Exclusive Films of New Mexico to Be Shown

Santa Fe, N. M.—C. W. Hutton of Chicago, one of the foremost out-door motion picture photographers in the United States, left Santa Fe this week with his equipment for a trip through Santa Fe, Taos, Colfax, Mora, and other counties during which he will make several thousand feet of film showing the mountain scenery, roads and points of interest to tourists in New Mexico. These will be the first group of a series of motion picture films with which the Publicity Bureau of the State Land Office will show much of the best of New Mexico's scenery and tourist attractions, as well as the developed and undeveloped resources of the state to the patrons of thousands of the better class of motion picture theatres throughout the United States. The films will be shown first in New Mexico motion picture theatres as part of the Publicity Bureau's campaign to encourage New Mexico people to "See New Mexico First." The pictures will then be sent to motion picture exchanges and other distributing mediums for a long journey through the best motion picture theatres of the central and eastern states. It is estimated by men familiar with the exhibiting side of the motion picture industry that the series of New Mexico films will have been seen by ten million people when they have completed the journeys arranged for them.

The State Land Office closed a contract with Mr. Hutton for making the films and at the same time concluded arrangements for its distribution through the several states. The work will be supplemented by the Publicity Bureau with newspaper articles, display space and descriptive folders.

The first object sought by the motion picture campaign is to interest tourists in New Mexico and to bring them here both by rail and automobile, and to that end the photography will be done this fall and the distribution carried out during the winter and early spring months, so as to get as extensive results as possible for next summer's tourist season. A far more important ultimate result is sought, however, in the interest which it is expected the campaign will arouse in the land and other resources of New Mexico and in their development.

Owens Convalescent

Mr. Roy Owens, who on August 21st was the unfortunate victim of a trap gun carelessness, has so improved at the Lucas Hospital that he was able to be taken home this week.

Roy is a "good scout" and has exhibited much bravery during his illness. He was interviewed just before taking the train Tuesday, and wishes to thank all those who interested themselves in his welfare during his affliction. He left feeling fine and has regained his old composure and good nature.

Soldier Loses Dog

Paul R. Miller of Troop A., 1st Iowa Cavalry, who passed through Carrizozo with the 2nd Iowa Regiment a short time ago lost a valuable dog during his stop over here. Being a newspaper reporter, he knows how to use the most effective method of locating his pet.

Don't overlook his ad and help us find the dog.

On Verge of Doom Car and Occupants Go Over Precipice

On Wednesday morning, a car driven by Omar Oneil and containing Mrs. Oneil and baby, Mrs. Wm. Loughery and son, started for Nogal. On ascending Nogal Hill at what is generally considered the most dangerous portion of the mountain road, the car became unmanageable and began to back.

Mr. Oneil did everything in his power to prevent an accident but to no avail, for before the occupants could escape from their predicament the car rolled over the precipice, turned turtle, and lodged against a tree some fifty feet below. The women and children were thrown from the car when it struck the tree, but recovered from the shock without serious injuries.

Fortunately however, there is a landing, or a "bench," as it is sometimes called, which prevented the passengers from being precipitated to the bottom of the canyon, some three hundred feet below.

Mr. Oneil managed to get to a telephone and called Dr. R. T. Lucas, who found that Oneil had suffered more injury than anyone else. He was badly bruised.

He was taken to his home, where according to advices, he is resting easy. The women and children were brought back to Carrizozo, and aside from a severe nervous strain that would naturally result from an experience like the one described, they fared very well.

The party is to be congratulated on the fortunate outcome of their experience, for had it not been for the friendly tree and elevation, the entire party would have met with a horrible death at the bottom of Canyon.

Double Wedding

F. B. Russell and Fay Slack of Alto were united in marriage at the Baptist parsonage September 1st, by Rev. J. M. Gardner. Jess E. Jones and Alta Hubbard of Alto were united in marriage following the Russell-Slack marriage.

A Call

The Red Cross Society will meet Saturday afternoon at three o'clock, to devise ways and means of entertaining the boys who will leave for military service on the 21st. All interested are urged to attend.

A subscriber writes to know what he can do to aid the country. He can do much. Quit cursing the government, stop knocking the army, preach patriotism and optimism and go to work and keep working.—San Diego Union. The Union might have added: "Keep your subscription paid up."

National Forests Help to Increase Meat Supply in State

The National Forests of Arizona and New Mexico are carrying 70,000 more cattle and 48,000 more sheep than last year, according to statistics just compiled by the District Forester. The increase is said to be accounted for partly by the gradual improvement of the range and partly by the issuance of permits for additional stock as a war emergency measure. Three experts are spending the entire summer on the Southwestern Forests figuring out where and how additional stock can be temporarily accommodated without placing too great a strain on the range. The best way to make room for more stock, according to grazing experts of the Forest Service, is to bring about better distribution of stock already on the range. With this end in view, stockmen on the various Forests of the Southwest are planning to cooperate with the Forest Service in the construction of about 350 miles of drift fence during the present season. Drift fences from 20 to 70 miles long are proposed for the Coronation, Sitgreaves and Tusayan Forests in Arizona, and the Datil Forest in New Mexico. These fences are expected to prevent waste of range by preventing concentrating of range on limited areas while adjacent areas are left unutilized.

Figures received by the District Forester from Washington show that National Forests throughout the West are carrying 100,000 more cattle and 200,000 more sheep than in ordinary years. Ordinarily pasturage is furnished for a total of nearly ten million head of stock.

Almost Asphyxiated

Phillip Foster decided to clean the well on his property, opposite the court house, and after drawing the water out, sent a man down to take out the mud that had accumulated in the bottom. They had drawn up about three buckets of mud when Mr. Foster noticed that everything was silent in the well. He thought the man was resting, but after waiting a reasonable time he called out to him. After receiving no answer he became alarmed, and on investigating found the man to be unconscious. Mr. Foster without waiting for help to come and knowing that quick action alone would save the man's life, lowered a rope into the well and luckily fastened it around the body of the man. By this time assistance came and the unfortunate victim was drawn out of the well.

The well, which is an old one, was found to contain gas, and had it not been for the presence of mind on the part of Mr. Foster another death caused by gas would have been recorded.

Newspaper Man and Statesman Booms N. Mex.

Congressman Wm. B. Walton of New Mexico, who loves his state and speaks wisely of its future, is the subject of an extensive three column article in the New York Morning Telegraph, by its Washington correspondent, Madame Onedit.

In making mention of her interview with the congressman, she says:

He declared that it was impossible to live in the state of New Mexico any length of time, and not feel the inspiration of State and Civic pride.

He spoke of the advantages of his home state, and grew eloquent in its praise. He spoke of the climate, of its vast heights, magnificent distances and the limitless spaces. He spoke of his early days, when connected with the newspaper business as editor of the Headlight, at Deming.

Among other things the congressman said, as it is, New Mexico has only 10,000 more population to acquire to entitle her to two representatives. From this point of view it is a great opportunity for ten times 10,000 to come in and inherit the land, rich for stock raising and mineral production.

In speaking of the war, the congressman said that there are no "slackers" among "our boys," no riots or conspiracies occurred to defeat the movement when the selective draft law went into effect. No slackers skulked away to shirk the responsibility of citizenship. And when the first appeal was made, a golden stream poured out to bear the state's part in financing the greatest conflict in history.

In this remarkable interview, more good will be done to boost the Sunshine State, than one can imagine. Some congressman will warm chairs for years without giving out half as much boosting for their states as Wm. B. Walton has in one audience with the correspondent. But we must remember that Mr. Walton is a newspaper man, and it takes the journalist to advertise.

City "Dads" Meet

The city council met in regular session Monday evening. They also met in special session Wednesday evening, when they announced that the ordinance relating to widths of sidewalks had been changed from ten to eight feet on Alamogordo Ave.

Short talks were made by those present as to how bids should be called for, contracts let, etc.

The special session, although informal in its nature, was extremely interesting and instructive.

CHAPTER VIII.—Continued.

