VOL. VIII. NO. 15

CARRIZOZO, LINCOLN COUNTY, NEW MEXICO, FRIDAY, JANUARY 23, 1914.

PRICE $1.50 PER YEAR

TO THE TAXPAYERS

List of Assessable Property must be in the Hands of Assessor by Feb. 28th

SYNOPSIS OF THE TAX LAW

All property returns must be in the assessor's hands by the last day of February. The new schedules provide that the property owner must not fill in the value of his property, leaving that to the assessor, who questions the taxpayer and then fill in the schedule. After the assessment period is over the assessor will mail a card to each property owner, notifying him at what figure he is assessed. Thus the initiative in protesting against raises and appealing to the board of equalization is left entirely to the taxpayer.

Mr. O. T. Nye Deputy Assessor is visiting the various precincts of the county, notifying the taxpayers of the day in advance.

IMPORTANT TO TAXPAYERS

(See Chapter 84, Laws of 1913)

It is the duty of every inhabitant of the state, of full age and sound mind, to make a list of all property subject to taxation of which he is the owner or has control or management in the county where the same is situate on the first day of January of the current year, but in no case is he to fix the value of such property or any portion thereof, except the average value of merchandise for the year ending January 1, 1914.

Such list must show, in the case of real estate, a description thereof such as would be sufficient in a deed to identify it so that title thereby would pass.

Such list must contain a detail statement of all personal property including the average value of merchandise for the year ending January 1st, 1914.

Such list must be verified by the affidavit of the person making the same.

Lands entered or purchased under any act of congress are not subject to taxation until patent therefor has been issued, except in cases where the issuance of patent has been delayed by the neglect or default of the entryman or purchaser, or of his assigns.

If any person fail to render a true and complete list of his property, the assessor must make such list according to the best information he can obtain, and such person is liable to a penalty of twenty-five per centum; and shall be deemed guilty of perjury and punishable accordingly.

Any assessor who knowingly receives and accepts from any person a false or imperfect list of his property, or fails to assess any property of which he obtains knowledge or which is called to his attention by the state board of equalization or by any other person, may be removed from office and be subject to criminal prosecution.

In any case where the exemption of $200 is claimed by, and allowed to a head of a family, such $200 must be deducted from the full cash value of his property and the assessment made at one third of the value of the amount of such exemption.

When the assessor has fixed the value of the property in any list if the postoffice address of the owner or agent of the owner is known, it is the duty of the assessor to mail a notice to such owner or agent informing him of the valuation placed upon his real estate and personal property, stating each separately and that any person dissatisfied will be heard by the county commissioners sitting as a board of equalization on the first Monday in June, and any person dissatisfied with the decision of that board shall have the right to appeal to the state board of equalization which is to hold a meeting for the hearing of such appeals on the first Monday in July.

Every owner of property must make a return thereof even though it may be all exempt from taxation and the assessor should see that all property is listed and put on the tax roll in its proper school district whether exempt or not, at the same time showing any exemption there may be, and in order to balance the tax roll, the amount of exemption must not exceed the actual value of the property.

Property owners must designate the school district number in which both real and personal property is situate, and the assessor shall arrange the tax roll by school districts.

K. OF P RESOLUTIONS

Having answered the call of the Universe, and entered into his reward, and we are called upon to mourn the loss of one of our most beloved and cherished Pythian Knights: Therefore be it

Resolved: That no truer man, or more exemplary Knight ever graced the roster of this organization than our departed brother, Albert T. Roberts:

Resolved: That in every relation of life he was the same true, trusted, and model man, making all his associates happy and contented by his genial nature and words of good cheer.

Resolved: That his mission on earth was to illustrate the pure doctrine of practical benevolence in seeking out distresses, assuaging grief, comforting the dying and burying the dead. He fully recognized the doctrine that man needed a closer acquaintance with man, the world over.

Resolved: That in years to come his eulogy will be breathed silently into the ears of heaven, with the last prayer of the dying, by the widow over the bier of her husband by the young orphans over the grave of their father.

Resolved: That no man ever more fully exemplified the cardinal doctrine of this humanitarian movement in his daily walk than our lamented brother. By every act, word, and look he seemed to confirm the saying of our illustrious prototype: "I do prefer the certainty of death unto the possibility of dishonor." Be it further

Resolved: That a copy of these resolutions shall be spread on our minutes, that a copy shall be given the papers of this city for publication, and that a copy shall be given the widow of our deceased brother

—Geo. L. Ulrich has returned from Santa Fe where he attended a meeting of the Penitentiary Board of which he is a member.

—Mr. Arrington, of Ziegler Bros' is expecting his wife in from St. Louis on today's Golden State Limited.

—Frank Gauchet, trainmaster Fairbank's clerk, returned from El Paso Tuesday where he has been for the past two weeks taking osteopathic treatment for astigmatism, and reports his eyes much better, having discarded his glasses.

LINCOLN COUNTY NOTES

News of Week from Around Lincoln County Briefly Told

JICARILLA NOTES

Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Wilson and children are spending a few days in Jicarilla.

Juan Montoya was on the sick list for a few days last week but is now improving.

Mr. Pitts is thinking of erecting a store building in the camp and putting in a complete stock of goods.

Judge C. L. Kennedy has been in Santa Fe for a week or so on business.

Max Enzinger left for his home in Tucson, Ariz., last Friday. He expects to return here in April.

Dan Dawson and Geo. Weiskar are doing the annual work on the Wisconsin M & S Co., or rather completing work for 1913.

From information we learn Wm. Franklin has sold an interest in the Clipper or one of the Sallie group to Chicago capitalists.

It was with much regret that the friends of A. T. Roberts learned of his demise. He had quite a number of friends in this camp.

We learn that Wm. Franklin will leave Chicago at an early date to complete the sale of the Clipper and other claims. He will be accompanied by Chicago capitalists.

NOGAL NOTES

Mrs. Nancy Sterling has returned to the Panhandle, Texas with her oldest son who came here to be at the bedside of her father in his last hours.

George Dillard, Sr informed your correspondent that he has not sold his ranch on the Nogal Canyon but has rented the same for the year.

Quite a congregation assembled at the church Sunday the 17th and an old time gathering and sermon was had.

Rev. Thos. Brown and family have moved to the Mesa from the O. A. Humphrey place on Eagle Creek.

CAPITAN CORRESPONDENCE

L. R. York returned from Santa Fe, N. M., last Friday where he had been to take the State Bar Examination. Out of seventeen applicants only 12 successfully passed, Mr. York being one of the fortunate ones. He reports the examination very rigid.

Miss Velma A. White who has been teaching in the Capitan schools, resigned her position and left last Saturday for Portales where she has a position in the schools of that city.

The board of education at Capitan reports that they can place a good steady girl where she can make her board and room by doing a little work nights and mornings. We should like to see a girl who can enter high school work get this place and it is a good chance for a good girl.

We were very sorry to lose from our little town Mr. and Mrs. John D. Thomas, and we congratulate the people of Montoya on their gain.

Mrs. W. H. Fisher who sustained a serious injury last week by a fall is but little better.

Mrs. Boone and Mr. Bentfrow have removed their cattle to the Bentfrow and Crockett well in the Mal Pais.

MRS. GURNEY DEAD

Last Sunday morning at two o'clock, Bessie M. Gurney, beloved wife of Frank W. Gurney of this city passed to the great beyond at her parents home in El Paso after a lingering illness.

The consultation of the four attending doctors had diagnosed the immediate cause of death as pulmonary and enteric tuberculosis. Every effort had been made to cure the disease and prolong the life, but to no avail.

Mrs. Gurney was born in El Paso Texas and later moved to Illinois where she with her parents lived for a number of years and it was here that the dread disease was contracted. Later the family returned to El Paso where they now reside. In April 1908 she was married to Frank W. Gurney of this city and they have lived both here and in El Paso for the past several years. One son was born Frank, who is now four years old.

The funeral services were under the charge of the Order of the Eastern Star from the chapel in El Paso and enternment was had at the El Paso Evergreen cemetery. Several members of the Carrizozo chapter of the Eastern Star went to El Paso to aid in the services.

