Food Conservation Campaign in Carrizozo

Home Cards and Pledges Will Play Important Part in Campaigning Among Resident Families.

The week beginning October 28th and ending November 4th has been declared by the National Food Administrator Pledge Card Food Conservation Campaign week. During the week it is desired that every family shall be given an opportunity to sign one of the pledge cards and thus become an active member of the great army of food conservators of the nation.

Every man, woman and child is earnestly solicited to take an active part in this matter to make it a grand success, for if this undertaking fails to be successful in a large measure, the cause for which this nation took up arms will be correspondingly endangered. Therefore every public speaker of whatever kind is respectfully and earnestly invited to make mention of this great movement upon every suitable occasion. Let it be proclaimed from the rostrum and from the pulpit until every one may know of its importance and feel that there is something for each of us to do.

To conserve as the national administrator wishes does not mean that anyone shall deprive himself of a sufficient amount of food to endanger his well being, but that he eat less of certain kinds of foods, namely, wheat products, meats, beef, pork and mutton, sugar, dairy products, and fats. For each of these he is asked to substitute something more plentiful, that can not be used by our army and navy and those of our allies.

The west has not been known to be short, or to do anything by halves, so upon this occasion let us not fail to keep up our record of doing things on a large scale. Let us strive to have the largest percentage of families enrolled in the state.

When you shall have received one of the Home Cards, read it very carefully, for thereon you will find the entire plan as it is outlined by the National Conservation Board. By following the plan outlined, each one doing his part nobly, this movement will be a great success, and in the cause of democracy shall be made secure to the world.

Thanking each of you in advance for your hearty co-operation in this matter, permit me to remain,

Yours for the service,
J. E. KOONCE,
County Chairman Food Conservation Campaign.

Mrs. McDonald Entertains

Mrs. W. G. McDonald, assisted by Mrs. Truman Spencer, entertained the ladies of the Carrizozo Bridge Club and a few invited guests Thursday afternoon at her ranch home. Mrs. Lewis of Fort Stanton, who leaves soon for Seattle, Washington, was the honoree.

The witcheries of Halloween characterized the event, and the guests were delighted with refreshments consisting of doughnuts and coffee, pumpkin pie and whipped cream, popcorn, taffy candy and (sweet) cider. In order to carry out the ideas of Hoover, prizes of boxes of apples were given the successful winners of the first and second prizes, with a bottle of vinegar for the lowest score.

Mrs. Lewis was presented with a beautiful basket of apples to take with her on her journey.

A large number of the club members were absent from town. The following guests were present: Mesdames Lewis, McKeon, Dingwall, Crawford, Lucas, Sager, Ulrick, Gumm, Osborn, Bamberger, Squier, Chas. Spence, Clarence Spence, Miss Florence Spence.

Picks Up Two Deserters

Detective Ben West arrested two men Saturday, who were found hiding in a freight car.

The officer surprised the men, placed them under arrest, and after being searched, they proved to be deserters from Fort Bliss. The men gave their names as Claude C. Bauta, and Gussie H. Carr, from Troupe L, 5th Cavalry. Mr. West wired the information to the Fort and received orders to keep the men, and Sunday an officer came, took the men and returned with them to Ft. Bliss. Let the reader meditate on the contrast between these men, and our Carrizozo boys who are ready for the front, and are anxious to meet the foe.

Take the patriotic letter of Henry A. Lindley, published in last week's edition in which he points with pride to the Liberty Bonds the boys have bought and finishes with "Yours for Uncle Sam."

Calumet Divies Up

The Calumet Baking powder Company of Chicago, are staunch supporters of the policy of the liberally rewarding the efforts of its salesmen. Each year—for years—they have given valuable prizes to salesmen securing the greatest volume of business.

This year they will distribute $10,000 in Liberty Bonds among their high grade salesmen.

In the Justice Court

Guadalupe Aguirra waived preliminary examination on the charge of assault with intent to kill and was bound over to the district court.

Victor Sandoval was fined $10 and costs for disorderly conduct.

An Open Letter to the Sportsmen of Southwest

The Southwestern Game Association Plan to Establish Big Game Reservation in the Mogollons.

The Outlook takes pleasure in printing a copy of the circular letter which will be mailed to game lovers in the state by the Southwestern Fish, Game and Forest Protective Association.

The various gentlemen who have been instrumental in the organization of this association are to be commended on their efforts in this direction.

My Dear Brother Sportsman and Nature Lover: Do you know that your wild game is fast disappearing; that the natural haunts of this game are being settled up rapidly, and that no provision for the protection or propagation of game is being made, except in a general way by the state authorities, that this protected game is being killed ruthlessly regardless of closed seasons; that the buffalo is gone; that the antelope, which like the buffalo has roamed the prairies and foothills of this western country since the beginning, is going and the deer is fast following suit? And say, Brother Sportsman, something must be done.

A band of Lincoln County, New Mexico, sportsmen have united and formed the Southwestern Fish Game and Forest Protective Association with aims as set forth in the enclosed circular. As all western sportsmen know, New Mexico has practically the only virgin country suitable for a preserve and it is the definite aim of this association to establish a preserve in the neighborhood of the Gila River or some of its tributaries in the Mogollon mountains where there is a scope of country topographically suitable for a preserve, where title to several townships will be secured in various ways, a small portion probably would be fenced at once and preparations made to stock with various game, and later more would be fenced until ultimately a large preserve will be enclosed.

As the scope of country in which this preserve will be located is large, it is proposed to allow hunting on certain parts of the preserve and in all the surrounding country in accordance with the game laws of the state. A club house would be built for members where they could camp or lodge at any time during the hunting or fishing season.

The present officers and directors of the Association need very little introduction to the public, as a part, if not all, are known. Judge Edward L. Medler, our president, is judge of the Third Judicial District of New Mexico; Harry B. Dawson is Assistant Cashier of the Exchange Bank of Carrizozo; Stanley L. Squier is manager of the Western Garage and H. S. Campbell is Cashier of the Lincoln State Bank; these latter all of Carrizozo, New Mexico. The directors are all responsible citizens and business men of Lincoln County.

We have figured that this must be done by someone and at once if the nature lover and sportsman of the southwest is to have any game or virgin hunting grounds, and to make a start, the membership fees and dues are fixed as per the enclosed application. The money will be used to secure title to the land, build fences and a lodge and in making a road into the preserve. It is the intention of the association to get 500 members and in that manner raise the funds for all these improvements.

Think this over and send us your application and check for membership fee for we need your assistance and cooperation in this important undertaking.

Sincerely,
Stanley L. Squier, Secy.
P. S. And say, brother, we might have some of the elk which now die of starvation in Montana and Wyoming, by bringing them to the preserve and surrounding country. And wouldn't it be a "grand and glorious feeling" as you sit around the campfire or in lodge by the fireplace to think that you "had done your bit" for the game of the Southwest

Tried to Smoke Him Out

When the train load of soldiers arrived here Tuesday morning, the officers notified Sheriff Hyde, one of the negroes was selling liquor to the soldiers. The Sheriff went to the train and made a search along the color line, but found no trace of the guilty party. As the train pulled out someone said that the friends of the negro had given him other clothes, and as the old saying goes, "All niggers look alike to me," the sheriff failed to apprehend his man in another garb than in which he was described.

Chili Dinner

The Women's Missionary Society of the Methodist church will serve a chili dinner in the rear of Bell's store Tuesday, November 6th. Remember the date, November 6th.

Women's Home Mission

The Women's Home Mission Society met at the home of Mrs. Jno. E. Bell Wednesday afternoon, October 24th. A representative number was present and dainty refreshments were served by the hostess.

