Condition of Crops in New Mexico Mend

New Mexico Bean Crop Promises Heavy Yield; Feed Crop and Winter Wheat Excellent.

Crop conditions have improved wonderfully. A tour over the Santa Fe lines in northwest Texas and New Mexico the last few days shows a remarkable change since the last of June. The bean crop in New Mexico promises a heavy yield and the acreage is unusually large. At several points the crop is so extensively planted that elevators are being built to handle the crop.

The feed crops promise well especially on the plains in eastern New Mexico and northwest Texas. In places milo is heading and short season kaffir is ready to head. Indian corn is already making in many localities.

Winter wheat will be grown generally over New Mexico and the acreage in Texas and on the plains of New Mexico will be much greater than ever before.

The county agents are taking a very keen interest in wheat growing and are urging the farmers to prepare the land well and use only pure seed. In many places tractors are being bought for use in preparing land for wheat.

The livestock growers are hopeful of plenty of grass for winter pasture. During the early summer the stockmen were compelled to feed to escape serious loss. At the present time the whole country is covered with a mat of green grass.

The feeders of cattle and lambs for market are taking heart and are now figuring on filling their feed lots to find the best market for the forage that is now coming on.

T. F. Wright Answers Call to the Colors

Tuesday, T. F. Wright, the Assistant Cashier of the First National Bank, Carrizozo, tendered his resignation to the management of the bank and departed on Four for Liberal, Kansas where he will enter the Signal Corps of the United States Army as a volunteer. During his residence in Carrizozo Mr. Wright made many friends. He was quiet and unassuming but a very efficient bank man.

By reason of his being off most of the present month, he was able to work but a little more than a week. The bank, however paid him his full salary for the month of August and under the circumstances allowed him to leave on but one day's notice. As yet the position has not been filled. The Jones line of banks has now lost seven men to Uncle Sam.

LABOR DAY PROCLAMATION

BY MAYOR OF CARRIZOZO

The first Monday in September of each year, is by the statutes of the State of New Mexico, is designated as Labor Day, and a legal holiday.

This day has been set apart out of respect and in honor of the dignity and sanctity of labor. Let us also on that day, vitally realize that our country—this year especially—has set for itself a supreme labor. A labor honestly and nobly performed is just as patriotic and just as essential to the perpetuation of the principles of this government in its fight for democracy as the soldier who has been called by his country to fight its battles.

Now, therefore, I, Henry Lutz, Mayor of the village of Carrizozo, in accordance with law and custom, do proclaim Monday, September 3rd Labor Day.

I therefore earnestly recommend that the people gather at their accustomed places of meeting and render homage to honest toil, in such manner as may seem fitting and in recognition of the occasion.

I also urge that all places of business remain closed on that day.

Attest:
M. B. PADEN, Clerk

HENRY LUTZ,
Mayor.

State College Expert to Tell of Institution

Dean of Engineering School Undertakes to Interview Prospective Students Personally.

Confident that personal interviews with prospective students will be much more satisfactory than correspondence, Dean R. F. Barnes, of the engineering school of the New Mexico College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts is now on a tour of New Mexico, visiting the principle cities and towns, telling the boys of the state of the demand for technically trained men, and explaining the opportunities for engineering education at this institution. Mr. Barnes visited Silver City and Deming during the early part of last week and was in Santa Fe the latter part of the week. In all sections of the state Mr. Barnes finds that the young men are turning toward the engineering field, because of the demand for engineers, and are much more inclined to take engineering courses at the N. M. A. C., than was the case several years ago, when the impression seemed to be general that it was necessary to go east to obtain a first class technical training.

"We are conveying to the boys of New Mexico the idea that the New Mexico College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts is a real college," said Mr. Barnes recently, "and as a result we expect to have a splendid freshman class of engineers on September 26, the opening day, despite the large numbers of boys who have gone to war."

Club Dance

The club dance on Thursday evening was a successful social affair. The promoter of the entertainment was Mr. F. F. Mudge whose name at the head of any functional affair means success without argument.

Mr. Geo. Ferguson furnished the music. Refreshments were served, and all present experienced an evening of enjoyment until the hands of time reminded the management of the usual custom of dismissing the merry-makers.

Dr. T. H. Williams, dentist, will be in Carrizozo Tuesday, September 4th, for ten days only. a31-2t

Ben Snell will soon depart for Tularosa to accept a position with the West Electric Company of that place.

Hiram Johnson Jr., of California, son of Senator Johnson, claimed exemption on account of a dependant family. Mrs. Johnson's father has volunteered to take care of the family, so Mr. Johnson will take his place in the new national army.

N. M. Song Bird to Sing for Blind Soldiers

Miss Elizabeth Garrett, New Mexico's sweet singer, who is a cousin of Mrs. Wm. Reilly of Carrizozo, will soon leave for the east where she will continue her studies in voice culture.

It is the intention of Miss Garrett to render aid in every way possible to the blind soldiers. She will sing for them at every opportunity, and in this manner endeavor to lighten the burdens of those who have sacrificed their sight in their country's cause.

Those who have heard Miss Garrett sing have been truly fortunate, for not only is she the possessor of a sweet voice, but is a lady of charming personality and a composer of notes. In times like these, when our country is calling for services of both men and women, when the spirit of patriotism is displayed on every hand, Miss Garrett, out of the goodness of her heart comes forward with a noble and glorious purpose—that of healing the broken hearted, and giving comfort to those who sit in darkness.

In this undertaking Miss Garrett has enlisted in a cause that is immortal, and those unfortunates who will be favored by her sweet singing will rise up and call her blessed.

"On the job" is the motto of the National League for Women's Service. Everywhere earnest women are proving the application of the motto.

A Philadelphia professor says, "You must think if you would live well into the autumn of life. That may be true in Philadelphia, but out here, if you would reach even maturity, it is necessary not only to think, but to stop, look and listen at every street crossing.

2nd IOWA REGIMENT ENROUTE FOR DEMING

The second regiment of the Iowa National Guard passed through Carrizozo Thursday morning. The first and second detachments passed through at an early hour in the morning, and the third at about nine o'clock.

About two thousand men were in the three detachments, which compose the regiment. The last to pass through numbered about six hundred.

The boys of the last detachment were allowed one hour here for rest and exercise. They were formed in line and marched about the streets for about a half hour, consuming the balance of the time allotted to their stop over in taking rest and refreshments. The boys in this section of the regiment were from Boone, Marshalltown, Sheldon, LaMar, and other towns in that locality of Iowa.

They were in fine physical condition, and expressed themselves as being well pleased with the good treatment they received during their short stay.

Red Cross Calender

Monday—General Red Cross and Civic League. Mrs. Hightower, chairman.

Tuesday—The Guild. Miss Eaton, chairman.

Wednesday—Woman's Home Mission. Mrs. Geo. Barber, chairman.

Thursday—Baptist Missionary Union. Chairman not appointed.

The ladies of the town are urged to help in this work. The Judge's chamber at the court house has been secured for a work room, and sewing is done each afternoon of the above days.

Bad Villain Uses Shovel on Antagonist

On Tuesday of this week two women named Soliz and Hernandez engaged in a quarrel which resulted in the Soliz woman entering a complaint against Mrs. Hernandez and she was fined in the Justice of the Peace Court the same day.

This termination of the women's tangle fired the blood of Hernandez who claims to be a recent follower of Villa of Old Mexico.

Hernandez, after paying his wife's fine went back to work at the round house where he was employed and finished the day. But on returning home carried with him a heavy shovel.

He met Soliz shortly after crossing the railroad track and attacked him with the shovel. Soliz had nothing to defend himself and was at the mercy of the bandit, who rained heavy blows on the head of Soliz, knocking him down and breaking his arm in several places besides cutting severe gashes about his head and face.

The police were notified but Hernandez had made his escape and the last heard of him was that he was making for the nearest mountains.

Dr. Lucas was called and dressed the wounds of Soliz. He lost considerable blood in the encounter and had it not been for the timely interference of friends the bad man would have carried out his murderous intention.

Hernandez has a bad reputation and other neighboring towns will do well to keep on the lookout for him.

Mrs. J. B. French spent the week end as the guest of Dr. and Mrs. McKeon at Ft. Stanton.