Mrs. Gurney is survived by her mother and father, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Wilbanks, two sisters, Mrs. G. J. Frick and Miss Lila Wilbanks besides her husband and child.

Mrs. Gurney was loved by all who knew her and the sympathy of this community goes out to the bereaved ones in this, their saddest hour.

WM. R. STERLING DIES

Wm. R. Sterling, a prominent stockman and one of the best citizens of the county passed to the great beyond Thursday, January 14th, at 3:30 o'clock. Tuberculosis and cancer were the immediate cause of his death from which he had suffered much. The deceased passed away surrounded by his family and a number of friends and was conscious up to within a few moments of his death.

Mr. Sterling was a native of Texas and owned a ranch on the Mesa above Nogal where he had resided for many years. He was a very liberal hearted man and where his neighbors or friends were in need he was always ready to extend aid.

The affliction of cancer and tuberculosis were in their extreme form and in spite of every effort to remedy the dread disease it was too much for human control.

Deceased leaves a wife and four children besides an aged and helpless mother. The deceased' many friends throughout the county extend their heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved ones.

Funeral services were held from the home on Tuesday, January 17, interment being in the Nogal cemetery.

METHODIST CHURCH

(J. W. Hendrix, Pastor)

Services both morning and evening.

Theme, 11:00 a. m. "Trail Excuses and an Offended Host."

Theme, 7:15 p. m. "The Church in Quests of new Guests."

There has been increased attendance at services, but there are many whom we see on the streets we do not see at church. The services are open to you and you are welcome.

SYNOPSIS.

Major McDonald, commanding an army post near Fort Dodge, seeks a man to intercept his daughter, Molly, who is headed for the post. An Indian outbreak is threatened. Sergeant "Buck" Hamlin meets the stage in which Molly is traveling. They are attacked by Indians, and Hamlin and Molly escape in the darkness. Hamlin tells Molly he was discharged from the Confederate service in disgrace and at the close of the war enlisted in the regular army. He suspects one Captain LeFevre of being responsible for his disgrace. Troops appear and under escort of Lieut. Gaskins Molly starts to join her father. Hamlin leaves to rejoin his regiment. He returns to Fort Dodge after a summer of fighting Indians, and finds Molly there. Lieutenant Gaskins accuses Hamlin of shooting him. The sergeant is proven innocent. He sees Molly in company with Mrs. Dupont, whom he recognizes as a former sweetheart. Later he overhears Dupont and a soldier hatching up a money-making plot. Molly tells Hamlin her father seems to be in the power of Mrs. Dupont, who claims to be the daughter of McDonald's sister. Molly disappears and Hamlin sets out to trace her. McDonald is ordered to Fort Ripley. Hamlin finds McDonald's murdered body. He takes Watson, a guide, and two desperadoes on a search for the murderer, who had robbed McDonald of $25,000 paymaster's money. He suspects Dupont. Connor, soldier accomplice of Dupont, is found murdered. Hamlin's party is caught in a snow-drift and Hamlin, who had been shot, is almost succumb. Watson is shot as they come in sight of Cimmaron. Hamlin discovers a log cabin hidden under a bluff, occupied by an Indian, who tells who is laying for LeFevre, who cheated him in a cattle deal. His description identifies LeFevre and Dupont as one and the same. Hughes shot Watson mistaking him for one of LeFevre's party. Hamlin and Hughes take up the trail of LeFevre, who is carrying Molly to the Indian camp. Two days out they sight the fugitives. A fight ensues in which Hughes is shot by an Indian, dying, he makes a desperate attempt to shoot LeFevre, but his Hamlin, while the latter is slaying LeFevre, LeFevre escapes, believing Hamlin and Molly dead.

"Yes, I am Molly; please do not move yet. You have been hurt, but it is all right now."
"Hurt!" he lifted his head slightly and stared about; then dropped it again with a sigh of content. "Oh, yes, now I know. Hughes shot me from behind." He struggled upright, in spite of her efforts at restraint, feeling beside him for the rifle. "Dupont was there, behind that dead pony. What became of Dupont?"
She dropped her face in her hands, her form trembling.
"He—he got away. He thought you were dead; to—to make sure he came over and kicked you. Then he took your rifle, and the only pony left, and rode off."
"And left you?"
"Yes—no—he never thought of me; only—only how he should escape with the money. I never moved, never opened my eyes; perhaps he believed me dead also, and—and I prayed he would. I would rather have died than have him touch me again. And—and I thought you were dead too. O God! It was so horrible!"
The man's voice was soft and low, thrilling with the love that refused control.
"I know, dear; I know it all, now," he said tenderly, clasping her hands. "But that is all over and gone." He put up one hand to his wound. "Heavens, how my head aches! But that pain won't last long. I am a bit groggy yet, but will be on my feet pretty soon. You are a brave little girl. Tell me how you got free?"
She went over the short story slowly, not lifting her eyes to his, and he listened in silence, moving his limbs about, confident of the gradual return of strength.
"But how did it happen?" he asked. "Your capture? Your father's death? It is all a mystery to me after I left you on the hotel balcony."
The tears stood in her eyes suddenly uplifted to his, and impulsively the man encircled her with his arm.
"You know I care, dear," he exclaimed recklessly. "You are not afraid to tell me."
"No, no; you have been so kind, so true. I can tell you everything—only it is so hard to confess the truth about my father."
"You suspect he was implicated?" he asked in astonishment. "That he actually had a part in the plot?"
She looked at him gravely, down in his very soul.
"Yes, and—and that hurts more than all the rest."

CHAPTER XXXII.

Words of Love.

Hamlin was silent for a moment, not knowing what to say that would comfort or help. He had never suspected this, and yet he could not refrain altogether from experiencing a feeling of relief. Deeply as he sympathized with her in this trouble, still the man could but be conscious of those barriers formerly existing between them which this discovery had instantly swept away. Now they could meet upon a level, as man and woman. No longer could rank intervene; not even the stain of his own court-martial. Possibly she dreamed of what was passing in his mind, for she suddenly lifted her eyes to his.

"Shall I tell you?"
"No; not now; both your explanation and mine can wait," he replied quickly. "I can stand alone now—see," and he regained his feet, away slightly with dizziness, yet smiling down at her as he held forth a hand. "Now you try it; take hold of me until you test your limbs—that was an ugly fall you got when I shot your pony."

She straightened slowly, her cheeks flushing in the keen air, her eyes striving to smile back in response to his challenge.

"That was nothing," she protested, tramping about. "I only went down into the snow, but my arms were bound, and the pony fell on my foot—it feels quite natural now."

"Good. We shall have to tramp a little way. In which direction did Dupont go?"

"Across the ridge there; see, that is his trail."

"Then he never saw our horses out yonder. That is one piece of good luck, at least. The sooner we get to them the better. I have been guilty of enough foolishness today to be careful hereafter." He looked across at Hughes' body. "I wonder if that fellow meant to hit me? I never trusted him much, but I didn't expect that. Did you see him fire?"

"Yes, but it was so sudden I could not even cry out. He was upon one knee, and his revolver waved like this as he tried to aim. Dupont saw it, and jumped just as he pulled the trigger."

"I thought so. The poor devil got the wrong man."

"Why? Were these two enemies?"
"They had been partners, stealing and running cattle. Dupont had cheated Hughes out of his share, and there was bad blood between them. I ran across the fellow up on the Cimarron, waiting for Dupont to come back to his old range. Did you ever hear Dupont called by any other name?"

She shook her head questioningly.
"No; wasn't that his real name? The woman back there—wasn't she his wife?"

"She was his wife, yes; but their name was not Dupont. That was assumed; the correct one was LeFevre."

"LeFevre? Why—why, wasn't that the name of the man you told me about once?—the officer who brought you those orders?"

"He is the same. I did not know him at Dodge; not until Hughes told me. He had changed greatly in appearance, and I only saw him at night. But it was because I knew that I failed to kill him here; I wanted him alive, so I could compel him to tell the truth."

She gave a little sob, her hands clasped together. The man's voice softened, and he took a step nearer, bending above her.

"And yet now I do not care quite as much as I did."