"So do I," Law declared quietly. "He treated me like a hobo—sent me to the kitchen for a hand-out. That sticks. If I hadn't tamed down considerably these late years, I'd have—wound him up, right there."

From beneath his drooping lids Ellsworth regarded the Ranger curiously. "You have a bad temper, haven't you?"

"Totten!"

"I know. You were a violent boy. I've often wondered how you were getting along. How do you feel when you're—that way?"

It was the younger man's turn to hesitate. "Well, I don't feel anything when I'm mad," he confessed. "I'm plumb crazy, I guess. But I feel plenty bad afterwards."

There was a flicker of the judge's eyelids.

Dave went on musingly: "I dare say it's inherited. They tell me my father was the same. He was—a killer."

"Yes. He was all of that."

Dave lifted an abstracted gaze from the Pullman carpet. "I hardly know what I am, Judge. But you've had hunches, haven't you? Didn't you ever know that something you thought was true wasn't true at all? Well, I never felt as if I had bad blood in me. My mother was Mexican—"

"Spanish?"

"All right. Am I Spanish? Have I any Spanish blood in me?"

"She didn't look Spanish. She was light-complexioned, for one thing. We both know plenty of people with a Latin tinge in them who look like Anglo-Saxons. You were educated in the North, and your boyhood was spent at school and college, away from everything Mexican."

"That probably accounts for it," Law agreed; then his face lit with a slow smile. "By the way, don't tell Mrs. Austin that I'm a sort of college person. She thinks I'm a red-neck, and she sends me books."

Ellsworth laughed silently. "Your talk is to blame, Dave. Has she sent you 'The Swiss Family Robinson'?"

"No. Mostly good, sad romances with an uplift—stories full of lances at rest, and Willie-boys in tin sweaters. The good women were always beautiful, too, and the villains never had a redeeming trait. It's a shame how human nature has got mixed up since then, isn't it?"

"Alaire Austin's romance is sadder than any of those novels."

Dave nodded. "But she doesn't cry about it." Then he asked gravely: "Why didn't she pick a real fellow who'd kneel and kiss the hem of her dress and make a man of himself?"

"What's the matter with you?" queried the judge. "Are you smitten with that girl?"

Dave laughed. "Maybe! Who wouldn't be? Why doesn't she divorce that bum—she could do it easy enough—and 'hen marry a chap who could run Las Palmas for her?"

"A man about six feet three or four," acidly suggested the judge.

"That's the picture I have in mind."

"You think you could run Las Palmas?"

"I wouldn't mind trying."

"You must never marry," firmly declared the older man. "You'd make a bad husband, Dave."

"She ought to know how to get along with a bad husband, by this time."

The judge's face broadened in a smile. "Thank heaven 'Young Ed' has the inside of a steel range, and so my pet client is safe from your mercenary schemes for some years."

CHAPTER IX.

Longorio Makes Bed.

At La Feria Alaire discovered that the federal deprivations had been even greater than she had feared. Not only had the soldiers taken a great many head of cattle, but they had practically cleared the ranch of horses, leaving scarcely enough with which to carry on the work.

Life in the roomy, fortresslike adobe house was pleasant enough. Alaire welcomed the change in her daily life. Everything about La Feria was refreshingly un-American, from the hope itself, with its bare walls and floor, its brightly flowering plants, and its primitive kitchen arrangements, to the black-skinned, hair-braided Indian women of that staid, stolid-looking race.

"I know. I know a great deal."

DAVE LAW ADMITS THAT HE IS SMITTEN WITH THE MISTRESS OF LAS PALMAS—MRS. AUSTIN HAS A STRANGE EXPERIENCE.

Synopsis.—Mrs. Alaire Austin, handsome young mistress of Las Palmas ranch, lost in the Texas desert, wanders into the little camp of David Law, state ranger, lying in ambush for a Mexican murderer. She is forced to stay for 24 hours, until Law captures his man, kills another and escorts her home. "Young Ed" Austin, drunken wastrel, be- rates his wife and makes insulting insinuations about the ranger. Austin is secretly in league with Mexican rebels and horse thieves. Mrs. Austin encounters Gen. Luis Longorio, Mexican federal, when she goes to La Feria, her ranch in Mexico, to collect war damages, and Longorio, a bad man, falls in love with her. Dave Law kills a cattle thief and suspects Ed Austin of criminal connections.

shadowed rampart were Mexican. La Feria was several miles from the railroad; therefore it could not have been more foreign had it lain in the very heart of Mexico rather than near the northern boundary.

In such surroundings, and in spite of faint misgivings, it was not strange that, after a few days, Alaire's unhappiness assumed a vaguely impersonal quality and that her life, for the moment, seemed not to be her own. Even the thought of her husband, Ed Austin, became indistinct and unreal. Then all too soon she realized that the purpose of her visit was accomplished, and that she had no excuse for remaining longer. She was now armed with sufficient facts to make a definite demand upon the federal government.

The homeward journey was a repetition of the journey out. Jose, as before, was newsgatherer. Hour after hour they crept toward the border, until at last they were again laid out on a siding for an indefinite wait.

The occasion for this was made plain when an engine drawing a single caboose appeared. Even before it had come to a pause, a tall figure in spotless uniform leaped to the ground and strode to the waiting coaches. It was Luis Longorio. He waved a signal to the conductor, then swung aboard the north-bound train.

The general was all smiles as he came down the aisle, and bowed low over Alaire's hand.

Dolores gasped and stiffened in her seat like a woman of stone.

"Heaven be praised! You are safe and well!" said the newcomer. "I have blamed myself for allowing you to take this abominable journey! I have been in torment lest something befall you. Every night I have prayed that you might be spared all harm. When I received word that you were coming, I made all speed to meet you."

"Dolores and I are greatly in your debt," Alaire told him.

"But you stayed so long!"

"There was more work than I thought. General, you have ruined me." Longorio was pained; his face became ineffably sad. "Please! I beg of you," he entreated. "I have arranged for reparation of that miserable mistake. I shall see that you receive justice. If the government will not pay, I will. All I possess would be too little to buy your happiness."

"You embarrass me. I'm afraid you don't realize what you say." Alaire remained cool under the man's protestations. "I have lost more than a thousand head of cattle."

"We shall say two, three thousand, and the government will pay," Longorio asserted brazenly. "I will vouch for your figures, and no one will question them for I am a man of honor."

"No! All I want—"

"It is done. Let us say no more about the affair. Senora, I have thought of you every hour; the duties that held me in Nuevo Pueblo were like irksome chains. I was in madness. I would have flown to La Feria, but—I could not."

"My husband will thank you for your great courtesy to me," Alaire managed to say.

But the mention of husbands was not agreeable to one of Longorio's sensitiveness, and his face betrayed a hint of impatience.

"Yes, yes," he agreed carelessly. "Senior Austin and I must know each other better and become friends."

"That is hardly possible at present. When the war is over—"

"Bah! This war is nothing. I go where I please. You would be surprised to greet me at Las Palmas some day soon, eh? When you tell your husband what a friend I am, he would be glad to see me, would he not?"

"Why—of course. But surely you wouldn't dare—"

"And why not? I have made inquiries, and they tell me Las Palmas is beautiful, heavenly, and that you are the one who transformed it. I believe them. You have the power to transform all things, even a man's heart and soul. No wonder you are called 'The Lone Star.' But wait—You will see how constantly I think of you."

Longorio drew from his pocket several photographs of the Austin ranchhouses. "Where did you get these?" Alaire asked in astonishment.

"Ah! My secret. See! They are badly worn already, for I keep them next to my bosom."

"It would scarcely be safe for you to call; the country is full of Castle-leristas—"

"Cattle!" said the officer, with a careless shrug. "Did not that great poet Byron swim across an ocean to see a lovely lady? Well, I, too, am a poet. I have beautiful fancies—songs of love run through my mind. Those Englishmen know nothing of passion: Your American men are cold. Only a Mexican can love. We have fire in our veins, senora."

