CARRIZOZO, LINCOLN COUNTY, NEW MEXICO, FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 28, 1917

PRICE $2.00 PER YEAR

N. M. Land Rentals Figure Large Amount

Santa Fe, N. M. Sept. 25: Although about a week remains before October 1st when annual rentals are due from all holders of leases on state lands, the State Land Office to-day was literally swamped under the incoming flood of checks, and post-office money orders with which the thousands of lessors are paying their annual rental to the state. All state land lease contracts to buy land from the state, as a result of the greater part of the state's income from its lands is paid into the office immediately before and after that date. The rule of the State Land Office that all rentals and payments must be paid within ten days from October 1st, is strictly enforced. After thirty days a heavy interest charge is made on all delinquencies. The past year has witnessed a heavy increase in the number of lessors of state land, and in the total acreage leased. At present close to eight million acres is under lease or another of the various forms of grazing or agricultural lease. At the same time conditions have warranted and in some sections have forced substantial advances in rates of rental particularly for grazing land. As a result last year's record breaking income from the state lands is now certain to be distanced by this year's payment into the state treasury for the benefit of the various institutions and funds which are beneficiaries under the grants from congress.

In his November 1st settlement with the state treasurer last year the State Land Commissioner paid into the state treasury in a single check $416,864.83. The November 1st settlement this year, it is now expected, will be in excess of three quarters of a million dollars.

Military Highway

The proposed military highway for eastern New Mexico would not only give Lincoln county products a better chance at the markets of the world, but would bring an immense overland travel through. It is said that a number of towns along the state highway through the western part of the state take in from seven to fifteen hundred dollars a day from automobile tourists.

J. H. Kimmons, who moved his family here to put the children in school, has now been given a position in Alamogordo and will move the family there.

There will also be a meeting of the County board of Education Monday Oct. 1st. All interested will please attend.

Good Bye Good Luck God Bless You

Next Wednesday, October 3rd will witness the passing of the last contingent of the Lincoln County quota, when 53 of our boys will answer the call to defend the flag.

Elaborate arrangements are being made to furnish the boys with an entertainment—which will impress on their minds the love and esteem in which they are held and will constantly remind them when far from home and friends, of loving hearts that would gladly share suffering and endure privation that they might be happy.

In order to carry out this plan the people of Lincoln County, as a whole have joined together to make the entertainment a decided success.

Mr. Tom Lea, ex-mayor of El Paso will be the principal speaker, and others have been secured to fill that important part of the program.

The Carrizozo Trading Company's new building will be used for the speaking and refreshments, after which dancing will be indulged in, and other means of entertainment will be featured to close the evening's festivities. This affair which being similar in nature to the ones recently given in honor to the boys, is given under the auspices of the Red Cross Society and much credit belongs to those of its members who have labored so diligently to carry out these entertainment to such successful termination.

Lincoln County will do herself proud on this occasion, and the boys will appreciate the love and good wishes that follow them.

Substantial Recruits

Recruiting Officer Briscoe visited Carrizozo Tuesday and incidentally paid a visit to the Outlook Office. This is the second visit the Officer has paid our city during the last two weeks. The recruits he has secured are: Henry A. Lindly, Chas. B. Snell, Thomas Garcia, and Gregona Baca.

Several more of our boys are thinking of enlisting and others will follow, Messers Lindly and Snell will be sent to Wrightstown, N. J. and the remainder to Washington D. C. for training. Officer Briscoe is a good mixer and the boys find a friend as soon as they form his acquaintance. Officer Briscoe is an ideal recruiting Agent and an honor to his "Uncle Sammy."

In speaking of the Kaiser we do not capitalize the name, because we wish to minimize as much as possible, a thing of so little importance.

Nogal News

The two hundred acres of spring wheat on the east side of the White Mountain (yet to be harvested) bids fair to yield an average of 20 bushel per acre. There is quite a demand for fall seed wheat, many acres would be sown if the seed could be procured.

The bean crop, owing to copious rains and no frost, is something wonderful such a crop has never been raised in this vicinity before.

The Young Folks of Nogal have planned to have a big dance on the night of Oct. 2, and cordially invite Carrizozo young people to attend.

The incendiary talk by some of our citizens on the Selective draft, and war measure among our own people should be stopped at once, one man's son are as good as another.

The McDaniel brothers have gone to their claims, to plow land and build a dug-out to live in.

Quite a car full of Zozo people visited Nogal last Sunday, some stopped at "Uncle Toms" garden for the fine vegetables.

John Littleton has moved his cattle to his ranch across the Malpais.

The new potato crop is coming in and they are fine, but the small demand is quite a drawback to the farmers.

Our Department Post Mistress Miss Ruda is contemplating returning to Oklahoma soon.

Ladies Auxillary Demonstration Real Success

Santa Fe, N. M.—Fifty thousand pounds of peaches in the San Juan county fruit belt have been saved by a mobilization of citizens, fruit growers, school children and the Women's Auxillary to the State Council of Defense, working under the direction of Major J. H. Toulouse, field secretary of the State Food Administration. As a result of a week's campaign started by a State Food Administrator Ely who detailed Toulouse on the job, there are thirty or forty home evaporators being used where there was hardly one before; the home-made bleaching shed has been made popular; a peach crop of 200 cars. Under Toulouse's direction all the school districts were organized, children dismissed where necessary and set to work peeling and slicing peaches for the dryers. Major Toulouse returned Saturday enthusiastic over the community co-operation which made the fruit-saving possible and believes the object lesson in San Juan county should lead to the installation of thousands of these cheap home made dryers all over the state. Directions for making the dryers and bleaching shed can be obtained from the food administration. The bleaching sheds consists merely of an air wooden closet into which netting-bottomed trays are inserted, a pound of sulphur being burned underneath and the shed left closed all night. The bleaching prevents the dried fruit from turning black and makes it unnecessary to cover it with mosquito netting while drying.

The county agent and school authorities co-operated in the fruit-saving fight.

A similar campaign will be started in Santa Fe county Thursday Sept. 27, with the aid of the county agent, county school superintendent and under Mr. Toulouse's direction. The school directors will be organized and drying demonstrations made everywhere, commencing in the plaza at Santa Fe. As in San Juan county, the boys in the manual training department of the schools will help make the drying trays and children will be paid by the pound and by the tray for picking and drying. The system works as well with apples as with peaches. The food administration plans to aid other counties in the same way, in co-operation with the Women's Auxillary.

But as if his thoughts were telepathic messages, she did the very thing he feared.

"We won't be in before midnight," she said, "but I'll send you to Jonesville in the morning."

"Thank you, ma'am—I'll have to go right through."

"I'll get you there in time for business. We've gained a reputation for inhospitality at Las Palmas that I want to overcome. Mr. Austin ought to know," she added, "about this matter we were discussing, and I want him to meet you."

"He has!" Dave said, shortly; and at his tone Alaire looked up.

"So!" She studied his grim face. "And you quarreled?"

"I'd really prefer to go on, ma'am. I'll get to Jonesville somehow."

"You refuse to stay under his roof?"

