Ranchmen and Sheepmen Battle Over Land Rights

One Man Killed and Another Wounded in Shooting Affray Which Occured Near Jicarilla Monday.

An old trouble over land, that has been brewing for some time, resulted in a pitched battle Tuesday near Jicarilla, between five Mexican sheep men; Eusebio Carabajal, his two sons Marcelino and Manuel Carabajal, Thomas Maes, a son-in-law of Carabajal and Bernudo Sanchez of the sheep men; and Messers Fambrough, Fleming, Eli McCarty, and three sons of the ranchman.

Last Sunday, Mr. Fleming, who claims to own the land, noticed two herds of sheep across the line on his land and notified the sheepmen to remove them, which they refused to do.

Mr. Fleming, desirous of avoiding trouble, went to Jicarilla to get the assistance of a deputy sheriff but that official being absent, Mr. Fleming returned with the assistance of Mr. Fambrough. Mr. McCarty and his sons went to the sheepman to issue a warning to keep off the land. They had hardly crossed Mr. Fleming's line when the Mexicans came in sight heavily armed and opened fire on the ranchmen.

The first few volleys went wide of the mark for all parties were much excited. The ranchmen returned the fire but volleys after volleys was exchanged with no apparent effect until young McCarty was seen to stagger and fall. His friends rushed to his assistance and found that the bullet had entered his right side passing through the body, entering the heart and killing him instantly.

The ranchmen then retreated but the sheepmen followed to Mr. Fleming's line, where they scattered their ammunition.

Sheriff Walker C. Hyde was notified and assisted by Mr. Ben West, detectives for the El Paso & Southwestern, hurried to the scene of battle. They found young McCarty dead and Carabajal badly wounded in the right knee.

The sheepmen were captured by the sheriff, brought to Carrizozo and placed in jail to await trial. It is said Eusebio Carabajal has been arrested at the shooting of Monday.

The dead ranchman was well known in the locality where he lost his life. He had many friends, and leaves a widow and two children to mourn his death.

Aside from the sad death of Mr. McCarty, all contestants consider themselves fortunate for about one hundred twenty-five shots were fired and had it not been for poor marksmanship, more bloodshed in a matter of the affair might have occurred.

OUTLOOK NOW HAS A NEW FOREMAN

Has Also Added an Efficient and Well-Known Young Lady to Its Force as Compositor.

Mr. E. J. Hey, of Shelbyville, Ind., has accepted a position as foreman on the Outlook, and will in the future make Carrizozo his home. Mr. Hey comes to us with the best recommendations. He comes from a family of printers—his father, Valentine Hey, of The Shelbyville Morning News, has for years been connected with different newspapers of that section of Indiana. Mr. Hey has a brother who is also a master-printer. Thus being so closely associated with the newspaper and job printing business, Mr. Hey comes well qualified and thoroughly competent. As new residents of Carrizozo, it goes without saying that Mr. Hey and family will make good additions to our growing town.

Miss Elsie Hall, formerly of White Oaks, but now a well-known young lady of Carrizozo, is now a compositor on the Outlook. Miss Hall has lately been associated with magazine work, and is at home among the type and cases.

Nogal News

Nogal and vicinity has been visited by a bounteous rain, also by a severe hail storm this week.

Work on the Carrizo coal project has been resumed after a week's lay-off.

Parties who have a lull on the Bender and Brannum mines are pushing the work and a good concentrating ore is being realized.

Rev. John Skinner is the principle of a new Sunday School, which was lately organized at Nogal.

Nogal people are glad to see the wonderful improvement in the Carrizozo Outlook.

Mr. John Emerson has begun the work of repairing and remodeling the Nogal Hotel. The material is now on hand and the work is progressing nicely. The hotel will soon be ready for the accommodation of the local and traveling public.

Makes Good Record

W. E. Elliot says he has a remarkable "Maxwell." He made a trip of one hundred eleven miles last Sunday without having to raise the hood of his car. He says the roads were rough but he experienced no trouble of any kind, and made the trip with four gallons of gasoline.

Miss Velma Dudley visited Mr. and Mrs. Frank English this week.

Eusebio Carabajal, the sheep owner who was wounded in the shooting affair over land rights last Tuesday, is confined in the Lucas Hospital.

We are informed that congress will adjourn for a month or more. One consolation is that congress isn't enjoying it any more than the rest of us.

It is perfectly proper for the government to guarantee a minimum of two dollars a bushel for next year's wheat crop, but the farmer is just now taking the price of about $2.70.

The Toothsome Jack

"Uncle Sam," says the Fort Sumner Review "has recently issued a bulletin advising the people to raise rabbits to help solve the meat supply. What the people of the short-grass country needs is an appetite for rabbits—no need to raise them for they are here already. Regarding eating rabbits, the following furnished by a Texas man for the preparation of rabbits for the table is about as good as we know of:"

"Peel the jackrabbit carefully and remove all interior blubbings; put on to boil over a slow fire; replenish water whenever necessary until cistern is empty. As soon as cistern is full again repeat the process; select a clean, smooth pine plank, place the rabbit upon it, salt and pepper to taste and bake five hours, then bury the rabbit and eat the plank."

Blaze, in truth, was embarrassed by the size of his holdings, but he shook his head. "No, I'm too old to go ram-pagin' after new gods, I ain't got the imagination to raise anything more complicated than a mortgage; but if I was younger, I'd organize myself up and do away with that Ed Austin. I'd sure help him to an untimely end, and then I'd marry them pecan groves, and blooded herds, and drug-store orchards. She certainly is a heart-breakin' device, with her red hair, and red lips an—

"Father!" Paloma was deeply shocked. Complete isolation, of course, Alaire had found to be impossible, even though her ranch lay far from the traveled roads and her Mexican guards were not encouraging to visitors. Business inevitably brought her into contact with a considerable number of people, and of these the one she saw most frequently was Judge Ellsworth of Brownsville, her attorney.

