TO DRILL FOR ARTESIAN WATER

The Incorporation of the Oscura Development Association has been completed and its purposes will be to generally develop the country around the town of Oscura. The capital is $100,000 of which amount $25,000 has already been subscribed and is available for immediate use. Elias G. Rafferty the well known booster at Oscura is the Manager of the association and the stockholders and officers are prominent Chicago business men.

The first step toward doing big things at Oscura is the dropping of a deep well. The tower of the drilling has already been erected and is in place and stands 75 feet in the air and can be seen for miles away.

The string of tools and drilling outfit are on the ground and all is ready to start except for the boiler which is being shipped from Pennsylvania. The string of tools alone weigh about three tons while the bit which will do the drilling weighs almost a half ton.

It takes a 23 horse power engine to drag the string of tools. This is probably the largest drilling outfit that was ever brought into the valley and is owned by the Association.

It is possible to drill to a depth of 3500 feet with the machine but those who are familiar with the topography of the Oscura vicinity anticipate that oil, gas or artesian water will be encountered at 1500 feet or less. The sulphur water wells at Oscura at a depth of less than 1000 feet give off considerable gas.

The association has applied to purchase 1920 acres of state land in the Mal Pais country near Oscura which land will be planted in trees exclusively and divided into orchards. There are already 12,000 trees in the nursery at Oscura and 40 acres of the fruit trees have been planted. The balance will be transplanted as soon as dynamiting of the holes can be completed and more water obtained.

The whole county will be benefited by the investments at Oscura and the development work means much toward the future progress of the valley.

SHERIFF REMOVED FROM OFFICE

John W. Owens Given 60 days Jail Sentence and $100 Fine for Attempt to Influence Grand Jurors

COUNTY CLERK'S CASE AT A STANDSTILL

Court convened Monday morning, April 6th, following the recess which was taken on Friday the 3d, and took under consideration the removal suit against Sheriff Porfirio Chavez. The case was stubbornly fought throughout and was given to the jury on Friday last, and the verdict of "guilty" was returned after one hour and five minutes deliberation. The court took no further action in the matter until Tuesday morning, when William Barnes was appointed as special officer of the court, pending the temporary appointment of a sheriff by Governor McDonald to succeed Mr. Chavez, which appointment has not been made at this time. There are several candidates for the appointment, and several petitions have been forwarded to the governor, but it is thought by many that either John Cole of San Patricio, or W. J. Doering of this city will be the choice of the Governor. Mr. Chavez expects to remain in business in Carrizozo.

In the case of the removal suit against County Clerk A. H. Harvey which was heard Saturday morning, a motion by the defendant for a change of venue was denied, on the grounds that motion was not supported by the affidavits of the necessary two witnesses. Counsel for the defendant immediately presented a motion to quash the Grand Jury venire, on the grounds that the notice of the drawing of the Grand Jury had not been posted for a sufficient length of time, and motion was sustained by the Court. Another hearing of this case is set down for May second.

John W. Owens of Corona, who was cited to appear in contempt of Court proceedings against him, growing out of alleged attempts to influence members of the March Grand Jury, appeared, and was given a sentence of sixty days in the County Jail and a fine of $100 and costs were assessed.

Several civil cases were disposed of and the Court adjourned to May second.

JAIL DELIVERIES

Jail breakages and deliveries are becoming quite frequent at the local jail. Last Thursday Harry F. Howard, who is serving time for issuing worthless checks, walked out of the open door of the jail and down to the depot, and was waiting there for the departure of the afternoon train to leave town, when caught. He made no serious attempt to escape, merely taking advantage of the opportunity offered by the unlocked door. Sunday morning about 3:00, it was discovered that two of the prisoners had released the locks holding the engaged doors and had gone into the basement and were digging out. When discovered they had already one of the large foundation stones out of place and in a few more moments would have been at liberty.

The ISOLATED CONTINENT

A ROMANCE OF THE FUTURE

By GUIDO VON HORVATH and DEAN HOARD

COPYRIGHT 1913 BY W. G. CHAPMAN IN THE UNITED STATES AND GREAT BRITAIN

SYNOPSIS.

For fifty years the continent of North America had been isolated from the rest of the world by the use of Z-rays, a wonderful invention of Hans Euler, President of the United States. The country had been isolated from foreign invasion and the continent had been ruled under one government with President as monarch. For half a century peace and prosperity reigned in the land. But the Z-rays, which were used to isolate the continent, were discovered by the British. The death of Hans Euler was hastened by the receipt of a message from Count von Wendenstein of Germany that he had succeeded in penetrating the rays. Euler, in turn, warned his daughter Astra that she was a foreign spy. He told her to flee to the island of Glynith, but she before she could tell the location of the place, Astra is nominated for the presidency by the continental party. Hans Euler calls on Astra, informs her that he was a spy for her father, and promises to help her. He gives her a ring made of a newly discovered substance. The ring will solve the problem of flying. Chevalier di Leon appears in Europe. He notes that preparations have been completed for an invasion of America. He calls on von Wendenstein and offers him the secret of making gold. He demands in return absolute disarmament and peace. The chevalier is suspected of being an American. He is seized at night and carried off in an airplane. Astra is captured as president. She receives a message from Hans Euler, whose long silence has worried her, that he has been a prisoner for two months on the island of Glynith and has just escaped. He announces that the continental fleet of Europe has sailed for America. He promises to call on her the following night.

The chevalier suggested a walk in the open air, but the captain shook his head. "I am sorry to disappoint you, my dear chevalier, but your territory ends here." He said this with such kindness that it was plain to the chevalier that he was sorry for the imprisonment.

For two long months the Captain Hans Euler kept faithful company to the chevalier.

There was no chance to escape from this prison; not even a chance to look out at the ocean. The Chevalier di Leon soon realized that he could not escape and knew that all he could do was to wait.

