THREE FORCES OUT TO DEFEAT WILSON

"Drys," Suffragists and German Americans Full of Resentment at Attitude of Wilson and Bryan

WILSON'S NOMINATION MADE POSSIBLE BY PROHIBITIONISTS

Writing of the possibilities of the presidential election in 1916, John Temple Graves says that a statement is current in political circles that a coalition is being formed to prevent, if possible, the nomination of President Wilson. It is a regular "triple entente," composed of some powerful, but not well organized, forces in American public life.

The "triple entente" includes leaders in the Prohibition party, the woman suffrage party and the German American element.

The Prohibitionists and the suffragists have just emerged from their great first trial before the American congress, where each of them exhibited amazing strength and scored astonishing success. The Prohibitionists actually carried the house by 197 to 189 votes, but lacked two-thirds majority. The suffragists once mustered 174 out of 204 votes in the house on a motion to submit the constitutional amendment.

Each of the movements regard the struggle before congress as the crowning event of their generation-long struggle.

Leaders of both declare they received no encouragement from the president. They expected much from him. The Prohibitionists declare delegates favorable to them held the balance of power in the Baltimore convention and that they really nominated Wilson.

Now these two great organizations are going out to work for 1916. These organizations have settled in their minds that Wilson must not be re-elected.

The thousands of German-American citizens are reported as being especially hostile to the administration. They hold Wilson and Bryan responsible for what they allege is a pro-allies sympathy prevailing in this country.

They also are to be drawn into this combination of hostility to the administration.

The Crystal theatre has been keeping up its reputation for giving its patrons their money's worth this week, and good crowds have been in attendance. To close week with something a little better than the good things, Manager Dingwall has been showing the feature of Saturday evening's entertainment will be a 4-reel program. It is going to be mighty interesting, and the people should be there and be royally entertained. Those who were present last Saturday evening and witnessed the great political drama entitled the "Governor's Veto" felt they had been given a rare treat. But tomorrow evening's program will surpass all former attractions. Don't fail to be there.

LINCOLN COUNTY

WOMAN PARDONED

Governor McDonald has granted a pardon to Lillie C. Klasner of this county who was convicted of stealing calves in 1912 and was sentenced to serve from three to four years in the state penitentiary, which sentence was affirmed by the state supreme court in December of last year. In his order granting the pardon, the governor says:

"Whereas the said Lillie C. Klasner is in such state of health that any such imprisonment would probably be disastrous to her, both physically and mentally:

"Now therefore, I, William C. McDonald, governor of New Mexico, do hereby grant to the said Lillie C. Klasner a pardon for the said offence of which she was convicted, upon condition that she leave the state of New Mexico and remain beyond its limits during the remainder of her life: and that if she shall return to the state of New Mexico, she may then be taken into custody and imprisoned in the state penitentiary for the term specified in the sentence of said district court."

OPERETTA TO BE GIVEN SOON

The High School Department has been working for some time on the preparation of an Operetta entitled, "Pauline, or an Eventful Day." This is one of Chas. St. Gabriels' most delightful creations. The lines full of spice and action. With a continuation of the present earnest and enthusiastic work this musical treat should be ready in about two weeks. Watch for the date—You'll like the performance.

JOHN COLE ESTATE

The Probate court last Monday entertained the petition of Mrs. John H. Cole asking for letters of administration of the estate of her deceased husband. The matter was presented to the court by Mrs. Cole's attorney, H. B. Hamilton, and the letters will be issued as soon as the bond of the administratrix has been filed and approved by the judge. O. T. Nye and Tom Wallace were appointed appraisers of the estate, and the report filed by them shows an estate amounting to approximately $15,000.

RECEIVES SAD NEWS

A card received by friends in the city gives the news of the death of the three-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Reily of Carrizozo, who died some time ago of meningitis, following severe burns from boiling water. Mr. and Mrs. Reily formerly lived in Roswell, and have many warm friends here who will sympathize deeply with them for this terrible accident and the sorrow it brought to their home.—Roswell News.

MR. MARRON PASSES LIE TO GOVERNOR

State Treasurer Declares Specifically that Reflection by McDonald is False and Says Executive Knows It

NOT ONLY HONEST MAN IN STATE, SAYS TREASURER

That the governor's statement in his veto message of the deficiency bill that the state treasurer neglected his official duty is "false" is alleged by State Treasurer O. N. Marron in a letter sent to the executive, says the New Mexican. Mr. Marron further declares that the governor "knew it was false" when he penned it. Mr. Marron specifically denies the charge of neglect, adducing as evidence the fact among other things that he withdrew $10,000 in state funds from the First State Bank of Las Cruces when he knew it was insolvent, without "temporizing." Mr. Marron's letter follows:

"Your message containing your veto of House Bill No. 358 appears in this evening issue of the New Mexican and I notice that you take occasion to use the following language in partial justification of that veto:

"Both (auditor and state treasurer) have their business and various employments that apparently are necessary for themselves, to the neglect of their official duties, or at any rate, seem to be responsible for the necessity, as they see it, for extra clerk hire in their offices. He (auditor) has not spent in my opinion, from observation, at the outside, to exceed two hours a day in the capitol during the past year, and the state treasurer has been here less.

"I would be false to my family and myself and to the office which I hold and to the people who honored me that office, did I not resent the false imputation contained in that message. If it is your conception or the duties of the state treasurer that he should do the mere bookkeeping and be the clerk, your conception of the duties of that office is false.

"My conception of the duties of the state treasurer is different and those duties are higher and greater than of being clerk. I am not a clerk, and when you say that I have neglected any duty imposed upon me as state treasurer, that statement is false and you know it when you penned it.

"You know that as state treasurer I had on deposit with the First State Bank of Las Cruces, ten thousand dollars ($10,000) of the people's money; true, that deposit was protected by a bond, but when it came to my notice in December, 1913, that there was some question of the solvency of this bank, in the performance of my duties as state treasurer, which you say I neglect, I did not temporize and put off indefinitely the withdrawal of that deposit, but it was done then, and when this institution was placed in the hands of a receiver he did not find any of the funds of the people which the state treasurer is charged with conserving in that institution.

"Too, when you attempted to force me to invest the sacred school moneys in an investment that meant the loss of thousands and thousands of dollars to the schools and I successfully resisted that attempt in the supreme court of the state, I was performing what I conceived to be my duty.

"In numerous other instances that it is not necessary for me here to direct your attention to, known by you, I have performed my duties and not neglected them, resulting in a saving to the taxpayers of the state and when you cry 'holier than thou,' do not deceive yourself in the belief that you are the only man in the state.

"Yes, it is true that I have other business than that of state treasurer, but in the care of my business and profession I have not neglected the duties of my office as state treasurer and will not.

"In conclusion, let me direct your attention to a conversation between us some days ago, wherein I told you that were you opposed to the legislature reimbursing me for the money paid by me for clerk hire that I would not ask it. As you will recall, in substance I said:

"Although I believe that I should be reimbursed for the seventy-five dollars (75.00) a month which I have paid out of my pocket for the clerk hire, yet rather than have a controversy on this matter with the governor, a member of my party, I will not ask it, and if you are opposed I will not ask reimbursement but will pay from my own funds the amount."

"You told me that you were not opposed but favored my reimbursement. Do you think you have been fair to me? Did you tell me what you did for a purpose?"

"However I expect that you will now deny that you said this or that this conversation took place but let me say to you that those who know you best expect you to deny what I assert in that regard, but honesty to you compels me to say that no matter how much you deny, your denial will not carry conviction to them."

BETTER PAY FOR JURYMEN

A bill has been passed by both houses of the legislature to increase the pay of district court jurymen to $3 per day. This will be appreciated by every one, as it often happens that a man who serves on jury for $2 per day the amount paid heretofore had to pay $3 to get man to work in his place while he was thus serving.

Also a bill has passed to pay clerks and judges at Justice of the Peace elections.