BAPTIST CHURCH

(Rev. J. M. Gardner, Pastor.)

A packed house listened to the "Buy Your Own Cherries," and splendid addresses by Lawyers Gilbert and Thompson of Roswell last Sunday night at the Baptist Church. A great many leading men of the state are confident that the state is going dry, but urge everybody to get out and vote right on November 6th.

The pastor will preach Sunday morning at 11 o'clock on "The Proper Candidate for Baptism," or "Who Should be Baptized." This is the third sermon on this great and important subject of baptism.

The Junior B. Y. P. U. will meet at 8 p. m. in place of 6:30, and the Senior B. Y. P. U. will meet at 6:30 as usual.

Sunday School at 10 a. m. Everybody welcome.

Prayer Meeting Wednesday at 7:30 p. m.

W. M. U. Friday at 3:30 p. m. Teacher Training Class Friday at 7:30 p. m.

METHODIST CHURCH

(Rev. Lewellen, Pastor.)

Sunday morning and Sunday night I will preach on Gospel themes at the Methodist church. We feel that in this hour of crisis it is our duty to preach on the great theme of the Gospel.

Sunday School at 9:45 a. m. Watch the school grow.

Epworth League at 6:45 p. m. The league services are entertaining and instructive.

We want to meet you at the Methodist church Sunday.

R. H. Lewelling, pastor.

High School Notes

Professor Conway will leave Friday night. Mr. Conway will give a series of talks in neighboring towns in interest of the new amendment.

The school children will observe Patriotic Day, Nov. 2nd, in a fitting and appropriate way. One hour has been set apart in all the schools and programs have been arranged.

Ben Daniels, formerly of the Ancho brick works, is now employed at the finishing work on the Carrizozo Trading Co.

Mr. and Mrs. B. E. Brown formerly of Carrizozo, accompanied by their son Charlie, made an overland trip in a Ford to Aguas Calientes Springs Arizona, for their health.

Joseph Stratton and Miss Vera Harris motored over to Capitan Sunday.

See the Majestic Range demonstration at Kelley's this week. Coffee and hot biscuit served.

Mrs. W. W. Bohling of Tucuman, is visiting her mother, Mrs. D. Tinnon.

Tex Loughry is hunting this week in Carrizozo mountain.

Al Waite, who has the white burro and cart, has been furnishing no small amount of amusement for the soldiers who are coming through. The rig is quite a novelty to the boys from the east who get their first glimpse of a combination of that sort when they reach New Mexico.

Rev. Hoering will hold Episcopal services in the Methodist church Monday night at 7:30 o'clock.

"Heaven knows! Out in the barn or under the house." Taking advantage of the dressmaker's momentary absence from the room, Paloma continued in a whisper: "I wish you'd talk to dad and see what you make of him. He's absolutely queer. Mrs. Strange seems to have a peculiar effect on him. Why, it's almost as if—"

"What?" "Well, I suppose I'm foolish, but—I'm beginning to believe in spells. You know, Mrs. Strange's husband is a sort of—necromancer."

"How silly!"

There was no further opportunity for words, as the woman reappeared at that instant; but a little later Alaire went in search of Blaze, still considerably mystified. As she neared the farm buildings, she glimpsed a man's figure hastily disappearing into the barn. The figure bore a suspicious resemblance to Blaze-Jones, yet when she followed, he was nowhere to be seen.

"Mr. Jones!" Alaire called. She repeated Blaze's name several times; then something stirred. The door of a harness closet opened cautiously, and out of the blackness peered Paloma's father. He looked more owl-like than ever behind his big, gold-rimmed spectacles. "What in the world are you doing in there?" she cried.

Blaze emerged, blinking. He was dusty and perspiring.

"Hello, Miz Austin!" he saluted her with a poor assumption of breeziness. "I was fixin' some harness, but I'm right glad to see you."

Alaire regarded him quizzically. "What made you hide?" she asked.

"Hide? Who, me?" "I saw you dodge in here like a—sopher."

Blaze confessed; "I reckon I've got the willies. Every woman I see looks like that dressmaker."

"Paloma was talking me about you. Why do you hate her so?"

"I don't know 's I hate her, but her and her husband have put a jinx on me. They're the worst people I ever see, Miz Austin."

"You don't really believe in such things?"

Blaze dusted off a seat for his visitor, saying: "I never did till lately, but now I'm worse than a plantation nigger. I tell you there's things in this world we don't saba. I wish you'd get Paloma to fire her. I've tried and failed. I wish you'd tell her those dresses are rotten."

"But they're very nice; they're lovely; and I've just been complimenting her. Now what has this woman done to you?"

It seemed impossible that a man of Blaze Jones' character could actually harbor crude superstitions; and yet there was no mistaking his earnestness when he said:

"I ain't sure whether she's to blame, or her husband, but misfortune has folded me to herself."

"How?"

"Well, I'm sick."

"You don't look it."

"I don't exactly feel it, either, but I am. I don't sleep good, my heart's actin' up, I've got rheumatism, my stomach feels like I'd swallowed something alive—"

"You're smoking too much," Alaire affirmed, with conviction.

But skepticism aroused Blaze's indignation. With elaborate sarcasm, he retorted: "I reckon that's why my best team of mules ran away and dragged me through a ten-acre patch of grass burrs, eh? It's a wonder I wasn't killed. I reckon I smoked so much that I give a tobacco heart to the best three-year-old bull in my pasture! Well, I smoked him to death, all right. Probably it was nicotine poison that killed twenty acres of my cotton, too; and maybe if I'd cut out tobacco I'd have feasted that bond issue on the irrigation ditch. But I was wedded to cigarette, so my banks are closed down on me. Sure! That's what a man gets for smokin'."

"And do you attribute all these misfortunes to Paloma's dressmaker?"

The man nodded gloomily. "That ain't half! Everything goes wrong. I'm scared to pack a weapon for fear I'll injure myself. Why, I've carried a bowie knife in my bootie ever since I was a babe in arms, you might say; but the other day I jabbed myself with it and nearly got blood-poisoned. This fellow, Strange, with his fortune-tellin' and his charms and his conjures, has haccu-possessed the whole neighborhood. He's gettin' rich off of the Mexicans. He knows more secrets than a parrot."

"He is nothing more than a circus fakir, Mr. Jones."

"Yes'm! Just the same, these greasers 'd vote him into the legislature if he asked them. Why, he knows who he fetched back Ricardo Gasman's body! He told me so."

"Really?" Alaire looked up quickly, then the smile left her face. After a moment she said, "Perhaps he could tell me something I want to know?"

"No, don't you get him started." Blaze cautioned, hastily, "or he'll put a spell on you like he did on me."

"I want to know what Ed had to do with the Guzman affair."

Blaze shook his head slowly. "Well, he's mixed up somehow with Lewis. Dave thinks Tad was at the bottom of the killin', and he hoped to prove it on him; but our government won't do anything, and he's stumped for the time bein'. I don't know any more about Ed's dealin's than you do, Miz Austin; all I know is that I got a serpent in my household and I can't get shed of her. I've got a lapful of troubles of my own."

"This is too occult for me," she declared, rising. "But—I'm interested in what you say about Mr. Strange. If the Mexicans tell him so much, perhaps he can tell me something. I do hope you have no more misfortunes."

"You stay to supper," Blaze urged hospitably. "I'll be in as soon as that tarantula's gone."

But Alaire declined. After a brief chat with Paloma, she remounted Montrose and prepared for the homeward ride. At the gate, however, she met Dave Law on his new mare, and when Dave had learned the object of her visit to Jonesville he insisted upon accompanying her.