To these perturbed protestations Dolores listened with growing fright; her eyes were wide, and they were fixed hypnotically upon the speaker; she presented much the appearance of a rabbit charmed by a serpent. But to Longorio she did not exist; she was a chattel, a servant, and therefore devoid of soul or intelligence, or use beyond that of serving her mistress.

Thinking to put an end to these blandishments, Alaire undertook to return the general's ring, with the pretense that she considered it no more than a talisman loaned her for the time being. But it was a task to make Longorio accept it. He was shocked, offended, hurt; he declared the ring to be of no value; it was no more than a trifling evidence of his esteem. But Alaire was firm.

It was an odd, unreal ride, through the blazing heat of the long afternoon. Longorio cast off all pretense and openly laid siege to the red-haired woman's heart—all without offering her the slightest chance to rebuff him, the slightest ground for open resentment, so respectful and guarded were his advances. When the train arrived at its destination, his victim was well-nigh exhausted from the struggle. After a good night's rest, however, she was able to smile at yesterday's adventure. Longorio did not bulk so large now; even these few hours had greatly diminished his importance, so that he appeared merely as an impulsive foreigner who had allowed a woman to turn his head.

Once back across the river she discovered that there were obstacles to a prompt adjustment of her claim. The red tape of her own government was as nothing to that of Mexico. There were a thousand formalities, a myriad of maddening details to be observed, and they called for the services of an advocate, a notary, a jefe politico, a jefe de armas—officials without end. All of these worthies were patient and polite, but they displayed a malarial indifference to delay, and responsibility seemed to rest nowhere. During the day Alaire became bewildered, almost lost in the mazes of official procedure, and was half minded to telegraph to Judge Ellsworth.

Longorio by no means shared her disappointment. On the contrary, he assured her they were making splendid progress, and he was delighted with her grasp of detail and her knowledge of business essentials. At his word all Nuevo Pueblo bowed and scraped to her; he arranged for her an elaborate luncheon in his quarters.

"You can never know what these two days have been for me," the general said as he and Alaire lingered over their meal. "They will afford me something to think about all my life. It is a delicious comfort to know that you trust me, that you do not dislike me. And you do not dislike me, eh?"

"Why, of course not. I have a great deal for which to thank you."

General Longorio fingered his wine-glass and stared into it. "I am not like other men. I am a man of iron—yes, an invincible soldier—yet I have a heart, and a woman could rule me."

"You say you have a heart," Alaire studied her vis-a-vis curiously as he met her eyes with his mournful gaze. "How is it that I hear such strange stories about you, general?"

"Lies, all of them!" Longorio asserted.

"For instance, they tell me that you shoot your prisoners?"

"Of course!" Then, at her shocked exclamation, he explained: "It is a necessity of war. Listen, senora! We have twelve million Indians in Mexico, and a few selfish men who incite them to revolt. To permit the lower classes to rise would result in chaos, black anarchy, indescribable outrages against life and property. There is but one way to pacify such people—exterminate them! Mexico is a civilized nation; there is no greater in the world; but she must be ruled with an iron hand. We shall drive all the traitors into the sea, and Mexico shall have peace. But I am not a bloodthirsty man. No, I am a poet and a lover at heart. As great a patriot as I am, I could be faithless to my country for one smile from the woman I adore."

Alaire did not color under the ardent glance that went with this declaration. She deliberately changed the subject.

"This morning while we were in the office of the jefe de armas," she said, "I saw a poor woman with a baby—she was scarcely more than a child herself—whose husband is in prison. Every day she comes to plead with the jefe de armas for her husband's life. But he will not see her, and the soldiers only laugh at her tears."

"A common story! These women and their babies are very annoying," observed the general.

"She says that her husband is to be shot."

"Very likely! Our prisons are full. Doubtless he is a bad man."

"Can't you do something?"

"Eh?" Longorio lifted his brows in the frankest inquiry.

"That poor girl with her little, bare, brown-eyed baby was pitiful." Alaire leaned forward with an earnest appeal in her face, and her host smiled.

"So? That is how it is, eh? What is her name?"

"Inez Garcia. The husband's name is Juan."

"Of course. These peñadores are all Juans. You would like to appear as an angel of mercy, eh? Your heart is touched?"

"Deeply."

"Bastante! There is no more to be said." Longorio rose and went into the next room, where were certain members of his staff. After a time he returned with a paper in his hand, and this he laid before Alaire. It was an order for the release of Juan Garcia.

"The salvo conducto which will permit Juan and his Inez and their Juanito to return to their farm is being made out," he explained. "Are you satisfied?"

Alaire looked up wonderingly. "I am deeply grateful. You overwhelm me. You are—a strange man."

"Dear lady, I live to serve you. Your wish is my law. How can I prove it further?"

The strained, throbbing silence that followed Longorio's last words did more to frighten the woman than did his most ardent advances. He would have lingered indefinitely over the table, but Alaire soon rose to go, explaining:

"I must finish my disagreeable task now, so that I can go home tomorrow."

"Tomorrow!" her host cried in dismay. "No, no! You must wait—"

"My husband is expecting me."

This statement was a blow; it seemed to crush Longorio, who could only look his keen distress.

As they stepped out into the street, in the gutter stood Inez Garcia with her baby in her arms, and beside her the ragged figure of a young man, evidently her Juan. The fellow was emaciated, his face was gaunt and worn and frightened, his feet were bare even of sandals, the huge peaked straw hat which he clutched over his breast was tattered, and yet in his eye there was a light.

They had waited patiently, these Garcias, heedful of Longorio's orders, and now they burst into a torrent of thanks. They flung themselves to their knees and kissed the edge of Alaire's dress. General Longorio enjoyed this scene tremendously, and his beaming eyes expressed the hope that Alaire was fully satisfied with the moment.

"They look very poor," said Alaire, and opened her purse; but Longorio would not permit her to give. Extracting a large roll of paper money from his own pocket, he tossed it, without counting, to Juan, and then when the outcokers applauded, he loudly called to one of his officers, saying:

"Oiga! Give these good friends of mine two horses, and see that they are well cared for. Now, Juan," he addressed the dazed countryman. "I have one order for you: Every night of your life you and your pretty wife must say a prayer for the safety and happiness of this beautiful lady who has induced me to spare you. Do you promise?"

"We promise!" eagerly cried the pair.

"Good! See that you keep your word. On the day that you forget for the first time Luis Longorio will come to see you. And then what! He scowled at them fiercely.

"We will not forget," the Garcias chorused.

The next installment covers further scouting and extremely distasteful advances on the part of General Longorio. Alaire begins to fear the Mexican.

School of Mines. "What are you boring there?" "A gold mine." "Bah! There's no gold around here." "This is a practical tunnel for our students in the mining course." "Does it look like a real mine?" "Very much so. Several people have been along who wanted to buy stock in it."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

BIG CROPS IN WESTERN CANADA

Good Yields of Wheat, Splendid Production of Pork, Beef, Mutton and Wool.

The latest reports give an assurance of good grain crops throughout most of Western Canada, where the wheat, oats and barley are now being harvested, about ten days earlier than last year. Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta are all "doing their bit" in a noble way towards furnishing food for the allies.

While the total yield of wheat will not be as heavy as in 1915, there are indications that it will be an average crop in most of the districts. A letter received at the St. Paul office of the Canadian Government, from a farmer near Delta, Alberta, says harvest in that district is one month earlier than last year. His wheat crop is estimated at 35 bushels per acre, while some of his neighbors will have more. The average in the district will be about 30 bushels per acre. Now, with the price of wheat in the neighborhood of $2 per bushel, it is safe to say that there will be very few farmers but will be able to bank from forty to fifty dollars per acre after paying all expenses of seeding, harvesting and threshing, as well as taxes. The price of land in this district is from $25 to $30 per acre. What may be said of this district will apply to almost any other in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. Many farmers have gone to Western Canada from the United States in the past three or four years, who having purchased lands, had the pleasure of completing the payments before they were due. They have made the money out of their crops during the past couple of years, and if they are as successful in the future as in the past they will have put themselves and their families beyond all possibility of lack of money for the rest of their lives. It is not only in wheat that the farmers of Western Canada are making money. Their hogs have brought them wealth, and hogs are easy to raise there—barley is plentiful and grass abundant, and the climate just the kind that hogs glory in. The price is good and likely to remain so for a long time.

