Spence-Sager Wedding Solemnized

The wedding of Miss Esther Sager and Charles Spence was quietly solemnized Saturday at 9:25 a. m. at the home of the bride, Rev. Charles L. Overstreet, of the First Presbyterian Church, of El Paso, officiating. The ceremony was witnessed by only the immediate relatives and a few friends of the young people. Following the wedding the newly-weds departed for a month's sojourn in California.

The bride is the charming daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Sager, and a '17 graduate of Ward-Belmont College of Nashville, Tenn. She has been reared in this vicinity, where she has a wide circle of friends.

The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Spence, one of Lincoln County's most prominent ranchers, and is a young man well and favorably known in this city.

Those present were: Father and mother of both bride and groom, Rev. Charles Overstreet, of El Paso; Mrs. George L. Ulrich, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Spence, Mr. John Y. Hewitt, White Oaks; Mrs. Louise A. Spence, Mr. and Mrs. Whitingham, Miss Sarah Spence, Mr. and Mrs. Walter A. Place, the Misses Florence Spence, Katherine Spence, Grace Spence, Marion Place, Lorena Haley, Oisen Haley, Lorena Sager, Angela and Faith Whitingham; Messrs. Will Spence, Joe Spence, Steve Peterson, of Iowa.

Labor Day Well Observed

Following the Labor Day proclamation of Mayor Lutz, the people of Carrizozo responded in a befitting manner. Business houses were closed as a rule, many American flags were flung to the breeze, and the people devoted themselves to different kinds of holiday enjoyment.

Automobile parties were arranged by some, while others who remained in town spent the day in quiet at their homes. A general observance of labor's holiday was plainly noticeable.

Hugh Clary, of the Wichita Federal Loan Bank, stopped over in Carrizozo Wednesday looking over land values in Lincoln county. He was at one time in the banking business at Las Cruces.

Miss Eva Braun, who has been visiting her aunt, Mrs. H. S. Fairbanks, has returned to her home in Tucuman.

Judge Edero Chavez, of Hondo, was in town Wednesday, attending to matters of an official nature.

Mrs. J. E. Farley and daughter Francis have returned to Carrizozo. They have been in Ocean Park, California the past several months.

Labor Day Celebration

On Monday last, W. C. Hyde, H. B. Hamilton, Ed. Harris, and their families, motored over to Nogal and took possession of the walnut grove at Uncle Tom Henley's place. After some consideration as to what they might add to their line of refreshments and lunch, it was thought best to see if the milk was still in the sweet corn; so Walker, assuring himself of the fact that he could "Hyde" more of the luxury than anyone else, procured several ten gallon lard cans in which to boil the corn. These vessels proved valuable, however, for, hardly had the first of the corn reached the boiling point, when visitors began to arrive unexpectedly, and so continued until, according to actual count, there were 53 persons in the party. The company disbanded at twilight, and some actually aver that one of the ten autos in the party did not arrive at Carrizozo until the early morning hours.

Sudan Grass for Feeding

An experiment of the Agronomy Department during the season of 1915 indicated that Sudan grass might prove to be an excellent pasture grass. Hence, on April 19, 1916, a seven-acre tract was seeded to this grass, at the rate of 20 pounds of seed per acre, using an ordinary Hoosier disk drill for the purpose. This piece of land was divided into two equal fields, which were arranged so that they could be conveniently irrigated and pastured alternately. By June 19, just sixty days after seeding, the grass was in excellent condition for pasturing, averaging eighteen inches in height, when twelve dairy cows, averaging 1058 pounds in weight, were turned into one of the fields. After a few days it was found that twelve cows were not sufficient to catch up with the growth the pasture was making, and eight more, larger cows, average weight, 1186 pounds, were added for twelve days, when the pasture was reduced to about the right condition, and the extra cows were removed.

The two fields were irrigated and pastured alternately during the season, the change being made at intervals of about two weeks. Heavy rains came about the middle of October, making these fields too muddy for use, when the cows were taken off and the experiment closed; but still later, in November, twenty-five head of dry cows and young stock were run on the two fields for a period of eight days, and had an abundant supply of feed during that time. Six of the twelve cows that were kept on the pasture constantly, day and night, from June 19 to October 18, had a small grain ration, averaging four pounds per head. The twelve cows were divided

Farewell Society Event

The Court House grounds were the scene of much merriment Thursday evening in honor of the "boys" who left for service Friday on No. 4.

The grounds were brilliantly illuminated. Ferguson and Nash furnished the music for the occasion, and dancing was indulged in until a late hour. Ice cream and cake were served, and the "boys" will long remember the pleasant occasion.

During the evening, speeches were made by Ex-Gov. W. C. McDonald and District Attorney H. B. Hamilton.

Never in the history of the town was there such a notable event, for, while those assembled gave themselves over to the enjoyment of the evening, the closing hours brought with them a sense of sorrow and regret that cannot be well described. While we admire the cause for which our "boys" have enlisted and applauded their bravery, yet we feel the loss we sustained by their departure.

The names of those to whom this event was tendered, are:

- Earl Eaker, White Oaks.
- James Brown, Coronado
- Ralph Dow, Lincoln
- Morgan Reilly, Wm. Gallacher, Tom Fitzpatrick of Carrizozo.

The merriment is over, the lights are out, and the "boys" have gone to respond to their country's summons and answer the bugle call.

School of Mines Attendance Will Be Good in Sept.

Socorro, N. M.: The New Mexico State School of Mines will open September 17. The prospective enrollment, while somewhat affected by voluntary enlistment and the draft, is gratifying. The consequent smaller classes will be a decided advantage to the student, since he will be in a position to receive constant individual instruction from the heads of departments--an impossibility in larger institutions.

The school has been fortunate in securing men for the faculty who combine strong teaching ability with a broad practical experience acquired in the mining field. The student will thus be constantly surrounded by the atmosphere of mining, with its breath of view, its rugged freedom, its everlasting practical problem of balancing costs. The importance of this influence is too often overlooked by young men entering upon courses leading to a degree in mining, civil, geological or metallurgical engineering. It is a very essential part of the education and can be acquired only in a purely mining institution, where the members of the faculty devote their entire time and energies to these specialties.