PROPOSED CHANGE IN MAIL SCHEDULE

Information Received Here to the Effect that Service is to be Reduced to Three Days Per Week

COMMERCIAL CLUB TAKES PROMPT ACTION IN MATTER

Postmaster Haley received information the first of the week that an effort was being made to change the Carrizozo-Roswell mail route by some parties who were interested in having the service reduced to three days per week instead of the seven-day service as under the present contract. Immediate action was taken by the local commercial club, and strong letters of protest to the proposed change were written the department at Washington. It is believed the change will not be made, although replies to the letters and resolutions have not yet been received by the club.

The line as now established serves some fourteen post offices directly, and several others indirectly, getting the mail to the people along the river in good time. As a means of transportation, the route immediately serves something like 5,000 people, all of whom, or the great majority of whom at least, depend absolutely on the mail car for transportation between the terminal points. Its abandonment would work a distinct hardship on these people, while a change in the nature of a reduction of the present service would be almost as bad.

It is understood that Mr. Farnsworth, who is directly interested in the mail contract as it now exists, is himself opposed to any change being made in the present schedule and in all probability the proposed change will not be put into effect. However, the action taken by the commercial club is highly commendable, showing the spirit of the men composing this organization, and The Outlook, while taking an optimistic view of the matter, awaits the replies from the department with considerable interest.

TERMS OF COURT

A bill has been passed by the legislature and signed by the governor changing the terms of court in this, the third, judicial district. The provisions of this bill are as yet unknown to the court officials here, but it is understood that the regular terms here will probably be held in May and November. As soon as the information is available The Outlook will inform its readers of the dates upon which the district court will open in this county.

The MAID of the FOREST

By RANDALL PARRISH
ILLUSTRATED by D. J. LAVIN
COPYRIGHT A. C. McCLURG & CO., 1913

SYNOPSIS.

Joseph Hayward, an ensign in the United States army, on his way to Fort Harmer, meets Simon, a renegade whose name is connected with all manner of atrocities, also headed for Fort Harmer, with a message from the British general, Hamilton. Hayward guides him to the fort. At General Harmer's headquarters Hayward meets Rene D'Auray, who professes to recognize him, although he has no recollection of ever having seen her before. Hayward volunteers to carry a message for Harmer to Sandusky, where Hamilton is stationed. The northwest Indian tribes are ready for war and are only held back by the refusal of the friendly Wyandots to join. The latter are demanding the return of the priest, a religious teacher, whom they believe to be a prisoner. Hayward's mission is to assure the Wyandots that the man is not held by the soldiers. Rene asks Hayward to let her accompany him. She tells him that she is a quarter-blood Wyandot and a missionary among the Indians. She has been in search of her father, who she believes has been taken away before, but in a British uniform. Hayward refuses her request and starts for the north accompanied by a scout named Brady and a private soldier. They come on the trail of a war party and to escape from the Indians take shelter in a hut on an island. Hayward finds a murdered man in the hut. It proves to be Rene D'Auray, a former French officer who is called by the Wyandots "White Chief." Rene and Hayward are grieved by her insistence that they have met before. Rene recognizes the murdered man as her father, who was known among the Indians as "Wa-pa-to-ah." She tells Hayward her father was exiled from the French court and had spent his life among the Indians as a missionary. Brady reports seeing a band of Indians in the vicinity and with them Simon Dury. Brady's evidence convinces the girl that there is a British officer by the name of Hayward, who resembles the American. They find escape from the island cut off.

Brady lunged forward his rifle, yet hesitated, fearing to fire. Whatever it might be—animal or man—the thing was coming directly toward us, swimming with long, stringy locks of wet hair dangling to the shoulders. It was a man beyond doubt, yet for the instant I could not determine whether red or white. As he stood there sunk to his armpits in water, he beheld us for the first time, and there burst from his lips a sudden, guttural exclamation of alarm. With the strange sound Schultz leaped forward, lumbering against me as he paused, and splashed his way out toward the fellow, uttering some exclamation in his native tongue. He reached him, the two voices greeting each other.

"Well!" exclaimed Brady in disgust. "If it ain't another Dutchman. Come in here, you!"

The two waded ashore onto the sand, Schultz's heavy hand grasping his companion's arm, and helping him along. I saw a face white and ghostly to the starlight, lean, smooth shaven, looking emaciated against the long, dark hair, the eyes bright with fanaticism. He was a tall, spare man, shaking so he could hardly stand. The very sight of him aroused my sympathy.

"Don't be afraid," I said soothingly. "We're all white. How did you come here?"

His eyes looked at me as I spoke; then shifted to Schultz's face in silent questioning. The latter was breathing hard, but managed to explain.

"He not talk English yet, mynheer. I tell you what he say mit me—ho vos a Dutch preacher; yaw, mine Gott; yust over my mine own countries; ho vos named Adrian Block."

"Did he swim all the way?" asked Brady grinning, but Schultz kept his eyes fastened on me, held by the one thought to which he sought to give utterance.

"Ho vos Moravian, mynheer; vot you call mis-sionary—so? Ho vos mouth in dees country, an' know only to preach."

The girl leaning forward, interrupted with a whisper:

"I recognize the man, monsieur; he was the prisoner I told you of in the Indian camp—the Protestant."

"They let him only mit one guard, an' after while, dot fellow ho fall asleep. Den he got loose mit his bonds, an' creep down mit der shore of der lake where a boat was. So he drift out on der water; but der boat leak, an' go down, leaving him mit nottings. Dot was it, mynheer. Den he swim som' an' pray mooch, an' so com' here mit us, already."

"Where did the Indians go?"

"Up mit der lakeshore—so like dis," waving his hand.

"All of them? The two white men also?"

Schultz repeated the question, and Block answered, never once removing his eyes from mademoiselle.

"He know not what became of der little man; he see him not for long while, but der big man he go mit der Infuns—yaw, he tells dem der way, an' talk all der time."

"We have got the situation clear enough," concluded Brady, coolly. "Whenever that red coat is, he evidently knows the best way to this island, and the six we're in. So far as I can see there is nothing left us but to fight. We can't get away now; the boat is useless, and those Infuns have blocked the ford. That's exactly where they are now, watchin' for us to attempt to cross. The only question is: Where can we hold out the longest? I'm fer goin' back to the house."

"And I also," I said, deciding instantly, and as quickly assuming command. "There is small chance of our holding out long against those fellows, but we'll do the best we can. What about you, mademoiselle?"

"I go with you," she answered quietly.

"Against your own people?"

"Those are not my people! They are outlaws, renegades, led by the murderer of my father."

"Then let us go back; every moment lost will count against us. Pick up the packs. Brady, you lead off; Schultz, take care of the preacher and keep his tongue still."

The house was exactly as we left it, a few red embers on the hearth alone shedding spectral light about the main room, as we groped our way forward. There were heavy wooden bars to fit across the doors, and I secured these as soon as I deposited my pack on the floor.

"Mademoiselle," I said, staring about at the blank walls in some perplexity. "You know this place better than any of us; surely it was not erected here in the wilderness without some provision for defense in case of attack. Are those walls solid?"

"No, monsieur; they were made tight, so no gleam of light would ever show without, but there are gunports here—see."

She slipped aside a small wooden shutter, fitted ingeniously between the logs, revealing an opening sufficient for a rifle barrel.

"There are four along this wall, and as many opposite. At the rear you must stand on the bench, so as to fire above the shed roof."

"Leave that preacher alone, and open them up, Schultz," I commanded sharply. "There is not light enough here now to show without. Now, Brady, see if there are any extra guns in the shack, or ammunition. Lay everything out here convenient. A rifle? Good! We'll give that to our Moravian friend; he may be opposed to war on principle, but, by all the gods! he'll fight now, if Schultz can pound the truth into him. What is that, mademoiselle? Powder and ball in the big chest; show Brady where it is. This isn't going to be such a one-sided affair after all. Five of us, counting Block, who may not know which end of the gun to point. I am going to scout outside and see when those fellows cross over."

Brady shaded his eyes to stare across at me through the gloom.

"You'd better let me go."

