UNDER THE FLAG AND THE CROSS, “WE MUST WIN!”

What does it mean to you to know that your American Red Cross:

Is supporting 50,000 French children. Sends supplies to 8,423 French military hospitals. Provides 2,000 French hospitals with surgical dressings. Is operating thirty canteens at the front line. Is operating six other canteens at French railway junctions serving 30,000 French soldiers a day. Operates a movable hospital in four units, accommodating 1,000 men. Is operating a children's refuge in one part of the war zone; and in another a medical center and traveling dispensary, both capable of accommodating more than 2,000 children. Has opened a long chain of warehouses stocked with hospital supplies, food, soldiers' comforts, tobacco, blankets, etc., all the way from the seaboard to the Swiss frontier. Has warehouse capacity for 100,000 tons. Has 400 motor cars and operates seven garages, making all repairs. Has shipped 46 freight car loads of assorted supplies to Italy from France within two weeks after it began operating in the former country. Has a battery of motor ambulances at the Piave front four days after the United States declared war on Austria. Started a thousand different activities in Italy at the time that nation was in its most critical condition. Has established five hospitals in England and operates a workshop for hospital supplies employing 2,000 women. And that 120,000 cases of supplies have been received at the Paris headquarters of the American Red Cross from your various chapters scattered throughout the United States.

What does all this mean to you? And that is but a fraction of the work your Red Cross has done and is doing. It means that without this ceaseless, heroic work of the American Red Cross we could never win this war.

Without your Red Cross quick, vital help to keep Italy in the fight for Liberty, it would not have been possible. Without your Red Cross, thousands of French soldiers, now gallantly fighting for you at the front, would have died of wounds, exposure and lack of food.

And great and wonderful as has been the work of the American Red Cross in the past, still greater and more wonderful must it be in the future—for now your boy is in the fight. Your Red Cross cannot neglect France, England, Italy, Serbia and little Belgium.

It must give them all constantly increasing help, for the men of these countries have been fighting our battles. But now we must all redouble our efforts and sacrifices for our Red Cross because a million mothers' sons are going to carry the stars and stripes to the greatest victory God has ever given to men fighting for honor and victory. With the help of your Red Cross, your boy will win.

"I'm your master! Do you know it now?" he demanded.

She did not answer him. He looked at the red marks left by his fingers on her cheek, and the slight arousal in him a fresh, demonic passion. He raved. He shouted all the secrets of his life to her. He, the thief, the outlaw, had conquered the world!

Why should he fulfill his compact to keep the monsters within the bounds of Skjold fjord?

He had at first intended to. He had abandoned, under the sway of his passion for the girl, his dreams of world conquest. With Ida's love, he had even indulged in the idea of becoming an ordinary man. He had meant to take her to America and lose his identity there in some peaceful existence.

He had recognized that it is this same impulse which fills the world with oxen for men, patient beasts who might, with single-hearted purpose, become lords of their fate. But he had weighed his new hopes with the past and found them heavier.

Then the girl's coldness, her indifference, had convinced him that winning love was quite different from inventing scientific apparatus and discovering new laws. During the long, silent voyage to Norway he had realized that he could never win her. He could embrace only a cold form whose heart was another's.

And, with the awakening from his dream, the worst in the man—if one quality was worse than another—had come to the top. He meant to keep Ida and still achieve his purpose.

Donald's maneuver in bringing the herd to Norway by the submarine method had completely deceived MacBeard. He had thought all along that the monsters had followed his motorboat in obedience to his tuning fork. He had not heard the call of the queen, because its swift vibrations were audible as sound only for a very limited distance, in spite of their effect upon the men of the F55.

Now he resolved to lead the herd back to the European shores and complete his work of destruction. He had scattered the obsolete navy that was sent out against him. He would go onward with no idea of mercy. He would annihilate humanity. He would make himself sole master of mankind.

And Ida should be his mate, but not his equal, as he had planned. He would vent his rage on her. He would teach her his powers. When he was the only other human being existent, then perhaps she would begin to understand. He shouted all this to her. He overwhelped her with sarcasm and rhetoric.

Ida, however, missed the keenness of the points he made. She saw only a madman, foaming at the mouth, and she took pride in her sacrifice. She looked back toward Donald. She saw him between the two other figures upon the shore, very little, and very far away.

MacBeard saw the look and understood. He raised his hand again to strike her, but he refrained. Instead, he reached into the cabin of the motorboat and took his tuning forks from under the seat. And by that act of treachery he wrote the last page of his history.

He slung them about his neck, and, taking the rod, he sounded the G note to call the swarm together.

The note rang true across the waters. Exhausted by their efforts, the monsters were incapable any longer of condensing the hydrogen, but the impulses to reply remained. From every part of the inland sea they swarmed toward him.

The sea rose into a choppy surge. The motorboat, riding the waves like a cork, heaved and pitched. Ida saw MacBeard, his eyes alight with triumph, his face blazing with hatred, now above her, and now below, as he sat in the pitching stern.

But the death of the queen had been the death-call of the swarm; instinctively they were aware of it, and the single purpose that had animated the herd was gone. Anarchy had replaced order. The swarm had become mere blind mechanism, and devoid of purpose.

Anarchy possessed them, and it was furious, as everywhere. So it is in the state, when it obtains power. So in the human body, when the cells rebel and organized life fares out. The swarm came on, a mere discordant multitude.

MacBeard, seated in the stern, felt five sharp pricks upon the hand that dangled toward the water. He drew it back hurriedly. He imagined that some insect had stung him. Then a slipper lashed him across the face. Two more seized him about the body.

An instant later, and he was out of the boat, which, released from his weight and from the sea devils, righted itself again. Then he began the struggle for life which he had always feared. The nightmare that had brooded over his dreams had at last come true. The infuriated monsters had turned upon the author of the call!

He clung to the gunwale, calling wildly for aid. He heard Ida's screams. He knew that her impulse was to save him. Perhaps that was as bitter as the physical torment; perhaps some inkling of a higher law did reach his mind before the end.

But if it did, it was only a momentary flash of insight.

He felt the cold embrace of the leathery bodies. He heard the snapping jaws. He was torn from his hold, shrieking, and tossed into the air, from beast to beast. His cries were so frenzied that they even reached the ears of those who watched on the shore.

He shrieked and fought, but he had as much chance for life as primitive man caught by a herd of dinosaurs. For a few moments his bobbing body was visible, grotesquely sprawled upon the reddening waves. Then it was rent limb from limb.

It disappeared, and, fighting over their prey, the sea devils played the last act of their own drama. They fell upon each other. It was the tragedy of the hive—the annual massacre of the drones; only they were all drones. Nature had no more use for them, now that their queen was gone.

Never had such a spectacle been seen by man before. The entire face of the inland sea was a tumult of fighting monsters. The dead grew into visibility as they became thicker. The floating patches of white almost obscured the waves. And still the fight became more frenzied.

"I'm Your Master! Do You Know It Now?"

They tore each other and themselves, they lashed the waves into foam; animal debris floated from end to end of the fjord. As the dead drifted toward the shore the struggle became more furious in the heart of the sea.

Gradually it subsided. The last of the herd was gone. The battle that was to decide the fate of the world had been a civil one, and fought out without man's agency.

The lash of the waves drove the light motorboat toward the cliffs. It stranded not five hundred feet from where Donald and his friends, awestruck, had watched the progress of the titanic conflict. They ran toward it and pulled Ida from the thwarts. It had seemed incredible that she could have survived.

For a long time she lay motionless. Drenched with the brackish water, her hair unbound, she seemed to sleep in Donald's arms, while he and Davies worked frantically to revive her.

Davies raised his head at last and looked at Donald fixedly. Donald refused to meet his gaze.