The personal belongings that he had left in the room at the Hotel Metropole were brought to him, and great was his satisfaction when he saw that nothing had been forgotten. Papers from Berlin and England were in the reading room and he was informed of the doings of the world.

On the 5th of February the chancellor strode into the reading room where the chevalier was comfortably reading a novel by the English writer, Sir Rider Haggard, that had been published about 1870.

"What a pleasant surprise, your excellency!" bowed the chevalier with a broad smile.

The chancellor was somewhat taken back; he had expected a different reception.

"You appear contented here?"

"Considering the circumstances, I am."

"I have a few words to say to you, and I will say them plainly."

"The plainer the better, your honor."

"The fact that you are an American is proved beyond a doubt. What are you doing here and how did you come here?"

The answer came as a flash, but calm and sarcastic:

"I am listening to you, your excellency, and as to my coming, I did not come of my own accord; I was carried." A devilish little smile twinkled in the gray eyes of the chevalier.

The chancellor was offended; the young man dared to play with him, the iron handed master.

"Your jokes are out of place; you are a clever man, but I will have to ask my question again. Will you answer it?"

"I refuse!"

Their eyes clashed like the cold steel of two swords.

"Chevalier di Leon, you are not taking your situation seriously. What is your liberty worth to you?"

"It is very valuable, your excellency; however, it has no price, as I know that everything comes to him who waits."

"Then you are not willing to consider any offer I may make?"

"Your honor, as a prisoner, I am not in a position to listen to any offer; the time will come when we will stand face to face again, both free and uninfluenced by circumstances; then I will consider things seriously. My life I don't mean to say that my imprisonment influences me in any way."

The Count von Wendenstein paced the room impatiently. Suddenly he turned to the quietly sitting man.

"Chevalier, I certainly admire your coverage. I must admit my defeat." He offered his hand to the chevalier and turned to leave the room saying: "Until we meet again, chevalier!"

When the chancellor returned to Berlin he called for the Countess Rosly and asked her to attend a private audience as soon as possible. She hurried to the chancellor's private office.

"My dear countess, I requested your presence urgently, as I desire to make you a gift that I am sure you will be glad to accept."

The countess looked questioningly at her dictator.

"You have asked me several times what happened to the Chevalier di Leon, your gallant knight and dancer, and I have found him for you; more than that, I will turn him over to you for safe keeping."

The countess' beautiful face became, for a fleeting moment, sad, then her serenity returned.

"I am counting on your clever work. The chevalier is a man whose mission and means are obscure and I must know more about him. You are the only one in the service who will be able to obtain this information for me."

To show you how much I trust you and your ability, I give you carte blanche—you may do as you please. If you should find it necessary, you may even clope with him. Here is a special order and passport, also an extended account upon all the state banks."

"I see; but what is it that you want to know?"

"Everything, my dear countess; but especially the situation across the Atlantic."

"I think I know what my duties are; and will start for Helgoland tomorrow. When shall I report progress?"

"When your mission is at an end."

The Countess Rosly picked up the documents, looked them over and placed them in her bag.

The punctilious chancellor escorted her to his office door and bade her goodby, wishing her good fortune. When the door closed behind the departing countess the chancellor rubbed his hands with satisfaction. "I am glad she took the commission so calmly. Now, my dear chevalier, if you can withstand those violet eyes you are not an ordinary mortal but a saint."

The countess' beautiful face was set and determined; she had not spoken, but storm was raging in her heart.

Three days later the captain told his prisoner that a new guest was expected; that she was a lady of the court, charged with conspiracy against the government.

The chevalier laughed. "I should not be surprised to find an old acquaintance in the fair conspirator."

The captain's eyes grew round and his honest face expressed surprise.

The following morning Countess Rosly arrived. The apartment adjoining that of the chevalier was given her and the prisoners met in the presence of Captain Euler at the breakfast table.

The greeting that Chevalier di Leon gave was quite a surprise to the countess; he acted courteously, but gave not the least sign that he had ever met her before. When the breakfast was over he retired to the reading room, where the countess followed him, without the captain.

"You don't seem to recognize me, chevalier?"

He glanced around anxiously, and when he saw they were alone he whispered: "I thought it might be dangerous for you, countess, but now that we are alone, I greet you with all my heart."

"What brought you here, chevalier?"

Chevalier di Leon laughed and shrugged his shoulders. "I think it is a caprice of the Count von Wendenstein; he wants to extend all the hospitality he possibly can. Look at those masterfully constructed windows that give you air and light, without permitting you to see even the sky. Is that not the limit of foresight?"

The countess recognized bitter feeling in the chevalier's heart, and casting down her beautiful eyes, she sighed: "From now on you will have a companion in captivity. I do not want to compliment you, but it was quite a pleasant surprise to find you here, chevalier."

"You are more than kind," was all he said.

The days passed more quickly. Many a man would have envied the prison in which the chevalier was living (time seemingly in perfect contentment).

When the month of February was gone he felt a longing for the free air and his thoughts began to concentrate upon an attempt to make a strike for liberty. He examined all the devices that were arranged to prevent escapes from the prison.

The Countess Rosly noticed the change that had come over the chevalier and one evening she began to talk about the moon and stars, saying that spring was at the door. The chevalier listened to the sweet voice of the woman who sat opposite to him quietly.

"Tell me, chevalier, are you of stone? Have you no human feelings whatever?"

"I certainly have, countess; indeed, I am well endowed in that respect."

"Haven't you felt happier since I came to share your solitude?"

He looked at her with those bold, penetrating gray eyes for a long time.

"Countess, I admire you, and you are the pleasantest comrade that I ever had, but I am troubled. The continuous indoor life is beginning to tell on me. I am used to much exercise in the open air, and I have many things that I am worried about."

A few days later Captain Euler told the prisoners that they would be allowed to spend the evenings on the roof of the building.