"No; I'll try it alone; get everything ready, and leave the bar down."

"You will be careful, monsieur?"

There was an unaccounted note of anxiety in the voice that caused me to glance back at her quickly in surprise.

"Be assured of that, mademoiselle."

I returned. "I know the duty of an ally," and stepped without, closing the door behind me.

CHAPTER XI.

I Fight a Red-Coat.

Convinced that my coming had not been perceived, and that no Indian scouts were watching the cabin, I pressed forward into the depths of the woods, obliged to proceed slowly because of the darkness. So cautious was I, lest some noise might betray my presence, that I was some moments in passing through the fringe of trees to where I could obtain view of the lake, and the dark line of shore opposite.

I had advanced for perhaps a hundred yards, passing beyond where we had attained land the evening before, when I suddenly came to a halt, sinking to my knees, and staring forward across a slight opening in the forest growth. At first I was not sure that what I saw was actually a man, but as the object moved toward me, all doubt vanished. He was not only a man, but a white man; at least he was not clothed as an Indian; and, as he stepped forth into the open, more clearly revealed for an instant, I could have sworn that he wore a uniform coat, with buttons that gleamed dully in the twilight. He looked a giant, a great, hulking outline, but stepped lightly enough, not the slightest sound betraying his catlike movements as he came steadily onward, with head bent forward, his rifle advanced. I felt sure of his identity almost at once; surely he could be no other than the British agent, whom mademoiselle held guilty of her father's murder, the man who masqueraded under my own name. I felt my blood grow hot with anger. He would pass within a yard of me; he was alone, seeking his way, endeavoring to plan how he should lead his savages to an assault. If I could get him it would be half the battle.

I watched him closely, peering about the smooth bark of the tree, one foot advanced ready for a spring. Some instinct of wild life must have told him of my presence, for he stopped still, peering about suspiciously, his rifle swung forward. I dared not delay, yet swift as I was, his quick eye caught my movement. The gun butt swung through the air met his rifle barrel, slid along the steel, and struck a glancing blow. He reeled back, dazed, half stunned, dropping his own weapon, yet seizing the muzzle of mine to keep from falling. I endeavored to jerk it free, but he hung to it desperately. Scarce knowing how it was done, we were together, grappling, each other, the disputed gun kicked aside under our feet.

He swore once, a mad English oath, but I choked it back, clutching his throat in iron grip, straining to force him to the fulcrum of my knee. Then he found grasp of my hair, hurling my head back until the agony compelled me to let go. I struck him square in the face, a blow that would have dropped an ordinary man, but he only snarled, and closed in, grappling my wrist with one hand, the other fumbling for a knife at his belt. By God's mercy I got it first; yet could not strike, for he had me foul, gripped to him as if held in a vise. I could feel the muscles of his chest, the straining sinews of his arms as they crushed me. I gave back, down, my limbs trembling beneath the force with which he flung the whole weight of his body against mine. I had met my match, and I knew it. Yet the knowledge gave me fresh strength, fiercer determination. The very conception of defeat crazed me; my brain held no thought save a mad impulse to conquer him, show him who was the better man!

I wrenched aside, breaking that strangle-hold by sheer strength and wrestling skill. Again we gripped, face to face, our muscles straining as we sought advantage of hold. My hunting shirt gave, tearing apart like brown paper, giving me a scant second as his grasp slipped. It was enough, I had him locked at my hip; yet strain as I would his weight baffled every effort. Back and forth we struggled, crushing the bushes under foot, our breath coming in sobs, every muscle aching under the awful strain. Neither dared loosen a finger grip. Our eyes glared into each other with savage hate. How it would have ended God knows, had the fellow not slipped on the brush root, so that the added weight of my body flung him headlong. Even as he went over, bearing me along with him, his head crashing into the side of a tree as he fell, his lips gave vent to one wild cry. Then he lay still, motionless, a huge black shape outstretched on the ground in the ghastly light of dawn.

I got to my knees, scarcely realizing what had happened, peering down into the upturned face, one hand raised to strike if the man moved. There was not a motion. I bent lower—the eyes were closed, blood dripped from his hair. I turned the head, so as to better perceive the features—surely this was not the man for whom I had been mistaken! He was big enough, but marked by dissipation, and wore a black mustache. As I live there was not a resemblance. Who was he then? I got to my feet and searched out my rifle in the tangled brush. Some noise reached me—the splash of water, the echo of a far-off voice. They were coming, the Indians; they had heard his last cry; they were already crossing the ford. I hesitated an instant, staring down at him, listening intently that I might be sure, then turned and ran swiftly toward the clearing. It was already gray dawn, and even in the dense woods I could see to avoid the trees. Behind me rang out a wild whoop of savagery; they had discovered the body! I glanced back across my shoulder, as I ran; burst forth into the clearing, and, reckless of all else, raced for the house. I fell once, my foot slipping on a hummock, but was up instantly, plunged at the door, and leaped within. Brady caught me, thrust the wooden bars down into their sockets, and half dragged me over to the bench.

"What is it?" are they coming?" he asked.

It was darker in there than outside, and I could barely perceive his face. "Yes," I panted. "They are just behind me. I had to run for it. Get—get to the stations; I'll tell you later what happened out there."

He left me, and my eyes, accustoming themselves to the gloom, began to discern objects in the room. I got to my feet, still breathing heavily from exhaustion, yet with brain active. Brady was close beside me, kneeling on the floor, his eye at an opening between the logs.

"See anything?"

"There are figures moving at the edge of the wood," he answered, without glancing around, "but they don't come out so I can tell what they look like. The way your clothes are torn you must have had a fight?"

"I did—with the big fellow in a red jacket. He's lying out there with a cracked skull. That is why those fellows don't know what to do—they're short a leader."

I got to my feet, and stared about, seeking mademoiselle. She was beyond the table, and our eyes met.

"You—you killed him, monsieur?"

"I do not know; I threw him, his head struck against a tree, and he lay still. I had to run; only he was not your man, mademoiselle; he looked no more like me than you do."

"You—you are sure?"

"Yes; I saw his face. It was lighter out there, and he lay flat on his back. He was big enough, if anything larger even than I am, and gave me a fight for it until his foot slipped. He had black hair and mustache, and his face was full of purple veins. He looked French to me."

"Yet wore a red coat?"

"Aye! and swore in English, the one oath I heard. You know anyone like that?"

There was a shot without, and the chug of a ball as it struck against the logs; then another, and Brady's voice tensed with strain:

"They're goin' to try it, an' ther's sure some Infuns out ther; the whole edge o' the woods is alive with 'em. Get ready now! This ain't goin' ter be no slouch o' a fight."

I sprang across to the nearest opening, yet stopped to be sure of the arrangement within. The gray light stealing in through the small firing holes failed to give distinct view across the room.

"Where are you Schultz?"

"Here mit der front."

"Oh, all right; what has become of your friend?"

"Ho vos to load; he do dot, but not fight. Maybe dot help some, don't it?"

I saw the man then, his white face showing dimly, and before him three rifles lying across the table.

"You found more guns?"

Brady glanced at me to answer.

"The girl did; she knew where they were—ah! now the rumpus has begun!"

Reports, blending almost into a volley, sounded without, the thud of lead striking the logs in dull echo. One stray ball found entrance, splintered an edge of the bench, and flattened out against the stone chimney. I dropped to one knee, my eyes at the opening.

CHAPTER XII.

We Meet Them With Rifles.

Small as my peek hole was, just large enough to admit a rifle barrel, it yet afforded clear view to east and south of the house. As I gazed, striving to determine what the various movements meant, and from which direction to anticipate final attack, an Indian crept out into the open, crawling on his stomach like a snake through the grass. Others followed, until a dozen wriggling forms began to advance inch by inch, hugging the ground so closely I could scarcely perceive their movement. I heard a slight sound within, as Brady quietly thrust forward his rifle.

"Wait a moment," I called to him, not venturing to glance about, but holding up one hand in warning, "it is a long shot yet, and we must make every one tell. Wait until the first fellow is half across; then pick your man. Who is at the loophole beyond us?"