"That's about it."

"I'm sorry," she did not ask for further explanation.

The windows of Las Palmas were black, the house silent, when they arrived at their journey's end; Dolores was fretful, and her mistress ached in every bone. When Jose had helped his countrywoman into the house, Alaire said:

"If you insist upon going through, you must take the car. You can return it tomorrow."

"And—about Panfilo?" Dave queried.

"Wait. Perhaps I'll decide what is best to do in the meantime. Good night."

Law took her extended hand. Alaire was glad that he did not fondle it in that detestable Mexican fashion of which she had lately experienced so much; glad that the grasp of his long, strong fingers was merely firm and friendly.

Blaze Jones had insisted that Dave live at his house, and the Ranger had accepted the invitation; but as it was late when the latter arrived at Jonesville, he went to the hotel for a few hours' rest. When he drove his borrowed machine up to the Jones house, about breakfast time, both Blaze and Paloma were delighted to see him.

"Say, now! What you doing rolling around in a gasoline go-devil?" the elder man inquired, and Law was forced to explain.

"Father has never learned to drive a car without yelling 'Gee' and 'Haw,'" laughed Paloma. "And he thinks he has title to the whole road, too. You know these Mexicans are slow about pulling their wagons to one side. Well, father got mad one day, and when a team refused him the right of way, he whipped out his revolver and fired."

Blaze smiled broadly. "It worked great. And believe me, them Greasers took to the ditch. I went through like a hot wind, but I shot up sixty-five cartridges between here and town."

"Why didn't Mrs. Austin ask you to stay all night at Las Palmas?" the girl inquired of Dave.

"She did."

"Wonderful!" Paloma's surprise was evidently sincere. "I suppose you refused because of the way Ed treated you. Tell me, is she nice?"

"She's lovely."

This vehement declaration brought a sudden gleam of interest into the questioner's eyes.

"They say she has the most wonderful gowns and jewels, and dresses for dinner every night. Well," Paloma tossed her head—"I'm going to have some nice clothes, too. You wait!"

"Now don't you start riggin' yourself up for meals," Blaze said, warningly. "First thing I know, you'll have me in a full-dress suit, spillin' soup on my shirt." Then to his guest he complained, feelingly: "I don't know what's come over Paloma lately; this new dressmaker has plumb stampeded her. Somebody'd ought to run that fellow out of town before she ruins me."

"She is a very nice woman," complacently declared the daughter; but her father snorted loudly.

"I wouldn't associate with such a critter."

"My! But you're proud."

"It ain't that," Blaze defended himself. "I know her husband, and he's a bad hombre. He backed me up against a waterin' trough and told my fortune yesterday. He said I'd be married twice and have many children. He said I loved widows, and unless I was poisoned by a dark lady I'd live

DAVE LAW RECEIVES TOKENS OF GRATITUDE FROM RICARDO GUZMAN AND MRS. AUSTIN—DURING ANOTHER DAY WITH HIM ALAIRE DISCOVERS THAT THE RANGER SECRETLY LOVES HER

SYNOPSIS.

Mrs. Alaire Austin, handsome young mistress of Las Palmas ranch, lost in the Texas desert, wanders into the camp of David Law, state Ranger, waiting in ambush to capture a Mexican murderer. She has to stay 24 hours, until Law captures his man, kills another and escorts her home. "Young Ed" Austin, drunkard, berates his wife and makes insulting insinuations about the ranger. Law discovers Austin is secretly in league with Mexican rebels and horse thieves. Mrs. Austin encounters Gen. Luis Longorio, Mexican Federal, when she goes to La Perla, her Mexican ranch, to collect damages, and he makes odious love to her. Dave Law kills a cattle thief and comes into unpleasant contact with Austin, at the same time becoming more friendly with Alaire.

to be eighty years old. If I'd had a gun on me, I'd have busted him for some of the things he said. 'A dark lady! That's his wife. I give you warnin'. Paloma, don't you ask her to stay for meals. People like them are dangerous."

"You're too silly!" said Paloma. "Nobody believes in such things."

"They don't, eh? Well, he's got all Jonesville walkin' around ladders, and spittin' through crossed fingers, and counfin' the spots on their nails. He interprets their dreams and locates lost articles."

"Maybe he can tell me where to find Adolfo Urbina?" Dave suggested.

"Humph! If he can't, Tad Lewis can. Say, Dave, this case of yours has stirred up a lot of feelin' 'gainst Tad. The prosecutin' attorney says he'll sure clinch him and Urbina both. One of Lewis' men got on a bender the other night and declared Adolfo would never come to trial."

"What did he mean?"

"It may have been mesal talk, but witnesses sometimes have a way of disappearin'. I wouldn't put anything past that gang."

Not long after breakfast Don Ricardo Guzman appeared at the Jones house and warmly greeted his two friends. To Dave he explained:

"Last night I came to town, and this morning I heard you had returned, so I rode out at once. You were unsuccessful?"

"Our man never went to Pueblo."

"Exactly. I thought as much. However, I go to meet Blanco today, and perhaps I shall discover something."

"What takes you over there?" Blaze inquired.

"Wait until I tell you. Senor David, here, brings me good fortune at every turn. He honors my poor, thrifty rancho with a visit and brings a glorious rain; then he destroys my enemies like a thunderbolt. No sooner is this done than I receive from the Federals an offer for fifty of my best horses. Caramba! Such a price, too. They are in a great hurry, which looks as if they expected an attack from the Candelarios at Matamoros. I hope so. God grant these traitors are defeated. Anyhow, the horses have gone, and today I go to get my money in gold."

"Who's going with you?" asked Law. Ricardo shrugged. "Nobody. There is no danger."

Blaze shook his head. "They know you are a red-hot rebel. I wouldn't trust them."

"They know, also, that I am an American, like you gentlemen," proudly asserted Guzman. "That makes a difference. I supported the Liberator—God rest his soul!—and I secretly assist those who fight his assassins, but so does everybody else. I am receiving a fine price for those horses, so it is worth a little risk. Now, senor," he addressed himself to the Ranger, "I have brought you a little present. Day and night my boys and I have worked upon it, for we know the good heart you have. It was finished yesterday. See!" Ricardo unwrapped a bundle he had fetched, displaying a magnificent bridle of plaited horsehair. It was cunningly wrought, and lavishly decorated with silver fittings. "You recognize those hairs?" he queried. "They came from the mane and tail of your bonita."

"Bessie Belle!" Law accepted the handsome token, then held out his hand to the Mexican. "That was mighty fine of you, Ricardo. I— You couldn't have pleased me more. We're going to be friends."

Guzman's delight was keen, his grizzled face beamed, and he showed his white teeth in a smile. "Say no more. What is mine is yours—my house, my cattle, my right hand, I and my sons will serve you, and you must come often to see us. Now I must go." He shook hands heartily and rode away, waving his hat.

"There's a good Greaser," Blaze said with conviction, and Dave agreed feelingly.

"Yes! I'd about do anything for him, after this."

CHAPTER XI.

The Reckon.