They set to work again. For two hours longer they went through the movements of the resuscitation of the drowned. They stopped at last, exhausted. Davies laid his hand on Donald's shoulder; this time it was he who could not meet his friend's look. Suddenly they heard Clouts shouting, mad with joy.

"Look, sir! Mr. Davies, look!" he screamed.

They swung around. The girl's eyes had opened, and there was recognition in them.

She drew the first faint breath; her weak arms stole round Donald's neck.

And in the universal joy nobody minded Clouts' mouth organ, as he blew "Home, Sweet Home."

"Hooray!" he yelled, tossing up his cap at the finale. "Mr. Davies, sir, it's just as I told you, isn't it? We've brought her back to life, and now we're going to wake up ourselves."

"What do you mean, Clouts?" asked Davies.

"Why, sir, don't you see? We've just been picked up and landed from the Beotia. And we've been dreaming all sorts of deliriums about sea monsters, and suchlike. If I might be allowed, sir, I'll put it to Captain Paget. Ain't we just been rescued after torpedoing the cruiser, sir?" he asked. "Ain't the whole thing a dream?"

Donald looked up. "I don't know, Clouts," he said. "I think you may be right. But it's a happy one."

Davies looked at him in dismay. "Do you really mean that, Donald?" he asked. "Do you honestly think that we have dreamed all this?"

"It's as plausible as any other explanation," Donald replied. "I can't see why we shouldn't have. It's too preposterous—all that about the sea devils and that harmless crank MacBeard, who used to have newspaper rows with poor old Masterman. As likely as not we'll see him haunting the Inventors' club when we get back, quite ignorant of the part he has played in our lives. You know, dreams do do that—they put inconsequential people into absurdly important positions."

"But—hang it, Donald, how does Miss Kennedy happen to be here?"

"Why, wasn't she off board the Beotia?" Donald replied. "At any rate, if it's all true, what have we got to show for it?"

He had placed his arm across his

IMPORTANT TO BE ON TIME

Even the Biggest Men of Affairs Arrange Their Business on Punctuality as Safe Guide.

A young Kentuckian lost a big fortune by being 20 minutes late in keeping a business engagement, according to the Christian Herald.

The cheerless old fellow with the scythe always gets all that is coming to him. And there is many a bad scar on our fortunes where he has had to prod us up to the mark.

Time is cheap and we are apt to think we can slich it as we will. But it is always ourselves we rob, not time.

Maybe you can waste your own time by being late in keeping engagements and feel that the loss, if any, is your own affair. But it also is the affair of the man you keep waiting. You waste his time, too. If your time is worthless, maybe his is not. He may conclude that his time is worth more to him than you are.

In many cases it may not matter much. But one never knows until afterward whether it matters or not. And through false politeness we are usually assured that it does not matter even when it does.

Only the idle and careless, whose time is of the least value, can afford to waste it by looseness in keeping engagements.

It may be hard to acquire the fixed habit of always being on time, but it can be done, and it is worth while to do it.

Great business men have this habit. Men of great affairs, whose time is most completely taken up, are usually on time. It is they who know best the value of time and the importance of saving it by being prompt.

Photograph Frames.

For framing a single photograph for the wall, a novel idea is to place it in the upper part of a moderately large mat. When the picture is in sepi, the mat should be in tan or brown, the frame brown or gold. When the photograph is gray the mat should be also, with a gray or gold frame. A wide gray frame sometimes takes the place of a mat.

The back board may be covered with a harmonious plain material; a wire easel may be bought for a trifle and attached to the back through a slit made just to fit its clamp. The back is included in the grip binding at the sides and bottom; the top is left open for the insertion of the picture.

Without a Question. Many men opposed to vivisection have been known to "split the kitty."—Harvard Register.

breast, and at that moment he felt the crinkle of dampened paper in his inner pocket. He pulled out—the two pages of Masterman's letter.

Donald unfolded it. It was quite legible, in spite of the stains of sea water; but now for the first time he realized that he held not one page, but two. They had become stuck together in some manner, and Donald had not perceived the second page.

It was in the form of a postscript, and was the last sheet of the original manuscript, which Masterman, in his characteristic way, had inserted after the first. He had written:

But thank God, Donald, my boy, man will triumph after all. I thought the monsters were invulnerable, that nothing could oppose them. But the Lord knew what he was doing when he made them.

There will be only three weeks of suffering for man, Donald—three weeks. For the creatures live for their queen; they can hardly be said to have independent life. They are sterile, like the bees, and the queen has a life-span of three weeks alone. When she dies the old swarm destroys itself. If the queen can be captured, all will be well. The queen has three weeks in which to grow to maturity, fulfil the purpose of her existence, and die.

What a tragedy! Of course time may seem longer to her, but we deem our seventy years all too short. We are saved, Donald.

The letter rambled on, but Donald, without finishing it, handed it to Davies, who read it and gave it back.

"If MacBeard had known that—" he began.

"I think that 'it' is the rock on which he foundered," answered Donald. "He worked out everything mathematically, but he ignored the larger purpose of the Creator."

"Aye, aye, sir!" interpolated Sam Clouts, feeling in his pocket. "If you'll excuse me, sir, that motorboat seems wreck-proof, and I'd like to see whether it's still in good enough order to take us home."

Which proved to be the case. (THE END.)

OLD-STYLE BLOSSOMS PASSE

Were Valuable for Home Remedies in Days of Our Grandmothers and Herb Doctors.

With the exception of some of the daintier spring blossoms, our wild flowers are passed by without comment. Violets, hepaticas, bluebells, trilliums are still sought after and picked, the fall asters are gathered by some and the goldenrod is admired, but passing into disrepute on account of its hay-fever aggravations. There was a time, however, when grandmother was young, relates the Ohio State Journal, when most of our common field and wayside flowers were of prime importance in the household, in the shape of family bitters, physics and curealls.

Yarrow, a pest to the farmer and of doubtful beauty even to the wild flower lover, was at one time a most useful herb from which a tea was made that cured all sorts of ailments, from toothache to typhoid fever. From the boneset plant, so common along our streams now, a tea was also made which was a prime favorite in the curing of that common malady, "break-bone fever"—do not laugh—probably what we know today as gripe. Camomile, we call it dog fennel, was brewed into a tea as well, and was used as a tonic and blood purifier. Jamesonweed, a corruption of James-town weed, was valued by the settlers of that early village as a narcotic, and is still so used, for that matter. Self-heal, the little close-growing purple-flowered pest of our lawns, was used to relieve sufferers with quinsy and other throat afflictions. This plant belongs to the mint-family, and most of the mints were of use medicinally. Pennyroyal, spearmint, Oswego tea, bergamot, catnip and mother-wort were all of value to the simpler of a century or more ago.

Instruments of Precision. Accuracy is one of the most necessary qualifications of the present-day business girl—or so it would appear from the following conversation overheard the other day in the park: "So I answered the phone, and he said, 'Is Mr. X—there?' and I said, 'Yes, do you want to see him?' and then what do you think he said? He said, 'My dear girl, this is not a telescope; this is a telephone.'—Manchester Guardian.

She Overheard Him. "I didn't know golf was a gambling game." "It isn't." "It must be. I heard you saying that you broke 100 yesterday."

Grip Still Hanging On?

Back aches? Stomach sensitive? A little cough? No strength? Tire easily? All after effects of this dread malady. Yes, they are catarrhal. Grip is a catarrhal disease. You can never be well as long as catarrh remains in your system, weakening your whole body with stagnant blood and unhealthy secretions.

You Need PERUNA

It's the one tonic for the after effects of grip, because it is a catarrhal treatment of proved excellence. Take it to clear away all the effects of grip, to tone the digestion, clear up the inflamed membrane, regulate the bowels, and set you on the highway to complete recovery.