She looked up quickly into his face, and as swiftly lowered her lashes.

"You mean you have found other evidence?"

"No, but I have found you, dear. You need not try, for I am not going to let you get away. It is not the officer's daughter and the saluted man any more. Those barriers are all gone. I do not mean that I am indifferent to the stain on my name, or any less desirous of wringing the truth from (then LeFevre's) lips; but even the memory of that past can keep me silent no longer. You are alone in the world now, alone and in the shadow of disgrace—you need me."

He stopped, amazed at the boldness of his own words, and, in the silence of that hesitation, Molly lifted her eyes to his face.

"I think I have always needed you," she said simply.

He did not touch her, except to clasp the extended hands. The loneliness of the girl, here, helpless, alone with him in that wilderness of snow, bore in upon his consciousness with a suddenness that robbed him of all sense of triumph. He had spoken passion ately, recklessly, inspired by her nearness, her dependence upon him. He had faith that she cared; her eyes, her manner had told him this, yet even now he could not realize all that was meant by that quiet confession. The iron discipline of years would not relax instantly; in spite of the boldness of his utterance, he was still the soldier, feeling the chasm of rank. Her very confession, so simply spoken, tended to confuse, to mystify him.

"Do you mean," he asked eagerly, "that you love me?"
"What else should I mean?" she said slowly. "It is not new to me. I have known it for a long while."
"That I loved you?"
"Yes," smiling now. "Love is no mystery to a woman. I do not care because you are in the ranks; that is only a temporary condition. I knew you out there, at the very first, as a gentleman. I have never doubted you. Here, in this wilderness, I am not afraid. It is not because my father is dead, or because he has been guilty of a crime, that I say this. I would have said it before, on the balcony there in Dodge, had you asked me. It is not the uniform I love, but the man. Can you understand?"

"Will you marry me—a sergeant of cavalry?"

She was still smiling, her eyes frankly looking into his own.
"I will marry David Hamlin," she answered firmly, "let him be what he may."

The man let out his suppressed breath in a sob of relief, his eyes brightening with triumph.

"Oh, Molly! Molly!" he cried. "I cannot tell you what this all means to me. There is no past now to my life, but all future."

"Am I that to you?"

"That! Yes, and a thousand times more! I had ambition once, opportunity, even wealth. They were swept away by a man's lie, a woman's paddy. Out of that wreck, I crawled into the world again a mere thing. I lived simply because I must live, skulking in obscurity, my only inspiration the hope of an honorable death or an opportunity for vengeance. Mine was the life of the ranks in the desert, associating with the lowest scum, in constant contact with savagery. I could not speak to a decent woman, or be a man among men. There was nothing left me but to brood over wrongs, and plot revenge. I became morose, savage, a mere creature of discipline, food for powder. It was no more when I first met you. But with that meeting the chains snapped, the old ambitions of life returned. You were a mere girl from the East; you did not understand, nor care about the snobbery of army life. No, it was not that—you were above it. You trusted me, treated me as a friend, almost as an equal. I loved you then, when we parted on the trail, but I went back to New Mexico to fight fate. It was such a hopeless dream, yet all summer long I rode with memory tugging at my heart. I grew to hate myself, but could never forget you."

"And You Thought I Did Not Care?"

She drew nearer, her hand upon his arm, her face uplifted.

"And you thought I did not care?"

"How could I dream you did?" almost bitterly. "You were gracious, kind—but you were a major's daughter, as far away from me as the stars. I never heard from you; not even a rumor of your whereabouts came to me across the plains. I supposed you had returned East; had passed out of my life forever. Then that night when we rode into Dodge I saw you again—saw you in the yellow lamp light, watching us pass, heard you ask what troops those were, and I knew instantly all my fighting out there in the desert had been vain—that you were forever the one, one woman."

"I remained for that," she confessed softly, her lashes wet.

"At Dodge?"

"Yes, at Dodge. I knew you would come, must come. Some intuition seemed to tell me that we should meet again. Oh, I was so happy the night you came! No one had told me your troop had been ordered in. It was like a dream come true. When I saw you leading your horse across the parade I could hardly refrain from calling out to you before them all. I did not care what they thought—for my settle had come home from the war. "Sweetheart," the deep voice faltering, "may—may I kiss you?"

"Of course you may."

Their lips met, and she clung to him as his arms held her closely. It was like a dream to him, this sudden, unexpected surrender. Perhaps she read this in his eyes.

"Do not misunderstand me," she urged softly. "I do not come to you because of what has happened, because I am alone and helpless. If you had stepped from the ranks that night at Dodge, I would have answered even as I do now."
"You love me?—love me?" he repeated.

"Yes."

Even as he looked down upon her upturned face, there was borne back upon him a realization of their predicament. His eyes swept over the surrounding desolation, the two dead bodies lying motionless in the snow, the stiffening pony, the drear hillside which shut them in. The sight brought him back to consciousness with a shock. Minutes might mean much now. Dupont had disappeared over that ridge to the right, in the direction of Black Kettle's camp. How far away that might be was altogether guess work, yet what would inevitably occur when the fugitive arrived among his friends, and told his story, could be clearly conceived. Even if the man believed Hamlin killed, he would recall to mind the girl, and would return to assure himself as to her fate. Knowing her helplessness, the practical impossibility of her escape alone, a return expedition might not be hurried yet, beyond doubt, this isolated valley would have Indian visitors within a few hours. And when these discovered the truth they would be hot upon a trail where concealment was impossible. The only hope of escape, and that far from brilliant—as he remembered the long desert ride from the distant cow camp on the Cimarron—lay in immediate departure. Every moment of delay served to increase their peril. Even beyond the danger of Dupont's report to Black Kettle, this snow-bound valley was not so far away from that chief's camp as to be safe from invasion by young warriors in search of game. All this flashed upon Hamlin's consciousness instantly, even as his heart thrilled to her frank avowal.

"This is so strange I can hardly realize the truth," he said gravely. "But, dear one, we must talk elsewhere, and not here. Life was never before worth so much as it is now, and every instant we waste here may mean capture and death. Come, there are two ponies at the mouth of the valley."

He snatched up the blanket from the ground, and wrapped it about her in such manner as to enable her to walk; stooped over Hughes, loosened the revolver from his stiffened fingers, and then came back to where she waited.

"You can walk? It is not far."

"Yes, the numbness is all gone." He was all seriousness now, alert and watchful, the plainsman and the soldier.

"Then come; I'll break 'em all."

"Where is the Indian village?" she asked, her voice trembling slightly.

"Beyond those bluffs; at least Hughes thought so. We saw their pony herd in the valley below, mere dots against the snow."

Ten minutes later, plowing through the intervening drifts, they came forth to the broad vista of the valley and the two patient ponies standing motionless.

Spain's Pigeonhole Cemeteries. A rather curious—and to our ideas somewhat unpleasant—custom obtains in Spanish cemeteries. All around the burying-ground a building is erected whose design can only be compared to that of a nest of pigeon holes, often seen in post offices and similar institutions. Each pigeonhole is a tomb. When a person dies his relatives hire a pigeonhole for five years, and the remains are placed inside. The end is then sealed up with mortar and a memorial tablet affixed on the outside. The lease of the pigeonhole may be renewed at the end of the five years, but if it is allowed to expire the tomb is unsealed and the bones removed to make way for another tenant. Needless to say, the plan has some good points. The space taken by the pigeonhole cemetery is comparatively small, as is the cost of burial. Pictorialness is, however, conspicuously absent; nor is sentimental grief catered to, as it would be impossible to go and mourn at the grave of a person buried in a pigeonhole so high up that a ladder was needed to reach it. To such as prefer the old-fashioned graves the central space of the ground is offered, but the pigeonholes are the most popular.—The Wide World.

Changing Nature Indirectly. You are constantly assured that you cannot change human nature; that you cannot make people ever by process of law. But if you cannot reform men by reforming the conditions that make men what they are, how is it that you can so easily debauch and degrade them by reversing the process?—Collier's Weekly.

MINCEMEAT FOR PIES

NEW ENGLAND RECIPE THAT HAS NEVER BEEN SURPASSED.

