New Mexico Homesteaders Suffer Wrong

Declaring that wrong and injustice had been done to thousands of home-seekers and home-builders in New Mexico by the action of the joint conference committee on the food control bill in striking out of the bill the so-called Fall amendment, Congressman W. B. Walton voiced his protest against that action in a brief but vigorous speech on the floor of the House, but declined to carry his fight for the amendment to the point where it would further delay in action on the food bill.

Mr. Walton took the high ground that New Mexico could better afford to suffer injustice for a little while longer than to run the risk of delaying action on a measure urgently demanded for the relief of more than a hundred million American citizens.

While the Fall amendment was defeated, it is felt by those conversant with the situation that a great deal of good has been done by the agitation in favor of it, and that a much more liberal policy will be followed by the interior department in future as a result of that agitation. Attention has been called sharply to the conditions existing in New Mexico as a result of the failure to classify lands subject to entry under the 640-acre homestead law, and it is believed that within a comparatively short time all these lands will be designated and classified by the department.

During the absence of Senator Fall, who left for New Mexico immediately after the adoption of his amendment by the senate and has not yet returned to Washington, Senator Jones and Congressman Walton have worked untiringly for this legislation. It was apparent from the beginning that on account of the sweeping nature of its provisions there would be no chance for the Fall amendment in its original form. Opposition on the part of the interior department was determined, and parliamentary objections on the ground that the amendment was not germane to the food control bill also played a big part in the fight against the amendment.

Bamberger-Lutz

The marriage of two of Carrizozo's most popular young people was performed Saturday evening at 7 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Lutz, Rev. Hoering of Tucumcari officiated. Only the immediate family was present. The couple left on No. 4 for points east. They will be at home to their friends after Sept. 1st.

The bride is a beautiful and talented young lady; the groom is the manager of "The Carrizozo Trading Co." and an estimable young man. The Outlook joins the many friends of the young couple in wishing them much happiness in their journey through life together.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Phillips left for Los Angeles, Calif., Wednesday where they will reside in the future.

OASIS IN CARRIZOZO

The Oasis Confectionery whose grand opening occurred Wednesday evening is one of the leading business enterprises of Carrizozo. Mrs. Jim Johnson who conducts this neat and attractive resort is a former resident of Roswell and lately came to Carrizozo, and seeing the need of a first class confectionery decided to locate in the new Opera House Block where she would be more centrally located and thereby be the better enabled to serve the public.

"Our Man About Town" visited Mrs. Johnson in her new quarters and found a lady experienced in her line of business, as the arrangement of the enterprise will show.

To the right on entering is the soda fountain where refreshing drinks are served. The fountain is of the very latest model. No pains have been spared in the way of convenience about the establishment for quick and satisfactory service. Mrs. Johnson's two daughters, Mrs. Lee Green and Mrs. White, assisted by Mr. Chas. Perez, are the efficient dispensers of the cool refreshing drinks and dainties. The Oasis carries a full line of choice candies and confections of all kinds. It is a complete confectionery in every sense of the word.

Mrs. Johnson wishes to announce that during the fall and winter seasons she will serve hot coffee and chocolate; and what is now a confectionery and ice cream parlor will have for the advanced seasons a luncheonette as an addition.

The Outlook welcomes this new enterprise and wishes it a success even above its expectations.

Entertained at Lincoln

One of the most delightful entertainments of the year was given Wednesday, when Mrs. Wallace Gumm and Mrs. Dr. Laws entertained at the home of Mrs. Laws in Lincoln. A most bountiful dinner was spread for the invited guests, when they arrived, at 12 o'clock. Tables for the players were arranged on the long veranda of the home, and auction bridge was indulged in from three until six o'clock. Mrs. L. B. Crawford was the successful winner of the first prize, and Mrs. Leon captured the second.

The following ladies were present: Mrs. Fairbank, Sager, French, Lucas, Wetmore, Crawford, Dingwall, Osborn, Ulrick, Zeigler, Leon, Austin, Gumm, and Miss Lorena Sager of Carrizozo; Mrs. McKeown, Lewis and Weber of Ft. Stanton; Miss Charlotte Rice, Miss Helen Rice of Parsons, Mrs. Tompkins and Penfield of Lincoln.

The State College of New Mex., will send to anyone who will apply for them, a set of ten cards on the conservation of food which are of practical value and will be mailed free on request to the Secretary A. & M. College, State College, N. M.

A Heinous Crime

A recent outbreak of diphtheria in Lordsburg, N. M., in which eleven children were taken sick, was due to infected candy given away by a tall stranger about ten days ago.

The man appeared to be of German descent. No one seemed to know him and after staying around several days he left the city.

The sick children declare that this man gave the candy to them in packages. The candy was eaten ten days before the children took sick. Dr. Crocker, on the outbreak of the disease, made an attempt to check its spread. Three of the children died.

Parents are warned not to allow their children to accept gifts from strangers.

New Enterprise Reported

It is reported that a $100,000 goat ranch is about to be started in this county in the Malpais, calculated to winter-feed about 20,000 head of Angora goats.

Goat men from this locality and nearby states have this enterprise under consideration and are looking out for watering places and driveways to the lava land.

Mohair is bringing at the present time from 75 to 80 cents per pound, and the goats are bringing 9 cents per pound on foot for mutton.

The idle Malpais are considered for their abundance of browsing. John Promberg of this locality is supposed to be the promoter of this enterprise.

Forest Wood to Help Relieve Coal Shortage

Forest supervisors throughout the southwest are making a study of the fuel situation with a view to helping relieve the threatened coal shortage by encouraging the use of dead wood from the national forests. According to plans made public by the District Forester, each supervisor will determine in what territory the substitution of wood for coal will be practicable. In that territory figures on comparative costs will be made available to the public and all possible facilities provided for the cutting and utilization of local fuel-wood supply. Household holders will be especially urged to lay in their winter supply in advance. Information on fuel-wood can be obtained from the local Forest Supervisor.

Forest officers point out that every additional cord of dead wood utilized saves half a ton of coal and incidentally improves the forest. The records of the Forest Service show that about 100,000 cords of fuel-wood are cut annually from the national forests of the southwest. Most of this is obtained free by settlers; and the remainder sold to wood dealers at from 25 to 50 cents per cord. The supply of dead wood alone is said to be sufficient to supply a much larger consumption.

COMMUNITY STORE IDEA BROUGHT TO U. S.

What is believed to be the first community store in the United States of the type which is common in England, has been established in Washington, D. C. It is owned by the two or three hundred families which patronize it. Goods are sold at as near cost as possible and the profits are paid to each member of the organization in proportion to the amount of goods he has purchased. The picture shows the interior of the store. Edward Evans, a native of England and manager of the store, is in the center. He was a Congregational minister in Washington for four years before establishing the community store.

An Ounce of Prevention

By DR. SAMUEL G. DIXON, Commissioner of Health of Pennsylvania.

Before the causes of disease were known or the practical application of nature's ways of producing immunity to disease, we had to suffer an attack of sickness and then trust to drugs and nursing for cure.

This was a difficult task and the death rate was sometimes enormous, both in times of peace as well as of war.

Then the day of prevention came. Gradually the laws of nature unfolded until today we know methods of preventing diseases and antidoting the poisons generated by germs in the body.

It was even as late as the Spanish-American war that we lost more soldiers from preventable diseases than we did from bullets. This was a disgraceful thing, as sanitarians could have prevented the high death rate. From what we can learn through the newspapers and other sources, France today is short of disinfectants in her trenches. We do not see any great public excitement over this condition, or any concerted action of our good citizens to give their mites to purchase and transport disinfectants for the French trenches so as to prevent disease.

Therapeutics or drug treatment seems to continue to have a hold on the lay mind, and possibly, to some extent, on the medical mind.

Both the people at home in everyday life and the soldiers in our army are much to blame for the sickness that exists. The medical profession's advice is not taken when these persons are well, but the moment they get good and sick they call: "Oh, doctor, do relieve me from this awful pain," or "Oh, doctor, save my life!"

Perhaps this call comes too late. A few words of prevention from the doctor to the patient, and those few words obeyed, might have prevented the sickness and saved suffering and sorrow.

Do not let us lose sight, individually or collectively, of preventing diseases both at home and in our military camps, let them be where they may.

POULTRY POINTERS

Remember, milk is meat when it comes to feeding chicks or hens.

The best eggs for hatching come from flocks that have free ranges.

Watch for head lice on the ducks. If found rub top of head with a small piece of lard free from salt.