It was perhaps a week after Ed had left for San Antonio that Alaire felt the need of Ellsworth's counsel, and sent for him. Ellsworth was a kindly man of fifty-five, with a forceful chin and a drooping, heavy-lidded eye that could either blaze or twinkle. Judge Ellsworth knew more than any four men in that part of Texas; information had a way of seeking him out. He was a good lawyer, too, and yet his knowledge of human nature he considered far more important than law. His mind was like a full granary, and every grain lay where he could put his hand upon it.

He motored out from Brownsville, and after ridding himself of dust, insisted upon spending the interval before dinner in an inspection of Alaire's latest ranch improvements. Not until dinner was over did he inquire the reason for his summons.

"It's about La Feria. General Longorio has confiscated my stock," Alaire told him. "I was afraid of this very thing, and so I was preparing to bring the stock over. Still—I never thought they'd actually confiscate it."

"Hasn't Ed done enough to provoke confiscation?" asked the judge. "I have it pretty straight that he's giving money to the rebel junta and lending every assistance he can to their cause."

"I didn't know he'd actually done anything. How mad!"

"Yes—for a man with interests in federal territory. But Ed always does the wrong thing, you know."

"Then I presume this confiscation is in the nature of a reprisal. But the stock is mine, not Ed's. I want your help in taking up the matter with Washington."

Ellsworth was pessimistic. "It won't do any good, my dear," he said. "You won't be paid for your cattle."

"Then I shall go to La Feria."

"No!" The judge shook his head decidedly.

"I've been there a hundred times. The federals have been more than courteous."

"Longorio has a bad reputation. I strongly advise against your going. You'd better send some man."

"Whom can I send?" asked Alaire. "You know my situation."

The judge considered a moment before replying. "I can't go, for I'm busy in court. You could probably accomplish more than anybody else, if Longorio will listen to reason, and after all, you are a person of such importance that I dare say you'd be safe. But it will be a hard trip, and you won't know whether you are in rebel or in federal territory."

"Well, people here are asking whether Texas is in the United States or Mexico," Alaire said, lightly. "Sometimes I hardly know." After a moment she continued: "Since you know everything and everybody, I wonder if you ever met a David Law?" Ellsworth nodded.

"Tell me something about him."

"He asked me the same thing about you. Well, I haven't seen much of Dave since he grew up, he's such a roamer."

"He said his parents were murdered by the Guadalupe."

"Yes. It happened a good many years ago, and certainly they both met a violent end. I was instrumental in saving what property Frank Law left, but it didn't last Dave very long. He's right cerebral in money matters. Dave's

ALAIRE AUSTIN MEETS GEN. LUIS LONGORIO OF THE MEXICAN FEDERAL ARMY WHEN SHE GOES TO LA FERIA AND CAPTIVATES HIM COMPLETELY

Mrs. Alaire Austin, a handsome young matron, mistress of La Palmas ranch, gets lost in the Texas desert and after an all-day struggle wanders into the little camp of David Law, a ranger hunting a Mexican murderer. Circumstances force her to stay 24 hours in camp. Law catches his man, kills another, and escorts her home. "Young Ed," Austin, drunken wastrel, upbraids his wife and makes insinuations concerning the ranger officer. Austin is secretly in league with Mexican rebels. Mrs. Austin starts for La Feria, her ranch in Mexico, to secure damages for cattle confiscated by Mexican federals.

a fine fellow in some ways—most ways, I believe, but—" The judge lost himself in frowning meditation. "I have never known you to damn a friend or a client with such faint praise," said Alaire.

"Oh, I don't mean it that way. I'm almost like one of Dave's kin, and I've been keenly interested in watching his traits develop. I'm interested in heredity. I've watched it in Ed's case, for instance. If you know the parents it's easy to read their children." Again he lapsed into silence, nodding to himself. "Yes, nature mixes her prescriptions like any druggist. I'm glad you and Ed—have no babies."

Alaire murmured something unintelligible.

CHAPTER V.

A Journey, and a Dark Man.

Alaire's preparations for the journey to La Feria were made with little delay. Owing to the condition of affairs across the border, Ellsworth had thought it wiser to provide her with letters from the most influential Mexicans in the neighborhood; what is more, in order to pave her way toward a settlement of her claim he succeeded in getting a telegram through to Mexico City—Ellsworth's influence was not bounded by the Rio Grande.

Alaire took Dolores with her, and for male escort she selected, after some deliberation, Jose Sanchez, her horse-breaker. Benito could not well be spared. Sanchez had some force and initiative, at least and Alaire had no reason to doubt his loyalty. The party went to Pueblo by motor. On the following day, Alaire secured her passports from the federal headquarters across the Rio Grande, while Jose attended to the railroad tickets. On the second morning after leaving home the party was borne southward into Mexico.

The revolution had ravaged most of northern Mexico; long rows of rusting trucks and twisted car skeletons beside the track showed how the railway's rolling stock had suffered in this particular vicinity; and as the train penetrated farther south temporary trestles and the charred ruins of station houses spoke even more eloquently of the struggle. Now and then a steel water tank, pierced with loopholes and ripped by cannon balls, showed where some detachment had made a stand. There was a military guard on the train, too—a dozen unkempt soldiers loaded down with rifles and bandoliers of cartridges, and several officers, neatly dressed in khaki, who rode in the first-class coach and occupied themselves by making eyes at the women.

At its frequent stops, the train was beset by the customary crowd of curious peons; the same noisy hucksters dealt out enchiladas, tortillas, goat cheeses and coffee from the same dirty baskets and pails; even their outstretched hands seemed to bear the familiar grime of ante-bellum days. The coaches were crisscrossed; women fanned themselves unceasingly; their men snored, open-mouthed, over the backs of the seats, and the aisles were full of squalling, squabbling children.

