WHY NOT MORE SHADE TREES FOR CARRIZOZO?

DEVELOPMENT OF COUNTY CERTAIN

History of Past Growth Will be as Idle Dream Compared With Activities of the Immediate Future

CHEAP POWER PUTS "KICK" INTO MANY ENTERPRISES

The mining journals of prominence in their respective fields are giving portions of New Mexico much publicity at the present time. Besides the Mining Journal and the Mining Press, the Mining and Engineering World of Chicago is also featuring New Mexico, as well as the Santa Fe Trail Magazine. That portion of the state which has been favored lies in Grant county and the contiguous country, and many of the articles have been prepared by Ferris V. Bush, a mining operator who has lately joined the newspaper boys of New Mexico, having purchased the Western Liberal of Lordsburg.

While the many and varied interests of Lincoln county has not yet been noticed in these journals, it is the opinion of The Outlook that within a short time this section of the state will develop material for some of the most interesting and thrilling stories these journals have yet from the southwest—particularly, New Mexico. The pioneers know what the mines of this county have done in the past; know of the fortunes which have been wrested from these claims under adverse conditions; know that only the surface has been scratched in most instances; know that despite untutored management and overwhelming expense, dividends have been paid. They know, too, as do many who have become residents of this county in later years, that the development of cheap power with which to operate the machinery which has so long stood idle in the many mines with which this county is dotted was all that was needed to make these camps again hives of industry, adding tremendous quantities to the world's supply of the precious metals. In the past, with so many obstacles to overcome, these treasure spots have yielded their wealth grudgingly and with reluctance; the years, it seemed, except from improvement to improvement with sluggish steps, as if nature were unwilling to acknowledge the mastery of man. But the light of a new day is dawning. For Lincoln county all is hope in the mining activities.

While operating one of the best propositions in the state, the Wildcat Leasing Company of White Oaks believed that the opening up of the other properties lying not far distant would be a universal benefit. They organized the Alto Light and Power Company for the purpose of furnishing the needed cheap power to these struggling operators. The line to Nogal and Parsons will soon be in commission, and what the result will be it is hazardous to forecast—how large will be the output one would not prophesy, lest he be laughed to scorn as an erratic dreamer. And while this company was organized primarily for the benefit of Carrizozo, which greatly desired electric lights and electric power, and for the mining properties at Nogal and Parsons, its possibilities may have only been touched. With acres and acres of coal at the door of this company's plant at White Oaks, how far it may in the future extend its vivifying lines is even at this time being considered by longheaded business men who see the possibilities from the start this organization has already made. Vim, determination and a little ready money, when harnessed with technical sense, will go a long, long way. And so with the power of this company. It may, in the not distant future, being distributing its power to the settlements and mining camps, to isolated ranchers and municipal corporations—many, many miles from the parent plant nesting in the historic surroundings of Heart's Desire—may be furnishing light and power to Carrizozo, Capitan, Fort Stanton and Oscura, not to mention the thriving settlements north of us, simultaneously with the city of El Paso the mines at Orogrande and the homes at Alamogordo, the big copper claims at Bent and the progressive little town of Tularosa—the while making life pleasant and business profitable on innumerable ranches hereabouts—when it finally decides to expand.

In the past Lincoln county has furnished much data for romance and development stories with the "kick" in them; but the future holds for it tales of expansion and growth in comparison with which the thrilling incidents of the past will pale in insignificance.

We of Lincoln county are living upon an acre of diamonds. Let's all get busy—and dig.

TAKEN BACK TO TEXAS

Last Tuesday evening Sheriff Chaves and J. B. Pettit, a deputy sheriff of Reagan county, Texas, arrested Irvan Gafford at the V. V. ranch near Angus and brought him to Carrizozo and lodged him in jail. He was arrested on a warrant issued by the district court sitting at Stiles, Texas, charging him with the larceny of thirteen head of cattle from a man by the name of John Christy. Mr. Gafford is a young man who does not appear to look the part of a cattle rustler, and as soon as shown the warrant waived requisition and accompanied Deputy Sheriff Pettit back to Stiles to answer to the charge.

SPECIAL TERM OF COURT

The regular term of the District court for this county will not be held this spring. This term should open here on the second Monday in March, but Judge Medler has decided to call a special term, possibly sometime in April. At that time the work of the legislature now in session will be before the court, and it may be important to know what laws have been repealed or amended and what, if any, new acts may be administered.

PROBATE COURT

A regular session of the probate court for this county will convene at the court house in this city next Monday. There is considerable business awaiting the attention of the court this time.

WE NEED 'EM

The Outlook wants some side-walks in town. And will lay a two-to-one wager that everybody who was compelled to be about town last Saturday felt the need as we do.

CARRIZOZO NEEDS MORE SHADE TREES

Now is the Time to Beautify the City by Planting Shade Trees. Should Make This Our Hobby.

COMMERCIAL CLUB AND CIVIC LEAGUE SHOULD GET BUSY

In a great many of the New Mexico towns, they are agitating the order of a car load of shade trees, in order to beautify the towns, which we think is a splendid idea. This is a work that Carrizozo should not overlook if we ever hope to realize the city beautiful. We may not be able to start with a car load, but any number that we are able to get will help greatly.

A few years ago a number of trees were brought to Carrizozo and planted in different parts of the town, many of the trees failed to survive, but those that did, we can point to with pride.

Since the planting of the first trees in our town we are told that there has been a small tree planting campaign carried on almost every spring, and we see no reason why this campaign should not be doubly strong, or even more so, this spring.

The town has taken on a permanent since the planting of many of the trees, and from now on, greater care will be taken by those who have trees to raise.

In the past many cottonwoods have been planted, huge posts which have proven worthless, such dying as soon as a few bushy sprouts have put out on the sides, like those that were planted last spring on the street leading north from Ziegler Bros. corner toward the Baptist church.

In the older cities and towns in this section, the cottonwoods have proven unsatisfactory, even when they grow and do well, the shedding of the cotton producing irritation of the eyes and nasal passages of residents and rendering life miserable for those who are sensitive to its influence.

There seems to be little doubt that the black locust is an ideal for this climate, being tough and able to withstand wind, the shortage of water and having no disagreeable feature in its flowering. These trees can be obtained in five to seven foot for the price of five to fifteen cents each and trees as large as should be planted may be had for twenty five cents each.

The growing of shade is as important an improvement to Carrizozo as can be made, and if the town will not take up the work of importation, private individuals should do so. We see no reason why the local Commercial Club should not get busy with this. If they feel inadequate to the task let them turn it over to the Civic League, the one institution that has done so much for the civic improvement of Carrizozo, or perhaps it would be better still if both the Civic League and Commercial Club would get together on this.

Let some public benefactor take this matter in hand and push it along, and have his name written in the future annals of Carrizozo as one of its chief builders. Now is the time to get busy.

MRS. HERSMAN PASSES AWAY

Last Monday Mrs. C. E. Hersman answered the call of the Grim Reaper, joining that innumerable caravan which is constantly moving into the afterworlds. The funeral was conducted from the late home of the deceased two miles south of this city by Rev. R. L. Day of the Baptist church and interment was had in the local cemetery.

In the death of Mrs. Hersman the community suffers a distinct loss. She was revered by her numerous acquaintances, loved by her intimate friends and idolized by her family circle. Her home life was one of consecration to her loved ones, while in her associations with the outside world, as well as in her family circle, she breathed the spirit of culture and a devout and edifying faith in the Christ whom she lived to serve. During the course of his remarks at the funeral obsequies, the minister read some lines which he said seemed to have been written with Mrs. Hersman's life as the subject—lines which were peculiarly fitting, and which are as follows:

"Rock of Ages cleft for me,"
Lips grown aged sung the hymn
Trustingly and tenderly.
Voice grown weak and eyes grown dim
"Let me hide myself in Thee."
Trembling through the voice, and low,
Rose the sweet strain peacefully
As a river in its flow:
Sung as only they can sing,
Who life's thorny paths have pressed;
Sung as only they can sing,
Who behold the promised rest.
"Rock of Ages, cleft for me,"
Sung above a coffin-lid;
Underneath, all restfully
All life's cares and sorrows hid,
Never more, O storm-tossed soul,
Never more from wind or tide,
Never more from billow's roll
Wilt thou need thyself to hide,
Could the sightless, sunken eyes,
Gleamed beneath the soft gray hair,
Could the mute and stilled lips,
Move again in pleading prayer,
Still, ay still the words would be,
"Let me hide myself in Thee!"

Mrs. C. E. Hersman was born in Philadelphia, Pa., February 25, 1833. Her father was Prof. John Eustace who conducted a young ladies seminary in Philadelphia for years. Later the family moved to Missouri, where Mrs. Hersman grew to young womanhood and received the ground work of her education under the tutelage of her father. She later engaged in teaching as her profession and she was particularly successful in her calling until she reached the age of sixty years. She was married to J. W. Hersman in Palmyra, Mo., in which state she spent the greater number of the years of her life. She was at all times an active member of the Christian church. Those who survive to mourn her loss are a daughter, Annie Hersman, a brother, W. E. Eustace of Wichita, Kan., two grandsons, J. H. and A. F. Roselle of this place, and several nieces and nephews.

SALARY BILL PASSED

The two branches of the state legislature have agreed on a salary bill for the county officers and both houses have passed it. For this county the salaries are: Sheriff $2400 per annum with $800 for deputies; for the clerk the same, for the treasurer and assessor $2400 without any provision for deputies; for the county school superintendent $1500; the probate judge $400, each of the county commissioners $400, while the surveyor is to receive $10 per day for not to exceed seventy-five days.