It was with a feeling of some reluctance that Dave drove up to Las Pal-mas shortly after the lunch hour, for he had no desire to meet "Young Ed." However, to his relief, Austin did not appear, and inasmuch as Alaire did not refer to her husband in any way, Dave decided that he must be absent, perhaps on one of his notorious sprees.

The mistress of the big ranch was in her harness, having at once assumed her neglected duties. She came to welcome her caller in a short khaki riding suit; her feet were incased in tan boots; she wore a mannish felt hat and gantlet gloves, showing that she had spent the morning in the saddle. Dave thought she looked exceedingly capable and businesslike, and not less beautiful in these clothes; he feasted his eyes covertly upon her.

"I expected you for luncheon," she smiled; and Dave could have kicked himself. "I'm just going out now. If you're not in too great a hurry to go home, you may go with me."

"That would be fine," he agreed.

"Come, then. I have a horse for you." As she led the way back toward the farm buildings, she explained: "I'm selling off a bunch of cattle. Benito is rounding them up and cutting out the best ones."

"You keep them, I reckon."

"Always. That's how I improve the grade. You will see a splendid herd of animals, Mr. Law—the best in south Texas. I suppose you're interested in such things."

"I'd rather watch a good herd of stock than the best show in New York," he told her.

When they came to the corral, an intricate series of pens and chutes at the rear of the outbuildings, Law beheld two thoroughbred horses standing at the hitching rail.

"I'm proud of my horses, too," said Alaire.

"You have reason to be." With his eyes alight, Dave examined the fine points of both animals. He ran a caressing hand over them, and they recognized in him a friend.

"These beauties were raised on Kentucky bluegrass. Brother and sister, aren't they?"

"Yes. Montrose and Montrosa are their names. The horse is mine, the mare is yours." Seeing that Dave did not comprehend the full import of her words, she added: "Yours to keep, I mean. You must make another Bessie Belle out of her."

"Mine? Oh—ma'am!" Law turned his eyes from Alaire to the mare, then back again. "You're too kind. I can't take her."

"You must."

Dave made as if to say something, but was too deeply embarrassed. Unable to tear himself away from the mare's side, he continued to stroke her shining coat while she turned an intelligent face to him, showing a solitary white star in the center of her forehead.

"See! She is nearly the same color as Bessie Belle."

"Yes! I—I want her, ma'am; I'm just sick from wanting her, but—won't you let me buy her?"

"Oh, I wouldn't sell her." Then, as Dave continued to yearn over the animal, like a small boy tempted beyond his strength, Alaire laughed. "I owe you something, Mr. Law, and a horse more or less means very little to me."

He yielded; he could not possibly continue his resistance, and in his happy face Alaire took her reward.

The mare meanwhile was doubtfully nosing her new master, deciding whether or not she liked him; but when he offered her a cube of sugar, her uncertainties disappeared, and they became friends then and there. He talked to her, too, in a way that would have won any female heart, and it was plain to anyone who knew horses that she began to consider him wholly delightful.

"You do speak their language," Alaire said, after she had watched them for a few minutes. "You have bewitched the creature." Dave nodded silently, and his face was young. Then, half to herself, the woman murmured, "Yes, you have a heart."

"I beg pardon?"

"Nothing. I'm glad you like her."

"Do you mind if I call her something else than Bessie, just to myself?"

"Why, she's yours! Don't you like the name?"

"Oh, yes! But—see!" Dave laid a finger upon Montrosa's forehead. "She wears a lone star, and I'd like to call her that—The Lone Star."

Alaire smiled in tacit assent; then when the two friends had completely established their intimacy, she mounted her own horse and led the way to the round-up.

Dave's unbounded delight filled the mistress of Las Palmas with the keenest pleasure. He laughed, he hummed snatches of songs, he kept up a chatter addressed as much to the mare as to his companion, and under it Montrosa romped like a tomboy. It was gratifying to meet with such appreciation as this; Alaire felt warm and friendly to the whole world, and decided that out of her abundance she must do more for other people.

Of course Dave had to tell of Don Ricardo's thoughtful gift, and concluded by saying, "I think this must be my birthday, although it doesn't fit in with the calendar."

"Don Ricardo has his enemies, but he is a good-hearted old man."

"Yes," Dave agreed. Then, more gravely, "I'm sorry I let him go across the river." There was a pause. "If anybody harms him, I reckon I'll have a feud on my hands, for I'm a grateful person."

"I believe it. I can see that you are loyal."

"I was starved on sentiment when I was little, but it's in me bigger than a skinned ox. They say gratitude is an elemental, primitive emotion—"

"Perhaps that's why it is so rare nowadays," said Alaire, not more than half in jest.

"You find it rare?" Dave looked up keenly. "Well, you have certainly laid up a store of it today."

Benito and his men had rounded up perhaps three thousand head of cattle when Alaire and her companion appeared, and they were in process of "cutting out." It was an animated scene, one fitted to rouse enthusiasm in any plainsman, for the stock was fat and healthy; there were many calves, and the incessant, rumbling complaint of the herd was blood-stirring. The Las Palmas cowboys rode like centaurs; the air was drumming to swift hoofbeats, and over all was the hoarse, unceasing undertone from countless bovine throats. Out near the grub wagon the remuda was grazing, and thither at intervals came the perspiring horsemen to change their mounts.

Benito, wet, dusty and tired, rode up to his employer to report progress.

"Dios! This is hot work for an old man. We'll never finish by dark," said he, whereupon Law promptly volunteered his services.

"Lend me your rope, Benito," Dave said out of his seat and, with an arm around the mare's neck, whispered into her ear. Rosa answered by nosing the speaker over with brazen familiarity.

"Dios! He has a way with horses, hasn't he?" Benito grinned. "Now, that Montrosa is wilder than a deer."

The giant herd milled and eddied, revolving like a vast pool of deep, swift water. The bulls were quarrelsome, the steers were stubborn, and the wet cows were distracted. In and out of this confusion the cowboys rode, following the animals selected for separation, forcing them out through dust and brush, until they had joined the smaller herd of choice animals which were to remain on the ranch. It was swift, sweaty, exhausting work, the kind these Mexicans loved, for it was not only spectacular but held an amount of danger. Dave Law made himself one of them.

Alaire sat her horse in the heart of the crowding herd and watched the Ranger. Good riding she was accustomed to. But Law seemed to inspire his mount. In spite of the man's unusual size, he rode like a feather; he was grace and life and youth personified. Now he sat as erect in his saddle as a swaying reed; again he stretched himself out like a whiplash. Once he had begun the work he would not stop.

All that afternoon the cowboys labored, and toward sundown the depleted herd was driven to the water. Then through the cool twilight came the drive to the next pasture, and here the patience of the cowboys was taxed to the utmost, for as the stronger members of the herd forged ahead, the wearied, worried, listless members fell behind. But now these swarthy, daredevil riders were as gentle as women; they urged the tiny youngsters onward with harmless switches or with painless blows from loose-collared riatas; they plucked them up in their arms and rode with them.

But love is a dangerous element, especially when it occurs between a married woman and a man not her husband. Both Alaire and David discover this and are unhappy—read about developments in the next installment.