The countess watched Chevalier di Leon's face very closely when the captain told them this and saw the gleam of real pleasure in his eyes.

That evening they were taken to the roof of the building; to be accurate, to a section of the roof which was surrounded by a high wall, so high that it prevented them from seeing the courtyard beneath, or anything but the stars and the pale face of the full moon.

It was springtime.

"Don't you think this would be an ideal place to send up fireworks?" He looked toward the stars; his eyes wandered over the dark blue firmament restlessly.

"You are playing with fire all the time," remarked the countess, as she moved nearer to the chevalier.

"Have you ever heard of a case where people were married in a prison?" she continued.

"No, I never have."

"Chevalier, will you tell me one thing—frankly, honestly?" Her voice was tender and soft.

"Anything you ask, countess."

"Are you engaged to be married?"

"I am not." The firmness of his voice was enough to assure the countess that he told the truth.

"Are you in love?"

"In love?" he repeated thoughtfully.

Chevalier di Leon Arranged the Different Pieces.

"I don't know; all I know is that I have an image, a saint incarnated in my heart, of whom I think, for whose welfare I am fighting and suffering. If that is love, then I am in love."

The countess sighed, a sob broke from her heaving bosom and she let her shoulder lean heavily against him; she buried her face in his shoulder and the tears trickled down her soft cheeks as she sighed:

"I am so very, very unhappy."

The chevalier bent his head over her and his eyes became dark for a second; then he folded her in his arms and their lips met in a kiss.

The spell was short; the next moment the countess stood up and the chevalier picked her up and placed her on the bench again, as if she were a little child; then he turned and ran down the stairs to his prison.

CHAPTER VIII.

The Fireworks.

Every evening after that, except when it rained, the prisoners went up on the roof. These evenings were the pleasantest part of the days.

During the day the chevalier read the daily papers and magazines with great interest. He found plenty of encouraging news there, especially the preparations of the confederated navy and army. One article, very well written by one of the chief engineers, particularly attracted his attention. That article described the Z ray and its destroyer. The supply station of destruction was Madeira, from which place heavy cables were laid to reach the 34th longitudinal meridian, along which the Z ray ran. The heaviest current of electricity was conducted by this tremendous cable to three specially built boats. The Sampsonian vibrating rays were generated on these boats. Each ray made 3,000,000 vibrations a second and all were directed in a harmonious line toward the Z ray belt. In time the wall of isolation would fall down under the immense force playing against it, and the invasion of America would follow.

After a long study the chevalier placed the magazine on the table and muttered: "The time for action is nearing."

One evening at the dinner table the chevalier asked Captain Euler if he could have some material for pyrotechnical displays in order to lessen the monotony of their existence.

The kind captain furnished everything he asked for. The countess offered her services and they worked almost all afternoon the next day getting the fireworks ready. Di Leon seemed to be an expert; he soon had a large Japanese wheel, several turning stars and also a number of long sky rockets ready.

When evening came they excitedly prepared for the grand fireworks. The sky was clear and the moon had not yet risen. Chevalier di Leon arranged the different pieces, and when the captain came up he fired the first air runner. The long rocket went high up in the air, whirring and whistling, and then, with a puff, broke into thousands of red sparks. Another puff brought white and the third brought blue.

The next was the Japanese sun; this was fastened to the center of the roof. It circled and sparkled for a long time.

The chevalier was deeply interested in his projectiles and, as the countess assisted him, Captain Euler had to play the part of audience. There was a larger audience outside their inclosure, but that was another world.

When all the set pieces were used the chevalier looked up in the sky, seemingly searching for something; at last his hand went into his pocket and, bringing out an object not unlike a Browning pistol, he said: "And now, ladies and gentlemen, I will show you something new in the pyrotechnical art."

LET'S ANXIOUS WORLD WAIT

Arkansas Man, in Point of Meanness, is Declared to be Absolutely in Class by Himself.

"Children, the meanest man in the world lives in Arkansas," writes Tom P. Morgan. "He has a tall and bulging forehead and knows why heads come and torridous detestable, how to stay pure and wholesome on a wage of sixty-six cents a day, what caused the Aurora Borealis, how to prevent things from thumping, what is the plural of measles, how to gag and beggie a mother-in-law in a gentlemanly manner, whether Shackville McKaust is as smart as he is cracked up to be, how to take politics out of a policeman without injuring the fabric, and many, many other things equally important, including why the parents of Hamlet had named him Jay B., when they could just as well have named him for his wife Isaac I. Men and thus have given the wretched world a perpetual treat. And, yet, although this mean man is able to write with perfect ease and the most convincing clarity, he is so wretchedly low-down selfish that he refuses to write any 'open letters' to the newspapers and thus extinguishes forever some of the burning questions that are worrying the life out of the rest of us. Tell me, ch. dres, is he not meaner than the meanest pussley?"—Kansas City Star.

Bad Profecment.

"Say, Tom, lend me another tea, will you?"

"Heaven! Why don't you go to work and earn money?"

"Don't care to, my boy. People would think the governor had snatched me and that would ruin my credit."

BABY HAD PAINFUL ECZEMA

R. F. D. No. 1, Lucerne, Colo.—"About two years ago my baby, who was about four months old at that time, was afflicted with eczema which at first appeared on the back of the neck and kept constantly enlarging. The eczema broke out in a rash at first and it was small and rough and very red. It itched and burned so much that he could not sleep well, continually turning and twisting his head as the eczema was on the back of his neck where he could not get to it to scratch well. But in rubbing so much it became red and almost raw. It seemed very painful as the child fretted constantly. After some time a similar trouble appeared on the cheeks.

"At last a friend advised me to try Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I sent for a sample and this did so much good I bought a cake of Cuticura Soap and the Cuticura Ointment. I used them according to directions and it was only a month until the eczema was apparently well and it soon entirely disappeared and has never returned." (Signed) Mrs. Carrie M. Brown, Mar. 28, 1913.