It was early dusk when they reached Las Palmas; it was nearly midnight when Dave threw his leg across his saddle and started home.

Alaire's parting words rang sweetly in his ears: "This has been the pleasantest day I can remember."

The words themselves meant little, but Dave had caught a wistful undertone in the speaker's voice, and fancied he had seen in her eyes a queer, half-frightened expression, as of one just awakened.

Jose Sanchez had beheld Dave Law at the Las Palmas table twice within a few days. He spent this evening laboriously composing a letter to his friend and patron, Gen. Luis Longorio.

CHAPTER XV.

An Awakening.

Time was when Phil Strange boasted that he and his wife had played every fairground and seaside amusement park from Coney Island to Galveston. In his battered wardrobe trunks were parts of old costumes, scrapbooks of clippings, and a godly collection of lithographs, some advertising the supernatural powers of "Professor Magi, Sovereign of the Unseen World," and others the accomplishments of "Miss Le Garde, Renowned Serpent Meschantress." In these gaudy portraits of "Magi the Mystic" no one would have recognized Phil Strange. And even more difficult would it have been to trace a resemblance between Mrs. Strange and the blond, bushy-headed "Miss Le Garde" of the posters. Nevertheless, the likenesses at one time had been considered not too flattering, and Phil treasured them as evidences of imperishable distinction.

But the Stranges had tired of public life. For a long time the wife had confessed to a lack of interest in her vocation which amounted almost to a repugnance. Snake-charming, she had discovered, was far from an ideal profession for a woman of refinement. It possessed unpleasant features, and even such euphemistic titles as "Serpent Meschantress" and "Reptilian Mesmerist" failed to rob the calling of a certain odium, a suggestion of vulgarity in the minds of the more discriminating. This had become so distressing to Mrs. Strange's snar sensibilities that she had voiced a yearning to forsake the platform and pit for something more congenial, and finally she had prevailed upon Phil to make a change.

The step had not been taken without misgivings, but a benign Providence had watched over the pair. Mrs. Strange was a natural seamstress, and look had directed her and Phil to a community which was not only in need of a good dressmaker but peculiarly ripe for the talents of a soothsayer. Phil, too, had intended to embrace a new profession; but he had soon discovered that Jonesville offered better financial returns to a man of his accepted gifts than did the choicest of seaside concessions, and therefore he had resumed his old calling under a slightly different guise. Before long he acknowledged himself well pleased with the new environment, for his wife was far happier in draping dress goods upon the figures of her customers than hanging pythas folds about her own, and he found his own fame growing with every day. His mediumistic gifts came into general demand. The country-people journeyed miles to consult him, and Blaze Jones' statement that they confided in the fortune-teller as they would have confided in a priest was scarcely an exaggeration. Phil did indeed become the repository for confessions of many sorts.

Contrary to Blaze's belief, however, Strange was no Prince of Darkness, and took little joy in some of the secrets forced upon him. Phil was a good man in his way—so conscientious that certain information he acquired weighed him down with a sense of unpleasant responsibility. Chancing to meet Dave Law one day, he determined to relieve himself of at least one troublesome burden.

But Dave was not easily approachable. He met the medium's allusions to the occult with contemptuous amusement, nor would he consent to a private "reading." Strange grew almost desperate enough to speak the ungarnered truth.

"You'd better pay a little attention to me," he grieved; "I've got a message to you from the 'Unseen World.'"

"Charges 'collect,' I reckon," the Ranger grinned.

Strange waved aside the suggestion. "It came unbidden, and I pass it on for what it's worth." As Dave turned away, he added, hastily, "It's about a skeleton in the chaparral, and a red-haired woman."

Dave stopped; he eyed the speaker curiously. "Go on," said he.

But a public street, Strange explained, was no place for psychic discussions. Dave agreed. When they were alone in the fortune-telling "parlor," he sat back while the medium closed his eyes and prepared to explore the invisible. After a brief delay Phil began:

"I see a great many things—that woman I told you about, and three men. One of 'em is you, the other two is Mexicans. You're at a water hole in the mesquite. Now there's a shooting scrape; I see the body of a dead man. And now the scene changes. Everything dissolves. I'm in a mansion; and the red-haired woman comes toward me. Over her head floats a skeleton—"

Dave broke in crisply. "All right! Let's get down to cases. What's on your mind, Strange?"

The psychic simulated a shudder—a painful contortion, such as anyone might suffer if rudely jerked out of the spirit world.

"Eh? What was I—? There! You've broke the connection," he declared.

"Did I tell you anything?"

"No. But evidently you can."

"I'm sorry. They never come back."

"Rot!"

Phil was hurt, indignant. With some stiffness he explained the danger of interrupting a seance of this sort, but Law remained obdurate.

"You can put over that second-night stuff with the greasers," he declared, sharply, "but not with me. So, Jose Sanchez has been to see you and you want to warn me. Is that it?"

"I don't know any such party," Strange protested. He eyed his caller for a moment; then with an abrupt change of manner he complained: "Say, Bo! What's the matter with you? I've got a reputation to protect, and I do things my own way. I'm getting set to slip you something, and you try to make me look like a sucker. Is that any way to act?"

"I prefer to talk to you when your eyes are open. I know all about—"

"You don't know nothing about anything," snapped the other. "Jose's got it in for Mrs. Austin."

"You said you didn't know him."

"Well, I don't. He's never been to see me in his life, but—his sweetheart has. Rosa Morales comes regular."

"Rosa! Jose's sweetheart!"

"Yes. Her and Jose have joined out together since you shot Panfilo, and they're framlin' something."

"What for, instances?"

The fortune-teller hesitated. "I only wish I knew," he said slowly. "It looks to be like a killing."

Dave nodded. "Probably is. Jose would like to get me, and of course the girl—"

"Oh, they don't aim to get you. You ain't the one they're after."

"No? Who, then?"

"I don't know nothing definite. In this business, you understand, a fellow has to put two and two together. All the same, I'm sure Jose ain't carryin' no epitaph for you. From what I've dug out of Rosa, he's acting for a third party—somebody with pull and a lot of coin—but who it is I don't know. Anyhow, he's cooking trouble for the Austins, and I want to stand from under."

New that the speaker had dropped all pretenses, he answered Dave's questions without evasion and told what he knew. It was not much, to Dave's way of thinking, but it was enough to give cause for thought, and when the men finally parted it was with the understanding that Strange would promptly communicate any further intelligence on this subject that came his way.

On the following day Dave's duties called him to Brownville, where court was in session. He had planned to leave by the morning train; but as he continued to meditate over Strange's words, he decided that, before going, he ought to advise Alaire of the fellow's suspicions in order that she might discharge Jose Sanchez and in other ways protect herself against his possible spite. Since the matter was one that could not well be talked over by telephone, Dave determined to go in person to Las Palmas that evening. Truth to say, he was hungry to see Alaire. By this time he had almost ceased to combat the feeling she aroused in him, and it was in obedience to an impulse far stronger than friendly anxiety that he hired a machine and, shortly after dark, took the river road.

The Fates are malicious jades. They delight in playing ill-natured pranks upon us. Not content with spinning and measuring and cutting the threads of our lives to suit themselves, they must also tangle the skein, causing us to cut capers to satisfy their whims.

At no time since meeting Alaire had Dave Law been more certain of his moral strength than on this evening; at no time had his grip upon himself seemed firmer. Nor had Alaire the least reason to doubt her self-control. Dave, to be sure, had appealed to her fancy and her interest; in fact, he so dominated her thoughts that the imaginary creature whom she called her dream-husband had gradually taken on his physical likeness. But the idea that she was in any way enamored of him had never entered his mind. In such wise do the Fates amuse themselves.