Perhaps one or more of your friends have found it valuable. Thousands of people in every state have, and have told us of it. Many thousands more have been helped at critical times by this reliable family medicine.

Prepared also in tablet form for your convenience. The Peruna Company, Columbus, Ohio.

IF GLUCOSE IS IN JELLY

Method by Which It is Detected is Simple and of Exceedingly Easy Application.

Glucose in fruit preserves may be discovered by the following method given by the Popular Science Monthly: In the case of jelly a teaspoonful should be dissolved in two tablespoonfuls of alcohol contained in a glass vessel. In the case of jam or marmalade the same process is carried out, but it is necessary to filter off the solid matter by running the mixture through a piece of muslin. Allow the solution to become perfectly cool and then add an equal volume, or a little more, of strong alcohol.

If glucose is present a dense white precipitate slowly settles down. Where no glucose has been employed, there is no precipitate, save, in some cases, a very trifling sediment of protein matter which, however, is so small that it could not possibly be mistaken for the sediment which glucose produces. The last named is not particularly harmful in itself, but it is very frequently used as an adulterant in supposedly pure preserves for extra profit.

The Reason for It. "Let that man down easy." "Why must it?" "Because he's hard up."

BACCALAURATE SERMON AND EXERCISES AT METHODIST CHURCH

Program Successfully Carried Out, Including Sermon by Pastor Lewelling—Students Display Merited Talent

Last Sunday night, the program for the Baccalaurate exercises was carried out at the Methodist Church to a large and appreciative audience. The ladies' quartette, consisting of the Misses Kimbell, White, Cooper and Mrs. Squier, rendered "From All That Dwells Beneath the Skies," with beautiful effect, and the prayer duet by the Misses Place and Cooper, received its share of deserving credit, and the choir singing, assisted by Mr. Gladney White at the piano, was well worthy of special mention.

The Baccalaurate sermon, delivered by Rev. Lewelling was an oratorical masterpiece; he selected for his subject "The Value of Man," and took for his text, "What is man that thou art mindful of him? And the son of man that thou visitest him?" He began with man's creation, setting forth the fact as this was the crowning act of creation and man the image and likeness of his maker, he holds a supreme place in the mind of God, and all his needs are properly supplied and his welfare provided for. He spoke of the power of the mind which is the paramount way in which man is the image of God, and said it never was intended that man should do otherwise than, walk and talk with him, as it was in the beginning. The speaker dwelt at length on the fact that our young people in keeping late hours, to which no harm was attached, would in time impair the safety of the health of both the physical and mental system, thus rendering them to a great extent incapable of performing the proper kind of work in the schools. He claimed that we should so support the schools as to make teaching a profession in the future instead of merely a stepping stone to something else. When this is done, he said, men will devote themselves to it as they do to law or medicine, and our educational work will move forward. He strongly defended compulsory education and while he believed in the foreigner entering our gates, they should be compelled to educate their children in our schools, regardless of their private wishes in the matter. The speaker wished it understood, that in some of the failures in school work he offered no criticism to the teachers, but rather expressed his sympathy for them, as a great many people seem inclined to turn over the moral and educational work to the schools and wash their hands of it all. He closed by saying: "If we want our children to be what God and humanity want them to be, we must develop them socially, morally, physically, mentally and spiritually. This alone brings man to his best, and fits him to fill the place for which he was created."

Cattlemen Active

As an emergency measure in order to conserve the beef production in New Mexico, which is of the highest importance to the government in carrying on the war, the New Mexico Cattle and Horse Growers' association here this morning telegraphed the state corporations committee at Santa Fe to secure emergency freight rates for the shipping of cattle from dry regions to where grass may be had.

Although the recent rains throughout the state broke the long drouth, some cattle men still entertain fear for future dry squalls. The asking for rates was discussed and approved by the executive board of the association at its meeting in Raton May 3.

The telegram sent today follows:

"State Corporations Committee, Santa Fe, N. M.

"Since it has become necessary for some of our members in the drouth districts to ship their cattle to grass, we urge that your honorable body do all things in your power to get an emergency freight rate for these cattle. The cattle will have to be returned to their former ranges, thus making double freight rates. It is absolutely essential that these cattle be moved to conserve the beef production.

Patriotic Zeal Prompts Record Breaking Trip

Patriotism moves in many ways, its wonders to perform; and last Friday being the day set for the last contingent of drafted men to start for the service, all arrangements for the entertainment Friday night were completed. As Mr. J. B. French always performs his share in patriotic affairs, had mapped out his part of the pleasant task of furnishing the "boys" a good time before they bid us good bye.

On the day mentioned, the business interests of Mr. French outside of the boundaries of Carrizozo suddenly demanded his attention, and could not be delayed. He started on his trip at about 3 o'clock in the afternoon, with a set determination to return for the "doings." Between the hours of 3 p. m. and 7 p. m. he made the trip of 75 miles, transacted his business affairs, and after his return shaved, dressed and appeared at the hall in plenty of time for the entertainment. Thus does the spirit of patriotism work wonders, where efforts prompted by other influences may fail.

Carrizozo Livestock Co. Sells "Lady Perfection."

The Carrizozo Livestock Commission Co. sold this week to Clarence Spence the finest mare ever disposed of within the boundaries of Carrizozo. She is a beautiful animal, and the price was high, but "Lady Perfection" was well worth it. When the Livestock Co. makes a sale, the party dealing with them will invariably secure a bargain, for they endeavor to handle only the best.

Will Conduct Revival

Rev. J. C. Jones, pastor of the Methodist Church of Albuquerque, will conduct revival services here beginning with Sunday, May 19th. He will assist Rev. Lewelling in his various undertakings as Evangelists usually do, and as he is a splendid pulpit orator, the public should be eager to hear him. The services will continue throughout the week and a lively interest is being manifested. Everybody should hear him.

Captain Queensberry

New Mexico pauses to salute the spirit of Captain Joseph Queensberry, whose body lies in a soldier's grave upon one of the battlefields of Europe.

It was his honor to be one of the first Americans to go into the front line trenches. It was his honor to belong to the first detachment to capture a German machine gun and German prisoners. It was his honor to be commended by General Pershing, commander-in-chief of the American Expeditionary Forces. Finally, it was his honor to give his life in the struggle for the freedom of the world.

Capitan Benefit

The Red Cross entertainment at the Schoolhouse Saturday night netted the management $53.50. It was a splendid show and much credit is due those who engineered the movement. —Capitan Mountaineer.

GOSLINGS RAISED IN EARLY SPRING

Fowls Should Be Allowed to Make Their Own Nests.

KEEP EGGS IN A COOL PLACE

Some Breeders Prefer to Use Hens for Hatching, as Geese Sometimes Become Difficult to Manage—Incubation Varies.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The successful raising of goslings should begin with feeding the geese an egg-producing ration during the latter part of the winter or early spring. The geese should be allowed to make their nests early in the spring on the floor of the poultry house, or in large boxes, barrels or shelters provided for the purpose.

The eggs should be collected daily and kept in a cool place where the contents will not evaporate too freely; if kept for some time they may be stored in loose bran. The first eggs are usually set under hens, while the last ones which the goose lays may be hatched either under hens or under the geese, if she gets broody. If the eggs are not removed from the nest in which the goose is laying she will usually stop laying sooner than if they are taken away. Some breeders prefer to raise all the goslings under hens, as geese sometimes become difficult to manage when allowed to hatch and rear their young. Hens used for hatching goose eggs must be dusted with insect powder and have good attention, as, in the case of geese, the period of incubation is longer than in that of fowls. Goose eggs may be hatched in incubators and the goslings successfully raised in brooders, although this is not a common practice.