It is a good plan to force egg production, but nature may be materially aided by good feed selection.

The production of ducks especially should be emphasized at this time, because of the rapidity with which they grow.

A laying hen is nervous; if she is frightened or even startled much, there is apt to be a miscarriage of eggs. For this reason, the poultryman should carry on the work in the henhouse quietly and evenly.

To destroy mites and keep the flock free of their depredations, insecticide sprays and a sanitary building are necessary.

Ducks of most of the meat breeds, properly fed and managed, frequently weigh from five to six pounds at ten weeks of age.

Seasonable Dishes.

Bananas are fruit that should be ripe or well cooked before serving. Baked bananas may be given to the little people. Peel a half dozen bananas and place them in a baking dish with sugar, water, lemon juice and a little butter. Bake them often while baking and serve the sauce with the fruit.

Corn Meal Muffins.

Beat two eggs until light, add three-fourths of a cupful of sugar—or honey may be used—a fourth of a cupful of softened shortening, one cupful of sour milk, a half teaspoonful of soda, two cupfuls of flour and a cupful of corn meal with a teaspoonful of baking powder and a half teaspoonful of salt sifted with the flour. Bake in hot buttered muffin pans 25 minutes.

Peach Ice Cream.

Take a quart of thin cream, add a cupful of sugar, a teaspoonful of lemon juice, a fourth of a teaspoonful of salt, and two cupfuls of very ripe peaches put through a sieve. Mix and freeze.

Chicken Pie.

A very good pie may be made from an old fowl. Cook it first as for fricassee, lay the pieces with pieces of pork in a buttered pudding dish, add slice of onion for flavor, season with salt and pepper, add a cupful of milk and cover with a good crust. Just before serving add a cupful of cream which will make any chicken pie delicious. Boil the bone of a fowl, add two or three tablespoonfuls of gelatin to the broth with a cupful of finely minced chicken well seasoned and mold. This may be served with salad dressing on lettuce.

Ice Cream Chocolate.

Make a sirup of six tablespoonfuls of grated chocolate and two cupfuls of water, simmer until dissolved, then add four cupfuls of sugar and cook seven minutes. Strain and add two teaspoonfuls of vanilla extract, a pinch of cinnamon if the vanilla is not liked. Put into a bottle and set in the ice chest. Use two tablespoonfuls in a half cupful of ice cold milk, topped with three tablespoonfuls of whipped cream on each glass.

The Monitor Comes Back.

British monitors are playing an important part in the Italian advance toward Trieste. The monitors have again proved themselves in this war. They appear to be the only type of craft that can carry big guns into shallow water and bombard coast fortifications successfully. Submarines cannot follow them into these shallows, and they have so little freeboard that they present a difficult mark for the enemy to hit.

Monitors took up the set work at the Dardanelles after the battleships had been lost or had been driven by submarines to seek protected ports. Monitors shall the Belgian coast when attacks are made on the German bases there. Now they are shelling the Austrian coast ahead of the Italians. And so far there has been no report of a single monitor lost.

SCRAPS OF HUMOR

ONE WAY OUT.

It was the day before their first "hop over," and the regiment was drawn up in mass behind the lines to listen to a "few words" from the colonel. He pointed out to them at some length the straight and narrow path wherein their duty lay, and after giving them the general direction of the road to glory, concluded with the lines:

"If we go forward we die.
If we go backward we die.
Better go forward and die."

The demand for ships has resulted in the growth of a new shippbuilding industry in the South. There are about 50 vessels now in course of construction in the South-Atlantic and gulf states, and the number is constantly increasing. There would seem to be a considerable future for the business in this section, as long as the demand is for wooden hulls, for all the necessary lumber is often available within easy distance of the docks. Thus a number of ships are being built in New Orleans entirely of Louisiana timber—Louisiana oak, pine and cypress being the only woods used.

TOOK STEP-FATHER'S ADVICE

"My Improvement Is the Talk of My Neighborhood," Says Mrs. Galloway.

"I have gained fifteen pounds by taking Taniaic and my improvement is the talk of the neighborhood," said Mrs. J. R. Galloway, wife of one of the most popular conductors on the Denver and Rio Grande railroad, who resides at 2325 West Thirty-third avenue, Denver.

"For three years," she continued, "I suffered so from nervousness and catarrh of the head that I couldn't get more than two or three hours sleep a night. My head was stopped up all the time, my mouth was dry and hot and I had a continual dripping of mucus back into my throat. My stomach became affected and I couldn't digest what I ate. I had the most dreadful headaches imaginable and while I tried a number of different medicines I kept getting worse."

"My stepfather in Lima, Ohio, told me about Taniaic doing him so much good and advised me to try it and I'm certainly glad I took his advice, for three bottles have about made a new woman out of me. I have not had a headache since I started taking Taniaic and the catarrh is so much better that I hardly notice it any more. My stomach is in splendid condition now and I can eat and digest anything I want and am feeling just about as strong and well as I ever did. I have improved so much that my friends are all talking about it, and several of them are now taking it."

"SKYLINE" LOGGING LATEST

Modern Methods of Western Camps Said to Be Cheaper and More Efficient Than the Old Ways.

In the logging camps of Oregon and Washington a "skyline" method of logging is growing much cheaper and more efficient than the former method of dragging out logs from the forest by a donkey engine and cables operating on the ground, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. The skyline plan is to run a cable through blocks or pulleys suspended at a great height on giant trees, so as to form a sort of trolley line by which the logs are hoisted into the air and then hauled over the tops of ordinary trees and other obstructions to the railway, where they are loaded aboard freight cars for shipment.

The donkey engine which operates the skyline has five drums, including two for main lines and two for trip lines. The top cable, from which the log is suspended, is one of the main lines, while the other is used to haul the log. In operation the top cable is lowered with its block, or pulley, directly over the log to be picked up; it is then pulled taut, raising the log with it by means of a "choker," or steel tong. In the air a log can, of course, be moved much faster than on the ground.

MUSLIN AND LINEN

Combination of Simple Materials Popular This Year.

Paris Model Shows How Practical Washing Goods May Be Made Up Into Attractive Frocks.

Doucet is creating lovely models from such simple materials as spotted muslin and silk-finished linen. Indeed, this combination of spotted, or striped, muslin and linen is one of the most notable features of the summer season, writes Idalla De Villiers, a Paris correspondent.

Muslin and Linen Frock.

The illustration which accompanies this article shows that practical washing materials may be manipulated into very exclusive and exquisite creations. For the girl's frock in question Doucet selected fine linen in a cool shade of lemon yellow and soft white muslin spotted with black.

The dress was made up over a white pongee silk foundation and it represented everything that is attractive and summery. The ankle-length skirt was set in flat plaits. Practical plaits which were sufficiently wide and profound to be easily cleaned and ironed down.

Then there was a quaint overdress of linen which was long back and front and cut up at the sides to show the spotted skirt. On the corsage portion of this long tunic there were some fine, washing silk embroideries in black, white and lemon yellow. You will notice that the tunic is cut round at the neck and that it is moderately décolleté.

This style is in great favor with the Parisiennes and it is likely to remain fashionable all through the year.

French women never took kindly to high-necked blouses and bodices. They wore them, it is true, but unwillingly. On the other hand, an extreme V opening is considered bad taste for street wear. The correct thing is the simple round neck shown in the drawing.

NEW HATS FROM OLD COATS

Clever Woman Evolves Good-Looking Sports Suit Out of Garments That Had Been Discarded.

Perhaps you have a last year's suit or one of even older date, in which the skirt is still good but which is doing you no good because the coat is out of style. Don't hang it in the closet to take up room and gather dust, for it is really the foundation of this year's street costume. A very clever woman evolved a good-looking sports suit out of just such an almost-lost-forever garment.

The original suit in this instance was a plaid of brown, yellow and green. The material was so good and the skirt in such splendid condition that the owner, who is one of those much-to-be-admired-and-copied persons who is always well dressed without spending a small fortune, could not find it in her thrifty soul to put it in the discard. She ripped up the coat, had the jaunty little sport hat made from the pieces and bought at a sporting goods house a boy's jersey in heather colors to blend with the plaid. The loose box lines of the jersey take it out of the sweater class and with a slight alteration and the addition of collar and cuffs in a plain color to correspond with the skirt, it has become the coat of a sport suit that would have cost many times the amount expended in fixing this one up. It is just the thing for business, beach or golf.

TURKISH TOWELS FOR BLOUSE

Ingenuous Women Have Found That the Bathroom Can Be Robbed for the Tennis Court.