As for the country itself, it was dying. The ranches were stripped of stock, no carts creaked along the highways, and the roads, like the little farms, were growing up to weeds. Stores were empty, the people were idle. Over all was an atmosphere of decay, and what was far more significant, the people seemed content.

All morning the monotonous journey continued—a trial to Alaire and Dolores, but to Jose Sanchez a red-letter experience. He covered the train from end to end, making himself acquainted with everyone and bringing to Alaire the gossip that he picked up.

It was not until midday that the first interruption occurred; then the train pulled in upon a siding, and after an interminable delay it transpired that a northbound troop-train was expected.

Jose brought this intelligence: "Soon you will behold the flower of the Mexican army," he told Alaire. "You will see thousands of Longorio's veterans, every man of them a very devil for blood. They are returning to Nuevo Pueblo after destroying a band of those rebels. They had a great victory at San Pedro—thirty kilometers from La Feria. Not a prisoner was spared, senora."

"Is General Longorio with them?" Alaire inquired quickly.

"That is what I came to tell you. It is believed that he is, for he takes his army with him wherever he goes. He is a great fighter; he has a nose for it, that man, and he strikes like the lightning—here, there, anywhere. Jose, it seemed, was a rabid Potosista.

"When the train arrives," she told her horse-breaker. "I want you to find General Longorio and ask him to come here."

"But, senora!" Jose was dumfounded, shocked. "He is a great general—"

"Give him this note." Quickly writing a few lines on a page from her notebook, she gave him the scrap of paper, which he carefully placed in his hat; then, shaking his head doubtfully, he left the car.

Flushed with triumph, Dolores took the first occasion to enlarge upon her theme.

"You will see what a monster this Longorio is," she declared. "It was like him to steal your beautiful cattle; he would steal a crucifix."

"I've heard that," Alaire said gravely.

In the course of time the military train came creaking along on the main track and stopped, to the great interest of the south-bound travelers. It was made up of many stock cars crowded with cavalry horses, and penned in with them were the women and the children. The soldiers themselves were clustered thickly upon the car roofs. Far down at the rear of the train was a rickety passenger coach, and toward this Jose Sanchez made his way.

There began a noisy interchange of greetings between the occupants of the two trains, and meanwhile the hot sun glared balefully upon the huddled figures on the car tops. A half-hour passed, then occurred a commotion at the forward end of Alaire's coach.

A group of officers climbed aboard, and among them was one who could be none other than Luis Longorio. As he came down the passageway Alaire identified him without the aid of his insignia, for he stood head and shoulders above his companions and bore himself with an air of authority. He was unusually tall, at least six feet three, and very slim, very lithe; a young man; his cheeks were girlishly smooth and of a clear, pale, olive tint; his eyes were large, bold, brilliant; his nostrils thin and sensitive, like those of a blooded horse. Disdain, hauteur, impatience, were stamped upon the general's countenance as he pushed briskly through the crowd, turning his head from side to side in search of the woman who had summoned him.

Not until she rose did he discover Alaire; then he halted; his eyes fixed themselves upon her with a start of startled amazement.

Alaire felt herself color faintly, for the man seemed to be scanning her from head to foot, taking in every detail of her face and form, and as he did so his expression remained unaltered. For what seemed a full minute Longorio stood rooted; then the stiffened cap was swept from his head; he bowed with the grace of a courtier until Alaire saw the part in his oily black hair.

"Senora! A thousand apologies for my delay," he said. "Caramba! I did not dream—I did not understand your message." He continued to regard her with that same queer intensity.

"You are General Longorio?" Alaire was surprised to note that her voice quavered uncertainly, and annoyed to feel her face still flushing.

"Your obedient servant."

Longorio, with a brusque command, routed out the occupants of the seat ahead, and reversing the back, took a position facing Alaire. Another order and the men who had accompanied him withdrew up the aisle. There was no mistaking his admiration. He seemed enchanted by her pale beauty, her rich, red hair held him fascinated, and with Latin boldness he made his feelings crassly manifest.

"You probably know why I wished to see you," Alaire began.

Longorio shook his head in vague denial.

"It is regarding my ranch, La Feria." Seeing that the name conveyed nothing, she explained, "I am told that your army confiscated my cattle."

"Ah, yes! Now I understand." The Mexican nodded mechanically, but it was plain that he was not heeding her words in the least. As if to shut out a vision or to escape some dazzling sight, he closed his eyes. Alaire wondered if the fellow had been drinking. She turned to Dolores to find that good woman wearing an expression of stupefaction. It was very queer; it made Alaire extremely ill at ease.

Longorio opened his eyes and passed a brown hand across his brow as if to brush away perverse fancies that interfered with his thoughts. Alaire noticed that one of his fingers was decorated with a magnificent diamond-and-ruby ring, and this interested her queerly. No ordinary man could fittingly have worn such an ornament, yet on the hand of this splendid barbarian it seemed not at all out of keeping.

"Dios!" Longorio continued. "Your ranch has been destroyed; your cattle stolen, eh? We will shoot the perpetrators of this outrage at once. Bueno!"

"No, no! I don't want to see anyone punished. I merely want your government to pay me for my cattle." Alaire laughed nervously.

"Ah! But a lady of refinement should never discuss such a miserable business. It is a matter for men."

She endeavored to speak in a brisk, businesslike tone. "La Feria belongs to me. I am a woman of affairs, General Longorio, and you must talk to me as you would talk to a man. When I heard about this raid I came to look into it—to see you, or whoever is in charge of this district, and to make a claim for damages."

"Valgame Dios! This is amazing." "There is nothing extraordinary about it, that I can see."