White Oaks Dance

About two hundred people assembled at the hall in White Oaks Wednesday evening at a dance given by George Ferguson and L. E. Nash. The management was highly pleased with the experiment and made the announcement that others of a like nature would follow. The attendance was composed of people both of White Oaks and Carrizozo.

The Kimbells and Miss Lorena Haley were in Parsons Sunday, the guests of the Rice family.

A party comprising J. S. Kimbell, Jno. Ulrey, and C. L. Hines are enjoying a week's fishing on Eagle Creek.

Mr. Roy Donaldson of Old Mexico, a cousin of D. S. Donaldson, has been in Mexico the past several months looking after his mining interests.

Mrs. W. K. Moore, granddaughter of Mr. N. B. Taylor, has lately accepted a position with the Bell Grocery. Mrs. Moore is well known in Carrizozo and has many friends here who wish her much success.

A delightful informal dance was given Monday night by some of the young people of the town to honor Bob Gilbert of El Paso. A Victrola furnished the music, and the long hall in the Wetmore apartment building was an ideal place for this entertainment.

DAVE LAW FOLLOWS A TRAIL OF CRIME THAT LEADS HIM TO A SURPRISING DESTINATION, BUT HE DETERMINES TO ENFORCE THE LAW TO THE LETTER

Mrs. Alairo Austin, handsome young mistress of Las Palmas ranch, lost in the Texas desert, wanders into the little camp of David Law, state ranger lying in ambush for a Mexican murderer.

The mist and an early dusk prevented him from seeing Las Palmas itself until he was well in among the irrigated fields.

Dave made himself known, and Benito answered his questions with apparent honesty. No, he had seen nothing of a sorrel horse or a strange rider, but he had just come in himself.

Juan was finally found, but he proved strangely recalcitrant. He admitted that he had seen a horse of the description given. Probably it belonged to some stranger.

Dave changed his tactics. "Oiga!" he said, sternly. "Do you want to go to jail?" Juan had no such desire.

Juan insolently declared he didn't know and didn't care. "Oh, you don't, eh?" Law reached for the boy, and shook him until he yelled.

Gonzalez was inclined to resent such high-handed treatment of his underling, but respect for the Rangers was deep-rooted, and Juan's behavior was inexplicable.

At last the horseboy confessed. He had seen both horse and rider, but knew neither. Mr. Austin and the stranger had arrived together, and the latter had gone on. That was the truth.

"Bueno!" Law released his prisoner, who slunk away rubbing his shoulder. "Now, Benito, we will find Mr. Austin."

A voice answered from the dusk: "He won't take much finding," and Ed Austin himself emerged from the stable door.

"You are Mr. Austin, I reckon?" "I am." "What d'you mean by abusing my help?" The master of Las Palmas approached so near that his threatening scowl was visible.

Amazed by this hostile greeting, Law explained in a word the reason for his presence. "I don't know anything about your man. What d'you want him for, and who are you?"

Dave introduced himself. "I want him for stealing Guzman's calves. I trailed him from where he and his partner cut into your south pasture."

Benito stirred and muttered an oath, but Austin was unmoved. "I reckon you must be a bad trailer," he laughed. "We've got no thieves here. What makes you think Guzman lost any calves?"

Dave's temper, never too well controlled at best, began to rise. He could not imagine why a person of Ed Austin's standing should behave in this extraordinary manner, unless, perhaps, he was drunk.

"Well, I saw the calves, and I left the fellow that was branding them with a wet saddle blanket over his face."

"Eh? What's that?" Austin started, and Gonzales uttered a smothered exclamation. "You killed him? He's dead?"

"Dead enough to skin. I caught him with his irons in the fire and the calves socked up in your pasture. Now I want his companions."

"I—hope you don't think we know anything about him," Ed protested.

"Where's that man on the sorrel horse?" Austin turned away with a shrug. "You rode in with him," Dave persisted.

Ed wheeled quickly. "How do you know I did?" "Your boy saw you."

The ranchman's voice was harsh as he said: "Look here, my friend, you're on the wrong track. The fellow I was with had nothing to do with this affair. Would you know your man? Did you get a look at him?"

"No. But I reckon Don Ricardo could tell his horse."

"Humph!" Austin grunted, disagreeably. "So just for that you come prowling around threatening my help, eh? Trying to frame up a case, maybe? Well, it don't go. I was out with one of Tad Lewis' men."

"What was his name?" Dave managed to inquire. "Urbina. He had a sorrel under him, but there are thousands of sorrel horses."

"What time did you meet him?" "I met him at noon, and—I've been with him ever since. So you see you're wrong. I presume your man doubled back and is laughing at you."

Law's first bewilderment had given place to a black rage; for the moment he was in danger of disregarding the reason for "Young Ed's" incivility and giving rein to his passion, but he checked himself in time.

"Would you mind telling me what you and this Urbina were doing?" Austin laughed mockingly. "That's my business," said he.

Dave moistened his lips. He hitched his shoulders nervously. He was astonished at his own self-control, though the certainty that Austin was drunk helped him to steady himself. Nevertheless, he dared not trust himself to speak.

Construing this silence as an acknowledgment of defeat, Ed turned to go. Some tardy sense of duty, however, prompted him to fling back, carelessly:

"I suppose you've come a good ways. If you're hungry, Benito will show you the way to the kitchen." Then he walked away into the darkness, followed by the shocked gaze of his range boss.

Benito roused himself from his amazement to say, warmly: "Si, compadre. You will enjoy a cup of hot coffee."

But Law ground out fiercely: "I'm not used to kitchen hand-outs. I reckon I can chew my bridle reins if I get too hungry." Walking to his horse, he vaulted into the saddle.

Benito laid a hand upon his thigh and apologized. "Senior Ed is a strange man. He is often like this lately. You understand me? Will you come to my house for supper?"

"Thank you, but I think I'll ride on to Tad Lewis' and see Urbina."

At this the Mexican shook his head as if apprehensive of the result, but he said nothing more.

Law hesitated as he was about to spur out of the yard. "By the way," he ventured, "you needn't mention this to Mrs. Austin."