"It is I, monsieur."

"You, mademoiselle! Hadn't you better let Schultz take that place?"

"An' why, monsieur?"—the soft voice coolly indignant. "Am I afraid? Am I unable to shoot? Why should I not stay?"

"Those are Indians," I began, "I thought—"

"Bah! My people! Those robbers and cowards. I told you there is no Wyandot among them. You will see, monsieur."

"All right then. I take that first one, and you pick the two to the left. Fire when I give the word. Schultz lay out one of those extra guns beside each of us. Ready now; the fellows who are not hit will jump and run for the woods as soon as we fire; give them a second shot before they can reach cover."

"Ready now!" I commanded sharply. "Let them have it—fire!"

"CASCARETS" FOR SLUGGISH BOWELS

No sick headache, sour stomach, biliousness or constipation by morning.

Get a 10-cent box now. Turn the rascals out—the headache, biliousness, indigestion, the sick, sour stomach and foul gases—turn them out to-night and keep them out with Cascarets.

Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then and never know the misery caused by a lazy liver, clogged bowels or an upset stomach.

Don't put in another day of distress. Let Cascarets cleanse your stomach; remove the sour, fermenting food; take the excess bile from your liver and carry out all the constipated waste matter and poison in the bowels. Then you will feel great.

A Cascaret to-night straightens you out by morning. They work while you sleep. A 10-cent box from any drug store means a clear head, sweet stomach and clean, healthy liver and bowel action for months. Children love Cascarets because they never gripe or sicken. Adv.

WHEN KIDNEYS ACT BAD TAKE GLASS OF SALTS

Eat Less Meat if Kidneys Hurt or You Have Backache or Bladder Misery—Meat Forms Uric Acid.

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which clogs the kidney pores so they sluggishly filter or strain only part of the waste and poisons from the blood, then you get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, constipation, dizziness, sleeplessness, bladder disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any reliable pharmacy and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity, also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which all regular meat eaters should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.—Adv.

NOTICIAS DEL SUROESTE

Western Newspaper Union News Service. Nuevo Mexico. Se dedico la nueva Iglesia presbiteriana en Clovis. En Fort Sumner se está construyendo un puente de más de 1,000 pies de largo. Se ha empezado el trabajo sobre un nuevo edificio de banco de $3,000 en Columbus. Los Elks, en Clovis, han comprado tres lotes en que erigirán el edificio de su sociedad. Los agrimensores están haciendo el mapa de una ruta, comunicando Clovis con Des Moines para el ferrocarril de Santo Fe. El proyecto de ley educacional presentado al Senado, estipula un año escolar mínimo de siete meses para este año. En Estancia el distrito de negocios fue inundado de tal manera que el tráfico por las calles tuvo que hacerse en carros. Los trabajos en la ruta de Portales-Clovis, bajo la superintendencia del Ingeniero de estado, S. D. Hooker, se están activando. El acero estará montado en el nuevo puente de Shiprock de 200 pies, en el condado de San Juan, dentro de algunos días. Se habla mucho del establecimiento de una línea eléctrica de Gallup a San John Ariz., para abrir ese país a los mercados de Gallup. El robo de Mike Fatina y Frank Cavino, dos Italianos que perdieron $70, el sueldo de su semana, fue anunciado en Gallup. El proyecto del Senador Hfeld, prohibiendo la distribución de muestras de medicina "patent" y sustancias perjudiciales, fue votado. No se ha encontrado traza alguna de los tres Italianos que mataron a uno de sus paisanos en un campamento de minas cerca de Raton. El proyecto del Representante Tharp aboliendo el castigo supremo en Nueva Mexico fue anulado por el comité judicial de la Cámara. Porfirio Chavez fue reinstalado jefe de policía del condado de Lincoln, de la cual posición fue despedido por un acto judicial la primavera pasada. Es posible que Clovis obtenga una fábrica de escobas, pues más de $100,000 en más de escoba fueron cosechados en esa sección el año pasado. La Comisión de Rutas de Estado se ejecutó definitivamente en la cuestión de construcción de la propuesta ruta de gran vía por el condado de San Juan. El Departamento de Instrucción Pública anunció que una contribución en la suma de $350 fue remitida al distrito de escuela 14, condado de Torrance. El comité judicial mató los proyectos de ley del Senador Evans contra los trysts, prohibiendo el matrimonio entre razas diferentes y limitando las horas de empleo de mujeres. Es posible que se explote losa de la dimensión de cuatro por seis pies de la formación roqueña en Cuervo. Hay una cantidad inagotable propia para construcciones y es de color rojo. El comité judicial del Senado presentó un informe en favor de la medida consistiendo de separar el nombramiento del secretario de la biblioteca de estado de los atributos del gobernador. La resolución suspendiendo el sitio de Rafael García, Demócrata del condado de Bernalillo, y reemplazándolo por Modesto Ortiz, Republicano, que marcó la última fase de la contienda, fue adoptada por la Cámara por un voto de 29 contra 18. Pronto estará listo el nuevo puente de acero de 130 pies en French. En conformidad con el deseo de los Clubs de Mujeres Federados del estado, Nestor Montoya, del condado de Bernalillo, presentará a la Cámara un proyecto demandando el nombramiento de una mujer en cada uno de los consejos que tienen autoridad de administrar las instituciones de estado. Donaciano Romero, de cuarenta años, niño de los esposos Sr. y Sra. Frank Romero, fue quemado a muerte en la casa de la familia en Albuquerque mientras que la madre salía a llevar la merienda al padre, a medio día. La madre regresó y encontró la casa en cenizas y el cuerpo carbonizado del niño. Se supone que el niño jugó con fósforos. El proyecto presentado en el Senado por el Senador Laughern, relativo a la biblioteca de estado, priva al gobernador del derecho de nombrar al secretario de la biblioteca. Estipula que los miembros de la corte suprema actuarán como consejo de administradores para la biblioteca, y nombrarán al bibliotecario. El salario de ese empleado sería de $600.

"SIZED UP" THE STATESMAN

Senator Took It as Compliment That He Was "Touched" for More Than Colleague. Senators Shively and Kern of Indiana recently met a constituent from Elmwood. He saw Kern first. "I've read about you and followed you ever since you have been in public life," said the Elmwood man. "I've taken my political pabulum from you all these years. I've voted for you every time I had the chance. Will you lend me a dollar?" He got it. The next day, according to the Philadelphia Inquirer's Washington correspondent, Kern came on the scene just as Shively was leaving the Elmwood man. "Who is that?" inquired Kern. "Oh, a constituent of mine from Elmwood. He's been a follower of mine throughout my political career and he voted for me whenever he had the chance." "How much did he borrow?" was Kern's cruel query. "Fifty cents," replied Shively, with a slight upward turn of the eyebrows. "Well," drawled Kern, "that fellow is smarter than I thought he was. He can tell the difference between a dollar senator and a fifty-cent one."

Not a Real Article. The last minstrel stopped at a back door and said to the housewife who greeted him: "Give me something to eat, fair dame, and I will tickle your ears with a merry tale of romance." "But why not tell me the tale first?" the dame suggested. "No, I must have food and drink before I talk." Thereupon the dame slammed the door with the tart reply: "You're no merry minstrel; you're an after-dinner speaker."

A good housewife never opens the condensed milk with her husband's razor, nor will a loving husband curry the horse with the nutmeg grater.

An Iowa editor was asked, "Do hogs pay." He replied "a good many do not, they take the paper several years and then have the postmaster send it back marked "refused" or "gone west."

Lincoln county bids fair to have another prosperous year in 1915. We have moisture galore and that's all this country needs to blossom like the rose. So come on folks, while the coming is good—another year will be too late. All the choice land will be gone by that time.

Sixty-one indictments is the result of the first inning in the legislative investigation of the First State Bank failure at Las Cruces and the State College affair.