Incubation of Goose Eggs.

The period of incubation of goose eggs varies from 28 to 30 days. Moisture should be added to the eggs after the first week if set under hens or in incubators; this is usually done by sprinkling the eggs or the nest with warm water. Four to six eggs are set under a hen and ten to thirteen under a goose. They may be tested about the tenth day, and those which are infertile or contain dead germs should be removed. They hatch slowly, especially under hens, and the goslings are usually removed as soon as hatched and kept in a warm place until the

Use the Waste Land.

Waste land along ditches, fences and in odd corners that cannot profitably be worked, should be planted to nut trees. Choice hickories, English walnuts, pecans for the South, and black walnuts for the North, are best to plant.

Work Every Idle Acre.

Every idle acre must be put to work. Clear up the brush patches, drain the low places, pull the stumps. Now is the time to lay the plans; order the material and get the work under way.

Old Seed is Good.

Don't be afraid to plant old melon, paprika, squash and cucumber seed this year. Seed eight years old will grow if it has been cared for.

Success in Beekeeping.

Success in beekeeping depends much upon the location, forebanded preparation, and a market for the product.

The manner in which the garden soil is prepared has much to do with one's success as a gardener.

process is over, when they are put back under the hen or goose. Some breeders who hatch with both geese and hens give all the goslings to the geese. Hens with goslings may be confined to the coop and the goslings allowed to range. The latter, especially if the weather is cold, are not usually allowed to go into water until they are several days old. In mild weather the hens are allowed to brood the goslings from seven to ten days, when the latter are able to take care of themselves. Good-sized growing coops, with board floors, should be provided for the goslings, and they must be protected from their enemies and given some attention when on range.

Feeding Geese and Goslings.

Geese are generally raised where they have a good grass range or pasture, as they are good grazers, and, except during the winter months, usually pick up most of their living. The pasture may be supplemented with light feeds of the common or home-grown grains or wet mash daily, the necessity and quantity of this feed depending on the pasture. Goslings do not need feed until they are 24 to 36 hours old, when they should be fed any of the mashes recommended for chickens or ducklings.

WAGE WAR ON WEEDS

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Good rotations and efficient farm practices will subdue weeds.

Three main principles of weed control must be observed: (1) Prevent weeds from maturing seed on the farm, (2) prevent the introduction of weed seeds on the farm, and (3) prevent perennial weeds from making top growth.

The principles are the main thing; the particular method employed is of lesser importance.

Next to the principles ranks the man behind them. Many men make a start to clear their farms of weeds but give up too soon. Often the campaign is stopped when success is in sight, and the weeds soon recover.

Clearing a farm of weeds, especially perennials, is no easy task; it requires more than average intelligence and perseverance. If, however, one faithfully carries out a plan of attack based on the above principles of weed control he can practically rid his farm of weeds without a great amount of extra labor and expense.

Weed control is frequently a community problem, and for the greatest permanent success co-operation among farmers is required.

PRODUCTION OF GOOD CREAM

First Essential is Cleanliness in Handling Milk Utensils—Second is to Keep Cool.

It is almost as easy to produce good cream as poor cream. The first essential is cleanliness in handling the milk utensils, particularly the separator. The second is in keeping the cream cool until delivered and making at least tri-weekly deliveries in summer.

CARE FOR CREAM SEPARATOR

Careful Washing After Each Use is Important—Boiler Will Furnish Hot Water.

Wash the separator carefully and thoroughly after each time it is used, and wash it immediately. Plenty of hot water easily can be made available by installing a little steam boiler in the milkhouse if you have quite a large establishment, or by the use of a common oil stove.

VEGETABLE MATTER FOR SOIL

Humus Provides Food and Breeding Places for Bacteria, Thus Providing Plant Food.

As a maximum supply of soil moisture is vital to the productivity of this soil, we must maintain a proper supply of decaying vegetable matter. Humus provides food and breeding places for the various soil bacteria which convert a portion of the organic matter into plant food. Its acids attack the soluble minerals which contain plant food and bring that food into available form in the soil moisture solution.

Reduce Manure Losses.

Manure losses may be reduced to a minimum by hauling it directly to the field with a tight-bottom manure spreader and spreading it thinly and evenly.

Use for Cabbage and Turnips.

No excuse for wasting cabbage leaves and turnips. The pigs and chickens relish a change.

DON'TS FOR HOME BUILDERS

There Are Many Things That Should Be Avoided by Those Planning New Houses.

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to the subject of building for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 117 Prairie Avenue, Chicago, Ill., and only enclose three-cent stamp for reply.

By WILLIAM A. RADFORD.

A few months ago a young Western ranchman returned to his home in a city in southern Illinois and was married to a girl of childhood acquaintance, she a maiden from a farm. That was the beginning of the comfortable little home which had its locus in the cottage shown in the illustration; the plans were sketched by the couple while they still rented.

The man of the house had spent 12 years in a two-room "shack" on the Western plains. There he accumulated a comfortable sum and there he learned something about inconvenience.

From the poorly lighted, cold and but fairly well ventilated place he called home he has been transformed into a comfortable cottage, with lots of light and ventilation and every convenience, a five-room bungalow, with a good start for three rooms upstairs. It only cost $2,800. The original price was fixed at $2,400, but a concrete basement and a few extras added to the cost.

The cottage is built on a lot 72 feet front and it is 28 by 42 feet with an eight-foot porch extending across the tween the dining room and kitchen, and two-story porch, the second floor for outdoor sleeping. There is nothing more healthful.

Don't fail to have a large sheltered porch off the living or dining room, to be screened in summer and glassed in for a sun parlor in the winter.

Don't build your living porch to the west; it would be sunny in the afternoon, just when the housewife is free to enjoy it. East, southwest, and south are the best exposures.

Don't regret it afterwards—make a may have an outside ice box. In this home the ice box is kept on the porch, but protected from the weather.

The bathroom is located between the two bedrooms and readily reached from every portion of the house. It is large enough and has a linen closet. In the hallway is a clothes chute.

Each of the bedrooms has large closets and with the spacious attic there is lots of room for storage purposes.

There is a basement under the entire house and it is concreted.

The attic is reached through an inclosed stairway with the floor landing near the center of the building.

Don'ts for Home Builders.

Don't invest in cheap plumbing and lavatory fittings. If you do you'll soon discover it to be the most "expensive" economy you ever tried.

Don't plan a wonderful variety of color schemes in decorating when the consistent use of simple color combinations gives far more pleasing and decorative results.

First Floor Plan.

entire front. The only change he would make if building another would possibly be to make it two feet wider.

The bungalow contains a living room, dining room, two bedrooms, and kitchen, a nice-sized bathroom, two large closets, a linen closet, a pantry, and an inclosed entrance at the rear porch.

Attic is Floored.

The entire attic is floored and uprights in place for lath and plaster whenever it is desired to finish the upstairs. The uprights, usually 2 by 4, were placed to give the roof necessary carrying strength.

The owner believes an additional two feet on the left side could be used to advantage in the living room, dining room, pantry and porch. The position of the girder, however, would not be changed.

The living room has a cheerful fireplace built of mottled brick. The outside chimney, as well as the lower portion of the porch posts and foundations, are built of vitrified paving brick. Another feature in the living room are two book shelves built into the colonnades between living room and dining room.

The pantry is conveniently built be-convenience as a handy place for rubbers, porch cushions, children's playthings, etc.

Don't be prejudiced; glazed Dutch doors (cut horizontally through the middle into two parts) are better than French windows to open out onto a sleeping porch. The half doors permit a nicer regulation of cold air.

Don't miss having a laundry chute from the bedroom floor to the basement. It is the greatest convenience in the house.

