DOGS OF WAR UNITED

European Nations to Pay the Price of Glory With Blood of Million Sons

AUSTRIA'S PRIDE IS WOUNDED

Entente and Triple Alliance Drawn into Vortex of Continent-Wide Conflict

One of the great paintings of the age, by Pierre Fritel, is entitled "The Price of Glory." It is particularly pertinent just now. It counsels thought, as does eternity; it enforces a tremendous lesson.

In the center are the great conquerors of the world. The light is on their burnished spears and helmets. There great Julius dreams of the Roman eagle's flight beyond the Rhine; there Alexander sighs for newer worlds to conquer; there rides the great Hannibal; there the Napoleon of Austerlitz and lastly sits his steed, unawed by St. Helena, there, too, are the great Attila, Charlemagne, Tamerlane—all are there; erect, triumphant, radiating the glory of a hundred fights, of many kingdoms lost and won—the darlings of the history of yesterday.

But look to the left and right! Along the way on which the conquerors ride they lie—the dead—uncounted millions who paid the price of glory. Naked, tragic, pitiful, silent in the sun, seeing neither the light that flashes from the pointed spears nor hearing the triumphal thrills of victory—death lines the pathway of the conquerors. At first the splendid cavalcade catches the eye, but when the vast significance of that plain of silent forms dawns on the mind, the conquerors lose their splendor. The light fades from their spears and shining arms, glory flees with folded wing, and everywhere are only the dead and dying.

As it has been in the past, so it will be in the future. The price of glory—of conquest—is today as great, as tragic, as it was in Alexander's day. The path of triumph through war is still strewn with the mutilated wrecks of humanity. Whatever the issue of the struggle, uncounted lives must pay the price. There is no other price that can be paid. Inexorable as fate, glory will have no other.

As we stand today upon the seething verge of a continent-wide European conflict, it seems incredible that the Europe of the twentieth century can be brought to pay the awful price of glory. Europe knows the price. Not a valley of the Tyrol, not a plain of Russia, not a vineyard of France, not a district of Germany or Italy or Spain that has not paid the price in other times.

Beside the thought of price that must be paid in such a conflict, the national differences and jealousies that split the European states seem trivial. Austria's satisfaction of her wounded pride, Russia's jealousy of prestige in the Balkans, the ancient enmity of Germany and France—what are all these that the fair fields of the world should be drenched with blood, and every cottage hold a widow, an orphan or a childless mother?

But the terrible catastrophe has enveloped the European continent—the mailed hand has leaped into the open. And there is nothing psychological in this newest and most appalling conflict. It is now a stern reality.

But this country of ours—this land of the free and home of the brave—is safe, and it will be, without a doubt, throughout the bloody days which seem so inevitable for our European neighbors.

But—don't rock the boat!

That's the watchword today and the duty of every American at this time. Business conditions are good, we have a great grain crop, the value of which has already advanced, our banks are solid; war demands supplies, and while other destroy we will produce; while other nations are armed camps we will be a farm, a factory, a forge. Trade extensions is predicted in every direction and our immediate future is plain. Nationally, the sum of $500,000,000 is available for an emergency: the reserve board will soon be completed, enabling us to deal effectively with the outflow of gold; plans are perfecting to permit American registry for foreign vessels. We will maintain a strict neutrality. Stock exchanges have closed with precaution. We cannot be a dumping ground for the securities war mad Europe is anxious to convert into cash. But the closing is only temporary—stable conditions prevail here now. All we have to do is to keep them so. So, we will be good, we will not become alarmed, we will sit tight, we will not rock the strong, well seamed, well caulked, well timbered boat that we are in.

MRS. WILSON DEAD

Mrs. Wilson, wife of President Woodrow Wilson, died at the executive home in Washington last Thursday afternoon. The sympathy of a nation is with the president in this sad hour.

PAUL MAYER A BENEDICT

Mr. Paul Mayer of White Oaks, whom everybody knows, was very quietly married to Miss Ula Gilmore at the home of the bride's parents in Ruidoso, last Wednesday. The congratulations of the Outlook are most cordially extended to Mr. and Mrs. Paul Mayer.

GLENVILLE KISER LAPOINT

After recovering from the effects of Editor LaPoint's paunyerie, or whatever it was, on "El Negro Baca," and his "fair and blooming fame," and falling for "his smiling face is at once a joy and an inspiration," and regretting that anything could be "as perilous as the wig wag of a red flannel petticoat before the blood-shot eyes of a maddened bull," we have almost persuaded ourselves that Willie, of the Citizen, has just completed the first lesson in Glenville Kiser's Course in the King's English. Golly, Willie is some student!

ROAD PLANS PERFECTED

J. B. French Presides Over Enthusiastic Highway Meeting Monday Evening

PARTY VISITS MOUNTAINAIR

Drive to New Mexico Chautauqua in Motor Cars and Have a Jolly Trip

A party of our people motored over to Mountainair last Sunday for the purpose of attending the assembly and, incidentally, viewing the remains of the Gran Quiviera. Those in the party were: Clarence Spence and family; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Spence, Miss Grace Spence and Mr. Lahan. Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Gumm, Mr. and Mrs. John A. Haley; Mr. and Mrs. J. B. French, Miss French, Miss Lorena Sager. The party returned Tuesday evening and report a delightful trip. On Monday evening Mr. French, the chairman, presided over a most enthusiastic meeting of La Gran Quiviera Highway association in the tabernacle at the chautauqua, when the plans of the association, which was organized here last June were perfected. These plans for inter-county development of a scenic, historic highway to extend from Santa Fe to El Paso and Roswell were heartily approved by representatives from the counties of Lincoln, Socorro, Valencia, Tyrance and endorsed by letters from the El Paso Automobile club and road boosters from Santa Fe. This trans-state highway is to pass directly to the ruins of the Gran Quiviera, and near to the prehistoric settlements of Pueblo Pardo, Blanco, Montezuma, Abo and Chiliti. The Lincoln highway board has hired a tractor and a two ton Dillon drag to put the Lincoln county division of the road in order. The roads are all to be posted with painted white posts, placed at the road angles and at the side of forks pointing the direction and bearing mileage.

DEATH OF A. K. EAKERS

Amos K. Eakers, a gentleman well known to the people of this section of the state, died at his home in this city last Monday. Mr. Eakers was a good citizen and a good neighbor and his loss to the community will be felt by all. The deceased was about 70 years of age at the time of his death. To the grief stricken widow and the surviving children, the Outlook extends sincerest sympathy.

AGED APPLE TREES

Wallace Gumm visited the Ancient Orchard in the Manzana country the first of the week and picked a few apples off trees said to be 400 years old. They are not such fruit as would excite the stock exchanges in times of peace or war, but they are apples, and the trees are still well preserved.

Robert Swan, of Lincoln County, who recently completed a term in the State penitentiary after conviction on a charge of larceny, has been restored to citizenship by the governor.

BIG K. OF P. SANATORIUM

That New Mexico has a splendid chance of landing the great tuberculosis sanatorium to be erected by the Knights of Pythias is the belief at Santa Fe, following receipt of a letter stating that Corporation Commissioner Hugh H. Williams had a conference with Brig S. Young in St. Paul on their way to Winnipeg where the supreme lodge's session opened last Wednesday.

The republicans of Lincoln county met in convention at Capitan last Saturday, pursuant to call, for the purpose of selecting eight delegates to represent this county at the state convention to be held at Santa Fe on the 24th instant and to name a candidate to represent the people of the sixteenth representative district in the lower house of the state legislature, vice the Hon. James V. Tulley, whose term of office will expire upon the convening of the second state legislature next January.

On several occasions Mr. Williams has declared forcefully that he is working to land the sanatorium for New Mexico, first last and all the time, and that he has given no thought as to which city is to have it. Mr. Williams and W. D. Bowers, of Albuquerque, are in Winnipeg working for New Mexico. Mr. Bowers is a prominent K. of P. from the middle west and came to New Mexico for his health. He was cured by this climate and is a living witness of what pure air and sunshine will accomplish to fight the white plague.

Judge George Kimbrell of Pecos was in town today.

E. W. Hulbert leaves tomorrow morning on a business trip to Yuma, Ariz. Mr. Hulbert declares he won't stay long. And we guess he won't.

P. C. Baird of Mason, Texas, arrived in town Thursday on a visit to his son, John, and family. Mr. Baird was for several years a resident of this section and he has many acquaintances and friends here who are glad to see him again.

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Bell entertained a jolly party of visitors the past week, including Mr. and Mrs. Homer Rettig of Indianapolis, Ind., Mr. and Mrs. Tom Bell of Debuque, Iowa and C. H. Sterns, wife and three daughters of Santa Rosa, N. M., who are taking a two weeks' outing in their Ford.

James W. Ruane, manager of the Charles Hfeld company's holdings at Santa Rosa, was in town today.

Mr. Ruane is the state agent for the "Corona" lightweight typewriter, and was incidentally looking up prospects for one of the best little writing machines on the market. It is portable and costs only $50 in a carrying case; and it will do anything anybody wants in a typewriter.