Alaire had gone to her favorite after-dinner refuge, a nook on one of the side galleries, where there was a wide, swinging wicker couch; and there, in a restful obscurity fragrant with flowers, she had prepared to spend the evening with her dreams.

She did not hear Dave's automobile arrive. Her first intimation of his presence came with the sound of his heel upon the porch. When he appeared, it was almost like the materialization of her uppermost thought—quite as if a figure from her fancy had stepped forth full-clad.

She rose and met him, smiling. "How did you know I wanted to see you?" she inquired.

Dave took her hand and looked down at her, framing a commonplace reply. But for some reason the words lay unspoken upon his tongue. Alaire's informal greeting, her parted lips, the welcoming light in her eyes, had sent them flying. It seemed to him that the dim half-light which illumined this nook emanated from her face and her person, that the fragrance which came to his nostrils was the perfume of her breath, and at the prompting of these thoughts all his smothered longings rose as if at a signal. As mutinous prisoners in a jail delivery overpower their guards, so did Dave's long-repressed emotions gain the upper hand of him now, and so swift was their uprising that he could not summon more than a feeble, panicky resistance.

The awkwardness of the pause which followed Alaire's inquiry strengthened the rebellious impulses within him, and quite unconsciously his friendly grasp upon her fingers tightened. For her part, as she saw this sudden change sweep over him, her own face altered and she felt something within her breast leap into life. No woman could have failed to read the meaning of his sudden agitation, and, strange to say, it worked a similar state of feeling in Alaire. She strove to control herself and to draw away, but instead found that her hand had answered his, and that her eyes were flashing recognition of his look. All in an instant she realized how deathly tired of her own struggle she had become, and experienced a reckless impulse to cast away all restraint and blindly meet his first advance. She had no time to question her yearnings; she seemed to understand only that this man offered her rest and security; that in his arms lay sanctuary.

To both it seemed that they stood there silently, hand in hand, for a very long time, though in reality there was scarcely a moment of hesitation on the part of either. A drunken, breathless instant of uncertainty, then Alaire was on Dave's breast, and his strength, his ardor, his desire, was throbbing through her. Her bare arms were about his neck; a sigh, the token of utter surrender, fluttered from her throat. She raised her face to his and their lips melted together.

Life in Sicily Odd Mixture.

The cities of Sicily deserve to be seen and described, each for itself. Palermo with its beautiful harbor, Taormina with its ruins and fountains, little Giardini, each of them is shrouded in history, radiant with the soft beauty of ripe age. But the country life of Sicily is a thing apart from all these. Here in the home of one of the oldest civilizations there flourishes today a primitive life, that is a mixture of old culture and a rudeness and simplicity still older. Sicily seems at once to touch the luxurious days of Rome at her height and the simplicity of the time of Romulus and Remus.

WAS ALL RUN DOWN

Funky Kidneys Caused Acute Suffering. Completely Recovered Since Using Doan's.

Mrs. Harry A. Lyon, 5 St. William St., Boston, Mass., says: "Doan's Kidney Pills have surely done me wonderful good. About two months prior to the birth of my baby, I had two convulsions and was taken to a hospital. Doctors said the convulsions were due to my kidneys not working properly."

"I had swelling of the feet and ankles so that I had to wear large-sized slippers. My back ached intensely. I was nervous and unable to sleep. I also suffered from awful headaches and felt weak, tired, languid, and run down. After I came home a friend suggested that I try Doan's Kidney Pills, and I got some. I soon noticed improvement; my back became stronger and I felt better in every way. I kept on taking Doan's and was cured. They are surely reliable."

Mrs. Lyon gave the above statement in May, 1915, and on March 12, 1917, she said:

"My cure has lasted. It took Doan's occasionally, however, as a strengthener for my kidneys."

PARKER'S HAIR BALM

A fastidious old gentleman was enjoying a cigar with a friend.

The guest, having reached the end of his Havana, hurled the stump onto the well-kept lawn.

"What made you throw your cigar there?" said the old man, angrily. "See how unsightly it is on the lovely grass."

"That surely won't do any harm," said the other, "for nobody would notice a little thing like that."

"My dear fellow," solemnly replied the old grumbler, "it's just little things like these that constitute tidiness, and tidiness is half the comfort of life."

His friend said no more for a time, and in a few moments he arose hurriedly, disappeared, and was absent for a full twenty minutes.

"Where on earth have you been?" said his host, when he returned at last.

"Oh, I've only been across the meadow to spit in the river."

Luck.

"Are you superstitious?"

"I believe some men are luckier than others. But I never in my life met one who would own up that he was lucky. So what's the difference?"

Not There.

"You are praising up this suite as extremely desirable, but I can't see the point."

"Of course not, ma'am. This is a fat."

(By H. W. CLARK, Colorado Agricultural College, Fort Collins, Colo.)

Save all the heifer calves and plan to raise more pigs, lambs, colts, calves and chickens next year than you did this year. Do you know the world is being depleted of its live stock?

Keep your pigs growing. They should weigh 200 pounds at six months of age and they are worth $16 a hundred now. Ten good pigs are worth $300.

Give your hogs all the alfalfa or clover they will eat winter and summer. Give them skim milk, whey, some grain, or anything else you have but be sure to give them all they can eat.

Keep the calves growing. Give them some grain, separate from milk, and all the good hay they can eat. Veal is now worth 16 cents a pound. A good veal is worth $85.

Feed the lambs well. They are worth $20 apiece and wool is worth from 50 cents to 70 cents a pound.

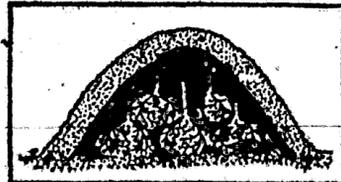

Feed the cows well. Keep them milking. You may dislike to see them eat so much, but please give them all they can eat all the time. The price of milk, butter and cheese is going out of sight. Butterfat may be worth $1 a pound before long.

Feed and handle the mares so that you will save all the colts next spring. Good horses are worth $75 a head more than they were a year ago. A good horse is worth $300.

WINTER FARM STORAGE PITS

Much Fruit and Vegetables Lost Because of Too High or Too Low Temperature of Cellar.

The country has had a load of advice about canning and drying food for winter use. Let us not forget the facts about winter farm storage for fruit and vegetables. Many farmers grow good crops of garden vegetables, and then lose them because the storage place is too hot or too cold. We want to learn all we can about pits and dug-outs and cellars for holding garden and orchard food. Here is the picture of a cabbage pit taken from a Colorado bulletin. The cabbages are stored by placing them head down three in a row and two on top, making a tier of five cabbages, the roots extending in the air. The pile may be as long as necessary. Several inches of straw or leaves should then be put over the cabbage and the same amount of earth thrown on them. Cabbage may be kept frozen solid without injury to the head, provided it is thawed out very gradually.—Rural New Yorker.

FEED SHEEP IN CORNFIELD

No Fear of Animals Pulling or Riding Down Corn If Volunteer Grass Is Abundant.

There is not usually much liability of sheep pulling or riding down corn when the pasture of weeds and volunteer grasses is abundant. Young sheep are less liable to work on the corn than the old ones.

TERM "COLIC" IS VAGUE ONE

Impossible to Give One Remedy to Apply to All Affections Commonly Termed "Colic."

(By H. S. BAKINS, Colorado Agricultural College, Fort Collins, Colo.)