Usual Foundation of Meat and Apples, With Other Ingredients, Makes a Delicious Combination—Various Other Kinds.

The time is at hand when provident housewives begin to consider the subject of mincemeats. Laura Leonard, writing to the Brooklyn Eagle, says:

Let us start with the old-fashioned mincemeat made from a foundation of meat and apples. Here is one that comes from New England and has all the kinks of spicery and luxury that have made the New England pies famous the world over:

Old-Fashioned Mincemeat.—Four pounds of well cooked beef, minced fine; one pound of brown sugar, one quart of molasses, four preserved quinces or two glasses of quince jelly or quince honey, three pounds of seeded and chopped raisins, rind (grated yellow part only) and juice of six oranges, one tablespoon each of ground cinnamon and mace, two pounds of finely shredded and chopped suet, two pounds of chopped apples, three pints of boiled cider, one-half pound of chopped citron, two pounds well washed currants, two lemons, rind and juice, and nutmeg, grated, two tablespoons of salt, one teaspoon of cloves. Mix thoroughly and pack in stone or glass jars.

A vegetable mincemeat that is especially seasonable this time of the year is made from a base of green tomatoes. Here is a well tested recipe:

Green Tomato Mincemeat.—One peck of green tomatoes, chopped fine, four pounds of brown sugar.—Boil these three hours. Twenty minutes before removing from the stove add one cup of boiled cider, two tablespoons of cinnamon, one tablespoon each of allspice and cloves, nutmeg to taste and two teaspoons of salt. The raisins may be doubled in quantity, and one cup of wine or brandy may be added if approved. Can while hot.

Carrot mincemeat is made as follows: Wash, scrape, clean and boil eight pounds of carrots until tender, changing the water when half cooked. Rub the carrots through a coarse sieve or chop rather fine or pass through a potato ricer, as may be most convenient. Put upon a pan with three pounds of sugar, one glass of orange marmalade (with very fine cut peel), or the rind and juice of two oranges; the rind and juice of three to five lemons and two cups of cider. Cook rather slowly until thick, then add four pounds of chopped raisins, two tablespoons of cinnamon, one tablespoon each of allspice, cloves, mace and grated nutmeg, one tablespoon salt, one-half teaspoon of ginger, one cup of blanched and chopped almonds; a few drops of almond essence. Can while hot. The almonds may be omitted. Other optional ingredients are one-half cup of melted butter, two tablespoons of molasses, one glass of currant jelly. A little more or less lemon juice may be needed for some tastes. Currants or minced peel might also be added if a richer mincemeat is liked.

Mushroom Patties.

Sift six ounces of flour, rub in three ounces of butter and mix into a paste with the yolk of an egg. Roll out thinly and cut into rounds and put into patty pans. Fill with dried peas, cover with another round of paste, brush over with a beaten egg and bake for twenty minutes. While the tarts are cooking peel one-quarter pound of mushrooms, fry them in butter, then drain and chop up finely, mix with a little cream and season with salt and pepper. Take the tops of the tarts off, fill with the mushroom puree and serve with fried parsley.

Stuffed Peppers.

Cut slices from stem ends, remove seeds and parboil peppers, allowing one-eighth teaspoon soda to one quart of boiling water. To one-half cup cooked rice add one-half cup of highly seasoned tomato puree. Let stand until rice has absorbed tomato; then add one sweetbread cooked and cut in small pieces, and salt and paprika to taste. Fill peppers with mixture, cover with buttered crumbs and bake until crumbs are brown. Place on circular pieces of sautéed bread.

How to "Baste" Fowl.

As it might get too dry while roasting, every little while take up the liquid in the roasting pan with a spoon and pour it over the previously floured skin of the fowl. That keeps the fowl from burning and the flour drops into the pan, making the gravy thicker.

Cleaning China.

Common salt will quickly remove all signs of tea stains from china. Just dampen the spots with water and rub liberally with salt.

A CLASSIC OF THE BORDER

Hundreds of old-timers of the county remember Capt. Dan W. Roberts, who was an early sheriff of this county, and who had a stirring part in the troubled border scenes enacted when Lincoln county included all of eastern New Mexico. Many who are not strictly speaking old-timers know of Capt. Robert's connection with the Texas Rangers, and will be deeply interested in the publication of his memories under the title, "Rangers and Sovereignty," and the character of the man is so high that the narrative may be accepted as a correct chronicle of the frontier when the remarkable Ranger system came to clear the wilds and make the prairie habitable.

The book includes descriptions of many of the most famous Indian fights written with a fidelity to detail that is more fascinating than the most finished art, in which it is not wanting. It describes the relentless war against the Comanches, and following that the struggle to relieve the country of desperate white men, and is full of action from start to finish.

Those desiring copies of this book will be able to purchase same from Rolland Bros., in a short time.

DON'T BE A CROAKER

If you are a kicker and see the shadows of failure in everything that is proposed to help the town, for heaven's sake go into some secluded canyon and kick your own shadow on the clay bank, and give the men who are working to build up the town a chance. One long-faced, hollow-eyed, whining, carping, chronic kicker can do more to keep business and capital from a town than all the droughts, short crops, and winds combined.

Don't loaf on the streets and tell strangers that the town is dead. It is not. The trouble is not that of a dead town, but of dead energies of too many of its people. Show that you are alive by moving lively, wide awake by jumping into it, on the alert by improving your opportunities, and getting there because you are in the lead of the procession.—Ex.

NEW TUBERCULOSIS CURE

A new method of treating tuberculosis is being investigated by the public health service through experiments at Fort Stanton, Lincoln County, New Mexico, and officials of the service say they are inclined to be hopeful of important results.

The method is known as artificial or induced pneumo-thorax. Air is pumped into the patient's pleural cavity to maintain pressure and the results watched by means of X rays in ascertain the extent to which the diseased lung is compressed. The lung, figuratively, is put into an "airsplint," and nature is given a chance to cure.

The reports so far tell only of the progress of the experiments and officials, while optimistic, said it was too early to prophesy. They believe, however, that it may prove effective in any stage of the disease.

WOULD NOT INVEST

Some time ago the Gov., attorney general and secretary of state, acting as a board of finance provided for by the constitution, instructed the state treasurer to invest the surplus school money in the road bonds, which pay four per cent. The treasurer said he was getting better interest, and the security was first class, and refused to make the investment. The board of finance, claiming the right, under the constitution to decide on the investments, asked the supreme court for a mandamus to compel the treasurer to do as it required. The supreme court refused to order the mandamus, and the road bonds are unsold. The road board has got a new scheme, through which they hope to realize on the bonds. They intend offering a certain amount of the bonds to each county, and if the residents of the county buy the amount secured from the county, will be spent on the roads of the county. In this way it is hoped that a large amount of bonds will be sold.

LOOK OUT FOR THE CARS

DO YOU know of anyone who is old enough to read, who has not seen that sign at a railroad crossing?

If everyone has seen it at some time or other, then why doesn't the railroad let the sign rot away? Why does the railroad company continue to keep these signs at every crossing?

Maybe you think, Mr. Merchant, "Most everybody knows my name, I don't have to advertise."

Your store and your goods need more advertising than the railroads need to warn people to "Look Out for the Cars."

Nothing is ever accomplished in the advertising world.

The Department Stores are a very good example—they are constantly advertising—and they are continually doing a good business.

If it pays to run a few ads 'round about Christmas time, it certainly will pay you to run advertisements about all the time.

It's just business, that's all, to ADVERTISE in THIS PAPER

STRAYED or STOLEN:—From a pasture near Oscura, N. M., about the 17th of November, one dark sorrel horse, weight 850 or 900, branded 4 on left thigh, white spot in forehead, and a small hole through left nostril. This horse was raised by Bert Shipp, on the Block Range, and if strayed probably went that way, but I think he was stolen. $5.00 reward will be paid any person furnishing information leading to the recovery of this horse.—W. BIBLE STUDY ON

THE SIN OF COVETOUSNESS.

Joshua 7—Deo. 14.

"Be sure your sin will find you out."—Num. 32:23.