It is said that the Dona Ana County Grand Jury in its report expressed its regret at not being able to return an indictment against Governor McDonald and the traveling auditor "because of legal obstacles" although both officials in the report were severely censured for their alleged negligence in not taking steps to prevent the loss of public funds by the failure of said bank and to protect the state college deposits amounting to some $75,000 in that institution

FROM "A SUBSCRIBER"

Carrizozo, N. M. March 11th, 1915
Editor "Outlook"
Carrizozo, N. M.

My dear Sir:
As one heartily interested in the success of our school I would like to call attention to a few points which ought to be observed by each and every parent, or the progress and discipline of the school will be seriously impaired.

I know it to be a fact that certain of the local school board have been losers both of business and good will because they were forced to expell certain pupils from school. As every one knows this is a job without any kind of pay and often with little thanks. The board have been elected by the community—lets support them in every good enterprise.

Furthermore, the board have elected the principal and teachers and if we are not going to see to it that our children take what they get at school for misbehaviour let us take them out of school or get rid of the present lot of teachers and try a new bunch. Perhaps they will allow our children more privileges, but just as sure as the teachers fail to run their rooms will the pupils—and the worst ones at that—take charge of the room and run it.

The teachers were elected to run it paid to run it, lets see that they do run it and not your child or mine.

Respectfully,
A Subscriber

LET'S DO OUR DUTY

Let us stand by the board, the teachers and the schools as they now are. Let us set forth the advantages of a public school. They create a desire for knowledge. They teach the equality of all American citizens. In them the rich and the poor stand upon the same level. They unify the coming citizens of the nation. They exalt the brotherhood of man and create sympathy between heart and heart.

BELIEVES SALARIES

REASONABLE
The New Mexican uses much space foolishly with box-car head letters to appraise its few readers of the fact that the state will pay "three million and a half in seven years to 400 people" Further down it says "The Republican county salary bill, passed by the senate and house Monday afternoon provides for the distribution, in specified salaries, in the seven years necessarily covered by the act, of $3,408,650. This distribution will be made to approximately 400 people."

It will be seen that the New Mexican errs in its box car letters by specifying an amount $100,000 in excess of the real sum given in the same article. But for the sake of illustration, let us take the first figures: Dividing $3,500,000 by 400 gives us $8,750 received by each officer in seven years; divide that by 7 and we get $1,250 received by each per year; divide that by 12 and we get $104 per month; divide that by 26 working days in the month and you get an average of $4 per day per officer. Deduct $100,000 from the original amount and it will be considerably less. Let us now compare the salaries of the county officers with those in other lines of employment:

Carpenters at 55 cents per hour
Carpenters, 9 hours.....$4.95
Plumbers and helper, 9 hours 9.00
Bricklayers, 9 hours.....6.75
Plasterers, 9 hours.....6.30
County officers get as shown above.....4.00
Our local postmaster gets $2,000 per year.
Our local bank cashiers get from $1800 to $2400.

The salary bill passed both houses of the legislature Monday afternoon. The vote in the senate was 16 to 5 all republicans. In the house it passed by a vote of 32 to 13, being also more than a two-thirds majority. The governor vetoed it and it has been passed over his veto—Las Cruces Citizen.

WHITE OAKS

SNOWLETS

O, the snow, the snow, the beautiful snow,
It cumbers my path wherever I go,
And smothers my goat by heck.

Its flakes come in bunches and sometimes in flocks,
They get in my shoes and moisten my socks,
They blindfold my eyes and burden my locks

And sneak down the back of my neck.
It has been snow and then again and then some more, here in this old hamlet of Hearts Desire and Grouchers Paradise, for the past two weeks or more. In fact the inmates have just been slashing around in it clean down to the mud foundation under it, and when a passage way has once been broken it is fun to watch the pedestrians try to pass each other on the same track.

But the dear disgruntled people and those other cheerful, optimistic persons, who are always trying to see a rift in the cloud, have made up their minds to stay with these belated snow storms if it takes all summer.

The mines have gone out of commission temporarily on account of it, but the Wild Cats pulled off a pay day last Tuesday when they couldn't do any thing else

The guttural honk of the horned and helpless humpimobile is no longer heard in the land and probably won't be until the blockade is lifted.

Only the base burners in the back end of the stores and saloons are kept busy while the miners who are out of a job for the time being and the married men who failed to lay in a supply of fuel at home, are gathered around these radiators of cold comfort to appreciate a hot turn.

It is really unfortunate for those who have run out of fuel these days as it is impossible to draw on their neighbor's wood pile and cover up their tracks.

Only the guileless young man who never gets cold feet, and who has solid comfort anchored somewhere in sight—he can go around almost any evening and find all the bliss and the burden there is in holding a 140 pound girl on his lap through all the still watches of the night.

United States Marshall Hudspeth came all the way up from Carrizozo through the snow drifts last Friday. One might infer that he had something more than business to draw him hitherward, but the familiar light shining from his old den in the Hewitt block until a late hour indicates that there isn't.

Dr. Lucas drove up in a raw hide rig last Friday, to see a patient.

The infant of Mr. and Mrs.
Elish Leslie died the latter part of last week.

There'll be sunshine to follow in the sometime tiempo. A whole tank full of it. You bet.

ATTEMPTS TO CURB PRESS

MISGUIDED, SAYS JUDGE

Chicago, Ill., March 5.—Praising the newspapers as the country's greatest educational institution, Judge Orrin N. Carter of the Illinois Supreme Court said Thursday night in an address at the Press club that attempts to curb the freedom of the press were narrow, misguided and fraught with danger.
Contempt of court proceedings, he added, should form a weapon of last resort and should not be utilized with the idea of preserving the dignity of justice.
He declared that millions read nothing but newspapers and that Americans receive practically their entire political education from the daily press.

NOTICE

Carrizozo, N. M. Feb 20, 1915:

To Our Patrons:
We quote below extracts from a letter addressed to all State Banks by the Traveling Auditor and Bank Examiner of this State under date of February 15, 1915.

"To the Board of Directors of the Exchange Bank Carrizozo, New Mexico.

Gentlemen:
The granting of Overdrafts in any form or by any subterfuge will no longer be countenanced by this department. This form of accommodation is not only illegal but is diametrically opposed to sound business principles, and you are hereby advised that the permitting of Overdrafts must be discontinued.

You are requested to adopt a resolution directing that no officer or employe of your bank shall pay or charge to the account of any depositor any check or other item of such depositor, when there are not sufficient funds on deposit to the credit of such depositor to pay the same.
This department is co-operating with the Comptroller of the Currency in this movement, and for your information I beg to advise you that that official has issued similar instructions to all national banks:

Very truly yours
HOWELL EARNEST,
Traveling Auditor and Bank Examiner
These instructions are self explanatory and leave us no discretion in the premises.
Hereafter we will be compelled to return without payment all checks drawn on us against insufficient balances. We ask for your hearty co-operation in the observance of this ruling, to the end that the pernicious practice of making and permitting overdrafts may be abolished and mutual embarrassments avoided.
Sincerely yours,

OPERATION OF A ROAD DRAG

Some Simple Lessons Given by Man Who Learned by Years of Experience—Helper is Needed.

Here are some simple lessons, worth considering, which I have learned by years of experience with the road drag, writes John K. Goodman in Progressive Farmer.

1. Make your drag reversible (i. e., to move dirt right or left) by altering the hitch. Have the hind section about five-sixths the length of the front one; and face both front and rear sections entire length with iron or steel.
2. For best results under varying conditions of road surface as to dry, damp, hard or soft, I find it pays to have a man along at the end of a rope attached to the rear end of drag to properly steer the machine, and counteract its tendency to slide around hard bumps which need trimming off and smoothing. It is not so easy a matter as talking about it, for one man (the driver) to rightly direct the course and work of the drag by stepping from point to point, as common directions go; in fact, oftentimes impossible. Then the driver's weight is not always needed on the drag, but can be there in an instant when required.

Poor Highways.

Poor highways lessen the profit of labor, increase the cost of living, burden the enterprise of the people, dull the morality of our citizenship and hold down the educational advancement of the country.