The term "colic" is a vague one and is generally meaningless. In the horse there are ten common affections of the intestines, four of the stomach, three of the generative system, four of the urinary organs, three of the rectum and seven miscellaneous conditions making a total of 31 common conditions known as colic. There are also a number of conditions not frequently met which are also known as colic. It is therefore out of the question to suggest a remedy to cover all of these conditions, but each case should be studied, and after a correct diagnosis the proper steps in treatment may be taken.

Skill and Good Results.
Skill is shown and good results obtained when the gardener does each job at the right time and in the right way.

SILLO FACTS

Consider the silo:
It means larger profits from the cornfield.
It means less labor in feeding.
It means better health for the herd.
It means a larger milk flow from the dairy cow.
It means more beef at reduced cost.
It means less grain in the stock ration and more in the soldier's ration.

WORK HORSES AND SAVE MEN

Expert of Missouri College of Agriculture Outlines Plan to Solve Labor Problem.

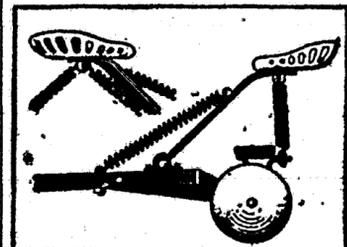

Labor is the limiting factor in crop production this year. Horses are relatively plentiful in comparison. O. R. Johnson of the department of farm management of the Missouri College of Agriculture suggests that farmers lay aside one-man-and-two-horse-tools and use those that require more horses so that more work per man can be done. One man with three horses to a 16-inch breaking plow will turn over three acres or less in a day. The same man with a gang plow consisting of two 12-inch bottoms will average 4% acres a day and will use one more horse. This means that by increasing the horse stock one-third, one man can increase his efficiency in breaking ground nearly 75 per cent.

Investigations have actually shown that a man on a riding implement will do more work in a day than the same man and the same team with implements that require him to walk. The use of bigger tools and thorough preparation of seed beds will also cut down the time required for cultivation of the corn crop. Cultivation is the operation which limits the amount of corn one man can grow. If a good seedbed is prepared, some time can be saved in cultivating the crop, and consequently more acres can be grown.

HANDY SAFETY SPRING SEAT

Contrivance Protects Driver From Severe Jolting and Eliminates Danger of Falling.

For cultivators and certain other farm implements, a shock-absorbing seat has been devised to protect a driver from severe jolting and to eliminate the danger of his being thrown from a machine. The seat post is pivoted to the tongue and held in position by three coil springs. One of these is stretched between the tongue and the upper part of the seat post,

Safety Spring Seat.

while the other two extend diagonally to either side, connecting the seat and the frame. This arrangement prevents undue movement in any direction and supports the seat without its having a rigid connection.—Popular Mechanics.

Grading Pays.

Be careful to grade and pack apples well for market. Only firm, sound fruit should be used and this should be of uniform size and quality, no matter whether the box or barrel is used.

Progress in New York.

For every acre of alfalfa that New York had 18 years ago it now has 83 acres. Nearly one farm in every three now has a silo, yet this showing could be vastly improved to the advantage of the state.

Straw as Feed.

Straw may be used in the feed ration for horses, sheep, and rougher cattle with silage and a small amount of grain. This cheapens the ration and saves good hay and grain for other uses.

Remedy for Soft Shells.

If your hens are laying soft-shelled eggs mix a little air-slaked lime in the mash. The hens must have more lime than they find for themselves and if it is not supplied soft-shelled eggs will be the result.

Lack of Exercise.

Lack of exercise will cause a horse to paw and kick in his stall.

Late cultivation kills weeds and retains moisture. Shallow cultivation will accomplish both.

How the Airman Fights.

The pitfalls and dangers which an aviator must avoid at the front are becoming more numerous every day. Anti-aircraft guns mounted on fast motor cars, chase around the country behind the lines and prevent the enemy airplanes and Zeppelins from remaining over our territory. This type of battery was responsible for the Zeppelins brought down at Compeigne in April, 1917, and Revinny, in April, 1918. In fact, this invention was one of the immediate causes of the Germans giving up their "strafing" with Zeppelins. The record for distance and height in hitting an airplane with this type of cannon is 15,000 feet in the air at 9,000 yards' distance across country. A very large crew is required to man one of these cannons. Besides the cannon a telephonist gets the report of the position over which the German machine is flying.—Carroll Dana Winslow, in Scribner's Magazine.

Advice to a Son.

"Well, well, well!" cried Mrs. Henpeck. "Our son is engaged to be married. We will write to the dear lad and congratulate him."

Mr. Henpeck agreed (he dare not do otherwise), and his lady picked up her pen.

"My darling boy," read the son, "what glorious news! Your father and I rejoice in your happiness. It has long been our greatest wish that you should marry some good woman. A good woman is heaven's most gracious gift to man. She brings out all the best in him, and helps him to suppress all that is evil. Her price is above rubles."

Then there was a postscript in a different handwriting:

"Your mother has gone for a stamp. Keep single, you young noodle."

Rolling Rapidly.

Tom Moore called on Campbell one evening, and in the course of conversation Campbell mentioned a poem he had just composed and the manuscript of which he showed to Moore. It was entitled "The Battle of Hohenlinden," the last line of the first verse of which read:

"Of Isaac rolling rapidly."

When Moore was departing he slipped on the stairs, which caused Campbell to ask:

"What's that? What's that?"
"I, sir, rolling rapidly!" instantly replied Moore.

A Letter From Washington

The Food Administrator Writes Us:

"The use of baking powder breads made of corn and other coarse flours instead of patent wheat flour is recommended by the Conservation Division of the Food Administration. The wheat needed for export is thus conserved, and at the same time healthful food for our own people is provided. The circulation of recipes providing for these uses would be of assistance in carrying out our plans."

The following recipes for Corn Bread and Rye Rolls save wheat flour and make attractive and wholesome food for every day when made with

DR. PRICE'S CREAM BAKING POWDER

CORN BREAD

3/4 cups corn meal
1/2 cup flour
1 level teaspoon Dr. Price's Baking Powder
1/2 teaspoon sugar
1 teaspoon salt
1 1/2 cups milk
1/2 teaspoon shortening
Mix thoroughly dry ingredients; add milk and melted shortening. Beat well; pour into greased pan and bake in hot oven about 25 minutes.

RYE ROLLS

2 cups rye flour
1/2 cup wheat flour
1 level teaspoon Dr. Price's Baking Powder
1/2 cup milk
1/2 teaspoon shortening
Mix dry ingredients together; add milk and melted shortening. Knead on floured board; shape into rolls. Put into greased pans and allow to stand in warm place 10 to 15 minutes. Bake in moderate oven 25 to 30 minutes.

YOUR FLAG AND MINE.

Is There Art in America?

I resent and resent with all my might the fashionable assumption that art and democracy are incompatible, and that we must turn to Europe for sustenance, that there is no manna in the wilderness. The English novelists seem to have an advantage over ours. Whether this is because our genius does not naturally turn to the leisurely form, or our scattered country is harder to reflect than the compact England, or the English schools are better equipped to teach amiable, containing writing, I do not know.

But it is patent that we do finer work in the short story than Englishmen are doing. And in poetry I believe we are on the eve of catching up with the British, if not excelling them, not yet in craftsmanship, but in vision. England has produced in half a century no sculptor comparable to Augustine Saint-Gaudens. And yet last winter I heard a man who had been art critic on the Manchester Guardian chirpily ask, "Saint-Gaudens? Who is he?" It is not always the states that, in matters of art, are the provinces.—Witter Bynner.