DAVE LAW STRIKES A TRAIL THAT LEADS HIM TO DEATH'S DOOR—HE SUFFERS HEAVY LOSS BUT DOESN'T TURN BACK

Mrs. Alaire Austin, handsome young mistress of Las Palmas ranch, lost in the Texas desert, wanders into the little camp of David Law, state ranger, lying in ambush for a Mexican murderer. She is forced to stay 24 hours, until Law captures his man, kills another and escorts her home. "Young Ed" Austin, drunken wastrel, berates his wife and makes insulting insinuations about the ranger. Austin is secretly in league with Mexican rebels and horse thieves. Mrs. Austin starts for her other ranch, La Feria, in Mexican territory, to secure damages for cattle taken by Mexican soldiers, and encounters Gen. Luis Longorio, who becomes instantly enamored of her beauty and personality, much to her embarrassment.

Law ventured to remark that none of Blaze's enemies had grown fat in prosecuting their feuds, but this was a subject which the elder man invariably found embarrassing, and now he said:

"Pshaw! I never was the blood-letter people think. I'm as gentle as a sheep." Then to escape further curiosity on that point, he suggested that they round out their riotous evening with a game of pool.

The next morning at breakfast Paloma announced, "Father, you must help Dave hunt down these cattle thieves."

"Ain't that sort of a big order?" Blaze queried.

"Perhaps, but you're the very man to do it. Ricardo Guzman is the only person who knows the Lewis gang as well as you do."

Jones shook his head doubtfully. "Don Ricardo has been working up his own private feud with that outfit. If I was the kind that went looking for a fight, I wouldn't have paid freight on myself from the Panhandle down here. I could have got one fight at home, any morning before breakfast."

"Ricardo Guzman is something of a black sheep himself," Law spoke up. "Pshaw! He's all right. I reckon he has changed a few brands in his time, but so has everybody else. Why, that's how 'Old Ed' Austin got his start. If a cowman tells you he never stole anything, he's either a good liar or a bad roper. But Ricardo's going straight enough now."

"He has lost his share of stock," Paloma explained, "and he'll work with you if father asks him. You go along with Dave."

"I'm too busy," Blaze demurred, "and I ain't feeling good. I had had dreams all night."

"I don't want you around me here this morning. That new dreamer is coming."

Jones rose abruptly from the table. "I reckon my business can wait. Hustle up, Dave." A few moments later, as they were saddling their horses, he lamented: "What did I tell you? Here I go, on the dodge from a dreamer. I s'pose I've got to live like a road-agent now, till something happens."

Don Ricardo Guzman was an American, but he spoke no English. An accident of birth had made him a citizen of the United States—his father having owned a ranch which lay north instead of south of the Rio Grande. Inasmuch as the property had fallen to Ricardo, his sons, too, were Yankee in the eyes of the law. But in all other respects Don Ricardo and his family differed not at all from the many Guzmans who lived across the border. The Guzman ranch comprised a goodly number of acres, and, since live stock multiplied rapidly, its owner had in some sort prospered. On the bank of a ranca—a former bed of the Rio Grande—stood the house, an adobe structure, square, white and unprotected from the sun by shrub or tree. Behind it were some brush corrals and a few scattered mud jacals, in which lived the help.

Ricardo had just risen from a stool when his two visitors rode up, and he made them welcome with the best he had. In the cool of the afternoon Ricardo rode with his visitors, and then, cordial relations being now established, he began to divulge information of value to Law.

Yes, he had endured many depredations from thieves. It was shameful, but doubtless God willed that a certain amount of stealing should go on in the world. The evidence was certainly favored by nature, in this locality, for the great expanse of brush country to the north and east offered almost perfect security, and the river, to the south, gave immunity from pursuit or prosecution. The heaves were driven north into the wilderness, but the horses went to Mexico, where the war had created a market for them. The federals had plenty of money to buy mounts.

Whom did Don Ricardo suspect? The old man was noncommittal. Suspicion was one thing, proof was quite another; and conviction was difficult under the best of circumstances. Why, even a cow's recognition of her own calf was not evidence for a court, and alibis were easily proved. Unless the thieves were caught in the very act there was no case against them, and—por Dios!—one could not be forever on guard. Who could tell where the malefactors would strike next? Now, in Mexico one could afford to kill an undesirable neighbor without so much formality. But, thank God! Don Ricardo was not a Mexican. No, he was a good American citizen. It was something to make him sleep well in these war times.

"Just the same, I'll bet he'd sleep better if the Lewis outfit was pleased up," Dave ventured, and Blaze agreed. Guzman caught his enemy's name, and nodded.

"Ah! That sin verguenza! He sells arms to the Candelistas and horses to the Potosistas. Perhaps he steals my calves. Who knows?" "Senor Lewis doesn't need to steal. He has money," Jones argued.

"True! But who is so rich that he would not be richer? Lewis employs men who are poor, and he himself is above nothing. I, too, am a friend of the rebels. Panchito, the Liberator, was a saint, and I give money to the patriots who fight for his memory. But I do not aid the tyrant Potosi with my other hand. Yes, and who is richer, for instance, than Senor Eduardo Austin?"

"You surely don't accuse him of double-dealing with the rebels?" Blaze inquired curiously.

"I don't know. He is a friend of Tad Lewis, and there are strange stories afloat."

Just what these stories were, however, Ricardo would not say, feeling, perhaps that he had already said too much. The three men spent that evening together, and in the morning Blaze rode home, leaving the Ranger behind for the time being as Guzman's guest.

Dave put in the next two days riding the pastures, familiarizing himself with the country, and talking with the few men he met. About all he discovered, however, was the fact that the Guzman range not only adjoined some of Lewis' leased land, but also was bounded for several miles by the Las Palmas fence.

It was pleasant to spend the days among the shy brush-cattle, with Beasie Belle for company. The mare seemed to enjoy the excursions as much as her owner. Her eyes and ears were ever alert; she tossed her head and snorted when a deer broke cover or a jackrabbit scuttled out of her path; she showed a friendly interest in the awkward calves which stood and eyed her with such amazement and then galloped stiffly off with tails high arched. Law had many times undertaken to break Beasie Belle of that habit of flinging her head high at sudden sounds, but she was nervous and inquisitive, and this was the one thing upon which she maintained a feminine obstinacy.

On the second evening the Ranger rode home through a drizzle that had materialized after a long threatening afternoon and now promised to become a real rain. Ricardo met him at the door to say:

"Yes, bring good fortune with you, senor, for the land is thirsty. Tomorrow, if this rain holds, we shall ride together—you, Pedro and I. Those thieves do their stealing when they leave no tracks."

The sky was leaden, the rain still fell in the morning when Dave and his two companions set out. Until afternoon they rode, their slickers dripping, swaying to the tireless trot of their steaming horses, their eyes engaged in a watchful scrutiny. At last Pedro, who was ahead, reined in and pointed; the others saw where the barbed-wire strands of the fence they had been following were clipped. A number of horse and calf tracks led through the opening, and after an examination Ricardo announced:

"There are two men. They have come and gone, with the calves tied neck and neck."

"That is Las Palmas, isn't it?" Law indicated the pasture into which the trail led.

Father and son answered, "Si, senor."

For a time the Ranger lounged sideways in his saddle, studying the country before him. Perhaps a half-mile away a long, narrow patch of woods, with the tops of occasional oaks showing, ran parallel with the fence for a considerable distance.

"They took them in yonder, to brand," he said, straightening himself. "Maybe we'll be in time."

Side by side the three men rode off Guzman's land, following the tracks to the nearest point of woods; there Law stopped to give his directions.

"Pedro, you ride down this side; Ricardo, you skirt the outside. I shall keep to the middle. Walk your horses, for I shall go slowly." With a dubious shake of the head Ricardo rode away, while Dave guided Beasie Belle into the grove.

CHAPTER VII.

A Ranger's Horse.

Onward through the dense foliage the two friends wound. Now and then they stopped to listen, but the rain was heavy enough to drown all other noises. Encountering fresh tracks finally, Dave leaped from his saddle and studied them. He had gone perhaps half a mile when Beasie Belle raised her head, and he noted that her nostrils were working sensitively. Law fancied that he could detect the smell of a wood fire. Farther along they came to a place where the brush was low, and there, rising through the treetops beyond, he saw a wavering plume of blue smoke.