A few days since a farmer from Daysland, Alberta, shipped a carload of hogs to the St. Paul market, and got a higher price than was ever before paid on that market. Two million three hundred and seventy-seven thousand two hundred and fifty dollars was received at Winnipeg for Western hogs during the first six months of this year. 181,575 hogs were sold at an average price of $15 per cwt., and had an average weight of 300 pounds each. The raising of hogs is a profitable and continually growing industry of Western Canada, and this class of stock is raised as economically here as anywhere on the North American continent. There is practically no hog disease, and immense quantities of food can be produced cheaply.

It has been told for years that the grasses of Western Canada supply to both beef and milk producers the nutritive properties that go to the development of both branches. The stories that are now being published by dairymen and beef cattle men verify all the predictions that have ever been made regarding the country's importance in the raising of both beef and dairy cattle. The sheep industry is developing rapidly. At a sale at Calgary 151,438 pounds of wool were disposed of at sixty cents a pound. At a sale at Edmonton 60,000 pounds were sold at even better prices than those paid at Calgary. The total clip this season will probably approximate two million pounds. Many reports are to hand showing from six to eight pounds per fleece. 35 carloads were sent to the Toronto market alone.—Advertisement.

What He Feared. During some building operations it was necessary for the workmen to walk across a single plank some distance from the ground. When it came Pat's turn the foreman noticed that he went across on all fours. So he went up to Pat and asked contemptuously: "What's the trouble, man? Are you afraid of walking on the plank?" "No, sir," replied Pat. "It's afraid of am av walking off it!"

A Mexican blew in Saturday night with a few bottles of tanglefoot which he disposed of at three dollars a bottle, thus turning an honest penny to help out expenses. The majesty of the law swooped down on him, however, and Judge Thornton fined him ten dollars for hilarious conduct and bound him over to next term of court for selling liquor without license.

Mr. Grafton of Rio Bonito has bought the machinery of the American Mine and moved it to Eagle Creek where he will begin to saw lumber for sale at once.

The coal prospect in the Carrizo Mountains seems to have fallen through altogether.

We hear that Mrs. Boone has sold her entire stock of cattle, and if so, the range will be greatly relieved. Her ranch is between Nogal and Capitan.

The Rev. Skinner who has been quite sick for some weeks has recovered and occupied the pulpit at the Methodist Church on last Sunday.

The recent rains in this vicinity have revived the range greatly.

The crop of Frejoli beans in this vicinity will certainly be immense, and if the prices keep up our farmers will reap a rich reward.

Operations on the celebrated Vera Cruz Mine have not materialized, to date. We hope to see the mine booming very soon.

UNITED STATES MUST PROTECT CHILDREN OF COUNTRY DURING THE WAR

By MISS JULIA C. LATHROP,
Chief of Children's Bureau, U. S. Department of Labor.

The war has placed a tremendous valuation upon American children, and America must cherish these children.

A nation, such as ours, which takes its men by law and puts them into the field of battle, must provide for the home folk. Men sent to Europe to win democracy for the world must not come home to find democracy smashed in their own households. Mothers and children must be cared for.

Surely we should learn from the mistakes of the belligerent nations, and take every precaution to keep our children normal and free to grow up to carry on the work of the world.

Thousands of children besides war orphans and refugees have been directly affected by the war, according to reports from belligerent countries which have come to the children's bureau. Juvenile delinquency has increased, more children have been necessary to protect the health of mothers and babies, and home life has been broken up by the increased employment of mothers. We in America cannot afford to ignore these lessons. Our own democracy—the democracy of the American home—must be protected.

In the fifty years since the Civil War legislation affecting the family and its economic status has shown marked growth. Mothers' pension laws, minimum wage laws, and workmen's compensation laws are recognized examples, and it is acknowledged that their result has not been to pauperize, but distinctly to improve the power of the family to protect itself. In view of this tendency it is to be expected that a system of compensation for soldiers and sailors can be developed whereby the government will make possible for their children the home life and parental care which are the need of every child.

the most brilliantly, are newcomers compared to the veterans already named. Baird of the Cardinals, Deal of the Cubs and McCarthy of the Pirates complete the list.

Larry Gardner and Jimmy Austin are the oldest third basemen in the American league, and both are in their ninth year. J. Franklin Baker, who was out of the big show one season, is serving his eighth year in the majors, and Oscar Vitt of the Tigers and Buck Weaver of the White Sox will have completed six years of major league service when the pennant race comes to a close this fall. Bates of the Macknans, Leonard of Washington and Evans of Cleveland are the "junior" third basemen in Ben Johnson's league.

With nine of the sixteen regulars in the two majors well seasoned from years of service, there is little or no chance for the newcomers to cop the title as "the most valuable third baseman in the big show," or in either league. Stock of the Phillies is a great ball player, but in Groh and Zimmerman he has two seasoned rivals for honors. In the American league, Frank Baker is making a strong bid this season to return to his own as the heaviest hitting third sacker in the game, and he is pressed for the honors by Larry Gardner and Buck Weaver, while the veteran Jimmy Austin has been giving Vitt his dust in the matter of hitting.

For Red Cross Service.

Jane A. Delano writing in the St. Nicholas of the field for service in the Red Cross nursing staff, states:

"I would not advise any girl to enter a training school until she is at least twenty years old, but younger girls in advanced schools or colleges can now be preparing themselves with special studies for the work to come. For such girls I would recommend extra chemistry courses and advanced courses in arithmetic (because of the need for strict accuracy in preparing mixtures according to formulas), and special attention to physiology and anatomy, while a knowledge of Latin makes it easier for student-nurses to learn surgical and medical terms. Then, too, I would emphasize the study of voice training and expression. It is surprising to know how many otherwise competent nurses cannot read aloud entertainingly to their patients."

from the beginning of the boiling. Do not screw the lids on quite tight but have them firm enough to lift in and out by the tops. Pint jars will cook in five minutes less time, two quart jars need ten minutes more than the two hours of sterilization.

Japanese Mint Jelly.

Put eight quarts of purple plums into a kettle with a large bunch of mint, add cold water so that it shows around the plums and cook until the fruit is tender. Strain over night in a jelly bag and then proceed as in any other jelly. Green grapes also make a good jelly with mint. The pulp left in the bag may be rubbed through a sieve and made into marmalade, so that nothing is wasted.

Windfall apples, or fruit thinned from various choice trees may all be utilized in some form so that none need go to waste. Apples dried are delicious. Dip in a mild salt solution to keep them from burning so brown when dry.

DADDY'S EVENING FAIRY TALE

BY MARY GRAHAM FOSBER

SCHOOLS OF FISHES.

"The fishes were splashing in the lake. It was a hot summer day—like the days we have been having lately," said Daddy, "and the fishes were glad they were in a cool place."

"How awful it must be to live on the dry earth," said Mrs. Perch splashing.

"Yes," said Mr. Sun Fish, "I never could understand it!"

"And on these hot days I feel especially sorry for people," said Mrs. Perch.

"So do I," said young Miss Bass.

"I really don't see how they can breathe out of water. Once I was caught in a net," continued Mrs. Perch, wiggling her fins excitedly, "and I could not breathe at all—at least hardly at all. But I was thrown back into the water soon enough to get well quickly. Ah, the great long breath I drew when back in the water!"

"I suppose," said young Miss Bass, "that animals and people think it is queer we can live in water."

"Do you suppose they do?" asked Mrs. Perch.

"I shouldn't wonder," said Miss Bass. "You see if we think it is so funny for them to be able to breathe out of water—they must think it is funny for us to breathe in water."

"I don't understand," said Mrs. Perch.

"Miss Bass opened her mouth very wide in surprise as Mrs. Perch was not usually so severe.