The Home creamery, one of Roswell's flourishing industries, has been sold to the Wichita Creamery company; and the local plant will be closed. E. S. Metzler, proprietor of the creamery, stated he will now devote his time and attention to his avocational business. A creamery now being operated at the Berrendo farms is expected to buy the supply of cream from the valley farmers, which formerly was purchased by the Home creamery.

HIGHTOWER IS NAMED

Republicans Select Him as Their Representative From the County of Lincoln

ROBUST RESOLUTIONS ADOPTED

Alfredo Gonzales New Chairman of Central Committee; O. T. Nye the Secretary

The republicans of Lincoln county met in convention at Capitan last Saturday, pursuant to call, for the purpose of selecting eight delegates to represent this county at the state convention to be held at Santa Fe on the 24th instant and to name a candidate to represent the people of the sixteenth representative district in the lower house of the state legislature, vice the Hon. James V. Tulley, whose term of office will expire upon the convening of the second state legislature next January.

In the absence of W. S. Brady, the county chairman, the convention was called to order by Hon. W. E. Blanchard, a member of the republican state central committee. After the reading of the official call, the delegates chose Dr. T. W. Watson as the temporary chairman and O. T. Nye temporary secretary, while Clement Hightower acted as interpreter. The various committees were appointed by the chair and promptly discharged the several duties devolving upon them.

The resolutions adopted reaffirmed allegiance to the principles of the republican party, endorsing those principles as promulgated by the Chicago platform in 1912; they commended the stand taken by the republicans in the national congress deploring the grape juice policy of the administration in the Mexican trouble and denounced and condemned its submission to the dictates of foreign nations in the Panama canal tolls. The work of our state representatives, J. V. Tully and W. E. Blanchard, was endorsed; and it was the sense of the convention that "the republicans of Lincoln county unite, and with renewed vigor, work for the election of the member to the Sixty-fourth congress who is fearless enough to take his stand for those measures that will benefit the great state of New Mexico."

On the vote for representative from this county, Clement Hightower, now of Hondo, was elected on the first ballot. He really had no opposition, although the friends of E. W. Hulbert presented his name to the convention and he was given a substantial complimentary vote.

The delegates selected to represent Lincoln county in the republican state convention are: R. A. Duran, Clement Hightower, Leopoldo Pacheco, W. E. Blanchard, Charles Spence, J. V. Tully, Robert Brady and Emilio Miranda.

The Lincoln county central committee was reorganized by electing Alfredo Gonzales chairman and O. T. Nye secretary.

Dr. Compton of Santa Rosa was a business visitor here today.

SYNOPSIS.

Tyron Dunham, just alighted from a train, is approached by a beautiful girl who asks his protection. She is in fear of pursuit, but declines to give the cause of her distress. Dunham takes her to his home and in the absence of his mother and sister borrows a hat and cloak for her.

CHAPTER II.

"I am afraid I have been a long time," he said apologetically, as he closed the door of the carriage, after giving Mrs. Parker Bowman's address to the driver. In the uncertain light of the distant arc-lamp, the girl looked small and appealing. He felt a strong desire to lift her burdens and carry them on his own broad shoulders.

"I've brought some things that I thought might help," he said. "Would you like to put on this coat? It may not be just what you would have selected, but it was the best I could find that would not be recognized. The air is growing chilly."

He shook out the coat and threw it around her.

"Oh, thank you," she murmured gratefully, slipping her arms into the sleeves.

"And this box has some kind of a hat, I hope," he went on. "I ought to have looked, but there really wasn't time." He unknotted the strings and produced a large picture hat with long black plumes. He was relieved to find it black. While he untied the strings, there had been a growing uneasiness lest the hat be one of those wild, queer combinations of color that Cornelia frequently purchased and called "artistic."

The girl received the hat with a grateful relief that was entirely satisfactory to the young man.

"And now," said he, as he pulled out the gloves and laid them gravely in her lap, "we're invited out to dinner."

"Invited out to dinner!" gasped the girl.

"Yes. It's rather a providential thing to have happened, I think. The telephone was ringing as I opened the door, and Mrs. Parker Bowman, to whose house I was invited, was asking for my elater to fill the place of an absent guest. My sister is away, and I tried to beg off. I told her I had accidentally met—I hope you will pardon me—I called you a friend."

"Oh!" she said. "That was kind of you."

"I said you were a stranger in town, and as I was your only acquaintance, I felt that I should show you the courtesy of taking you to a hotel, and assisting to get you off on the night train; and I asked her to excuse me, as that would give her an even number. But it seems she had invited some one especially to meet me, and was greatly distressed not to have her full quota of guests, so she sent you a most cordial invitation to come to her at once, promising to take dinner with you some time if you would help her out now. Somehow, she gathered from my talk that you were traveling, had just returned from abroad, and were temporarily separated from your friends. She is also sure that you are musical, and means to ask you to help her out in that way this evening. I told her I was not sure whether you could be persuaded or not, and she mercifully refrained from asking whether you sang or played. I tell you all this so that you will be prepared for anything. Of course I didn't tell her all these things. I merely kept still when she inferred them. Your name, by the way, is Miss Remington—Mary Remington. She was greatly elated for a moment when she thought you might be Carolyn Remington—who ever she may be. I suppose she will speak of it. The name was the first one that my eye lit upon in the telephone-book. If you object to hearing it for the evening, it is easy to see how a name could be misunderstood over the phone. But perhaps you would better give me a few pointers, for I've never tried acting a part, and can't be sure how well I shall do it."

The girl had been silent from astonishment while the man talked.

"But I cannot possibly go there to dinner," she gasped, her hand going to her throat again, as if to pluck away the delicate lace about it and give more room for breathing. "I must get away somewhere at once. I cannot trouble you in this way. I have already imposed upon your kindness. With this hat and coat and gloves, I shall be able to manage quite well, and I thank you so much!

I will return them to you as soon as possible."

The cab began to go slowly, and Tryon Dunham noticed that another carriage, just ahead of theirs, was stopping before Mrs. Bowman's house. There was no time for halting decision.

"My friend," he said earnestly, "I cannot leave you alone, and I do not see a better way than for you to go in here with me for a little while, till I am free to go with you. No one can follow you here, or suspect that you had gone out to dinner at a stranger's house. Believe me, it is the very safest thing you could do. This is the house. Will you go in with me? If not, I must tell the driver to take us somewhere else."

"But what will she think of me," she said in trepidation, "and how can I do such a thing as to steal into a woman's house to a dinner in this way! Besides, I am not dressed for a formal occasion."

The carriage stopped before the door now, and the driver was getting down from his seat.

"Indeed, she will think nothing about it," Dunham assured her, "except to be glad that she has the right number of guests. Her dinners are delightful affairs usually, and you have nothing to do but talk about impersonal matters for a little while and be entertaining. She was most insistent that you take no thought about the matter of dress. She said it would be perfectly understood that you were traveling, and that the invitation was unexpected. You can say that your trunk has not come, or has gone ahead. Will you come?"

Then the driver opened the carriage door.

In an instant the girl assumed the self-contained manner she had worn when she had first spoken to him. She stepped quietly from the carriage, and only answered in a low voice, "I suppose I'd better, if you wish it."

Dunham paused for a moment to give the driver a direction about carrying the great pasteboard box to his club. This idea had come as a sudden inspiration. He had not thought of the necessity of getting rid of that box before.

"If it becomes necessary, where shall I say you are going this evening?" he asked in a low tone, as they turned to go up the steps. She summoned a faint, flickering smile.

"When people have been traveling abroad and are stopping over in the city, they often go to Washington, do they not?" she asked half shyly.

The door swung open before they could say another word, and the young man remembered that he must introduce his new friend. As there was no further opportunity to ask her about her name, he must trust to luck.

The girl obeyed the motion of the servant and slipped up to the dressing-room as if she were a frequent guest in the house, but it was in some trepidation that Tryon Dunham removed his overcoat and arranged his necktie. He had caught a passing glimpse of the assembled company, and knew that Mr. Bowman was growing impatient for his dinner. His heart almost failed him now that the girl was out of sight. What if she should not prove to be accustomed to keen eyes were almost immediately transferred to his own face, and the young man had no further time to watch his protegee, as dinner was immediately announced.

Miss Remington was seated next to Dunham at the table, with the Judge on her other side. The young man was pleased with the arrangement, and sat furtively studying the society, after all, and should show it? How embarrassing that would be! He had seen her only in a half-light as yet. How had he dared?

But it was too late now, for he was coming from the dressing-room, and Mrs. Bowman was approaching them with outstretched hands, and a welcome in her face.

"My dear Miss Remington, it is so good of you to help me out! I can see by the first glance that it is going to be a privilege to know you. I can't thank you enough for waiving formalities."

"It was very lovely of you to ask me," said the girl, with perfect composure, "a stranger."

"Don't speak of it, dear. Mr. Dunham's friends are not strangers. I assure you, Tryon, didn't you tell her how long we have known each other? I shall feel quite hurt if you have never mentioned me to her. Now, come, for my cook is in the last stages of despair over the dinner. Miss Remington, how do you manage to look so fresh and lovely after a long sea voyage? You must tell me your secret."

The young man looked down at the girl and saw that her dress was in perfect taste for the occasion, and also that she was very young and beautiful. He was watching her with a kind of proprietary pride as she moved forward to be introduced to the other guests, when he saw her sweep one quick glance around the room, and for just an instant hesitate and draw back. Her face grew white; then, with a supreme effort, she controlled her feelings, and went through her part with perfect ease.