"She is not here," Gonzales told him. "She has gone to La Feria to see about her affairs. She would not permit of this occurrence if she were at home. She is a very fine lady."

"It is very strange," he muttered. "How could Don Eduardo have met this Garza at noon when, with my own eyes, I saw him ride away from Las Palmas at three o'clock in the afternoon? It is very strange."

CHAPTER VIII.

Following Up the Trail.

Dave was glad that he had awakened "Young Ed's" incivility, not only for his own sake, but for the sake of Alaire. After all, he argued, it was barely possible that Ed had spoken the truth. There were many sorrel horses; the evidence of those rain-washed hoof-prints was far from conclusive; even the fact that Urbina belonged to the Tad Lewis outfit was no more than a suspicious circumstance.

It was late when he arrived at his destination, but Lewis' house was dark, and it required some effort to awaken the owner. When Tad at last appeared, clad in undershirt and trousers, he greeted the Ranger with a leveled rifle; but when Dave had made known his identity, he invited him in, though with surly reluctance.

Lewis was a sandy-complexioned man of about forty, with colorless brows and a mean, shifty eye. Formerly a cowboy, he had by the exercise of some natural ability acquired a good property—and a bad reputation. Just how or why he had prospered was a mystery which his neighbors never tired of discussing.

Tad, it seemed, resented any interruption of his rest, and showed the fact plainly.

Yes, he employed a fellow named Urbina. What was wanted of him? Law explained briefly.

"Why, he's one of my best men!" laughed the rancher. "He wouldn't steal nothing."

"Well, I had to shoot another good man of yours," Dave said quietly. Lewis fell back a step. "Which one? Who?" he inquired quickly.

"Pino Garza." Dave told of the meeting at the branding fire and its outcome. He was aware, meanwhile, that Lewis' family were listening, for behind a half-open bedroom door he could hear an excited whispering.

"Killed the first shot, eh?" Tad was dumfounded. "Now, I never thought Pino was that bad. But you never can tell about these Grassers, can you? They'll all steal if they get a chance. I let Pino go, 'bout a week back; but he's been hangin' around, aimin' to visit some of his relatives up in the brush country. It was probably one of them old Guzman saw. Anyhow, it couldn't of been Adolfo Urbina; he was over to Las Palmas all the afternoon."

"Did you send him there?" "Sure. Ed Austin can tell you."

"Where is Urbina now?" "I reckon he's asleep somewhere. We'll dig him up and talk to him, if you say so."

But Adolfo Urbina was nowhere to be found. No one had seen him since about seven o'clock, nor could it be discovered where he was spending the night. Dave remembered that it had been about seven when he left Las Palmas, and ascertained, indirectly, that Tad had a telephone. On his way from Austin's Law had stopped at a rancho for a bite to eat, but he could forgive himself for the delay if, as he surmised, Urbina had been warned by wire of his coming.

"That's too bad, ain't it?" Lewis said. "But he'll be around again in the morning, and I'll get him for you. You leave it to me."

There was plainly nothing to do but accept this offer, since it could avail nothing to wait here for Urbina's return. Unless the fellow gave himself up, he probably could not be found, now that the alarm was given, without a considerable search—in view of which Dave finally remounted his borrowed horse and rode away in the direction of Jonesville.

It was after daylight when he dismounted stiffly at Blaze's gate. He was wet to the skin and bespattered with mud; he had been almost constantly in the saddle for twenty-four hours, and Don Ricardo's cow pony was almost exhausted.

Blaze and Paloma, of course, were tremendously interested in his story. "Say, now, that's quick work," the latter exclaimed, heartily. "You're some thief-buster, Dave, and if you'll just stay around here little calves can grow up with some comfort."

When Dave rode to Jonesville, after breakfast he found that the body of his victim had been brought in during the night, and that the town was already buzzing with news of the encounter. During the forenoon Don Ricardo and his sons arrived, bringing additional information, which they promptly imparted to the Ranger. The Guzmans were people of action. All three of them had spent the night on horseback, and Pedro had made a discovery. On the day previous Garza had been seen, riding in company with a man astride a sorrel pony, and this man had been recognized as Adolfo Urbina. Pedro's witness would swear it. Their distance from Las Palmas at the time when they had been seen together proved beyond question that unless Urbina had flown he could not have arrived at the place in question by noon, the hour Ed Austin had fixed. This significant bit of information, however, Dave advised the Guzmans not to make public for the time being.

Toward midday Tad Lewis and three of his men arrived with the news that Urbina had left for Pueblo before they could intercept him.

"He's got a girl up there, and he's gone to get married," Tad explained. "I'm sure 'sorry we missed him."

Dave smiled grimly at the speaker. "Are you sure he didn't cross to the other side?" he asked.

Lewis retorted warmly: "Adolfo's an all-right hombre, and I'll back him. So'll Ed Austin. I guess me an' Ed are responsible, ain't we?" Some skeptical expression in his hearer's face prompted him to inquire, brusquely, "Do you believe what I'm telling you about his goin' to Pueblo?"

"I guess he's gone—somewhere."

Tad uttered an angry exclamation. "Look to me like you'd made up your mind to saddle this thing onto him whether he done it or not. Well, he's a poor Mexican, but I won't stand to see him railroaded, and neither will 'Young Ed.'"

"No?" "You heard me! Ed will alibi him complete."

Law answered sharply: "You tell Ed Austin to go slow on his alibi. And you take this for what it's worth to you: I'm going to get all the cattle rustlers in this county—all of them, understand?"

"Lewis flushed redly and sputtered: "If you make this stick with Adolfo, nobody'll be safe. I reckon Urbina's word is as good as old Ricardo's. Everybody knows what he is."

Later when Dave met the Guzmans, Ricardo told him, excitedly, "That horse Tad Lewis is riding is the one I saw yesterday."

"Are you sure?" "Listen, senior. Men in cities remember the faces they see; I have lived all my life among horses, and to me they are like men. I seldom forget."

"Very well. Tad says Urbina has gone to Pueblo to get married, so I'm going to follow him, and I shall be there when he arrives."

"Bueno! Another matter"—Ricardo hesitated—"your bonita—the pretty mare. She is buried deep."

"I'm glad," said Dave. "I think I shall sleep better for knowing that."