STOLE SON'S WIFE

ON WEDDING DAY

New York.—How, on the very night of his marriage, his own father stole from him his young bride, was told on the witness stand in Justice Co-halan's part of the supreme court, where Franklin D. Wood, a hospital interne, twenty-three years old, asked for a divorce from his wife Lella.

The testimony shows that Wood had scarcely left the altar before he noticed a change in the bride's demeanor. Instead of the laughing, jocular girl he had taken for a wife, he was confronted by a serious-faced woman, unresponsive to love and caresses.

"To make a long story short, she told me that she did not love me at all, but that her affections were centered in an older man," said the interne. "Who this man was she did not say, but she inferred that I ought to know him. I didn't know—in fact, I didn't even suspect."

Then Bride Vanished.

That evening the bride disappeared.
Wood could get no trace of her.
Henry Jackson Wood, father of the interne, disappeared when the bride vanished, but the son swore that he suspected no connection between the two events. That his wife could have gone away with her father-in-law was beyond his comprehension. If she wanted to leave with him, why did she wait until after the ceremony had been performed? She might just as well have gone before.

However, this is just what did happen, but the fact did not become known until six months later. It would still be a secret had not the elder Wood written to the wife he had deserted asking her to go to Chicago and confer with him over a divorce.
"My husband wrote me he wanted to see me," testified Mrs. Wood, "and I went to him. I was informed that he lived at No. 2228 Milwaukee ave

Eloped With Son's Wife.

and I went to the address immediately I arrived in the city, but I didn't let Mr. Wood know I had arrived. The servant let me into the house and I walked to the bedroom.
As I opened the door my husband sprang out of bed, and at the same time Lella my son's wife, ran to the window.

Refused to Part.

Mrs. Wood said that her daughter-in-law was shrieking, and she demanded what it all meant. Thereupon her husband told her that he loved his daughter-in-law. The wife sat down and talked matters over with him. She argued that he should let the girl go back to his son, but he would not have it. Thereupon the younger Mrs. Wood put her arms about Wood and said she would not be separated from him.

Shortly after this episode Wood and his son's wife left Chicago and went to St. Louis, where they are now living.

The evidence went to show that as soon as the son began courting the girl the father became interested in her and she in him, but the curious twist in misplaced affections was carefully kept from young Wood. Up to the moment of the admissions made by his bride he believed he possessed her heart, and the shock to him was great.

A LETTER FROM IDAHO

The following is a letter that Mrs. E. R. Kelley received a few days ago from her son, Jerry, who recently went to Idaho for a visit, and in which he tells of an interesting rabbit drive. Read what he says.

Nampa, Idaho, Mar 5, 1915
Mrs. Mary A. Kelley.
Carrizozo, New Mex

Dear Mama:

As I am so tired, sore and stiff today I will put in the time writing you a few lines. The reason of my soreness is, I was out to one of those rabbit drives Wednesday, and I feel pretty badly used up, more especially yesterday. The farmers furnished conveyances out to the grounds and back. The hunters form in line about 30 yards apart and hunt with shot guns. They claim they can't corral them here as in an open country. The rabbits hide and break through the lines, so they adapted the shot gun method and it worked fine too. They have a captain that manages the drive who is mounted on a horse. The only objections I have to the drive is they walk too fast for me. I thought I would die sure. The captain gave orders to proceed to Mr. Clark's for lunch. Of course that sounded better. I never was so surprised as when we got lunch. They had everything you could think of to eat and the crowd did justice to the eats, too. I then thought we would get to rest a while and get our second wind at least, but nothing doing. As soon as we were through eating, the captain gave orders to march and away we went again. If fighting Germans in the trenches is half as hard as following these actual bonified settlers on an irrigated farm in Idaho, please excuse me, although we had a good time at that. We killed 800 head, so there was some shooting. Caldwell had a drive the same day and they claim they got 2000, but they had about 200 hunters, while we only had 43 hunters.

I saw some of the most beautiful homes that day I ever saw and talk about your fat hogs, milch cows and horses and big ricks of alfalfa. Why there are more hogs in this county than there are in the whole state of N. M., and the teams they have I just have to stop and look at them. An 18 inch horse collar is unheard of here, 23 inches is the average size here. The French Government has had men here all winter buying up horses for use in the bloody war. They have shipped over 1000 head from Caldwell all ready. Will close Letting Sun Shine on Highway.

The earth road should have at least six hours of sunshine each day. This can be obtained either by locating the road with southern or western exposure or by having such brush and trees as impede the drying action of the sun and wind removed. With gravel and stone roads this is not so necessary, as a certain amount of moisture is needed on such roads, especially in the summer time.

Brings Market Nearer.
The good road brings the market nearer to your farm and adds materially to the value of the place, whether you want to sell or live there.

Seeking Dry Roadbeds.
Roads should never be located so close to stream beds as to be subject to overflow, or on ground which is constantly damp and marshy.

Every Citizen Interested.
A highway is no longer of purely local interest. Every citizen of a state is interested in the roads.

Advertising Talks

PUBLIC OBJECTS TO ADS IN CIRCULARS

Wide Feeling Against Handbills Which Litter Up Streets and Porches.

There is not wanting evidence that there is a growing public feeling against the abuse of advertising by circulars, whether these are sent by mail or are delivered by hand, locally. Recently a correspondent of the New York Herald wrote that paper:

"For years I have been steadfast in refusing to deal with anybody who puts advertising in my letter box. If every tradesman pursued this absurd method advertising my trousers would always be baggy, my carpets would remain forever uncleared and I would do my marketing in New Jersey."

Doubtless there are many other men who feel as this correspondent does for advertising of this sort is an unmitigated nuisance. When the advertising circular is sent by mail, with the proper postage prepaid, it is bad enough, and in so far as it helps to swell the postal revenue and so helps to bear the burden of carrying the regular and important mails is not altogether to be condemned. But there is no excuse for the tradesmen who employ agents to fill private letter boxes intended for the reception of the regular mail, with their useless literature.

And on one other ground we believe that the private citizen has a right to protest against the advertising circular. One of the chief trades that often offends in this regard is the patent medicine vender. His circulars are thrust into letter boxes, scattered over lawns that, in any case, are hard enough to keep clean and neat, and even jammed under the front door. Many of these circulars are atrocious in their frank discussion of the numerous ills "to which flesh is heir," and to add to the horror of the letterpress they are often eked out with gaudy colored pictures of various parts of the human anatomy. It is more than a little task to keep this gawsome and unwholesome literature out of the hands of children, for when the advertiser gets busy such circulars are on every hand.

So much of this sort of circular advertising is to be seen cluttering up the streets and alleys, filling the garbage cans and littering the front porches that it should seem that advertisers must realize what a wasteful and useless form of advertising this is. Probably there is no form of printed literature in so low repute as the circular. It has nothing back of it; it is an unwelcome visitor; usually its objectionable features are recognized at a glance as it goes into the waste paper basket unopened.

The public that purchases looks to the reputable newspaper for the advertisements of the goods it wants, for behind such advertising there is character. Against the characterless advertising circular, that is a public and a private nuisance, there should be an ordinance enacted that would check the industry and which would certainly go a long way toward helping keep the city clean.

Dead!

Breathes there a man with soul so dead
Who never to himself hath said:
"My trade of late is getting bad;
I'll try another eight-inch ad."
If such there be, go mark him well
For him no bank account shall swell,
No angels watch the golden stair
To welcome home the millionaire,
The man who never asks for trade
By local line or ad. displayed,
Carees more for rest than worldly gain
And patronage but gives him pain,
Tread lightly, friends; let no rude sound
Disturb his solitude profound;
Here let him live in calm repose
Unought except by men he owes,
And when he dies, go, plant him deep,
That naught may break his dreamless sleep—
Where no rude clamor may dispel
The quiet that he loved so well,
And when the world may know its loss,
Place on his grave a wreath of moss,
And on the stone above, "Here lies
A chump who wouldn't advertise."

"GET DOWN OFF THAT SEAT!"