The Ranger rode into sight of the branding fire with his repeater across his saddle horn and his thumb upon the hammer; what followed came with almost the blinding suddenness of a lightning crash. First there was the picture of a sandy glade, in the center of which burned a fire with branding irons in it, and a spotted calf tied to a tree, but otherwise no sign of life. Then, without warning, Beasie Belle threw up her head in that characteristic trick of hers, and simultaneously Dave saw a figure rise out of the grass at his left with a rifle leveled. With the first jerk of his horse's head his own gun had leaped to his shoulder—he was not conscious of having willed it to do so—and even as he pressed the trigger he felt Beasie Belle give way. The next instant his feet, still in the stirrups, were on the ground and his horse lay between them, motionless. That nervous fling of her head had saved Dave's life, for the rustler's bullet had shattered her skull in its flight, and she lay prone, with scarcely a muscular twitch, so sudden had been her end.

For a moment the Ranger was dazed. He stood staring down at his pet; then the truth engulfed him. He realized that he had ridden her to her death; and at the thought he became like a woman bereft of her child, like a lover who had seen his sweetheart slain.

A shout—it was a hoarse, inarticulate cry; a swift, maddened scrutiny that searched the sodden scene of the ambush; then he was down beside the mare, calling her name heartbrokenly, his arms around her neck, his face against her warm, wet, velvet hide.

Law knew that two men had entered the thicket, and therefore one still remained to be reckoned with, but he gave no thought to that. From the corner of his eye he could see a pair of bootsoles staring at him out of the grass, and they told him there was no need for investigation. Near the body he heard the calf stirring, but he let it struggle.

Beasie Belle's bright eyes were glaring; she did not hear her lover's voice. Don Ricardo and his son burst out of the brush from opposite directions almost at the same moment, to find the Ranger with his face buried in his horse's mane.

"Caramba! What is this?" The old man flung himself from the saddle and came running. "You are injured?"

Pedro, too, bent over the officer, his brown face pale with apprehension. "Mother of God!" breathed the latter. "It was a will thing to do, to ride alone—"

"I'm all right," Law said, rising stiffly, whereupon both Mexicans voiced their relief.

"The saints be praised!" "Si! What happened? There was a shot! Did you see nothing?" Law jerked his head in the direction of the fallen man at his back and Pedro uttered a loud cry.

"Look!" Father and son ran through the grass, then recoiled and broke into a jargon of oaths and exclamations.

"Right in the mouth! The fellow was in death before he realized it." "See! It is as we thought, Pedro; one of Lewis'! Tse! Tse! Tse! What a sight!"

"Who is he?" queried the officer. "Pino Garza, one of the worst!" chimed the two Guzmans.

Ricardo was dancing in his excitement. "I told you that Lewis knew something. The other one got past me, but I cannot shoot like—this."

It was difficult to secure a connected story from Ricardo, but he finally made it plain that at the first report the other thief had fled, exposing himself only long enough for the old man to take a quick shot in his direction. Ricardo had missed, and the miscreant was doubtless well away by this time. He had ridden a sorrel horse, that was all Ricardo could remember.

Law looked only briefly at the gruesome results of his marksmanship, then he turned back to the body of his beloved mare. Ricardo noticed at length that he was crying; as the Ranger knelt beside the dead thoroughbred, the old Mexican whispered to his son:

"Valgame Dios! This is a strange fellow. He weeps like a woman. He must have loved that horse as a man loves his wife. Who can understand these gringos?" After a time he approached cautiously and inquired: "What shall we do with this hombre, senor? Pedro has found his horse."

Law roused himself. With his own hands he gently removed Beasie Belle's saddle, bridle and blanket, then he gave his orders.

"I'll take your horse, Ricardo, and you take—that fellow's. Get a wagon and move him to Jonesville."

"And you?" "I'm going to follow that man on the sorrel!"

The dead man's saddle was left beside the body; then when the exchange of mounts had been effected, and all was ready, Law made a request that amazed both father and son.

"If I'm not back by morning, I want you to bury my mare." His voice broke; he turned away his face. "Bury her deep, Ricardo, so—the coyotes can't dig her up; right where she fell. I'll be back to see that it's done right. Understand?"

"Bueno! I understand perfectly. She was a pretty horse. She was your—bonita, eh? Well, you have a big heart, senor, as a brave man should have. Everything shall be done as you wish; I give you my hand on it." Ricardo reached down and gripped Law's palm. "We will name our pasture for her, too, because it is plain you loved her dearly. So, then, until tomorrow."

Law watched his two friends ride away, then, with a miserable ache in his throat, he mounted and rode off to pick up the trail of the man on the sorrel pony.

The fellow had ridden in the direction of Las Palmas, which Dave judged must be fully twelve miles away, and when they continued to maintain this course the Ranger became doubly interested. He risked his own interpretation of the rider's intent and pushed on without pausing to search out the trail step by step. At the second gate the signs indicated that his man was little more than an hour ahead of him.

The prospect of again seeing the ruddy-haired mistress of Las Palmas stirred Law more deeply than he cared to admit. Nevertheless, he was uncomfortably aware that she had a husband. Not only so, but the sharp contrast in their positions was disagreeable to contemplate; she was unbelievably rich, and a person of influence in the state, while he had nothing except his health, his saddle and his horse—No; no horse now, she was gone.

Dave Law digs up startling evidence and Mrs. Austin finds her position at La Feria dangerous. Some important developments are described in the next installment.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

The Reason.

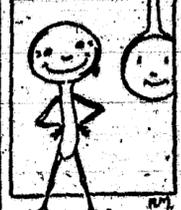

"Why do they always use the expression of eating votes?" "Because it is a throw-down for somebody."

DADDY'S EVENING FAIRY TALE BY MARY GRAHAM BONNER

IN THE KITCHEN.

"One evening," commenced Daddy, "when the house was quiet and still, and everyone was sleeping soundly, the tins and pans began to talk in the kitchen."

"I was used for soup today," said a gray tin, and I really should be used for vegetables."

"How absurd," said the frying pan. "Now, I am used for all sorts of things, potatoes, eggs, meat, oh—almost anything and everything. Still I don't object. I think it is rather a fine idea, myself. I like to be thought so much of and to be appreciated so well. It makes me feel better."

"I think I am to be congratulated more than any of you," said the egg beater.

"And why?" asked all the pans as they creaked a little.

"Because," said the egg beater, "the reason is so simple. You can see for yourselves." And it turned around a little.

"Do tell us. We don't see," said the frying pan.

"Very well," said the egg beater. "I will. In the first place—think of my name."

"All the tins and pans thought, but they came to no decision as to why the egg beater's name should make them understand why it was so fine."

"We give it up," they all said. "You will have to tell us."

"Very well," said the egg beater. "I will tell you. You see my name means that I beat eggs. But not only do I beat eggs, I beat cream and all other things they wish to whip into a fine fluffy state."

"True enough," agreed the other pans and tins.

"But you see," said the egg beater, "the wonderful part is that I am not cross. Imagine being used only as a beater. Imagine forever whipping everything that comes near you. Isn't that enough to make an egg beater cross? But am I cross?"

"And all the pots and pans creaked and said, 'No.'"

"Then," said the egg beater. "It only goes to show that my disposition is quite perfect. Even whipping and beating everything that comes my way, doesn't make me cross."

"You have a fine disposition," they all agreed. "And you don't let yourself be ruled by what you have to do. You might be cross and horrid and always blame it on the fact that you must whip everything. Yes, you have to be congratulated!"

"The egg beater felt very happy, but the cheese grater was speaking up.

"Listen to me," said the cheese grater. "Think of what my name means!"

"What?" asked the others.

"It means I am greater than anything else. No other pot or tin or pan is named by my name."

"Oh," chuckled the gray spoon, "a big, good-natured, easy-going spoon, you don't understand at all!"

"What don't I understand?" asked the cheese grater.