"You consider such a woman as yourself ordinary? The men of my country enshrine beauty and worship it. They do not discuss such things with their women. Now this sordid affair is something for your husband—"

"Mr. Austin's business occupies his time; this is my own concern. I am not the only practical woman in Texas."

Longorio appeared to be laboriously digesting this statement. "So!" he said at last. "When you heard of this—you came, eh? You came alone into Mexico, where we are fighting and killing each other? Well! That is spirit. You are wonderful, superb!" He smiled, showing the whitest and evenest teeth.

Such extravagant homage was embarrassing, yet no woman could be wholly displeased by admiration so spontaneous and intense as that which Longorio manifested in every look and word. Alaire knew the susceptibility of Mexican men, and was immune to ordinary flattery; yet there was something exciting about this martial hero's complete captivation. To have charmed him to the point of bewilderment was a unique triumph, and under his hungry eyes she felt an adventurous thrill.

While he and Alaire were talking the passengers had returned to their seats; they were shouting good-bys to the soldiers opposite; the conductor approached and informed the general of his train orders.

Longorio favored him with a slow stare. "You may go when I leave," said he.

"Si, senor. But—"

The general uttered a sharp exclamation of anger, at which the conductor backed away, expressing by voice and gesture his most hearty approval of the change of plan.

"We mustn't hold the train," Alaire said quickly. "I will arrange to see you in Nuevo Pueblo when I return."

Longorio smiled brilliantly and lifted a brown hand. "No, no! I am a selfish man; I refuse to deprive myself of this pleasure. Now about these cattle." He thought for a moment, and his tone altered as he said: "Senora, there seems to be an unhappy complication in our way, and this we must remove. First, may I ask, are you a friend to our cause?"

"I am an American, but what has that to do with my ranch and my cattle? This is something that concerns no one except you and me."

Longorio was plainly flattered by her words, and took no trouble to hide his pleasure. "Ah! If that were only true! We would arrange everything to your satisfaction without another word." His admiring gaze seemed to envelop her, and its warmth was unmistakable.

"Why did you take my cattle?" she demanded, stubbornly.

Alaire is flattered by Longorio's extravagant attentions, but they soon become mighty irksome—as described in the next installment.

Buds Which Never Blossom. There is nothing that supplies so prolific a subject of conversation for the uninitiated in things automobilistic as artificial flowers in the auto vases. "If I could afford an automobile," announces Mrs. Bunk, with a disdainful stare at the offending blossoms, "I guess I'd have real flowers." For the sake of the many Mrs. Bunks it may be stated that there is another reason besides economy for those perennial buds. Real water need not be used, and that saves many a gown and motor's furnishings from drippings and drenchings in sudden joits.

Passing Strange. A parrot can kiss 1,000 times an hour. Wonder how the motion picture producers came to overlook the parrot?

DADDY'S EVENING FAIRY TALE BY MARY GRAHAM BONNER

THE WHIPPOORWILLS.

In the deep and dark woods, where there were many rocks, and where people seldom went, lived Mr. and Mrs. Whippoorwill and the two small Whippoorwill children, who only a short time ago had been little eggs. They had been creamy Never a sound white eggs with Did He Make dark spots, and they had been lying in some dry leaves.

The whippoorwills guard their young if danger is near, but when they are little eggs they are not sheltered by a home-nest—the ground does well enough for them.

Perhaps Mother Whippoorwill thinks it is a mistake to begin by spoiling her children, but she is not a hard-hearted mother, as this would seem. No, she is always ready to defend them from enemies.

Now, Mr. Whippoorwill is about the size of a robin, but he looks longer because he has great, long wings. He is covered with reddish-brown feathers, and sometimes grayish-white. He has a fine white collar and his quills are decorated with white. He has bristles all about his beak, which is very large. One night—for the whippoorwills love the night-time, a boy thought he would like to catch a whippoorwill and have him for a pet. He loved the wonderful song of the whippoorwill—which is a beautiful, rather sad note. The whippoorwills only sing when away from people, and they love to be by themselves. That is why they choose their homes where people will not come.

At first the boy heard the whippoorwills singing their sad, lovely note over and over again. Then he tried to catch them, but they fly off so silently he could not do it.

In the daytime they were always asleep, and no one could have found them, because their wings look like the rocks in color.

But one night he caught Mr. Whippoorwill. "Ah," he said, "I will be very good to you. You may have a big place to fly about in, for I have made it with wire in the yard. And you will have a little home of your own. I will not keep you in a small cage. That would be cruel."

The little boy hadn't thought that it would be cruel to keep the whippoorwill in any way—the bird who loves solitude—or being alone.

At night he listened to hear his whippoorwill sing, but never a sound did he make. Then he thought it was because Mr. Whippoorwill was with-out his mate, and after a long time he caught Mrs. Whippoorwill.

Now he would surely have the glorious whippoorwill singing every evening, he thought.

But not a sound did he hear. In fact they seemed to have forgotten their note—they had left it behind in the woods.

You see, the whippoorwill will not sing in captivity. He is utterly miserable then, and he longs to be back where he can be alone and away from creatures. Then, at night, when it is quiet and dark, we can sometimes hear his glorious note.

The boy did not know what to make of it, but at last he let them go. Oh! The joy of spreading their wings towards the dark woods! How wonderful it was! And to see the whippoorwill children! To feel the dark, cool woods, to sleep all day, to work all night.

For the whippoorwills do a great deal of good work. They catch bad insects when they are flying. The whippoorwills enjoy eating the insects for breakfast and dinner, and they do away with insects which would injure trees and shrubs.

"Ah," said Mr. Whippoorwill, when he was back in the woods, "I must see if I can find Them. The Boy Heard me. I left it in the woods behind me."

"So did I," said Mrs. Whippoorwill. And to their great delight they found their notes again—they had just been quiet deep down in their throats, for they had left the woods, and their little bird hearts had been too sad for singing. The children joined in too. And the boy heard them all.