Since the recent rain had rendered the black valley roads impassable for automobiles, Dave decided to go to Pueblo by rail, even though it was a roundabout way, and that afternoon found him jolting over the leisurely miles between Jonesville and the main line. He was looking forward to a good night's sleep when he arrived at the junction; but on boarding the north-bound through train he encountered Judge Ellsworth, who had just heard of the Garza killing, and of course was eager for details. The two men sat in the observation car talking until a late hour.

Knowing the judge for a man of honor and discretion, Dave unburdened himself with the utmost freedom regarding his suspicions of Ed Austin.

Ellsworth nodded. "Yes, Ed has thrown in with the rebel junta in San Antonio, and Tad Lewis is the man they use to run arms and supplies in this neighborhood. That's why he and Ed are so friendly. Urbina is probably your cattle thief, but he has a hold over Ed, and so he rode to Las Palmas when he was pursued, knowing that no jury would convict him over Ed Austin's testimony."

"Do you think Ed would perjure himself?" Dave asked.

"He has gone clean to the bad lately; there's no telling what he'll do. I'd hate to see you crowd him, Dave."

"They call you the best lawyer in this county because you settle so many cases out of court." The judge smiled at this. "Well, here's a chance for you to do the county a good turn and keep Ed Austin out of trouble."

"How?" "The prosecuting attorney is a new man, and he wants to make a reputation by breaking up the Lewis gang."

"Well?" "He intends to cinch Urbina, on Ricardo's and my testimony. You're a friend of Austin's; you'd better tip him to set his watch ahead a few hours and save himself a lot of trouble. The prosecuting attorney don't like Ed any too well. Understand?"

The judge pondered this suggestion for a moment. "Young Ed is a queer fellow. Once in a while he gets his neck bowed."

As the situation develops in the next installment, Mrs. Austin finds trouble increasing for her. Dave Law picks up some important evidence.

DADDY'S EVENING FAIRY TALE BY MARY GRAHAM BONNER

IN THE AQUARIUM.

"The fishes in the Aquarium," said Daddy, "were talking in their funny, splashing way, and they were all boasting."

"You see a great many children had been watching them almost all day, for it had been a holiday and they had been enjoying the attention paid to them."

"In the very center of all was an enormous Sea-Lion. He was in a tank by himself and he was sitting out of the water on a sort of bench when the children were looking at him."

"Now that they had gone, he was roaring with might and main. Of course he had roared pretty hard when they were around so as to impress them with his enormous voice. But now he was rolling his head around, tossing it back, and roaring."

"I'm a great Sea Monster. I'm bigger than anything in this whole Aquarium. I'm a Lion—a Sea-Lion. You poor fishes don't know how majestic it is to be a Sea-Lion. It's splendid! That's what it is!"

"Maybe so," said the Giant Salamander, "but we think we're pretty fine."

"And so the whole talk started. In every tank the fishes were boasting. There were the Trunk Fish family with their funny, flat stomachs, the Doctor Fishes, and even the Surgeon Fish family, who have spines like sharp knives on either side of their tails. The blue striped fishes were grunting, and the glorious red-winged Sea Robins were grunting for fear they'd be taken from the water."

"Then there were the Toad Fish family, and the Trigger family with funny front teeth. The Red-Sided Minnows, Catfish family, Sunfish family, Mud Fishes, Sword-Tail fishes who think they are very brave indeed because of their war-like tails, and the gorgeous Butterfly fishes who are so beautiful with their lovely yellow coloring, and other bright butterfly shades, were all talking fish talk."

"Among the rest in another tank—for all these different families of fishes had to live by themselves—were the Spiny Boxfish family, who are very much like Porcupines."

"But the fresh-water Killy, or transparent Minnows as they're sometimes called because you can see right through them, were boasting almost the most of all."

"While the others were speaking of their queer bodies, or of their handsome fins, their lovely coloring, or their glassy eyes, the Killy family said,

"We do a great deal of good. We destroy the Mosquito family. There is no family so unkind as the Mosquito family, and they are unhealthy, rude and cross."

"True, true," said the Sea Cow, "but I eat nice plants and breathe real air, and give milk. Isn't that a good deal?"

"Yes," said the Killy family, "but it's better to destroy Mosquitoes. Mosquitoes go wherever they want to and stay when they're not wanted. So we try to keep them back!"

"Of course," said the School Fish family, "you're very useful, but we sound so learned and wise."

"You all move about together," said the Parrot fishes, "but you're not wise at all. At least not any more so than any of us. Now we're usually called the Rainbow Parrot family because we have all the colors of the Rainbow and we're more beautiful than any other family in the Aquarium. Think of the way the children looked at us, and our lovely blue, yellow and purple coloring. We're unusual, and so beautiful we just can't help waving our fins with joy at our great, great beauty!"

"The other fishes began to argue from their tanks about beauty. The Queen Trigger with her pale blue eyes and deep blue stripes knew she was the loveliest fish in the Aquarium, while the Green Moray and Spotted Moray fish families thought they were the most interesting, with their tremendously long tails. The Hawksbill Turtle got into the argument, and so did the Drum fish, but the Spade fish ended it all by saying,

"I'm fat, my colors are black and dull gray, but I'm happy, and I don't quarrel—so let's all be satisfied, and friendly." And with one accord all the fishes in the Aquarium splashed their tails in agreement."

YOUR FLAG AND MY FLAG

The Art of Ad Writing

Any man who sets out to write an advertisement should regard himself as a news writer, contributing news to a newspaper. If he can make his ad sound like news it will sell goods.

The first thing is the head line and the featuring of the big news of the ad. Most newspapers find that they can increase the sale of their papers, and can induce more people to read their news articles, by placing large type heads over these articles. The same principle applies to an ad. The heading should suggest the idea that something is going on in that store, some offering being made, that it is for the advantage of the public to know about. Here is a typical one frequently seen about now:

BIG FALL CLEAN-UP SALE
 The name of the store should

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury

Mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescription from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Chesney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure, be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Chesney & Co. Testimonials free. Sold by Druggists. Price 75c per bottle. Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

invariably be given in large type. The more the reader can see that name in big type in his paper, the more it will stick in his mind.