Fine Turkish toweling has recently been admitted into fashion. Ingenuous women have found out that the bathroom can be robbed for the tennis court. Two extra large towels with a good-looking colored border serve for a blouse with elbow sleeves and a colored cotton sash. This makes a more commendable sport garment than linen, voile or silk.

Another common fabric that has been flashed into fashion is outing cloth. It serves for entire gowns, or for a moujik's blouse worn over a narrow skirt of dark blue, red or yellow cotton or linen.

The introduction of colored velveteen for coats, as a substitute for the expensive silk sweater, lowers the price of one open-air garment when it is not made by an expensive tailor. Velveteen has suddenly leaped into the summer fashions, along with the new autumn hats. It is frequently chosen in green, lapis lazuli blue, burnt orange and black. Its summer use is not confined to sports coats; it is worn by smart women for sports skirts.

RETURN OF THE GOLF CAPE

Wrap That Closely Resembles Garment of Twenty Years Ago Adopted as Substitute for Sweater.

Smart women have adopted the circular cape with straps, across the front of the body, as a substitute for the sweater. These wraps resemble the golf capes of 20 years ago. One of the smart French designs is modeled exactly after the Scotch garment. The dominant idea in the new capes is to have the fullness swing away from the shoulders at the same time that the garment, is held tightly in place by two broad straps that are placed beneath the shoulders, cross over the chest, pass around the waist in the back and tie in the front.

These capes have brilliant linings in figured designs. The printed Futurist crepes are better here than elsewhere. Broad, colored stripes in crepe, silk or cotton are also used. Even the jackets of summer suits are now lined with gay-colored linen.

COOL NEGLIGEE FOR SUMMER

After searching far back into the thousands of different styles for women in negligees, and other costumes used for the purpose, not one appeared the superior of this beautiful harem costume of Japanese batik. Its extreme fascination perhaps lies in the fact that its beauty does not lie in trimmings, for it has next to none. A few flowers woven in the cloth is the only adornment.

Hair Ribbons.
Have strips of cardboard in your little girl's dresser drawer and teach her how to wrap her ribbons on them, one on each strip. This eliminates the need of ironing and preserves the stiffness.

MANY NEW TRICKS

Ingenuity Shown by Shoplifters Astounds Storekeepers.

Handkerchief, Dummy Hand and the Bottomless Vanity Box Among Devices of Thieves.

Each year the shoplifters spring new and uncanny tricks on the watchful detective and astute salesmen in the big department stores and shops carrying out so deftly their light fingered art, that, as expressed by a manager of one of the largest of these stores, "they make Aladdin's wonder lamp seem like a spluttering oil dip of the early centuries."

Shoplifting, according to an exchange, has long since developed into a study with the heads of the large establishments, and so carefully have they diagnosed the cases that come under their observation that it is not often the shoplifter gets away with the spoils.

One reads a great deal about the house detectives employed by the big shops, but except in a few cases no such person is employed to watch shoplifters, this business being the individual duty of each employee. While they are waiting on the customer they are at the same time exercising untiring vigilance.

The handkerchief trick is not a new one, but the amount of damage it does is astonishing. It is worked in various ways. The most successful operator is usually dressed in widow's weeds. This makes it look more natural for the handkerchief to be continually in evidence. It is a poor shoplifter now who does not dress the part. The handkerchief, kept in the hand all the time by the bereaved woman, is carelessly dropped on anything in sight small enough and valuable enough to be desirable, and when it is next held to the widow's face it is possible that a ring is inside it, to be passed temporarily to the mouth for concealment.

However, there is nothing uncanny about the handkerchief trick. It is the false hand trick that almost convinces one that witchcraft is not a thing of the past. When the salesgirl sees two hands in plain view, and yet is conscious that articles are disappearing from her counter, she cannot believe her eyes. But it is all very simple, as the gloved hand resting on the counter is a false one while the mate to the hand examining the goods is under cover of a raincoat or muff.

A floor walker who could write volumes on such tricks says that he worked on a case of this kind for several days without success, when one morning he was looking down from one of the small galleries in the store and saw the various articles disappearing under the woman's cloak while to all appearances both of her hands were in plain view. The articles were moving as if by magic, and the trick was not discovered until he invited the young person to go with him to the manager's office.

This same floorwalker added that the most ingenious trick he had stumbled across was the vanity box trick, adding that the majority of shoplifters who work in department stores are women and that nowadays every woman carries a vanity box of some description. It may be as small as a 25-cent piece or as large as a silver dollar.

The shoplifter variety is of the larger kind, bottomless and fitted with a rubber ball attached to an ornamental button on the lid of the box, which when pressed expands the ball, causing suction. The owner of this device when at work at the jewelry counter, places the vanity box on the showcase while she looks at rings or other small jewelry, and when the opportunity arrives moves it over the article and it is sucked into the case.

"Plane Carries 21 People.

Rather meager reports from England bring the news that the British have finally been successful in their attempt to build a huge airplane, for a machine has been produced which carried a pilot and 20 passengers to an altitude of 7,000 feet on a test trip. Details of some of the most recent forms of giant airplanes show that these have as high as 1,000 horse power divided between four, or in some cases two Rolls-Royce water-cooled motors. In the way of equipment, these planes are provided with two or four machine guns, at least one of three-inch caliber. They are supposed to carry 1,500 pounds or more of bombs, and have a speed of 85 to 100 miles per hour. Incidentally, this is a record for passenger carrying, the previous record being 12, by the Russian Sikorsky and the Curtis super-America type.

Entanglements.
"We must avoid foreign entanglements."
"My friend," replied Senator Sorghum, "I don't care where we get our submarine nets, so long as they do the work."

ANTISEPTIC POWDER
FOR PERSONAL HYGIENE
Dissolved in water for douches stops pelvic catarrh, ulceration and inflammation. Recommended by Lydia E. Pinkham Med. Co. for 40 years. A healing wonder for nasal catarrh, sore throat and sore eyes. Economical. Has extraordinary cleaning and germicidal power. Sample Free, 30c. All druggists, or postpaid by mail. The Patent Toilet Company, Boston, Mass.

A Philadelphia Idea.
Music and cleaning the parlor have never been very closely associated. When the housewife wants to play the piano, she generally waits until she has cleaned the parlor, taken a bath and dressed herself in party clothes. Now a Philadelphian has patented a dust-filtering attachment which can be attached to the player-piano, and the ordinary housewife can now seat herself at the player-piano, obtain music via the keys, work the pedals for all she is worth and, with her child to run the vacuum cleaner about the floor, she can have it clean in a jiffy. The bellows of the player are attached to the vacuum cleaner by means of a special pipe, and in this manner the needed vacuum is created for cleaning purposes.

Natural Study.
The teacher was hearing the class in nature. Trying to impress upon the children's minds the horror of cruelty to animals, she told the following story:

"Once a farmer went out to milk a cow and a little calf switched the man in the eye with its tail. The man took out his knife and cut off the calf's tail. Now, children, what verse in the Bible should that man have remembered?"

Of course she had referred to "Blessed are the merciful," but Philip had another answer:

"What God hath joined together, let no man put asunder."—Exchange.

Sixty-Five Die Every Minute.
The annual death rate of the human race is 33,000,000. That's 91,000 a day, 3,700 every hour, 62 every minute. One-half of the human race die before they are sixteen years old; one-quarter of the human race die before they are five years old. The average length of a human life is thirty-three and one-third years. Not one man or one woman in a million lives to be one hundred years old. But don't let this discourage you from taking as good care of your health as if it were a new motorcar.

Not So Smart.
Mr. Flatbush—It's the same old story.

Mrs. Flatbush—What's wrong now? "I painted the front gate and hung a sign on it, 'Fresh Paint.'"

"Well?"
"The first man who came along put his hand on it to see of the paint was really fresh."

"Don't be so smart."

"Why?"
"That wasn't a man that put his hand on the paint to see if it was fresh; that was me."

The man with the alcohol nose is true to his colors.

Preparing for Tomorrow

Many people seem able to drink coffee for a time without apparent harm, but when health disturbance, even though slight, follows coffee's use, it is wise to investigate.

Thousands of homes, where coffee was found to disagree, have changed the family table drink to

Instant Postum

With improved health, and it usually follows, the change made becomes a permanent one. It pays to prepare for the health of tomorrow.

KEEP OLD GLORY FLYING.

WE'RE THANKFUL.