"They sing now," he said, "and they don't like to be caught." And how glad the Whippoorwills were that the boy understood.

urday night which was enjoyed by a very nice crowd.

Mrs. Pick Warden was up from Carrizozo Sunday visiting Mrs. Atwood Littell.

Mrs. Anna T. Brown is slowly recovering from a severe illness, though not yet able to smile across the counter in the store on the corner of which she is the sole snucks.

Word comes from Roswell that Mrs. Lund, a former resident of this place, died there last Sunday and was buried Tuesday. Mrs. Lund was the mother of Mrs. Wm. Watson of White Oaks, who has been at her bedside for several months past and is expected home the latter part of this week.

There is a rumor that Julian Taylor, of Carrizozo has bought the Oliver Peaker ranch just above town, and will move back to the old town in a few days, where he germinated, grew up, and got married.

Ed Queen had the misfortune to get his hand badly lacerated a few days ago while fixing well casing at his residence. While no bones were broken, some of the leaders were badly bruised and torn, making an extremely painful wound. This is made more unfortunate following so closely on the accident of his young son who suffered a compound fracture of his leg a week or so ago.

Speak of coming back, that old western wanderer, J. D. McAdams, has the Homer pigeon and the black cat skinned alive. He quietly slipped into the town for the 'steenth time a few nights ago.

It appears to be a good season for Mc anyway: W. H. McMillian the very reliable engineer of the power plant which moves and lights this section of the southwestern hemisphere, motored in last evening from unfenced ranges of western Texas, greatly to the relief of Harry Dyer, his understudy, who has kept the wheels going around during his escapade. Before starting over a month ago, Mc had Bob Taylor make a trailer for the purpose of taking on a month's grub, bedding, fishing bait and the like, and the dinky contraption seems to have followed him all the way around, and came back loaded with Texas products and Pecos watermelons.

Thomas F. Rice of Richmond, Ky., and Glen T. Twiddy from the land of Hoosier Poets, motored in from Roswell Tuesday afternoon hunting health and high altitude, and will stay and sample our climate for a month or two.

John C. Kleping, one of the original bunch that was here at the christening of White Oaks 37 years ago, left last week to visit his brothers near Lafayette, Ind., for an indefinite time. As he is a civil war veteran, and over 80 years of age, it is doubtful if his face will again be seen on our streets.

If your child is pale and sickly, picks at the nose, starts in the sleep and grinds the teeth while sleeping, it is a sure sign of worms. A remedy for these parasites will be found in WHITE'S CREAM VERMIFUGE. It not only clears out the worms, but it restores health and cheerfulness. Price 25c per bottle. Sold by all dealers.

It is amazing how much better an old fashioned ham sandwich tastes when it is served at a fashionable tea room with a fancy name like the Green Dandelion or the Corner Cupboard.

KEEP OLD GLORY FLYING.

"Hans Von La Follette"

The peace resolution introduced in the Senate by our distinguished senator, LaFollette, provides that United States define definitely the objects for which it shall continue to wage war and that the allies also make a public re-statement of the peace terms which they will demand.

The resolution seeks to put congress on record as opposing support by the United States for annexations or indemnities for other nations and proposes the amassing of a common fund by all the belligerents for restoration of battle-devastated territory.

The reading public will not be surprised at this, the latest move of the senator, for we are well aware of the fact that has continually opposed his own country's interests at every opportunity and has played into the hands of Germany since the beginning of hostilities. And should he accomplish what he now advocates, it would give Germany a chance to recover from her present condition of weakness and endanger the interests of the cause of democracy. Senator LaFollette is not sincere in this stand—it is a matter of politics with him, from the fact that he lives in a state decidedly German. It is the voice of his constituents and not his own, therefore he should be held as a traitor and dealt with accordingly.

Food Control

The great Government of the United States now has control of the food supply and with it the power to fix prices and drastic action will be taken if it finds that constructive cooperation with food producing and distributing industries fail.

Mr. Hoover declares that the existence of conservative powers will tend to check speculation and price inflation.

The Government can now go about the business of restoring prices and investigation will be conducted according to recent advices from Washington which say:

"The federal trade commission, authorized some time ago to conduct an investigation into food prices with special reference to anti-trust law it will turn over to the two agencies and to the department of justice.

"The first move of the food administration will be to bring about changes in the system of distributing wheat and in the manufacture and sale of flour and bread. It will take up next the production of meat and dairy foods. The trade commission has investigators now in the flour mills and in the meat packing houses.

Germany's Tender Heart

The Associated Press, the greatest and most accurate news-gathering agency that the world has produced, last week carried the following story, which was transmitted by Wireless Press from Amsterdam to London.

"The German authorities at Liège Belgium, arrested, tried, and sentenced to death within three days an influential Liège merchant named Gronret, his wife and their two daughters, aged 20 and 14, on the unproved charge of espionage.

The father and mother were both shot to death in the presence of their daughters. The latter were offered their freedom if they revealed the names of their parent's accomplices. The girls refused, the eldest stating, 'If we speak we might cause 50 people to be killed. We would rather die alone!'

She was immediately shot. The younger girl then was tortured, outraged and also shot.

Newspaperless County

Rio Arriba one of the oldest and wealthiest counties in New Mexico, returns a total assessment which makes a bad showing. It is the only county that shows a decrease since last year. The number of sheep has shrunk from 213,682 to 91,822.