Many advertisements content themselves with simple lists of the things for sale. That has some value, but there is no news in it.

Whenever a merchant has a line which he is willing to offer at a reduced price, that is news. There is no news in the paper, not even the war or baseball, that is read with keener interest; just tell the public about it in simple language, as if you were a reporter writing up a cattle show.

Every time a merchant buys a lot of goods that he believes has exceptional value, he has news that he can write about. If he is a good buyer, all his lines have exceptional value and he can write a newsy ad about anything in his store.

You could read volumes on the psychological principles of advertising and not get any better results than you can by application of this simple principle. Good luck to you, Mr. Ad Writer, and let us know how you come out in applying some of these ideas.

Three Basic Reasons for Going to War

Dr. Shailer Matthews, dean of the University of Chicago, has enumerated the three basic reasons why America is in the war. They are:

1. By plots and outrages and destruction of property here in the United States, and by wanton sinking of our ships at sea, Germany has invaded America as unmistakably as if a German army had landed on our coasts.

2. This invading army must be whipped on European soil or he will have to be fought on our own soil.

3. Failure to beat him down over there will expose our own people, here in the United States, to outrages and atrocities probably worse than those which have been perpetrated in Belgium, in northern France and on the seas, "acts," as one speaker put it, "that would make Satan shudder in hell."

If your child is pale and sickly picks at the nose; starts in the sleep and grinds the teeth while sleeping, it is a sure sign of worms. A remedy for these parasites will be found in WHITE'S CREAM VERMIFUGE. It not only clears out the worms, but it restores health and cheerfulness. Price 25c per bottle. Sold by all dealers.

An Aid to Virtue.
 A true lover of flowers can scarcely be very wicked. Beauty and goodness are twin sisters. Let us cultivate the one and the other will come unbidden and dwell with us.

An Exception.

Pecos Valley Apple Crop Will Be Fairly Good

The Apple Crop in the Pecos valley is far from a total failure, as reported earlier in the season. The Hope district will have at least 150 cars of marketable apples. Artesia may ship 50 cars. The Roswell district and south is likely to have 100 cars of good apples. L. B. Cecil has a full crop of perfect apples, because he gave close attention to his crop from the bud down to the present time. Other crops in this section are coming along well. At present the bankers, business men and farmers are agitating the matter of sowing much winter wheat. There is much land that may be sown in wheat and properly irrigated during the winter without interfering with the water supply for alfalfa and other summer crops. — Roswell News.

California Loses Camp

Camp Fremont, at Palo Alto; California, has been abandoned because the state authorities could not agree with the War Department upon the matter of a sewerage system. The Forty-first National Guard division therefore will be trained at Camp Greene, Charlotte, N. C. This division is composed of men from Washington, Oregon, Montana, Idaho and Wyoming.

2. The excuses many of us make: For not doing personal work; for not attending services; for not joining the league; for not joining the church.

3. Things to remember: We are happier and better when we find reason for doing things instead of making excuses. Many times our excuses are not put into words, we show them by our unwillingness. Do not make excuses for not speaking to strangers. Don't say you have no time for Christian work.

INTERESTING CORNERS OF NEW MEXICO

CABEZON—

Have you ever seen the "Cabezon," rearing its monstrous head over the western horizon beyond Bernalillo?

If you have ever traveled from Bernalillo or Albuquerque to the Jemez country you will not have forgotten it. It is one of the weirdest peaks in New Mexico—thrusting its hundreds of feet of rock up into the air like a giant thumb and visible for hundreds of miles in every direction. At its foot is the town of Cabezon, Sandoval county, over toward the McKinley county line and a short distance south is Casa Salazar, another remote settlement in the country of the Rio Puerco that gaunt river whose bed much of the year is a blistering sand course, with here and there pools of alkaline water and which at other times carries a wild and turbid torrent which devours the steep and crumbling banks voraciously and carries destruction in its path.

"Cabezon," of course, means "Big Head," and if you have ever been in trouble with that malady, the sight of it will be a lesson to you. It is the remnant of a volcanic cone, the rock-sharps say, shooting abruptly out of a pyramid of detritus, sides almost perpendicular, naked, splintered bone of Earth's anatomy protruding starkly against the sky.

War Prophecies

Albert Ballin, friend of the Kaiser, predicted last winter that the war would end by July 1 with a victory for Germany. It was the Kaiser who told his troops that they would be back in Berlin victorious before the leaves turned in 1914. And it was an Englishman—Kitchener—who predicted that the war would last three years. No American prophecies are yet on record.—Chicago Evening Post.

ONE GIFT THAT MONEY WILL NOT BUY

By LAURA JEAN LIBBEY.

A very neglectful husband recently asked his wife what kind of a present she would like him to buy her. She did not know what to make of the suggestion; he had grown so cold and brusque of late years. Many a Christmas had gone by and he had not even considered her feelings sufficiently to put a stick of candy or a postage stamp in the stocking which she never failed to hang up. The empty stocking did not seem to be a reproach to him. He neither saw nor heeded her remarks concerning it. No wonder she gasped when he asked her to name a gift she would like.

"One that would not be costly," she added; "yet I do not know of any place where it could be bought!" She went up to him quietly and laid her arms about his neck. "The most precious gift you could bestow upon me would be just a little love, tenderness and affection, such as you used to show me in our courting days." She bravely kept back the tears that tried to force themselves to her eyes. All in a moment the busy business man saw he had been remiss.

"It's a bargain!" he said huskily, returning her caress. "From this time you shall have a full measure of all the love you crave."

One little heart-touch of this kind will bring even the most boorish husband to his senses. The trouble is that most wives are too proud to show the love which they believe should be theirs without having to ask for it. Many husbands mean well, but they forget that the love which is as free as air, yet which money cannot buy, is worth more to a loving wife than diamonds or rubies. A husband cannot well put love into a wife's stocking, yet his affection should prompt him to bring her some remembrance, be it little, that she may know he was thinking of her and the desire was in his heart to make her happy.

With all a man's wealth, he should know full well that it is impossible to buy the true love of a youthful heart, if his heart has become cold in the passing years. The hearts of the children one cherishes cannot be bound to parents by the almighty dollar. Love never can be weighed against dollars and cents, social position or aught else. The poor man is rich, if there's some one who has given him a wealth of love.