COMMITTEE REPORT SCORCHES GOVERNOR

Chief Executive Charged With Putting People to Useless Expense in Sierra County Representative Election

SAYS HE IS USING OFFICE FOR POLITICAL PURPOSES

The report of the committee on privileges and elections, refusing to seat F. M. Bojorquez, democrat, elected in Sierra county at a special election called by Governor McDonald was last week adopted by the house of representatives by a vote of 27 to 12. The report says the governor issued his proclamation for a special election, well knowing that Antonio T. Chaves, who had contested the original election of Bojorquez, had been declared a member of the house and had duly qualified and taken his seat as much.

Governor McDonald is charged with using his office for political purposes and putting the people of Sierra county to useless expense merely for partisan ends. The report further charges the executive with attempting to usurp the prerogatives of the house by declaring a vacancy where no vacancy existed, and the so-called election in Sierra county is declared "wholly illegal and void" for the reason that "long before said election was held said seat had been duly filled by the house."

"We further find" continues the report, "that the executive in calling said election and putting the county of Sierra to the expense thereof, was merely playing politics and that he well knew that no vacancy existed at the time said election was called and held in said district and that his efforts to usurp the prerogatives of this house in declaring a vacancy, and putting the people of Sierra county to useless expense of holding said election was done purely for political purposes, and in an effort to play politics."

DEATH OF JOHN REILY

John Marion Curry Reily, the little son of Mr. and Mrs. William M. Reily, died at noon last Monday from the effects of the severe colding he received a few days previous. The funeral services were conducted at the M. E. church Tuesday afternoon, the pastor, Rev. Lewis officiating. A large number of the sympathetic friends of the dead baby and the family were in attendance.

The death of little John is unspeakably sad. Born February 13, 1912, he had not yet had time to understand what the future had in store for him, but in the still untarnished days of bewitching babyhood he turned his innocent feet upon the great world's altar-stairs that slope through darkness up to God. The Outlook but expresses the sentiment of the entire community when it extends to the crushed and grief-stricken family its sincerest sympathy in this dark hour of affliction.

SYNOPSIS.

Joseph Hayward, an ensign in the United States army, on his way to Fort Harmer, meets Simon Grity, a renegade whose name has been connected with all manner of atrocities, and is headed for Fort Harmer, with a message from the British general Hamilton. Hayward guides him to the fort. At General Harmer's headquarters Hayward meets Rene D'Auray, who professes to recognize him, although he has no recollection of ever having seen her before. Hayward volunteers to carry a message for Harmer to Sandusky, where Hamilton is stationed. The northern Indian tribes are ready for war and are only held back by the refusal of the friendly Wyandots to join. The latter are demanding the return of Wa-pa-tee-tah, a religious teacher, whom they believe to be a prisoner. Hayward's mission is to assure the Wyandots that the man is not held by the soldiers. Rene asks Hayward to let her accompany him. She tells him that she is a quarter-blood Wyandot and a missionary among the Indians. She has been in search of her father. She insists that she has seen Hayward before, but in a British uniform. Hayward refuses her request and starts for the north accompanied by a scout named Brady and a private soldier. They come on the trail of a war party and to escape from the Indians take shelter in a hut on an island. Hayward finds a murdered man in the hut. It proves to be Raoul D'Auray, a former French officer who is called by the Wyandots "white chief." Rene appears and Hayward is puzzled by her insistence that they have met before.

How white her face was in the starlight, uplifted to mine. One hand grasped my sleeve.

"News! evil news of my father?"

"Of Raoul D'Auray; he was your father?"

"Yes! you say 'was' he is dead?"

I caught the groping hand in mine, and held it tightly in the grasp of my fingers. She made no movement, but I could distinguish her quick breathing, see her dark eyes.

"Yes; you must listen quietly while I tell you all I know. We reached here at dusk. There was a band of Indian raiders camped yonder near the foot of the lake, and so we crossed over to this island to avoid them. We stumbled upon this hut while seeking a camping spot. It was dark, and apparently deserted. The front door was latched, but unlocked, and we ventured inside, feeling our way through the gloom, until we came to a door leading into the rear room. You know the arrangement?"

She did not respond, or remove her eyes from my face.

"When we opened this huge mastiff leaped savagely at us. In the darkness he fastened his jaws on Brady's arm—the scout with me—and had to be killed by a knife thrust. Then we procured a light with which to search, and found the body of a man lying on the floor."

"Dead?"

"Murdered; his head crushed in from behind with an ax. He was an old man, with snow-white beard."

"How did you know he was Raoul D'Auray?"

"By this medal pinned to his breast," I answered, holding it forth, "a French decoration."

She grasped it, bending her head so as to see better, and for a moment, her slender form shook with an emotion she could not restrain. Involuntarily I rested a hand upon her shoulder, but the touch aroused her, and she stepped back, standing erect.

"The medal was his; he always wore it. But was that all? Was nothing else found?"

"There was a red army jacket slung across a box; but while we were eating later in the other room, someone stole in through the back door, and carried that away."

She raised her hands to her head, with a gesture of despair.

"I believe part of what you have told me," she confessed, her voice trembling. "It is in my heart to believe all, but I cannot. You are not telling me the truth—not all the truth. You knew of this house; you—you came here deliberately, and—and brought your men with you."

"I deny that, mademoiselle. We stumbled upon the place by accident."

"Oh, you drive me crazy with your denials!" she exclaimed passionately.

"I will not listen longer. You are Joseph Hayward; you admit that yourself. Not do not talk to me, or attempt to stop me! I am going to my father."

I stood aside and let her pass, yet followed as she entered the door. The interior was black, except for a slight glow as from a dying fire showing dimly through the inner door. The dead dog lay in the middle of the floor and she stopped, staring at the grim shadow.

"I will bring the light," I said gently, "if you can permit me to pass."

As the yellow flame illumined the small room, her gaze deserted me, to rest once more upon the motionless figure lying near the wall, which Brady had mercifully covered with a blanket. She stood still, her hands clasped, her face like marble. Still holding the candle in one hand, I bent down, and drew back gently the edge of the blanket, exposing the dead man's face and white beard. In spite of his violent death the features were composed, in no way distorted; he appeared like one lying there asleep. For a moment the girl never stirred, her attitude strained, her wide-open, tearless eyes on the peaceful upturned countenance. It seemed to me she had even ceased to breathe. Then she sank slowly upon her knees beside the body, her head close to the cold cheek.

"Father! Father!" she sobbed, as if in sudden realization of the truth. "It is you!"

"Her hat had fallen to the floor, and her wealth of dark hair unloosened completely hid her face. She had forgotten my presence; everything but her grief. I drew back silently, stuck the sputtering candle on a box, where it burned bravely, and left the room. As I glanced back from the doorway, odd shadows flickered along the walls, and she still knelt there, a vague, indistinct figure. In the other room I found a chair, and sat down, staring dumbly into the smoldering fire."

CHAPTER VIII.

Mademoiselle's Story.

In the intense silence, the gloom of that room lit only by those smoldering embers, with Schultz sleeping undisturbed against the wall, my thought could not be divorced from the lonely girl sobbing above her dead. Was she of dual nature, womanly and savage by turn, as the instincts of two races dominated her action? Yet this could never account for her distrust of me, her continued insistence upon having previously known me. Ayl and she meant it; there was no attempt at deceit, no acting in all this; her full faith in the charge was written upon her face, found echo upon her lips. She believed me to be another man, a pretended British officer, a traitor to her people, a scoundrelly spy. Yet she applied to him my name. That was the strangest part of it all.

Even as I started toward the open door the girl herself appeared, outlined against the candle flame. She had bound up the loosened strands of hair, and her dark eyes, dry and tearless, looked straight at me. I doubt if she saw Schultz at all as she came forward, stopping only as her hand finally touched the table. As I watched her, my earlier determination died within me; I could only wait in silence for her to speak.

"Joseph Hayward," she said slowly, the words rasping a little with her effort at self-control. "You confess to that name, do you not?"

"Yes, mademoiselle," I answered, my lips dry, my eyes riveted on her face.

"Yet you still claim not to be the same Joseph Hayward whom I have known?"

"I am an ensign in the army of the United States, and have never worn a red coat."

She smiled, but the smile was not altogether pleasant. Then she said slowly, "Very well; have it so then, I do not in the least believe you, but am going to speak exactly as if I did. I am a girl, alone, and must turn to you for help. It makes no difference now if I am of Indian blood and ancestry, I am here alone with you. I have got to trust you, rely upon your word, ask your aid. You claim to know nothing of me, or mine. That there may be no possible mistake I will tell you—tell you about him," she pointed backward, with her hand, her voice breaking, "and—and about myself. You shall know all, and then you will dare pretend ignorance no longer. Listen, monsieur. The man lying dead yonder—murdered—was my father."

She leaned forward, resting her hands on the table, for support, the veins in her throat throbbing.

"I wish you would at least confess a knowledge of my tongue," she almost pleaded. "It is not in English I think, monsieur, and it is difficult for me to speak in that language."

"It would be a pleasure to confess anything that would aid you," I replied politely. "But I possess small understanding of French."

Her eyes darkened indignantly, and she made a forceful gesture indicative of her true thought of me.

"You continue to not your part well," she said scornfully, "even when there is no longer a necessity. Bah! I despise this play acting! It is unworthy a soldier. Do you would have me tell over what you already know; you would make me stand here and suffer—"

"Mademoiselle," I interrupted swiftly, "I ask nothing. All I seek is the opportunity of service. There is no truth I am going to deny. To prove it I will say this—you have remained in my memory since the first hour we met. I desire your trust, your friendship; whatever you may tell me will be held sacred, inviolate. I will serve you though you speak no word, give no explanation. I beg the privilege."