There are no town lots in the county, no newspaper or printing plants, no electric light plants, no surface improvements on mines, no commercial water rights, no oats, no corn, no barley no coal, no motor trucks no motorcycle, no bicycles, no capital invested in manufactures, no steam laundry, no garage, no ice manufacturing plant, no creamery not a single share or stock in any corporation is owned in the county, no judgments, no tax sale certificates, no fence posts, no mine props, no mortgages, in fact Rio Arriba county is in a pretty bad way according to the tax rolls. It is true, there are $170 worth of books in the county, or almost a cents worth of books for each inhabitant; 32 automobiles valued at $13,600; banks $25,040; 5 adding machines $345; 14 typewriters $495; 15 cash registers $935; 41 scales $887; 11 gold watches $275; 7 silver watches $65; 424 sewing machines $5,301; 210 tons of hay $2,853; money notes and credits $23,800; cut lumber $15,400; household furniture $57,696; carriages and wagons $35,058; saddles, robes and harness $19,820; farming implements $20,308; gold and silver plate $360; musical instruments $3,440.

Those Mother!

We have always felt authorized to love almost any mother since the day we learned that there never was a kid so ugly but that it looked beautiful to its mother's heart. You know a mother looks with her heart, don't you?

The Herbert Hoover Bureau of Food administration is looking for competent speakers to help conduct its campaign for "Food Conservation." The Bureau has written to Mrs. Lindsey as chairman of the Women's Auxiliary for the names of the best speakers in the state—not only women but men as well, who will be able to carry the gospel of conservation direct to the people.

It is well to remember that when we fought our War of Independence we were not fighting for the nation which did not then exist, but freedom for the various units. Today we are fighting for the same thing—for freedom. If we loose this war, we lose all that our War of Independence gained for us, we lose all that the United States stands for. If we win it, who can not doubt that a greater freedom and greater democracy than that of a single nation will be born?

The Austrian Emperor says his brave troops received the Aid of the Almighty in effecting the deliverance of the Bukowins to which Emperor "Bill" adds that God will continue to aid the Teutonic Allies in the future.

Verily the God of the Teutonic Allies is a magnified human being with flesh blood bones and whiskers: "Big Man With a Club."

If the price of alfalfa hay gets much higher Texas farmers are threatening to adulterate it with ordinary smoking tobacco.

Red Cross History

Local women interested in the Red Cross are devoting all of their spare time to work set apart for the organization. The Red Cross, the symbol of the organization, has an interesting history. It is set forth by a recent writer as follows: "Why the Red Cross?" And why the almost universal use of the symbol? In the middle of the sixteenth century it was revived for it had been used formerly as the distinctive sign of the crusader and the military orders of the church had made use of it more or less as a badge.

"It is related the mother of St. Camillus de Lellis that she dreamed she had a child whose breast was marked with a red cross. The vision troubled her. She could not understand it, and it seemed a portent of woe. The Lady Camilla died while her child was still a boy and anything but a saint. It was years later, when he became converted that he set out to find his order. "The Ministers of the sick." taking for the distinctive badge of the new organization the Red Cross that his mother had beheld in a vision. From its use by the hospitals of St. Camillus it came to be employed as a universal sign whenever the sick were to be cared for, whether they were at the hospitals of the Ministers of the sick, or in others. "So the nations of the world are indebted to the church for the flag that flies over the field hospital or ambulance party, and the badges which nurses, doctors and stretcher-bearers carry in time of war, which are supposed to protect them from deliberate attack by a civilized enemy.

Miss Gussie Linn, niece of Mr. Ben West is visiting relatives in Carrizozo.

Carrizozo Youth in Merited Training

Mr. Charles Henry Lutz, son of Mayor Lutz, will leave in a few days for Leon Springs, Texas to report for duty at the Officer's Training Camp. Mr. Lutz is a graduate of Roswell Military Institute, and finished his course with high honors. In his early boyhood M. Lutz displayed a deep interest in military affairs and when the opportunity presented itself for development he eagerly grasped it and the consequence was Mr. Lutz's high standing in his military examination at the Roswell institute. And as his advancement so far has been, it is safe to say that success will attend his future career in military circles and to this end the best wishes of his friends from his home town will follow him.

Four Millions a Year Prairie Dogs Cost

Four million dollars a year, in round numbers, is what it costs the state of New Mexico to provide homes, food and amusement for prairie dogs and the few other rodents that are aiding and abetting in the work of destruction.

The estimates show that the damage to crops is $1,200,000, and to the range $2,000,000. These figures do not include the damage that is done on the national forest reserves.

The federal government is mindful of the terrific destruction, and is working direct, as well as with the co-operation of the several states, to exterminate the pests. The biological survey, Department of Agriculture, has been at work for several years in the national forest reserves of New Mexico. Three parties are now actively engaged in the field.

The biological survey uses poisoned grain, as the most effective means of putting an everlasting quietus upon the prairie dogs and jackrabbits. Strychnine is the drug used.

J. G. Crick, of the biological survey, is in charge of the work in New Mexico. Just now he is acting in co-operation with state authorities, through the county organizations. Beginning with A. C. Cooley, director of extension of the College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts, Mr. Crick has had conferences with several of the county agents, and has assisted in getting the work under way. He will return to Santa Fe county some time in the latter part of August and spend a week or ten days in getting the work thoroughly organized.

Birds Trained to Fish.

As hawks were trained to hunt, a peculiar species of bird was trained to fish. The bird found to be most adaptable for the purpose was the cormorant an oceanic bird, similar to the pelican and feeding almost exclusively on fish. It is intermediate in size, between a duck and a goose, and some of the thirty species inhabiting the world have beautiful plumage which has a sheen of green, blue and purple.

Charley, aged three, was spending the day with his grandparents. The grandfather wanted to read, but Charley was playing boisterously. MARRYING AGAINST WISHES OF FAMILY

By LAURA JEAN LIBBEY.

An old farmhouse with meadows wide,
Sweet with clover on either side;
A bright-eyed youth, who looks from out
The door with woodbine wreathed with Wishes, this one thought all the day:
"Oh, if I could but fly away
From this dull spot the world to see, How happy I would be."