THE Israelites, flushed with victory, proceeded with the conquest of Canaan. Spies were sent to Ai. Returning, these advised that the place was small, and that two or three thousand men would be quite sufficient for its capture. They anticipated that their enemies would be so terror-stricken as to render little or no defense. But the experience at Ai were the reverse. Thirty-six Israelites were slain; and Israel's army, perceiving that they had not the Lord's favor, fled before their enemies.

Joshua and the Elders of Israel were bewildered at this defeat. They prostrated themselves before the Ark of the Covenant, bewailing the trouble, and especially fearful of the influence of the defeat—encouraging their enemies and discouraging Israel.

The Accursed or Devoted Thing. In our Common Version, accursed has been used where devoted would have been preferable. The Lord informed Joshua that the Divine favor was not with Israel because of their unfaithfulness. When Jericho was captured, a portion of the spoils had been appropriated by a soldier. According to the Lord's arrangement all the spoils were devoted in advance, hence this was a breach of their agreement, and Israel's army could have no blessing until the matter was rectified.

That the lesson might be learned by all Israel, the Lord directed that the representatives of all the tribes appear before Him, and lots be cast; that thus would be indicated the tribe to which the guilty one belonged. In like manner the different families of that tribe were tested, and the family found. Step by step the matter came down to Achan, who was indicated as guilty.

The penalty upon Achan was death by stoning, and after the stoning the corpse was burned—the burning indicating symbolically that there is no hope of a future life for any of the willfully wicked during Messiah's Reign. Achan, as a member of Adam's family, must have a share with all the race in the redemption provided by Jesus' death.

As the Sodomites, redeemed by the merit of Jesus' sacrifice, will be awakened from death during the Millennium, and their experiences be more tolerable than those of the people of Chorazin and Bethsaida, so it will surely be with Achan.

Covetousness in Our Day.

Perhaps never has there been so much covetousness as today. How few comparatively would do very differently from what Achan did! If all such were to be stoned to death and burned, the world would be one vast funeral pyre. True, they are not deterred by fear of any such punishment; nevertheless, a large proportion of them profess to believe that for all such sins the penalty is eternal torture. Many who are ready to condemn Joshua's course in stoning Achan are ready to believe that the God of all Grace, the Father of Mercies, would do ten times worse by practically the entire human family.

Alas, how twisted our minds have become! How glad we are that the true light is now shining and chasing away our hobgoblins of false doctrine, handed down from the Dark Ages.

Covetousness in the Consecrated.

The term Christian today has a very wide application, and in general signifies a civilized person. But it really belongs to a comparatively small class—those consecrated to be Jesus' footstep followers. These have entered the antitypical Canaan, and are fighting the good fight. These would recognize all the spoils of warfare as consecrated to God.

It is for these to inquire, Am I withholding any part of what I consecrated to God? If they are so doing, they are in danger, not only of exercising an injurious influence upon others, but also of the fate typically illustrated in Achan's case—the Second Death.

"Covetousness, which is idolatry." The Apostle declares that covetousness is idolatry. It puts first the thing coveted; and when this is contrary to the Divine will, this attitude signifies that the coveted thing is more desired than the Divine favor. Thus we see the world is full of idolatry. The idols most worshiped are wealth and pleasure.

MEXICO'S FALL FROM AFFLUENCE TO POVERTY, FROM ORDER TO ANARCHY

Some of Those Who Have Figured in the Startling History Made by the Southern Republic During the Past Three Years—Land of the Montezumas Stood at Apex of Its Glory on September 16, 1910.

New York.—From affluence to poverty, from peace and order to anarchy and massacre. From one of the great nations of the world to one of the semi-barbarous countries—that has been the history of Mexico in the last three years.

Mexico stood at the apex of her glory on September 16, 1810, the centenary of her independence from Spain. Porfirio Diaz' government was the only Latin-American power, save Brazil, to maintain an embassy as distinguished from a legation at Washington. With a population of 13,000,000 and an area equal to the United States east of the Mississippi (leaving out the New England states and New York), she stood fifth among the gold and first among the silver-producing nations of the world; and her immensely rich agricultural resources were being scientifically developed.

But Mexico's peace and prosperity had fundamental weaknesses. It was dependent on the hand of a monarch, and its funds for development had come from other nations. The United States had invested nearly $1,000,000,000 in Mexico; England, $20,000,000; France, $143,000,000, and other foreign countries $118,000,000. Her own citizens had invested only $800,000,000.

Furthermore, a group of self-seekers had gathered about Porfirio Diaz, the Iron Man, in his old age. They belonged to the "cientificos," and scientifically they extracted their percentages from every project set on foot. The foreign capitalists, naturally, had to transfer this burden of graft to the returns they extracted from their businesses in Mexico, and the money finally came out of the pockets of the common people.

Then there was the land situation. A few hundred proprietors owned practically every acre of the country. While the cost of living increased, as it has in every country of the civilized world, the great land barons evaded their share of the taxes altogether.

This last oppression was especially felt in the northern tier of states, where Americans and other foreigners were particularly numerous, and where the Mexicans could look across the border to the north and see a happier land. There developed a yearning for democratic government in the far north of Mexico, which resulted in the candidacy of Francisco I. Madero, son of an immensely wealthy and influential family, for the presidency in 1910. He drew up a scheme of reform, known as the "Plan of San Luis Potosi." He was beaten in the election—was thrown into jail and probably would have been "shot escaping," according to the pleasant little Mexican custom, had not his family been so influential. As it was, he was allowed to go to the United States, and there straightway organized a revolution. His father and his many brothers supported him. The Waters-Pierce Oil company supplied the sinews of war.

Fearing that American residents in Mexico might be murdered and American investments destroyed in the conflict, President Taft mobilized an entire division at San Antonio in the spring of 1911. A brigade of three regiments was stationed at Galveston, a brigade of infantry in southern California, a squadron of battleships and cruisers at Galveston, and a smaller fleet at San Diego. Mr. Taft notified Diaz that no hostile move was intended; that the soldiers were simply on the spot to maintain order.

In April there was a fight opposite Douglas, Ariz., between federals and rebels, and stray bullets wounded five persons in the American border town. President Taft dispatched a sharp note to Diaz. Partly due to this, Diaz slipped to Vera Cruz and embarked for Europe. Senor Francisco de la Barra, who had been ambassador at Washington, became provisional president until Senor Madero was elected, on October 15, and took office. The kind of suffrage possible in Mexico under the best conditions was shown in the fact that the successful candidate received only 23,000 votes. The defeated candidate, Bernardo Reyes, immediately started a revolt, but was shortly put down.

Then Madero made what many consider his fatal mistake. He refused to follow the cruel methods traditional in Mexico when rebels are caught. He sent Reyes to prison for 16 years instead of following the "law of flight," which would have resulted in a shooting under pretence of justification. He caused no political executions. As a result, disorders were continuous throughout his administration. Everywhere bands of robbers, masquerading as "patriots," looted, burned, blew up trains, massacred and carried off women captives. The barbarous Emiliano Zapata continued to fight in the south under some theory or other. In the north Pascual Orozco, Madero's ally, headed an insurrection and even took Juarez.

Moreover, Madero, the philosopher, the dreamer, the poet, had not been able to create an organization of upright men around him. His relatives led in the plunder of the state and the "holding up" of foreign investors. There was great pressure for intervention by the United States, but president Taft was adamant. The northern revolutionists made little progress after the United States had placed an embargo on arms and ammunition; but the old "cientificos" raised a new standard of revolt under the leader of Felix Diaz, a cousin of the army and nephew of Porfirio Diaz. Madero imprisoned Diaz. But he refused to follow the adage, "When in Rome do as the Romans do." He let Diaz live. He sent him to Vera Cruz a prisoner. Consequently Diaz was soon freed in a farcical raid; his guards firing a single volley into the air. The garrison declared for him. But Madero sent General Blanquet against him, and Diaz was soon a prisoner again. Again he was allowed to live, although the laws of Mexico allow a "traitor" to be put to death.

Madero had put down two revolts of thecientificos. Now came the third and final one. On February 9, 1913, about half the army mutinied, and both Reyes and Diaz were liberated. Reyes was killed in an attack upon the national palace. Then came the battle in the streets of Mexico. There was an artillery fight between the arsenal and the national palace, in which thousands of civilians, including many women and children, fell.