The El Paso and Southwestern has purchased $500,000 of the second Liberty Bond series, and divided it among towns along its lines. The Carrizozo Exchange Bank purchases $25,000 for the road, the others so far known are, First National Bank, Santa Fe, $25,000; First National, Tucumcari, $25,000; Bank of Tyrone, $12,500; Bank of Deming, $12,500; Alamogordo State Bank, $12,500; First National Santa Rosa, $12,500, a total of $125,000 so far credited to New Mexico. This distribution, is in accordance with a policy adopted by the E.P. & S. W. with its subscription to the first Liberty Loan, and that it is a good one, is shown by the fact that the Southern Pacific has announced a purchase of $50,000 to be credited to New Mexico, and other roads are falling into line.

As a peace maker La Follette smiles as he recalls the horrors of the Lusitania.

"The door of peace may be opened by the German people at any time."

HOW DOES IT CONCERN ME?

A fair question, always. Let us think for a while how the War and the Liberty Loan concerns the farmer. We want to war with Germany partly because the rulers of that country refused to let us send to Europe our ships laden with grain and cotton. They sunk the ships and cruelly murdered our sailors. Now suppose we allowed them to stop all our shipping, where would you sell some of your goods? They would be sold in foreign countries, with the result that you would get nothing like the prices which you get today. It is the enormous demand for what you produce, that is securing you high prices. If this demand were cut off, down would go prices. This war is being waged partly that you may obtain fair prices for your goods.

Farmers have been kept down in the matter of prices quite long enough, and the government and the people of this country, are not going to let a foreign power interfere with their business—which is your business.

Having entered the war in order that we may have the right to send your goods to any part of the world, what is going to happen if we lose the war? Prices of farm produce will drop; the Germans will impose taxation upon you which will cripple you for the next twenty years. Worse than that, if the Germans get over here, they will treat you in just the same way as they have the farmers of Northern France and Belgium. In these sections farm houses have been shot to pieces, crops wasted and burned; even fruit trees chopped down, the cattle stolen, the men sent into slavery to work for German masters, their women ill-treated in ways that cannot be talked of in print, their little children have had their hands chopped off in order that they may never fight for their country, or do any more useful work again.

You may say "such things will not happen here." They said this in France and in Belgium. Such things will happen here just as sure as you are alive, unless we smash the Germans so that they are utterly unable to reach the shores of this country. The German fleet and the German army will take just one week to get here if we are beaten. They have made up their minds that America shall pay for this war. They have made up their minds that our wealthy men shall give their money, and that you farmers shall provide the food for their armies and their people at home.

After thinking over these facts, is there a farmer who will stand forward and say "This war does not concern me?"

You have money that you do not need until next spring. Loan it to the government at good interest. When you want the money back again, you can borrow on your bond, or sell it for what you gave for it. Uncle Sam will take care of your money until you need it and pay you interest on it, and you will be protecting yourself and your business by loaning him the money.

Go and buy a Liberty Bond tomorrow. Don't put it off—things that are put off often do not get done at all. Tomorrow.

November Cosmopolitan

The November Cosmopolitan, now on sale, offers a literary banquet.

In the "Phantom Parasite" in the November Cosmopolitan Arthur B. Reeve has woven a fantastic tale around a base German plot to destroy the food supply of America by ruining the crops.

The Penrod stories in Cosmopolitan are touching the high water mark of boy literature, and Penrod's dog "Duke" is sure enough boy's dog with about as much pedigree as a field mouse.

Dana Gatlin is one of the most charming romantic writers in America. A story from his pen is like a touch of romance gently interrupting the sordid everydayness of real life.

We have often wondered, and we didn't know exactly how to express what we felt about it until Arnold Bennett told us in "The Meaning of Frocks" in the November Cosmopolitan.

The Oscuro Womans Club, formerly the Sew and Sew Club, met at the home of Mrs. Burns (depot) Saturday. Nearly all the members were present. Miss Schimpff of Carrizozo and Mrs. Herbert Edwards of Maricopa, Arizona, were there. It is an old saying that only Yankees can make good pumpkin pie, but all present know that is a mistake.

Mrs. Richardson has resigned her position as chef at the Burns hotel.

When C. H. Thornton got to Carrizozo with his cattle he found no car there and was obliged to drive them home again. This was an expensive operation and one that is not calculated to put much fat on the cattle.

R. W. Burns went to El Paso this week to take the examination for enlistment in the aviation corps. Most of us are willing to postpone learning to fly until we get our golden wings.

Looks now as if the kaiser and his silent partner, God, would soon have the whole world arrayed against them.

Ed Howser has taken a position in Burns' store for a short time.

Dr. Ranniger butchered a two-year-old this week that was actually fat. But then the steer had been running in Earl Black's pasture and the scenery is beautiful from there.

NOGAL NOTES

The Bender and Branum mine has shut down indefinitely.

The Vera Cruz mine is working everyday. All windows and doors at the mine have been destroyed.

Uncle Tom Henley just finished putting away his turnip crop, it estimates four thousand pounds of the finest quality.

House room in Nogal is so scarce that four families are now living at the old Brown hotel.

On the nineteenth of this month, we witnessed the first killing frost and it was a big one.

All the housewives in this precinct have signed the food preservation cards.

The much talked of water on the McDonald claim, in the cedars, proved to be a failure. The water being drawn out of it, it failed to replenish.

The families of Jess May and B. E. Peacock, have moved into the hotel at Nogal, in order to be handy to the district school.

There are many more coyotes in this vicinity, than your correspondent has known of for the last thirty

The First National Bank building is now completed and the bank officials are now duly installed therein. Carrizozo is proud of its new bank and its efficient business men.

Hon. Chas. G. Gilbert, prominent attorney of Roswell, delivered an interesting talk at the Baptist church Sunday night to large audience. Mr. Gilbert is well known in this vicinity, he having spent the greater part of his life in this section of the country. While in the city Mr. Gilbert made arrangements to open a branch law office in Carrizozo.

Two weeks ago both papers of our town printed the glad tidings of a wedding ceremony performed by the dignified justice of the peace A. H. Harvey. The contracting parties were both of Roswell, but dame rumor now has it that before we went to press old gloom stepped in and untied the knot, and so the old quotation of the immortal Riley is repeated, "Howdy do and then goodbye."

Liberty Bond Day was patriotically observed in Carrizozo Wednesday. By order of Mayor Lutz all business was suspended in the afternoon and the school children were given a half holiday. The children formed a procession at the court house and, with Mayor Lutz and Professor Conway as leaders, marched through the business districts of the town carrying banners on which were inscribed, "Buy a Liberty Bond Today."

Mobilizing for the War

Your Uncle Sam is getting ready to fight.

All over the country, hundreds of thousands of artisans are busy with war preparations. Great warships are sliding off the ways; navy yards and arsenals are working night and day; great mobilization camps are springing up as if by magic; everywhere the vast resources of the Nation are being gathered together for war.

All over the Bell telephone system, thousands of employes are busily engaged in all branches of telephone activity, to keep pace with the extraordinary telephone needs of the Nation. Everywhere poles are being set and wires strung, central-office equipment increased, new long distance lines constructed between important points and telephone facilities increased.

The greater and more varied the Government's war activities become, the greater will be the demands upon the Bell system for service. With the increased Government requirements, there will be greater demands for commercial service.

The scarcity of material and labor have set definite limits to the amount of new construction, and the needs of the individual must be subordinated to those of the Nation.

It is going to be harder to supply new telephones, extension telephones and to put up wire to new telephone stations, because of the vast amount of telephone equipment devoted to the service of the Government, and because the Bell organization has contributed heavily to the draft, and many of our technically trained men have voluntarily joined the colors.