When Judge Blackwell was introduced to the girl, he looked at her with what seemed to Dunham to be more than a passing interest; but the delicate tinting of her face, the dainty line of cheek and chin and ear, the sweep of her dark lashes, and the ripple of her brown hair, as he tried to converse easily with her, as an old friend might.

At length the Judge turned to the girl and said:

"Miss Remington, you remind me strongly of a young woman who was in my office this afternoon."

The delicate color flickered out of the girl's face entirely, leaving even her lips white, but she lifted her dark eyes bravely to the kindly blue ones, and with sweet dignity baffled the questioned recognition in his look.

"Yes, you are so much like her that I would think you were—her sister perhaps, if it were not for the name," Judge Blackwell went on.

"She was a most interesting and beautiful young lady." The old gentleman bestowed upon the girl a look that was like a benediction. "Excuse me for speaking of it, but her dress was something soft and beautiful, like yours, and seemed to suit her face. I was deeply interested in her, although until this afternoon she was a stranger. She came to me for a small matter of business, and after it was attended to, and before she received the papers, she disappeared! She had removed her hat and gloves, as she was obliged to wait some time for certain matters to be looked up, and these she left behind her. The hat is covered with long, handsome plumes of the color of rich cream in coffee."

Young Dunham glanced down at the cloth of the girl's gown, and was startled to find the same rich creamy coffee tint in its silky folds; yet she did not show by so much as a flicker of an eyelash that she was passing under the keenest inspection.

"Why should she want to disappear?" The question was asked coolly and with as much interest as a stranger would be likely to show.

"I cannot imagine," said the old man speculatively. "She apparently had health and happiness, if one may judge from her appearance, and she came to me of her own free will on a matter of business. Immediately after her disappearance, two well-dressed men entered my office and inquired for her. One had an intellectual head, but looked hard and cruel; the other was very handsome—and disagreeable. When he could not find the young lady, he laid claim to her hat, but I had it locked away."

Miss Remington Was Seated Next to Dunham.

How could I know that man was her friend or her relative? I intend to keep that hat until the young woman herself claims it. I have not had anything happen that has so upset me in years."

"You don't think any harm has come to her?" questioned the girl.

"I cannot think what harm could, and yet—it is very strange. She was about the age of my dear daughter when she died, and I cannot get her out of her mind. When you first appeared in the doorway you gave me quite a start. I thought you were she. If I can find any trace of her, I mean to investigate this matter. I have a feeling that that girl needs a friend."

"I am sure she would be very happy to have a friend like you," said the girl, and there was something in the eyes that were raised to his that made the Judge's heart glow with admiration.

"Thank you," said he warmly. "That is most kind of you. But perhaps she has found a better friend by this time. I hope so."

"Or one as kind," she suggested, in a low voice.

The conversation then became general, and the girl did not look up for several seconds; but the young man on her right, who had not missed a word of the previous tete-a-tete, could not give attention to the story Mrs. Blackwell was telling, for pondering what he had heard.

The ladies now left the table, and though this was the time that Dunham had counted upon for an acquaintance with the great judge who might hold a future career in his power, he could not but wish that he might follow them to the other room. He felt entire confidence in his new friend's ability to play her part to the end, but he wanted to watch her, to study her and understand her, if perchance he might solve the mystery that was ever growing more intense about her.

As she left the room his eyes followed her. His hostess, in passing behind his chair, had whispered:

"I don't wonder you feel so about her. She is lovely. But please don't begrudge her to us for a few minutes. I promise you that you shall have your innings afterwards."

Then, without any warning and utterly against his will, this young man of much experience and self-control blushed furiously, and was glad enough when the door closed behind Mrs. Bowman.

Miss Remington walked into the drawing room with a steady step, but with a rapidly beating heart. Her real ordeal had now come. She cast about in her mind for subjects of conversation which should forestall unsafe topics, and intuitively sought the protection of the judge's wife. But immediately she saw her hostess making straight for the little Chippendale chair beside her.

"My dear, it is too lovely," she began. "So opportune! Do tell me how long you have known Tryon?"

The girl caught her breath and gathered her wits together. She looked up shyly into the pleasant curious eyes of Mrs. Bowman, and a faint gleam of mischief came into her face.

"Why—Her hesitation seemed only natural, and Mrs. Bowman decided that there must be something very special between these two. "Why, not so very long, Mrs. Bowman—not as long as you have known him." She finished with a smile which Mrs. Bowman decided was charming.

"Oh, you sly child!" she exclaimed, playfully tapping the round cheek with her fan. "Did you meet him when he was abroad this summer?"

"Oh, no, indeed!" said the girl, laughing now in spite of herself. "Oh, no; it was after his return."

"Then it must have been in the Adirondacks," went on the determined interlocutor. "Were you at—" But the girl interrupted her. She could not afford to discuss the Adirondacks, and the sight of the grand piano across the room had given her an idea.

"Mr. Dunham told me that you would like me to play something for you, as your musician friend has failed you. I shall be very glad to, if it will help you any. What do you care for? Something serious or something gay? Are you fond of Chopin, or Beethoven, or something more modern?"

Scenting a possible musical prodigy, and desiring most earnestly to give her guests a treat, Mrs. Bowman exclaimed in enthusiasm:

"Oh, how lovely of you! I hardly dared to ask, as Tryon was uncertain whether you would be willing. Suppose you give us something serious now, and later, when the men come in, we'll have the gay music. Make your own choice, though I'm very fond of Chopin, of course."

Without another word, the girl moved quietly over to the piano and took her seat. For just a moment her fingers wandered carelessly over the keys, as if they were old friends and she were having an understanding with them, then she began a Chopin Nocturne. Her touch was firm and velvety, and she brought out a bell-like tone from the instrument that made the little company of women realize that the player was mistress of her art. Her graceful fingers and lovely head, with its simple ripples and waves of hair, were more noticeable than ever as she sat there, controlling the exquisite harmonies. Even Mrs. Blackwell stopped fanning and looked interested. Then she whispered to Mrs. Bowman: "A very sweet young girl. That's a pretty piece she's playing." Mrs. Blackwell was sweet and commonplace and old-fashioned.

Mrs. Parker Bowman sat up with a pink glow in her cheeks and a light in her eyes. She began to plan how she might keep this acquisition and exploit her among her friends. It was her delight to bring out new features in her entertainments.

Bull Calf Sells for $20,000.
Chicago.—A bull calf less than four months old was sold at auction here for $20,000, said to be a record price in the United States. The purchasers were Chicagoans. The calf was born Feb. 25, is a Holstein and comes from famous pedigreed stock.

Archduke and Wife Heavily Insured.
Vienna.—The news of the death of Archduke Francis Ferdinand and the Duchess of Hohenberg recalls the fact that the late archduke's life was insured with Dutch companies for $12,000,000 and that of his wife for $6,000,000.

No Race Suicide in Church.
Chicago.—Race suicide is not prevalent among church members, according to statistics presented at the triennial convention of the International Sunday School Association. In three years since the last convention at San Francisco 347,261 babies have been added to the "cradle roll," bringing the total membership of this department in sixty-seven states and provinces of North America to 1,037,837.

Fashion Dictates.
All sorts of plaids and checks are in great favor, especially for vests and coats.

Costs Railroad $10,000,000.
Washington.—With the Supreme Court's decision sustaining the Interstate Commerce Commission's intermountain rate order, the way is opened for shippers to recover sums estimated as great as $10,000,000 from railroads, which have been charging the old rates while the case was being fought through the courts. Reparation, if any, and the amount, will have to be decided by the commission in a separate action.

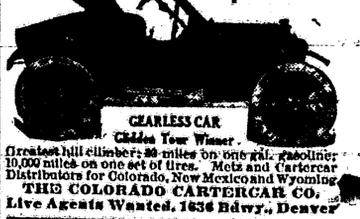

YEAR'S RECORD GOLD FIND.
Discovery of Big Five at Leadville Runs from $50 to $200 a Ton.
Leadville, Colo.—One of the best gold ore strikes made in Leadville this year is reported from the Big Five mine, operated by the Big Five Mining Company, of which Preston Gibson, Washington, D. C., is president. Details of the discovery are lacking, but the find was made at a considerable depth. The ore body is said to be between three and four feet wide, eighteen inches of which will run $200 per ton, while the balance will average $50.

The Big Five company assumed charge of the Big Four the first of the year. The mine is one of the best known in the Leadville district and has been producing for twenty years.

RATES FOR BIG FAIR IN 1915.
Different Railroad Lines May Be Used to Panama-Pacific Exposition.
San Francisco.—Round trip fares from Eastern points to San Francisco for the Panama-Pacific exposition in 1915, as fixed by the railroads of the Eastern Trunk Lines Association have been announced by the exposition traffic department.
They are: New York city, $94.30; Philadelphia, $92.95; Washington, D. C., $92.30. The going and returning trips may be made on different lines.
The fixing of these rates concludes the present special 1915 excursion reductions, the other chief ones already determined being Chicago, $62.50; Pittsburg, $81.20; Buffalo, $83.50; Detroit, $73.50; Cincinnati, $71.10. It is announced that further reductions are likely to be made later as conditions warrant.