When Car Conductor Starts to Enforce His Command He Joins Passengers in Laugh.

Indianapolis.—Car No. 907 on the East Washington street line was crowded to the doors, as usual, recently. It looked as if half the passengers were standing. But when the conductor looked back over the heads of the jammed-in crowd and saw one man's head far above the others he recalled that passengers are not permitted to stand on the seats and he decided that the man must get down.

"Hey, you, get down off that seat!" the conductor yelled.

But the passenger paid no attention to the order.

"Hey, you, I told you to get down off that seat," came again from the conductor. The passenger paid no more attention to the second order than he did to the first one.

"I'll make that guy get down," the conductor said, and he started through the crowd toward the rear of the car.

But the passenger did not get down from the seat. He was 6 feet 7 1/2 inches tall and his head was far above the rest of the crowd. The crowd laughed. So did the conductor.

LOCKED IN JAIL VISITORS

Officer Broke Key and They Were in Cell Room for a Whole Night.

Sunbury, Pa.—When more than twenty residents of Shamokin, attending court here, procured passes and went to visit the Northumberland county jail, William Neary, the turnkey, took them in a cell-room, and, according to custom, locked them in.

When they were ready to get out the turnkey found that his big key had broken off in the lock.

For hours local locksmiths tried to release the unwilling prisoners; but their skill was unequal to the resistance of the clogged mechanism.

At night Warden Wallace W. Barr passed their suppers between the bars, and then telephoned to Philadelphia for an expert, who opened the door the next morning.

ROAD BUILDING

MATERIALS IN MODERN ROAD

Hummelstown Pike, Considered a Model by Experts, Built by Telford-Macadam Method.

The Hummelstown Pike, near Harrisburg, Pa., has been considered by experts to be a model road. It was built in 1908, using the telford-macadam construction; native limestone was used for the telford course, and Birdsboro trap rock for the top, says a writer in Northwestern Agriculturist.

There are certain sections of this highway that were flooded during a cloudburst, and the top surface which was washed off the road was replaced by grouting with one part cement and two parts sand.

The road was built nine inches in depth, five inches telford and four inches macadam course. Shortly after completion there were several surface treatments of a light coaltar product, consisting of a mixture of water, gas, tar, cement, liquid asphaltum, road oil, carbolic disinfecting powder, sulphate of copper and oil of wintergreen. The sulphate of copper was used to prevent the oils from becoming ignited, and the wintergreen counteracted the odors of the others. A curious effect of the mixture was said to be its disinfecting power, there not being a single contagious disease in that section. Unfortunately, however, this does not appear to be lasting, as at this time, four years after it was applied, there is no evidence of this tar product on the road.

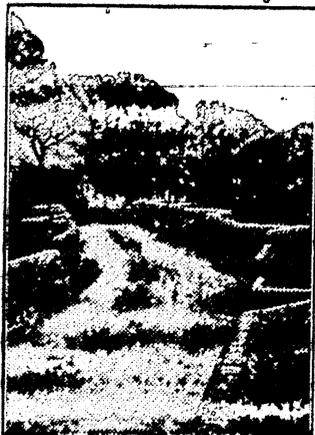

During the last season the maintained department resurfaced another section of this road between Rutherford Subway and Swatara Creek. This work consisted merely of placing about four inches of crushed stone upon the old roadbed, and binding with sufficient screenings wetted and rolled.

EXPERTS MUST BUILD ROADS

Explanation of Failure of Authorities Generally to Maintain Roads and Streets.

The astonishing results of a census taken recently on a secondary thoroughfare leading out of London showed only 3 per cent of horse-drawn vehicles. The exact count was 16 vehicles of the latter class to 500 vehicles propelled otherwise than by horses. Herein lies both an explanation of the failure of public authorities generally throughout the world to maintain roads and streets in good condition, and also a presentation of the difficulties that road constructors now confront.

A similar example of the extraordinary change that has occurred in the use of roads in recent years is that of a furniture manufacturing concern in Easton, which delivers on its own trucks in New York city instead of using the already-constructed steel roads, namely, the railroads. This concern uses the ordinary roads. A considerable tonnage is thus transferred from the steel roads, specially constructed to bear it, to the country road, not constructed for any such weight or friction. It has thus come to pass that the science of engineering, which was called upon to furnish experts to railroad companies, is now also called upon to furnish experts to road-building authorities.

The greater the pressure of tonnage, the heavier the expenditure must be on the structure that is to withstand that pressure, whether it be railroad, country road or city street.

HOUSE-KEEPING IN HAWAII

NATSU COMING FROM THE GARDEN WITH A SPRAY OF GINGER FLOWERS

WE MADE MOST DELICIOUS COOLING BEVERAGES

OUR HOUSE

NATSU

NARIMATSU OF AN EVENING

THE newcomer in Hawaii finds much of novel interest, and the drawbacks are not insupportable. The oriental servants, with their politeness, their love of flowers, their look of daintiness and gentleness, and their quiet movements, are a joy to have about. Of course the folk that have always lived in Hawaii may smile at my statements, because of their own remembrances, memories of grim and long-drawn-out familiarities with other qualities possessed by these superficially praised folk of the East; and what I present here is avoided given as merely impressionistic, not the fruit of extended experience.

The names of a number of gracious servers I have known in Hawaii come readily to mind, of man and maid who have ably and cheerfully assisted—sometimes guided me in housekeeping and hospitality. That of Natsu should perhaps lead the list, Natsu, the daintiest, dearest, quietest-moving little Nipponese that ever graced a household. Always tidy in appearance, looking fresh as a flower—Natsu brewed and baked, swept and dusted, made beds, waited at table, answered door and telephone bell, "earned her board and keep" and wage without doubt.

On those rare lazy mornings when I breakfasted in bed, the indulgence was made doubly pleasurable by the grace of the handmaid that brought me the breakfast; almost I was tempted to be lazy every morning. A little spook in pale gray would glide into my room, smilingly, ceremoniously bid me good morning, in cordial tones inquire "Breakfast this time?" softly disappear, shortly reappear. And this was the breakfast she served: First—placed on a spotless cloth whereon lay a single yellow blossom—half of a papaya (fruit of the so-called lemon tree), a section of lemon, a glass of water. Then cereal and cream. The last tray held a pot of coffee, in a fringed napkin two high, hot popovers, a pat of butter, and an egg. Excellent breakfast.

Natsu in the garden was a study worth while, and every morning Natsu would go out to get a fresh spray of ginger flowers for the room of the member of the household who was particularly fond of the lemon-like fragrance and transparent beauty of this blossom. Natsu never was too hurried, never too indifferent, to take into consideration individual tastes and prejudices, and if anyone loved flowers then there was a special bond of attachment. She herself generally wore a blossom in her hair, be it blue Monday or holiday Sunday.

Turning from maid to man, the name of Ito is referred to gratefully. No matter the number of guests, the suddenness thereof, Ito would smile, bow, answer, "All right," and almost always everything would turn out all right. Such simple, sensible little functions as he daily set forth, everything cold that should be cold, everything hot that should be hot. I know nothing more deadly dull in the middle of the day, tropics or temperate zone, than a heavy indigestible meal, and concerning this Ito had the same prejudice as myself. When there were guests from the outside world, he was as keen as I in the effort to give a local flavor to the repast. Perhaps I can recall a menu or two and the decorations accompanying: In the center of the table, arranged in a low, spreading way, was a gray-green jar filled with double yellow coreopsis. The first course was a fruit cocktail compounded of papaya, orange and pineapple; for the second course there were served mullet, potato chips, brown bread-and-cucumber sandwiches; next, roast duck, guava jelly, mashed potatoes, green beans; then alligator pear (avocado) and water crackers; at the end, coffee and mint.

Another name is Tokomoto. He made most delicious cooling beverages, and I generally picture him as accompanied by a glass-filled tray. One drink that he bore about was especially popular, a cup that while tasty and sparkling was as innocent as it was good: "Mint, you cut him fine, you put sugar, you put lemons, squeeze him, atop in ice box long time. You put ginger ale, then pour him quick." Sherbets, too, he excelled in, offering of these a variety, sometimes blending flavors, sometimes giving a single fruit its full value. But above the value of his beverages and ices was his unvarying politeness, his smiling, kindly service.