TO SUIT THE SEASON

BREAKFAST A MATTER WORTHY OF CONSIDERATION.

Much Depends on the First Meal of the Day, and in Cold Weather Especially It is of Supreme Importance.

If breakfast is merely a repast of rolls and coffee, then it is much the same in winter and summer. But if it consists of any other dishes, it should change with the season. The school child's winter breakfast, for instance, should be of a different sort from the breakfast it eats in the summer. If a walk or any other exercise is taken before school begins, the breakfast should be of a rather substantial order. Oatmeal, hominy and rice are good cereals for this breakfast. A baked apple or a raw one or an orange can precede the cereal. Afterward crisp buttered toast and a cup of cocoa, not too rich with cocoa, but made entirely of milk, can be eaten. This breakfast is substantial enough for any child.

For the adult who eats more than rolls and coffee for breakfast, honey or marmalade or jam are often relished instead of fresh fruit for the winter breakfast. One of these sweets, with toast, coffee and a coddled egg, rounds out a satisfactory breakfast.

Butter should be generously indulged in at breakfast time by anyone who is immediately going out into the cold. Bacon, broiled or served with or without eggs, is another good breakfast dish in cold weather. In fact, any digestible fat may be eaten. Bacon served with fish makes an ideal winter breakfast dish.

Fruit Candy.

Fruit candies require no cooking and can be easily and quickly made. It is best to use confectioners' sugar, as this may be more easily molded. The sugar is moistened with various fruit juices to obtain various colors. The sugar should be separated into as many portions as there are colors and moistened with enough of the juice to enable one to mold easily. The mixture should then be formed into little balls and rolled in granulated sugar.

Grape juice makes a delicate lavender-colored candy; orange juice a light yellow; cranberry and currant jelly—more or less diluted—different shades of brown are obtained by mixing cocoa with the sugar before adding moisture. Cream and white of egg make the white candies, and the yolk of egg makes a bright yellow. Any of these flavors may be used as a filling for dates. A layer of chopped nuts and raisins between two layers of candy is good.

Spanish Style Breakfast.

Butter the bottom of a roasting pan just enough to prevent sticking and lay in it a sirloin steak one and one-half inches thick. Put upon this a half can of tomatoes, rubbing the vegetables through a colander, a green pepper from which the seeds have been removed, chopped fine; a medium sized peeled and minced onion, two tablespoons of butter cut into bits, and salt and pepper to taste. Bake for a half hour in a hot oven, basting frequently. Remove the meat to a hot platter and thicken the gravy left in the pan with browned flour. Pour over the steak just before sending to the table.

How to Soften Your Flannels.

In the Woman's Home Companion appears a page entitled "The Exchange"—department of helpful household news contributed by readers. An Illinois woman makes the following suggestion about flannels. "When flannels have become hard and shrunken, they may be restored to their former softness by soaking them in gasoline."

Apple Pie and Cream.

Slice five or six tart apples into a deep pie plate without any under-crust, add two big tablespoons of sugar, a little cinnamon and bits of butter. Cover it with a rich top crust, brush over with milk and bake until apples are soft. In serving, invert each piece and pile with whipped cream, flavored and sweetened.

Waffles With Boiled Cider.

Allow twice as much cider as sugar, and let boil until of a syrup consistency.

Fig Syring.

Chop half a pound of figs or run them through a coarse division of the vegetable chopper. Add three tablespoons of sugar and three tablespoons of boiling water, with a tablespoonful of lemon juice. Cook in a double boiler until thick.

Bags for Vegetables.

Keep several bags made of cheesecloth or muslin so that they will be at hand for holding lettuce, celery or other greens that are to be kept in the refrigerator.

Opposed to Knighthood.

Coke of Norfolk, who eventually went to the lords as Earl of Leicester, was furious when threatened with a knighthood, relates the London Chronicle. After an attack on the prince regent's life in 1817 Coke was chosen to present him with an address from the Norfolk whigs. They congratulated him heartily on his escape, but concluded by beseeching him to "dismiss from his presence and council those advisers who by their conduct had proved themselves alike enemies to the throne and people." On learning the terms of the proposed address, the regent, who knew that Coke valued his position as commoner above everything, declared, "If Coke enters my presence, I shall knight him." When this threat was reported to Coke he replied, "If he dare try to knight me, I swear I'll break his sword."

MOTHER LOOK AT CHILD'S TONGUE

If cross, feverish, constipated, give "California Syrup of Figs"

A laxative today saves a sick child tomorrow. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels, which become clogged up with waste, liver gets sluggish, stomach sour.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, or your child is listless, cross, feverish, breath bad, restless, doesn't eat heartily, full of cold or has sore throat or any other children's ailment, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," then don't worry, because it is perfectly harmless, and in a few hours all this constipation poison, sour bile and fermenting waste will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. A thorough "inside cleansing" is oftentimes all that is necessary. It should be the first treatment given in any sickness. Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask at the store for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Adv.

Easy. "Bjones has an easy life." "Why, I heard him say he had his work cut out for him." "So he has. But he's a sculptor."

No Sympathy.

"Walter," said the man in the hotel dining room, "there's a fly in this ice cream." "Serves him right, sir," replied the waiter. "Let him stay there and freeze to death. He was in the soup yesterday."

THICK, GLOSSY HAIR FREE FROM DANDRUFF

Girls! Beautify Your Hair! Make it Soft, Fluffy and Luxuriant—Try the Moist Cloth.

Try as you will, after an application of Dandérine, you cannot find a single trace of dandruff or falling hair and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you most, will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair, fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—growing all over the scalp.

A little Dandérine immediately doubles the beauty of your hair. No difference how dull, faded, brittle and scraggy, just moisten a cloth with Dandérine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. The effect is immediate and amazing—your hair will be light, fluffy and wavy, and have an appearance of abundance; an incomparable luster, softness and luxuriance, the beauty and shimmer of true hair health.

Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Dandérine from any store and prove that your hair is as pretty and soft as any—that it has been neglected or injured by careless treatment—that's all. Adv.

Narrow Range of Choice.

Sylvia, supple and slender, and Aunt Belle, bulky and benign, had returned from a shopping tour. Each had been trying to buy a ready-made suit.

When they returned home, Sylvia was asked what success each had in her efforts to be fitted. "Well," said Sylvia, "I got along pretty well, but Aunt Belle is getting so fat that about all she can get, ready-made, is an umbrella."—Youth's Companion.

NEWS OF THE COUNTY

ANCHO

Pick Warden went to Corona Tuesday evening on business.

The Western Clay and Gypsum Prod. Co. are working full-time and doing considerable shipping at present. Prospects are good for a good year.

G. F. Graves, the local representative of the Ancho Store is figuring on a trip to California for his health. Never heard of anyone leaving Ancho for health before.

Mr. C. F. Goddard of Carrizozo came in Tuesday from Warden Bros. ranch where he has been erecting a pumping plant at the new well west of the ranch.

Mrs. Hazel Lamb joined her parents Mr. and Mrs. Joe Eve who returned to Ancho some time ago. This completes the family and it is good to have the old acquaintances back again.

The Base Ball Club is figuring on a big dance in the near future to brace up their treasury. They expect to invite everybody to come with a dollar. Those who cannot come will please send the dollar.

Lambing season is about on and the sheep men are making hasty preparations. Cooper and Woods are arranging to ship water from Ancho to Tecolote to handle their herd. Two cars have been received to protect the business.

The Ancho ball team has completed its organization for nineteen hundred and fourteen, are burning up the practice field and are out for blood. Reports say that Carrizozo will be their first victim.

Mrs. Pitts came in today from the ranch east of town to prove that the storm did not eliminate her from the map. She called on several friends who are always glad to see her come and sorry to see her go.

Q Saddler came in on No. eight Tuesday with a view of purchasing cattle. Mr. Saddler was formerly connected with the E. P. & S. W. Ry. in the capacity of special agent. He circulated among the railroad boys of Ancho, renewing old acquaintances.

The snow Saturday evening and night was certainly the right thing in the right place. About six inches of good wet snow which melted Sunday and left the ground in excellent condition and the ranchers are happy.

J. A. Coomes the Amole King is organizing a stock company to exploit the fourteen toilet preparations he has perfected. We do not know whether he is coming across with any more samples, but those we have tried are one hundred percent goods.

WHITE OAKS

Mr. and Mrs. Reasoner are rejoicing over another visit of that water fowl known as the stork, which visited them a few nights ago.

Ralph Treat is suffering from an injured eye caused by a fragment of rock from a drill hitting it before he could wink.

The Woman's Club now have there large room newly calomined and painted making it one of the finest halls for entertainment in the county.

Mr. Sawyer and family are preparing to go to housekeeping in the Sid Parker cottages. Mr. Sawyer has the contract to mine and ship ore from the Yellow Jacket on the east side.

Ben Leslie secured a rather serious injury at the North Homestake mine a few days ago. He was down in one of the lower levels when the ore bucket which was being let down, struck him on the head cutting two serious gashes near the eye, also very painfully injuring his wrist. Dr. Paden was called and stuck him together with numerous stitches and court plaster and put him in a fairway for getting well healed within a short time.

A crook came up to sample the town a short time ago. After giving the business houses a pretty thorough looking over he hit upon the Lee saloon as about the easiest mash, so he hung around until shutting up time, and after every one had gone home he broke in a window and gained an entrance. After turning over about every thing in sight, he succeeded in getting away with about $15.00 in cash and as much wet goods as he could carry and broke for the R. R. Early the next morning Jim Lee and Wayne Van Schoyke went hunting for him in an automobile and he was soon picked up at Carrizozo, brought back and made short work of in Judge Watson's court which piled a bond of $100 on top of him to interview the next grand jury. He is over enjoying merry and congenial company at the county bastille if the report of the last grand jury is to be credited.

JICARILLA

(Too late for last week)

A. H. Hayes is doing some work here for the Deel store.

Miss Rosmond Wilson of the Jack country is visiting this part of the woods.

F. M. Deel of Ancho is putting in part of his time in making improvements around his store.

School began here April 6th with Mr. Edwards of Fort Sumner as teacher.

The election of school director was pulled off here yesterday. John W. Dale was reelected.

PARABLES OF THE KINGDOM.
Luke 13:18-30—March 22.
"Not every one that saith unto Me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the Kingdom of Heaven; but he that doeth the will of My Father which is in Heaven."—Matthew 7:21.

TWO illustrations of the Kingdom occur in this lesson. In one case the Lord likens the Kingdom to a grain of mustard seed, which from a small beginning became a large bush, in whose branches the birds lodged. This evidently was intended to picture the outward appearance of the Church—so prosperous as to invite the birds. Elsewhere Jesus declared that the birds represented the Wicked One and his agents, ever ready to take away the seed of Truth and to work adversely as respects the Gospel program. (Matt. 13:4, 19.) In Revelation also the Great Teacher speaks of the Church as becoming Babylon, confusion, and a cage of every unclean and hateful bird."—Revelation 18:2.

Again the Master illustrated the experience of His Church as an embryonic Kingdom. His second parable tells of a woman who hid some leaven in three measures of meal, until the whole was leavened. This, Bible students are coming to understand, signifies a corrupting of the Divine Message—the spiritual food which God had prepared for the Church.

A woman in symbolic language represents a church system; and the Master tells us that such a church system will mix leaven, ferment, in the food of God's family until the whole mass will be corrupted. For be it noted that in the Bible leaven is always used as a symbol of sin. This parable shows that the faith once delivered to the saints will be mixed with error, until it will no longer be nourishing to the family. St. Paul pictures the same matter, saying that in the latter days "some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of demons."—1 Timothy 4:1.