When you use the telephone, we ask you to remember the patriotic service we are rendering the Government, the extraordinary conditions we are facing, and to help us maintain good service by a conservative use of your telephone and equipment.

Where Croesus Cashed His Checks

(BY ELMER MURCH IN BOSTON TRANSCRIPT)

Nowadays, when everyone is adjured to save every spare dollar for the rainy day, it is interesting to know how rich and poor of ancient times conducted their banks and banking.

EVER since man began to collect gold and jewels he has been engaged in designing and building strong boxes in which to keep them safely. Designing persons are always trying to secure what does not rightfully belong to them and there never has been a relaxation from the efforts to keep valuables from the reach of such unscrupulous persons. The result of the thousands of years of such efforts is the modern safe deposit vaults.

The history of man's efforts to retain possession of the gold and jewels he had accumulated is romantic and fascinating, from the time when he used to bury them to the present day. A local trust company has issued an attractively illustrated account of these efforts, which was gotten up for it and copyrighted by a Boston printing company. By their courtesy the following has been prepared:

That burying treasure was once the ordinary method of concealment is indicated by such references as appear in the thirteenth chapter of St. Matthew: "The kingdom of heaven is like unto treasure hid in a field; the which when a man hath found, he hideth, and for joy thereof goeth and selleth all that he hath, and buyeth that field." Syria and other eastern countries are said to be full of treasure buried before battles and never dug up. No one can estimate the world's buried treasure.

As soon as America was discovered it was overrun with Spanish adventurers attracted by stories of the buried treasure of the South American Indians. The aborigines of Columbia, the Chibchas, built mounds in memory of their dead and filled them with sacrificial stores of gold and jewels. The invaders secured immense booty from these mounds, and it is said that one chief gave up treasure worth $18,000, another $20,000 worth in gold strips and still another $35,000 worth of emeralds and gold. But it was the booty from the sacred lake of Guatavita that the Spaniards most desired. At the great religious festivals on this lake it is said that offerings of gold, silver and gems were thrown into the water to appease the serpent reputed to dwell at the bottom.

Although various efforts were made by Spaniards to drain the lake and secure the gold and gems it was not until seventeen years ago that an English company secured leased rights from Colombia and succeeded in draining off the water. It has been estimated that there are on the bottom of the lake 120,000,000 pounds of gold, however correct that may be. Many thousand dollars' worth already have been recovered.

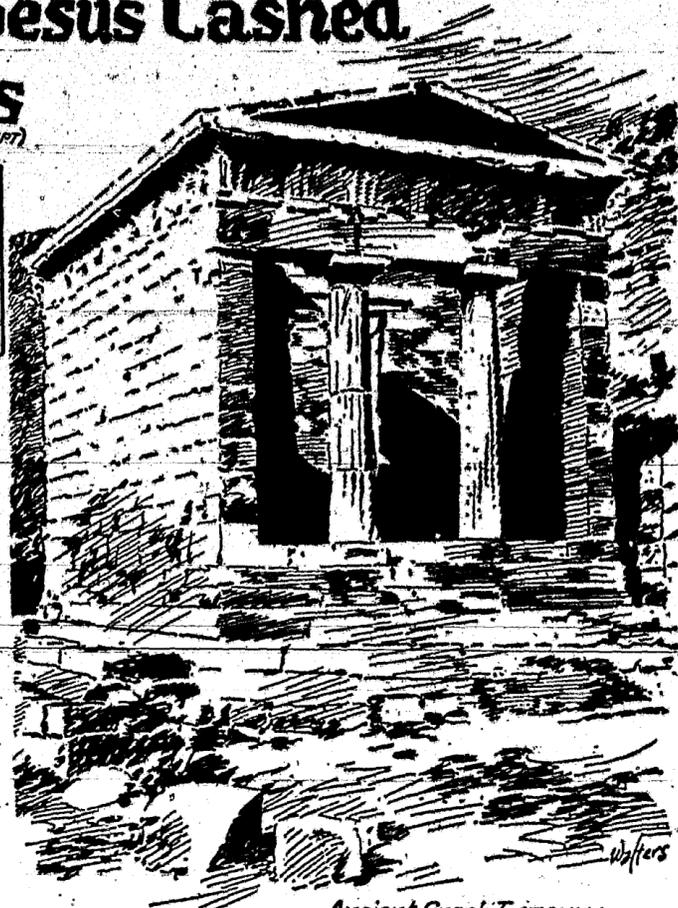

Odd Hiding Places.

Stories are told of other treasures hidden and never recovered, including the $15,000,000 national treasure of Peru, then it is pointed out that gradually man became aware that better protection must be afforded. The Egyptians concealed much in the soft walls and floors of their houses, probably to outwit the tax gatherers, who called not infrequently. The Egyptians had wooden chests for clothing and family treasures, but they used them little for keeping gold and jewels.

In Egypt the church and state were identical, and the crown jewels and public revenue, as well as the sacrificial offerings, were kept in the well-built treasure houses within the temples, the only buildings in the country erected with durable materials. The earliest public treasury of which there is public record belonged to Rameses III, who is reputed to have reigned about 1200 B. C. It was a large stone affair and vaulted. The treasure was kept in clay vases with covers in the form of human heads. Among the temples with secret crypts was the one of granite, at Edfu.

Keys recently found in the ruins at Thebes with straight shanks five inches long and a bar at right angles with three teeth prove that the Egyptians were familiar with certain principles of lock-making until lately supposed to be modern ideas; it is evident that they used tumblers to hold the bolt fast until moved by the key. Keys were first designed only to move the bolt and were not removable. The first mention of a key to be taken from a lock occurs in Judges, 3:23-25; used to fasten the summer parlor of Eglon, king of Moab.

Treasures of Greek temples still stand. The oldest and the one best preserved is at the oracle of Delphi, built in 655 B. C. It guarded the gifts brought to the shrine. The state treasury of Athens was in the Opisthodomos, a chamber in the back part of the Parthenon, separated from the rest of the temple by heavy bronze doors. Once in four years inventories were taken of the contents of the treasure house. In 431 B. C. Pericles said that there were 6000 tons of coined money on the Acropolis.

Ancient Greek Treasury

Savings in "Thrift" Boxes.

Arrangements for guarding the treasure in the sanctuary of Apollo at Delos were absurdly inadequate in the earliest days. The Greek word for thief, tolkorikos, means one who digs through the wall, suggests that premeditated burglary was not uncommon. Chests were the depositories for valuables among the Greeks. Often they were very elaborate. The Romans evidently made considerable progress towards security, their locks being more efficient than any known to the Greeks. The Roman strong boxes excavated at Pompeii show that they were often of wood, iron bound, and fastened to a block of granite by rods. In Rome, as in Egypt and in Greece, the public funds were placed in temples for safe keeping. The state treasury of Rome, the Aeararium, was in the temple of Saturn. From Roman days to the present century the poor kept their savings in small "thrift" boxes—receptacles of pottery holding from a pint to a quart with only one opening, a small slot. Savings could not be removed without breaking the receptacle. These pottery receptacles often took on odd shapes, pigs, cats, fish, etc. Modifications of the Roman strong box were used as treasure chests in all the countries of Europe during the middle ages and down into the last century. Puzzle locks were one of the developments of early days.

When banking started in Florence in the thirteenth century and large sums of money began to be accumulated by the money lenders safeguarding of valuables became more imperative. Necessity began invention and gradually, through the centuries, progress has been made toward safe-locking devices and veritable strongholds in which to keep gold, silver and all valuables. Yet at the beginning of the nineteenth century strong boxes were not much more secure than those of several centuries before, though they looked more formidable with spikes and iron bands. No serious attempt had been made to secure fireproofing, but the increase in paper money, bonds and stocks and other evidences of indebtedness written on paper made progress in fireproofing essential. The first attempt to secure real fireproof safes took place in France, where they were made with double walls, the space between being filled with non-conducting materials.