Somewhat Mercenary.

Donald was having a birthday party. The children were all enjoying themselves when the doorbell rang. Jumping up, Donald went to the door. Standing looking at the child, he said: "Say, mamma, Freddie is here, but he didn't bring me a present—should I let him in?"

HOW TO AVOID BACKACHE AND NERVOUSNESS

Told by Mrs. Lynch From Own Experience.

Providence, R. I.—"I was all run down in health, was nervous, had headaches, my back ached all the time. I was tired and had no ambition for anything. I had taken a number of medicines which did me no good. One day I read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and what it had done for women, so I tried it. My nervousness and backache and headaches disappeared. I gained in weight and feel fine, so I can honestly recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to any woman who is suffering as I was."—Mrs. ADELINA B. LYNCH, 100 Plain St., Providence, R. I. Backache and nervousness are symptoms or nature's warnings, which indicate a functional disturbance or an unhealthy condition which often develops into a more serious ailment.

Women in this condition should not continue to drag along without help, but profit by Mrs. Lynch's experience, and try this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—and for special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Med. Co., Lynn, Mass.

Continued

After the Battle of Hill 60, there were so very few survivors left, that my description of the battle ought to be interesting to many people. This particular fight was the fiercest on the Western front, and the bloodiest and most murderous battle during the first two years of the war. Then follows the Second Battle of Ypres, where we fought along with the Canadians, and the Germans outnumbered us ten to one, but we held to our line for four days and nights, until we had but six hundred men left on a five mile front. After this battle we spent three months in the trenches without a rest, at St. Eloi, until the enemy sent a huge cloud of poison gas, and I received a stomach full, and was sent to Blighty. Here I remained a year in a hospital.

Chapters of this remarkable book are: Chapter 1—Early training at Crowbaugh; 2—We sail for France and join our regiment; 3—We take over billets—First march to the trenches; 4—How to get in a trench; 5—What we did the first time in the trenches; 6—We take over more trenches and things begin to get exciting; 7—Back at Messines; 8—"Plugstreet"; 9—We move to Ypres; 10—In hotter quarters; 11—"Hill 60" and the railroad dugouts; 12—Through Hell and Shell; 13—The battle of Hill 60; 14—Gas!! 15—The second Battle of Ypres; 16—Not many left but Still Smiling; 17—Three months at St. Eloi; 19—Gassed!!! 20—England, Blighty and home at last.

There is possibility of the public being treated to a public reading in the near future, the arrangements of which will appear later on.

Entertainment Novel

Last Friday night, the boys who were on the list to enter the service, were given a royal good time before departing. A splendid program was in store for them, and as each one on the list performed his or her part, a good round of applause showed how well their efforts were appreciated. Messrs. Haley and Rolland's interesting remarks of a patriotic nature, having a bearing on the nature of the occasion; and spoke of the work continually being done, in the interest of the Red Cross and Liberty Loan.

The piano trio by the little Misses Lahan, Jones and McQuillen was well rendered, as was the vocal and instrumental selections which followed, the last of which deserve special mention.

Miss Carrie Roberts sang as eight school children took part in a "patriotic drill." The characters in the drill were: Uncle Sam and Miss Columbia, who were in turn followed by soldiers and nurses. This patriotic part of the program was a fitting and appropriate finish of the program, which preceded the dancing, in which all present heartily took part until the time came to bid the boys good night.

Syl G. Anderson and family left Saturday morning, for an extended trip through the northwestern part of the state. They will stay at Hot Springs for a short time, after which they will continue on their trip. Mr. Anderson will sell stock for the Wholesale Oil Co. on the trip.

Entertained Eighth Grade

The home of Mrs. J. E. Kimbell was the scene of mirth and merriment last Wednesday when the Misses Harriett Kimbell and Ruth Schaeffer entertained their class mates of the eighth grade. The Kimbell home was beautifully decorated for the occasion; patriotic emblems mingled with beautiful flowers and class colors of blue and gold which made the scene one of splendor and brilliancy. The Misses Kimbell and Schaeffer entertained royally; social games were indulged in and nothing was overlooked that would add to the joy and comfort of the class guests.

Dainty refreshments were served, and the eighteen classmates on the eve of their finishing course in school enjoyed themselves in a manner fitting and appropriate to the extreme good will and harmony that has existed between the scholars of this class under the efficient directorship of Mrs. Blaney.

Before the close of this interesting entertainment, the teacher of the class, Mrs. Blaney, was presented with a neat and attractive package with well chosen words by Miss Kimbell, which on being opened was found to contain a goodly number of handsome handkerchiefs folded in an American flag and accompanied by a card bearing these words, "From Your Loyal Eighth Grade." The event will long be remembered with thoughts the most pleasant by those who were fortunate enough to be present at this novel and attractive entertainment.

THE RED CROSS

By EDGAR A. GUEST.

I AM too old to share the fight;
 Too many years have come and gone
 Since first I saw the morning light.
 My youth has been and traveled on,
 I am too old to join the line,
 Far-flung today that truth shall live;
 I may not die for what is fine,
 But I am not too old to give.

I am not yet so old that I
 Have drifted from the world apart
 I still can hear the helpless cry,
 And mercy still can reach my heart.
 I still can share from day to day
 The burden that our youth must bear,
 And I thank God that I can say
 The Red Cross is my symbol there.

I am too old to bear a lance,
 Across the shell-torn Flanders' field
 I may not go where troops advance
 And death's grim terrors are revealed;
 But I can hear the helpless call,
 And I can serve them while I live;
 And I thank God that through it all
 I shall not be too old to give.

CANTEEN WORKERS CATER TO POLIU'S APPETITE FOR OYSTERS AND SALADS

WHEN I left for Europe a few months ago I had no cast-iron reverence for the Red Cross. When I returned from Europe I brought home with me unbounded belief in the organization. I had seen enough to make me realize that this was the best method of serving the soldiers and sailors. We are waging an economic war. Therefore the surest and most effective way to help is through the established channels selected for that purpose by the government.

The main work of the American Red Cross, however, is, of course, carried on in France. The policy of those heading this work is to back up the French in their own efforts and to help them develop along their own lines, not to root out French institutions and transplant American ones. Whether we work, then, in canteens, in warehouses, in dispensaries, for polius or for refugees, in Paris or in huts used for this purpose are little alleys marked "Paris," "Dijon," or "Lyons." These little alleys are laid out with bunks filled with sleeping men. If a poliu is going to Paris, he throws himself down in the Paris bunk, serene in the knowledge that he will be called in time for the Paris train.

In some of the canteens the lights have to be dimmed on account of aeroplanes. Often the lights are covered with colored muslin shields which make a rosy glow that is very home-like. One of the canteens has been decorated by some of the best camouflage artists in France, who have taken great delight in covering the walls and even the ceiling with their pictures. The canteens are open day and night for the benefit of the men at the big junction points.

Do More Than Feed Men.

The women in the canteens do more than feed the men, however, important as that is. Polius leaving their families are naturally depressed and need sympathetic listeners. Some one to admire his wife's picture, some one to laugh over the baby's latest sign of genius, some one to tell him that the oldest boy is the image of his handsome father—this is as real a need in the poliu's life as salad or soup. In fact the presence of these fine women is such an influence for good that officers say the morale of the army is distinctly higher wherever the canteens are. This causes great rivalry among the canteen workers. Each one wants her canteen to be the best and most popular in the service.