Madero's principal reliance was a hard-bitten old soldier, Gen. Victoriano Huerta. This man had earned a reputation as a fighter and little else. Suddenly he turned traitor to Madero. The political bee had got into his bonnet. Diaz thought he had gone over to the cientifico leader, and so he seemed for a time. Diaz and Huerta imprisoned Madero, his relatives and members of the administration. Then Diaz suddenly—everything happens suddenly in Mexico—discovered the leader was not himself, but Huerta! He acquiesced with some grace. Huerta was proclaimed provisional president under an agreement that Colonel Diaz would run for president in the coming elections. This was on February 18.

Five days later came the disgraceful episode in modern history—the murder of Francisco Madero. With Senora Madero imploring in tears for his life, the kindly-disposed president and his vice-president, Suarez, were shot "trying to escape" as they were being transported across Mexico City in the early morning from the palace to the penitentiary. Huerta was accused of murder in many quarters. Several months later, to anticipate a bit, Dominguez, the lieutenant who had charge of the squad which had killed Madero and Suarez, was himself slain. "Dead men tell no tales."

More crude methods were taken to get rid of some Maderistas. The president's brother, who had been minister of finance, was slain in cold blood in his cell, his nose and ears were cut off, and his body was subjected to other indignities.

This was what led President Wilson to say in his speech at Swarthmore, Pa., "Government stained by blood cannot endure."

The question of recognition of Huerta, now undoubtedly in control of the most important part of Mexico, as the de facto ruler, came up. President Taft, who was about to end his administration, naturally did not seek to establish a policy for Mr. Wilson, having no desire to embarrass him. Just one week after his inauguration, President Wilson issued a statement which made it clear the United States would not recognize government by assassination. On this he has stood ever since.

Huerta had scarcely seated himself on the throne than rebellion broke out again, with Gen. Venustiano Carranza, who had been a close friend of Madero, in the lead. Carranza has made great progress, and in fact now controls more of Mexico than did Madero when Porfirio Diaz abdicated.

The situation since has been growing more and more serious, until many now believe that intervention by the United States is the only means of restoring order in Mexico.

Nelson O'Shaughnessy, charge d'affaires of the American embassy at Mexico City, has been the diplomatic representative of the Wilson administration, following the retirement of Ambassador Wilson, whose actions in Mexico did not please the president.

"JACOBUS STOUTENBURGH." W. H. Lockwood, in charge of the old records of the Title Guarantee & Trust company, said that as early as 1749 the Stoutenburgh family owned a considerable portion of the present Equitable site. A part of their property covered the corner of Nassau street—then called Klipp street or Smith street—and Pine street, which was then known as King street.

The plot measured 75 feet on Nassau street and 35 feet on Pine street, in addition to this, they owned a strip that had a 22-foot frontage on Broadway on the same site. This part was devoted to a garden in which tulips were raised of such fine quality as to obtain much celebrity.

MANY POPULAR FURS

GREAT VARIETY TO CHOOSE FROM THIS SEASON.

Are Used for All Sorts of Bandings for Street Garments—Sketch Shows Excellent Way to Utilize the Material.

Of the furs used for suit and dress trimmings, skunk, fitch, fox, civet cat, Australian opossum, muskrat and raccoon are most modish, and these are seen in wide and narrow bandings on collars, cuffs and hems of street garments. Although there is a decided craze for the new dyed pelts, it hardly seems likely to grow, for aside from the weird and bizarre effects thus obtained the prices of the same are almost prohibitive. Who would ever have dreamed of dyeing a pretty little squirrel or mink-reared green or transforming the stately white fox into a canary yellow or burnt orange reproduction? Yet, these "improvements" on nature are considered very chic and interesting probably because no one ever thought of it before! The dyed yellow fox is the most acceptable of these eccentricities, and some really handsome effects are attained through its use on evening wraps.

The sketch shows a good-looking fur-trimmed street costume of copper-green velvet de laise, made on decidedly simple lines. There is a large muff, with adjustable collar and cuffs of fox or skunk. The blouse has a rounded neck, and a front opening at the left side, fastened below the bust with some flat, dull-green metal buttons. The sleeves are three-quarter length and cut in one with the blouse.

The skirt is long and mounted to the waist with a line of evenly distributed gathers. The hem and slant to the knee are edged with fur, the end of which forms a terminating point for the drape. The front breadth of the skirt must be cut extra long to give sufficient material to this drape.

Heavily padded embroidery in a simple conventional design is coarsely worked across the blouse front and triangular medallion that finishes the sash end. It is done in chrome yellow, and the broad sash is of black satin.

The same gown would be equally handsome developed in one of the ralein shades with full trimmings of Australian opossum. — Washington Star.

NEED NOT BE MUCH EXPENSE

Afternoon Tea Does Not Depend for Success on the Richness of the Refreshments Served.

It does not cost much to have 5 doses or more friends in for a cup of tea. A well-appointed tea table with one girl to pour while the hostess makes herself agreeable to her guests can be made very pleasant.

Be sure the tea is good, the sandwiches novel and delicious, and the table home-made. That is all that need be served, though extra touches, like home-made candy of unusual kind, crisp buttered toast, or salted peanuts are inexpensive additions. If the food is good it will appeal to palates.

Two quarts of tea cream will serve a dozen guests if put in small glasses. This will not be more than one dollar. A delicious home-made cake will cost for material 50 cents or less. For candy one could make sea foam for the cost of two pounds of brown sugar, and four quarts of salted peanuts would be 25 cents more.

Make your money go as far as you can. Get things that have a distinct use, and your guests will be pleased.

NOVEL DESIGN FOR CLOAKS

Peculiar Scheme of Draping Is One of the Most Effective in Many Seasons.

The season excuses the appearance of beautiful cloaks. But they must not be more ponderous than a double layer of mousseline and brocade crepe will make them, in obedience to the charming device fashion now extols, though to give them substance—in other words, to hold the fairy-like material together—a rouleau of fur is a resource.

In form the fur rather resembles a cobra embracing its victim, but the beauty of the peltry and cloudy mousseline in juxtaposition is undeniable. Lovely schemes of coloring can be evolved, such as dried rose and pistachio green, with the green uppermost. The fur should be white fox, skunk or ermine, and if fox is used two or three skins will be mounted and placed in effective positions.

A cloak seen recently—a black mousseline one plucked out with colored jet very beautifully patterned—had one white fox fying over the shoulder and across the back, with the mask on the shoulder and the brush on one hip, while cozily arranged round the throat was a second skin.

NOVELTIES SEEN IN PARIS

Imitation Rose of "Olecloth" Is Popular—Hats of White Taffeta Have Not Lost Their Vogue.

Among the fashionable accessories that Paris is offering in the shops are flowers, or rather roses, made of a cloth that resembles patent leather and is called olecloth. It is soft and shining and flexible enough to twist and turn into well-shaped blossoms.

Each rose has two or three leaves and the ornament is worn with afternoon gowns, and especially with frocks of white taffeta which lap over from the late afternoon hours into theater and restaurant gowns.

White taffeta has not lost its fashion, but it is not combined with black unless one uses a single spot of the somber color, such, for instance, as this black olecloth rose.

Hats are made of the material, with the rose at the side, and they are admirable for motoring and voyages by train and steamer. They fit closely to the head, although none of the hats are as small as they were, for it is considered quite fashionable to show the hair on the bright side.

One sees coat suits trimmed with belts of this new kind of olecloth, although patent leather is really better looking and serves the purpose as well. Natural leather, dressed to be quite soft, is used for turn-over collars and cuffs on suits of khaki colored daretyn.

Another black ornament that is placed on gowns and hats is a huge dragon fly of black tulle with a black velvet body. This is placed on a gown of black or white, and if one follows the new fashion it is put in the middle of the back, at the top of the belt, or at the point of décolletage.

IN COPPER-COLORED CREPE

Most Effective Toilet Primarily Designed for Wear at Afternoon Teas and Receptions.