Former Congressman George B. Smith of Minneapolis is fond of hunting and takes great pride in the ownership of a costly setter dog of noble birth. One day an old man, who was acting as guide for the hunt, came near making a lifelong enemy of Smith by criticizing the dog's technique in the field.

"The dog's perfectly all right," declared Smith, indignantly. "I wouldn't trade him for any dog I ever saw, only he doesn't get quite enough exercise. I'm busy and have to keep him penned up a good deal. He ought to have more exercise and that would improve his hunting."

"Has he got any fleas?" inquired the old man.

"Should say not," replied Smith, insulted. "That dog has his bath every week the same as I hope you do."

"Why don't you give him a few fleas?"

"What do you mean, give him fleas? Why should I want a fine dog like him to have fleas?"

"Well," replied the guide, thoughtfully, "they'd give him exercise."—St. Louis Republic.

YOUR FLAG AND MY FLAG Our Definite Type

Our soldiers abroad have drawn many comments and not a few compliments.

Now and then comments of a thoughtful character, thoughtful and well expressed, have been encountered. Among these the estimate of American soldiers made by the London Standard is especially good reading. The writer says: "Lean, lithe, straight backed, sallow, thin lipped, set jawed, they impressed everybody as doers instead of dreamers, men of few words, who look you straight in the eye, take your measure at a glance, give you their opinion in a rough epigram and then get to business."

The writer adds that the newcomers are a distinct set of men of a definite type, with something in the snap of the eye and the set of the mouth that is "distinctly United States."

Yet the type which the London writer calls definite is a composite of many types, the creation of the most marvelous of melting pots. As a Cleveland Tatter once expressed it, "My son is a racial mixture of French, German, English, Dutch, Scotch and Irish—and he's all American!"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

State Patriotic Week

The State Fair Association of Albuquerque has decided not to hold a fair this year, and the good citizens of the city have concluded to have a State Patriotic Week, with a view of facilitating the opportunity of the many friends and relatives of the New Mexico boys now in the United States service located at camp Funston, that City, to visit the Camp and see the boys in action before their departure from there, and at the same time to provide them with pleasurable entertainment and the hospitality of that city.

The purpose is to make the event as inexpensive as possible for those coming as well as those here, and for that reason we will have to depend largely upon the newspapers of the State to give these more facts as much publicity as they can, and we know it will be much appreciated by the soldier boys as well as their relatives and friends, and may be the last opportunity to visit with the boys before going to the front.

"Minute Men Courtesy"

Captain John Baird of the Lincoln County "Motor Minute Men" announces, that he now has 65 cars volunteered for emergency service.

The ladies who are about to start on a tour of the state to demonstrate the Conservation of food, will of course be shown every courtesy by the "Motor Minute Men" service, and Captain Baird has notified them, that the volunteer car service will be ready to render them any assistance possible.

Captain Baird has appointed E. F. Davidson, as first Lieutenant of the service at Corona.

High Grade Iron

Another effort is to be made to open the big iron deposits of Lincoln county, the Colorado Iron Company, with interest at Tecolote, being now in the field. The Lincoln county iron is known to be of fine commercial quality and is in immense quantities, but for reasons well understood in the iron industry nothing has ever been done. The iron is high-grade and will make the best Bessemer steel.

New Railroad Proposed

It is rumored that the sale of the New Mexico Central may mean a new railroad for Lincoln county. An effort is being made to have the road reorganized and the line changed so as to cross the E. P. & S. W. at some point south of Tecolote in this county. It could then be extended to Roswell through a country offering considerable local business.

Regret

"Why did everybody cry in that last death scene?"
"Because they knew the actor wasn't really dead."

The complete pacifist is he who refuses to celebrate Columbus Day. "If that guy hadn't set sail," he says, "America wouldn't be in this horrible war."—F. P. A. in New York Tribune.

Monday—General Red Cross and Civic League. Mrs. Hightower, chairman.
Tuesday—The Guild. Miss Eaton, chairman.
Wednesday—Woman's Home Mission. Mrs. Geo. Barber, chairman.
Thursday—Baptist Missionary Union. Chairman not appointed.

The ladies of the town are urged to help in this work. The Judge's chamber at the court house has been secured for a work room, and sewing is done each afternoon on the above days.

The attendance has not been the best of late, and a more lively interest is solicited.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except as prescribed by reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good they can possibly derive from them. Catarrh Cure, manufactured by Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains mercury, and is taken internally, and directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Catarrh Cure be sure you get the one. It is taken internally and not by the eye. Sold by Druggists. Price 75c per bottle. Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

Watch!!!

For some years, various and sundry concerns have been making beverages which are grouped under the general description of "near-beer." Then came Bevo—a cereal beverage, not a "near-beer," but offered purely for what it is—a delightful, wholesome and nutritious drink. Bevo met with instant and complete success. A whirlwind success.

Owing to Bevo's popularity, some beverages are now being offered in a way to make the appearance of the package look as much like the Bevo bottle as possible. The intention is obvious. But you don't taste the shape of a bottle—it's the flavor of the contents of the bottle that you must depend upon for enjoyment.

Then beware of impersonators—don't be satisfied to try to identify Bevo by the shape of the bottle alone—

Look !!

There are these certain identification marks that are your protection against imitations. Not just imitations of the product, remember—but those more insinuating imitations which try to deceive you by putting an old failure into a bottle similar to a new success. So look for these unmistakable marks of the genuine Bevo—demand that the bottle be opened in front of you, then—

Look for the Seal

See that it is unbroken covering the Crown Top. Look at the Crown Top and see that it bears the Fox. Be sure the Bottle bears this label.

Listen!

Bevo is a pure drink. This means more than that it contains pure ingredients—it means that though you might often well be afraid of possible germs in milk or water, Bevo, being a pasteurized product in sterilized bottles, is absolutely free from bacteria. Bevo is a nutritive beverage—the fine cereals from which it is made give it this quality.

Bevo is a delightful and refreshing soft drink—unlike any you have ever tasted—indeed a Triumph in Soft Drinks.

You can't get these good qualities in anything but Bevo—demand the genuine.

You will find Bevo at luns, cafeterias, restaurants, groceries, department and drug stores, soda fountains, dining cars, steamships, canteens, soldiers' homes, navy, and other places where refreshing beverages are sold. Your grocer will supply you by the case. Bevo is sold in bottles only—and is bottled exclusively by

YOUR FLAG AND MY FLAG Our Definite Type

Our soldiers abroad have drawn many comments and not a few compliments.

Now and then comments of a thoughtful character, thoughtful and well expressed, have been encountered. Among these the estimate of American soldiers made by the London Standard is especially good. The writer says: "straight backed, lipped, set jawed, and everybody as dreamers, men who look you straight in the eye and take your measure, give you their opinion in epigram and then go on their way."

The writer adds: "The soldiers are a distinct type of a definite type, a thing in the snap of the set of the jaw, 'distinctly United'."

Yet the type was not a composite of many creation of the melting pots. The father once expressed his opinion that his son is a racial mixture of German, English, and Irish—and he is a 'Cleveland'!