What youth of one and twenty and maid of sweet sixteen if they happened to become enamored of one another would not tell you that there is just one person in the world for them, and each has met that one? It is all in vain for relatives or friends to attempt to dissuade them from their feeling.
The young man declares he will leave home and all belonging to him and go out into the world to earn fame and fortune for the girl he has chosen.
The maid declares that if she cannot wed the hero of her heart she will never, never marry. Though her lips may not complain her sad eyes will be a reproach to those who have separated her from her love for all time to come.

How the parents are to deal with such a determined young couple is a problem. The youth's parents know that it is his nature to fall quickly in love, and as quickly climb out of it.
The girl's parents realize that the kind of man who fills her fancy at sixteen she would possibly be heartily tired of at two and twenty.

They met at a ball. The girl in her tulle party dress, white gloves, white slippers and pink roses, looked very alluring. He has taken her home from dances, perhaps a half-dozen times and at the end of that time proposed marriage. Neither had peeped beyond the first chapter of the book of life. Their entire conversation had been about other girls and boys—what a jolly good time they had had at the skating rink or barn-dance. Yet these two kiddings considered themselves in love and had the notion that they ought to wed.

The boy's father does his best to have a serious talk with his son, endeavoring to make him understand that married life is something more than continuous love-making; that it entails obligations, such as winning the support of two, to start with; that a pretty sweetheart transferred to the kitchenette is not always the amiable companion a youth fondly believes she would be.

The girl's parents do their best to make her understand that a young man should have at least a start in life before he essays matrimony; that all love-making, no work, would put out the kitchen fire. If, despite earnest parental advice on both sides, the young people take their own heads and marry, they have only themselves to blame for much of the tribulations that may follow. Parents on both sides should be eager for the match, then it will turn out happily.

Brother Needed Attention.

Governor and Mrs. Stanley of Kentucky have an interesting young family. They are also regular Sunday school attendants. The youngest member of the house of Stanley has been very much indulged, but lately the wise mother has taught him that he must not ask God for such things as he coveted. The small heir ceased praying after that for a speckled pony and cart, which a little friend of his owned.

One night not long since the governor and his lady were entertaining guests in the executive mansion when the elder boy called his mother to the foot of the stairs. The visitors were amused to hear the lad saying, in a stage whisper:

"Mother, I wish you'd come up here to brother—he's worrying the Lord again about that speckled pony and dog-cart."—Harper's Magazine.

Grenades of Many Types.

The grenade has become one of the leading weapons of the European war.
Each belligerent uses several types, Austria as many as six. Grenades are thrown by hand by means of a special "rocket," by catapults, shot from guns and from trench mortars. Hand grenades have a range of some twenty-five or thirty yards. The grenades fired from mortars may range up to five hundred yards. The most powerful grenade is a Danish invention. It is shot from a mortar, weighs about three pounds, and in addition scattering the fragments of its case on explosion, it carries some 250 bullets.

SOIL FOR STRAWBERRY

ONE OF FIRST REQUISITES OF RIPENING FRUIT IS MOISTURE.

Stiff Clay is to Be Avoided Because It Cannot Be Worked Early in Season Without Becoming Cloddy and is Apt to Bake.

(By J. A. BAUER.)

The soil and location best adapted to strawberry culture will vary somewhat in different sections. In a general way we have said that any soil that would grow good crops of corn or potatoes would grow good strawberries, and while this seems to be a pretty safe rule, it is also true that in order to grow them to the best advantage it is necessary to have the soil especially adapted. One of the first requisites of the ripening fruit is moisture, and care should be taken that this is provided. Hence a very dry or loose, sandy soil would not be a safe location, although in moist seasons a fair crop might be harvested.
Neither is a stiff clay adapted to strawberry growth, as very early in Perfect or Staminate. Imperfect or Pistillate.

season it cannot be worked without becoming cloddy, and later is apt to bake, and the plants will suffer more than on sandy soil. It would seem that a sandy loam or loam with slight mixture of clay should, if properly handled, give the best results.

Having chosen a soil retentive of moisture, it next becomes necessary to prepare for proper drainage in case of excessive rainfall, unless the natural lay of the land is such that no water will stand upon the surface. The drains are the only practical ones to use. Open ditches will, perhaps, answer this purpose, but are unsatisfactory in many ways.

In planning your strawberry field care should be taken to avoid frosty locations, such as very low land near marshes or lakes, also valleys where there is no chance for circulation of air, as these localities are very liable to heavy frosts, when higher land or that more open to circulation would show little, if any. A hard frost at blossoming time often ruins the entire crop.

The best land one can use is a clover field. After plowing fertilize with a mixture of three pounds of nitrogen,

Proper and Improper Method of Setting Strawberries—Plant at Top, Properly Set; at Left, Too Deep; at Right, Too Shallow.

seven pounds of phosphoric acid and nine pounds of potash, using about eight hundred pounds to the acre.

After about two or three crops the land should be plowed up and after one or two clover crops reset.

Just to find out what varieties of strawberries are best adapted to one's particular soil or climate, it is well to visit neighboring farmers of that locality, and determine by their experience; or, a limited number of plants can be tried.

CLEAN AND STORE PLANTERS

Implements Should Be Put Away Carefully for Another Year—Keep in Good Condition.

As soon as the farmer has finished using the planters for this year, they should be cleaned and put away carefully, so that they will be in good condition for another year. Often by carelessly allowing planters to lay around uncared for, one has to buy a new one the following season, or at least hunt for lost parts. Every plate and other part of the planters should be stored carefully away, and the planter left ready for use another year. Prices of machinery are advancing as well as prices of foodstuffs, and there is no reason why the farmer should not take unusually good care of all implements on the farm.