Boil three pints of water and 1 1/2 pounds of sugar ten minutes; remove from the heat and add a cupful of bruised mint leaves; cover and let stand ten minutes. Pour a quart of charged water with this mixture over ice and serve at once with sprigs of mint and thin slices of lemon. Or sliced strawberries may be used in addition or in place of the lemon.

No One Is More Unhappy Than the Impatient Man

No man is more constantly unhappy, or makes others more so, than the impatient man. He is out of harmony with things; and all things fight and worry and wound him. He feels himself dishonored, too, by his impatience; and he does lose so far as he indulges it, the true dignity of life. He is not cast, indeed, like the victim of sensual vice, into the slough of dishonor; his garment perhaps is not soiled; but it is burnt through in a thousand spots, by the ever-dropping little sparks of petulance; and it is in tatters and disorder with the ever-crossing furies of angry passion; and he seems to himself and to others as one who scrambles through life, rather than as one who walks in the calm and dignified robe of conscious self-possession. Constant fretting and faultfinding and breaking out into sarcasm and anger may besave a house of all honor, peace and comfort, almost as effectively as gluttony and drunkenness. Or suppose that the fretful temper be hidden and smothered in the heart; then it wastes and consumes the springs of the inmost life.—Orville Dewey.

Fatalist Soldiers.

On the British front orders are given out the night before detailing activities that are to take place the following day. The officers then hold a meeting and "trade" places with each other where duty would send them to a spot commanded by one or more of their personal acquaintances. Whether all men fighting on the other side of the ocean believe in fate is a matter of conjecture. However, one officer who writes home emphatically does. "Again fate has intervened," he wrote. "Again I have just escaped a miraculous death. As usual, we were ordered to the trenches, and for the fourth time the man I 'traded' with has been killed."

The One Woman.

We've toasted all manners of women,
We've pledged them, the old and the young,
Since days of the gallant knight errants
All womanhood's praises we've sung;
We've pledged them for love and for duty,
For trust and a faith near divine—
We've held high our glasses and pledged them
In our first and last bumpers of wine;
But somehow, in zeal for their beauty,
Fond eyes and their lily white hands,
We've overlooked one in our pledging—
The Woman Who Understands.

Our poor limitations and uses,
She knows them far better than we—
She bravely accepts our excuses,
And motives refuses to see;
She overlooks all of our errors,
The things we don't do that we should,
And knows, like ourselves, we'd be better
And worthier men if we could;
In the end, when our errors confront us,
She soothes us with comforting hands,
And erases the penance—God bless her!
The Woman Who Understands.

MUCH IN LITTLE

Our garden radishes came from Asia. In 1879 ground was first broken by the steam plow. The supply of singing birds has been cut off by the war and canary prices are soaring. Most army cooks prefer the kerosene stoves to those burning wood. The Indians who know the bee only as introduced by the white settlers call it the "white man's fly." An alloy of 2 per cent palladium with silver is said to form a good substitute for platinum in contact and spark devices.

ADVANTAGES IN MULES

Have Faculty of Adapting Themselves to Any Condition.

Superiority They Hold Over Horses in Many Ways Compensate for Objectionable Length of Ear and Kicking Habit.

Those who are accustomed to handling mules and who know of their remarkable faculty for adapting themselves to almost any condition, realize their value and do not hesitate to pay well for good animals.

The advantages they possess over horses in many ways compensate for the somewhat objectionable length of ear and exaggerated reputation for kicking. They are ready to work when two years old and on account of their toughness and steadiness of nerve may be kept at it twice as long as horses are fit for service. Mules can be raised more cheaply than any other stock, and, unlike horses, will never founder themselves if by chance they should have access to more feed than is good for them. They can be put into the market much sooner than horses, and if properly handled, when two years old, will do as much work and stand it better, than four-year-old colts. Mules are less liable to contract diseases than horses, and their value is not decreased by blemishes as is that of horses. Mules seldom run away, but when they do they seem to run more from sport than fright and generally wind up safely. They instinctively avoid holes, obstacles or dangerous places. They can stand heat, abuse or hardship better than horses and can always be relied upon. They are sensitive as well as sensible animals, responding quickly to kind treatment by docility and gentleness.

The great profit in mule raising lies largely in their growth. Mules grow so quickly that they are marketable when three years old, while horse colts cannot advantageously be sold under five years. In this way the cost of feeding and the trouble and risk of raising are decreased.

Buyers will always handle good mules, as the demand for them is steady. Where large numbers of mules are raised there are always plenty of mule buyers in that section of the country. Buyers do not go where there are no mules to sell. In time of war mules are always in great demand and bring good prices owing to their powers of endurance.

Comparing cattle with mules, one steer will eat as much as two mules. As compared with swine, if the same amount of feed that is fed to a bunch

ONIONS PLANTED IN AUTUMN

Multiplier Can Be Grown From Sets and Will Produce Excellent Early Vegetables.

There are several kinds of onions that may remain in the soil over winter. The multiplier, or potato onion, for example, can be planted from sets in the autumn and will produce excellent green early onions. A large onion of this type contains a number of distinct hearts, and if planted will produce a number of small onions. On the other hand, a small onion contains but one heart and will produce a large onion. A few of the large ones may be planted to produce sets for the following year's planting.

KEEP CHOLERA OUT OF HERD

First Thing to Do is to Keep Hogs Clean—Keep Them Out of Wallow Holes and Dirty Places.

If you want to keep cholera out of your herd the first thing to do is to keep the hogs clean. Keep them out of hogs is fed to mules it will not take long to find which makes the most money, aside from the fact that there is no risk from cholera.

HEALTHY CHICKS GROW FAST

Keep Coops and Houses Clean and Sanitary to Prevent Disease—Get Rid of Vermin.