The Outlook wishes to thank the good people of Carrizozo for the support and encouragement given the paper under the new management, and for the friendly and neighborly manner in which they received its new editor when a "Stranger with-in your gates."

It will be the aim of the Outlook to be of such service to the people as will merit their confidence, and as the newspaper should be the voice of the people, we issue a standing invitation to the public to make use of the pages of the Outlook to express themselves on all matters of interest in that which we as residents of Carrizozo are the most concerned.

Our aim will be to give you all the news all the time and in so doing we would repeat what we made mention of in our "Salutatory." If you know of an item of interest make it known to "Our Man About Town," or call 24 and tell us about it; we will consider it a favor.

The Outlook will endeavor to make its pages interesting to its readers and to add new features as time and opportunity will permit. Noticeable at the present time is our new serial, "Heart of the Sunset" which will be of interest to those of us who find enjoyment in reading a story of love and adventure connected with situations which recite some of the actual incidents and conditions along the Mexican border.

In another feature we have not overlooked the little folks and are running a series of "Daddy's Fairy Tales" which are sure to appeal to the childish heart.

"Our Man About Town" will pay attention to our business houses taking note of anything they have to offer in new lines and keeping in touch with their advanced ideas and future intentions.

Then let the press and the people work together for the good and welfare, not only of our own surroundings, but for that of our neighbors in the adjoining towns as well, for what concerns them will in a great measure concern us, therefore The Outlook solicits their correspondence. If you would like to have the happenings in your locality appear under a separate head, send it in—we will gladly give you space.

With cooperation for our watchword let us move forward.

SENSIBLE ECONOMY.

We are among those who believe the worst shock of the war to our business interests to be over, at least so far as anyone can forecast.

When we entered into the war the first Liberty Loan was quickly absorbed to satisfy a series of demands incident to our entrance upon this important undertaking, and this safeguard gave a stimulus to business, increased its confidence and as a result it is going along very well. But the people must not lose themselves in a hysteria of economy. They have a grave duty to perform, for to raise the cry about undue saving, curtailing and depriving ourselves of comforts and conveniences and putting these things into practice would paralyze business completely and as a result everybody would suffer.

While war often does impose hardships, it does not follow that we must deprive ourselves of common comforts, rather, should we not follow the wholesome advice of President Wilson who pleads for business to proceed in as much of normal fashion as is possible.

Our congressmen are among the leaders of a movement to abolish the "delivery system" which, by the way, is one of the important features of our business life, as a means of economy which if put into practice would be the first blow toward stagnating our interests. It would throw deliverymen out of employment and then into idleness. The change would amount to nothing in the way of economy compared with the inconvenience we would heap upon ourselves and the injury we would do to others.

Our congressmen should set us an example of economy. The franking privilege accorded our congressmen causes seven tons of mail daily to be sent broadcast over the United States the most of which is confined to the waste basket by those who receive it.

The government of course issues reports of vital interest and of great value and importance to certain people, but there is little or no use of our congressmen flooding their districts with all sorts of printed matter merely to keep their names before their constituents.

Thousands of dollars worth of printed matter is issued and mailed out annually by the government, which is never read, thus representing a waste of labor and paper when at the same time our publishers are using as much sensible economy as is possible to insure a supply sufficient for the public need.

Let our business men continue the delivery system and let our congressmen discontinue the abuse of the franking system.

Let us have a "sensible economy" and not a "faddish hysteria."

Reports to the adjutant general's office show that enlistments in the regular army for August 1 amounted to 1,921, making a total of 175,187 accepted enlistments since April 1, 1917.

Red Cross Affair a Success

The Ice Cream Social which was given at the Court House Monday evening for the benefit of the Red Cross Society was a grand success.

Music was furnished and the young people of the town danced on the walks, a novelty hitherto never indulged in.

The Campfire Girls were kept busy selling home-made candies and lemonade, and the lobby of the Court House made a delightful retreat, where ice cream was served. $66.31 was cleared after all bills were paid.

Club Dance

A club dance will be given at White Oaks Saturday, August 18 for benefit of the Red Cross Society. Plenty of refreshments and a good floor manager. Admission $1.00 at the door.

Porto Rico a Gem.
 Horticulturally Porto Rico is a gem, also ideal in all ways. The island is nearly a rectangle .35 miles wide and 100 miles long, of great fertility, great beauty and a healthful and almost perfect climate. Although the population is 820 to the square mile nearly all are engaged in horticulture. The chief crops are citrus fruits, coffee, coconuts, pineapples, bananas and many other tropical fruits.

Nogal News

Henry Emerson has bought the Brown Hotel in Nogal and will repair and furnish it so that the traveling public may be accommodated. O. C. Davis and wife went to Carrizozo Monday to transfer the deed to Mr. Emerson.

M. B. Mayes and family, former residents of Nogal are visiting their daughter Mrs. John Little of this place.

The Rev. DeArmond gave a lecture in Nogal last week on the "Extreme Fashions." A collection was taken which netted the sum of $16.00. This amount went toward defraying the expenses of a visit to the Rescue Home in Texas by a number of ladies of this community.

Quite a number of prominent citizens of Carrizozo visited the garden in Nogal Sunday and returned well supplied with vegetables.

Joseph Cochran is running a tunnel in the Carrizo mountains prospecting for coal.

The second crop of Alfalfa is being harvested here and the yield is very large.

William Vincent moved from the "Mesa" to the "Helen Rae" Mines where he is employed by Mr. Robinson.

We learn that 62 conversions was the result of the revival service at the Pentecostal Nazarine Meeting on the "Mesa" which closed last Sunday. Five were baptised in the pool on Uncle Tom Henley's place in Nogal.

The latest pictures of the Lincoln County Court House are now in the hands of the county officials, and are perfect and realistic. The features of the officials on the front steps are plainly discernable and in every way the pictures are a credit to Carrizozo.

First Book Printed in State is Found.

Santa Fe, N. M., Aug. 2.—A small duo-decimo volume of a hundred pages, printed in Spanish and bound in leather, is one of the most precious kinds made by Historian Benjamin M. Read lately. It is one of the earliest volumes printed in New Mexico. The contents are the analytical lectures on the Spanish language and grammar, delivered by Parde Antonio Jose Martinez before his class of grammar students in the college conducted by Father Martinez at Taos in 1835, and printed in the printing office of Father Martinez the same year.

The book is in five chapters with ample notes, citations and footnotes in addition to quotations from the Spanish classics. The title page and the first 33 pages of the text are missing in Mr. Read's volume, which is priceless nevertheless, as it appears to be the only copy extant.

Heart of the Sunset

By Rex Beach is a story of the Mexican border country that will give you a vivid insight into the frontier life that most of us had believed a thing of the past.

Blaze Jones, the founder of Jonesville, is one of the characters; he is a delightful old fire-eater who will afford you more than one appreciative chuckle.

Dave Law, college graduate, adventurer, soldier and Texas ranger, is a man you'll learn to like because of his manhood and clear-cut individuality.

Gen. Longorio, federal Mexican leader, melodramatic, childlike, brave and villainous, is another of the striking characters that make the story one not soon to be forgotten.

Henry Emerson has bought the Brown Hotel in Nogal and will repair and furnish it so that the traveling public may be accommodated. O. C. Davis and wife went to Carrizozo Monday to transfer the deed to Mr. Emerson.

M. B. Mayes and family, former residents of Nogal are visiting their daughter Mrs. John Little of this place.

The Rev. DeArmond gave a lecture in Nogal last week on the "Extreme Fashions." A collection was taken which netted the sum of $16.00. This amount went toward defraying the expenses of a visit to the Rescue Home in Texas by a number of ladies of this community.

Quite a number of prominent citizens of Carrizozo visited the garden in Nogal Sunday and returned well supplied with vegetables.

Joseph Cochran is running a tunnel in the Carrizo mountains prospecting for coal.

The second crop of Alfalfa is being harvested here and the yield is very large.

William Vincent moved from the "Mesa" to the "Helen Rae" Mines where he is employed by Mr. Robinson.

We learn that 62 conversions was the result of the revival service at the Pentecostal Nazarine Meeting on the "Mesa" which closed last Sunday. Five were baptised in the pool on Uncle Tom Henley's place in Nogal.

Lin Branum who recently sold the I-X Ranch has let a contract to Little & White for a building on Alamogordo Ave. The structure is to be two stories, will contain eight rooms, four on the lower floor for offices and the four on the upper floor for living rooms.

Mike Doering has blocked up the front of the new building to be occupied by the Pure Food Bakery to temporarily keep the crowds from the carnival out until Ed Hannon can have his grand opening.