Drew Death Line

On Wednesday morning Sheriff C. W. Hyde received a telephone message from the Block Ranch from a man by the name of Jim Taylor to the effect that he had killed a man named Samuel Allen, and was on his way to Carrizozo to give himself up, on a plea of self defence. The following is the statement made to the Outlook man by a party who accompanied Taylor to Carrizozo. Taylor claims that he was preparing to erect a fence line between Allens land and the adjoining track on which Taylor was working. Allen became enraged at this attempt at what he termed was trespassing on his land, and told Taylor he would kill him if he carried out his intentions. Taylor went ahead with his work and Allen who had in the meantime gone back to his house, returned, without an exchange of words the two men opened fire on each other. Allen received three bullets in his body and died instantly. Taylor was badly burned with the powder on the right cheek which would indicate that the men were in close touch with one another in the gun fight.

Miss Vivian Thompson left Tuesday for El Paso, where she will enter the Rolston Hospital Training School for nurses. The best wishes of her friends follow her in her chosen profession.

What the Red Cross Must Do in Europe

A call for instant help has come to the Red Cross from France—one of the emergencies to meet which the Red Cross was organized has arisen—and the Red Cross is this minute responding nobly. Maj. Grayson M. P. Murphy, Red Cross commissioner for Europe, says that he must have, for the American soldiers and for the destitute people of France and Belgium, 6,000,000 warm, knitted, woolen articles—must have them before cold weather. And the Red Cross is making them.

These articles do not take the place of the bandages and splints and hospital garments that the Red Cross must keep sending in a never-ending are ready—send us the material and instructions," was, in substance, the telegram which hundreds sent. Here is what each of these chapters has done:

Each had appointed a chapter committee on knitting; had mobilized all the knitters in its territory, whether Red Cross members or not; had chosen instructors to see that every article was made according to specifications; and had called on the Red Cross supply service for the yarn and knitting needles.

Every member of every Red Cross chapter in the United States is called on to help in the buying of wool and knitting needles, the shipment of completed articles as promptly as possible, and stirring the enthusiasm of the workers to finish the job at once so that the soldiers may have the entire consignment before they begin to suffer with the cold.

Here are the directions for knitting each of the four articles, as determined upon by the Red Cross authorities at Washington, after carefully consideration of the army's needs:

Equipment.

Knitting machines may be used if desired.

Yarn may be either khaki or gray. The Red Cross supply service will carry the gray Oxford mixtures, 4-ply 10's construction.

Knitting needles to be, as designated, No. 1, 135-1000 inches in diameter; No. 2, 175-1000 inches; No. 3, 200-1000 inches; or steel No. 12.

General Directions.

Stitches should not be cast on too tightly.

Knitting should be done evenly and firmly and all holes should be avoided.

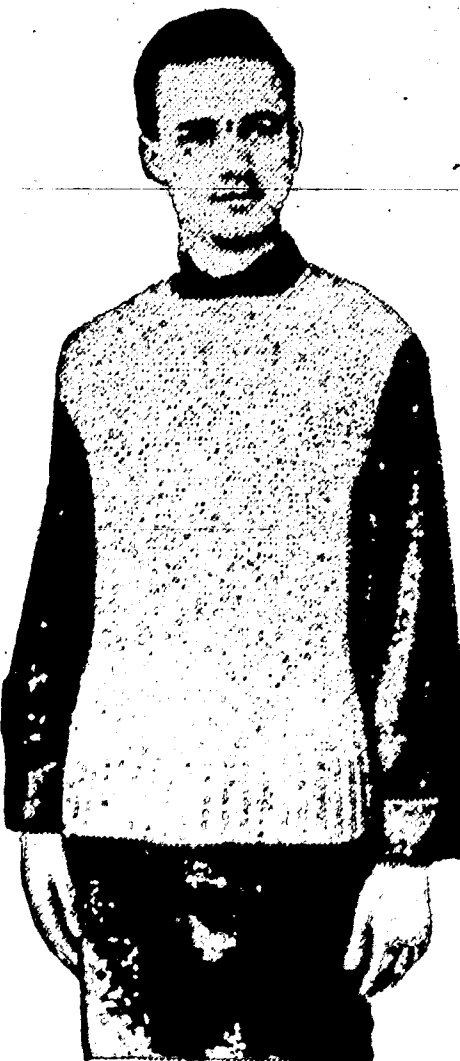

Joining should be done by splicing or by leaving two or three inches at each end of the yarn to be darned in carefully.

All knots, ridges or lumps should be most carefully avoided, especially in socks, as they are apt to blister the feet.

Sleeveless Sweater.

Three hanks of yarn (three-fourths pound); one pair Red Cross needles, No. 3.

Cast on 80 stitches. Knit 2, purl 2 stitches for 4 inches. Knit plain stream; the 6,000,000 sweaters, mufflers, socks and wristlets must be had in addition to everything else.

Here is a part of a cablegram from Major Murphy to the Red Cross at Washington:

"Last winter broke the record for cold and misery among the people here. We inexpressibly dread the coming winter finding us without supplies to meet the situation. We urge you, on behalf of our soldiers and those of our allies who will suffer in their frozen trenches, and also thousands of French and Belgian refugees, to begin shipping at once 1,500,000 each of the warm, knitted, woolen articles named. They must come before cold weather."

The Red Cross took instant action. The national organization at Washington apportioned among the divisions until sweater measures 25 inches. Knit 28 stitches, bind off 24 stitches for neck, loose. Knit 25 stitches. Knit 5 ridges on each shoulder, cast on 24 stitches. Knit plain for 21 inches. Purl 2, knit 2 stitches for 4 inches. Sew up sides, leaving 9 inches for armholes. Two rows single crochet around neck and 1 row single crochet around the armholes.

Wristlets No. 1.

One-half hank of yarn (¼ pound); 1 pair Red Cross Needles No. 2.

Cast on 48 stitches, knit 2 and purl 2 for 12 inches, and sew up, leaving 2 inches open space for thumb 2 inches from the edge.

Wristlets No. 2 (Made in One Piece). One-half hank of yarn (¼ pound); 4 Red Cross Needles, No. 1 (or steel needles No. 12).

Cast on 52 stitches on 3 needles: 10-10-20. Knit 2, purl 2 for 8 inches. To make opening for thumb, knit 2, purl 2 to end of third needle, turn; knit and purl back to end of first needle, always slipping first stitch; turn. Continue knitting back and forth for 2 inches. From this point continue as at first for 4 inches for the hand. Bind off loosely and buttonhole thumb opening.

Muffer.

Two and one-half hanks of yarn (¾ pound); 1 pair Red Cross needles No. 3.

Cast on 50 stitches of 11 inches. Plain knitting for 65 inches.