I thought she would never speak, standing there before me in the dim light, swaying slightly, her bosom rising and falling with quick breathing. A great sympathy welled up in my heart, and all unconsciously, I extended my hands. She must have seen them, but she made no response, but the glitter of unshed tears was in her eyes.

"What is the use of our talking like this?" she said impetuously. "It is as though we exchanged compliments in Montreal. Instead we are in the wilderness, with danger all about us. You are what you are, monsieur, and I am a woman of the Wyandots. Let all else pass; I care nothing whether your thoughts of me be good or evil. I am what I am; what birth and conditions have made me. All I appeal to in you is whatever of manhood you may still retain. I tell you my story, because you swear you know it not; then listen, and you shall. No, do not move, but hear me; I would not do this without reason."

She glanced aside at Schultz, and then into the red embers of the fire, her eyes coming slowly back to rest on my face.

"I am Rene D'Auray, and my father lies dead there in the next room. He was all I had in the world, yet I knew little enough of him. He spoke seldom of his past life even to me. Still, I have much reason to believe that in his younger days he was intimate at the French court. I know he was a soldier, an officer of the king's guard, decorated for bravery. He never told me why he was exiled to this land, buried in the far wilderness, made a companion of savages. I never asked, although my heart ached to do so, for he was not a man to be questioned lightly, and I early learned that the very thought brought him pain. But I know this, for I saw a letter once, a yellow, creased letter, which I think he purposely mislaid hoping I would see. He wanted me to know, yet had not the heart to tell me. It was from a French comrade in arms, and there was a crest on the paper, and a great name signed. I wept as I read, for the writer loved the man to whom he told the story, and the words came warm from his heart. Whatever else you may know of us, Monsieur Joseph Hayward, you have never known this. It was because of a lady my father loved, a relative of the king. For her sake he fought the Prince de Miller, and killed him in the royal garden. It was a fair fight, but the king saw it not so, for it disarranged his plans, and my father had to flee France to save his own life. Then was he proscribed, a price set upon his head."

She paused, and sank into a chair, bowing her face upon the table. I stood silent, unable to speak, the sound of her voice still in my ears. She looked up again, dashing her hand across her eyes.

"I must be far more French than Indian to become so weak," she explained, ashamed of the emotion. "It is the memory of him lying yonder, monsieur, with no word—no last word—for me. So it was he came to America, but they would not let him rest in either Quebec or Montreal. They drove him forth into the woods, into the camps of Indians. He told me once about those days; of how he traversed the black waters of the Ottawa and met hardships on the great lakes, his companions voyageurs and couriers sea-bols, his only means of support the furs he could send back to Montreal. But he might not venture there himself, but was doomed forever to a life beyond civilization. His associations would have brutalized him, made him a fit denizen of those wilds, turned him also into a savage, but for one thing—he was a fervent Catholic. It was this which kept him ever gentle, sweet and strong. He possessed the passion to save souls; he became an evangel to the Indians among whom he lived. He was at Mackinac and Green Bay; he told the Pottawatomies of Christ, but they cast him out; he traveled to the villages of the Illinois, but the Jesuits were already there, and gave him no welcome. At last he found a home with the Wyandots. At first the task was not easy, for they were a savage people. They had tortured Jesuit priests to the stake, and flogged the Recollats, who came also. But my father won their confidence; he went forth with them to battle; he went with them against their enemies, and so they finally listened to what he said. He became Wa-pa-tee-tah, the white chief, and taught them of Christ Jesus. They became Christians because they were proud of him. He accomplished what the priests could not do, and kept the tribe at peace with the whites. The English came, and hated him, for he would not enter into their schemes, nor permit his people to. Only once did he lead them to war, against your General Clark at Vincennes.

"Exiled and lonely, abandoning all hope of ever returning to France, or even civilization, my father finally, to increase his influence with the tribe, took for a wife a woman of the Wyandots. Although I was born of that union, yet I never saw my mother, who died when I was but a babe. I am told she was of fair complexion, but jet black hair and eyes, the daughter of a French trader and Indian mother, able to read and write. My father loved her, and taught her much that he had learned in early life. When she died he seemed to change, to lose interest in the past, to cease to dream longer of Europe. He became more fully a Wyandot. I was brought up in the camps of the tribe, living in their wigwams, sharing in their prosperity and adversity. I played with Indian children, and was cared for by Indian women. I must have been ten years old, monsieur, before I first realized that I was mainly of white blood, of another race. Yet when this knowledge came it brought with it sudden ambition."

Her eyes were upon the fire now, and her voice had lost its harshness.

"I remember when I went to my father—it was in a camp on the shores of the great lake—and made him tell me more of his own life and the life of my mother. What he said opened before me a fairyland. I began to dream and hope. He taught me the French tongue, and all the scraps of learning his memory retained. He sent to Quebec for books, and we studied them together. When I was sixteen he sent me to Montreal, to the convent of the Ursulines, and I was there three years. Then—the Indian blood conquered, and I came back. The woods called me, and my father, besides," she made the sign of the cross, "God called me to the work I had to do."

"An Indian missionary?"

"To my own people. Not I was of no order—what was that?"

She arose to her feet listening.

CHAPTER IX.

The Return of Brady.

There was utter silence, except for the heavy breathing of the soldier still sound asleep on the bench. I could distinguish no noise without.

"It was like a cry, faint from a distance," she said, at last, "but I hear nothing now. Did you catch it, monsieur?"

"I heard only your voice."

"Then I may have been deceived, although I have the ears of an Indian. Some sound caused me to wheel about, and I faced Brady, who had just stepped within and closed the door. His gray eyes surveyed me in one swift glance, settling inquiringly on the girl, who had arisen to her feet. Schultz awakened, sat up on the bench, blinking sleepily.

"Brady?"

"Of course; and who have you here, Master Hayward? A woman surely, by dress Indian, and by face white."

"This is Mademoiselle D'Auray," I replied, not liking his manner of speech, "the daughter of the man we found here dead."

"She was not in the house when I left. Oh, I remember! The same perchance who was at Fort Harmer, the one you told me about, and who threatened to follow us with Simon Grity. Truly, she must have kept her word, for that black renegade is here."

"Heret Grity? You saw him?"

"Ayl, in the Indian camp out yonder. Not was that all I saw. There is something savage on foot, or I am no woodsman. I thought those devils might have other quarry, and come back here to lie quiet in hiding, but I am not so sure now that we are not the ones sought. This girl belongs with them."

She stepped past me, and stood erect facing him, the dark eyes frankly meeting the gray.

"Yet I am not one of them," she said slowly in her careful English. "I am Wyandot; those you saw are Missis and Ojibwas, thieves and murderers. My people are Christian, and are not at war."

"You were with them; with Grity," he insisted, but in somewhat kinder tone. "You came here direct from their camp."

(TO BE CONTINUED)

More Than He Needed.

"At the end of five hours and a half, if you are in town," said the judge, "you will be arrested on the same charge." "You may have five hours of that back," said the lawbreaker, "I can get along with the 35 minutes."

BILIOUS, HEADACHY, SICK "CASCARETS"

Gently cleanse your liver and sluggish bowels while you sleep.

Get a 10-cent box. Sick headache, biliousness, dizziness, coated tongue, foul taste and foul breath—always trace them to torpid liver, delayed fermenting food in the bowels or sour, gassy stomach.

Poisonous matter clogged in the intestines, instead of being cast out of the system is re-absorbed into the blood. When this poison reaches the delicate brain tissue it causes congestion and that dull, throbbing, sickening headache.

Cascarets immediately cleanse the stomach, remove the sour, undigested food and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver and carry out all the constipated waste matter and poisons in the bowels.

A Cascaret tonight will surely straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist means your head clear, stomach sweet and your liver and bowels regular for months. Adv.

It's an Ill Wind, Etc. "Poor Mr. Hennypeck!" exclaimed Brownson, sympathetically. "It wasn't enough that his wife should own and operate him, body and soul, Mrs. Hennypeck has now joined the suffragettes."

"Don't breathe a word," replied Smithson, "but Hennypeck is tickled to death. His wife speaks at all the outdoor meetings and is so hoarse when she gets home that she can't raise her voice above a whisper."—Puck.

His Fatal Mistake. "My poor brother," said the retired bank burglar, "made a mistake in the selection of a vocation and finally starved to death."

"That was tough," rejoined the exporoh climber. "By the way, what was his line?"

"He made a specialty of snatching purses from lady shoppers," answered the other with a deep, broad sigh.

FALLING HAIR MEANS DANDRUFF IS ACTIVE

Save Your Hair! Get a 25 Cent Bottle of Danderine Right Now—Also Stops Itching Scalp.

This, brittle, colorless and scraggy hair is mute evidence of a neglected scalp; of dandruff—that awful scurf.

There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its luster, its strength and its very life; eventually producing a feverishness and itching of the scalp, which if not remedied causes the hair roots to shrink, loosen and die—then the hair falls out fast. A little Danderine tonight—how—any time—will surely save your hair.

Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any store, and after the first application your hair will take on that life, luster and luxuriance which is so beautiful. It will become wavy and fluffy and have the appearance of abundance; an incomparable gloss and softness, but what will please you most will be after just a few weeks' use, when you will actually see a lot of fine, downy hair—new hair—growing all over the scalp. SYRUP OF FIGS FOR A CHILD'S BOWELS

It is cruel to force nauseating, harsh physic into a sick child.