Every effort must be made to keep the coops and houses of little chicks clean and sanitary. Disease most frequently starts in unclean, poorly ventilated houses. Clean the house at least once a week. Sand or litter of some kind scattered over the floor of the house will assist in keeping it clean. When chicks are confined to a limited range, it is well to spade up the ground at frequent intervals, so as to provide fresh ground for them to scratch in. If lice are found, every effort must be made to get rid of them, by applying a small portion of a mixture of equal parts of vaseline and lard to the top of the head and around the vent. Sickly chicks can't grow fast enough to make money; healthy chicks can and will. Keep 'em well!

LIGHT HORSESHOE IS IDEAL

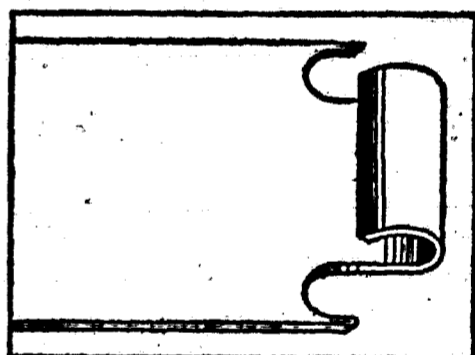

Keeps Foot Level and Takes Greater Pressure From Toe—Owner Thus Lessens Grain Bill.

The ideal horseshoe is one which is light, consistent with a month's wear. This will keep the foot level instead—as is the case with a heavy shoe and heels—of putting the greater pressure on the toe. Very careful examination and calculation has proved that if a four-pound shoe is used—as is sometimes the case on heavy horses—a horse, in an ordinary day's work lifts 52 tons on each foot, or 206 tons in all more than is necessary. This, of course, involves a needless expenditure of muscular energy, and more feed is needed to keep the animal in proper condition. With a lighter shoe the owner would not only relieve the horse, but lessen his grain bill.

WIRE SPLICER EASILY MADE

Neat and Strong Device Can Be Made With Little Instrument Shown in Illustration.

The neatest and strongest wire splicer can be made with this little instrument, says a Minnesota writer in The Farmer. Take a strip of iron one inch wide and one-eighth inch thick. Cut one end narrow and bend into a hook large enough to fit neatly the largest wire to be spliced. At the sides of the hook two notches are filed. Turn splicer backward to make the splice. Use a pair of large pliers to hold the wires.

BLANCHING ENDIVE IS EASY

When Leaves Are Dry Bring Up and Tie Together—Untie After Rain to Let Them Dry.

(By LEROY CADY, Associate Horticulturist, University Farm, St. Paul.)
Endive may be blanched by bringing the leaves up together and tying. This must be done when the leaves are dry. It is a good plan to untie the leaves after every rain and let them dry out, otherwise they may decay.

GIVE TURKEYS BEST OF CARE

Provide Place Where Fowls Can Roost by Themselves and Don't Overfeed—Keep Off Lice.

Don't overfeed the turkeys, and always have a place where they can roost by themselves. If kept with chickens, they soon become lousy. It does not take many lice to kill a young turkey. The best way to keep poulters from getting lousy is to keep the old ones free from lice and then hatch the eggs under the turkey hens. When hatched under chicken hens they are almost sure to have the large body lice. They acquire these in spite of all efforts to prevent.

Sultry Day Drinks.
There is nothing which so delights the inner man on a hot day as something cool, tinkling with ice and attractively served.

Another Way With Grape Juice.
Soak a tablespoonful of gelatine in a half cupful of cold water and dissolve it in three-quarters of a cupful of hot water. As soon as dissolved add the juice of three lemons, a cupful each of sugar and grape juice. Pack in two parts ice and one part salt and when the sherbet is nearly frozen stir in the beaten white of an egg and finish freezing. Let stand at least three hours to ripen. With the scisors cut a half-dozen marshmallows into small cubes. At serving time put a generous spoonful of the sherbet into tall glasses and fill the glass with grape juice which has been diluted by half with ice water and sweetened if necessary. Put a few of the marshmallow cubes on top and serve with small cakes and straws.

Fruit Drink.
Add a cupful of grape juice to a quart of strong lemonade and two spoonfuls of shredded pineapple. Lemonade may be used as the basis for many combinations which are always pleasing to the palate.

Iced coffee as well as iced tea is delicious with a slice of lemon and bits of ice. The usual coffee infusion should be diluted about half, with water to make it properly palatable.

Orangeade.
Allow the juice of a lemon, and a pint of water to each pint of orange juice. Add sugar to taste and when ready to serve add a quart of charged water and pour it over a large piece of ice in the punch bowl. Garnish with

"SMOKY JOE" WOOD FIRST PLAYED AS AN INFIELDER

Started Baseball Career as Shortstop but Injuries on Team Gave Him Chance at Pitcher's Job.

Joe Wood started his professional baseball career as a shortstop. "Smoky Joe," when an amateur at Kansas City, Mo., was a pitcher and infielder. Some one recommended him to the Hutchinson (Kan.) team of the Western association as a shortstop and Joe grabbed the job.

It was the old story from then on. All the regular pitchers were crippled, manager tore his hair and ejaculated, "A pitcher, a pitcher—my kingdom for a pitcher."

Up spoke Joe Wood, the hard-hitting shortstop.

"I am a better pitcher than shortstop. I can hurl the leather so fast they cannot hit it."

He was a pitcher from then on, except that when playing with Kansas City the following season he first-based, second-based, third-based, short-stopped and played in each of the outfield positions. The catchers managed

Julian Taylor has let a contract for a modern dwelling to be erected on the corner south of the Baptist Church, the description of which will be announced later.

Harry Comery of Ancho has purchased the property of A. J. Rolland. Mr. Comery is to be congratulated, as the residence is very beautiful and will make him an ideal home. The deal was announced this week. Mr. Comery will take possession very soon.

Sam Fambrough, who is the agent for the Willys-Overland automobiles, is wearing the smile of the Overland this week. He has established a sub-agency here, and Mr. L. B. Crawford of Carrizozo will act in this capacity. A carload shipment arrived this week and the company's agents are doing a great deal of buttonholing among prospective buyers and report much success. Mr. Fambrough has an ad on another page of the Outlook that will interest you.

Ed Kelley, Wm. McLean, Syl Anderson and John Bell motored over to Fall Ranch Monday to do some dove shooting. Through the courtesy of Mrs. Fall and Jack, the boys were allowed the freedom of the ranch and found the shooting good. The party returned well paid for their day's trip, with well filled hunting coats and the pleasant recollections of having enjoyed the hospitality of good home folks at the ranch of the former senator.