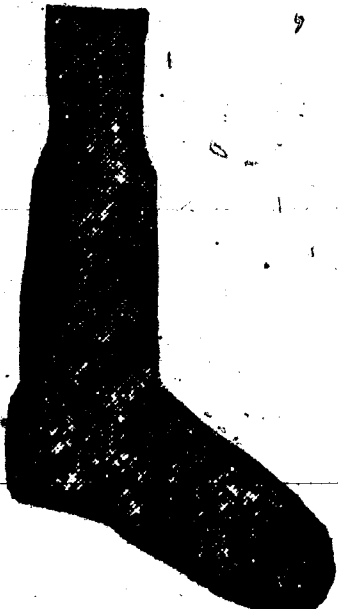

Medium Sled Man's Sock.

Four Red Cross needles No. 1 (or steel needles No. 12), ¼ pound (2 hanks of yarn).

Set up 60 stitches, 20 on each of three needles. Knit 3 plain and 2 purl for 35 rows (4½ inches). Thirty-sixth row knit 4 plain stitches, knit

2 together; repeat this until the round is completed. There are now 50 stitches on the needles. Knit 50 rows plain until leg measures 11 inches. (6¾ inches of plain knitting.) Take half the number of stitches (25) on first needle for the heel (leaving 12 and 13 stitches on the second and third for the instep), add on the 25 stitches knit 1 row, purl 1 row alternately for 28 times (or 3 inches), always slipping the first stitch. Begin to turn heel on the wrong side, slip 1, purl 13, purl 2 together, purl 1.

Turn work over, slip 1, knit 4, slip 1, knit 1, and pass it over slipped stitch.

Sock.

knit 1. Turn, slip 1, purl 5, purl 2 together, purl 1. Turn, slip 1, knit 6, slip 1, knit 1, and pass it over slipped stitch, knit 1. Continue working toward the sides of the heel in this manner, leaving 1 more stitch between decreases on every row until all the stitches are worked in. There should then be 15 stitches on the needle. Pick up 13 stitches on side of heel; now knit the 25 stitches on second and third needle on to one needle, which becomes your second needle; with your third needle pick up the 13 stitches on other side of heel, and knit 7 stitches off your first needle so that you will now have 21 stitches on the first needle, 25 stitches on the second needle, and 20 stitches on the third needle. First needle (a) knit to within 3 stitches of end, knit 2 together, knit 1. Second needle (b) knit plain. Third needle (c) knit 1, slip 1, knit 1, pass slipped stitch over, knit plain to end of needle. Knit around plain (d).

Repeat a, b, c and d until you have 13 stitches on first needle, 25 stitches on second, 12 stitches on third. Knit plain 4½ inches. First needle (e) knit 10 stitches—knit 2 together, knit 1. Second needle (f) knit 1, slip 1, knit 1, pass slipped stitch over, knit 19 stitches. Knit 2 together, knit 1. Third needle (g) knit 1, slip 1, knit 1, pass slipped stitch over, knit 9 stitches, knit 2 rows plain (h).

Harvest the Crops—Save the Yields

On the battle fields of France and Flanders, the United States boys and the Canadian boys are fighting side by side to win for the World the freedom that Prussianism would destroy. While doing this they must be fed and every ounce of muscle that can be requisitioned must go into use to save this year's crop. A short harvest period requires the combined forces of the two countries in team work, such as the soldier boys in France and Flanders are demonstrating.

The Combined Fighters in France and Flanders and the Combined Harvesters in America WILL Bring the Allied Victory Nearer.

A reciprocal arrangement for the use of farm workers has been perfected between the Department of the Interior of Canada and the Departments of Labor and Agriculture of the United States under which it is proposed to permit the harvesters that are now engaged in the wheat fields of Oklahoma, Kansas, Iowa, North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska, Minnesota and Wisconsin to move over into Canada, with the privilege of later returning to the United States, when the crops in the United States have been conserved, and help to save the enormous crops in Canada which by that time will be ready for harvesting.

PONIES FOR CHILDREN

Business of Raising Shetlands
Has Grown Important.

More Patient Than Horses and Is Better Tempered—Essential That Little Fellows Be Docile and Easily Handled.

The Shetland pony is always an object of interest, whether seen drawing a shining cart in the city park or bending beneath the cruel weight of his heavy burden on the mountain trails of his native country. If he were less hardy he could not endure the severe labor he is made to perform in his native land, for there he is purely and simply a burden bearer. Grain, iron, furniture, coal, ore and merchandise of all kinds are transported to all parts of the islands on the backs of the tough little animals. Three hundred pounds is the usual load for each pony, and long lines of these laden little beasts wind in and out among the hills of their native land.

The genuine Shetland pony, produced from the pure breeds of the Shetland and Orkney Islands, has become so popular and useful that the business of raising ponies has grown important. The business is not so simple as it might appear at first glance. In the first place, the progenitors—sires and dams—are usually selected in the Shetland Islands. Occasionally desirable breeds may be found in the interior of some of the other northern islands bordering Scotland, but the majority are found in the Shetland Islands.

The Shetland pony is unlike the horse in many respects other than that of size. He is more patient, and as a class is better tempered. Mute under punishment, patient during severe labor, constant as a dog in friendship, combining marvelous intelligence with a tractable spirit, the Shetland pony is of all animals the best servant, companion and friend for children. There are grown persons who so admire the sturdy little ponies that they prefer a cart and pair to the best trotting horse. They make up in strength and endurance what they lack in size.

On farms where these ponies are raised for the market, kindness is practiced under all circumstances in their training. This is very important, because most of these animals in this country at least, are sold for the pleasure of young boys and girls and it is essential that they be trained to be docile and gentle. When the little pony colt, which a man can take up in his arms and carry about, is strong enough to run and play with its mother, a little halter is put on it, and it is taught to lead and start and stop at the word. When it grows stronger, but is not yet nearly full grown, a set of harness is fitted upon it, a smooth, easy bit is slipped into its mouth, and it is driven about with the lines. A very gentle pressure of the bit on the tender mouth is sufficient to guide it. Later on it is hitched to a little cart, and trotted about until it becomes thoroughly bridle wise—that is, until it becomes trained to turn about instantly without hesitation in response to the bit. It is taken close to puffing locomotives and alongside queer-looking vehicles; into the neighborhood of

GOOD FENCE OF MUCH VALUE

Nothing in Farm Work That Requires More Attention of Farmer—Make It Permanent.

To the farmer engaged in mixed farming there is nothing in his farm work that requires more attention than the keeping up of his fences. This should mean good fencing that has a permanency to it and at the same time serves the purpose of turning all kinds of stock that are turned into the fields.

INFERTILE EGGS KEEP BEST

Bad Practice to Permit Broody Hens Spoil Fertile Product—Germs Die Quickly.

If fertile eggs are incubated for 24 hours, then kept cool for three days, the germs will die, and these dead germs are the points where decomposition begins. Infertile eggs do not have these, and therefore keep better than fertile eggs. Don't permit broody hens to spoil fertile eggs.

shops where there is the sound of clanging iron and pounding hammers and ringing bells. Its actions under all these conditions are carefully noted and recorded, and its special qualifications for particular purposes fully ascertained.

The trainer knows the natural propensities and acquired qualifications of every pony about the farm fully as well as the teacher knows those traits in a pupil, and all those things go to make up a pony's record.