Look back at your childhood days. Remember the "dose" mother insisted on—castor oil, calomel, cathartics. How you hated them, how you fought against taking them.

With our children it's different. Mothers who cling to the old form of physic simply don't realize what they do. The children's revolt is well-founded. Their tender little "insides" are injured by them.

If your child's stomach, liver and bowels need cleansing, give only delicious "California Syrup of Figs." Its action is positive, but gentle. Millions of mothers keep this harmless "fruit laxative" handy; they know children love to take it; that it never fails to clean the liver and bowels and sweeten the stomach, and that a teaspoonful given today saves a sick child tomorrow.

Ask at the store for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on each bottle. Adv.

Heroic Savers of Life.

If one could behold the scope of the work of the life-savers in a single glance he could see that these 2,000 men meet at a thousand stations on dark and lonely shores and exchange brass checks and bring these brass checks with them on their return to their life stations as evidence that they had patrolled the coast. Never has one of these faithful servants failed to come back promptly with the check of the patrol, unless he was halted by a case of distress and even then his fellow patrol, unless he was halted by a case of distress and even then his fellow patrol comes on to meet him. Scores of men give their lives to the devouring sea to save life and millions of property. There are now 200 stations on the sea and lake coasts of the United States. There are men in the service that have saved as many as 300 lives and literally every man in the service has been an actor in one or more of its 10,000 heroic stories. In 1912 rescue service was rendered to 1,671 vessels, carrying 6,300 passengers, the total value of these vessels and their cargoes being $11,000,000,000.

OLD SOLDIER WISHES TO HELP SUFFERERS FROM KIDNEY, LIVER AND BLADDER TROUBLES.

I am frequently troubled with kidney and bladder trouble, especially in the Spring and Fall. Being an old Veteran of the Civil War, a little exposure or cold settles on my kidneys, and then I am laid up with kidney or bladder trouble. Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root was recommended to me a number of years ago, and I took a number of bottles of it and was more than pleased with the results. I consider Swamp-Root the greatest and best kidney medicine on the market and it never fails to give quick results in kidney trouble, bladder trouble and lame back.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root has done me so much good that I feel if any words of mine will be the means of relieving any poor sufferers, that you are at liberty to use this letter as you see fit.

Yours very truly,

MAKE GRAIN ELEVATOR

Cannot Be Excelled for Preparation of Seed.

All Parts of Device Can Be Obtained From Old and Discarded Machinery—Total Cost Is Not More Than Five Dollars.

By obtaining a belt from someone who owns a threshing machine you can easily make an elevator for handling loose grain from one bin to another or for sacking. The use of this machine cannot be excelled when the time for cleaning seed grain comes, writes George Bersaw of Mora, Minn., in Missouri Valley Farmer. With it one man can furnish a steady run of grain into the fanning mill while the other runs the mill. The elevator also is handy for loading grain in a wagon box. One man can easily load 100 bushels with it in less than an hour. To make this elevator you will need four boards 8 feet long, planed on both sides; one secondhand drive belt 8 inches wide and 14 feet long; two 3 or 4 inch pulleys with shaft 12 inches long and two sprockets from an old binder, one 4 inches and the other as large as you can get it for easy drive, say 12 or 14 inches. Put a crank handle on the larger sprocket if the elevator is to be run by hand, or if by power arrange for a small pulley. The drive chain to work over the sprockets should be 8 feet long. Also bracket iron will be needed for placing the drive pulley on and for attaching the entire elevator to the grain bin. The cost of this will be about $5 in all. For dippers use tomato cans, or anything suitable.

The 8-foot boards are used to make the hopper spout through which the grain is carried. The pulleys are placed inside the hopper spout, about 8 inches from each end, and the conveyor belt runs over them. The sprocket wheels are outside of the hopper spout. The small sprocket is on the shaft of the lower pulley, and the power is thus transmitted from the large sprocket wheel to the pulley belt, to which the carrier cans are attached. A pointed stick at the lower end runs into the wheat and holds that end solid. A pointed piece 12 or 16 inches long at the lower end keeps the hopper working straight down into the grain. The triangular frame is used to keep the larger sprocket wheel on. This frame is fastened to the hopper by bolts and is shaped to fit on the grain bin.

Midwinter Hog Feed.

The most economical food for pigs farrowed in late summer to be marketed in midwinter, is millfeed and wheat-bran slop, in connection with grass and clover pasture. When the pasture fails, pour the slop over fine-cut clover-hay, mixing in a few handfuls of flaxseed meal; this makes a rich and nourishing food. In cold weather scald the hay. The last feeding month give ear corn after the slop is eaten.

Wrong View of Mxter.

Some of our leading wine breeders declare that we may increase the early maturity for pork production by breeding young and immature animals. These men view the matter from the wrong side.

Bad for the Cows.

It is a mistake to turn cows which are giving milk out into the yards in cold weather. If so exposed while their stalls are being cleaned or for other reasons, it should be for a brief time only.

World's Best Disinfectant.

Sunlight is the world's best disinfectant and germ killer. Give it an opportunity to do its work in your hoghouse. The average farm hoghouse has about half enough window-space, and this even is often improperly placed.

Building Up Dairy Herd.

To know the cow is one thing; to profit by that knowledge is another. Testing and obtaining a record must be followed up by systematic effort in weeding out and building up a herd.

PROPER RATIONS FOR LAMBS

No Animal Capable of Giving Better Returns Than Sheep—Good, Warm Sheds Are Essential.

As economical consumers of roughage and home-grown grains, no animal is capable of giving better returns than the sheep. Many farmers have found lamb feeding a profitable business. Feeding range lambs seems especially adapted to many farms where labor is available during the winter, and where one of the chief ends of stock feeding is the resulting manure. On such farms a band of range lambs will clean up the fields in the fall, utilize the farm roughage, and leave a large supply of manure, besides paying a profit for their food and attendance.

Good lambs, bought early in the fall, and started to pasture and fall forage, may gain from eight to twelve pounds per head at very low cost. Such lambs are in much better condition to put on full rations of grain, and will make better gains than those purchased later and put on full feed at once.

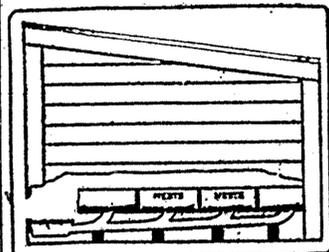

The lambs should go into the feed lot before the weather is cold and changeable. What they will glean from the fields after the first stormy weather will hardly offset the losses from exposure and dampness. Good warm sheds that open toward the south are best.

During the full feeding period they will thrive better if kept in bunches of forty or fifty. In order to do this, the shed may be subdivided. Yards and sleeping quarters must be dry and clean. Foul air and dampness are two things that sheep cannot stand. The feed troughs for grain should be fastened securely to the racks to prevent waste. Succulent feed adds to the efficiency of the ration. Roots and corn silage are the best for conditioning lambs at this time of the year.

EGG COLLECTOR IS UNIQUE

Series of Chutes Arranged, All Leading to Same Padded Pan—No Danger of Breaking.

Hens need a dark place to lay in; so it is convenient to build a small house for them within a barn or shed. But it is always difficult to get the eggs out of such a laying coop, if it is built economically. To overcome this obstacle I have arranged a series of chutes, all leading to the same padded pan. Each nest is connected to the main chute and each has a hole in the bottom of it and when an egg is laid it rolls down to the "egg-room" of my laying coop. A small door into the "egg-room" can be opened and the eggs taken out without trouble. If the chutes are carefully made there need be no danger of the eggs breaking en route.—Technical World.

Grass Is Main Factor.

When we apply manure to the grass land we get the lever under the very center of gravity of the whole farm. When the grass crop comes up the whole farm comes up with it.

Light Poultry House.

Have a light poultry house, admitting plenty of fresh air without producing direct drafts of air. The germs of most diseases cannot live in fresh air or very strong light.

Produce Prime Roasters.

To produce prime roasters they should be confined at about four months of age in small pens, with plenty of shade, be hopper fed with cracked corn, with a wet mash twice a day. This will insure the disposition of the fat in and through the bird's flesh, making extra toothsome eating.

Distinguishing Gobblers.

Young gobblers may be distinguished from the females by being heavier, more masculine in action and appearance, feathers more shiny, more carunculated on the head, a development of the "tassel" on the breast. A little experience will enable one to readily distinguish the sexes.

Change Hog Bedding Often.

Change the bedding frequently in the hoghouse. Dampness is a trouble-breeder always and dry bedding a necessity for best results.

Work for Stormy Days.

Every stormy day should be spent either in the woodshed or in the workshop.

MEN OF LAW AT A PREMIUM

Legal Lights Were Comrades in Misfortune of Man Who Was Involved into Card Game.

"One of the boys put me on to a little game," said the dry goods drummer, "and I went around to see what it was like. There was about thirty respectable looking people in the room, and one of them was trying to teach me the value of the cards when the police broke in and made a clean sweep of everybody." Next morning when arraigned at the police court I wanted a lawyer, and there was a general laugh in the court when his honor replied with a smile:

"I don't know where you'll get one. There are several in town, but all are in the pen with you!"

"It was so," continued the drummer, "and things might have gone hard with us had it not been for the fact that the judge was there, too, but had just stepped out as the raid was made. Nothing was said about it, of course, but he let us off with a fine of $2 each, and a lot of fatherly advice."

GRANDMA USED SAGE TEA TO DARKEN HER GRAY HAIR

She Made Up a Mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur to Bring Back Color, Gloss, Thickness.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray; also ends dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is messy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," you will get a large bottle of the famous old recipe for about 50 cents.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time, by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy.—Adv.