Las noticias de la muerte del Archiduque Franz Ferdinand y de la Duquesa de Hohenberg Theron dadas a sus hijos. Los niños lloraron y la tía, la Condesa Chotek, se cayó en desmayo. El periódico Tagblatt dice que la vida del difunto Archiduque era segura por $12,000,000 y la de su esposa por $6,000,000.

Otra vez bajo el golpe de nueva tragedia, Franz Josef, Emperador de Austria-Hungria, aparece como una de las personas más interesantes de Europa. El asesinato del Archiduque Franz Ferdinand y de su esposa morganática la Duquesa de Hohenburg, en Sarajevo, Bosnia, fué la muerte que por la cuarta vez—sea por asesinato, suicidio ó ejecución militar—le dió en el corazón. Pero el anciano fué calma. Amado por su pueblo con un amor que muchas veces impidió la declaración de una guerra general en Europa, el buen corazón del octogenario tuvo suficiente fuerza para sostener aún otro golpe.

For Bad Burns. Don't thrust a burned foot or hand into cold water. It relieves for a moment, only to be followed by an increase of pain, peeling off of the cuticle, and very frequently by ulceration of the wound. Don't tie up in a dry cloth; all woven material is porous and admits air. Don't drag off the clothing. Don't rub or cut off the hanging skin. Your object when called upon to treat a burn is at once to exclude air. For this purpose nothing is better than oil of some sort. Paraffin is not a bad thing, or vaseline, or common olive oil, or lard and butter, if both be entirely without salt. —First Aid for Everyday Accidents.

HIT THE SPOT. Postum Knocked Out Coffee Ails.

There's a good deal of satisfaction and comfort in hitting upon the right thing to rid one of the varied and constant ailments caused by coffee drinking.

"Ever since I can remember," writes an Ind. woman, "my father has been a lover of his coffee, but the continued use of it so affected his stomach that he could scarcely eat at times.

"Mother had coffee-headache and dizziness, and if I drank coffee for breakfast I would taste it all day and usually go to bed with a headache.

"One day father brought home a pkg. of Postum recommended by our grocer. Mother made it according to directions on the box and it just "hit the spot." It has a dark, seal-brown color, changing to golden brown when cream is added, and a snappy taste similar to mild, high-grade coffee, and we found that its continued use speedily put an end to all our coffee ills.

"That was at least ten years ago and Postum has, from that day to this, been a standing order of father's grocery bill.

"When I married, my husband was a great coffee drinker, although he admitted that it hurt him. When I mentioned Postum he said he did not like the taste of it. I told him I could make it taste all right. He smiled and said, try it. The result was a success, he won't have anything but Postum."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Postum now comes in two forms: Regular Postum—must be well boiled—15c and 25c packages.

Instant Postum—is a soluble powder. Made in the cup with hot water—no boiling—20c and 50c tins.

The cost per cup of both kinds is about the same.

The framework of the kitchen was splintered in several places, but none of the family felt the slightest shock.

You can always tell a democrat—but you can't tell him much

Fourteen citizens of Norton, in Quay county, were arrested and hauled before a justice of the peace for failure to pay their road tax. They included the leading citizens of the neighborhood and each one was compelled to plank down $5.95 to cover the tax and costs.

Lillian, the three year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Nugen, of Roy, New Mexico, picked up a bottle filled with strychnine pills. She tried to eat some of them but the bitter taste detained her from partaking of a fatal dose and a physician speedily brought her around again.

There isn't much danger of State Senator Billy Walton standing for his recall, because he voted to pay the county officers a reasonable salary, even though he is promised the nomination for congressman to succeed the over worked Harvey B. Ferguson. Billy can read; and so far as the democrats electing a congressman from the Sunshine State, Billy knows the handwriting is on the wall.

In an educational way, there is no doubt but New Mexico is, and has been for the past few years coming rapidly to the front, and this is as it should be for there is nothing that speaks so well for a state, or advances its interests more rapidly than good schools, says the Socorro Chieftain. Give the boy or girl a chance, and if nothing else comes of it, they will be better men and women for the time spent within high school or college walls. And better men and women is the crying need of the world, yesterday today and forever.

Life flows on. You cannot turn back a single hour. It's silent, inexorable tide is swiftly bearing you along to the grim responsibilities of middle life—to the aching regrets of old age. Pretty serious thing—that life of yours, isn't it? And what are you going to do with your life—what is left of it? Is it to run on to waste, or will you harness it to the great dynamo of human opportunity? Do you devote a little bit of each day to self-culture or do you feel your leisure hours are better spent in magnifying the foibles of your neighbors? Really and truly, have you got a cinch hold on your responsibilities as citizens?

Over in Chaves county two candidates for the lower house in the state legislature, asking the votes of the people of that section as democrats, very briefly announced the platform on which they ride into the ring. These two gentlemen are Chas. L. Ballard and C. C. Tannehill. They each say: "I favor a reasonable salary for county officers, not exceeding $3000 for any one official. I am personally and politically friendly to the Governor and expect to support him in his policies when I think he is right; but when in my judgement he is wrong, I expect to pursue the policy I deem right and for the best interest of my home people." Oh, you echoes of the last legislature and the salary bill and the executive veto!

The Tucumcari News, while declaring its political independence, nevertheless shows its leaning to the democracy; and while this is a fact it seems to be a little out of line with the administration and the state press on the question of county salaries. In last week's paper it says, in regard to selecting a representative from Quay county for the lower house: "If the democrats put up a man who wants to fix the salaries of county officials at a sum too low to attract capable officials then the News will support the opposition. We believe in democracy and hope it will put up men who will endeavor to work for the interests of the whole people. We need men like our present officials and would like to see the law changed so that when we get a capable man in office we could show our appreciation by returning him for another term. A candidate who says he thinks $100 00 a month is sufficient for any county official is deficient somewhere. The responsibility alone is worth that much. If you want good officials there must be some inducement to attract them from other good paying jobs."

According to the press dispatches it seems that Jesus and Elfege have tried to put something across in the metropolitan county of Bernalillo—something in the nature of a primary of the republican party. It has worked for the time being, but it is evident it may strike a snag. And right here it might not be out of the way to say that Harold Bell Wright, when writing his "Uncrowned King," must have had Jesus and Elfege in mind when he said: "Eyes blinded by the fog of things cannot see the truth; brains bewildered by the whirl of things cannot think the truth; hearts deadened by the weight of things cannot feel the truth, throats choked by the dust of things cannot speak the truth." We don't positively asseverate that Mr. Wright was thinking solely of Jesus and Elfege when he wrote those lines, but we say he might just as well have been thinking of them as anybody else. And, by the way, it might not be a bad thing for Jesus and Elfege to borrow the book and read it.

DEMOCRATIC PRIMARIES

The democrats of Carrizozo precinct held their primaries last Tuesday evening for the purpose of selecting the eleven delegates to the county convention. B. F. Goff, the precinct chairman, presided, while W. J. Doering acted as the secretary of the meeting. The delegates from this precinct are: Harry Humphrey, John B. Baird, John A. Haley, George Ulrick, Frank Gray, W. J. Doering, B. F. Goff, Manuel Gonzalez, Walker Hyde, Porfito Chavez, Jerry Kelly.

Buried Treasure

Aladdin's lamp was the key to untold treasure buried underground.

Its owner, by a single rub, could summon genii, and have access to the hidden wealth of kings.

You, too, have buried treasure at your command, and Electricity, more powerful than mythical genii, to do your bidding.

Instead of rubbing a lamp, you take off your telephone receiver and immediately a wealth of treasure is at your service.

A tiny spark flashes over the wires overhead and underground and carries the sound of your voice wherever you wish.

Over three and a half million dollars lie buried under the streets of this mountain region in cables, wires and conduits ready for your use every minute of the day and night.

SUNDAY SCHOOLS IN N. MEX.

Officials of the organized Sunday school work in New Mexico are busy with plans for the State Convention of Sunday School Workers at Albuquerque this fall. They announce that W. C. Pearce of Chicago and Mrs. Mary Foster Bryner, international department leaders, will be in attendance. Prof. E. O. Excell, the noted singer, may also join them in a tour of the southwest.

The Sunday school field secretary for the southwest is the Rev. W. C. Merritt, of Claremont, Calif. At the great International Sunday School Convention lately held in Chicago, Mr. Merritt gave a report of his territory, which included the following facts and figures for New Mexico:

Every one of the 26 counties in the state is organized. There are a total of 553 Sunday schools in the state, with an enrollment of 36,043 officers, teachers and scholars. Of these schools, 449 are white, 84 are Spanish, 10 Indian, 10 Negro.

The amount of contributions reported was $2,348.58, including offerings for missionary work.

The dates of the Convention are Sept. 29, 30 and Oct. 1. The state officers and the Albuquerque committee are planning to make the program, in point of talent, interest and value, the "best ever."

COURT HITS "PEONAGE" IN HOFMAN CASE

"Artie" Hofman, Clever Brooklyn Player.