Besides this direct, personal service to the soldiers the Red Cross is doing a kind of John the Baptist work with dispensaries. We have fifteen dispensaries scattered through districts where war has been or is likely to be. France had mobilized 18,000 of her 24,000 physicians, leaving about 6,000 for the whole of civilian France. Sometimes you will find one old doctor taking care of several villages with no means of transportation except occasionally an aged, overworked horse. Here is a chance for the Red Cross to step in and help. There is a syndicate of physicians to which the Red Cross applies to find out if a certain village has a medical adviser; if not we establish a center and operate in a given section around the center.

Bathing a Luxury.

A Red Cross doctor and nurse go out regularly to the villages in their section. Each village is informed when they are coming so that all who want medical advice or treatment can meet together in one spot and save unnecessary calls. Of course, if any one is too ill to come to the doctor, the doctor goes to him. The nurses carry among other things shower baths for babies. In many regions of France, owing to lack of facilities, bathing is a luxury, so the superstition has grown up that it is dangerous. Now since the mothers are convinced that their children will be neither killed nor injured, but on the contrary benefited by baths, how they do look forward to them!

After all this inspiring activity of the Red Cross on the other side, romantic in spite of the drudgery and tragedy, I expected the work here to be an anti-climax. I was amazed, then, when I returned to see what we were accomplishing at home.

Polius Like Oysters and Salad. The canteen work is one of the most gratifying ways of helping the men. To see these polius enjoying the first delicacies they have had for days is a soul-satisfying sight. The English and French maintain canteens where they dispense soup, hot coffee and cocoa, tobacco, chocolate, etc., but the American Red Cross canteens serve real dinners at cost or under. The polius are inordinately fond of oysters and salad; when they can order a plate of oysters or a dish of salad in an American canteen they are as happy as children. We have six canteens in the French zone for the French army—France is, of course, divided into zones. In one line of communication canteen we serve from 4,000 to 8,000 men a day. These canteens are near the railroad stations for the benefit of the men going to the front, being transferred to some other section, or going home on a furlough. In one section the

YOUR FLAG AND MY FLAG

Like a Liberty Bond, Death is A Patriotic Investment in War

Lieutenant Dinsmore Ely U. S. A. of Winnetka, a suburb of Chicago, was recently killed in an engagement in France. He was in the aviation service, and according to the New Mexico State Record, a letter was received from him a few days before his death by his father, Dr. James O. Ely, which closed as follows: "And I want to say in closing that if anything happens to me, let us have no mourning in spirit or in dress. Death like a Liberty Bond, is an investment, not a loss, when a man dies for his country. It is an honor to a family, and is that the time for weeping? I would rather leave my family rich in memories of my life, than numbed in sorrow at my death."

Poets may sing, and writers exhaust their intellectual energies in glowing articles and speakers revel in flights of oratory, but the patriotic words of Lieutenant Ely will live as long as the spirit of freedom and American independence thrives within the breast.

Peace to his ashes; and may we all be endowed with that same love and loyalty to our country, which prompted such manly utterances. He was laid to rest wrapped in the folds of the flag he loved so well and leaves an undying monument of gratitude in the hearts of his countrymen—Rest cherished Patriot; your words will strengthen our courage, and cement together a stronger and more enduring determination to end this war in the interest of peace and justice that shall everlastingly reign on the face of the earth.

FOR THIRSTY AIRMEN.

During a discussion in parliament recently the first lord of the admiralty was asked what arrangements, if any, are made to supply pilots of airplanes, and all airmen bound on long-distance overseas flights with emergency rations and with facilities for obtaining drinking water when flying in machines with air-cooled motors or for tapping the radiator for drinking water in machines with water-cooled motors. In answering the question, says a correspondent, Doctor McNamara stated that emergency rations consisting of malted milk, berril and chocolate, are supplied to royal navy air stations for the use of pilots of seaplanes and airmen engaged in overseas flights. Drinking facilities are provided for by the issue of thermos flasks. No facilities have been provided for tapping the radiators of water-cooled motors, the contents of which are more likely to act medicinally than otherwise.

TIES OF MOTHER COUNTRY.

Establishment of a society to be known as the Spanish Center of Guatemala, in the capital city of that Central American republic, will be, says the Christian Science Monitor, for the numerous Spanish residents there, a means of renewing and re-vivifying the memories of their mother land, Spain. And this sort of thing in the Americas is only the reflex of that renewal of interest and family feeling that has been growing in its expression, of late, as from Spain to her sons and daughters on the American side. It is manifesting itself in many ways, from books and dissertations to methods of receiving Spanish-American ambassadors at the court of Spain.

THE REAL ROUSER.

"So your boy is in the army?"
"Yes."
"Does he like it?"
"Very much. He writes home that he's discovered that what a man needs to get him out of bed in the morning is not an alarm clock, but a bazie."

FUR FARMING.

While every one's attention was detracted by the war, the fur-farming industry of Canada has been growing out of the speculative stage and into that of production, cites the Chicago Journal. In Prince Edward Island the fox ranchers are taking a very large number of skins and getting good prices for them—as high, in a few instances, as $1,500 per pelt. About 4,000 fox pups have been raised on the ranches. No figures are available from fur farms farther West. In the case of rubber, the cultivated product has gained a clear supremacy over the wild article. It does not follow that the same will hold true of furs. Some of the finest pelts come from animals that no one has yet attempted to raise in captivity—seal, fisher, mink, beaver, martens. A few of these may be "domesticated" later, however; but even if fur farming stops with the fox, the reindeer and the Karakul sheep, it will be an important industry.

YANKEE HUMOR AT THE FRONT

American Lads, as is Characteristic of Them, Dare Death and Physical Peril With Jest.

The irrepressible ebullience of the Yankee soldier rises above the terror of war and bubbles in sparkling effervescence over the battle front, says the Omaha Bee. On devastated fields, where he toils to restore some semblance of civilization, he erects signs that indicate his eternal optimism and defiance of fate.

These signs are not grim in irony or threatening in aspect as are some erected by the enemy, but are full of the spirit of hope and purpose. The ripple of laughter that flows from them may strike some of the more serious-minded as in some sense out of place, but they really show no lack of reverence. They are expressive of indomitable resolve to ravish and make useful what the foe has sought to destroy.

Daring death with a jest and flouting at physical peril is characteristic of the light-hearted men who are going with all their souls into the thickest of war's inferno. They work while they laugh and bring an example of courage and hope to a land that needs it most.

American humor is an inseparable companion to American pluck and determination and always "the bravest are the tenderest, the loving are the daring."

LEARNING IN EUROPE.

After the fall of the Roman empire learning became almost unknown in Europe. The invasion of the Teutonic barbarians swept away science, art and literature and left all peoples exhausted by war and steeped in ignorance. During these centuries the only culture that the world knew was carried on by the Arabs. When at length western Europe had recovered and was ready to learn once more, she looked to the Moors for inspiration and pattern and found there astrology, arithmetic, medicine and alchemy. This last made a particular appeal. During the centuries which followed all the manifestations of nature were studied under the name of alchemy.

IRISH SOLDIERS.

In selecting for eulogy the "bravery and endurance" of the Irish troops, Mr. Balfour has hit upon the very qualities for which they were commended, says the London Chronicle, to an ancestor of his, Robert Cecil, first earl of Salisbury, in 1594. A recruiting officer of that period, Captain Dawtry, writing to advise the raising of an Irish regiment, said "there can be no better soldiers upon the earth than they be, either for the use of their weapons, or the strength of their bodies and minds, for they are such seasoned men for the war that they can endure all fortunes whatsoever, and they will keep health when others, with a little extremity will lie by the wall."

A noble and high-minded gentleman of Lancaster writes us, with full specifications, that we have sent that truly great paragraph reeling, reverberating, rippling, sizzling, whirling and swizzling down the re-echoing corridors of time, but no one else seems to have noticed it, and we guess not much general interest is being taken in the higher forms of literature in these days of stress and strain.—Ohio State Journal.