Never Grows Up.

"It's rather discouraging to own a runabout," said the ambitious motorist.

"Why so?" asked the man who travels by trolley.

"No matter how long you keep it, there isn't the slightest possibility of its ever increasing in size."

The First Case.

"Where do you suppose the expression 'not in it' arose?"

"Probably with Adam and Eve."

Representative A A Sena, of San Miguel county, shows he has a firm grasp on the educational needs of this state when he proposes by the terms of his bill introduced in the house that no person shall be appointed or elected principal or president of any of the institutions of learning in this state who has not been a bona fide resident of the state and in teaching therein for at least five years prior to the date of such appointment or election. As a statesman, the gentleman from San Miguel is a scream; as an apostle of educational progress, he is a lucid, lambent, lustrious luminary on the intellectual horizon. It is understood that this bill is still in the committee and possibly will remain there; but as the Albuquerque Journal says, "if our legislators want to make of this state a jest and a byword among the educated people of other states, let them pass the Sena bill. We don't know who is back of it. It may be that certain short-sighted educators, who could not hope to win on merit, wish to get the higher salaries through legislative restriction. We are loath to believe that the bill has any such inspiration. For the future of New Mexico it should be promptly killed and every friend of education in the state will vote against it, should it come to a vote. It is the introduction of such measures, and the support they have from men who know better, that causes people who really want to see the state go ahead, to despair at times." And just such measures as this, and the two other measures introduced by Mr. Sena and passed by the house, providing for bilingual education in this state—violently revolutionizing our school system and endangering the position of every teacher in the state—that calls to mind again and again the assertion of ex Senator Beveridge that New Mexico was not yet ready to assume the burdens of statehood.

Poor, dear old Santa Fe, with her crooked, muddy streets, no wonder there is a proposed amendment to the constitution changing the meeting time of the legislature to the summer months; it might be a little better, a little more comfortable. Representatives are poking fun at the conditions prevailing in the state capital; and while Mr. Rutherford, the gentleman from Otero, proposes a ship purchase bill so that a line of mud scows may be established between the capitol and the various places where the cats are to be procured, Mr. Swan, the corpulent gentleman from Quay, desires a flock of flying machines for the same purpose, which he believes will put a little ginger in the dreary old days in the dreary old town.

President Wilson is a firm, resolute man who has too much faith in himself to abandon any of his policies simply because they are un-sound, wrong or foolhardy. He is like the one time master of Belloli college who declared that "whatever is knowledge I know it and what I don't know isn't knowledge."

Mr. Bryan thinks there is too much speech-making in the senate. The place for speech-making, as every one ought to know, is on the Chautauqua circuit, where the orator gets something out of it.

Spain is now quite sure that it is this country's duty to restore order in Mexico. Why so impatient, dear neighbor? Hasn't the president just sent another confidential agent to Mexico to investigate rumors of disorder?

According to a report in one of the Washington papers, Secretary Bryan does not write the official communications that issue from his office. Is this quite fair to Mr. Bryan's office help?

An exchange says the heroic young king of Belgium is another Joan of Arc. On which basis, if our journalistic friend hasn't slightly mixed the genders; Senator Barth must be another Lydia E. Pinkham—a noble soul.

"How strangely silent one Theodore Roosevelt is," exclaims an exchange. One? Heavens, honey, there aren't two, are there?

Senator Gore wants to know if party platforms bind the candidates who were elected on them. Senator Gore is blind indeed if he doesn't know that democratic platforms do not bind anybody or anything.

It is reported that the woman suffrage law in New Jersey has been invalidated by a misplaced comma. As a result, the reform is in a comma-tose condition.

Possibly the New Mexico legislature is erring in not enacting some of the measures before it, but if so it is erring on the safe side.

Other commonwealths have their legislative giants as well as New Mexico. The Indiana legislature is wrestling with a bill to regulate the size of fishhooks.

A solution of the high cost of living is in sight at last. Cardinal Gibbons forces the early coming of the end of the world.

EIGHTH GRADE PROMOTION EXAMINATION

The State Board of Education decided on two dates for the eighth grade examinations, the first to be April 2nd and 3d, 1915, and the second, May 7th and 8th, 1915.

The pupils may take their choice as to questions on "Dunn's Community and the Citizen" or "Robert's History and Civics of New Mexico."

The questions in reading will be based on "Courtship of Miles Standish," "The Great Stone Face," "Legend of Sleepy Hollow," "The Father Land," and "A Life Lesson" Selections found in Curry's Literary Readings.

One industrial branch—Agriculture, Manual Training, or Domestic Science—will be included in the list of subjects for examination.

The rules governing the examination will be the same as used last year. Fee of fifty cents. Examination will be held at Carrizozo Capitan, and any other district that has at least three applicants on application of the teacher of the district.

FOR TEACHERS' CERTIFICATES

No more Mid Winter Examination the date other than institute examination being changed to October, the first Friday and Saturday History and Civics of New Mexico is added to the list of subjects for applicants for first and second grade certificates.

"The attendance at the San Diego Exposition and at the San Francisco Exposition during the summer of 1915 for a period of six days will be accepted in lieu of institute attendance, on proper evidence submitted to the Superintendent of Public Instruction, and that the State Board would prefer that the time chosen for such attendance would be during the meeting of the National Educational Association at Oakland and the International Congress; Provided, that such teachers make a written report to the Superintendent of Public Instruction describing things and events that they have actually witnessed, said report not to be less than one thousand words."

That the Chataqua at Mountainair and the New Mexico Institute of Science and Education be given the same recognition as was given them last year.

"That August 11, 12, 13, 1915, be designated as New Mexico Educational Days at San Diego Exposition and it is recommended by the Board that all teachers and friends of education in New Mexico, be present on the said days."

BY THE WAY

(Advertisement)

As one intimately connected with the Carrizozo high school, and a member of the committee which drafted the petition sent to the Senate and house of this state, in session now assembled, I deem it wise to not remain silent with reference to some of the insinuations made in these columns last week concerning the work of this committee.

The article to which I refer is the petition made by the Capitan Commercial Club to the same legislature asking that no action be taken whereby the Carrizozo high school should be allowed to participate in the county funds appropriated for county high school purposes.

One statement, in particular, appeals to us as being decidedly unwarranted; and was to the effect that, were the petition of local citizens granted, it would practically remove the Lincoln County High School from Capitan to Carrizozo. We supposed, of course, that the educational center of the county would be aware of the fact that, in the case of action favorable to Carrizozo, this school could realize only one-third of the funds the first year, allowing the now established school to fully accommodate itself to the new order of things, and be in no way embarrassed.

The trouble with these gentlemen is that they have not the best interests of the entire county at heart, for the Capitan school has had the use of the county high school funds exclusively at her command for the past two years, has a well-equipped plant, and should now be entirely able to make an excellent showing as an established institution on a "live and let live" proposition, which is all in the world the Carrizozo people are advocating. We do not discredit the legally established school nor the class of work which it is doing.

But the past two years have been amply sufficient to demonstrate a number of pertinent facts. Principal among them, that the Capitan school, with the entire funds exclusively at its service, and the prestige which the name, "Lincoln County High School" would naturally attach to the institution, has served barely more than one-half the number which the high school in Carrizozo has been able to serve with bare resources of the district. Furthermore, statistics to which all interested parties may find ready access show that the section of the county which would naturally seek the Capitan high school, even though it were not the county high school, has a high school enrollment of only 2.4 per cent while that of the district logically represented by the Carrizozo school shows a percentage in the high school of 6.4 per cent.

Evidently these facts are not mere accidents; there must be some reason for them. But as an obscure school principal, devoting my time to educational work for my district, and not as a political prognosticator, I must leave this problem for solution by wiser heads than my own. I must maintain, however, that the petition we sent the law-makers of the state is decidedly in order and certainly the embodiment of fairness, and it is straining a point to construe it as an attack upon any school or set of people. We might also remark that if the gentlemen who have taken it upon themselves to keep centralized in one section the resources of the county for higher education will give the question an unbiased examination, with an eye single to the best interests of those who furnish the revenue, the situation will take on a different aspect from the one they outlined to the legislature.

We also note that we have been honored with the title of pioneers in this business of dissatisfaction with existing conditions, but we would respectfully call attention to the fact that there are many other counties of this state where the situation is similar enough to make this county high school question an inevitable issue for the present legislature. We were asked to cooperate with other schools of the state in securing needed legislation, and if we have been the first to outline conditions in a straightforward manner, we do not object to the distinction.

Respectfully yours,
Andrew McGurdy.

LINCOLN

Miss Bessie Martin spent Sunday with Miss Mary Rohde at the Hulbert ranch.

Farmers are busy cleaning their irrigation ditches and preparing for their spring work.

The cool weather has kept back the buds and so far the prospects for an abundance of fruit are excellent.

A number of the young people were expecting to attend the ball at Carrizozo on the 19th but owing to the storm did not go.

About four inches of snow fell here on Friday night and another light fall on Sunday afternoon which with the rain has thoroughly wet the ground. This with the heavy snow in the mountains gives promise of a good season for the farmers.

Mrs. Josefa Montano, widow of Don Jose Montano died last week and was buried in the Lincoln cemetery. Thus one by one are passing away the old residents of Lincoln county. The family have the sympathy of all their neighbors.

SAVE THE COST OF SPRAYING

Martins and Bluebirds Should Have Houses Provided for Them Near the Orchard.

