

One-hundred-and-seventy-six species of insects attack the apple tree, while apple-producing states spend as high as $3,000,000 for spraying trees to keep down the codling moth. Instead of putting "poison" (which often kills the birds), on your trees, why not encourage these tireless little workers to come and rid your fruit trees of insect pests? Every orchard should be a bird sanctuary. What are you doing to make a safe refuge of yours? In return for shelter and protection your feathered friends will brighten your little world with their beautiful plumage, while working every hour in the day for you, and sing glad songs of thanksgiving while they work.

The Liberty Bell Bird club of the Farm Journal says that the destructive insect invasion is not caused altogether by the killing of the birds themselves who would eat the insects, but largely because the farmer has cut down the trees and shrubbery, depriving his former little neighbors of their nesting places without providing others. It is urging the farmers and fruit growers to plant those trees and shrubs which will entice the foraging robin away from his favorite cherry trees, and yet maintains that he is entitled to a little of even this choice fruit in return for all the ravening fruit pests he devours. It claims that he will not, however, bother the cherries if he has Russian mulberries which ripen at the same time. This tireless forager also prefers chokeberry, holly elder, sour-gum, shadberries, wild cherries, wild grapes, green brier and smilax to cherries. He is such a gentleman robber that a bird-bath has been known to lure him away from his favorite mulberry. The robin likes to be a near neighbor to man and that he is a more obliging and honest one than is generally believed is shown by his propensity to rid a farmer's cabbage patch of cut worms, all in exchange for a few (perhaps wormy) cherries.

GENERAL FARM NOTES

Fruit and poultry raising go well together.

Every owner of a colt should look well to the care of the feet.

Selling the choicest of the wheat is a poor way to select seed grain.

Bees wintered out of doors should be where the sun will shine on the hive.

Bad shoeing causes many horses to travel badly, but shoeing is not wholly to blame.

Late chickens sometimes do very well, but they require more care than early ones.

The poultry that is having the run of the orchard now is serving well their day and generation.

The foal that is being weaned should be watered twice each day. Horses of all ages must be watered frequently and regularly if they are to do well.

Before the snow falls, it is a good plan to go through the orchard, and with a coarse rake, gather up all diseased or rotten apples or other fruit left on the ground, and destroy them.

In planting fruit trees for family use, select the varieties that appeal to the palate of the home folks, but for the markets select those varieties that keep best, and are in greatest demand.

To drench, it is always better to give medicine to swine in food. But if one wants to drench, fasten a piece of rubber hose securely in a bottle containing the medicine. Throw the pig, put a stick in mouth and allow the fluid to slowly run down the throat.

GRADING AND SORTING EGGS

Every Year There is a Loss of Millions of Dollars in Product Because of Haphazard Methods.

(By M. HASTINGS.)

Eggs are among the most difficult of food products to grade. This is because each egg must be considered separately, and because the actual substance of an egg cannot be examined without destroying the egg.

From external appearance, eggs can be selected for size, color, cleanliness of shell and freedom from cracks. This is the common method of grading in early spring when the eggs are uniformly of good quality. Later in the season the egg candle is used. While any kind of a light may be used, a 16-candlepower electric lamp is the most desirable. The light is enclosed in a box or tin cylinder, in which are made openings about the size of a half dollar. The room being darkened, the candler holds the egg to the light, large end upward, and gives it a quick turn in order to view all sides and to cause the contents to whirl within the shell. To an expert this process reveals the actual condition of the egg to an extent that the novice can hardly realize.

HOW TO GROW HORSERADISH

Crop is Cut in Fall, Small Roots Removed and Arranged into Sets Four to Six Inches Long.

Horseradish is commonly grown from sets, and not from seed. Some claim they have best success growing it as a second crop after the early cabbage, beets, etc. The crop is dug in the fall, the small roots removed and cut into sets four to six inches long.

The top end is cut square and the bottom slanting, so as to make no mistake in planting. These are tied in bundles and kept over winter in sand.

In the spring, after the cabbages are set out, a row of horseradish is set in between the cabbage rows. Small holes are made with a light crowbar or long stick and the sets dropped in and covered two or three inches deep, so that they do not come up until July first.

A deep, rich soil, well drained, will answer for horseradish.

Unsuitable Food

Impure feed and impure drinking water are never suitable for the dairy cow. Remember she turns this stuff into milk and milk is one of the best of human foods. It is made up very largely of the elements that a cow eats. At the same time a cow must be kept healthy and it is almost impossible to do it on filthy feed.

Implements Deteriorate.

Do not forget that the implements and machines on the farm represent an investment, and that when exposed to the weather they deteriorate rapidly, thus making the upkeep and original cost a heavier charge against the equipment.

Kindness is Appreciated.

It pays to be kind to a milch cow; she appreciates kindness and will repay her keeper by increased yields in milk. Whatever you do, don't try to pound milk out of her, with a milk stool; it does not pay and, besides, it is rank cruelty.

Caring for Cream.

If your cream tests less than 30 per cent, better turn in the cream screw on the hand separator and get thicker cream. It means less transportation charges and more skimmed milk for feeding.

Selecting Breeding Stock.

In selecting breeding stock, the records of the ancestry are always important but the records of the ancestry nearest the individual that you are buying are naturally the most important.

The Corn Yield.

The yield of corn is not related to the length, weight, circumference nor density of the ear, according to experimental work recently completed at the Ohio experiment station.

Reduction in Living Costs Made Possible by Perfect Product.

The sudden and highly alarming increase in cost of food necessities, such as sugar and flour, demand increased domestic economy. For instance have not advanced with this war-time soaring of food prices.

Waste of food as well as cost of food must be considered and minimized in these days of exorbitant prices. Fortunately the greatest food waste with which the housewife has to contend—bake-day failures and the waste of costly baking materials—is rendered preventable by the perfect leavening power of Calumet Baking Powder.

Calumet is an absolutely sure baking powder of absolute purity. It never fails to produce fully raised bakings that are tender and temptingly delicious. For its wonderful leavening strength never varies. It is always uniform—and always unexcelled.

To pay more than is asked for Calumet simply means a useless waste of money. To pay less, and obtain inferior powder, means the useless waste of Baking Materials.

Order a can of Calumet. Save a substantial sum on the price asked for Trust Brands when you buy it. Save the flour, sugar, butter and eggs so often wasted by Big Can Powders—when you use it. You are safe in ordering Calumet, in trying it, in testing the truth of these claims, for if you are not thoroughly satisfied the purchase price will be refunded by your local dealer.

In buying a can of Calumet send the slip found in the one-pound can to the Calumet Baking Powder Co., Advertising Department, Chicago, Ill., and you will receive one of our handsome 72-page Cook Books, illustrations in colors, and a book that will be a guide to economy in the kitchen.—Adv.