"You see, if they live out of water they must like it. We live in water and we like it. Creatures usually live where they can enjoy themselves most. And surely they wouldn't live on the earth if they could live in the water."

"I suppose that is true," said Mrs. Perch. "They must like it or they wouldn't live there. But I do not understand it."

"I notice they like to come in swimming on hot days," said Mr. Sun Fish.

"True," said young Miss Bass, "but they do not let their heads go under the water. That is, they do not let their heads stay under the water. They dive in and then they come up again and swim around with their heads on top."

"How queer people and animals are," said Mrs. Perch. "Well, I am sure they envy us on days like these."

"They certainly must," said Mr. Sun Fish.

"How did you ever think out all those great and wise thoughts?" asked Mr. Perch as she looked admiringly at Miss Bass.

"Because," said Miss Bass, "I've been studying in school. It just so happened you never learned that one particular lesson as to why some creature lived out of water and others in water. As you well know fishes are fond of studying.

"They always speak of fishes as moving in 'schools'—not crowds, nor bunches, nor groups—always in schools. That shows that we are students. Even if they do think we look stupid it shows we are not. Fishes travel in schools! And in schools we learn to flap our fins and swim—that is the easiest lesson of all—and what to eat and what not to eat."

"Yes," said Mrs. Perch, "you are quite right; we should be thought learned."

"We don't study so much," said Mr. Sun Fish.

"And we don't really have many lessons," said Mr. Perch.

"That makes no difference," said young Miss Bass. "If they say we travel in schools it must mean we are wise and learned. And let's say we are, anyway."

"Yes, we shall," said Mrs. Perch. "From this day on we shall speak of ourselves as the wise student fishes, the ones who always are said to move in schools!"

"But don't let's worry about it today," said Mrs. Perch. "It is too hot." They all agreed, but how sorry they all felt for the creatures who didn't know the joy of living in water!

VETERANS HOLDING THEIR OWN AT THE HOT CORNER

Mike Mowrey Heads List of Old-Timers Who Have Had an Easy Time Defeating Youngsters.

Does a third baseman improve with age, or is the hot corner so hard to play that the few real stars who make good in the big show have little trouble holding their jobs?

The question is a hard one to answer, but the records show that the veteran third sackers in the big leagues today are distinctly in a class by themselves when it comes to all-round playing, year in and year out.

Take a glance over the hot corner guardians in the two major leagues and you will find that the best men holding down third base have served from five years upward and are still going big. In the National league Mike Mowrey of the Dodgers was serving his eleventh year under the big tent when he was released recently. Heinie Zimmerman of the Giants is now in his tenth year as a major league performer, and Heinie Groh of the Reds has six years under his belt and is going like a house afire for Cincinnati in this, his seventh season, while J. Smith of the Braves is also in his seventh year. The remaining third basemen, among whom Milton Stock of the Phillies stands out by far Safer in Cities.

A practical question is as to the relative danger of various exposed points during a thunderstorm. There appears to be some doubt whether, as has usually been supposed, it is safer to be in an open field than under a tree, the later statistics showing a slightly larger percentage of fatal strokes in the open than under trees. In a forest the danger is less than under a single tree. It is far less in cities than in the country. The neighborhood of water should be avoided. When rain is falling the electricity from the clouds is drawn down harmlessly. Lightning rods, when properly constructed, also draw off the electric charges. Preventing Disease.
The only way to prevent such diseases from spreading is for every child who has a cold, a cough or a sore throat or feels out of sorts to be very careful, not to put in its mouth or to cough over or to handle anything which other children are to use. A child who is not absolutely well should be particularly careful to keep away from babies, because babies are so much more likely to suffer seriously if they catch disease.

Cleaning Books.
Dust can be removed by using bread or very soft rubber. Dust, finger marks and grease spots also yield readily to wall paper cleaner, which is usually sold at local stationery stores. Ink stains can be removed by the use of oxalic acid, followed by chloride of lime.

The lion of the Panama jungle is of two kinds—black and tawny. Full grown, he stands thirty inches high. His breast is broad, like that of a bull dog; his legs are long; his head is square, but catlike. He growls like a lion, but ends with a bark. He has never been known to attack man, but the natives of the jungle fear him. He would be a dangerous adversary at close quarters.

Officer Brockway who has been trying to locate the children of the late Oscar Hinton, has received the following letter from the Texas Children's Home and Aid Society.

Fort Worth, Texas,
Aug. 30, 1917

Mr. F. W. Brockway,
Carrizozo, New Mexico,
Dear Mr. Brockway:

Ada Hinton was placed July 14, 1897 with Mr. and Mrs. Jas. N. Scott, Centre Mill, Hood Co., Texas.

Jimmie Hinton was placed with Mr. and Mrs. C. Winchester, Houston, Texas. (No address given.) We shall be glad to assist you in tracing up these children, but as nothing has been heard from them in some time, it may take a little while.

Ada is twenty-five years of age so is likely married and moved from that section of the state. Jimmey is twenty-three.

We stand ready to assist in the interest of the children at any time

Thanking you for your interest I am,

Yours sincerely,
Mrs. I. Z. T. Morris.

Unsolved

He had been calling on the Widow Smithers for some time, and it could not be said that he had made an impression, although he had failed to realize the fact. She decided to speed him on his way at the first opportunity, and it came that night. He heaved a sigh and said, "I have only one friend on earth—my dog." "Well," she answered, calmly, "if that isn't enough, why don't you get another dog?"

The Fleur-de-Lis.

The Iris is supposed to be the fleur-de-lis, or flower-de-luce of the French coat of arms, but really has nothing to do with the design, this being of quite recent application. The origin of the design is not known but it is quite generally believed to represent the head of a spear; by others the flower of a lily, the floral emblem of France.

Never Besieged.

Petrograd is one of the few European capitals which has never been besieged or captured by enemy forces. May 27, 1703, Peter the Great founded the city by building himself a small wooden hut. In 1710 Count Golovkin built the first brick house, and in the following year the emperor laid the foundation of a house of the same material for his own home, and transferred the seat of government from Moscow to the new capital.

Just So It's Beefsteak.

Paul, who lived in the country, where at his house pork is the predominant meat throughout the year, had gone to the city to visit his aunt. Thinking, of course, she must have things he liked best to eat, she asked him what kind of meat she should get for dinner, and Paul's reply was, "I don't care, aunty, whether it is horse or cow, just so it is beefsteak."

Lamb's Money.

Cecil, aged four, had often gone with Aunt Elsie to the garden to weed, and had asked the names of the different weeds, and was told that one was lamb's-quarters. Several days later he went to the garden for lettuce, and called excitedly: "Oh, come quick, Aunt Elsie; here is some lamb's money."

Fixing the Clock.

If your clock gets out of order, try lubricating the works by the fumes from a piece of wadding soaked in paraffin. Set the wadding inside the case under the works; unless the works are recently out of order the fumes will get on the machinery. It's quite a sure and tried remedy.

CROP CLEAN GRAIN BINS ANNUALLY

Most of the Injury Done by Insects Can Be Prevented—Spray With Kerosene Emulsion.

By cleaning bins carefully each year before a new crop is placed in them, most of the injury due to stored-grain insects can be prevented.

After the grain bins are swept out they should be sprayed thoroughly with 10 per cent kerosene emulsion. This destroys the eggs and insects that otherwise would infest the new crop.

About 284,000,000 bushels of corn, oats and wheat were produced in Ohio in 1918, according to the year book of the United States department of agriculture. A conservative estimate made by entomologists of the Ohio agricultural experiment station is one-half of 1 per cent injured.

Several beetles, weevils and moths infest cereals and other stored products. Many of these insects are also accompanied by mites.

USEFUL FEED PEN FOR PIGS

Large Hogs and Chickens Are Prevented From Getting Food Intended for Young Animals.

I will send you a diagram of a handy pig pen to keep chickens and large hogs from eating with pigs, says a writer in Southern Agriculturist.

Feed Pen for Pigs.