The American Bird House Journal says that farmers and orchardists can avoid the cost of spraying fruit trees by providing the purple martins with a residence in or near the orchard and encouraging these intelligent birds to keep down the insect pests. The paper produces evidence to show that the martins protected a certain orchard to such an extent that great crops of fruit were raised without any spraying at all. It may be too much to assume that the birds will take care of all tree pests; the San Jose scale, for instance, must be beyond the reach of any bird. But there is no doubt about the activity and the value of martins and bluebirds in fighting insect pests, nor any doubt at all of the readiness of these birds to occupy and take advantage of the nice little houses provided for them, provided the English sparrows are kept at their distance.

Office of Traveling Auditor and Bank Examiner, Santa Fe, N. M., Feb. 15, 1915. To the Board of Directors of the Exchange Bank, Carrizozo, New Mexico.

Gentlemen: The granting of Overdrafts in any form or by any subterfuge will no longer be countenanced by this department. This form of accommodation is not only illegal but is diametrically opposed to sound business principles, and you are hereby advised that the permitting of Overdrafts must be discontinued.

You are requested to adopt a resolution directing that no officer or employ of your bank shall pay or charge to the account of any depositor any check or other item of such depositor, when there are not sufficient funds on deposit to the credit of such depositor to pay the same.

This department is co-operating with the Comptroller of the Currency in this movement, and for your information I beg to advise you that that official has issued similar instructions to all national banks.

Very truly yours,
HOWELL EARNEST,
Traveling Auditor and Bank Examiner

GARDEN PLOTS FOR THE POOR

Suggestion Made at Washington That Anacostia Flats Be Leased at Nominal Rentals.

Vegetable garden plots on the Anacostia river flats for the use of poor families of Washington is the proposition which has recently been made to the commissioners by Charles Royle of Washington. The proposed use of the lands reclaimed by the Anacostia improvement project has been received with much interest by the commissioners and other district officials, and may be the subject of a request for appropriations when the next estimates are prepared.

The suggested plan calls for the acquisition by the district government of the river front, the subdivision of the lands into quarter-acre garden plots, and their lease at nominal rentals to such families as the board of charities may recommend. It is suggested that the cultivation of the plots shall be under the supervision of the weights, measures and markets department of the municipality.

Superintendent Sherman of that department said that he considers that the plan has great possibilities for good.

"Under proper direction," he added, "the gardens not only could be made attractive in appearance, but they could be developed to the point where they would support many poor families without furnishing extensive competition for Maryland and Virginia growers."

An act of congress would be necessary to place the title to the land in the district.

STREETS OF MANY LEVELS

Time May Come When Multiple Roadways Will Be Matter of Necessity.

Fifty years ago the notion of a 20-story building would have seemed extravagant. Now it is commonplace. We have with us some prophets who talk about the city of the future as a place of many stories. We have now but one level of streets. They foretell many levels, the Portland Oregonian states. Perhaps there will be a plane of streets for every floor in the big buildings. The streets will be laid on concrete arches and lighted by electricity. Keeping them clean will not be much of a task because no horses will be permitted upon them, nothing but gasoline trucks. The horse, amiable and useful creature that he is, must be blamed as the great defiler of the streets. When he has taken his final farewell of the world, dirt and flies will vanish too.

The need of some such modification in municipal architecture has become apparent. In a few years it will be pressing. Few single streets are wide enough to accommodate the population of the big buildings which border them in the busy quarters of our cities. There is always congestion, turmoil and delay when the cave dwellers pour out in a body. In case of a great fire there would be terrible panic and destruction of life. Besides all that, there is great loss of time in continually going from the top to the bottom of high buildings. The elevator service is usually exemplary, but it cannot work miracles.

With streets connecting all the tenth stories of the same city with one another the dwellers at that altitude would constitute an independent community. There would be another set of streets at the fifteenth story and still others higher up and lower down. Business would naturally tend to segregate its departments on different levels and an endless saving of time and toil would ensue.

SEEK TO INTEREST RAILROADS

Residents of California City Urge Them to Beautify Their Rights of Way.

At a recent meeting of tree planters in a California city it was resolved to request the various chambers of commerce in that part of the state to urge the railroads to beautify their rights of way, particularly their approaches to cities, all of which are slovenly and none of which are good.

The subject of railroad gardening has been agitating the whole country for many years, and it has finally been determined that hardy, drought-resistant shrubs offer the best material for permanent beautification. It is not advisable to obscure too much of the station or station grounds, for obvious reasons; therefore, few trees and many shrubs should be used, with very few flowering plants, for the latter require care, and railroads are most economical in matters where no direct financial return is assured.

Could the embankments be planted with low-growing, low-priced drought-resistant flowering shrubs and among these sown seed of native wild flowers, we would have a beautification scheme of effectiveness at low cost that would stand for all time to come with a minimum of care and expense; yet one that would forever transform present ugliness into tracts of beauty.

NOTICE OF SALE OF CHATTEL MORTGAGE

To all Persons Whom It May Concern - Notice is hereby given that by virtue of a Chattel Mortgage made, executed and delivered by John A. Cates, of Cedarvale, Torrance County, New Mexico, to Gross Kelly & Company, of Corona, Lincoln County, New Mexico, dated the second day of April, A. D. 1912, and filed for record in the office of the County Clerk of Lincoln County, New Mexico, on the sixth day of April, A. D. 1912, at eleven o'clock a. m., and duly recorded on said sixth day of April, A. D. 1912, in Book A-2 on page 253 of the Records of Chattel Mortgages of Lincoln County, New Mexico; and that under the terms of said mortgage the above-named mortgagor agreed to pay the above-named mortgage the sum of Five Hundred and no 100 ($500.00) Dollars on December first, A. D. 1912, with interest thereon from date of said note and mortgage, to wit, April second, A. D. 1912, at the rate of ten per centum per annum, and with the further provision that "if not paid at maturity and collected by an attorney, or by legal proceedings, an additional sum of ten per cent on the amount of this note as attorney's fees." And to further secure the payment of the above amount under and by the terms of said mortgage there is a lien given by said above-named mortgagor to the said above-named mortgagee on the following described personal property, now located in Lincoln County, New Mexico, to wit:

One twelve-horsepower Clipper well drilling machine, together with one string of tools, complete; slush bucket, wrench circle and two wrenches, anvil and one sledge

And default having been made in the payment of the said note, principal, interest and costs, as provided for in said note and mortgage, I, the undersigned agent of the above named mortgagee, under and by the terms of the said mortgage above set forth, have taken charge of said above described personal property and at the present time have same in my possession at Corona, Lincoln County, New Mexico.

Now, therefore, notice is hereby given that I, the undersigned, agent of the above-named mortgagee, will offer for sale and sell at public auction to the highest and best bidder for cash the above described property, secured by such mortgage or so much thereof as will be necessary to satisfy the amount of Six Hundred Forty-six and 00/100 ($646.60) Dollars, principal and interest, and Sixty-four and 00/100 ($64.00) Dollars attorney's fees, being the amount due under the terms of said mortgage on the said 8th day of March, A. D. 1914, in front of the General Merchandise Store of the Gross, Kelly & Company at Corona, Lincoln County, New Mexico, on Monday, March 8, A. D. 1914 at ten o'clock a. m. of said day: And out of the proceeds derived from said sale I will proceed to pay the amount due on said note and mortgage, as above set forth, and the further costs of this proceeding, and the balance or surplus, if any, will be paid to said above-named mortgagor.

Dated February 2, 1915.

DON'T KILL YOUR HOME TOWN

This week we received from the enterprising firm of Welch & Titsworth of Capitan, an interesting story from a German farmer living in Iowa, who tells of how he lost over $5,600 by patronizing mail order houses instead of patronizing the local merchants who had stood by him and befriended him when he could get no assistance from any other source. The story was printed in the Journal of Commerce of New York, Oct. 19, 1914, and no doubt is a true story. The story is as follows:

"We farmers need awakening to the fact that we have unmistakably reached the period where we must think and plan. I am one of the slow German farmers that had to be shown, and I am now giving my experience that others may profit, for knowledge is more expensive now than ten years ago.

"Twenty nine years ago I began my farm career. I had an old team and $50. Our furniture was mostly home made—chairs, cupboard and lounges made from dry good boxes, neatly covered with ten-cent cretonne by my girl wife. We rented eighty acres. Being a boy of good habits I got all needed machinery and groceries of our home merchants on credit, until fall crops were sold. The first year was a wet season and I did not make enough to pay our creditors. I went to each on date of promise and explained conditions, paying as much as possible, and they all carried the balance over another year. They continued to accommodate me until I was able to buy a forty acre piece of my own.

"As soon as I owned these few acres the mail order houses began sending me catalogues, and gradually I began sending my loose change to them, letting my accounts stand in my home town where I had gotten my accommodation when I needed it.

"We then had one of the thrickest little villages in the state—good line of business in all the branches, merchants who were willing to help an honest fellow over a bad year and a town full of people who came twice a week to trade and visit. Our little country town supported a library, high school, ball team, and we had big celebrations every year.

"A farm near a live town soon doubles in value. I sold my forty acres at a big advance and bought an eighty, gradually adding to it until I had 200 acres of the best land in Iowa. I then felt no need of asking favors, and found it easy to patronize the mail order agents that came almost weekly to our door. I regret to say that I was the first in the county to make up a neighborhood bill and send it to a mail order house. Though we got hit every once in a while, we got in the habit of sending away for stuff.

"Gradually our merchants lessened their stock of goods—for lack of patronage. Finally we began to realize that when we needed a bolt quickly for machinery, or clothing for sickness or death, we had to wait and send away for it, which wasn't so pleasant. One by one our merchants moved to places where they were appreciated and men of less energy moved in. Gradually our town has gone down; our business houses are 'tacky' in appearance, a number are empty; our schools, churches and walks are going down, we have no band, no library nor ball team. There is no business done in the town, and therefore no taxes to keep things up. Hotel is closed for lack of travel. Go down to the depot when the freight pulls in and you will see the sequel in mail order packages.