The latest pictures of the Lincoln County Court House are now in the hands of the county officials, and are perfect and realistic. The features of the officials on the front steps are plainly discernable and in every way the pictures are a credit to Carrizozo.

The Court House yard is in fine condition and shows the careful attention of janitor Dan Smith, who knows how to keep it in shape.

Pat McGrath was brought to jail from San Patricia suffering from a nervous condition and was given medical attention by the county health officer.

First Book Printed in State is Found.

Santa Fe, N. M., Aug. 2.—A small decimo volume of a hundred pages, printed in Spanish and bound in leather, is one of the most precious kinds made by Historian Benjamin M. Read lately. It is one of the earliest volumes printed in New Mexico. The contents are the analytical lectures on the Spanish language and grammar, delivered by Parde Antonio Jose Martinez before his class of grammar students in the college conducted by Father Martinez at Taos in 1835, and printed in the printing office of Father Martinez the same year.

The book is in five chapters with ample notes, citations and footnotes in addition to quotations from the Spanish classics. The title page and the first 88 pages of the text are missing in Mr. Read's volume, which is priceless nevertheless, as it appears to be the only copy extant.

Heart of the Sunset

By Rex Beach is a story of the Mexican border country that will give you a vivid insight into the frontier life that most of us had believed a thing of the past.

Blaze Jones, the founder of Jonesville, is one of the characters; he is a delightful old fire-eater who will afford you more than one appreciative chuckle.

Dave Law, college graduate, adventurer, soldier and Texas ranger, is a man you'll learn to like because of his manhood and clear-cut individuality.

Gen. Longorio, federal Mexican leader, melodramatic, childlike, brave and villainous, is another of the striking characters that make the story one not soon to be forgotten.

MRS AUSTIN IS ACCUSED
BY HER DRUNKEN HUSBAND OF BEING TOO
FRIENDLY WITH THE STATE RANGER.

Mrs. Alaire Austin, a handsome young matron, mistress of Las Palmas ranch, gets lost in the Texas desert and after an all-day struggle wanders into the little camp of David Law, a range officer hunting a Mexican murderer. Circumstances force her to stay there overnight and all the next day. Law catches his man and kills another, then escorts her home.

CHAPTER IV.

At Las Palmas. Although the lower counties of southwest Texas are flat and badly watered, they possess a rich soil. They are favored, too, by a kindly climate, subtropic in its mildness. The Rio Grande, juiced, erratic as an invalid, wrings its saffron blood from the clay bluffs and gravel canyons of the hill country, but near its estuary winds quietly through a low coastal plain which the very impurities of that blood have richened. Here the river's banks are smothered in thickets of huisache, ebony, mesquite, oak and alamo.

Railroads are so scarce along this division of the border that to travel from Brownsville north along the international line one must, for several hundred miles, avail oneself of horses, mules or mulecars, since rail transportation is almost lacking. And on his way the traveler will traverse whole counties where the houses are jacals, where English is a foreign tongue, and where peons plow their fields with crooked sticks as did the ancient Egyptians.

That part of the state which lies below the Nueces river was for a time disputed territory, and long after Texas had given their lives to drive the eagle of Mexico across the Rio Grande much of it remained a forbidden land. Even today it is alien. It is a part of our Southland, but a South different to any other that we have. Within it, there are no blacks, and yet the whites number but one in twenty. The rest are swarthy, black-haired men who speak the Spanish tongue and whose citizenship is mostly a matter of form.

The stockmen, pushing ahead of the settlers and the tillers of the soil, were the first to invade the lower Rio Grande, and among these "Old Ed" Austin was a pioneer. Like the other cattle barons, he was hungry for land and took it where or how he could. Those were crude old days; the pioneers who pushed their herds into the far pastures were lawless fellows, ruthless, acquisitive, mastered by the empire-builder's urge for acres and still more acres.

As other ranches grew under the hands of such unregenerate owners, so also under "Old Ed" Austin's management did Las Palmas increase and prosper. It comprised an expanse of rich river-land backed by miles of range where "Box A" cattle lived and bred. In his later years when the old man handed Las Palmas to his son, "Young Ed," as a wedding gift, the ranch was known far and wide for its size and richness. Las Palmas had changed greatly since Austin, sealer, painfully scrawled his mending signature to the deed. It was a different ranch now to what the old man had known; indeed, it was doubtful if he would have recognized it, for even the holes was new.

Alaire had some such thought in mind as she rode up to the gate on the afternoon following her departure from the water hole, and she felt a thrill of pride at the acres of sprouting corn, the dense green field of alfalfa so nicely fitted between their fences. They were like clean, green squares of matted grass for the feet of summer. A Mexican boy came running to care for her horse, a Mexican woman greeted her as she entered the wide, cool hall and went to her room. Delores had a bath and laid out clean clothes with a running accompaniment of chat and concern with household affairs.

She was a great gossip, and possessed such a talent for gaining information that through her husband, Benito, the range boss, she was able to keep her mistress in fairly intimate touch with ranch matters.

Alaire, as she leisurely dressed herself, acknowledged that it was good to feel the physical comforts of her own house, even though her homecoming gave her no especial joy. She made it a religious practice to dress for dinner, regardless of Ed's presence, though often for weeks at a time she sat in solitary state, presiding over an empty table. Tonight, Ed was at home. It was with a grave preoccupation that she made herself ready to meet him.

In the dining room, Ed acknowledged his wife's entrance with a careless nod, but did not trouble to remove his hands from his pockets. As he seated himself heavily at the table and with unsteady fingers shook the folds from his napkin, he said:

"You stayed longer than you intended. Um-m—you were gone three days, weren't you?"

"Four days," Alaire told him, realizing with a little inward start how very far apart she and Ed had drifted. She looked at him curiously for an instant, wondering if he really could be her husband, or—if he were not some peculiarly disagreeable stranger.

Ed had been a handsome boy, but he was growing fat from drink and soft from idleness; his face was too full, his eyes too sluggish; there was an unhealthy redness in his cheeks. In contrast to his wife's semi-formal dress, he was unkempt—unshaven and rolled. His preparations for dinner this evening had been characteristically simple; he had drunk three dry cocktails and flung his sombrero into a corner.

"I've been busy while you were gone," he announced. "Been down to the pump house every day laying that new intake. It was a nasty job, too. I had Morales barbecue a cabrito for my lunch, and it was good, but I'm hungry again." Austin attacked his meal with an enthusiasm strange in him. He was a heavy and a constant drinker at all times. What little exercise he took was upon the back of a horse, and, as no one knew better than his wife, the physical powers he once had were rapidly deteriorating.

By and by he inquired, vaguely: "Let's see. . . . Where did you go this time?"

"I went up to look over the Ygnacio tract."

"Oh, yes. Think you'll lease it?"

"I don't know. I must find some place for those La Feria cattle."

Austin shook his head. "Better leave 'em where they are, until the rebels take that country. I stand mighty well with them."

"That's the trouble," Alaire told him. "You stand too well—so well that I want to get my stock out of federal territory as soon as possible." Ed shrugged carelessly. "Suit yourself; they're your cows."

The meal went on with a desultory flow of small talk, during which the husband indulged his thirst freely. Alaire told him about the accident to her horse and the unpleasant ordeal she had suffered in the mesquite.

"Lucky you found somebody at the water hole," Ed commented. "Who was this ranger? Never heard of the fellow," he commented on the name. "The rangers are nothing like they used to be."

"This fellow would do credit to any organization." As Alaire described how expeditiously Law had made his arrest and handled his man, her husband showed interest.

"Nicolas Anto, eh?" said he. "Who was his companion?"

"Pantle Sanchez."

Ed started. "That's strange! They must have met accidentally."

"So they both declared. Why did you let Pantle go?"

"We didn't need him here, and he was too good a man to lose, so—" Ed found his wife's eyes fixed upon him, and dropped his own. "I knew you were short-headed at La Feria." There was an interval of silence, then Ed explained, testily, "What are you looking at?"

"I wondered what you'd say."

"Oh! Can't I see a man without a long-winded explanation? Just because I've let you run things to suit yourself."

"Wait! We had our understanding."

Alaire's voice was low and vibrant. "It was my payment for living with you, and you know it. You gave me the reins to Las Palmas so that I'd have something to do, something to live for and think about, except—your actions. The ranch has doubled in value, every penny is accounted for, and you have more money to spend on yourself than ever before. You have no reason to complain."