WOMEN ASK FOR RATIONING PLAN.

American Women Volunteer to Buy Fixed Amounts of Meat, Bread Flour, Sugar and Butter.

Idea Supplements U. S. Food Administration's New Home Card New in 10,000,000 Homes.

The women of America, who are anxious to do their great part in the winning of the war, are now, as a whole, familiar with the most important aspects of food conservation. The Home Card, both in its original form and in the revised edition for 1918, which provides for two wheatless days, one meatless day a week, in addition to a wheatless meal every day, has been placed by the Food Administration after a vigorous campaign in 10,000,000 American homes. An intelligent and conscientious observance of the Home Card's requirements is all the Food Administration asks of the housewives of the country.

The Food Administration has had a great many requests, however, particularly from the homes of the well-to-do, that it should issue a worked out plan for a voluntary system of rationing.

This desire for a voluntary ration springs from two causes—first, because it is far simpler for the housewife to save food when she has a concrete working plan by which to proceed, and, second, because the loyal women of America desire, unselfishly, to put themselves on the same basis as the women of the Allied countries. The ration proposed by the Food Administration is almost the same as that adopted in England for voluntary observance. All over the United Kingdom, in hundreds of houses there hangs in the front window a card with the stirring pledge, "IN HONOR BOUND WE ADOPT THE NATIONAL SCALE OF VOLUNTARY RATIONS."

The ration recommended by the Food Administration, and adopted first in New York city, whence the idea has spread through the entire country, is the following:

	Weekly Allowance Per Person.
Meat—Beef (fresh, salted, tinned and hashed); mutton, lamb and veal (mutton by preference)	2 1/2 lbs.
Butter	1/2 lb.
Cooking Fats (margarine, lard, lard substitutes, vegetable oils)	1/2 lb.
Wheat Flour (for use in cooking gravies, etc., where corn starch, cracker dust or bread crumbs cannot be substituted)	1/2 lb.
Vietary Bread (containing at least 20 per cent of a substitute for wheat flour)	1 1/2 lbs.
Sugar (including all sugar used on the table and in cooking and all sweetmeats and candies, but not that used for candling and preserving)	1/2 lb.

The items listed above are the only ones which are definitely limited. In the case of milk and cream, as much may be used as necessary, and children, of course, must have their full allowance of whole milk. Fish and poultry, any cereal other than wheat, vegetables and fruits and cheese may be used as freely as is desired.

The above ration is in no wise intended to supplant the Home Card, but rather to supplement it. It has been published with the idea that it will be a very real aid to the American woman in her splendid effort to carry out the great food conservation program.

MAY END FEAR OF DENTISTS

Simplified Method of Filling is More Effective and Requires Less Painful Excavation.

The research work introduced at the Forsyth Dental infirmary, Boston, promises to bring about important changes in dental practice. The institution treats the teeth of 1,800 children weekly, relates a correspondent, and with such an abundance of material, Dr. Percy R. Howe, of the research laboratory, has been able to make an elaborate study of the harmful and harmless organisms of mouth and teeth.

The cause of caries appears to be bacteria of the so-called Moro Tisser group. These bacteria, it is found, may go deeper than the usual limits of excavation, penetrating into the solid dentine, and the ordinary filling may close up the tooth with active germs of decay remaining in it. Experiments suggest a simplified method of filling, that is more effective, while requiring less of the painful and troublesome excavation.

With a portion only of the decayed material removed, the cavity is injected with nitrate of silver solution, and this is followed by formalin, precipitating the silver. Sterilization is complete, a deposit of metallic silver being left throughout the putrescent pulp, as well as in cracks and canals. The deposit may be thickened by repeated applications, and a smooth antiseptic base is provided for the usual fillings. In chronic abscesses and troubles with the tip of the tooth, the new process has given good results.

HAD FAITH IN SCIENCE.

Although the king is to tap 50 tons of molten steel in Scotland, he will not have to face an ordeal like one to which his father, when prince of Wales and a pupil of Lyon, afterward Lord Playfair, was challenged, relates the London Chronicle. "Have you faith in science?" asked the tutor of his royal pupil. "Certainly," replied the prince. Playfair washed the youth's hand and wrist with ammonia. "Will you now place your hand in this cauldron and ladle out a portion of boiling lead?" "Are you serious?" answered the prince. Being answered in the affirmative, he plunged in his hand and ladled out the white-hot metal, unscathed.

OUR DEFENSE

In the spring we may be attacked at any moment. Toxic poisons pile up within us after a hard winter, and we feel "run-down," tired out, blue and discouraged. This is the time to put our house in order—cleanse the system and put fresh blood into our arteries. You can obtain an alternative extract from Blood root, Golden Seal, Stone and Queen's root, Cherry bark, rolled into a sugar-coated tablet and sold by most druggists, in sixty cent vials, as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. This blood tonic, in tablet or liquid form, is just what you need for "Spring Fever," for that lack of ambition. It will fill you full of vim, vigor and vitality.

Chilliness, when other people feel warm enough, is a sign of biliousness, or of malarial poisons—so is a furred or coated tongue, loss of appetite, headaches or giddiness, and a dull, drowsy, debilitated feeling. It's your liver that's at fault. You want to stimulate it and invigorate it with Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. With every trouble of the kind, these tiny little things act like a miracle. You can break up sudden attacks of Colds, Fevers, and Influenzas, with them. They give you permanent relief from Indigestion, Constipation, Sour Stomach, Sick Headache, and Dizziness. They are small and pleasant to take, and the most thoroughly natural remedy. Twenty-five cents at most drug stores.

Bowser's Little Plan

He Is Going to Reduce the Cost of White Paper One-Half

(Copyright, McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

By M. QUAD.

When Mr. Bowser came up to dinner the other evening there was a letter awaiting him which had come in the afternoon mail. It was a letter from a postmaster up the state. He opened it, and expressed a great satisfaction. He had no particulars to give out, and Mrs. Bowser had learned to repress her curiosity.

Half an hour after they had gone upstairs Mr. Bowser began pacing the floor, as he always does when he has got a little scheme on hand. By and by he suddenly made up his mind to unbosom himself, and he sat down and drew the letter from his pocket and said:

"Mrs. Bowser I hold a fortune in my hand."

"Has some one died and left you a legacy?" she queried with a smile.

"I have left myself a legacy," he continued, "and I am going to tell you about it, although I think I have made an idiot of do so. I should have been worth millions and millions of dollars had you not discouraged me whenever I got hold of a sure thing. You will probably do so in this instance, but, by the seven seas, I shall go right ahead in spite of what you say."

"Well, if it's so serious as that perhaps you hadn't better tell the story."

"But I shall tell it, that you may see what a golden opportunity has presented itself, but any time I wish to stop short I shall do so. Mrs. Bowser, you have read about the scarcity and the consequent high price of white paper, haven't you—indeed, of all kinds of paper?"

"I have," was the quiet reply.

"You know that paper is made of woodpulp?"

"I do."

"They take wood and soften it up in some way so as to make a pulp of it. This pulp is then treated so that it becomes a sort of mash, and out of this mash they make paper. I do not understand exactly how it's done, but it is done. There is a tremendous scarcity of trees, and that's why paper is at a higher price now than was ever known in this country before. You follow me, don't you?"

"Yes, I understand everything."

"The papermakers have tried in vain to find a substitute for this woodpulp. They have even ground up old hats. They can make wrapping paper out of bootlegs, and straw stacks and a kind of grass, but nothing but woodpulp makes the paper they want to make most, and whole forests have disappeared in the last two or three years."

"Yes, I have read about it several times," said Mrs. Bowser. "Your coming fortune has something to do with the woodpulp, hasn't it?"