Mr. Ernest Prehm of Almagordo, has accepted a position with the Carrizozo Trading Co. and will manage the ladies dress goods department. Mr. Prehm comes well recommended.

Mr. Robert Martin, who has been visiting his aunt, Mrs. Ira Wetmore, left on number one Wednesday night for El Paso.

Mr. Jess Dawson, of Alto, has been for some time possessor of a fine auto robe, but lately under the inducements of his friends, consented to raffle it off among the "boys." This robe is a peculiar one, from the fact that it is made of three different kinds of skins. Timber wolf, skunk and raccoon. The robe is a beautiful piece of workmanship: the parts being sewed together in the tanage so that the only way one can discern the different skins is by the changeableness of the colors. The raffle took place Tuesday evening and brought the owner $75.00. The prize was taken by Mr. Bert Proday who declares that twice the amount of what it brought the original owner could not induce him to part with it.

An Opportunity

People are constantly coming to Carrizozo. The town is booming. People are wanting to locate here for the purpose of schooling their children—others are desirous of coming here for their health—but on inquiring, they find no houses to live in. You can find no ad in the newspapers of even rooms for rent.

We are asking the question: "Why is it that people of the town owning vacant property, do not erect dwelling houses to rent to people who are so desirous of entering our gates?" During the past two months the newspaper men have been bombarded with questions about houses, furnished or unfurnished rooms, by people who are asking for some place to live, but we can only answer them in this way: "Nothing doing."

Buildings, especially small dwellings, can be erected quickly and substantially in Carrizozo. Those who have money should see the opportunity and grasp it. It is a good investment. Those who will build need have no fear of not renting them. Remember, that people are awaiting an opportunity to locate here. Who will be the first to "start something" along the lines suggested.

We are not overlooking the fact that our residents are erecting beautiful homes, and we are glad to make mention of these splendid improvements. But we need houses for newcomers if our population increases as it should. The stranger is ready at our gates and it is our business to see that he has a chance to abide with us.

The Outlook believes that some of our enterprising citizens will avail themselves of this wonderful opportunity to furnish these needed accommodations to the prospective citizen. Who will be the first?

Omer Owen has returned to his home in Roswell. He has been assisting in the care of his wounded brother.

Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Bamberger have returned from eastern points where they have been on their honeymoon.

Bob Gilbert of El Paso has been visiting his aunt, Mrs. Ira O. Wetmore.

Miss Lorena Sager, who has been visiting her parents the past several weeks, left Saturday for Denver, Colorado. She will resume her work as instructor in the Blanche Dingley-Mathews School of Music at that place; a position she has held with honor for several years.

Miss Clara L. Crane of Detroit Michigan who is a niece of Mr. A. B. Graham, of Parsons, New Mexico, was a visitor on Tuesday of this week. Miss Graham expressed herself as being delighted with the New Mexico climate, and signified a desire to return in the not far distant future. Miss Crane was the guest of Mrs. Gurney of the Carrizozo Eating House during her brief stay in Carrizozo.

SUDAN GRASS FOR PASTURE

into two lots, and the grain ration was alternated from one lot to the other every thirty days, so the cows received exactly the same treatment and were practically in the same relative condition at the close of the experiment. The result of this part of the experiment shows that it does not pay to feed a grain ration to cows running on good pasture.

During the four months that they were on pasture they gained an average of 19 pounds per head, and gave 27,422.5 pounds of milk, which produced 1,096.9 pounds of butterfat. The eight dairy and beef cows that were temporarily on the pasture gained eighteen pounds per head in twelve days. The pasture carried an average of two cows per acre for four months. There was no indication of poisoning by pasturing in November after a frost came, though the sand should be taken when pasturing Sudan grass as when pasturing any of the other sorghum.

Judging from this single test, Sudan grass should prove to be one of the best annuals for pasturing during the season of the year covered by this experiment. It is of good quality, makes thick growth after being pastured on, and responds promptly to irrigation. It is closely related to Johnson grass and very much resembles it, but does not have the rootstocks that make Johnson grass a pest. A number of years' experience with Johnson grass proved it to be excellent for pasture, but because of the difficulty of eradicating it when it once gets a foothold, its use is not recommended, except in isolated fields intended for permanent pasture. In composition and digestibility for both pasture and hay, Sudan grass is about the same as Johnson grass or timothy. The Sudan hay has more protein than Johnson grass hay, but is a little lower in fats, nitrogen-free extract and crude fiber than the latter.

For pasture, the place of Sudan grass and other annuals is to supplement the permanent pastures during the summer. They are at a disadvantage, because the ground is necessarily soft and subject to injury from trampling even under favorable conditions, because they do not form a turf. Some of the plants, too, are pulled up by the roots at the first grazing. On this account, Sudan grass should not be pastured the first time until 15 to 18 inches high, particularly on sandy or loamy soils.

A Panorama of Telephone Activity

A bird's-eye view of this country today would show a panorama of countless military and industrial activities.

Here the smoke of a thousand stacks obscures the view of arsenal, steel and iron works and innumerable factories.

There the sun's rays flash upon thousands of glittering bayonets and rise and set on many new and strange looking cities—the mobilization camps of the armies of the Republic, or glide the wings of swift aeroplanes gliding to and fro in bird-like flight over broad aviation fields.

The National Capitol would be seen, from which all these vast enterprises are directed and co-ordinated, with hundreds of telephone lines radiating from it to all parts of the country, and linking it to each military and industrial center.

A veritable mass of other telephone pole lines, covering the whole country with a net-work of wires, would be visible, connecting city, town, camp, fortification, navy yards, military headquarters, coast-guard stations, and light-houses.

Everywhere busy groups of telephone workers would be disclosed erecting poles and stringing wires to meet new and extraordinary demands for service. All this telephone activity is but a part of the vast work the Bell System is doing.

Join us in this patriotic service, by remembering that the more careful you are to make only telephone calls that are necessary and to confine your talks as much as possible, to the less busy hours of the day, the better we can meet the needs of the Nation.