"Artie" Hofman won in Chicago the other day—not at the Federal league park, but in the municipal court. As acting manager of the Brooklyn Feds he lost his game, but as "Artie" Hofman, one-time Cub star, he won in court by defeating the Cubs in a lawsuit. Incidentally he went far toward upsetting the whole "economic system" of the National and American leagues.

The verdict returned in Judge Dolan's court awarded $2,900.47 to Hofman, the amount claimed as back pay due from the Cubs for the season of 1912.

"Peonage" was the basis of the victory for Hofman. He told his story of having been "sold" by the Cubs, and of the refusal of the Cubs' president, Charles Webb Murphy, to make good his contract. Judge Dolan made it clear that the "peonage" which has been the constant source of complaint against the old major leagues, was illegal.

"It is for the jury to determine," said Judge Dolan, "whether Hofman consented to be sold to the Pittsburgh team and whether he voluntarily entered into a new contract with Pittsburgh."

And the jury, after just 19 minutes of deliberation and balloting, decided that Hofman was entitled to his money.

"I had a contract with the Chicago club of the National League for the season of April 1 to October 15, 1912, calling for $5,000," Hofman testified. "In June I was struck on the head by a ball and injured. The injury interfered with my playing and a week later—June 30—I received a letter from Mr. Murphy, president of the club, informing me that I had been disposed of to Pittsburgh."

"After only a few weeks with Pittsburgh I was let out and all I obtained from Pittsburgh was $694.47. When I demanded payment for the remainder of the amount called for in my contract with the Chicago club, Mr. Murphy told me I would have to look to Pittsburgh for my salary."

"I had received payments from the Chicago club early in the year of 1912, which, with the payment by Pittsburgh, left a balance of $2,900.47."

Attorney Keehn devoted his argument chiefly to the "peonage" feature of the case.

"The evidence shows that the plaintiff has been the victim of a human market," he said, "a market in which men are bought and sold regardless of their own wishes. Hofman's contract was with the Chicago team. He was sold to another team and briefly 'notified' he had been sold. When a system like that is countenanced in this country, what right have we to criticize Russia?"

PANTRY IN PROPER POSITION

For Purposes for Which It is Intended Apartment Should Be, as It Is in This Case, Placed on the Outside of the House—Means Saving of Labor.

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to the subject of building, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 1827 Prairie avenue, Chicago, Ill., and only enclose two-cent stamp for reply.

By WILLIAM A. RADFORD.

The expression, a "two-story bungalow"—which we often hear—is a misnomer. Properly speaking, a bungalow is but one story high, and is covered with a roof having very little pitch to it. But we are always improving things. It would be utterly impossible for the bungalow to travel across the continent from California as far east as Chicago without receiving the inventive attentions of the western sons of our "Down-East" Yankee ancestors.

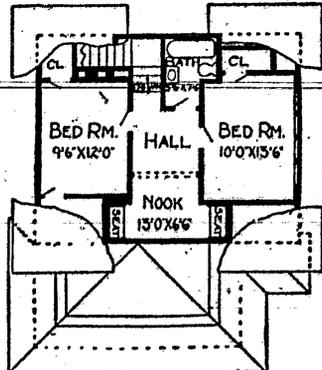

In this plan we have a dwelling of modest dimensions, being 25 feet from front to rear, and 32 feet in width, with a four-foot extension to make room for a pantry. In this way we get three splendid rooms on the first floor, and they are well arranged for both convenience and looks.

Pantries were never properly built until this outside attachment was hit upon. It was born of necessity, like many other valuable inventions, and was improved upon as occasion demanded. Pantries are intended for the storage of food, both cooked and otherwise. Naturally, pantries should be kept as cool as possible, and they should be well ventilated at all times. Light is a necessity, and convenience is very important, for the pantry is place to store canned fruit, butter, eggs, and such groceries as a person likes to buy in quantities and keep on hand.

The fruit room and the pantry above were connected by means of a dumb-waiter, which has just a box about a foot square and three feet long, vertically open on the front side, and fitted with two shelves in the middle. There was a pulley near the ceiling in the pantry, and a rope with a counterweight on the other end which balanced the box so that it would slide easily up and down. With this convenience it was never necessary to tote things up or down cellar. Only one trip below was necessary at any meal time. Very often the box itself contained everything needed, and it was only a minute's work to pull it up into the pantry.

Another feature in this little house, that is quite new, is the stairway built around the big chimney. It not only looks well from the large living room; but it occupies the least important corner of the house; and it lands you upstairs in the middle of the hall, in close proximity to the doors leading into the different rooms. Under this stair are the steps leading to the cellar, so that space is economized to the best advantage.

The material for the walls is concrete, preferably run in molds with provision made for dead air spaces, on the hollow wall principle, as this makes the warmest house because it prevents dampness. And it is the cheapest construction if you take lasting qualities into consideration.

A massive effect is given by the heavy loggia pier. And this loggia, by the way, is considered one of the most attractive parts of the whole house. The square openings are eas-visited many times during the preparation of each meal, and meals come along regularly, three times a day in most healthy families. You can't have a cool pantry, and have it built in the body of the house along with the other rooms, especially in a furnace-heated house.

In one little house where a pantry attachment like this was built on, the space below was made into a cold-drum room. The main cellar wall was carried across solid and straight, except for a doorway; and a good, heavy door was hung in the opening. The outside wall under the pantry was carried up in the same solid way, and a good outside window put in, which was covered with a fine wire screen. Shelves were built in this fruit room against the outside wall, from near the cement floor clear up to the ceiling. As the room is eight feet six inches long this gave considerable shelf room; and it proved a splendid ly fitted with fly screens, so it is adapted for an outdoor summer parlor; and the size is sufficient to be of some use, as it is 10 feet wide and 20 feet long.

The rooms upstairs are stolen from the roof space. And they are right nice little rooms, too. When I think back a few years to the time when all such room room was counted as attic space, good only for storage of old truck; it is easy to realize to what extent small houses have been improved. Instead of a dark, dingy loft, without floor, partition, or daylight, we now have three bedrooms and a splendid bathroom with hot and cold water, the same as in large, expensive houses.

Then, in the matter of light, what a change! We have here 14 windows for four rooms and one stairway—which certainly looks like a liberal allowance, even for these times of extravagant ideas.

It has taken us a long time to learn that we can build an elegant small house as well as an elegant large house, and we are just commencing to put our knowledge to some practical use. Such cottages as this are becoming common in the more enterprising suburbs of the larger cities; and the indications are that they will continue to grow in popularity, for they meet the requirements of flat dwellers, who have become heartily sick of living in dungeons.

The estimated cost of this homelike place is $2,500.

LARGE BALD PATCH ON HEAD

Longmont, Colo.—"About one year ago our little girl was bothered greatly with what seemed a very bad case of dandruff. Her beautiful hair got dry and dead and flew in all directions. One morning I noticed a large bald patch on her head, larger than a dollar, covered with tiny blisters surrounded with an angry red ring. They finally began running. They itched and she never rested at night."

"It was pronounced a bad case of eczema. I was given a prescription which I continued to use till my baby's head was entirely covered with sores and she had lost all her hair. She was compelled to wear a silk cap and I thought she was disgraced for life. A visitor in our neighborhood recommended Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I used the Ointment at night and gave her a shampoo in the morning with the Cuticura Soap. In less than three months my girl was entirely healed."

Among the Baseball Players

Bill Steen has replaced Vean Gregg as the Naps' most reliable pitcher.

Eddie Cicotte is one of the hardest worked pitchers in the American league.

Now they are beginning to call Honus Wagner Huerta, because he refuses to quit.

President Gilmore says the Federals will land Walter Johnson if money can secure him.

Baseball must be slipping a little. J. Franklin Baker isn't getting his usual circuit swat.

Lefty Schultz is now a member of the Buffalo club. He deserted Frank Chance's Highlanders.

Pete Schneider ought to fit in with the rest of the Reds. His name has a name that harmonizes with Herzog's infield.

Muggsy McGraw declares he will win the bunting this year because he has the best bunch of substitutes in the country.

Managers Biekey, Callahan and Birmingham, of the Western section, all consider the Detroit team a real pennant-contender.

Napoleon Lajoie may have lost some of his speed, but it's still worth the price of admission to watch him pick up a ground ball.

Mike Balent, ex-Brown and member of the Chattanooga Southern league team, is out of the game for the season because of a broken leg.

PHILLIES KEPT IN RUNNING

First Baseman Fred Luderus Has Aided Materially in Keeping Philadelphia Team in Fight.

Though Fred Luderus, first baseman of the Phillies, has not been hitting up to his usual form this year, he has otherwise done a noble part in the effort to keep the wrecked Phillies in the running. The erratic work of his fellow infielders has made his task unusually hard. They keep him on pins and needles with their wild throws and their bobbles, but through it all he has played fine ball. It's a nerve racking job he has and it may be the psychological effect that influences his batting. However, he is a natural hitter and should soon strike his stride. In the meantime he certainly looks like the saving grace of Doolin's infield.

OUR LIGHTHOUSES REMAIN UNCHANGED

THERE is an odd thing about lighthouses. Whenever science comes along with an improved light a new lighthouse is not built for it. It is simply installed in the old one. The axiom about new wine in old bottles does not apply to new lights in old lighthouses at all.