Austin crushed his napkin into a ball and flung it from him; with a scowl he shoved himself back from the table.

"It was an idiotic arrangement, just the same. I agreed because I was sick. Dad thought I was all shot to pieces. But I'm all right now and able to run my own business."

"Nevertheless, it was a bargain, and it will stand. If your father were alive he'd make you live up to it."

"You talk as if I were a child," shouted her husband; and his plump face was apoplectic with rage. "The title is in my name. How could he make me do anything?"

"Nobody could force you," his wife said, quietly. "You are still enough of a man to keep your word. I believe, so long as I observe my part of our bargain."

Ed, slightly mollified, agreed. "Of course I am; I never welched. But I won't be treated as an incompetent, and I'm tired of these eternal wrangles and jangles."

"You have welched."

"Eh?" Austin frowned belligerently. "You agreed to go away when you felt your appetite coming on, and you promised to live clean, at least around home."

"Well?"

Alaire went on in a lifeless tone that covered the seething emotions within her. "I never inquire into your actions at San Antonio or other large cities, although of course I have ears and I can't help hearing about them; but these border towns are home to us, and people know me. I won't be humiliated more than I am; public pity is hard enough to bear. I've about reached the breaking point."

"Indeed?" Austin leaned forward, his eyes inflamed. His tone was raised, heedless of possible eavesdroppers. "Then why don't you end it? Why don't you divorce me? I never see anything of you. You have your part of the house and I have mine; all we share in common is meal hours, and—and a mail address."

Alaire turned upon him eyes dark with misery. "You know why I don't divorce you. No, Ed, we're going to live out our agreement, and these Brownsville episodes are going to cease." Her lips whitened. "So are your visits to the pumping station."

"What do you mean by that?"

"You transferred Pantle because he was growing jealous of you and Rosa."

Ed burst into sudden laughter. "There's no harm in a little flirtation. Rosa's a pretty girl."

His wife uttered a breathless, smothered exclamation; her hands, as they lay on the table cloth, were tightly clenched. "She's your tenant—almost your servant. What kind of a man are you? Haven't you any decency left?"

"Say! Go easy! I guess I'm no different to most men." Austin's unpleasant laughter had been succeeded by a still more unpleasant scowl. "I have to do something. It's dead enough around here—"

"You must stop going there."

"Humph! I notice you go where you please. Rosa and I never spent a night together in the chaparral."

"Ed!" Alaire's exclamation was like the snap of a whip. She rose and faced her husband, quivering as if the lash had stung her flesh.

"That went home, eh? Well, I'm no fool. I've seen something of the world, and I've found that women are about like men. I'd like to have a look at this David Law, this gunman, this Handsome Harry who waits at water holes for ladies in distress." Ed ignored his wife's outflung hand, and continued, mockingly: "I'll bet he's all that's manly and splendid, everything that I'm not."

"You'd—better stop," gasped the woman. "I can't stand everything."

"So? Well, neither can I."

"After—this, I think you'd better go—to San Antonio. Maybe I'll forget before you come back."

To this "Young Ed" agreed quickly enough. "Good!" said he. "That suits me. I'll at least get a little peace at my club." He glowered after his wife as she left the room. Then, still scowling, he lurched out to the gallery where the breeze was blowing, and flung himself into a chair.

Ed's marriage to Alaire had been inevitable. They had been playmates, and their parents had considered the union a consummation of their own lifelong friendship. Upon her mother's death Alaire had been sent abroad, and there she remained while "Young Ed" attended an eastern college. For any child the experience would have been a lonesome one, and through it the motherless Texas girl had grown into an imaginative, sentimental person, living in a make-believe world, peopled for the most part, with the best-remembered figures of romance and fiction. There were, of course, some few flesh-and-blood heroes among the rest, and of these the finest and the noblest had been "Young Ed" Austin.

When she came home to marry, Alaire was still very much of a child, and she still considered Ed her knight. As for him, he was captivated by this splendid, handsome girl, whom he remembered only as a shy, red-headed little comrade.

As Las Palmas had been the elder Austin's wedding gift to his son, so Alaire's dowry from her father had been La Feria, a grant of lands across the Rio Grande beyond the twenty-league belt by which Mexico fatuously strives to guard her border. And to Las Palmas had come the bride and groom to live, to love and to rear their children.

But rarely has there been a shorter honeymoon, seldom a swifter awakening. Within six months "Young Ed" had killed his wife's love and had himself become an alcoholic. Other vices so multiplied that what few virtues the young man had inherited were soon choked. To the bride the truth had come as a stunning tragedy. The wreck of her hopes and glad imaginations left her sick, bewildered, in the face of "the thing that couldn't."

Nor had the effect of this transformation in "Young Ed" been any less painful to his father. When the truth was borne in upon him unmistakably, and the girl-wife remained firm in her refusal to divorce her husband, the understanding had been reached by which the management of Las Palmas was placed absolutely in her hands.

Of course the truth became public, as it always does. "Young Ed" Austin's life became a scorn and a blessing among his neighbors. They were not unduly fastidious, these neighbors, and they knew that hot blood requires more than a generation to cool, but everything Ed did outraged them. In trying to show their sympathy for his wife they succeeded in wounding her more deeply, and Alaire withdrew into herself. She had changed. The alteration reached to the very bone and marrow of her being. At first the general pity had wounded her, then it had offended, and finally angered her. That people should notice her affliction, particularly when she strove so desperately to hide it, seemed the height of insolence.

The management of Las Palmas was almost her only relief. Having sprung from a family of ranchers, the work came easy, and she grew to like it—as well as she could like anything with that ever-present pain in her breast. Las Palmas had prospered to admiration, and La Feria would have prospered equally had it not been for the armed unrest of the country across the border. No finer stock than the "Box A" was to be found anywhere. But Alaire had not confined her efforts to cattle; she had improved the breed of "Box A" horses, too, and had in hand with this work she had carried on a series of agricultural experiments. For instance, she had started a grove of paper-shelled pecans, which was soon due to bear; the ranchhouse and its clump of palms was all but hidden by a forest of strange trees, which were reported to ripen everything from mothballs to bicycle tires. Blaze Jones was perhaps responsible for this report, for Alaire had shown him several thousand eucalyptus saplings and some ornamental rubber plants.

"That Miz Austin is a money-makin' piece of furniture," he once told his daughter Paloma. "I'm no mechanical adder—I count mostly on my fingers—but her and me calculated the profits on them cactus—what's their name?—and it gave me a splittin' headache. She'll be a drug queen, sure."

"Why don't you follow her example?" asked Paloma. "We have plenty of land."

Double complications develop for Mrs. Austin in quick order. The next installment describes her encounter with a Mexican officer who becomes wild about her and makes trouble.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Expensive.

The efficiency expert to whom the world was turned over for tuning up got after the clouds the first thing.

"Have that silver lining ripped out!" he directed, peremptorily. "Don't you know somebody has to pay for it? No wonder the cost of living is high!"

Certain optimists raised a hue and cry, but only to discover, to their profound chagrin that, owing to the war and one thing and another, their trade was no longer what it had been.

Real Appreciation.

Ella was arranging her mistress's hair one afternoon when she mentioned that she had heard Miss Alien sing in the parlor the evening before.

"How did you like her, Ella?" asked the mistress.

"Oh, ma'am," sighed the maid, "it was grand! She sung just as if she was gargling!"

He's Dead Right.

A witty Frenchman said: "Only death is an excuse for not keeping a dinner engagement, and even then a polite man would send the undertaker an apology for him."

GRAIN CROPS ARE PROMISING

Western Canada 1917 Crops in Good Shape.

While it is a little early to predict what the Western Canada grain crop will produce, there is every indication at the present writing that the 1917 crop will give an excellent return. Reports received from all portions of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta speak of good growing weather, a fairly advanced stage of all grains, with prospects as good as in the past two years. Should conditions continue as at present, it is safe to conclude that Western Canadian farmers, already free of debt, as a result of the splendid crops and prevailing high prices, expect from this season's returns to be in a position that will place them away beyond any fear of the future.

The acreage of Western Canada will be about the same as last year. Seeding was somewhat later than last year, but germination was quicker. The only possible drawback now would seem to be a scarcity of harvest hands, but it is felt by the authorities that the situation will be pretty well cared for by that time.

Land values are increasing, but there is room for a much greater increase than in the past, owing to the returns that farmed land will give when compared with its cost. In some districts land that could have been bought five years ago for $15 an acre is changing hands at $90 an acre, the seller satisfied that he is giving the purchaser good value for his money. And why not, when it is known that in a great many cases during the past two years crops have been grown on this land that have produced a profit of forty and fifty dollars per acre, over and above cost of production. These cases, while not general, were not exceptional.