"Nine years ago my farm was worth $195 an acre; to-day I'd have a hard matter to sell it at $167 an acre. It is too far from a live town—so every farmer has said that wants to buy. He wants a place near schools and churches, where his children can have advantage. I have awakened to the fact that in helping to pull the town down it has cost me $5,600 in nine years."

FEEDING the MEN in the TRENCHES

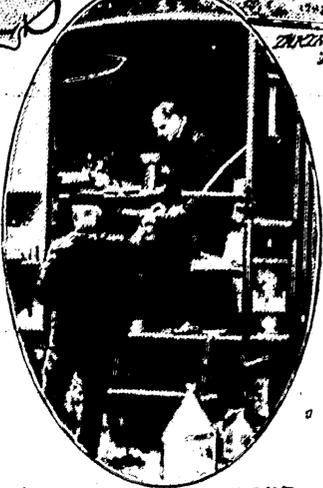

WAR'S big problem is to feed the warrior. Time was when the best captain was he who best could rob the country of all the stomachs of his fighting men; when armies lived off the land and grew fat when the larders round about the battlefield were well provided, or starved when the fortunes of war or the needs of strategy staged the fight far from human habitations. Not so today. Victuals and victories go together. In the long campaign big guns and high-powered rifles are less important than good bread and beef. If a modern army were to attempt to take its provender from the territory over which it traveled it would have to keep on the move all the time, for in a few days it would exhaust the provisions of even the most fertile countryside. Like a cloud of locusts it would eat bare the fields it traversed.

A nation going to war must think first how it will feed its million men in the field. A nation preparing over a long period of years for a life and death struggle with its neighbors must spend as much thought and money on its lines of military communication as on its fortresses and armaments. Science, which has revolutionized every branch of warfare, has evolved a commissary system which transcends anything dreamed of by the great leaders of other days. And the men behind the fighting line, the men whose business it is to see that the army's insatiable maw is supplied with a steady stream of provisions, are no less heroes than the men facing death in the trenches. It is quite as big a job to feed as it is to lead a million men. Indeed, the mistakes of a general at the front may be far less costly than the mistakes of a commissariat at the rear. Courage and enterprise may make the struggle even though officers blunder and reinforcements fail to arrive.

Imagine the vastness of the task of feeding millions of men on a battle line hundreds of miles long. The great battle line in France for weeks extended over two hundred miles. Facing each other on that vast line are probably between three and four million soldiers. They must get three square meals a day. They must get plenty of food, nourishing food, well-cooked and served hot. The concentrated rations in use by all governments and customarily carried by soldiers on the march for emergency purposes are not intended for day-in-day-out use. The soldier must have a varied diet, consisting of meat and bread and vegetables and something to drink—and a little dessert now and then—precisely as must the clerk or the mechanic or the professional man. How does he get it?

He wouldn't get it at all if it were not for the railroad train and the motor truck. They have been laying their railroads with the thought that some day a great war would come in which it would be essential to mobilize all their men without a moment's delay, and move them to some point on their frontiers. Therefore they built many and splendid railroad lines. Germany especially saw the need for railroads built for her army as much as for her civilians. There was no sense in arming and training a mighty host of men unless at the same time she built great railroad lines to carry them to the scene of war, and after they were safely there, to transport to them the mountains of provisions that they would consume.

The railroad, therefore, is the first necessity in feeding the army. All the countries in the war have good transportation facilities with the exception of Russia. Perhaps this is why Russia has done less execution so far than was expected of her at the war's outset. Over the railroad lines of Germany and France trains are hurrying day and night with stores of food.

Where there are no railroads huge automobile trucks are used.

At the beginning of the war the countries engaged took over practically all the automobiles they could lay their hands on. The machines thus taken have been used for every conceivable purpose. There have been skirmishes between motor cars armed with quick-firing guns and mounted troops of the enemy. Infantry have been moved with incredible swiftness by means of taxicabs which used to ply in the streets of London, Berlin and Paris. Big guns are hauled by motor tractors. Generals and staff officers speed from end to end of the far-flung lines in racing cars. But, most important of all, food is carried by motor trucks to hungry men. Heavy motor trucks, capable of carrying several tons each of food, are attached to the various field depots. Adjoining these depots are the bakeries, where thousands of loaves are baked by day and night shifts for the men at the front. Bread and other food are rushed by motor truck to replenishing points established at frequent intervals behind the second line of troops. Where roads are too bad for the heavier vehicles, light automobile delivery vans or even horse-drawn carts and wagons of every description are used to convey food to the replenishing points. From these small depots men carry food, bread and coffee to the "dugouts" where the fighting men rest, or even to the trenches, making their way to these danger zones by deep ditches dug for the safe passage of men under fire.

The cooking equipment of the armies has been devised for portability and efficiency. Each regiment carries its own cooking outfits. On the march the regimental cooks are busy getting ready the men's dinners or suppers. Immense "cookers" are mounted on wagons or automobile trucks, generally the latter. Each cooker holds gallons of strong, meaty stew, made of beef and vegetables. The Russians have an automobile field kitchen which consists of a motor truck which carries the stock of provisions and a trailer fitted up with a kitchen outfit capable of preparing food and coffee for 250 men at one time, or 2,000 men in each 24 hours. One of the kitchen utensils is a 20-gallon coffee pot; another a kettle of 53 gallons capacity. The big kettles are jacketed with glycerin, which enables them to retain the heat, so that it is only necessary to cook their contents for a short time and clamp down the lid. The heat is retained, just as in the small fireless cookers used by many housewives.

Meat must enter largely into the menu of all the armies. Where it is possible to get beef on the hoof, either by purchase in the neighboring country, or by shipment in cattle cars, this is obtained for the men, slaughtered and dressed near by and eaten immediately. Frozen beef is also largely used, though difficult to transport. Canned beef, dried beef and corned beef are in very general use. Canned stuffs of all kinds are available for the soldier of the present day. Canned pork and beans and rations of combined meat and cereal, put up in individual tins, are also staple articles of diet.

The English army recently made a change in the ration on the advice of the army medical board. The doctors decided that as Tommy Atkins was doing harder work he ought to get more food. The ration is worked out in "calories," which are really heat-units. A given amount of a certain sort of food will supply a definite number of these heat units. Formerly the English soldier's daily ration was expected to give him 4,000 calories. Now it is to give him 5,000, the extra thousand being intended to supply him with energy for the extra work he has to do and the extra nerve strain he has to stand. As a heat unit, one calorie should supply 3,677 foot pounds of mechanical energy. Therefore, a soldier's ration should supply 15,000,000 foot pounds of energy a day, which is ten times the amount of muscular energy displayed by a man doing a hard day's work.

The final outcome of the war depends as much upon the holding out of the food supplies for the rival armies as it does upon the endurance of the fighting men and the ability of their respective countries to keep the ranks well filled with recruits. Germany, according to reports, has an immense amount of foodstuffs stored up in her granaries—enough, it was said at the beginning of the war, to last for three years. Moreover, she has just harvested a bumper crop. Russia is one of the greatest wheat-growing countries in the world. She is sure to have plenty of food for her own consumption, though it is not so certain that she will be able to send her surplus to her allies, as the ordinary roads of travel are blocked by the Germans. England, while her fleet holds command over the seas, can bring almost limitless quantities of foodstuffs to her own doors and send as much as is needed over to her allies and her allies in France. This war, above any war of history, sees the armies of all the belligerents well supplied with food, and, still more important, with very definite and very good sources of future supply. It will take a long time to starve out any of the combatants—so long a time in fact that it is highly improbable that the war will be ended through hunger.

EXPERIMENT IN TEXAS

Valuable Light Thrown on Question of Fallowing.

NE Larger Yields of Corn or Cotton From Biennially Cropped Land Than From Annually Cropped Land—Oats Show Increase.

Significant experiments in the practice of fallowing land have recently been conducted by the United States department of agriculture at San Antonio, Tex. These experiments, according to the scientists in charge, demonstrate that the practice under such conditions as prevail throughout a large part of Texas is not advisable. In no case did the investigators obtain larger crops of corn or cotton from biennially cropped land. On the other hand, biennially cropped winter oats did show a slight increase.

This increase, however, is probably not sufficient to offset certain other economic disadvantages inseparable to fallowed land. While the experiments are not conclusive, still it is believed that they throw valuable light upon the whole question of fallowing for the purpose of storing in the soil an additional supply of moisture.

The practice of fallowing varies widely in different regions. At San Antonio the fallowing period varied from sixteen to nineteen months. According to a widespread belief land cultivated for this period but bearing no crop would retain so much moisture that any crop raised on it the following year would benefit materially. Some persons have gone so far as to assert that the quantity of moisture would be practically double that in land cropped annually. If this theory could be substantiated its importance to semiarid regions is obvious. Unfortunately the results of the recent experiments which are contained in bulletin No. 151 of the United States department of agriculture, entitled, "Experiments in Crop Production on Fallow Land at San Antonio, Tex.," do not bear out this contention.

The experiments dealt with three crops, corn, cotton and oats, and covered three years, 1911, 1912 and 1913. While no explanation is offered for this totally unexpected result, the facts speak for themselves. In the case of winter oats the biennial crop shows a very appreciable increase, but it is still doubtful whether this increase means real profit. Fallow land is not only unproductive, but its cultivation actually costs very nearly as much as does the production of a crop.