I think of that dependable sweeper of walks, beater of rugs and veranda-washer, Naitana. Of the industrious gardener whose name we never could remember, but whom we referred to as the "smiling Jap." And even of pretending-to-be-cross old "Jaji," who affirmed he hated flowers but was perpetually watering or weeding them. And most kindly I think of Narimatsu, caretaker at the mountain house loaned us one season. He was general utility man; hower of wood and drawer of water, guide, mail-carrier, cutter, gardener, raconteur. Evenings after his hot bath and the donning of Japanese attire—daytimes he wore American costume—he presented a remarkably well-groomed appearance, looked and acted the gentleman of leisure—a marked contrast to the "hired man" of the States.

Narimatsu's wife had but recently come out from Japan, and while anything but experienced in American methods of housekeeping, was a willing and intelligent that we could be nothing else than patient with her. Our garments suffered in her early attempts at laundress, but she improved week by week, and we found her on the whole worth training; though the training had to be from the ground up. Only one of our array of domestics was a complete failure. She was impossibly untidy, and our place would have become a veritable sty had we not personally hood out every once in awhile.

And confession will have to be made. This outlog of oriental servants will have to be tempered by the statement that never once could we relax in our housekeeping the role of rigid inspector; that though the Japanese are the nation that bathes, still they often are very benighted in other sanitary matters; the surroundings of the bathed ones all too often are squalid in the extreme.

Ah OI, a young Chinese servant, we found a great scrubber and cleaner as well as a fair cook and an attentive waiter. He was very unpretty to look at, with his enormous mouth and protruding jaws, but he was so immaculate one presently forgot he was ill-looking. Never was our kitchen more inviting, our pantry more glittering, our silver shinier, than in the reign of this China boy. But ambition and school drew him away from pots and pans, and he apologetically bade us farewell. Another Chinaman, Joe, was almost as neat and a far better cook; the few months he was loaned to us were served such tempting meals that mealtime became of disproportionate importance, everything else threatened to retire far into the background. Fortunately, the mistress by whom he had been employed for many years returned ere long, and removed the tempter from our midst.

One reason that folk in Hawaii have been able to keep servants a long time at a stretch is because the worst feature of domestic service does not obtain here; the lack of social life. In Hawaii the servants as a rule do not dwell in the employer's house, they either have little cottages a distance off in the grounds, or lodge outside. This gives them desirable independence and opportunity for social life of their own. It has its drawbacks, too. Sometimes the outside lodgings are dubious; but the disadvantages are unquestioned, and the worst feature of what Jane Addams stamps as a "belated industry" is done away with.

One hears not infrequently in Hawaii of a servant staying with the same family 17 years, 20 years, 25 years, and not a few have given such long service they have arrived at retirement on a pension. A man sometimes starts as cook, and rises to a sort of stewardship. Though of late the vexed servant problem has raised its head in the Islands, and conversations here, as so many elsewhere, are weighed with grievances concerning household help.

And without doubt housekeeping in this tropic land has its share of anxieties and vexations. One who has only played at it as I have, really shows much temerity in pretending to present it, even superficially, if my experience had been longer, undoubtedly I should have dwelt on constantly changing servants, or the difficulty of giving orders in pidgin English, and of understanding pidgin English utterances, on high rents and high wages, on the way things will not "keep" in the tropics; on household pests—ants, cockroaches, silver moths, mice, giant rats, etc.—on the mountain of laundry that piles up every week, on— But what's the use? Every housewife of every clime has complaints amany, each knoweth her own trials. Perhaps, for a change, a syllable of praise of housekeeping experiences may be welcome.

DEPTH OF A SEED BED

Prairie Soil Was Plowed to a Six-Inch Depth and Disked.

Small Grain Harrowed Until Six Inches High and Corn Treated With Same Implement as Long as Possible—Prevent Evaporation.

Three years ago I took charge of a dry farm. The soil was a good loam containing a great many bowlders left by a glacial drift. At one time wheat in this section gave large yields but during the dry seasons the crop fell down to six to twelve bushels the acre which was scarcely worth fussing with at harvest time and stock was turned into many of the fields. I began the work of tackling virgin prairie. The neighbors thought I was crazy because I plowed the prairie soil six inches deep and followed the plow with a disk several times; because I harrowed the small grain until it was six inches high; because I harrowed the corn every week so long as possible and then plowed it each week with a very small tooth cultivator. But they were surprised at harvest time because some of that land gave a return of $32 the acre, writes Clifford Willis in Denver Field and Farm.

Last year many of the fields in the vicinity were prepared and plowed better than they have been for some time because the farmers saw more bushels as the result and bushels meant dollars. I also had to work on some heavy soil. A part of this land was turned six inches deep while some was plowed only four inches. In each case the disk followed the plow and would have been still better if I had cross-disked before plowing as I am now doing. Everything possible was done to make a good firm seed bed and also to prevent evaporation. Many people in the vicinity thought it strange that we would harrow our small grain when it was six inches high.

While working in the field stirring the soil, although dry, many of my brother farmers were not even in the field. We have harvested more and better grain than many of our neighbors simply because we kept at work. On the six-inch breaking of adobe the corn gave a yield of thirty-eight bushels the acre while four-inch breaking gave a yield of less than thirteen bushels. In cultivating our crops in the dry area we followed these three factors—a deep seed bed, a firm seed bed and surface cultivation. In every instance we disked our ground just as soon as possible after harvest and on the corn ground we disked the stalks in order to cut them up and also to make a mulch.

CONSERVE MOISTURE IN SOIL

Dry Farms Should Be So Worked That Large Quantity of Water Is in Soil at Harvesting Time.

It is always dangerous to permit the soil of a dry farm to become very dry, especially below the first foot. Dry farms should be so manipulated that even at the harvesting season a comparatively large quantity of water remains in the soil to a depth of eight feet or more. The larger the quantity of water in the soil in the fall, the more readily and quickly will the water that falls on the land during the resting period of fall, winter and early spring sink into the soil and move away from the top-soil. The top or first foot will always contain the largest percentage of water, because it is the chief receptacle of the water that falls as rain or snow, but when the subsoil is properly moist, the water will more completely leave the top-soil. Further, crops planted on a soil saturated with water to a depth of eight feet are almost certain to mature and yield well.

GENERAL FARM NOTES

Mixing plenty of litter with manure when storing hastens decomposition.

Seasons of excessive wet or drought make "brain farming" of more value than ordinary seasons.

It is a great handicap, and may be an actual injury, to load a light horse with great heavy shoes.

Common baking soda is a great relief to fowls suffering from loose bowels. Put a teaspoonful to a half gallon of drinking water daily.

The health of the dairy herd and the quality of their output depend to a large extent on the comfort and cleanliness of their quarters.

The turkey crop hatched previous to June 1 should attain good growth by the last of November, the cock birds reaching ten to twelve pounds.

Cigarettes are the mildest and most pleasing form of tobacco. Three out of four smokers prefer FATIMAS to any other 15c cigarette.

Charles broke the spell as in a dejected tone of voice he said: "Miss Fraser, I love you, but dare not dream of calling you mine. Yesterday I was worth $25,000, but today, by the turn of fortune's wheel, I have but a few paltry hundreds to call my own. I would not ask you to accept me in my reduced state. Farewell forever."

As Charles was about to stride mournfully away she caught him and eagerly cried:

and it agrees with me," writes a doctor, "better than any breakfast food on the market—unless there is one I have not tried."

Grape-Nuts is scientifically prepared to agree with both strong and weak digestions. Long baking—about 20 hours—partially pre-digests the starch cells for quick, easy assimilation.

Besides, Grape-Nuts supplies, in concentrated form, all of the nutriment of wheat and barley, including the invaluable mineral elements often lacking in ordinary food.