The blouse, which has a surplice closing, is laid in a fold over the shoulder. The wide box plait thus formed is embroidered in shades of brown and red. The cuffs are embroidered, and so also is the short tunic or basque. The front of the skirt is trimmed in red buttons and silk loops. The neck is filled with collar and waistcoat of soft brown shaggy lace.

Don't Overdo Rhinestones. A little strass is lovely and lightens and illumines a gown wonderfully, but it should be used with discretion. Lace is a safer trimming, especially in the new tunics and pepums; blonde lace, for instance, over white satin, or silver lace with rose motifs—could anything imaginable be more lovely! And one must not forget fur, narrow bands of skunk or chinchilla on tulle, demure bands of beaver on chiffon dresses for the very young and lovely soft feathery bands of marabout adding breezes and crepe and satin.

Two quarts of tea cream will serve a dozen guests if put in small glasses. This will not be more than one dollar. A delicious home-made cake will cost for material 50 cents or less. For

CANNON BALL TELLS STORY

Dug Up in Equitable Building Site, It Was First a Capture From the British in 1775.

New York.—While working forty feet underground near the Broadway and Pine street corner of the excavation for the new Equitable building, a workman dug up an old four-inch cannon ball evidently buried since Revolutionary days.

At the offices of the Thompson-Starr company, who are erecting the Equitable building, it was said that the old records of the time seem to show with considerable clearness not only how the cannon ball came to be there, but also who the probable owners were.

In June of 1775 Col. Marinus Willett captured a quantity of arms and ammunition from the British at Broadway and Beaver streets. This was loaded on carts, taken up Broadway, and dumped in the vacant lot at the northwest corner of Broadway and John street, in which lot Abraham Van Dyk had an open-air bowling alley. It is not known how long they remained there, but it is supposed it was only for a short time and that they later became a part of a collection placed under the care of Jacobus Stoutenburgh in the city hall.

A few months later, in September, 1775, complaints were made that the arms and ammunition were being removed without permission from the city hall, and Jacobus Stoutenburgh was moved to defend his position as custodian in an affidavit made on September 6, 1775, to the common council, which read as follows:

"I, Jacobus Stoutenburgh, do hereby certify that there were 522 muskets belonging to the Corporation of the City of New York and under my care in the City Hall when the account of the Lexington Battle arrived and were taken away from thence by sundry persons, together with their several accoutrements. And I do further certify that 25 muskets more which also belonged to the Corporation and were given to Mr. Isaac Stoutenburgh to clean, etc., were taken away from the same, etc., and at the same time, 6 iron bulet molds were also taken away from the City Hall.

NEWS for the YOUNG PEOPLE

HANDY BOY ABOUT THE HOME

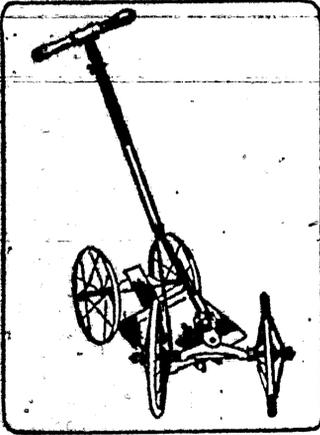

Every Young Man Should Have Box of Tools and Learn to Repair Articles Damaged About House.

I like the handy boy about the house, who knows how to hang a picture, drive a nail, and do the little necessary repairing that any mother wants done. It is easy enough to learn how to use a saw or chisel, and every boy should have a box of tools, so that he can repair articles that may become damaged. The boy who is handy about his mother's house will be of inestimable value to his wife when he shall marry. Boys who do not care to go out at night may learn to make many pretty pieces of furniture, if they will only devote some time to studying how to use tools and paints. With a few lessons, the handy boy may make picture frames, or cabinets, odd cornices, or desks or other articles of usefulness and value. The boy who is handy about the house and a help to his mother is one who learns how to make purchases for the household, who can tell a good piece of meat at the butcher's, or pick out fresh vegetables at the market. Oh, no, do not say that marketing is woman's work. It is quite as much man's work, and besides, none of us can know so much in this world that we can afford to ignore even the details of marketing.—Foster Coates.

on four wheels, two axes of the device being connected by a strong steel band, on which the footboard rests. The construction is such that by lifting the footboard to the right or left the wheels will turn in the same direction, but the toy will not upset. The long handle is adjustable to any height and is used more for support than for guidance. To operate the vehicle a boy stands with one foot on the platform and with the other foot pushes it ahead until sufficient momentum is attained to carry it on. He then gets aboard with both feet and guides it by throwing the weight of his body on one side or the other.

Not This Time.

Johnny was rather apprehensively waiting his father's return from business. He had a curious little feeling that more would be heard about the broken pane of glass in old Grimes' glass house.

"Take off your coat, my son, and come along with me!" said pa after he had rested from dinner.

"You're not going to give me a hiding are you, pa?" inquired young hopeful with a nervous gulp.

"Didn't I tell you this morning that I would settle with you for your bad behavior when I came home?" queried father.

"Yes," said Johnny hopefully, "but I thought you were only joking, like when you told the grocer you would settle with him."—Rehoboth Sunday Herald.

KEEP YOUR EYES OPEN

Little Story of What an Observant Boy Accomplished.

Ingenious Lad Invents Paper Box for His Mother to Take Medicine Without Any Confusion—Idea Soon Became Popular.

A great many boys are always looking forward to the time when they will grow up and be able to do something big, but they overlook the chances they have to do something worth while when they are still boys. Here is a little story of what an observant boy did:

It often happens that people have to take two different kinds of medicine alternately, and endless ways have been tried to remember which comes next. Sometimes they take No. 1 at the odd hours and No. 2 at the even hours, and sometimes they put the spoon in the one to take next, or they place one to be taken in the morning in a different glass from the one to be taken at night.

On ingenious boy who saw his mother always forgetting which of the little bottles of pills to take next noticed that there were two of the bottles in pasteboard box, lying side by side. They each had a number on them, but there was no way to be sure which number his mother had taken last.

Then he had an idea: He pasted a little slip of paper on the cover of the box and wrote his directions on it.

As the little box inside slipped out of the cover it was easy to put the cork of one bottle toward one end and the cork of the other at the other end. After taking a dose from bottle No. 1, she just pushed the cork into the cover first, so that the cork of No. 2 was toward the end with the arrow mark, and she always knew that was the one to take next.

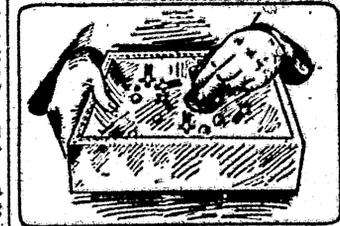

A druggist that saw this simple little trick had labels printed for all his boxes, and it proved so popular with the doctors that used those medicines that they made the boy a present of a bicycle for his invention.

If you keep your eyes open and think about things you never know when you may hit upon some useful thing like this, which others will pay you for. A girl that stooped to fix a broken shoe lace and tried to pull it through the hole with a hairpin invented the surgeons' needle that is used today all over the world for sewing up wounds. Some boys that built a fire upon the sand with seaweed found the secret of making glass.

manner. The only thing necessary is to keep the box and leather cushion clean and dry, which is done best by cleaning the pane of glass before using, with a piece of dry cloth, says Popular Electricity. Static electricity is the secret of the odd movements.

In a Predicament.

The teacher was reading the history of England to some of the little pupils. When she came to the statement that Henry I. never laughed after the death of his son she noticed one of the little girls had raised her hand and seemed very desirous of attracting her attention.

"Please, ma'am," said little Amy, "what did Henry I. do when he was tickled?"—Harper's Bazar.

SUMMER FALLOW AIDS

Profitable for Fall Wheat, Potatoes and Garden.

Soil Should Be Worked Only While Moist, Except in Disking—More Agricultural Science Needed in the Growing of Wheat.

Consider summer fallowing profitable only for fall wheat, potatoes and garden. Wheat must be grown here with 18 inches of rainfall, writes Albert Weaver of St. Francis, Kan., in the Farm and Home. Summer tillage or fallow is the best method to meet this condition. By thorough summer tillage four to six inches of the season's rainfall can be stored in the subsoil. This wets down four to six feet. In favorable seasons, the rainfall being above the average, and the harvest an early one, it is possible to store nearly this amount of water in the subsoil by intensive summer tillage working the soil immediately after removing the grain.