These false doctrines are what are troubling the people of God today. Our hearts are better than our heads; for the hearts of the consecrated are in tune with the Infinite One, while the creeds of the Dark Ages are quite out of tune. The blessings coming to Bible students result from breaking loose from the creeds formulated in the Dark Ages and getting back to the teachings of Scripture. The Word of God is sufficient, that the man of God may be thoroughly furnished.—2 Tim. 3:16, 17
Some dear Christian people, looking at matters from a wrong angle, are still deceived into thinking that it is possible for the Church, as the Kingdom of God in an embryonic condition, to do the work which God assigns to that church in her future, glorified condition.

The Called Saved.

Some inquired of the Lord, Will there be but few saved? Jesus did not give a direct answer, doubtless for two reasons:

- (1) The Holy Spirit had not yet come, and His followers could not then understand God's Plan thoroughly.
- (2) It was not due time to explain all the particulars of the spiritual salvation of the Church, and then later the restitution of the world to human perfection.

For a certain time the door to the High Calling stands ajar. The possibilities of entering were first presented to the Jews. After finding the "Israelites indeed" God has directed this selection amongst the Gentiles for more than eighteen centuries. Apparently the gathering of the Elect is nearly completed. As soon as the last one shall have passed through the door, it will shut.

CHEAP FARM HOUSE FOR TENANT OR OWNER

FARM TENANT HOUSE.

The department of agriculture has made public the first of a series of plans for farm-houses to be prepared by its specialists with a view to enabling farmers to construct inexpensive and better homes. The basis of the inquiry is the belief that the farm house is the most important building on the farm and money judiciously expended in its planning and construction is well invested. The objects sought in the plans are to provide structures reasonable in cost and of good material, and so arranged as to give the maximum in health, comfort and happiness to the family and added convenience to the housewife in her domestic operations.

The plans made public are for the construction of an inexpensive farm tenant house, although the house as planned contains many valuable suggestions for owners with small families. The provision of proper tenant houses on farms it is believed is of increasing importance to farm management because of the increasing number of rented farms, the growing demand of tenants for modern houses and a better understanding of the influences of the home upon farm labor and field efficiency.

The Tenant House.

The tenant house, plans of which are shown, is a simple, four-corner structure, without bay windows, gables and dormers, or any projection save the cornice, which overhangs and protects the walls and window openings. The house is planned for the most inexpensive arrangement consistent with the needs and the convenience of a small family. It has but one chimney and but one outside entrance.

The Single Door.

The home has but one entrance, which would be insufficient in a town house, and it may be in this one; but another door can be gotten into the plan only by a sacrifice of wall and floor space, which cannot be spared, or by increasing the size and cost of the house, which in connection with this problem cannot be done. If a door is substituted for one of the three windows in the south end of the living room the best part of the room will be ruined. Moving the entrance door to the south side of the porch would not only restrict the uses of the porch, but necessitate an outside door in the kitchen, which, in turn, would necessitate a corresponding increase in the floor and wall space of the kitchen. If the door that opens from living room to porch were moved farther from the fireplace valuable floor and wall space in both room and porch would be sacrificed.

Very few residences of any size or cost have a kitchen more pleasantly located, better lighted and ventilated, and more conveniently arranged than this little four-room house. It is brightened by the morning sun, cooled by the southern breeze and shielded from the intense heat of summer afternoons. It commands a view of the Place for Hens to Scratch.

There are a number of different materials which furnish an excellent place for the hens to scratch in, says a writer in the Poultry Journal. Leaves are probably the stuff most used by the small poultrymen. These are good if gathered when perfectly dry. They must be put into the pens every few days, because the poultry will break them into dust by their continual scratching. I find oat straw about as cheap in the long run, because it lasts quite a while and furnishes some feed if fed before threshing.

Horses With Brittle Feet.

Many horses have very brittle feet, the hoof of which cracks and splits when being shod. A very useful hoof-dressing for these cases is composed of waste-foot oil, to which a small quantity of paraffin and lampblack has been added. Lined and the various other drying vegetable oils are unsuitable for the horse's foot. Stockholm tar answers well, and is very suitable for dressing the frog and sole of the foot, as it is antiseptic and curative in mild cases of thrush.

garden, the play grounds, the barns, the lawn, the gate and the highway. It opens on to a screened porch which, in summer, is the most livable nook in the house. Much of the kitchen work may be done there away from the fumes and the heat of the stove, which, happily for the other rooms of the house, blow out through the north and east windows.

Location of Stove and Ash Bin.

The stove is well lighted and, with the porch window closed, it is out of the cross-drafts of air. It is within six feet of the most distant fixture in the kitchen and but little farther from the dining table. All stove utensils are within reach and the work table and the fuel in the box beneath it are but two steps away. The ashes drop from the fire box of the stove, through a short pipe, to the ash bin beneath the concrete floor.

The fuel box, supporting the table top, occupies space which might otherwise be wasted. It is filled from the outside of the house and emptied from the inside through a small door over the concrete floor.

A trap or dump, like that in the fireplace, is provided for floor sweepings and possible dust from the door of the coal or wood box. It is in the concrete floor, behind the kitchen door, near the fuel box opening and over the ash bin.

The carrying of fuel and ashes is thus eliminated from the woman's work, provided the man or boy fills the coal or wood box each week, or as may be necessary, and empties the ash bin two or three times a year.

The water problem also has been carefully considered in this little plan. Clear water may be drawn from the bucket pump on the porch, or if desired, from a pitcher pump at the sink. Hot water is heated and stored in the reservoir of the stove. The sink, with only the drain pipe to be provided, is too inexpensive to omit from any kitchen, and space enough has been saved in this one to more than pay for all such conveniences.