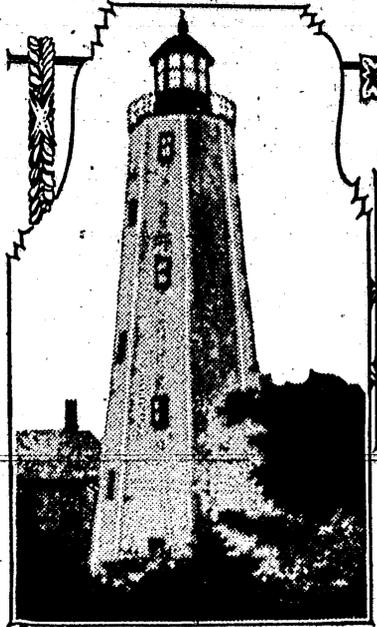

The modern age of lighthouses was ushered in with the building of the third Eddystone by John Smeaton in the year 1759, according to an article on the subject in the Edison Monthly. This lighthouse was important for several reasons. In form and construction it was superior to the lighthouses of the time, and the illuminant, though nothing better than two-fifth-pound tallow candles, aggregating 67.2 candle power, afforded by the steadiness of the flame the possibility of future improvement through the use of devices to direct and concentrate the beams.

As in the organic world there are creatures of a day, while others, like men, enjoy a reasonable longevity, so it is in the world of architectural construction, and lighthouses belong to the long-lived class. For one of these a hundred years is no great matter, and thus it happens that many a modern lighthouse has seen revolutionizing illuminants come and go, and has itself profited by the latest lamp surgery performed with ever-increasing delicacy within its lantern, whereby its ancient body has taken on new dignity and capability for its beneficent task.

Such a lighthouse may be seen at Sandy Hook, for although the first of these structures to be erected in America was placed at the entrance of Boston harbor as early as 1716, the New Jersey lighthouse is the oldest now in existence upon our coasts. At one time the illuminating material consisted of 36 lard-oil candles. At a later period oil burners were installed, while during successive periods kerosene was used in an old type float lamp, and electricity, then in the experimental stage, was adopted. After this there was a recurrence to the oil lamp, and at the present time incandescent vapor is employed. Here it must be admitted that lighthouses, when serving a double purpose, have not always figured as temples to the gods, for by the British, who built this lighthouse and put it in commission in the year 1764, it was intended to serve also as a military prison. It was constructed with a dungeon underneath, and just 100 years later, in supplying a foundation for an iron stairway, evidence of its former use was made apparent through the discovery of a vault containing a human skeleton. This old lighthouse also had its secret underground passage, the entrance to which was barred by an iron door located in a near-by hillside. Then, too, in this year of reconstruction, the holes that were made in the sides of the tower by cannon shots from British men-of-war were cemented; so if the tradition must connect lighthouses and temples, the one at Sandy Hook was certainly reared to Moloch, the god of war, though in the past 100 years it has lighted many a British ship on pacific errands into New York harbor.

With the growing complexity and advance toward perfection of lighthouse system, lighthouse zones are established at varying distances from the land, the character of the light, whether double or single, colored or white, fixed, flashing or intermittent, being determined by the requirements of its position and the use to which it is put as a signal.

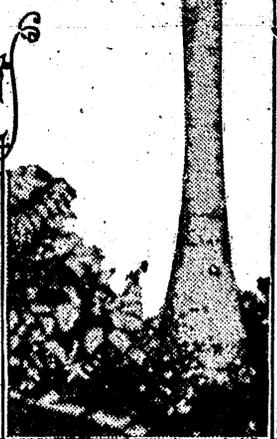

While great elevation would seem a leading requirement if a coast light is to perform effective service, it is a positive disadvantage in certain localities and at certain seasons of the year, when, as in St. George's channel, foggy weather is the rule, for the fog clouds envelop the light and render it quite useless for the guidance of vessels below. The "fog light," or "occasional light," at South Stack, on the island of Anglesea, England, was constructed to meet these conditions. An inclined plane was excavated in the rock, and upon this a tramway was laid. The light, being contained in a carriage, which in clear weather was left at the summit of the incline, cal miles. The installation comprises six A-50 accumulators, with a flasher arranged to show single flashes, and a one-foot burner with a fourth-order lens.

THE SANDY HOOK LIGHTHOUSE

TOWER OF PHILADELPHIA LIGHT

NEW LIGHT TOWER BEING BUILT AT SOUTH FORELAND, PANAMA CANAL

The following years saw the introduction of electricity into a number of lighthouses. Most important and powerful of all lights was and still is, in this country at any rate, the Navesink, which in 1898 was provided with a five-second white flash electric light, the flash having a duration of .08 seconds. Its bivalve lens has a focal distance of 700—like the new light installed at South Foreland, in 1904.

Electricity is now being used in the so-called "unattended lights." Lights of this description will, upon the completion of the Panama canal, guide ships on their way through Gatun lake. In passing through the latter the canal makes eight turns, some of these being at a sharp angle. The range lights are of reinforced concrete, "so placed in pairs that one towers above the other at a distance back of the lower one of several hundred feet." The pilot will direct his course by keeping these two lights in line, turning when the pair on the opposite shore appear in view. These range towers, rising to a height of about 60 feet, are sometimes placed in the midst of the dense tropical jungle that fringes the shores. In a few of these compressed acetylene, which will burn six months without attention, is the illuminant, but the greater number of the lighthouses are on a general electric light circuit. As Abbott states in his recent work on "Panama," the whole canal will be lighted with buoys, beacons, lighthouses and light posts.

MUST GET TO ROOT OF EVIL

Only Real Cure for Insomnia is to Remove the Causes That Have Brought It On.

"The chief cause of sleeplessness," said Dr. Robert Jones, a London specialist on mental diseases, in an address before the international congress of medicine, "is mental or physical pain or suffering in some form or another."

"Pain is a sensation experienced by all reflective living things. It has many definitions, but is best described as an uneasiness, varying from a feeling of slight discomfort to extreme distress; and it may arise from the derangement of any function, also from violence, pressure or undue tension in any part of the body. It has many synonyms, anxiety, grief, solicitude, mental distress, uneasiness, and, according to its quality or intensity, it may amount to agony, torture or torment."

"The treatment of sleeplessness is to break the habit, which should be done by removing the causes, and these may be classified as either physical, mental or moral," further asserted Dr. Roberts, and he then urged the necessity of sleep, declaring it to be more essential than food, and that where drugs were resorted to they should be taken only when prescribed by a responsible physician, as all sleep-inducing drugs act as heart depressants. The scientist attributed the increase in insanity among boys under fifteen and girls between fifteen and twenty that has been recorded in the last decade to insufficient sleep.

A change of scene often benefits the victim of insomnia—a place not far distant from the home will sometimes suffice. Fresh air in abundance is an absolute necessity if one would sleep well. A single window open a few inches at the top and bottom is not enough. Open every window, and secure the effect of open-air sleep. A thin bread-and-butter sandwich sprinkled with cayenne pepper and eaten after midnight will sometimes induce sleep when other means fail.

London Street Sayings.

London street sayings, like music hall songs, have generally but a short life, the Chronicle of that city says. "Has your mother sold her mangle?" "Who shot the dog?" "How are you off for soap?" survive only in old novels. Some, however, are revived with slight alterations. The expression of dissent emphasized 12 months ago by "Not in these trousers" used 30 years ago to be conveyed by the tag, "Not in these boots." One street saying still occasionally heard dates back more than 60 years. Mrs. C. W. Earle states that at the time of the 1851 exhibition "the excessive fatigue and weariness so stamped on the face of everybody who wanders about huge exhibitions became in that year a source of amusement for the London street boy, and took the form of calling as they passed, 'How's your poor foot?'"

Sober Frenchman.

Perhaps the last thing that hasty English visitors to Paris become aware of is the quietness, the thoroughness, and the simplicity of French family life. Behind the volatile and dippant ways of the theaters, the cafes, and the newspapers there is hidden an extraordinary amount of hard work, grave routine, and signal simplicity of living. To this family life the stranger is with difficulty admitted. The casual acquaintance is not made free, as in England, of such realities. We venture the opinion that the highly respectable life of French country houses is dull beyond anything conceived of in similar houses in England. But in Paris the gay and the plodding lives to a great extent overlap, and lead to the confusion of the visitor.—Spectator.

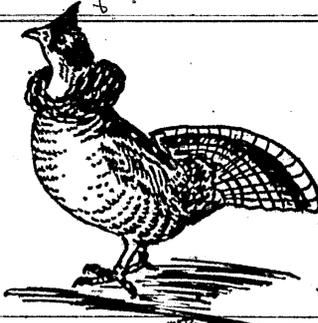

USEFUL ON THE FARM

BOBWHITE AND RUFFED GROUSE EAT MANY INSECTS.

Every Effort Should Be Made to Augment Number of Birds by Protecting Them From Enemies and by Providing Good Nests.

(By H. W. HENSHAW.)

At the present time many kinds of useful birds need direct intervention in their behalf as never before. The encroachments of civilization on timbered tracts and the methods of modern intensive cultivation by destroying or restricting breeding grounds of birds, tend to diminish their ranks. The number of insect pests, on the other hand, is all the time increasing by leaps and bounds through importations from abroad and by migration from adjoining territories. Every effort, therefore, should be made to augment the numbers of our useful birds by protecting them from their enemies, by providing nesting facilities, and by furnishing them food in times of stress, especially in winter.