Benefits of Fanning Mill.
The fanning mill judiciously used will do much toward increasing the yield of every crop of small grain as well as assist in keeping the fields free of weeds.

SILO QUALIFICATIONS.

It should be air-tight, to keep the air out and the juices in.
It should be smooth, to permit the silage to settle without leaving air spaces along the wall.
It should be constructed of durable material which will not decay or blow down.
The diameter should be such that from two to three inches of silage will be fed off each day.
There is an advantage in the tall silo, because the silage at the bottom is compressed by the weight of that above.
It should be so built that it can withstand the bursting pressure of the silage. The weight of silage differs from year to year, according to the amount of moisture in the silage.

FEEDING FARM WORK HORSES

Farmers Are Urged to Utilize Home-Grown Feeds to Fullest Extent—Grain is Essential.

In feeding horses utilize home-grown feeds to the fullest extent. In a section where corn can be well raised, this grain ought to constitute the greater portion of the concentrated feed for work horses.

Corn alone can be used as a grain feed for work horses. If a good quality of alfalfa or clover hay is fed for roughage. When combined with mixed hay or timothy hay, a grain combination of three parts corn and one part oats by weight is a satisfactory mixture.

If oats are scarce and high in price, cottonseed-meal or oilmeal may be substituted for the protein furnished by the oats. One-third to one-half pound of linseed meal will, with the amount secured through mixed hay, furnish sufficient protein for a 1,500-pound working horse.

A horse at farm work requires from 1 1/2 to 1 3/4 pounds of grain per 100 pounds live weight daily. Feed grain sufficient to keep the horse in good working condition. Hay may be limited to the standard of a pound of hay to 100 pounds live weight daily. Reduce the grain one-half on days when the horse is idle to avoid azoturia.

ENTRANCE IS CATTLE-PROOF

ning east and west, place one post on the west, one on the north, one on the east, and one on the south. Nail the rails on the two posts east and west, and you will have an entrance that is always open for a person but closed to a cow. Put one of these gates in your cowyard fence where you enter often.

SWISS CHARD FOR CHICKENS

Leaves Make Best of Green Food for Fowls, and Many Raise It Especially for That Purpose.

Swiss chard is fine if not allowed to get too large. It should be kept picked rather, closely. The leaves make the best of green food for the hens and chickens, and many poultry keepers raise it especially for this purpose.

MOST NUTRITIOUS OF FOODS

Sweet Corn is More Easily Dried Than Almost Any Other Vegetable —Plant Good Supply.

(By R. W. THATCHER, Minnesota Experiment Station.)

Dried sweet corn is one of the most nutritious foods. Sweet corn is more easily dried than almost any other garden vegetable. For these reasons very large amounts of sweet corn should be dried this summer for use next winter. It can be planted on small tracts or in large fields and is one of the most easily cultivated garden crops.

For table use, small lots of quickmaturing varieties like the Early Golden Bantam should be planted; but for drying for a winter use, the larger and heavier yielding sorts, as Country Gentleman and Stowell's Evergreen, should be used.

Let everyone who has a garden or field available plant plenty of sweet corn to give a summer supply and a large excess to be dried for winter use.

PLAYERS "WITH A PAST" ARE POPULAR THIS YEAR

Return to Big Leagues of Bobby Wallace, Veteran of Veterans, Shows Trend of the Times.

Major league magnates and managers are showing a strong preference this year for ball players "with a past."

In ordinary times the big league pilots pay little attention to pill toss-ers who have seeped back and forth from the minors to the big show. They usually break their necks bidding for the "phenoms" who spring up in the tall and uncult sticks, and they have paid some fabulous prices for this class of players.

But 1917 is no ordinary year. The majors have been slow to sign youngsters and seemingly eager to jump at the chance of getting players who have had big league experience, but who, because of age or some minor defects, have failed to stick on big time.

The recent signing of Bobby Wallace by the Cardinals is a most vivid example of this tendency. Bobby Wallace, the veteran of veterans; a player whose name appeared in the box

Bobby Wallace.

scores before Lajoie broke into the limelight, is back again in the role of utility infielder with the Cards.

His comeback marks him to a 15-year absence from the National league, for he jumped from the Cardinals back in 1902 to cast his fortunes with the Browns, who were making their first start in St. Louis. His long years of service with the Browns and his ultimate release is remembered by all fans today. It seemed only natural that Wallace should step down and out, and when he was made a member of the Wichita (Western league) club the majors bid him good-by for all time.

But Wallace is back, and the owners of the Cardinals figure that he is a valuable asset, in which they are more than likely to be upheld by his work whenever the occasion arises to use him in the lineup.

The return of the veteran Wallace recalls the fact that 1917 has seen a

Some Cornmeal Dishes.
The rainy consistency of cornmeal is an advantage when used in griddle cakes or waffles, for it renders them very tender.

Cornmeal Pancakes.

Take two cupfuls of flour sifted with a teaspoonful and a half of baking powder, with the same amount of ing water to a half-cupful of cornmeal, cook five minutes, turn into a bowl and sugar and the flour mixture. Stir well, then add two tablespoonfuls of melted shortening. Cook on a greased griddle.

Serenity in Thick of Broil.

The environment of the commander in chief, Sir Douglas Haig, is strongly suggestive of his conduct of the war.
Before war became a thing of precise science the headquarters of an army head seethed with all the picturesque details so common to pictures of martial life. Couriers mounted on foam-flecked horses dashed to and fro; the air was vibrant with action; the fate of battle showed on the face of the humblest orderly. But today things are totally different. Although army units have risen from thousands to millions of men, and fields of operations stretch from sea to sea, and more ammunition is expended in a single engagement than was employed in entire wars of other days, absolute serenity prevails. It is only when your imagination conjures up the picture of flame and fury that lies beyond the horizon-line that you get a thrill.—Isaac F.
Marcosson in Everybody's.