The Porch.

The screened porch is as large as the plan will permit, but too small for all the purposes for which it will be in demand. Besides the usual kitchen work, the ironing and perhaps the clothes washing will be done there.

The Living Room.

The living room is large enough for the longest dining table that harvest days will ever require and, with its two routes to the kitchen, it is unusually convenient for feeding a large number of workmen. With triple windows on the south and two on the north, a screened bedroom on the west, it is as pleasant a dining and sitting room as a $5,000 house can afford, and, with a glowing fire in the hearth, it may be as comfortable and as cheerful in winter as a steam-heated mansion.

Don't Burn the Straw.

A ton of wheat straw contains approximately 230 pounds of nitrogen, 30 pounds of phosphoric acid, and 240 pounds of potash; a ton of oats straw has about 240 pounds of nitrogen, 30 pounds of phosphoric acid and 280 pounds of potash. In addition to the decrease of plant food elements, the soil also suffers, when this material is burned, by the loss of the humus, which is badly needed on wheat fields.

Oats as Dairy Ration.

Oats have been used, when ground, as part of the dairy ration but are too high in price to be fed economically. It will be found cheaper to use wheat bran instead and with the bran may be mixed some corn meal. Corn, at present prices, is a much cheaper milk maker than oats if fed in connection with bran or alfalfa hay.

Necessary for Hens.

Green feed for laying hens is a necessity, and hens kept in confinement must have it in some form. The poultryman that has access to a field of alfalfa is in luck.

GATHERED SMILES

PEACEFUL HOME.

An enthusiastic young minister who followed one of the old type in a sleepy country village was thumping the rostrum a good deal, and disturbed a spider which had found peaceful refuge in one of the crannies for many a day. Wandering up the aisle homeless, it was met by another spider, and the tale of woe was imparted. "I can't stand this new minister thumping and jumping about. I have lived in the pulpit for many years, but can't stay there any longer." Said the second spider, actuated by a fine spirit of charity: "Come along with me. I haven't been disturbed for fifty years. My home's in the collection box at the door."—London Sphere.

As He Got It.

A newly married lady was being interviewed by the reporter of the local paper just after the ceremony. "And after the honeymoon where do you intend to settle down?" was his final question. "At the old manse," said the bride, as she hurried away. The reporter thought it sounded a bit familiar, but he decided to use it, so when it appeared in print the report finished up: "After the honeymoon the happy couple intend to live at the old manse."

SHINING EXAMPLE.

Cook—Of course she can. I knew a girl at a mountain resort who kept her engagement a secret for two seasons, and then married another man.

Descriptive.

"The last man that came by askin' for work," said the farmer, "was one o' them writin'-chaps."
"Did he say he was?"
"He didn't need to; I knowed it without tellin', fer he looked as lonesome as a sheddin' owl settin' on a graveyard gate post, an' as hungry as a possum up a 'simmon tree that had jest ben hit by lightning!"

She Was Particular.

"Are you sure this is a good cantaloupe?"
"Reasonably so, madam."
"Is it sweet and ripe, of good flavor, with not too many seeds?"
"I think it's all that."
"Hasn't been picked too long, has it? How about the rind?"
The grocer finally got her 15 cents. "I'd hate to try to sell that woman an automobile," said he to the clerk, wearily.

OUT OF SIGHT, OUT OF MIND.

Wheat—I wonder why the giraffe never has his shoes shined?
Elmer—I asked him about that and he said he was so far away from his feet that he hadn't seen 'em since he was a little feller.

GOOD WORD.

Mr. Smithon—Well, I guess it's about time to retaliate.

Father—Embarrassing.

Myrtle—I was never so embarrassed in all my life.
Mabel—What happened?
Myrtle—Last night Tom begged me for two hours for a lock of my hair—one that dangled cutely over my right ear.
Mabel—Silly. Why didn't you give it to him?
Myrtle—And ruin my new $9 switch? I guess not.

THE FIRST GAME WARDEN of the U.S.A.

and pleasure, not for the market. Its benefit to our people is the inducement offered for open-air exercise. Such healthful recreation is worth much to the morals and general welfare of our people and its value cannot be measured in dollars and cents. State protection of our migratory birds, even under the most favorable conditions has not generally proved a success.

All true sportsmen who have any thought for the future will agree that spring shooting of wild fowl should cease. When the question, however, has been put up to the legislature in some states, the invariable answer is: "The birds with us are merely temporary sojourners. Our neighbor states permit such shooting; why deprive ourselves of the privilege?" And the neighbor states reply substantially the same.

As to administration, the old idea of having sheriffs and constables enforce the game laws has in all advanced communities been abandoned. Elective officers make inefficient game wardens. They may vigorously prosecute non-residents, but those upon whose votes they depend for re-election often violate the law with impunity and yet go "scot free." Hence the warden system has come into general vogue, and even this is often subject to the criticism of favoritism toward neighbors and friends.

Nothing is more fatal to law enforcement than to destroy respect for the law, and favoritism is in this respect a potent factor.

A paid warden service is essential in order that the wardens may be sent into sections other than those of their immediate residence. Ample funds can be raised for such purpose by the resident shooters' license of one dollar made mandatory upon all who shoot upon the lands of another.

Shooters generally pay this fee cheerfully, but it is both discouraging and unfair to have part of the large sums thus raised for game protection turned into the state treasury and diverted to public roads or schools.

There is something in the Anglo-Saxon blood that inspires the love of field sports. It is not the mere desire to kill that animates the true sportsman. Killing, however, is a necessary incident to the success of all shooting trips. I do not mean indiscriminate killing—a wanton slaughter of game that falls to the province of the "game hog" and market hunter—but killing game within reasonable limits and for a proper purpose.