The soil should be worked only while moist, except in disking. If not wet by the latter part of July, better give up attempting to store the subsoil with sufficient moisture for fall seeding. In any case, the field should be a small one so that it may be quickly covered while conditions are right.

I had 20 acres fall wheat under bare summer tillage methods in 1911, that made 11 bushels to the acre. In 1912 I had 65 acres, bare summer tillage, fall wheat that yielded 15 bushels an acre, and another 48 acres summer tilled yield 13 bushels an acre. I do not know of as good yields around here on old ground, either in 1911 or 1912. In 1910 Asa Payne had 180 acres of bare summer tilled fall wheat that made 35 bushels to the acre, and in 1909 J. E. Payne had 160 acres that yielded 37 1/2 bushels an acre. The average yield from these different fields was 24 bushels an acre for the last four years, all on old ground.

Flowing twice is possibly as good as any method for bare summer tillage. I double disk in April, plow in May and again the latter part of July, giving the ground some additional cultivation.

By reason of the subsoil being wet it freezes and loosens it up to take in the spring rains. Besides freezing disintegrates the soil particles.

With a good seedbed stored with moisture at seeding time, 25 to 30 pounds an acre of clean, choice seed is usually enough. Seed wheat should be selected from fields making heavy yields, and ripening early. Some of our Red Turkey wheat seems to have run out and the yields are low even under favorable conditions.

I think deep seeding is best, and should be done between September 15 and October 1. It may be even better to seed earlier than this. Wheat should get well rooted and should fairly cover the ground before winter sets in. Early seeding puts the crop in best condition for growth early in the spring, to get the start of the weeds, and to ripen early. As soon as wheat begins to cover the ground in the spring I think it should be harrowed thoroughly two or more times to kill all weeds and to conserve the moisture. It is best to do this after a shower. I have harrowed wheat the last four years with good results.

There is more agricultural science needed in the growing of wheat than any other crop. I believe wheat growing along the foregoing lines can be made very profitable in our section of the country, and the sooner our farmers adopt similar methods the better off they will be.

Improve by Docking.

Docking lambs improves their general appearance and increases their market value, without retarding their growth to any extent.

Breeding Draft Animals.

The breeding of heavy draft horses is one of the most profitable branches of live stock farming. Few farmers realize the importance of size in a draft horse, when put on the market, either in public or private sale. A horse that weighs less than 1,500 pounds is not considered a draft horse in any of the horse markets of the country, yet the mares kept on the ordinary farms are usually lighter than that. This accounts for the small, scrubby lot of horses that are constantly being put on the market at a loss to the breeder.

Not all progress is confined to the western hemisphere. On the other side of the globe, in New South Wales, they have made a novel departure by starting plowing at night. Tractors are used to draw the big plows and equipped with powerful acetylene headlights.

FREAK SCORES IN THE EAST

Harvard, Winner of First Place in Rating of Eastern Teams, Wins Honor Without Touchdown.

It is regarded as an index to the new order of things in football that Harvard, winner of the first place in the rating of eastern teams this fall, has won this honor without a single touchdown in either of its two most important games. Harvard defeated Yale and Princeton by field goals entirely, notwithstanding that Harvard was a better team than either, according to many observers, in all around football.

The absence of the touchdown play is made still more remarkable by noting that Yale also made no touchdown against Harvard or Princeton and Princeton made none against Yale or Harvard. In this triangle of major teams twenty-seven of the twenty-nine points scored were by goals from the field, the remaining two being due to a freak safety, which is a unique record in the annals of Harvard-Yale-Princeton football.

The period covers one year on the freshmen eleven and two on the varsity, and the total points are divided as follows: Twenty-four touchdowns for 138 points, 5 goals from touchdowns for 5 points and 34 goals from field for 102 points.

In two years as a varsity player he has kicked 24 goals from the field in 12 out of 18 games, and wound up with his high-water mark of 5 against Yale.

TO BE MADE WITHOUT EGGS

They Are Not Necessary Either in Cabbage or Salad Dressing or Surprise Molasses Cake.

Cabbage or Salad Dressing—Melt in a double boiler one generous tablespoonful of butter. Add to it one tablespoonful of flour, one teaspoonful of sugar, one-half teaspoonful of made mustard, three dashes of paprika, one-quarter teaspoonful of salt, white pepper to taste. When these are well blended add slowly, stirring constantly to avoid lumps, one-half pint of boiling water and three drops of Worcestershire sauce. Continue stirring until thick. Cook five minutes; if too thick put in a little more water. Should the dressing be for cold slaw pour it while hot over finely shredded cabbage; if for salads use when cold.

Surprise Molasses Cake—Put into a deep agate pan one-half pint of baking molasses; two generous tablespoonfuls of sweet lard, the grated rind of one orange; one-quarter teaspoonful of salt and one small teaspoonful of baking soda. Put these on the fire for two minutes to melt; remove, heat for two minutes; pour in one gill of boiling water, stir up and add one pint good measure of sifted flour, heat long enough to remove lumps. Grease twelve large muffin pans and put in batter, which will seem thin; bake 20 minutes in a brisk oven; take care that it does not burn.

HOT COLD WEATHER DESSERT

Either Apple Pudding Without Eggs or Steamed Chocolate Pudding Will Be Appreciated.

Apple Pudding Without Eggs: One cup of beef suet chopped quite fine, one cup of sifted flour, one-half teaspoonful of salt. Mix these ingredients with a very little water, making a stiff dough; roll out to one-fourth of an inch in thickness; heap the center with three or four apples sliced very thin, fold the edges of the dough over the apples, tie up the pudding in a cloth which has been wrung out in cold water and then lightly sprinkled with flour; set in a kettle of boiling water, and let boil an hour and a quarter. Serve with cream and sugar.

Steamed Chocolate Pudding: Beat one egg, add gradually one cup of milk, sift into this two cups of flour mixed with three level teaspoonfuls of baking powder and one-fourth teaspoonful of salt; add one tablespoon of melted butter, two squares of melted chocolate and one-half cup of sugar. Turn into a well-buttered melon mold and steam for two and one-half hours. Serve with vanilla sauce.

Baked Fillets of Halibut.

One thin slice of halibut, lemon juice, salt and pepper. Cut the fish carefully away from the central bone. This will give four strips from the slice of fish. Remove the skin, roll each portion of fish into a compact shape and fasten it with a wooden toothpick. Butter a shallow baking dish and lay the fish in it. Season and squeeze lemon juice over each roll. Cover with greased paper and bake 15 minutes. Serve preferably on individual plates, having the fish covered completely with Hollandaise sauce and garnished, with parsley, cut lemon and steaming potatoes.

Timbale of Salmon.

One can of salmon, four eggs, four tablespoons cream, salt and pepper to taste. Remove the salmon from the can and reject all bone and skin. Mash the salmon fine, adding slowly the cream, then add the salt and pepper and the yolk of the eggs well beaten. Beat the whites of the eggs to a stiff froth, then stir them carefully into the mixture. Fill greased custard cups two-thirds full of this mixture and put cups in a pan of hot water and bake 15 minutes. When serving, a pan of peas heated and placed as a border on the dish in which the timbales are served, makes a dainty dish.

A Chef Confides.

That celery roots grated and saturated in vinegar and salt make a delicious and economical relish on cold meats.

Broiled oysters dipped in boiling butter and lemon juice are invariably much improved.

Mushrooms are much improved (to the taste of some palates) by steeping them in olive oil preparatory to cooking them.

Roquefort cheese and lettuce hearts is a course by itself at well regulated dinner parties.

Bacon Pie.

Butter a baking dish and put in a layer of mashed potato, then a layer of thin slices of bacon. Season with pepper and a little onion. Have the last layer of potato, pour in sufficient milk to moisten it. Bake in a hot oven.

Baking Potatoes.

Before baking potatoes always let them stand in hot water for 15 minutes. They require only half the time for baking and are more neatly and palatable.