First, plant four posts, then box up pen with plank and cover over with plank or strips. Cut a hole out of one side of pen about 6 by 8 inches, then hang a swing door to top of hole with leather for hinges, so pigs can push the door either in or out.

SAVE LATE VEGETABLES

A cool, well-ventilated cellar under the dwelling offers good conditions for the storage of late vegetables. In cellars that are too warm on account of containing a furnace for heating the dwelling, a room may be partitioned off either in one corner or at one end of the cellar, where the temperature may be controlled by means of outside windows.

Barrels, crates, boxes or bins, may be used as containers for the various vegetables, but movable containers are preferable to built-in bins, as it is possible to remove them for cleaning. It is advisable to construct shelves or a slat floor to keep the crates, boxes, baskets, and other containers off the ground.

Send for Farmers' Bulletins 847 and 870, United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C. These give free of charge full information regarding storing.

RENEW THIN PASTURE SPOTS

Little Seed Scattered Over Weak Places Every Spring and Then Harrowed Will Aid Greatly.

There are weak spots in almost all pasture fields which do well when reseeded. A little seed scattered every spring over these thin spots and harrowed in with the harrow teeth set at a slant of about 40 degrees, will help these spots greatly.

A top dressing of fine stable manure has a stimulating effect on such retarded grasses. It is unreasonable to think that pasture land will produce profitable pasturage from year to year without anything to rejuvenate it.

Efforts Not Wasted. Although your choicest young animals fail to win ribbons at the fairs, the efforts for better stock have not been wasted.

Finnegan Probably Right When He Put Forward Thompson as Mearset of All Mean Men.

This one was told to Sam Bowers, the art salesman, by John Finnegan, train caller at the Union station at Sioux City, Ia.

"Talkin' about mean men," said Finnegan, "one time I knew a man by the name of Pat O'Toole, who worked for a farmer, a few miles out from here, by the name of Thompson.

"Well, one night O'Toole went out to the barn, an' he found the farmer hangin' by the neck from a beam by a buggy trace an' he cut him down an' run four miles for a doctor, an' the doctor come an' the farmer got well, an' he said he'd never do it again.

"Well, at the end of the month, after the farmer had paid O'Toole his wages, Pat discovered that he was $3 short, an' he went back to the farmer, an' ses, ses he, 'How's this? Me money is short to the extent of $3?' An' the farmer ses, ses he, 'Why, that's the price of that fine new buggy trace of mine that you spoiled by cuttin' a couple of weeks back.'

"I ain't buyin' him for the looks, so if he's a good hoss I guess I'll take him."

Two days later Farmer Jones returned with the horse. "Why in the devil didn't you tell me the old boy was blind?" said Farmer Jones to the horse trader.

"Well, I think I made it plain enough when I said she didn't look good." So Farmer Jones has still got the old hoss.

Feed the Fighters! Win the War!!

Harvest the Crops—Save the Yields

On the battle fields of France and Flanders, the United States boys and the Canadian boys are fighting side by side to win for the World the freedom that Fascism would destroy. While doing this they must be fed and every ounce of muscle that can be requisitioned must go into use to save this year's crop.

The Combined Fighters in France and Flanders and the Combined Harvesters in America Will Bring the Allied Victory Nearer.

A perfected arrangement for the use of farm workers has been perfected between the Department of the Interior of Canada and the Department of Labor and Agriculture of the United States, under which it is proposed to permit the harvesters that are now engaged in the wheat fields of Ontario, Kansas, Iowa, North Dakota, South Dakota, Minnesota, Wisconsin and Wyoming to move over into Canada, with the permission of the United States, where the crops in the United States have been conserved, and help to save the enormous crops in Canada which by this time will be ready for harvesting.

"I Never Felt Better in My Life Than I Do Now," He Says—Recommends Tanlac to Every body.

"I don't know what was the matter with me before I took Tanlac, but I do know I'm feeling strong and well for the first time in over two years and have actually picked up 27 pounds," said George M. Dell of 1839 Thirteenth street, Denver, Colorado, who is employed by the Reynolds-Reinhard Co.

"All last winter," he continued, "I had to lay off constantly on account of my condition and if I got in half a week's work I was lucky. I had no appetite and what little I forced down wouldn't digest and I suffered terribly from gas on my stomach.

"I had a constant pain in my back and my legs and feet were so swollen at times I couldn't get my shoes on. My face and under my eyes was puffed up and I was told all this trouble was caused by my kidneys and was likely to develop into Bright's disease.

"I never got a good night's sleep and felt tired and worn out all the time. Nothing I took seemed to do me a bit of good and I got in such a bad fix I could hardly get in enough time to keep me and the 'kiddies' going.

"My landlord advised me to try Tanlac and by the time I had finished the first bottle I noticed a great improvement. My appetite was fine and I could sleep like a log every night. I finished the sixth bottle a short time ago. All the pain has left me, that bloating has stopped and I can do as good a day's work as any man. I never felt better in my life than I do right now."

YES! LIFT A CORN OFF WITHOUT PAIN!

Cincinnati man tells how to dry up a corn or callus so it lifts off with fingers.

You corn-pestered men and women need suffer no longer. Wear the shoes that nearly killed you before, says this Cincinnati authority, because a few drops of freezezone applied directly on a tender, aching corn or callus, stops soreness at once and soon the corn or hardened callus loosens so it can be lifted off, root and all, without pain.

A small bottle of freezezone costs very little at any drug store, but will positively take off every hard or soft corn or callus. This should be tried, as it is inexpensive and is said not to irritate the surrounding skin.

If your druggist hasn't any freezezone tell him to get a small bottle for you from his wholesale drug house.—adv.

Necessary to Begin Preparation of Crop for Storage Before It is Matured—Suggestion by Missouri Expert.

Farmers of the country have done their share in increasing the production of one crop at least. The United States department of agriculture, in the bureau of crop estimates report for July, estimated the potato production of the country at 462,000,000 bushels. The production last year was estimated in December at 285,487,000 bushels. This is an increase of more than 58 per cent. Now that the potatoes have been produced it is necessary to preserve them for use until next year's crop is harvested. W. H. Lawrence of the University of Missouri College of Agriculture offers the following suggestions for storing the potatoes. It is necessary to begin preparation of the crop for storage before it is matured.

1. Examine the fields while the plants are still green. If any diseased plants are found or if any plants show evidence that the tubers are diseased they should be destroyed immediately. The diseased tubers are the ones which cause trouble in storage. They not only rot, but they transmit the disease to adjoining potatoes and cause them to rot also.

2. Delay harvest until the tops die. This indicates that the potatoes have matured as fully as they will.

3. Avoid bruising the tubers or breaking the skins. Potatoes injured thus decay rapidly in storage and usually cause adjacent potatoes to decay.

4. After the potatoes are dug they should be allowed to dry slightly, which will toughen the skins and eliminate excess surface moisture.

5. Sort out all bruised, diseased, or otherwise damaged potatoes before attempting to store the crop.

6. Cold storage offers the safest means for holding potatoes. The temperature of the cold storage room should be 40 to 45 degrees Fahrenheit when the potatoes are placed in it. During the next four to six weeks the temperature should be reduced to about 35 degrees.

7. If cold storage is not available, pitting or banking is the next best method of preserving the potatoes. Select a high place in the field which will afford surface drainage of rainfall. If possible, locate the pit near a tree or other shelter where it will be shaded during the hot hours of the day. Scoop out several inches of soil, down to solid earth, from an area large enough to receive the potatoes. Add a layer of potatoes about one foot deep each day, preferably during early morning when the temperature of the tubers is low. Keep the pit covered from day to day with a tarpaulin or blanket to exclude dew or rain. The potatoes should not be piled more than four to six feet high. When the pit is finished it should be covered with a layer of straw deep enough to exclude light and heat. Weight the straw with boards to prevent the wind from blowing it away. An opening should be left at the top to provide ventilation and to permit the escape of excess moisture and heat from the pile of potatoes. It is also advisable to cover the pit with a temporary shed that will turn rain.