Birds occupy a unique position among the enemies of insects, since their power of flight enables them at short notice to gather at points where here are abnormal insect outbreaks. An unusual abundance of grasshoppers, for instance, in a given locality soon attracts the birds from a wide area, and as a rule their visits cease only when there are no grasshoppers left. However unlike they may be in appearance, structure, and habits, all are similar in one respect—they possess a never-flagging appetite for insects and weed seeds. Two useful birds—quite unlike in appearance, but similar in that they befriended the farmer, are the bobwhite and ruffed grouse.

The former is known everywhere by the clear whistle that suggests its name. The bobwhite is loved by every dweller in the country and is better known to more hunters in the United States than any other game bird. It is no less appreciated on the table than in the field, and in many states has unquestionably been hunted too closely. Fortunately it seems to be practicable to propagate the bird in captivity, and much is to be hoped for in this direction. Half the food of this quail consists of weed seeds, almost a fourth of grain and about a tenth of wild fruits. Although thus eating grain, the bird gets most of it from stubble.

The beautiful ruffed grouse is found in the northern two-thirds of the United States and in the forested parts

MANGE AND LICE TREATMENT

Variety of Coal-Tar Dips on Market Are Satisfactory if of Sufficient Strength and Warm.

(By M. H. REYNOLDS, Veterinarian, Minnesota Experiment Station.)

Treatment of hogs for mange should begin with a vigorous scrubbing with brush, soap, and soft water so as to remove the crust. A variety of coal-tar dips are on the market. Most of these are quite satisfactory if of sufficient strength, and warm enough (about 110 degrees F. Do not boil). The hog should be given a good thorough soaking in the dip, not less than two minutes. The hog must go under, head and all, at least once. Treatment must usually be repeated one or more times at intervals of eight days. Treat the whole herd and do it thoroughly.

An effective dip can be made from crude petroleum as follows:
4 gallons crude oil,
16 gallons water,
1 pound soap.

of Canada. This, the famed drummer and finest game bird of the northern woods, is unusually wild and wary and under reasonable protection will withstand the attacks of hunters. Moreover, when reduced in numbers, it responds to protection in a gratifying manner and has proved to be well adapted to propagation under artificial conditions. Wild fruits and browse make up the bulk of the vegetable food of this species. The most important pests devoured by this bird are the potato beetle, clover-root weevil, the striped flea beetle, grape vine leaf beetle, May beetles, grasshoppers, cotton worms, army worms, cutworms, the red-humped apple worm, and sawfly larvae.

While the economic record of the ruffed grouse is commendable, it does not call for more stringent protection than is necessary to maintain the species in reasonable numbers.

DISEASE OF THE ASPARAGUS

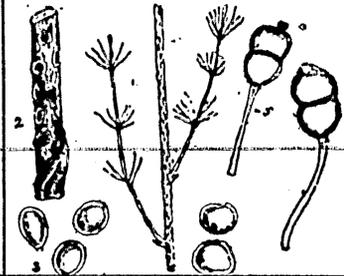

Rust is Common and Familiar to Every Grower of Vegetable—Can Be Controlled by Spraying.

(By C. J. BETHUNE.)

Asparagus rust is a very common disease and is familiar to every grower of this vegetable. It has three distinct stages. The first is known as the "cluster-cup" stage or the spring form. In this stage the spores are produced in cup-shaped pustules, which are grouped in oval clusters and are orange yellow when mature. This stage is seldom noticed by asparagus growers.

The second or summer stage is the one usually first noticed by the growers, and called by them "red-rust" on account of the elongated reddish-brown pustules which are seen breaking through the skin of the stem. In these pustules reddish, one-celled spores are produced, known as uredospores. It is the summer or "red-rust" stage that the disease spreads most rapidly and appears to do the greatest amount of harm.

Towards fall, or whenever the vitality of the asparagus plants is reduced, the third and final stage, known as the "black rust" or winter stage appears, due to the fact that the red spores in the pustules are replaced by dark-brown, two-celled, thick-walled spores. These germinate in the spring and produce the first stage again.

In Center, Stem Shows Spore Clusters; No. 2, Cluster-Cup Form; No. 3, Spores From Cluster-Cup; No. 4, Summer Stage Spores; No. 5, Resting or Winter Spores.

Rust may be largely controlled by spraying with resin-bordeaux from July to September, at intervals of ten days or two weeks. This is a difficult and rather costly undertaking and will hardly pay except on large areas. Dusting with flowers of sulphur has given good results. Cutting and burning all the diseased stems will help to keep the rust in check. Rust resistant varieties should be planted.

Feeding Goslings.

Goslings like cracked corn stirred up in skim milk, so do ducks. But if you have left ducks or goslings without water too long, don't feed them first, or give too much water. Let them drink a little, then take it from them for a while. Ducks especially will die quickly if deprived too long of water.

Colt in Harness.

The colt that is put in harness for the first time will pretty certainly have sore shoulders unless great care is taken. Hitch it with a steady mate and don't get the animal too much warmed up. A horse that's toughened to its work gradually and made to draw steadily stands the best chance of avoiding sore shoulders.

OUR LIGHTHOUSES REMAIN UNCHANGED

THERE is an odd thing about lighthouses. Whenever science comes along with an improved light a new lighthouse is not built for it. It is simply installed in the old one. The axiom about new wine in old bottles does not apply to new lights in old lighthouses at all.

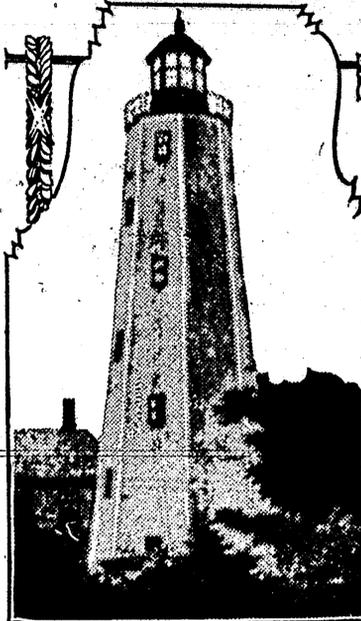

The modern age of lighthouses was ushered in with the building of the third Eddystone by John Smeaton in the year 1759, according to an article on the subject in the Edison Monthly. This lighthouse was important for several reasons. In form and construction it was superior to the lighthouses of the time, and the illuminant, though nothing better than two-fifth-pound tallow candles, aggregating 67.2 candle power, afforded by the steadiness of the flame the possibility of future improvement through the use of devices to direct and concentrate the beams.

As in the organic world there are creatures of a day, while others, like men, enjoy a reasonable longevity, so it is in the world of architectural construction, and lighthouses belong to the long-lived class. For one of these a hundred years is no great matter, and thus it happens that many a modern lighthouse has seen revolutionizing illuminants come and go, and has itself profited by the latest lamp surgery performed with ever-increasing delicacy within its lantern, whereby its ancient body has taken on new dignity and capability for its beneficent task.

Such a lighthouse may be seen at Sandy Hook, for although the first of these structures to be erected in America was placed at the entrance of Boston harbor as early as 1716, the New Jersey lighthouse is the oldest now in existence upon our coasts. At one time the illuminating material consisted of 36 lard-oil candles. At a later period oil burners were installed, while during successive periods kerosene was used in an old type float lamp, and electricity, then in the experimental stage, was adopted. After this there was a recurrence to the oil lamp, and at the present time incandescent vapor is employed. Here it must be admitted that lighthouses, when serving a double purpose, have not always figured as temples to the gods, for by the British, who built this lighthouse and put it in commission in the year 1764, it was intended to serve also as a military prison. It was constructed with a dungeon underneath, and just 100 years later, in supplying a foundation for an iron stairway, evidence of its former use was made apparent through the discovery of a vault containing a human skeleton. This old lighthouse also had its secret underground passage, the entrance to which was barred by an iron door located in a near-by hillside. Then, too, in this year of reconstruction, the holes that were made in the sides of the tower by cannon shots from British men-of-war were cemented; so if the tradition must connect lighthouses and temples, the one at Sandy Hook was certainly reared to Moloch, the god of war, though in the past 100 years it has lighted many a British ship on pacific errands into New York harbor.

With the growing complexity and advance toward perfection of lighthouse system, lighthouse zones are established at varying distances from the land, the character of the light, whether double or single, colored or white, fixed, flashing or intermittent, being determined by the requirements of its position and the use to which it is put as a signal.

While great elevation would seem a leading requirement if a coast light is to perform effective service, it is a positive disadvantage in certain localities and at certain seasons of the year, when, as in St. George's channel, foggy weather is the rule, for the fog clouds envelop the light and render it quite useless for the guidance of vessels below. The "fog light," or "occasional light," at South Stack, on the island of Anglesea, England, was constructed to meet these conditions. An inclined plane was excavated in the rock, and upon this a tramway was laid. The light, being contained in a carriage, which in clear weather was left at the summit of the incline, cal miles. The installation comprises six A-50 accumulators, with a flasher arranged to show single flashes, and a one-foot burner with a fourth-order lens.