Together with other practical experiments in raising actual crops the investigators carried on a series of measurements designed to determine the comparative moisture content of annually and biennially cropped land. These measurements showed that there was only a slight difference in the moisture content at planting and harvesting times, whether the land had been fallow for a long or only a short period. Fallow land shows a somewhat higher moisture in the plots at planting time for oats but otherwise the variations were negligible. Summing the whole matter up, the investigators state that the results of these experiments indicate that biennial cropping, at least of corn, cotton and oats, is not to be recommended for the San Antonio region.

Sweet Skim Milk is Best.

Sweet skim milk has over four pounds of sugar to each 100 pounds of milk. Souring the milk changes the sugar into lactic acid and decreases the feeding value by so much. While sour milk will sustain life, and if given enough of it young animals will grow, they will do much better on warm, sweet skim milk.

GENERAL FARM NOTES

You cannot keep the pig from squealing with an empty trough before it.

Do not let another year pass without trying some new variety crop on your farm.

The New York state forest nurseries have a capacity of 28,000,000 young trees a year.

Don't cut the mane of a work horse. The long hairs are a protection to the top of the neck.

Sheep should be supplied with clean, fresh water so that they can drink when they want it.

The best way to progress with your farming and your work is to put yourself in the other man's place and see if you cannot criticize your own methods to your advantage.

For Five Years

I was Troubled with a Chronic Disease. Peruna Cured me Sound and Well.

Mrs. Maggie Durbin, 209 Victory St., Little Rock, Ark., writes: "I was troubled for five years with a chronic disease. I tried everything I heard of, but nothing did me any good. Some doctors said my trouble was catarrh of the bowels, and some said consumption of the bowels. One doctor said he could cure me; I took his medicine two months, but it did me no good. A friend of mine advised me to try Peruna and I did so. After I had taken two bottles I found it was helping me, so I continued its use, and it has cured me sound and well. I can recommend Peruna to any one, and if any one wants to know what Peruna did for me if they will write to me I will answer promptly."

Never in Doubt What to Do Next. Mary Jane, a child of five, "just loved" to attend the meetings of a West side church society with her mother, particularly so because it meant luncheon away from home. One afternoon at one of these meetings the minister was vociferously explaining the needs of the church and plans to secure aid, which seemed fruitless. In despair he exclaimed: "What shall we do next?" There was a thoughtful silence, then suddenly a small voice piped out: "Let's eat!"—Kansas City Star.

INDIGESTION, GAS OR SICK STOMACH

Time it! Pape's Diapepsin ends all Stomach misery in five minutes.

Do some foods you eat hit back—taste good, but work badly; ferment into stubborn lumps and cause a sick, sour, gassy stomach? Now, Mr. or Mrs. Dyspeptic, get this down: Pape's Diapepsin digests everything, leaving nothing to sour and upset you. There never was anything so safely quick, so certainly effective. No difference how badly your stomach is disordered you will get happy relief in five minutes, but what pleases you most is that it strengthens and regulates your stomach so you can eat your favorite foods without fear.

You feel different as soon as "Pape's Diapepsin" comes in contact with the stomach—distress just vanishes—your stomach gets sweet, no gases, no belching, no eructations of undigested food. Go now, make the best investment you ever made by getting a large fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin from any store. You realize in five minutes how needless it is to suffer from indigestion, dyspepsia or bad stomach. Adv.

A Stitch in Time

Colds, fevers and germ diseases are pretty sure to overwork the kidneys and leave them weak. In convalescence, in fact, at any time when weakness is aroused by a lame, aching back, rheumatic pains, headaches, dizziness or disordered urine, the use of Doan's Kidney Pills is a stitch in time that may avoid serious kidney disease.

No other medicine is so widely used, so freely recommended or so generally successful.

A Colorado Case

Oscar Bobbitt, N. Aspen St., Telluride, Colo., says: "I had attacks of pain in my back for years and suffered day and night. I also had to get up at night to pass the kidney secretions and I was miserable. Doan's Kidney Pills fixed me up all right in a short time. When I have used them since they have never failed to benefit me."

A GLASS OF SALTS WILL END KIDNEY-BACKACHE

Says Drugs Exolte Kidneys and Recommends Only Salts, Particularly if Bladder Bothers You.

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which removes the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys will set fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, which everybody should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this, also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.—Adv.

Claim Prophecy Fulfilled.

A conference of Bible students held recently at Keswick, N. J., revived an ancient prophecy concerning Egypt, the literal fulfillment of which, they asserted, has been borne out in history. The prophecy is found in Ezekiel 29:13-15 and 30:13. Part of it reads as follows: "It shall be the basest of kingdoms, neither shall it exalt itself any more above the nations, for I shall diminish them that they shall no more rule over the nations, and there shall be no more a prince of the land of Egypt; and I will put a fear in the land of Egypt." Since this prophecy was written, said one of the speakers, Egypt has been ruled by the Babylonians, the Romans and the Turks, and now it has passed under the absolute sway of England. Yet Egypt once was the greatest and richest of the world's nations.

THREE REASONS

Each With Two Legs and Ten Fingers.

A Boston woman who is a fond mother writes an amusing article about her experience feeding her boys.

Among other things she says: "Three chubby, rosy-cheeked boys, Bob, Jack, and Dick, respectively, are three of our reasons for using and recommending the food, Grape-Nuts, for these youngsters have been fed on Grape-Nuts since infancy, and often between meals when other children would have been given candy.

"I gave a package of Grape-Nuts to a neighbor whose 3-year-old child was a weakened little thing, ill half the time. The little tot ate the Grape-Nuts and cream greedily and the mother continued the good work, and it was not long before a truly wonderful change manifested itself in the child's face and body. The results were remarkable, even for Grape-Nuts.

"Both husband and I use Grape Nuts every day and keep strong and well and have three of the finest, healthiest boys you can find in a day's march."

Many mothers instead of destroying the children's stomachs with candy and cake give the youngsters a handful of Grape-Nuts when they are begging for something in the way of sweets. The result is soon shown in greatly increased health, strength and mental activity.

REV. R. L. DAY, Pastor
Services next Sunday at the regular hours, 11:00 a. m., and 7:45 p. m. Subject for the morning hour, "Adversity." If you ever had any adversity you ought not to miss this message. If you have not had adversity, you cannot miss this message, for you will have adversity some day. Job said, "Man is Born Unto Trouble, as the Sparks Fly Upward." So, come and let us help you get ready for the sure day of adversity, as well as help you bear past and present adversity. As soon as plans are completed and a few more pledges paid on our proposed building, work will begin.

METHODIST CHURCH

REV. E. D. LEWIS, Pastor
Regular services at the Methodist Church tomorrow at 11 a. m., and 7:30 p. m. The Sacrament of the Lord's Supper will be administered after the morning sermon. Come.

PHILATHES AND RELIABLES

The Sunday-school classes of the M. E. church, known as the Philathes and the Reliables, celebrated the 183d anniversary of the birth of George Washington, "the father of our country," at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Hamilton last Monday evening. The Reliables, the boys class, were the hosts, and to them fell the duty of making all the arrangements, superintending the decorations, preparing the items of amusement and providing the refreshments. They proved themselves equal to the occasion in every particular. The decorations, consisting of flags large and small and yards of bunting festooned and draped artistically about the rooms, attested to the patriotism of the young gentlemen, while the notorious truthfulness of our nation's daddy was brought out in the decorative scheme by innumerable hatchets—mugs, tablets to the memory of the little colonial patriot.

The boys, satisfied that they had a pleasant surprise in store for the young ladies, were themselves happily surprised when each of the Philathes appeared garbed as Martha Washington.

The pastimes of the evening consisted of a guessing contest, which tried the intellects of those present while the amusement of the occasion was a web—and what a web. It was in every sense of the word a tangled web when one tries to imagine some twenty Martha Washingtons and an equal number of up to date twentieth-century young men in one gigantic effort to trace the ribbon they have been given to its end for the purpose of locating the prize. In one room and thru another, up to the ceiling and down in the basement, out in the yard and through the garage they were led on their quest for the trophy. It was great sport, it was rare fun.

Some forty-two guests were present to enjoy the hospitality of the Reliables, which was "topped off" with ice cream and cake—boy-served refreshments to as jolly a crowd as was ever brought together in Carrizozo.

WASHINGTONS BIRTHDAY BALL

The Washingtons Birthday ball that was given Monday evening at the Railroad Men's Club House was well attended and a most enjoyable time was had by all. About sixty guests were present and dancing was engaged in until after mid-night, the music being furnished by Geo. Ferguson. F. F. Mudge, the manager, is endeavoring to conduct the affairs of the club house in a manner that is entirely satisfactory to the employes, and the railroad men in general seem to appreciate his efforts.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to express our heartfelt thanks to our friends and neighbors for their many kindnesses shown us during the last illness and death of our darling little boy.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Reily.

The Womans Missionary Society of the M. E. Church met Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. H. B. Hamilton. The subjects discussed were: "Korean" for the foreign subject and "Mountains and Mines" for the home subject. After the program was rendered, which was presided over by Mrs. E. D. Lewis, delicious refreshments were served. A large number were present and a delightful afternoon was had.

John Wycliffe Judson Haywood, arrived on Monday morning, February 22, to make his home with Rev. and Mrs. Herbert Haywood. The mother and child are doing nicely in their cottage home; and Miss Spellman says the young preacher is already talking in Latin and Greek.—Contributed.

Prepare for the hot summer days now, by getting a Revonoc coal-oil cooker at N. B. Taylor & Sons. Has all the latest improvements.