8. The pit must be covered with earth before freezing weather. About 12 inches of soil will be necessary to protect the potatoes. This soil should be placed on top of the straw. Mr. Lawrence says that he has found that well-matured potatoes harvested in August and carefully handled according to the foregoing suggestions will keep until midwinter or later with very little loss.

WEEDS MUST BE CONTROLLED

Noxious Plants Have Natural Facilities for Using Food in Soil—Pull Them Early.

Weeds should be pulled early for they have exceptional natural facilities for using the food where they grow else they would not be present but their places taken by species better adapted. For that reason weeds usually grow faster than the plants set out by the gardener and the weeds must be controlled or harm results.

Will Man Machine Guns for Uncle Sam

Camp Funston, Kansas — The branch of the service to which members of the first quota of the new national army detailed to Camp Funston are to be assigned will depend largely upon the states and sections of the states from which they come, according to a plan made public by Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood, in command of the Eighty-ninth division. The assignments to service, for the preliminary training at least, will be:

Colorado—141st field artillery.
Arizona—340th field artillery.
New Mexico—342nd machine gun battalion.

Men who are specialists in any one branch of the service will be assigned to that branch without reference to his state or section, officers say.

Voice of the Council

The letter from the Guadalupe County Council of Defense is as follows:

"It has been brought to the notice of the Guadalupe County Council of Defense, recently appointed by the Governor of New Mexico, that you have uttered remarks entirely unbecoming to a person enjoying the liberty and protection of the United States, and we wish to impress upon you, most emphatically, that such conduct will at no time be tolerated within the United States.

"This information comes to us through a very reliable source, and should we have such complaint made against you the second time, we will be obliged to apply such remedy as is necessary to counteract seditious conduct, and we are acting under orders given us by the Governor of the state of New Mexico.

"We sincerely trust that we may not be called upon to act in your case, however, we intend to make it known to you that you will be under surveillance from this time on, and our action depends entirely upon your deportment."

Our Man About Town

The building activity is something remarkable. Everybody is talking building. One of our business men is going east to return with parties who will invest their money in building dwelling houses in this town.

The Carrizozo Trading Company's new building, the new National Bank building, Dr. Paden's new addition to Paden Drug Store building which has just been completed, Barnett's new Hay, Feed and Grain Store, the new Wetmore Opera House Block, the new improvements at the Lucas Hospital, the Brannum and Doering buildings, and the Temple Hotel.—How do you like it? Now let us hear of dwellings being built—some place for the stranger to live when he comes here to live.

Heavy Percentage of Loss

Forty percent of this year's lambs and fifteen percent of this year's calves were lost on account of the exceptionally late cold spring in the national forests of northern New Mexico, according to estimates just compiled by the district forester. A thirty percent loss in lambs is reported from the central New Mexico forests. Young range stock on other southwestern forests fared very well, according to the district forester's figures, but an exceptionally poor crop on the forests of central New Mexico is reported.

Sea Island Cotton Nowadays

By W.A. Orton

Sea Island cotton differs from the ordinary upland cotton in many respects. The plant is taller, the leaves smoother and more deeply lobed, the flowers brighter yellow, the bolls smaller, longer, and more pointed, the seed nearly bare of fuzz, and the staple longer and finer. It is more closely related to Egyptian cotton, which it resembles in appearance.

The original home of the plant is thought to have been the West Indies. When first introduced into the mainland of America, it is reported to have been considerably different from the present form. Through several generations the planters have selected seed from the earliest, most compact, and most productive plants with the longest and finest staple, until the character of the plant has been radically changed and greatly improved.

A well-regulated water supply is the most important factor influencing sea island cotton. Thorough drainage is essential. On this account more and better cotton is grown on the slightly elevated margins of the Sea Islands than in the lower central portions. The drains make possible the cultivation of land otherwise too wet. In the interior, cotton is grown only where there is suitable drainage. On the other hand, a liberal and regular supply of water is needed, and wherever cotton is planted on the dry hills in the upper edge of the Sea Island cotton belt inferior results are secured, the staple becoming shorter and harsher. The lower lying lands are better, provided they have adequate drainage.

Soils very rich in humus appear to be unsuited to Sea Island cotton, producing too rank a growth; but a deficiency of humus is also a serious objection, as such land produces a small plant with a tendency to the shedding of bolls and to rust.

Atmospheric humidity appears to be a prominent factor influencing the quality of the staple. On the Sea Islands, fields having an ocean exposure are said to produce a finer and glossier staple on account of the moisture-laden ocean breezes, and in the interior one advantage of the lower lands is doubtless their moist air, which is conserved by protecting forests and nearby swamps. In the absence of sufficient moisture in the air the staple becomes harsh and shorter. This is further shown by the fact that a wet season is more favorable to Sea Island than to Upland cotton, while the Upland varieties do better in a dry season. The relative production of Upland and Sea Island cotton in the northern counties fluctuates with the season and the changes in acreage due to varying market conditions.

The mixing of seed and the hybridizing which result from planting cotton of both types in the same community are a serious handicap to the growers of Sea Island cotton. In this respect portions of Florida where only Sea Island cotton is grown possess a marked advantage and the introduction of Upland varieties should be discouraged.

In addition to the effect of the high prices in stimulating the industry and of low prices in depressing it, a factor which must be considered in connection with the production of cotton in either old or new sections is the supply of available labor. Until present methods are revolutionized a relatively large amount of fairly cheap labor is required, and it is a great advantage if the laborers have had long experience with the crop. Throughout the Sea Island cotton belt there is now a growing scarcity of labor, which is likely to restrict the acreage planted. The farmers must meet the new conditions by the adoption of labor-saving machinery in planting and in cultivation, but there will continue to be difficulty in getting the cotton picked.

The development of trucking and lumbering industries restricts the less profitable cotton crop, and there is a steady exodus of laborers to engage in railroad building, etc., making the labor problem still more serious.

The cost of cotton production is greatly increased by the prevailing credit system, owing to the high cost of supplies and the reduction of the farmers' ambition and efficiency. The change from credit to a cash system now going on is a great gain for good farming and should be encouraged.

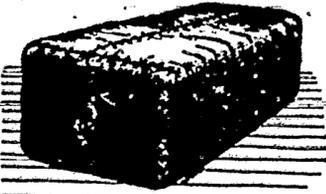

The common practice of renting land for a share of the crop greatly hinders the adoption of improved methods. It means instead of the continuous planting of cotton without attention to seed selection or soil improvement. When the owner cannot operate his farm himself, he should retain strict oversight over the work done by his tenant and provide, through a written contract, for a specified system of rotation and seed selection.

If the period of renting were three or five years instead of one, there would be more incentive for the tenant to build up the soil. The owner who keeps his land in a high state of cultivation has no difficulty in securing the best class of tenants.

There is a tendency among cotton buyers, to pay an average price for all grades of Sea Island cotton, especially in the smaller markets. This means that good cotton brings less than its value, and inferior or dirty cotton too much. This practice is an injustice to the farmer who produces a superior article, and it tends to discourage him from selecting for quality. Unless buyers are willing to pay full value for the best cotton, farmers cannot be expected to improve their seed in any respect except to secure larger yields per acre.

It is an advantage to the farmer who has a superior grade of cotton to secure competitive offers from large buyers before selling. In this direction much good can be done by farmers' organizations.

In Georgia and Florida the breeder should work for a staple not less than one and five-eighths inches or more than one and three-fourths inches in length. In South Carolina each planter is guided by his own preferences, some planters choosing the medium kinds on account of their greater productiveness and others finding it profitable to grow the extra fine and long varieties. Experience has shown, however, that these fine strains, having a staple two inches to two and one-half inches long and selling from the Sea Islands at 40 to 60 cents per pound, are not profitable in the interior. As compared with the medium sorts, they are less productive and more subject to disease, while the bolls are smaller and the cotton harder to pick. The fine staple requires more care in handling than the interior farmers are accustomed to give, and the interior markets will not pay as high prices as Charleston. In the past the best results in the interior have been obtained ed with strains classed on the Sea Islands as medium fine, such as Hinson and Seabrook.