THE SANDY HOOK LIGHTHOUSE

TOWREY PHILADELPHIA LIGHT

RUFFLED GROUSE

The following years saw the introduction of electricity into a number of lighthouses. Most important and powerful of all lights was and still is, in this country at any rate, the Navesink, which in 1898 was provided with a five-second white flash electric light, the flash having a duration of .08 seconds. Its bivalve lens has a focal distance of 700—like the new light installed at South Foreland, in 1904.

Electricity is now being used in the so-called "unattended lights." Lights of this description will, upon the completion of the Panama canal, guide ships on their way through Gatun lake. In passing through the latter the canal makes eight turns, some of these being at a sharp angle. The range lights are of reinforced concrete, "so placed in pairs that one tower above the other at a distance back of the lower one of several hundred feet." The pilot will direct his course by keeping these two lights in line, turning when the pair on the opposite shore appear in view. These range towers, rising to a height of about 60 feet, are sometimes placed in the midst of the dense tropical jungle that fringes the shores. In a few of these compressed acetylene, which will burn six months without attention, is the illuminant, but the greater number of the lighthouses are on a general electric light circuit. As Abbott states in his recent work on "Panama," the whole canal will be lighted with buoys, beacons, lighthouses and light posts.

MUST GET TO ROOT OF EVIL

Only Real Cure for Insomnia is to Remove the Causes That Have Brought It On.

"Pain is a sensation experienced by all reflective living things. It has many definitions, but is best described as an uneasiness, varying from a feeling of slight discomfort to extreme distress; and it may arise from the derangement of any function, also from violence, pressure or undue tension in any part of the body. It has many synonyms, anxiety, grief, solicitude, mental distress, uneasiness, and, according to its quality or intensity, it may amount to agony, torture or torment."

"The treatment of sleeplessness is to break the habit, which should be done by removing the causes, and these may be classified as either physical, mental or moral," further asserted Dr. Roberts, and he then urged the necessity of sleep, declaring it to be more essential than food, and that where drugs were resorted to they should be taken only when prescribed by a responsible physician, as all sleep-inducing drugs act as heart depressants. The scientist attributed the increase in insanity among boys under fifteen and girls between fifteen and twenty that has been recorded in the last decade to insufficient sleep.

The soap should be dissolved in the water by heating. An emulsion is then made by adding the oil and thoroughly churning the mixture. Water in different sections differs very greatly in the way it will combine with soap. If the amount of soap does not give a good emulsion simply add more soap. Avoid oily dips in cold weather. While the hogs are taking the dip, thoroughly clean and then disinfect the pens. In case of true mange the fence posts, trees, and everything against which the hogs can rub must also be disinfected. Use a strong disinfectant and plenty of it. After treatment do not put hogs back into lousy or mangy pens.

 Judge Kennedy was in town from Maricopa Monday.
 You can buy Ameco Chicken feed in small sacks.
 Doyle Murray was in town Sunday evening.
 O. T. Nye was in Santa Fe this week.

Every sack of Royal XXX Flour is guaranteed.
 Don't forget the big game of baseball next Sunday. Alamogordo will be here.
 Yes, dear friend, it has been slightly warm here for the past few days.
 Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Campbell motored over to Roswell this week and report having a pleasant trip.
 Save your coupons out of Royal XXX Flour. They are good for Rodgers Silverware.
 Seth F. Crews, Esq., of Oscura was in town on legal business Thursday.
 Dr. R. E. Blaney returned Wednesday evening from a professional trip to Oscura.
 Hon. W. E. Blanchard was in town Wednesday and Thursday from his home near Arabela.

Heavy crop of black Grama may be harvested on shares. Can supply same water for camps. Apply box 43, Carrizozo.
 Clay Van Schoyck was in town Thursday from White Oaks, taking the Golden State down to Tularosa.
 Humphrey Bros have just received a car of the well known and reliable flour "Old Homestead" and "Prize Winner".
 Physicians everywhere endorse the Standard Central Needle sewing machine. See Kelly & Sons, sole agents.
 Henry Lutz, who has been quite seriously ill at his home at Lincoln for several days past, is reported as improving.

Swat the fly! We will give you the swatter if you will call for it at our store—Kelley & Sons, the house furnishers.
 The fans witnessed some baseball last Sunday, when the Carrizozo team met and defeated the Ancho boys, the score being 24 to 4.
 Dr. J. H. Cody of Capitan will be at Dr. Paden's office in Carrizozo on Tuesday, Aug. 18th, for the treatment of eye diseases and fitting spectacles.
 Early next week we will have on display fall models in Millinery direct from "The House of Gage." Be sure and investigate.—Carrizozo Trading Co.

Joe White, the contractor, is getting the material on the ground for the addition Mrs. Gurney will build to her store room on the corner of Fourth street and Alamogordo avenue. The added room will be on Fourth street, next to Rolland Bros, and will be used by Kelley & Sons for their undertaking parlors. Work will begin on the addition within the next few days.

Welch and Titworth, of Capitan have just received a carload of Studebaker wagons. Now is the time to buy.

Ask us to quote you prices on Feed and Flour.—Car just arrived Carrizozo Trading Co.

Ameco Chicken Feed—makes hens lay—we have it in 24 and 48 lb. sacks.—Carrizozo Trading Co.

H. J. Garrard drove H. B. Hamilton and John Cole over to Roswell last Friday, returning Saturday evening. He reports the weather exceedingly warm there, and business very quiet.

Mrs. Hattie Pans returned last week from Alamogordo where she has been for some time past as assistant to the postmaster. She was delighted to get back into a live town.

James A. and Chas. Hunter of Kansas City were here for a few days this week looking for a location for a jewelry store. They will likely locate here about the first of September.

J. C. Klipinger of White Oaks will leave next week for a visit with his brothers and sisters in his home state—Indiana. He expects to be in old Hoosierdom for a couple of months, and hopes to meet some of his old comrades with whom he marched in the thrilling days of '65.

Oh, look whose coming into town—the Alamogordo baseball nine! This team claims the honor of having tagged every club with which it has crossed bats this season; and they will come up with all kinds of confidence in their ability to keep up the lick. But—they will have to play ball when they get in Carrizozo.

FORT STANTON

Mrs. George Gliver who has been ill is convalescing rapidly.

Mrs. Frances Weil who has been visiting Dr. and Mrs. McKeon has returned to her home in El Paso.

Messrs. Johnston and Ferguson of No. 4 visited Lincoln last Sunday.

Mr. Gentry, the postmaster, left Tuesday on a vacation trip to Denver.

Dorothy Smith entertained a number of her young friends at a birthday party during the week.

Dr. and Mrs. Laws of Lincoln motored up to the Fort Tuesday night.

Dr. Currie, Dr. Littlejohn and Mr. Hannah drove to Capitan last Sunday.

Messrs. Weber and Leech visited the U. S. P. H. S. cow camp at the Mesquero Reservation during the week.

While at Lincoln, Sunday Mr. Ferguson, official photographer of No. 4, secured some pictures for private publication.

Mr. Ferguson of No. 4 gave an enjoyable party last Saturday evening at one of the houses on the square. Dr. Brelsford entertained the same evening at No. 4.

J. J. Brown writes from Chicago that he is enjoying his vacation immensely, but as yet has found no place that he likes better than Fort Stanton.

The critical situation in Europe is followed with the most intense interest here at the Fort, as "The Hill," with its mixtures of races, might be likened to Europe in miniature. Serious as the situation may be in Europe, however, there is not expected to be any outbreak of hostilities here.

METHODIST CHURCH

(J. W. Hendrix, Pastor)

Sunday school at the usual time, 10:00 a. m. We desire to have your children and you to come and spend a short time on the Sabbath morning in the study of God's word. How can you consider you have given your child a fair chance and make no effort to make known to them the unsearchable riches of Christ?

Preaching both morning and evening by the pastor. Theme, 11 a. m., "Safer Deposit." Subject for evening, "Ancient Deliverer and Modern Need."

After we made the announcement a week or two ago we went on a trip and there were no services. Now comes the third of a series on "Social Justice." Would be glad to have you come.

At both services there will be rendered plenty of good music. The services are to be called on time and dismissed on time. We will try to give you in a brief way the lessons we desire you to have and let you go. Give yourself and us a chance.

Mr. and Mrs. Atwood Little arrived in town from El Paso Wednesday evening with their little son, Nonnie, who has been in a hospital in the Paso City for the past five weeks with a severe attack of typhoid fever. The little fellow is very weak but his condition is greatly improved. With his parents, he was taken over to White Oaks by Wayne Van Schoyck in his car.

Mr. and Mrs. N. A. Mason of Artesia are here for a few weeks visit with friends.

Once in a while—just once in a while—when the breezes spring up over yonder some place and come rollicking down the canyons behind a couple of spadefuls of dust, which they poke in your face without very much consideration for your personal comfort—then we sometimes slip around behind a good, strong building and indulge in the wish that Col. Theo. Heman had been more successful with his White Oaks railroad and that we, as a town were up there instead of here. Remember this is only occasionally, but that wish sure is a strong one while it lasts—and while the dusty winds are big and robust.