"You see I help the gravy at the table and I hear the grown-ups and children talk. They say that greater means something finer, bigger, stronger, more noble than something that is merely great. Now greatest means the best of all."

"Well, there may be something a little better than I am, but nothing much."

"Ah," said the gray spoon, "you are still wrong. You see that the way they spell your name is quite different from the way they spell the word that means great."

"And what difference does that make?" asked the cheese grater, who was feeling sad.

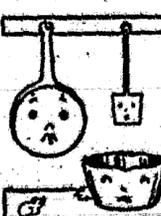

"All the difference in the world," said the gray spoon. "How absurd," spoon. It means . . . Said the Frying something quite Pan.

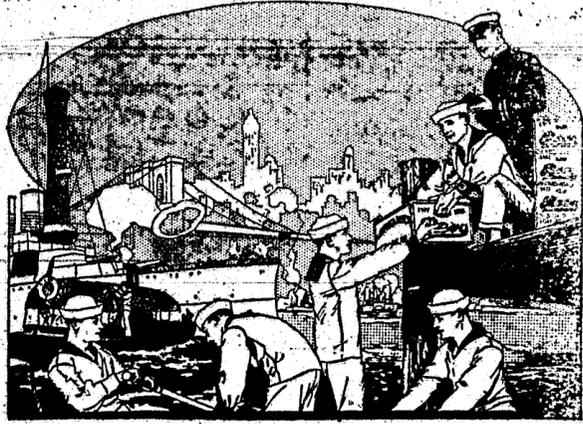

"The very idea of making such a mistake," said the cheese grater sadly.

"Never mind," said the egg beater. "I have a really bad name and I live above it. I do the best I can and don't complain. You must do the same."

"I will," said the cheese grater. "But I am so disappointed."

"And the rest of the talk between the tins, pots and pans was not upon their names and the meanings of them."

Coal Operators Gather at Washington to Take Up Question of Prices

Washington, August 27.—Coal operators from many parts of the country came to Washington today to take up with government officials the prices just fixed for their product. Cost figures prepared by the operators will be presented to the federal trade commission on whose cost of production statistics President Wilson based his prices for coal. Officials admit that the prices set will drive many operators out of business, but say that while individuals will suffer, the public generally will benefit. Both bunker and export coal, it was stated today, are to be included in the new scale of prices. Bona fides contracts for this coal, however, as for domestic coal, will not be disturbed. Frank S. Peabody, chairman of the coal committee of the council of national defence, declared today that operators generally felt the government prices were fair and that any inequalities would be corrected. The services of the coal committee, he said, would be put at the disposal of Mr. Garfield.

The labor situation continues to give officials some concern. Miners throughout the country are asking wage increases which in most instances, it is said, will be refused now that the price of coal has been reduced. The government, some officials believe, may have to intercede even to the extent of working out with all interests concerned a general wage scale.

Bridge Luncheon

Mrs. F. H. McKeon gave an elaborate Bridge Luncheon Saturday to honor her guest, Mrs. Carrington, whose husband was formerly Commanding officer at Fort Stanton.

The guests invited to meet Mrs. Carrington were members of the Carrizozo Bridge Club, ladies of the Fort, and others.

At one o'clock the hostess led the way to the dining room where a scene of dazzling beauty occasioned delight. Lighted by shaded electric lights from overhead; Egyptian Brass candelabra holding lighted candles on either side of the mantle; tables glistening in cut glass, silver and fine china; flowers breathing a sweet welcome all accentuated in a burst of acclamation the gift of a wonderful hostess.

Course after course served automatically by well trained attendants to the end of a "perfect repast." Mrs. McKeon then passed the Score Cards and the afternoon games began.

Mrs. Hal Fairbanks won highest score, Mrs. Len Crawford second prize. Mrs. Carrington was awarded a guest prize. The ladies present were: Mesdames Carrington, McDonald George Ulrick, Lewis, Leon, A. Ziegler, Wetmore, Titsworth, Laws, Penfield, Norton, Crawford, Lucas, French, Osborn, Anna Osborn, Fairbanks, Misses Rice, Tulley, Acker, Berry, Monroe and Weber.

BAPTIST CHURCH

(Rev. J. M. Gardner, Pastor.)

Brother Alexander, of Wayland College gave a splendid address Sunday at 11 a. m. and Brother Haywood, our former pastor, addressed a good sized audience in the evening. Mrs. Haywood's old friends enjoyed hearing her sing again. We are glad to see the new interests in our church work, and our Sunday School is the largest in its history. There has been a continual growth all summer in place of the usual decline, of summer months. The pastor will preach next Sunday, September 2nd, at 11 a. m. on "Baptist and Holiness." Mo or Minute Men Items

Captain J. B. Baird of the Motor Minute Men went to Corona country Monday to look after the interests of the Cattlemen's Association. Captain Baird says he has eighteen automobiles from Carrizozo enlisted for emergency service in the Council of Defense, and forty-three in all of a necessary one hundred for Lincoln county. He says it is more than worthy of mention that Carrizozo has enlisted almost one half as many machines as the county of Lincoln in general outside of our borders.

All who wish to enlist their autos for service will notify Captain Baird as early as possible so as to enable him to make his complete report.

New Mexico Taxpayers Will Be Interested

Former Governor Hagerman's Address of Much Value to People of This Section of Country

In an address at the annual meeting of the Taxpayers' Association, former Governor H. J. Hagerman, president of the association, pointed out that the per capita cost of state government in New Mexico had increased from $3.09 in 1913 to $5.20 in 1917, exclusive of the $750,000 war emergency appropriation made at the special legislative session last May. The state appropriation this year, he announced, totaled $2,144,254, an increase of $1,000,902 over 1913, and the total indebtedness—state, county town and school district—was now $10,809,386 compared with $6,444,012 in 1913.

"It was the announced intention of this association," said the former New Mexico executive, and has been its endeavor from the beginning to encourage, in every way possible, the economical and efficient use of the taxpayers' money, and, with this in view, much time has been consumed in the study of state, county, municipal and school spending, and of the general administration of public funds.

It is notorious, President Hagerman declared, that a great deal of property escapes taxation, and the fact is calmly accepted by the average man, "Because, as a rule, he is not himself strictly complying with the law, believing, and often with reason, that if he does strictly comply with the law he cannot hold his own with his neighbor who does not do so." He cited that in 1915 omitted property valued at $16,330,484 was added to the assessment, and that in that year the railroads paid 31 percent of all the taxes, lands 29 percent, livestock 19 percent, and intangible property such as bonds, stocks, money, notes and credits, only 2 percent. As an example of omitted property, he stated that a total of 21,040,286 acres of land was still unaccounted for in the tax records.

J. V. Tully is the Lincoln county member of the new advisory council of the Taxpayers' Association.

He was selected, with the other council members, at the recent annual meeting of the association in Santa Fe, when former Governor Herbert J. Hagerman was re-elected president, and other state officers were elected.

Plans are being made for an early meeting of the advisory council in Albuquerque, to discuss general taxation matters and to map out association activities in the various counties of the state.

Roosevelt Dam at Peoria

Peoria, Ill.—A complete working model of the great Roosevelt Dam in Arizona will form a part of the Arizona state display at the Twelfth International Soil-Products Exposition, which is to be held at Peoria, Illinois, September 18-29, in conjunction with the Peoria Fair.

This is the model which was shown at the Panama Pacific Exposition in 1914, where it attracted considerable attention. Arrangements have been made for the proper installment of the model and it will be shown in operation, with water flowing over the floodgates.

The Roosevelt Dam is situated about seventy miles above Phoenix on the Salt River. It stores water for the irrigation of about 240,000 acres in the Salt River valley. The dam is 240 feet high and is second in amount of water stored, in the world: its capacity being next only to that of the recently completed Elephant Butte Dam in New Mexico.

Nogal News

The Misses Ayers of Carrizozo are visiting Mr. and Mrs. Bender this week.

Three auto loads of people visited Uncle Tom Henley's ranch Sunday and procured several dozens of green corn. They then repaired to the old picnic grounds under the walnut trees for a corn feast. The party was composed of C. Walker Hyde, Ed Harris, H. B. Hamilton and their families.

The recent rains have improved the corn on the Mesa, but L. R. Hust informs us that they came too late to save a large percent of the corn on his farm.