EXTEND THE TOMATO SEASON

Gather All Large Specimens Before Vines Are Killed by Frost and Put on Bed of Straw.

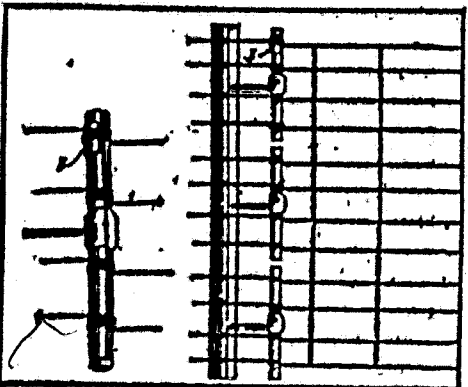

The tomato season may be extended several weeks by gathering all the large tomatoes before the vines are killed by frost and putting them on a bed of dry straw. Put about ten bushels in each heap, cover with straw at night and when weather is cold and wet. The tomatoes will ripen gradually and will be nearly as good as those ripened on the vines. If frost threatens, pull up the vines with the tomatoes on the vines and pile in the field. This is the method followed by our truckers and market gardeners. Where only a few bushels are wanted, pick the largest and finest tomatoes and place them on a bed of straw in the cold frame, cover with a six-inch layer of straw. If rain threatens slide on the straw, as they should not get wet or they will rot.

Gather the ripe fruit for canning or preserving and make catsup while fruit is abundant. The small green tomatoes may be sold for pickling.

cylinder is placed on each side of several wires and the bolts screwed up. A handle at right angles to the cylinder is inserted in one of the two holes in the middle, and the cylinder is turned. Another handle is inserted in the other hole and allowed to hold against an adjacent post. In case of one wire being slacker than the others, an extra curved plate (1) is placed on the cylinder to take up more wire in rotating. The edges of the two half cylinders are rounded to prevent cutting the wire.

DRAINAGE IS OF IMPORTANCE

Fruit Trees, Plants, Shrubs and Vines Will Not Thrive in Wet Soil—Keep Outlets Open.

Fruit farm drainage is even more important than drainage for farm crops, as fruit plants, shrubs, vines and trees will not thrive in wet soil.

The outlets of tile drains need looking after several times each year to see that they do not get clogged. Sometimes the outlet tile, being exposed to winter frosts, crumbles causing a stoppage of the outlet.

CLIPPING PASTURES IS BEST

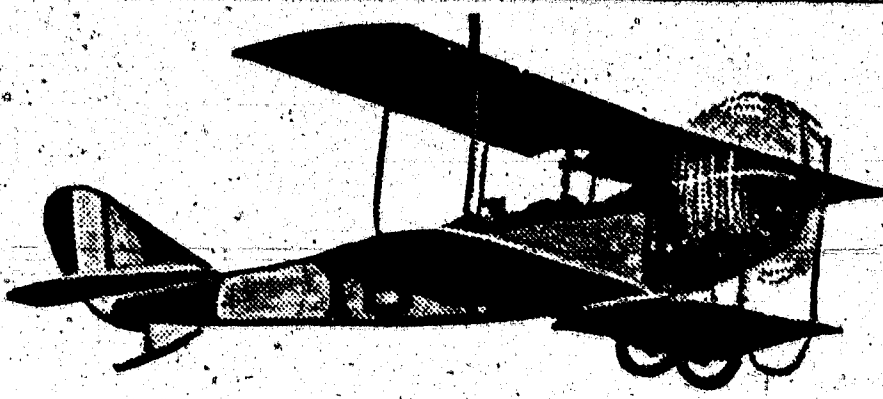

Results in More and Better Grasses and Ripening of Weed Seeds Is Also Prevented.

Clipping pastures after harvest results in more and better grasses. The ripening of weed seeds is prevented and briars are removed, so that clover and blue grass may occupy the ground. Where a mowing machine cannot be used the scythe is brought into play.

Sow Crimson Clover. Sow crimson clover or some other cover crop at the last cultivation of corn, melons and tomatoes. Winter vetch and rye make a fine combination for this purpose.

Breed Heifer at Two Years. The heifer should be bred to freshen when about two years old. Handing before freshening prevents shyne.

Discard the animals which have failed at the end of the year to pay for their keep.

RISING FOR LONG FLIGHT OVER ENEMY LINES

Written by a Captain in the Royal Flying Corps for New York Herald Magazine.

THE flight commander sat on a fence bordering the aerodrome and thought of many things. He was very young, but he was in charge of a "flight" of machines and the large personnel that goes with it.

He was generally known as "the Lark" by reason of his habit of singing in the air. His right-hand man, a young lieutenant, who had seen a good deal of service in France with the R. F. C., leaned up against the fence to keep him company.

"We must have five machines for tomorrow's early 'stunt,'" said the commander. "There are two machines coming from the depot this afternoon and two of our machines can be put right in about a couple of hours."

"Good," said the second in command. "Then we need not worry. A tender is going into — in a few minutes; are you coming?"

"No, I have to stay here and arrange about these machines that are coming down."

"Well, you might ask the machine gun officer to test my gun, will you? It jammed twice yesterday. It was inconvenient," and the second in command sauntered off.

All that afternoon the mechanics worked at the airplanes, and by evening they were in a fit state to "strafe" the Huns. At about eleven o'clock that night the five pilots were detailed for the following day's work.

The sun was just beginning to rise when they were waked and, after drinking steaming coffee and eating cake, they sauntered up to the aerodrome.

Their machines were all lined up on the "tarmac" and the mechanics were giving them a final overhaul.

The police gathered round the flight commander, who was as yet in negligence, consisting of an old college blazer and carpet slippers of a brilliant hue.

"We will cross the lines somewhere about here," he said, indicating a spot on the map in front of him, with the stump of a pipe, "and we have the pleasant little job of patrolling this area. It is infested with 'Archies,' and there are always Hun machines knocking about as well. Take your time from me and watch for the usual signals. Remember, it is the last man who gets the rotten time of it."

The party broke up and the flight commander hurried off to put on more suitable attire.

Five minutes later they reassembled, in their respective machines, well wrapped in mufflers and leather coats, for it is cold work at fifteen thousand feet. They clambered onto their machines and for the next few minutes, as they waited, had a heated argument about the respective merits of "razzle dazzle" and "bric-a-brac" until the squadron commander arrived on the scene, when they turned their attention to more serious things.

The Archies Speak.

At a signal the engines were started and tested. Then the machines "taxied" from the "tarmac" and slowly made their way out into the middle of the aerodrome. Following the leader, they rose from the ground in wide sweeps. One thousand, two thousand feet, and still the machines circled round the aerodrome, until the squadron commander far below, put out the signal on the ground, which gave them permission to make for the Huns.

Early hours are kept in France, and already they could see through the morning haze the country below them swarming with khaki-clad men.

There were puffs of smoke in the air and the deep thud of the bursting shells from the anti-aircraft guns.

They could see the lines now. Not a square inch of the ground seemed free from shell holes, and to the right were the remains of a village and a large mine crater.