In addition to the lands that are offered for sale by railway companies, land companies and private individuals, the homesteading areas offer great inducements for those who are willing to do a little pioneering for a year or two. By that time settlements would come into existence, and this means a condition similar to that enjoyed by many of the older settlements of today—schools, churches, railways. The land is of high-class quality, strong and vigorous, easily worked, and capable of producing the very best of crops.

The demand for all grains for some years will be great, and it will require all the resources of man, beast and soil to meet it. That the prices will be good goes without saying, but at the present time there is something more appealing than the lucrative prices that prevail. That is, the desire to assist in winning the world war. The man at the plow is doing his "bit," and the spirit of patriotism that prevails will lead him into a broader sphere of action. No matter where he may be he will look about him that he may find land to further develop the country's resources. It is possible that his own state may furnish the land, in which case he will be quick to take advantage of the offer. If land in his own state is not available, Canada (now our ally) will be glad to furnish it in unlimited quantity, as she is vitally interested in largely increasing the supply of foodstuffs which is now as urgently needed and is as valuable as ammunition to the allied countries.

The appeal made by Mr. Hoover, United States controller of foods, and also by Hon. W. J. Hanna, Canadian controller, emphasizes the need of the allies, urges economy and the prevention of the waste in food, and bespeaks whole-hearted public co-operation. Speaking of Great Britain, France, Italy, Belgium and their European allies, they say:

"For nearly three years their man power has been engaged in the direct work of war, and in some cases large areas of their most productive lands have been overrun by the enemy. Their food shortage and the food to supply the armies of Canada and the United States must be wholly provided from this side of the Atlantic. The supply must also be sufficient to cover losses at sea. Australia, New Zealand, the Argentine Republic and other countries are not now available to relieve the situation because of their remoteness and the shortage of tonnage.

"The crop of storable foods grown in Canada and the United States suitable for shipment overseas threatens to be entirely inadequate to meet the demand unless the whole people determine by every means in their power to make up the shortage. Every individual is under a direct obligation to assist in rationing the allied forces. There must be national self-denial and national co-operation to provide the necessary supplies."—Advertisement.

THIRD YEAR OF WAR SEES SITUATION OF THE ALLIES GREATLY IMPROVED

Germany's Position Less Favorable Than One Year Ago or Two Years Ago—In Principal Theater of War, the West, East and Italian Fronts, the Entente Allies Have Shown Decided Superiority.

New York.—Germany's situation at the end of three years of war appears less favorable than it did either one year ago or two years ago.

She has to her credit in the last twelvemonth the crushing of ill-prepared Roumania and the conquest of two-thirds of that nation's territory.

But in the principal theater of war, the west, east and Italian fronts, the entente allies have shown, on the whole, a decided superiority to the central powers.

In the materials of war the nations fighting for democracy clearly have an increasing advantage over the kaiser's legions. They have dealt the enemy blow after blow which have told heavily in lives, if not in territory.

Germany More Desperate. Germany's plight is rendered more desperate than it was on August 3, 1916, by the accession of the United States and several minor peoples to the ranks of her enemies. Almost the whole world is now lined up against that nation.

Every belligerent dreads another winter of war, but Germany most of all. She lacks many things to face the rigors of a cold campaign—not only shells and guns, but wool for warm clothing and sufficient coal to run her rapidly deteriorating railroads and her factories and keep those at home comfortably warm, not to speak of the famine in the food fats so necessary to those facing zero weather.

Looking back on the long truce of the spring on the eastern front, it is hard to realize that the Russians just one year ago were in the midst of a splendid offensive much like that which has surprised the world in the present month. In the 1916 drive Brusiloff pushed far within Bukovina and Galicia and crossed the borders of Hungary. He took about 850,000 prisoners, mostly Austrians, and forced the enemy to concentrate masses of reliable German troops, aided by a few Turks, to check him.

The real reason his drive came to a halt, however, we know now was lack of ammunition, failure of transport, treason within the czar's armies and wretched bureaucratic inefficiency. These handicaps seem to have been removed from the courageous Muscovites, perhaps for all time.

Unfortunate Roumania. Roumania declared war on the Teutonic powers August 27 and immediately invaded Transylvania, where the weak Austrian guards were easily pushed back and the important cities of Hermannstadt and Kronstadt were soon in the invaders' hands.

The kaiser sent Von Falkenhayn, a splendid strategist just displaced by Von Hindenburg, as chief of the great general staff, to command on this front, while Von Mackensen headed the Germans, Bulgarians and Turks, who threw themselves on Roumania from the south.

The Roumanians proved no match for the combination of foes. Skillful work by German spies, or the treachery of certain members of their own army, put the Roumanians' plans of campaign in the Teutons' hands. It is now divulged, Bucharest fell December 6, and ten days later all Walachia was lost. On December 18 Russian troops took over the whole Roumanian front, and a few weeks later the Teuton advance was checked along the line of the Sereth and Danube rivers.

Somme Battle Continues. In the west, however, Germany was facing a far different problem from the poorly outfitted and trained Roumanian peasants. When the third year of the war opened the battle of the Somme was still going on vigorously, with the French and British showing a constantly growing superiority over the foe. Bit by bit through the summer and autumn the ground was wrenched from the kaiser's men until the coming of winter smothered the offensive "in mud and blood," and, according to the British commander, Sir Douglas Haig, saved his opponents from an immediate great enforced retirement.

On September 22 it was announced that the French and British had taken 55,800 prisoners in the Somme battle between July 1 and September 18. This total was later considerably increased.

French Win at Verdun. At Verdun, too, the Germans suffered. The French in battles of the fall and winter won back most of the ground lost in the offensive of the spring of 1916 and captured more than 15,000 prisoners, with slight losses themselves.

The spring campaign in the west opened this war with the Germans falling back from the great salient spearpoint directed at Paris—confessing thereby either their weakness or their aversion to a further offensive, although at the time German writers hinted darkly that Von Hindenburg "had something up his sleeve."

The "strategic retirement" began about March 17, and the Teutons triumphantly declared it would prevent an allied offensive this year. But they spoke too soon.

On April 9 the British stormed high Vimy Ridge, taking on this and succeeding days about 12,000 prisoners. The other enemy stronghold along the British line was Messines Ridge, south of Ypres. This the British blew up by mines June 7, the noise being heard in London. They captured 5,000 prisoners the first day of the offensive and many others later.

French Gain Hills. Below the sector of the German retirement the French were equally successful. On April 16 they started a great offensive which resulted in the dominating "Ladies' road" falling into their hands, besides important positions in Champagne. Their prisoners the first two days totalled 17,000. On May 6, along the Aisne, they took 6,100 captives and gained points from which they looked down on the foe, as the British did farther north.

It should be noted here, however, that the French losses were severe, resulting in the replacement of Nivelle as commander in chief by Petain.

The last twelvemonth in the Italian campaign has witnessed a series of costly reverses for the Austrians, but the Italians have been prevented from following up their successes by the very difficult terrain, the beaten Teutons falling back after each defeat to new mountain positions most difficult to attack.

Italians Take Gorizia. On August 8, 1916, the Italians stormed the stubbornly defended Gorizia bridgehead, on the Isonzo river, taking about 10,000 prisoners, and they followed this success the next day by seizing the city of Gorizia and increasing the number of their captives.

The Italians launched a new offensive the first days of November and on November 5 they announced that their prisoners since the fall of Gorizia totaled 40,805.

Winter then stifled operations until May 15, when the Italians returned to the attack in the Carso, aiming at Trieste. On May 19 the haul of Austrian prisoners was announced to be 6,432. The offensive was renewed May 25, 9,000 prisoners being taken the first day. On May 26 Italy stated she had taken 22,414 prisoners since May 14.

The last operations left the Italians in an unfavorable terrain and the Austrians counter-attacked successfully, inflicting important losses, but not driving back the invaders to any great extent. The Italians apparently settled down to organize the conquered soil in preparation for a new blow.

In the Balkans. In the Balkans the deadlock continues, but what changes there have been have favored the allies. At the west end of the lines the gallant Serbians last winter fought their way back on their own soil and with the help of other troops took Monastir. King Constantine of Greece gave up the forts of Kavala to the Bulgarians and the Germans took about 20,000 Greek soldiers to Silesia as "guests." For this and other acts favoring the Germans he lost his throne. Greece is now building up a new army of 400,000 men, which will probably soon be fighting for the cause of democracy under the leadership of the great patriot, Venizelos.