The post office is about to be moved to the adobe building built by Watson Church. The postmaster has bought this property as the post office in the old saloon building is about to fall down.

Mr. Boyd Zumwalt has bought Marion Hust's crop and will move it about the 29th.

The range in this locality is getting fine and stock of all kinds are in excellent condition.

Uncle Tom Henley has had excellent luck with his sweet corn. He has sold about two hundred dozens since the season opened.

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Moore have gone back to El Paso. Mrs. Moore is suffering from a severe case of asthma.

In every home where there is a baby, there should also be a bottle of McGEE'S BABY ELIXIR. It may be needed at any time to correct sour stomach, wind, colic, diarrhoea, or summer complaint. Mr. C. D. Mayer left August 20 for a short stay in Alamogordo. The Womens Club dance was a grand success. A very large crowd was in attendance.

The music was fine and everyone seemed to enjoy themselves very much. About midnight cake and coffee were served, after which dancing was resumed until about three o'clock in the morning.

The Club wish to express their thanks to Mr. Cleghorn for his assistance and the efficient way in which he managed the dance. We feel that we owe a great deal of the success of the dance to him.

The writer is glad to hear that little Donald Queen is able to be taken down stairs and will get around on crutches very soon. His improvement is rapid.

Red Cross Workers Can Not Use Army Titles In U. S.

H. P. Davidson, as chairman of the war council of the American Red Cross, authorizes the following.

The War Department has authorized certain military ranks and titles to be conferred upon officers and representatives of the Red Cross, when they have occasion to go into foreign theaters of war.

The plan has been adopted because under the abnormal conditions now prevailing in Europe, actual experience has shown this to be necessary.

These military ranks are in effect exceptional passports, giving Red Cross officers working in the theater of war unquestioned opportunity to move about freely and thus to perform their functions.

The War Department authorizes no officer or representative of the Red Cross to utilize any military rank or title in the United States. Such commissions, even in the theater of war, will carry no pay, and all rights, privileges, or military rank conferred on any Red Cross representative as such, will expire immediately upon his leaving either the theater of war or Red Cross service.

Nothing in this plan changes the character or status of the American Red Cross, its offices, or any of its members.

The American Red Cross is distinctly a noncombatant civilian organization. Its character as such will be jealously guarded as one of its greatest assets, and it is the policy of the Red Cross to discourage assumption by its representatives of any relationship or activity which does not harmonize absolutely with its distinctively civilian character.

Mr. Art Rolland and daughters Maggie and Helen, will return home on Saturday after a pleasant visit with friends and relatives in the East.

Tom McDonald was a business visitor in Carrizozo Wednesday. He reports that the range at Mocking Bird Gap is not in a flourishing condition.

STORE FRUIT JUICES

How to Prepare for the Future Comfort of the Family.

ALL FRUITS CAN BE UTILIZED

Grape Juice—Sirup Made From Windfall Apples and Apple Cider—Here is a Fine Flavoring Sirup.

(From the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Various fruit juices may be prepared in the home and bottled for future use. Practically any fruit may be used in the first recipe following.

Sterilized Fruit Juices.—The fruit juice may be pressed out of fruit by means of a cider press, special fruit press, or other improvised presses; then heated in an acid-proof kettle up to 110 degrees Fahrenheit. The fruit juice may then be poured into ordinary hot jars, hot bottles, or tin cans, and handled by the same directions as those for canning of fruit itself. If poured into miscellaneous bottles, it is suggested that the fruit juice be sterilized as follows:

Make a cotton stopper and press into the neck of the bottle and leave during the sterilization period. Set bottles in boiling hot water up to the neck of the bottle, sterilizing the fruit juice for 80 minutes at a simmering temperature (165 degrees Fahrenheit). Remove the product, press cork-in top over cotton stopper immediately. If the cork fits well, no paraffin need be used. If a poor cork, it may be necessary to dip the cork in melted solution of wax or paraffin. Fruit juices and apple cider when handled in this way will not "flatten in taste" and will keep fresh for future use.

Grape Juice by Two-Day Method.—For home use there are a large number of varieties of grapes which will make a pleasant and healthful drink. No matter what the kind of grape, however, only clean, sound fruit should be used and it should be well ripened, but not overripe. The grapes should first be crushed and pressed in an ordinary cider mill or by hand if no mill is available.

Red Juice.—For red juice, the crushed grapes are heated to about 200 degrees Fahrenheit before the juice is separated from the pulp and then strained through a clean cloth or drip bag without pressure. Thereafter, the process is the same as for light-colored juice.

Grape juice should be stored away in bottles or jars that are not too large, for after these have been opened the juice is likely to spoil. If properly made, however, the juice should keep indefinitely as long as it is kept in sealed bottles.

Sirup Made From Windfall Apples and Apple Cider.—Add five ounces of powdered calcium carbonate (obtained at any drug store) to seven gallons of apple cider. Powdered calcium carbonate (carbonate of lime) or, to give it its common name, precipitated chalk, is low-priced and harmless. Boil the mixture in a kettle or vat vigorously for five minutes. Pour the liquid into vessels, preferably glass jars or pitchers; allow to stand six or eight hours, or until perfectly clear. Pour the clear liquid into a preserving kettle. Do not allow sediment at bottom to enter. Add to the clear liquid one level teaspoonful of lime carbonate and stir thoroughly. The process is completed by boiling down rapidly to a clear liquid. Use density gauge or candy thermometer and bring the temperature up to 220 degrees Fahrenheit. If a thermometer is not available, boil until bulk is reduced to one-seventh of the original volume. To determine whether the sirup is cooked enough test as for candy—by pouring a little into cold water. If boiled enough it should have the consistency of maple sirup. It should not be cooked long enough to harden like candy when tested.

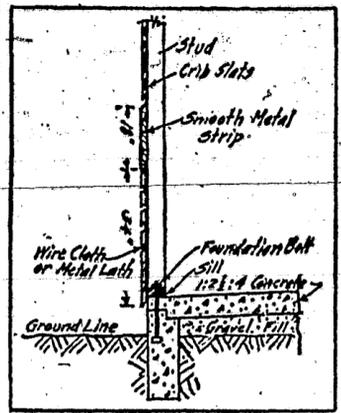

When the test shows that the sirup has been cooked enough, pour it into fruit jars, pitchers, etc., and allow it to cool slowly. Slow cooling is important, as otherwise the suspended matter will not settle properly and the sirup will be cloudy.

RAT-PROOF BUILDINGS

Plan Given for Construction of Crib and Granary.

Metal Strips Prevent Rodents From Climbing Higher Than Lath—Leave No Openings Around Doors Large Enough for Mice.

The accompanying sketch shows one method of construction for a rat-proof crib and granary which is to be separate and apart from other buildings. The wire cloth or metal lath should have no meshes wider than one-fourth to three-eighths inch. Either slats or boards may be nailed outside the lath. The metal strip prevents the rodents from climbing higher than the metal lath. Care must be taken to see that no openings are left around the doors large enough to admit mice, writes F. W. Ives in Ohio Farmer. If a one-story structure is desired, a building 18 feet square and 10 feet high to the plate will hold 500 bushels of ear corn and 500 bushels of small grain. A crib on one side of a 4-foot central alley will be 8 feet wide and 18 feet long, while on the other side of the alley the grain bin would be 6 feet wide and 18 feet long. The grain bin might be subdivided into smaller bins.

The studs may be set in patent sockets in the concrete floor instead of spiked to a sill bolted to the foundation. The concrete floor should be five inches in thickness. A tile drain placed around the foundation will insure against dampness.

CALF AFTER SKIM MILK AGE

Animal Should Be Kept Gaining From Birth to Maturity—Give Heifers Some Grain.

The problem of caring for the dairy calf is by no means solved by the end of the milk-feeding period. The animal should be kept gaining constantly from birth to maturity if good growth is to be expected. Calves are frequently well cared for up to four or five months of age and then given little attention. If good growth is to be secured, heifers under a year of age require grain in addition to hay or pasture.

Since the condition of the heifer at pasture is not so closely observed as when in the stall, the heifer beyond the milk-feeding period is more likely to be neglected during the summer when on pasture than during the winter months.