In the cotton market the term "staple" refers to the length and fineness of the fiber, and these points are influenced most by seed selection. The term "grade," on the other hand, indicates the appearance of the cotton as regards cleanliness and color, qualities influenced mainly by the manner in which the cotton has been handled. The price is considerably influenced by the grade.

The best practice in handling the crop may be briefly stated by describing the method followed on the Sea Islands, which should be adopted in the interior in so far as the labor conditions will permit.

Picking is done whenever enough cotton is open, about every ten days. The cotton is gathered as free from trash as possible and carried to the storehouse, where the next morning each picker sorts his own picking, throwing out diseased or yellow locks and pieces of bolls, leaves, and other trash. The cotton is then spread on arbors to dry in the sun. It is watched and turned frequently, and usually dries in one day. After sunning, the seed cotton is assorted by women, who remove any yellow locks, bits of leaves, etc. If very dirty it is whipped over a coarse wire screen stretched across a small box to take out the sand. Very fine cotton is again sorted or overhauled by another set of laborers. The cotton is then baled and allowed to remain from four to six weeks before ginning. During the ginning, one or two hands inspect the cotton as it passes to the gins, to remove impurities, and one of two others "mote" the lint as it passes from the gin to the press, by picking out yellow tufts, etc. By all these means a high grade is maintained for Sea Island cotton, which is reflected in a price per pound several cents higher than that paid for inferior cotton.

The Australian Aborigines.
As a hunter the native Australian is marvelously adjusted to his environment. His success lies in an intimate knowledge of the habits of animals on land, in the ground, in trees and under water and his wonderfully developed powers of observation. He decoys pelicans by imitating their cries, catches ducks by diving below them, locates an opossum in a tree by marks on the bark or by the flight of mosquitoes, finds snakes by observing the action of birds, and follows a bee to its store for honey. Any animal which leaves a track, however dim, in sand, on rock or in grass, falls an easy prey to the black fellow. Children are taught to track lizards and snakes over bare rocks and to find their absent mother by following tracks too indistinct to serve as a guide for a European.

Seventeen, but Looked Eighty.
In 1909 a young girl, Louise Gasquet by name, living in Paris, is said to have met with a peculiar death, though barely seventeen years of age. In appearance she was an old woman of eighty, her skin wrinkled, her eyes dull, her hair gray and scant.

Every effort known to science was tried to bring back her lost youth, but her cheeks grew more shriveled and her eyes more sunken every day, until, a month after her admission to hospital, she sank into a deep sleep and died without a sigh. A post mortem was held in the presence of many English and French doctors, and revealed the fact that the entire organization of the body had been attacked by senile decay, and, though the girl was but a child in years, she had undoubtedly died of old age.

Half-and-Half Music.
A jobbing carpenter came into the Wheatshar tavern and ordered a half-pint only, instead of his usual amount of refreshment. The proprietor expressed amazement.

"'Tis like this," explained the carpenter: "I've allus been quite willin' to reduce my expenses once I saw the quality give a lead. And, just now, coming from a job of work up at the hall, I noticed that Sir Emery has made a start in what is called economy. His two daughters was playing music in the drawing room, and they was both of 'em playin'—mark you this—both of 'em playin' on one and the self-same piano."—Liverpool Post.

Avoiding Waste.
"Isn't there a good deal of waste in the bone of a sirloin steak?"
"Not for me," replied the merchant. "I am careful to sell the bone for as much as the meat."

SCRAPS OF HUMOR

Mrs. Urban—I found an egg in the coal bin this morning.
Urban—in the coal bin? That's a queer place for a hen to lay!

Urban—And why, pray?
Mrs. Urban—Because if the hens lay in the coal, you won't have to buy any this winter. See?

A Regular Kaiser.

"The kaiser is a queer customer," said Jacob Schiff, New York banker and philanthropist, during a Cooper Union debate. "The more the German people ask of him the less he gives them."

"The way the kaiser has treated the German people about this business of universal suffrage reminds me of the Blue mill.

"The hands of the Blue mill, you know, waited on the owner and told him they wanted shorter hours.

"Very good," said the owner. "Your wish shall be granted. We'll begin with shorter dinner hours."

Would Believe Anything.

"Mrs. Dubwaite found a pink-scented note in Mr. Dubwaite's pocket last night."

"Dear me! I presume there was a terrible row?"

"No. Mr. Dubwaite convinced her that some of the men at the office had played a practical joke on him."

"Well! Well! Imagine being married to a woman as easy to fool as that!"

The Case Stated.

"Sproffins says he owes everything to his wife."
"Yes, everybody knows he's borrowed the best part of her money."

Different Now.

"I've been reading 'Don Quixote' over again. Dear old Sancho Panza often made a meal off an onion and a piece of stale bread."

"Ah, yes. Those were the good old days. Fars like that in these parlous times is only within the reach of people who don't care how much they spend for a light lunch."

Reasonable Doubt.

"I wonder if Smith's stories about his climbing feats in Switzerland are straight?"

"Well, how can such a thing as mountain climbing be on the level?"

Natural Ability.

"I saw George do a wonderful and very difficult spiral in his warplane today."

"Huh! That shouldn't be hard for one as crooked as he."

Naturally.

"I understand our friend met with reverses on the acrobatic stage."

"He certainly did. In fact, the barber was all reverses. He had to stand on his head."

You can make your own book ends by joining two pieces of metal or wood and then covering it with a cover made of green linen, heavily embroidered in a conventional design.

Not Our Truth.

The truth which another man has won from nature or from life is not our truth until we have lived it. Only that brings real or helpful to any man which has cost the sweat of his brow, the effort of his brain, or the anguish of his soul. He who would be wise must daily earn his wisdom.—David Starr Jordan.

METHODIST CHURCH
(Rev. Marston, Pastor.)

Men wanted—a free lecture of a high moral character for men and boys only. John C. Hines, of Alvord, Texas, a world wide Evangelist of the Presbyterian Church, who is assisting in the revival services at the M. E. Church, will deliver his famous lecture Sunday at 10:30 a. m. to men and boys. This is a lecture that is based on twenty years experience in the Evangelistic work, and is a short route to a much needed information. Rev. Hines comes well recommended.

BAPTIST CHURCH
(Rev. J. M. Gardner Pastor.)

Sunday School will be held at 9:30 instead of 10:00 on account of Rev. Hines' lecture to men and boys at 10:30 at the Methodist Church.
Rev. J. M. Gardner will preach to the women and children on "Old King Pharaoh's Tomorrow" at the Baptist Church at 10:30.

Love of Appreciation.

Everyone likes to be approved. The most rudimentary of human units, the eight-year-old papoose, or the grown Hottentot, is gratified by the praise won by the fish brought from the pond, or the deer flung over the shoulder as trophy of the day's hunt. Love of approbation is as natural as hair or teeth. A woman should not be blamed for possessing a trait so human.

To Relieve Colds in Horses.

In case of colds, rather strong salt be poured down a horse's throat and to the back of the horse over the nostrils will also relieve greatly.

Lines to Be Remembered.

No good almost kill a man as kill a bad book; who kills a man kills a mortal creature, God's image; but who kills a good book kills reason.

Build More Houses to Rent
Editor Outlook,

I heartily agree with your views expressed in an article in last week's issue of your paper, in reference to building houses to rent in Carrizozo. It is a well known fact that more houses are needed.

Probably one of the best styles of houses for this purpose would be the six room double tenement (three rooms on a side), with porch in front, using adobes for its walls. Each Townsite Company ought to build two or three of them.

Yours truly,
M. D

When Soft Metal Cuts Hard.

A bar of hard steel is cut rapidly with a revolving disk of soft iron. This is caused by the intense heat produced by the friction; the heat being concentrated at one point on the steel bar, melts this, while the revolving disk distributes it over its circumference, which is kept cool by the current of air. A bar 31 millimeters thick is cut in two by a disk 30 centimeters in diameter and 2 millimeters thick revolving at 2000 meters a second in from one to two seconds.