The Italians have increased their forces in Albania and built excellent communications through the mountains, forming a junction with Sarraill's left and securing this end of the Balkan line.

When the marshes froze there was a sharp Russian offensive last winter near Riga. Otherwise, the coast front lay dormant for many months, and during the revolution "fraternizing" was rife between the opposing armies. Then the Russians, having put their house in order, set out to show the kaiser that free men can fight better than slaves.

The sectors selected for attack lay between the Pinsk marshes and the Carpathians, the same as last summer. Successes were scored at several points, the prisoners by July 11 numbering 42,000. The greatest advance was near Stanislaus, from which city Korniloff's men advanced across a series of rivers, capturing Hailcz and Kalucz and sabering and bayoneting the beaten Austrians.

Russian Drive Pleases. The unexpected "come back" overjoyed the allies and filled the Russians at home with martial enthusiasm.

The Turks suffered severe defeats in the course of the year at several points. The British splendidly retrieved their reputation in Mesopotamia by recapturing Kut-el-Amara. On March 11 they took Bagdad. They continued several scores of miles further on and also formed a junction with the Russians northeast of Bagdad.

Farther north the Russians held on to their more important gains—the great cities of Erzerum and Trebizond, but abandoned Mush, Armenia, and a large city but thinly settled region to the foe.

Near Jerusalem. Moving out from the Suez canal the British inflicted a severe defeat on the Turks near Romani and then fought their way into Palestine, building a new railroad as they went. A further slight advance would bring them before Jerusalem. The Turks apparently are preparing to abandon the Holy City. They have also removed the Jews from the seaport of Jaffa, treating them so cruelly that hundreds have died.

In Germany's sole remaining colony, East Africa, converging columns of British, Portuguese and French are closing in on the remnants of the retreating army and the kaiser's overseas dominations seem near eclipse.

All military observers expect the war will continue through the next winter and the new campaigns are awaited with special interest because American troops will have a chance to show their mettle on the west front.

SOLDIER'S BRIDE SENT BACK

Her Effort to Masquerade as a Man to Be With Hubby Didn't Succeed.

An Atlantic Port.—Somewhere in France is a sergeant in the American army who married just before he left the United States and took his bride with him on the transport. She went as a soldier, dressed in regulation khaki and with her hair cut short.

The other day the young woman returned from France, her effort to pose as a "Sammie" having failed. Her husband, it was said aboard the steamship, was in a regiment formerly stationed in Arizona.

The vessel also brought back the body of a soldier who died on the trip over.

Dog's Rescue Effort Fails. Westfield, Mass.—Joseph Wrogowsky, seven years old, was drowned in the Westfield river at Red Hook after his collie, Fluff, twice tried to bring the boy to shore. Joseph and his nine-year-old brother, William, were playing on the bank. Joseph slipped into the river. The dog plunged in, got the lad's collar in a firm grip and tried desperately to paddle ashore. The boy dragged the dog under until Fluff was forced to come up for air. Fluff filled his lungs, then dived and came up with his master, but was dragged under again until he had to let go.

Arthur Bazata came at the older brother's screams, dived in and brought the body of Joseph to shore.

Fluff, who had kept diving desperately, refused to come ashore until Bazata came up with his master's form and brought it to land.

Recoater Acquires "Jag." A farmer at Athol, Mass., declares that his prize recoater having partaken too freely of some preserved cherries thrown out of a kitchen window, was so drunk that he was taken for dead and stripped of his feathers. He recovered from his "jag," however. But when he returned to the poultry yard, minus his feathers, his hens would not recognize him, and refused to allow him to share their coop.

HEARTY BREAKFAST IS O. K.

French Medical Professor Urges Europeans to Follow Example of Americans.

Bordeaux, France.—The American breakfast of ham and eggs, liver and bacon, beefsteak or other meat, vegetables and porridge, as a substitute for the meager European morning meal, is recommended for France by Doctor Bergonie, professor of the Bordeaux medical faculty.

Doctor Bergonie regards this substitution as one of the reforms most likely to relieve the economic situation, by providing rational nourishment and avoiding a great deal of waste.

He bases his argument on the fact that man requires sustenance most at the beginning of the day when he is about to make his effort, whereas in Europe he takes his principal meal when his day's work is half through, when he is half tired out and is incapable of so digesting his meal as to give him proper support for the rest of the day's work.

Felt Invented by a Saint. Did you know that felt was invented—accidentally by a saint—Saint Clement, fourth bishop of Rome? When he was fleeing from persecution, his feet became blistered from walking so he put a layer of wool in his sandals. The heat, moisture and pressure converted the wool into a flat, compact mass—felt. The bishop, being of an observant and practical turn of mind, had this material manufactured.

Don't Poison Baby.

Forty years ago almost every mother thought her child must have PAREGORIC or laudanum to make it sleep. These drugs will produce sleep, and a FEW DROPS TOO MANY will produce the SLEEP FROM WHICH THERE IS NO WAKING. Many are the children who have been killed or whose health has been ruined for life by paregoric, laudanum and morphine, each of which is a narcotic product of opium. Druggists are prohibited from selling either of the narcotics named to children at all, or to anybody without labelling them "poison." The definition of "narcotic" is: "A medicine which relieves pain and produces sleep, but which in poisonous doses produces stupor, coma, convulsions and death." The taste and smell of medicines containing opium are disguised, and sold under the names of "Drops," "Cordials," "Soothing Syrups," etc. You should not permit any medicine to be given to your children without you or your physician know of what it is composed. CASORIA DOES NOT CONTAIN NARCOTICS, if it bears the signature of Chas. Canadian Farmers Profit From Wheat

The war's devastation of European crops has caused an unusual demand for grain from the American Continent. The people of the world must be fed and wheat near $2 a bushel offers great profits to the farmer. Canada's invitation is therefore especially attractive. She wants settlers to make money and happy, prosperous homes for themselves by helping her raise immense wheat crops.

You can get a Homestead of 160 acres FREE and other lands at remarkably low prices. During many years Canadian wheat acreage has averaged 20 times the acreage of the United States. The soil is rich and the climate is ideal. Wonderful crops also of Oats, Barley and Flax.

Finest farming as profitable an industry as grain raising. The successful grower fills of millions are the only food product for food on every continent. Good schools, churches, and social organizations.

There is an extra demand for farm labor to replace the many young men who have volunteered for the war. The Government is willing to pay extra wages for the labor of the farmer and his family. For more information, write to Dept. of Immigration, Ottawa, Canada.

Panama Lions.

The lion of the Panama jungle is of two kinds—black and tawny. Full grown, he stands thirty inches high. His breast is broad, like that of a bull dog; his legs are long; his head is square, but entire. He grows like a lion, but ends with a barb. He has never been known to attack man, but the natives of the jungle fear him. He would be a dangerous adversary at close quarters.

Birds Trained to Fish.

As hawks were trained to hunt, a peculiar species of bird was trained to fish. The bird found to be most adaptable for the purpose was the cormorant an oceanic bird, similar to the pelican and feeding almost exclusively on fish. It is intermediate in size between a duck and a goose, and some of the thirty species inhabiting the world have beautiful plumage which was a sheen of green, blue and purple.

Our Man About Town

Buyers of Carrizozo business houses are hard to find just now, for they are in the East making their fall purchases of the latest and most up-to-date goods for their patrons. You will seldom, if ever, find a town the size of Carrizozo that can boast of business men who make these regular trips for season goods in order to have the latest and best out for their trade.

About Deep Breathing.

Many people act on the principle that because deep breathing causes dizziness it does not agree with them. But if they will practice the breathing less vigorously they will find that gradually they can take all the deep breaths they want without the slightest discomfort. Take ten breaths in ten seconds and gradually decrease the number of inhalations.

Growing Dates.

Dates are imported to the United States from the warm countries of southern Europe and Africa, but if the efforts of western experimenters are as fruitful of results as the trees grown have been full of fruit, it may be expected that this country will before long grow all its own dates, according to a writer in the Scientific American.

Nature's Great Hoodoo Temple.

In the Hoodoo basin of western Wyoming are curious formations which resemble Punch and Judy heads, savages, simpering old maids, monkeys, rabbits, birds and animals. There are fifty different shapes of heads, the Popular Science Monthly, and over forty different animal and human faces have been counted. The rock out of which the hoodoos have been carved by Dame Nature is what is known as volcanic breccia.