FERTILIZER FOR GARDEN USE

Should Contain Three Chief Ingredients, Nitrogen, Phosphoric Acid and Potash.

For general garden crops a fertilizer should contain the three chief ingredients in the following per cents: Nitrogen, four; phosphoric acid, eight; and potash, ten. If for bulbs the potash content should be at least doubled.

PACK CANTALOUPE IN CRATE

Standard Is Placed at Forty-Five, Uniformly Graded as to Size and Also Quality.

The standard pack for cantaloupe is 45 in a crate, uniformly graded as to size and quality. It is believed there is a profitable field for the "flat crate," holding one layer of nine to 15 melons. This makes a package which the retailer can sell unbroken to the consumer.

CANVAS COVER FOR ALFALFA

With High Price of Hay and Frequent Showers Protection Affords Big Dividend.

This has been a year when the canvas covers for alfalfa have paid a dividend, with the high price of hay and the frequent showers. Stack covers will pay as well, as no one can afford to have any loss in quality of his hay.

SPREAD BEAN RUST ON VINES

Wisconsin Plant Disease Specialist of Wisconsin College Gives Some Timely Advice.

"Farmers who understand conditions in the spread of bean rust or anthracnose, as it is termed, never cultivate or walk through the field while the vines are wet with rain or dew."

This is the information given by R. E. Vaughan, plant disease specialist at the College of Agriculture, University of Wisconsin. When the bean plants are dry there is less danger of brushing off the tiny spores which spread the disease.

The bean anthracnose, in common with one or two other spot diseases of garden beans, is most successfully controlled by careful selection of healthy seed. Owing to the greatly increased acreage of beans in Wisconsin this year it is highly important that growers become familiar with conditions which affect the crop. Spraying is of little value in controlling the disease under field conditions.

KEEPING HOME GARDEN BUSY

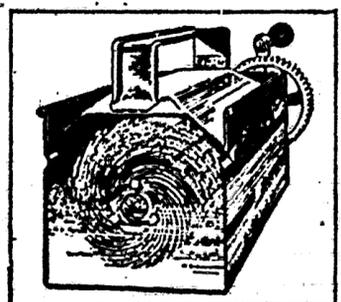

By Using Intensive Methods and Successive Planting Maxim Amount of Food Secured.

As soon as one crop has been harvested in the garden the ground should be prepared and another one planted. The early crops are removed in time for late ones and by practicing successive planting a supply of fresh vegetables can be had all summer and into the late fall. Sweet corn, string beans, beets, turnips, tomatoes, squash, pumpkins, late cabbage, cucumbers, winter onions, fall lettuce, radishes, spinach, are some of the crops that can be planted after the early things are out of the way. Sometimes it is practicable to start corn or beans between the radish and lettuce rows and by time the latter crops are used up the former will have made a good start. By following intensive methods and successive planting the garden can be kept busy all season and be made to produce the maximum amount of food material.

quickly find the bowl is clean. It is much simpler and easier than the old hand and rag or brush method and is a boon when you are all tired out and face the prospect of having to clean out the separator or risk disease by letting it go dirty until tomorrow.—Farming Business.

Be Progressive.

It is not becoming in the farmer to cut his grass with a mower instead of a scythe and let his wife pump water when a windmill or a gasoline engine would do it for her.

The Horse's Feet.

The feet should be cleaned out after each day's work is done. Don't let the feet become too dry. Road horses, especially, should be watched carefully in this respect.

Sunlight Kills Germs.

No openings in your cow stables to admit sunlight? This is a great mistake. Sunlight is death to many forms of germ life.

Dispose of Surplus.

Toms and turkey hens, geese and ducks, not absolutely needed for next year's breeding should be disposed of.

Keep Children Away.

Do not let children go near geese with broods of goslings, for the geese, fearing injury to their goslings, may attack and seriously hurt the children.

There is no profit in rearing undersized or weak chicks, and such should be disposed of early.

Broilers and fryers generally bring double the price per pound of roasting chickens in October.

STORE THE POTATO

ARRANGEMENTS FOR CONSERVING THE COUNTRY'S SUPPLY.

Government Officials Tell of the Facilities That Have Been Provided—Complete Plan of Action Has Been Mapped Out.

Washington.—Means of conserving the nation's potato supply in the most effective manner have been worked out by food-administration officials. They have issued the following statement:

Unusual facilities for financing storage are offered American potato growers as a result of war conditions. The federal reserve system is at their disposal, and farmers who store their 1917 potato crop in approved local warehouses, may obtain, upon their storage receipts, 90-day loans from member banks of the reserve system at a rate not to exceed 6 per cent. Mr. Lou D. Sweet, potato expert with the food administration, was instrumental in bringing this matter to the reserve board's attention.

New England growers have started a movement to take advantage of this ruling to help them solve their marketing problem. The prospect which the growers of this group of states face is that of handling 45,000,000 bushels of potatoes—one-tenth of the entire United States crop—without causing an overstocked market and the resulting loss of all profit on the crop.

The growers communicated with local authorities in their respective states, who in turn laid the situation before the food administration. A conference between the growers, local authorities and experts from the food administration was held recently at Boston, Mass. A plan of action was mapped out at this meeting which includes the following:

1. Marketing of only one-third of the crop at harvest time; another third in 90 days, or placing in storage and later distributed as demand affords opportunity; the remaining third to be stored by the grower and marketed throughout the year.

2. All potatoes to be graded with care, taking out culls, cracks and any that are bruised. It was recommended that a wire screen grader be used—one and seven-eighths-inch mesh for oblong tubers and two-inch mesh for round ones. Graded stock then to be placed in good two-bushel sacks—one hundred and fifteen pounds to the sack—and the sacks sewed tightly so as to prevent shucking and bruising.

3. Increasing the load in each railroad car from the normal 30,000 pounds. That these cars can be unloaded within 24 to 36 hours of their arrival at destination.

4. That municipalities and other bodies provide storage for as large quantities as possible at the peak of the harvest.

"A storage house," said Lou D. Sweet, who attended this meeting, "such as will conform to the requirements laid down by the Federal Reserve board, does not call for a specially constructed house. There are innumerable buildings, which, if properly cleaned, ventilation provided, and managed so as to maintain a temperature of about 35 degrees, will answer admirably for this purpose.

"This year the United States planted its potato crop from the poorest quality of seed that ever went into the ground, and naturally the harvest will be potatoes of poor quality. Strict grading, careful packing, common-sense storage, and careful shipping are necessary to insure just returns to the growers who have responded to the president's call for increased production of potatoes."

SHE HAD WAYWARD DAUGHTER

Neighbor Was Surprised When She Found Cause of Severe Rebuks Administered by Mother.

A lady living in a large apartment house relates the following:

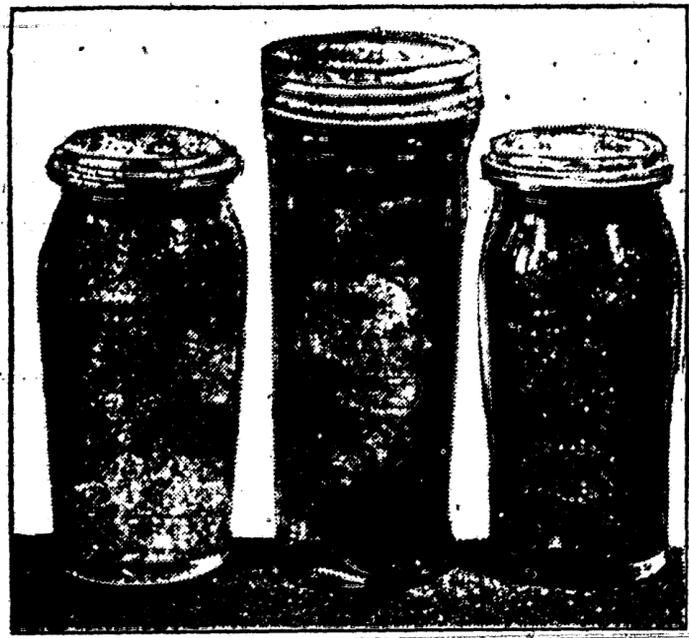

"I had occasion one day to visit the apartment of a neighbor. Such grave and earnest tones of remonstrance reached my ears, as I approached my friend's room, that I hesitated about intruding. I found her winsome young daughter with her, and the mother had evidently been rebuking her, for the girl's face was flushed, and there were tears in her eyes.