The birds of the air and the game of the woods are all for man's use. It is a maudlin sentimentality that declares that wild animals and birds should not be killed. As well apply such a sentiment to the barnyard. It is only where killing is likely to exterminate a species that it should be prohibited. Of course I speak of animals and birds that are classed as "game." Song and certain insectivorous birds should at all times be protected.

The federal migratory bird law is our bridge to the promised land of real game protection, but successful passage of that bridge will depend upon careful footsteps.

It is axiomatic that a law not supported by public sentiment is a dead letter. If the federal migratory bird law is to prove the salvation of the game of the country, and I believe it will, we must insure its popularity.

This law will be applauded or condemned, according to how it is administered. It can be made so obnoxious to the state authorities and the people as to insure its repeal. Then, indeed, would our second condition be worse than our first. Let us bear in mind that this is a new movement, a great departure in game protection; that many are jealous of what they term "state rights" and bitterly resent interference by the federal government with what they deem local affairs.

It is difficult for some men to realize how others can hold an opinion different from theirs. It seems so patent and so plain to the game-protection enthusiast that he is right.

States are jealous of their reserved rights, particularly in the South, and in a measure as far-reaching as this law public sentiment should be cultivated, not offended, for even an act of charity can be made offensive by the manner of its exercise. That the law meets the long-felt want of uniformity in the protection of our migratory birds must be admitted by all who have given the subject serious thought.

This is an age of progress, of new thought and advanced ideas. The federal migratory bird law is the most progressive measure in game protection ever enacted in this country.

Government protection is effective and strong, and men who would openly defy a local game warden will think twice before they oppose the authority vested in a federal official.

The game commissioner should work in conjunction with the biological survey, and his duties should be to visit the different states, there consult with the respective wardens and commissioners having charge of the enforcement of the state laws; study carefully local conditions, and select, under the direction of the secretary of agriculture, efficient men who will be called upon to enforce the law. For such a purpose the present appropriation will suffice.

"But what of the future?" is the natural query. Well, to meet the expenses of an organization thus formed we should have a federal shooting license of one dollar, payable by all those who shoot migratory birds. Such a license will, in my opinion, be not only popular, but provide ample revenue, and will, in time, cause many states to abandon their non-resident shooters' license, particularly when 50 per cent. of the amount collected is to be returned to the states in proportion to their respective contributions, conditioned, however, that it shall be used exclusively for game protection.

Making an estimate on the amounts collected from resident shooters in a number of the states, I think it conservative to state that this fund would amount to little short of a million dollars per annum. With half of this amount at its disposal, the department of agriculture need not call upon congress for any appropriation for game protection.

With such a sum, a system of protection could soon be perfected that would insure our migratory birds from wanton slaughter in all the years to come. With rare exception, every sportsman of the country would advocate this tax and urge his representatives in congress to enact the law.

I have been interested in the preservation of birds and beasts for many years. I have been game warden of Tennessee several times, and this position has afforded me a good opportunity to discover the needs for the proper protection of our game.

I believe, with the aid of congress, the office of United States game warden will be able to perform a great service to the country.

Hoarseness

By Ticket Only. Mrs. Lovelace had a new maid, not long over from Scandinavia. She was not quick to learn, but what she did learn fixed itself solidly in her blonde head. In particular she was taught to take the visiting cards of Mrs. Lovelace's not infrequent callers.

One day appeared a certain Mrs. Furbelow, a crouny and familiar of Mrs. Lovelace, and one not accustomed to the formality of cards in that house. The new maid refused to let her in. She blocked the door with her substantial bulk and spoke firmly. "You must give up your ticket first," she said.—New York Evening Post.

Kids and Goats. A newspaper man of Chicago is fond of greeting his children at night with the salutation: "Hello, kids." For some time past the girl, half past five has felt that this was too informal to comport with her dignity. "Daddy," she said, a few nights ago, "weren't not kids. Kids are young goats."

The father passed this off without comment. Next evening he made his usual greeting. The young lady had worked out the deduction by that time. "Daddy," she said, "if we're kids, you must be a goat. Are you?" He agreed that he was.

LIFE'S ROAD

Smoothed by Change of Food.

Worry is a big load to carry and an unnecessary one. When accompanied by indigestion it certainly is cause for the blues.

But the whole trouble may be easily thrown off and life's road be made easy and comfortable by proper eating and the cultivation of good cheer. Read what a Troy woman says:

"Two years ago I made the acquaintance of Grape-Nuts and have used the food once a day and sometimes twice, ever since."

"At the time I began to use it life was a burden. I was for years afflicted with bilious sick headache, caused by indigestion, and nothing seemed to relieve me."

"The trouble became so severe I had to leave my work for days at a time."

"My nerves were in such a state I could not sleep and the doctor said I was on the verge of nervous prostration. I saw an adv. concerning Grape-Nuts and bought a package for trial."

"What Grape-Nuts has done for me is certainly marvelous. I can now sleep like a child, am entirely free from the old trouble and have not had a headache in over a year. I feel like a new person. I have recommended it to others. One man I knew ate principally Grape-Nuts while working on the ice all winter, and said he never felt better in his life."

THE TOTAL STATE DEBTS.

Preliminary Census Figures Show Increase of Fifty Per Cent in Decade. Washington.—Preliminary figures made public by the director of the census, W. J. Harris, show that the total indebtedness of the forty-eight states of the union, less sinking fund assets, on June 30, 1913, was $842,215,000, an increase of $107,842,000, or nearly 50 per cent over the total ten years ago.

Including sinking fund assets, the total debt amounted to $119,137,000, of which sum about $19,000,000 represented the floating debt.

The total debt of Massachusetts, the report said, represented 23.2 per cent of the debt of all states in the United States. Iowa, Wyoming and Oregon each had less than one-tenth of 1 per cent of the debt of all the states, while Pennsylvania's sinking fund assets, exceeded the total debt. New York had 25 per cent of the total for the thirty-eight states.