The First Safe Deposit Vaults.

Successful burglaries and great confiscations gave impetus to making safes stronger and brought about the first safe deposit vaults. It was a battle royal between burglars and safe and vault makers for years, but now the latter seem to have completely overcome the burglars.

The highest skill of the safe maker is now devoted to making strong rooms or safe deposit vaults for banks, says the pamphlet. The early vaults were merely rooms of brick or masonry fitted with a safe door of large dimensions. The next step was to line these rooms with metal. Such vaults were possessed by many banks. The first public safe deposit vaults in the United States were built in 1866 for Col. Francis H. Jenks and were located at 140-2 Broadway, New York. The lowest rental charged for these vaults was $20 a year. Two years later Col. Henry Lee built the Union safe deposit vaults, the first of their kind in Boston, at 40 State street. In 1871 there were six safe deposit companies in the country.

At first only a small part of the public appreciated its need for the protection offered by these fireproof vaults. But the great Boston fire of 1872 proved an impressive object lesson. Guarded by troops, the Union safe deposit vaults were a center of excitement. Frantic box-holders, alarmed by the annihilation of property on every side, had to be forcibly restrained from taking possession of their valuables. After the fire was over it was found that properly constructed vaults preserved their contents unharmed, while safes of the very best make could offer no effectual resistance to the fire. This conclusion has been confirmed by every great fire, notably the fires of Baltimore and San Francisco.

The structural strength of safe deposit vaults has been gradually increased to a point exceeding all possible demands upon it. A vault made of solid plates of manganese several inches thick and nine feet square, so hard that it cannot be machined once it is cast, is encased in a concrete wall two feet thick. The vault rests upon a foundation especially prepared for it and is usually so constructed as to be entirely separate from the walls, floor and ceiling of the building in which it stands, so that it may be patrolled on all sides by watchmen who are on duty day and night. The structure of steel has thick double doors with complicated locks of which only one person knows the secret, or the secret may be divided between two or more persons, no one having the entire combination. The inner door is provided with a lock set on different combination from the outer and known only to another person or set of persons, and this will work only upon the running down of a clockwork mechanism at a certain prearranged time. Thus at least two responsible persons are required to open the vault, and they cannot do it between time of closing and that set for opening.

The time lock obviates the possibility of a person being compelled by burglars to open the vault, and its construction also prevents the insertion of an explosive.

During business hours these heavy double doors stand open, and an inner door or gate of light grided construction is used. The inside walls of the vault are lined with steel compartments of various sizes. To gain access to one of the boxes kept in these compartments two keys are needed. The custodian has a key which must be turned in the lock before the key of the tenant will open it. The key to each compartment is different, and no tenant can open any box but his own, nor even that without the assistance of the person in charge. No tenant can enter the vault or gain access to his own rented compartment without being accompanied by the custodian. In addition to these safeguards, efficient burglar alarms are provided which give immediate notice of any tampering with the vault.

DADDY'S EVENING FAIRY TALE

BY MARY GRAHAM BONNER

PRAIRIE DOGS.

"Of course," said the prairie dog, "it is not nearly time to go to bed as yet, but I love to think of it."

They Are Always Very Cheerful.

"You don't change your ways in the zoo, do you?" asked the bear from his yard some little distance away. "No," said the prairie dog. "I care about sleep no matter where I am."

"I like to sleep myself," said the bear, "but somehow in the zoo I can't think of going to sleep for the winter. I keep getting regular meals and I just take naps and doze. But I don't go off for a long, long sleep as I would if I were in the woods."

"It doesn't make any difference to me where I am," said the prairie dog. "No, it makes not the least bit of difference," said several other prairie dogs who had come to listen to the talk.

"How do you manage it?" asked the bear. "You see we can't eat enough ahead the way we do when we are in the forests. Here there is just enough but not too much and we don't get so dreadfully sleepy. Don't you eat all winter?"

"Sometimes," said the prairie dogs together.

"Tell me about it," growled the bear. "You see," said one of the prairie dogs who had been listening so far, "we build holes right in this yard of ours. We go into the ground and sleep in our holes until the warm weather of spring comes. The keeper brushes the snow off our holes, so we have been told."

"And then we haven't awakened until the spring and the warm days have come."

"The warm days are still here," said the bear. "Why are you talking of going to sleep?"

"I said I just liked to think of it," said the prairie dog.

"Yes, so do we all," said the others. "We like to think of our buried food, too, which we have begun to hide lately. Ah, winter, food and sleep will soon be here," said the speaker among the prairie dogs.

"Oh, you've hidden food, have you?" asked the bear.

"Of course," said the prairie dog. And they all danced and played about for they were very happy. The prairie dogs are one of the happiest of animals and they are always very cheerful and pleasant.

"You have such funny tails," said the bear.

"Yes," said the prairie dog, "we have. They were given to us so as to let folks know we always felt like laughing. They are such absurd tails and they make everyone feel jolly and amused."

Just then all of the prairie dogs began to bark and their barking sounded as if they were laughing at some huge joke.

"What is it?" growled the bear. "We were thinking of our tails," they barked. "We know how to smile and laugh with our tails—don't we?"

And from the looks of the funny little tails the bear certainly thought they looked as though they were always laughing.

"It's a lucky thing," said the speaker prairie dog, "to be able to laugh backwards and forwards. We can bark and laugh with our voices and our tails, too!"

"Then you shouldn't begin to think of going to sleep for the winter," said the bear. "You should be happy and look forward to a month or two of outdoor fun and play."

"We do," said the speaker prairie dog. "We look forward to the fall immensely. We shall have a jolly time, but we shall love it when it gets cold, too, and we can burrow down into our holes."

But as the days were still warm the prairie dogs joined in all the fun there was to be had, and so happy did they seem, that the bear from his den often looked over and wondered if they were still thinking and dreaming of the time when they should go to sleep.

He couldn't quite decide the question. But the whole truth was that the prairie dogs are happy all the time whether awake or asleep, and they look forward to all the days—winter and summer, playing or curled up in the holes.

You Have Such Funny Tails, Said the Bear.

The prison visitor on his usual rounds noticed that a new man occupied a cell that had been empty for some time.

Wanted it Cut Down.
Mrs. Stickitt, a lady notorious for her saving habits, one morning entered the doctor's office, leading by the hand a stoutly-built boy nine years of age and of exceedingly healthy appearance.

"Well, Mrs. Stickitt," said the doctor, "who's my patient? I don't seem to recognize his face. Not a village boy, is he?"

"No, doctor; my nevy from town."

"Not much wrong with him, I should say," laughed the doctor, pinching his red cheeks.

"It's about his appetite, doctor," said the boy's aunt in a low tone.

"What?" exclaimed the doctor, staring at the well-fed young patient.

"Surely he doesn't need an appetizer?"

"Good gracious, no, doctor!" replied the lady, in horrified accents. "I want you to give me something to make his appetite less. He'll eat me out of house afore his month's holiday is up if his appetite ain't cut down!"

What You Waste Will Buy a LIBERTY BOND

We all spend too much money on "unnecessaries." The country needs some of the money you spend on pleasures, which, though harmless, you CAN manage without.

For your own sake—save this money, and put it into a Liberty Bond.

The Bond is as good as a bank account. It is yours to borrow on, to sell, to do as you like with.

Do your duty to yourself and your country by buying a LIBERTY BOND