"Come in," said my friend. "I have finished what I was saying to Jenny, and I hope she will remember my wishes."

"Ah, these children—these children!" thought I to myself. "I have just been telling her," continued my friend, "that she must not wear her evening gloves when she goes shopping in the morning. In the first place, it is not genteel; and in the second place, it is extravagant."

Her evening gloves! And yet, I assure you, her tone and expression, and the impression made on the child, would have justified a serious wrongdoing—one that had issues in time and eternity.

JAMS, FRUIT BUTTERS, MARMALADES, ETC.

A Luscious Trio—Yellow Tomato, Kumquat and Strawberry Preserves.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Jams are made of small fruits which are not whole or firm enough to use for preserves. No attempt is made to retain the original shape of the fruit, the finished product having a uniform consistency. Marmalades have a more jellylike texture and thin slices of the fruit appear suspended throughout the mixture. In fruit butters and pastes frequently less sugar is used than in jams and the product is more concentrated. Conserves may be made of large or small fruits, cooked in the same manner as jams. Sometimes nuts are added.

In stirring jams use a wooden spoon or paddle, moving it across the center of the vessel first one way and then the opposite, and next around the pan, gently moving the mixture from the bottom of the pan, being careful not to stir rapidly or beat. Cook the jam to 105 degrees Centigrade or 221 degrees Fahrenheit, if a thermometer is used.

If a cooking or chemical thermometer is available more accurate results can be obtained by its use. The proper condition of the cooked fruit can be determined approximately, however, without the use of such instruments. For determining when they are finished most jams may be given the same test as finished jelly; that is, when a little is held a moment and cooled in a spoon, it will not pour from the side of the spoon, but will fall in a sheet or flake. This is not true of jams made of peaches, cherries, strawberries, and other fruits not containing pectin, the jelling principle. When using such fruits, cook until the jam is of the desired consistency.

Well-glazed hermetically sealed stoneware jars with capacity of eight ounces and up, are suitable and attractive containers for packing jams, marmalades, etc. Large-necked bottles, glasses, etc., also may be used and sealed with cork, paraffin, etc.

Jams and marmalades may be packed hot in sterilized jars, glasses or large-necked bottles, and sealed immediately. When packing for market, however, it is far safer to process them both to insure sterilization and a tight seal. Process pints for 30 minutes at simmering (87 degrees Centigrade or 188 degrees Fahrenheit).

Peach Jam.—Two and one-quarter pounds peaches cut into small pieces, one pound sugar, six whole allspice, one cracked peach seed, one inch ginger root, one-half cupful peach juice, one-half teaspoonful whole cloves, one teaspoonful cinnamon bark, one sprig mace. (The spices in cheesecloth bag.) Cook all together until thick as marmalade and clear or until of the consistency desired (to 105 degrees Centigrade or 221 degrees Fahrenheit). Pack hot in hot jars and seal at once or process.

Pear and Quince Preserves.—For pear and quince preserves, use the same proportion of sugar and fruit. Cut the fruit into half-circle slices. Cook the fruit until almost tender in boiling water, drain, add the sirup, and proceed as for peach preserves.

STORE FRUIT JUICES

How to Prepare for the Future Comfort of the Family.

ALL FRUITS CAN BE UTILIZED

Grape Juice—Sirup Made From Windfall Apples and Apple Cider—Here is a Fine Flavoring Sirup.

(From the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Various fruit juices may be prepared in the home and bottled for future use. Practically any fruit may be used in the first recipe following.

Sterilized Fruit Juices.—The fruit juice may be pressed out of fruit by means of a cider press, special fruit press, or other improvised presses; then heated in an acid-proof kettle up to 110 degrees Fahrenheit. The fruit juice may then be poured into ordinary hot jars, hot bottles, or tin cans, and handled by the same directions as those for canning of fruit itself. If poured into miscellaneous bottles, it is suggested that the fruit juice be sterilized as follows:

Make a cotton stopper and press into the neck of the bottle and leave during the sterilization period. Set bottles in boiling hot water up to the neck of the bottle, sterilizing the fruit juice for 80 minutes at a simmering temperature (165 degrees Fahrenheit). Remove the product, press cork in top over cotton stopper immediately. If the cork fits well, no paraffin need be used. If a poor cork, it may be necessary to dip the cork in melted solution of wax or paraffin. Fruit juices and apple cider when handled in this way will not "flatten in taste" and will keep fresh for future use.

Grape Juice by Two-Day Method.—For home use there are a large number of varieties of grapes which will make a pleasant and healthful drink. No matter what the kind of grape, however, only clean, sound fruit should be used and it should be well ripened, but not overripe. The grapes should first be crushed and pressed in an ordinary cider mill or by hand if no mill is available.

Red Juice.—For red juice, the crushed grapes are heated to about 200 degrees Fahrenheit before the juice is separated from the pulp and then strained through a clean cloth or drip bag without pressure. Thereafter, the process is the same as for light-colored juice.

Grape juice should be stored away in bottles or jars that are not too large, for after these have been opened the juice is likely to spoil. If properly made, however, the juice should keep indefinitely as long as it is kept in sealed bottles.

Sirup Made From Windfall Apples and Apple Cider.—Add five ounces of powdered calcium carbonate (obtained at any drug store) to seven gallons of apple cider. Powdered calcium carbonate (carbonate of lime) or, to give it its common name, precipitated chalk, is low-priced and harmless. Boil the mixture in a kettle or vat vigorously for five minutes. Pour the liquid into vessels, preferably glass jars or pitchers; allow to stand six or eight hours, or until perfectly clear. Pour the clear liquid into a preserving kettle. Do not allow sediment at bottom to enter. Add to the clear liquid one level teaspoonful of lime carbonate and stir thoroughly. The process is completed by boiling down rapidly to a clear liquid. Use density gauge or candy thermometer and bring the temperature up to 220 degrees Fahrenheit. If a thermometer is not available, boil until bulk is reduced to one-seventh of the original volume. To determine whether the sirup is cooked enough test as for candy—by pouring a little into cold water. If boiled enough it should have the consistency of maple sirup. It should not be cooked long enough to harden like candy when tested.

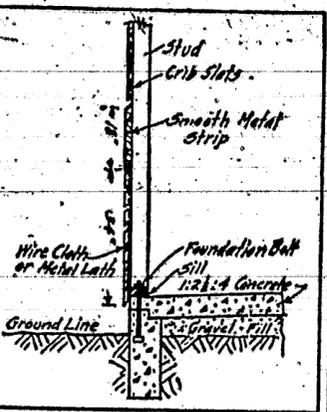

When the test shows that the sirup has been cooked enough, pour it into fruit jars, pitchers, etc., and allow it to cool slowly. Slow cooling is important, as otherwise the suspended matter will not settle properly and the sirup will be cloudy.

RAT-PROOF BUILDINGS

Plan Given for Construction of Crib and Granary.

Metal Strips Prevent Rodents From Climbing Higher Than Lath—Leave No Openings Around Doors Large Enough for Mice.

The accompanying sketch shows one method of construction for a rat-proof crib and granary which is to be separate and apart from other buildings. The wire cloth or metal lath should have no meshes wider than one-fourth to three-eighths inch. Either slats or boards may be nailed outside the lath. The metal strip prevents the rodents from climbing higher than the metal lath. Care must be taken to see that no openings are left around the doors large enough to admit mice, writes F. W. Ives in Ohio Farmer. If a one-story structure is desired, a building 18 feet square and 10 feet high to the plate will hold 500 bushels of ear corn and 500 bushels of small grain. A crib on one side of a 4-foot central alley will be 8 feet wide and 18 feet long, while on the other side of the alley the grain bin would be 6 feet wide and 18 feet long. The grain bin might be subdivided into smaller bins.

Rodent-Proof Granary.