There were intermittent flashings of the guns on either side of the broad brown belt which divided the enemies. "Bang! Bang! Bang!" three shells burst unpleasantly close to the leader, and he heard the tearing sound of shrapnel through his planes. "Warm work," he said to himself as he saw that one of his spars was shot away. The other machines seemed undamaged, and once they were well over the lines all firing ceased. No doubt the guns were being mounted on lorries and taken further back to get another shot at them.

Below them were the heavy French machines carrying out reconnaissance work, and they could see above them on each side French and English airplanes of all types and sizes. With a hissing noise a tiny scout dived down past them, hotly pursued by a big German machine, bristling with guns. But the five machines steadily pursued their own course. This was not their area, and they had their own work to do.

In a few minutes they had reached their destination. For the next two hours they would patrol that area marked out for them on the map, waiting for the Huns, who would certainly try to drive them away. But for the moment they had leisure to look around them. To the right they could see four French machines making for home. Probably they were on their way back from a bombing raid. Then there came the sound of firing immediately behind them. One of the patrol was being attacked by a stubby little German scout machine, which was diving at him from behind. The leader banked sharply around and, climbing steeply, made straight for the enemy. But the stubby German on seeing another opponent turned for home at the top of his speed.

The leader looked around to see what had happened to his companion. His engine was missing badly. He seemed in trouble, but he was continuing his duties. And other things were happening.

A True Shot.

Two Hun machines were passing a thousand feet below them. An English machine dived at them. One started for earth, but the other showed fight. By a clever maneuver he had just got behind his opponent when the leader dived into the scene of action. He came up close before he opened fire, and then with his third shot hit the enemy in the petrol tank. It burst into flames and fell to earth.

He looped the loop to show his pleasure.

"That was a good shot," he said to himself as he turned and counted the patrol. There were only four altogether. One had turned home through engine trouble. They kept close together, and for about half an hour all went peacefully and well. Their engines were running perfectly, and the morning air acted like a balm on their souls. The occasional sounds of firing did not disturb them. Then in the distance they saw a great cloud of machines approaching from the east, and each man looked to the leader for a signal. This was no ordinary enemy patrol. One or two served to relieve the monotony of life, but fifty was more than a joke. But the leader held to his course.

the heavily armed German machines approached. The Britishers could see the iron crosses on their wings and the three men in each machine. Then out of the empty air, as it seemed, British and French airplanes began to gather around the patrol, diving from above, climbing from below. They waited the attack.

A Brave Attempt.

As the Germans came on their leading machines turned round and joined the others behind them, and in a little while firing began, short bursts from ours and long, slow firing from the enemy. Three French machines detached themselves from the main body and tried to make their way behind the Huns to cut them off. Their maneuver was seen and the Huns turned upon them. They were heavily outnumbered. A few bursts of firing, then all three fell to earth in flames, but two of the enemy fell with them.

Elated by this first success the Huns came on. They had grown a little careless and had lost their formation. Our machines, ever on the watch, saw their chance and dived suddenly down into the thick of them. The leader was among the first. As he swept in he heard a grinding crash and, turning his head for a moment, saw two Germans falling to earth together in a mass of splintered wreckage.

"That's what comes of getting excited and crowding," he said as he fired point blank at an enemy. All round him was firing. Several machines of friend and foe fell to earth past him. One dropped unpleasantly close to his tail. Then as suddenly as it began the battle was over. The Germans had had enough. They dived toward home, and French and British followed in hot pursuit.

But the leader looked at his watch. "Phew! Five minutes late and nowhere near the lines. What will the C. O. say?"

He turned at once for home, followed by the other three. But the fifth machine never returned. It must have been attacked on the way home.

They circled down to the aerodrome and fell in for inspection. Their patrol was over.

FRANKLIN LOVER OF PEACE

Philosopher Emphatic in Declaration That "There Never Was a Bad Peace or a Good War."

I join with you most cordially in rejoicing at the return of peace. I hope it will be lasting, and that mankind will at length, as they call themselves reasonable creatures, have reason enough to settle their differences without cutting throats; for, in my opinion, there never was a good war or a bad peace. What vast additions to the conveniences and comforts of life might mankind have acquired if the money spent in wars had been employed in works of utility! What an extension of agriculture, even to the tops of the mountains; what rivers rendered navigable, or joined by canals; what bridges, aqueducts, new roads and other public works, edifices, and improvements, rendering England a complete paradise, might not have been obtained by spending those millions in doing good which in the last war have been spent in doing mischief—in bringing misery into thousands of families, and destroying the lives of so many working people, who might have performed the useful labors!—Benjamin Franklin.

His Claim.

"What are his claims to exemption? Has he any dependent on him?" "He is supporting a good many arguments about it."

Our Man About Town

Fred Pfingsten of Lincoln who has just returned from an extended trip through the east, stopped over in Carrizozo Thursday. Mr. Pfingsten spent the greater part of his time in Michigan and says that every where you go, you find the people extremely "Uncle Sam."

Wm Barnett is now thoroughly settled in his new quarters, and being "all set" he invites your inspection. The working and storage space of the new building is fully up to the requirements of his increasing trade. Mr. Barnett's new ad in this issue, and his several locals will further explain.

No better example of neighborly interest could be shown than that exhibited at the Crystal Theatre on Wednesday. The entire populace it seemed, turned out, but not as on lookers. Everybody interested themselves in the affairs of Mr. Dingwall. Business men left their desks forgetting for a time their own responsibilities and rushed to the assistance of the management. Therefore we say again, Carrizozoites make good at everything they attempt.

The Western Union Telegraph Company accepted a deposit of $130.00 at Gainesville Texas, for Dr. B. Brewer at Ft Stanton, N. M. The money was sent to Albuquerque, who in turn sent money to Carrizozo, party located Dr. Brewer in Ft Stanton and sent money to Manager of Western Union at Capitan. Captain Manager then paid the money over to Ft Stanton and the same was delivered to Dr. Brewer. The entire proceedings consumed only about three hours—but when the Western Union will get into a tangle like this we must all agree that this war is knocking the stuffing out of everything.

strangers landed in Alamogordo. They attracted little if no attention about town, but when number four came through, the men took deck passage on the train with the intention of reaching Carrizozo that night.

On nearing Kearney they were apprehended and put off the train, and when number four reached Carrizozo, the news was conveyed to Detective Ben West who suspected that they were deserters, and concluded to watch the train for them. When the next freight train that arrived Mr. West went carefully over it until he came to a car loaded with machinery, he flashed his light into the car and found the three men there in hiding. He promptly arrested them and on being arranged at jail they confessed to desertion giving their names as: Wm Sullivan, Forrest Halzelow and H. G. Peters and claimed to be members of Company I, 4th Nebraska Infantry. They told Mr. West that after being landed in Kearney they walked back to Alamogordo, and caught the train for Carrizozo.

The men are confined in jail and Mr. West awaits instructions from Deming as to what course to pursue. If the men prove to be deserters as their confession admits, they are deserving of severe punishment. But we must remember that this is a great country and our administration is merciful.