The studs may be set in patent sockets in the concrete floor instead of spiked to a sill bolted to the foundation. The concrete floor should be five inches in thickness. A tile drain placed around the foundation will insure against dampness.

CALF AFTER SKIM MILK AGE

Animal Should Be Kept Gaining From Birth to Maturity—Give Heifers Some Grain.

The problem of caring for the dairy calf is by no means solved by the end of the milk-feeding period. The animal should be kept gaining constantly from birth to maturity if good growth is to be expected. Calves are frequently well cared for up to four or five months of age and then given little attention. If good growth is to be secured, heifers under a year of age require grain in addition to hay or pasture.

Since the condition of the heifer at pasture is not so closely observed as when in the stall, the heifer beyond the milk-feeding period is more likely to be neglected during the summer when on pasture than during the winter months.

FERTILIZER FOR GARDEN USE

Should Contain Three Chief Ingredients, Nitrogen, Phosphoric Acid and Potash.

For general garden crops a fertilizer should contain the three chief ingredients in the following per cents: Nitrogen, four; phosphoric acid, eight; and potash, ten. If for bulbs the potash content should be at least doubled.

PACK CANTALOUPE IN CRATE

Standard Is Placed at Forty-Five, Uniformly Graded as to Size and Also Quality.

The standard pack for cantaloupe is 45 in a crate, uniformly graded as to size and quality. It is believed there is a profitable field for the "flat crate," holding one layer of nine to 15 melons. This makes a package which the retailer can sell unbroken to the consumer.

Wisconsin Plant Disease Specialist of Wisconsin College Gives Some Timely Advice.

The early crops are removed in time for late ones and by practicing successive planting a supply of fresh vegetables can be had all summer and into the late fall. Sweet corn, string beans, beets, turnips, tomatoes, squash, pumpkins, late cabbage, cucumbers, winter onions, fall lettuce, radishes, spinach, are some of the crops that can be planted after the early things are out of the way. Sometimes it is practicable to start corn or beans between the radish and lettuce rows and by time the latter crops are used up the former will have made a good start. By following intensive methods and successive planting the garden can be kept busy all season and be made to produce the maximum amount of food material.

STORE THE POTATO

ARRANGEMENTS FOR CONSERVING THE COUNTRY'S SUPPLY.

Government Officials Tell of the Facilities That Have Been Provided—Complete Plan of Action—Has Been Mapped Out.

Washington.—Means of conserving the nation's potato supply in the most effective manner have been worked out by food administration officials. They have issued the following statement:

Unusual facilities for financing storage are offered American potato growers as a result of war conditions. The federal reserve system is at their disposal, and farmers who store their 1917 potato crop in approved local warehouses, may obtain, upon their storage receipts, 90-day loans from member banks of the reserve system at a rate not to exceed 6 per cent. Mr. Lou D. Sweet, potato expert with the food administration, was instrumental in bringing this matter to the reserve board's attention.

New England growers have started a movement to take advantage of this ruling to help them solve their marketing problem. The prospect which the growers of this group of states face is that of handling 45,000,000 bushels of potatoes—one-tenth of the entire United States crop—without causing an overstocked market and the resulting loss of all profit on the crop.

The growers communicated with local authorities in their respective states, who in turn laid the situation before the food administration. A conference between the growers, local authorities and experts from the food administration was held recently at Boston, Mass. A plan of action was mapped out at this meeting which includes the following:

1. Marketing of only one-third of the crop at harvest time; another third in 90 days, or placing in storage and later distributed as demand affords opportunity; the remaining third to be stored by the grower and marketed throughout the year.

2. All potatoes to be graded with care, taking out culls, cuts, cracks and any that are bruised. It was recommended that a wire screen grader be used—one and seven-eighths-inch mesh for oblong tubers and two-inch mesh for round ones. Graded stock then to be placed in good two-bushel sacks—one hundred and fifteen pounds to the sack—and the sacks sewed tightly so as to prevent shucking and bruising.

3. Increasing the load in each railroad car from the normal 30,000 pounds. That these cars can be unloaded within 24 to 36 hours of their arrival at destination.

4. That municipalities and other bodies provide storage for as large quantities as possible at the peak of the harvest.

"A storage house," said Lou D. Sweet, who attended this meeting, "such as will conform to the requirements laid down by the Federal Reserve board, does not call for a specially constructed house. There are innumerable buildings, which, if properly cleaned, ventilation provided, and managed so as to maintain a temperature of about 85 degrees, will answer admirably for this purpose."

"This year the United States planted its potato crop from the poorest quality of seed that ever went into the ground, and naturally the harvest will be potatoes of poor quality. Strict grading, careful packing, common-sense storage, and careful shipping are necessary to insure just returns to the growers who have responded to the president's call for increased production of potatoes."

SHE HAD WAYWARD DAUGHTER

Neighbor Was Surprised When She Found Cause of Severe Rebuke Administered by Mother.

A lady living in a large apartment house relates the following:

"I had occasion one day to visit the apartment of a neighbor. Such grave and earnest tones of remonstrance reached my ears, as I approached my friend's room, that I hesitated about intruding. I found her winsome young daughter with her, and the mother had evidently been rebuking her, for the girl's face was flushed, and there were tears in her eyes.

"Come in," said my friend. "I have finished what I was saying to Jenny, and I hope she will remember my wishes."

"Ah, these children—these children!" thought I to myself.

"I have just been telling her," continued my friend, "that she must not wear her evening gloves when she goes shopping in the morning. In the first place, it is not genteel; and in the second place, it is extravagant."

Her evening gloves! And yet, I assure you, her tone and expression, and the impression made on the child, would have belittled a serious wrongdoing—one that had issues in time and eternity.

JAMS, FRUIT BUTTERS, MARMALADES, ETC.

A Luscious Trio—Yellow Tomato, Kumquat and Strawberry Preserves.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Jams are made of small fruits which are not whole or firm enough to use for preserves. No attempt is made to retain the original shape of the fruit, the finished product having a uniform consistency. Marmalades have a more jellylike texture and thin slices of the fruit appear suspended throughout the mixture. In fruit butters and pastes frequently less sugar is used than in jams and the product is more concentrated. Conserves may be made of large or small fruits, cooked in the same manner as jams. Sometimes nuts are added.

In stirring jams use a wooden spoon or paddle, moving it across the center of the vessel first one way and then the opposite, and next around the pan, gently moving the mixture from the bottom of the pan, being careful not to stir rapidly or beat. Cook the jam to 105 degrees Centigrade or 221 degrees Fahrenheit, if a thermometer is used.

If a cooking or chemical thermometer is available more accurate results can be obtained by its use. The proper condition of the cooked fruit can be determined approximately, however, without the use of such instruments. For determining when they are finished most jams may be given the same test as finished jelly; that is, when a little is held a moment and cooled in a spoon, it will not pour from the side of the spoon, but will fall in a sheet or flake. This is not true of jams made of peaches, cherries, strawberries, and other fruits not containing pectin, the jelling principle. When using such fruits, cook until the jam is of the desired consistency.

Well-glazed hermetically sealed stoneware jars with capacity of eight ounces and up, are suitable and attractive containers for packing jams, marmalades, etc. Large-necked bottles, glasses, etc., also may be used and sealed with cork, paraffin, etc.

Jams and marmalades may be packed hot in sterilized jars, glasses or large-necked bottles, and sealed immediately. When packing for market, however, it is far safer to process them both to insure sterilization and a tight seal. Process pints for 30 minutes at simmering (87 degrees Centigrade or 188 degrees Fahrenheit).

Peach Jam.—Two and one-quarter pounds peaches cut into small pieces, one pound sugar, six whole allspice, one cracked peach seed, one inch ginger root, one-half cupful peach juice, one-half teaspoonful whole cloves, one teaspoonful cinnamon bark, one sprig mace. (The spices in cheesecloth bag.) Cook all together until thick as marmalade and clear or until of the consistency desired (to 105 degrees Centigrade or 221 degrees Fahrenheit). Pack hot in hot jars and seal at once or process.

Pear and Quince Preserves.—For pear and quince preserves, use the same proportion of sugar and fruit. Cut the fruit into half-circle slices. Cook the fruit until almost tender in boiling water, drain, add the sirup, and process as for peach preserves.