"It has all to do with it, my dear, as you will soon learn. About a month ago a stranger came into my office and introduced himself as Mr. Riley. He wanted to go to war and become a great general, but he could not do so unless he could make certain business arrangements. He owns a tract of woodland, comprising 1,000 acres. It was worth $15 an acre, but he would sell it to me for $10, and give me plenty of time to pay for it. That is, I am to pay him half down in cash and he takes a mortgage on the land for three years. Those are very favorable terms, and they could not have been offered me, except that Mr. Riley was anxious to be a general."

"Well?" was the query.

"He said that about half a dozen paper manufacturers were after that woodland, but he would give me the preference. There are trees enough on that land to keep 10 paper mills going night and day for a year. The new supply of woodpulp will bring down the price of white paper fully 50 per cent. I buy that land at $10 an acre. I hold it six months and I am just as sure to get $25 for it as the sun rises."

"I do not take anything for granted. I am too good a business man for that. Mr. Riley could not give me the number of trees on his thousand acres. I put him off and wrote to a postmaster to get me a man to go over the land and do the counting, and here is his report. It is more than satisfactory, and Mr. Riley will be here tomorrow night and we will close the bargain. I will read you the report. The man made a careful count, and he says there are about 40 trees to the acre—that is, good-sized trees. These trees comprise oaks, maples, beech and iron-wood trees. There are also a few chestnut trees and alms."

"The man did not count any spruce trees, did he?" asked Mrs. Bowser.

"According to this statement, he did not find any spruce trees at all, but just the sort I mentioned."

"I thought it might turn out that way. Your Mr. Riley is a sharper, my dear."

"That's it—that's it. Begin your faultfinding! Call a man a sharper because he is willing to show you how to make a small fortune. Mrs. Bowser, if you are going to do the usual thing, you will drive me into leaving this house!"

"I hope it won't be as bad as that, but there is a certain thing you have not posted yourself about. The land is covered with hardwood trees. You can't make woodpulp out of beech or maple or oak or hickory or any trees that list mentions. You can make ax handle, wagon spokes and veranda chairs out of hickory, and you can make furniture out of other hardwoods, but you can't make woodpulp. You can steam some of the wood and bend in most any shape you wish, but you can't soften them into woodpulp."

"Why—why—I thought—" stammered Mr. Bowser.

"You thought that woodpulp could be made of any tree," interrupted Mrs. Bowser.

"And I thought right! I tell you, woman, if a mistake has been made here you have made it. What right have you—a woman—to claim to be so well-posted on a matter that you surely know nothing about? Why, with all my experience I have never been in a paper mill. And you talk as if you have been in twenty."

"But a woman can read as well as a man," protested Mrs. Bowser. "One need not go near a paper mill to understand that you can't dissolve a hickory ax handle into pulp. You can split it into a hundred pieces, but you cannot make a fibrous matter of it. Go out and see anyone you wish about it, and if he don't tell you as I do I will never again object to any of your plans."

"Mr. Riley Was Anxious to Be a General."

"Yes, I will go out," exclaimed Mr. Bowser, as he brought his fist down on the reading table, "and I will let half a dozen men decide who is the ignoramus in the case. If you know more than I do—"

Mr. Bowser went out. He interviewed the carpenter, a grocer, a butcher and a builder, and, though they didn't call him names, they looked at him with amazement and a contempt that hurt his feelings. The builder went so far as to say that he might as well buy out a junk shop and try to sell the old iron, brass and copper to the papermakers; and the grocer intimated that as long as there were such men in the world the price of butter and eggs could never be brought down to the old standard.

Mr. Bowser realized just what would happen when he re-entered his house. Mrs. Bowser would be reading a book. She would lay that book down with a smile of triumph, and she would expect an apology from him. He would feel crushed and humiliated, and, though she would not crow over him, he could not hold his head up again for a week.

Mr. Bowser lingered by his gate. He also lingered on the front steps. He turned the doorknob quietly and he walked in without his scuff of the feet. Yes, Mrs. Bowser sat there with a book. She laid the book down with a smile, but she said:

"Mr. Bowser, a rat has gnawed a hole and found his way into the kitchen. Won't you set a trap for him tonight?"

That was all—all except that Mr. Riley hasn't sold that woodland to Mr. Bowser yet.

Win the War by Preparing the Land Sowing the Seed and Producing Bigger Crops

Work in Joint Effort the Soil of the United States and Canada! CO-OPERATIVE FARMING IN MAN POWER NECESSARY TO WIN THE BATTLE FOR LIBERTY

The Food Controllers of the United States and Canada are asking for greater food production. Scarcely 100,000,000 bushels of wheat are available to be sent to the allies overseas before the crop harvest. Upon the efforts of the United States and Canada rests the burden of supply.

Every Available Tillable Acre Must Contribute; Every Available Farmer and Farm Hand Must Assist

Western Canada has an enormous acreage to be seeded, but man power is short, and an appeal to the United States allies is for more men for seeding operation.

Canada's Wheat Production Last Year was 225,000,000 Bushels; the Demand From Canada Alone for 1918 is 400,000,000 Bushels

To secure this she must have assistance. She has the land but need the men. The Government of the United States wants every man who can effectively help, to do farm work this year. It wants the land in the United States developed first of course; but it also wants to help Canada. Whenever we find a man we can spare to Canada's fields after ours are supplied, we want to direct him there.

Apply to our Employment Service, and we will tell you where you can best serve the combined interests.

Western Canada's help will be required not later than May 5th. Wages to competent help, $50.00 a month and up, board and lodging.

Those who respond to this appeal will get a warm welcome, good wages, good board and find comfortable homes. They will get a rate of one cent a mile from Canadian boundary points to destination and return.

Triumphant Return of Seal Hunters

Crew of Schooner After Successful Trip Into the Ice Floes of the Frozen North

With their tow lines swung over their shoulders, after their day's work is done and they have earned a well-earned rest, the men are dragging their "fur" in sacks over the snow. Often these crews bring in hauls valued at $5,000. The seal industry is one of the biggest and each year the output is greater, and the furs command a higher price.

BACK YARD POULTRY

Uncle Sam expects you to keep hens and raise chickens, even though you do reside in a town or city.

Two hens in the back yard for each person in the house will keep a family in fresh eggs.

The smallest back yard has room for a flock large enough to supply the house with eggs. The cost of maintaining such a flock is small.

Table and kitchen waste provides much of the feed for the hens and they require but little attention.

An interested child, old enough to take a little responsibility, can care for a few fowls as well as a grown person.

Every back yard should contribute its share to a "bumper crop" of poultry and eggs in 1918. Perhaps not all will find it profitable to raise chicks in town, but nearly everyone can well keep a few hens. The objection to the "crowing of the cock" can be overcome by keeping no cock. This will not affect egg production in the least.

The house for the back-yard flock should be inexpensive. A piano box or other large box may readily be converted into a suitable residence for the hens, and the runs may be very small.

Good hens, well cared for, will produce from ten to fifteen dozen eggs annually.

Efficient Lovemaking Man Is One Favored by Majority of Women, Asserts a Writer

To a woman the most interesting thing about a man is his relation to women. His manner of loving—or refusing to love—is what really interests her. According to a writer in the New York Mail, when a woman meets a man she sizes him up, not as a lawyer or a musician, or an actor, but as a lover. What sort of a husband would he make?

Says Miss Sydney Shields, once a newspaper woman, now an actress: "A certain physician, a friend of mine, once told me that, other things being equal, a woman would in nine cases out of ten choose a man who had loved many women in preference to a man who had loved none. Most scientists agree with this."

I think it is Havelock Ellis who explains it in this wise: "Experience with many women gives a man's choice greater value, and, secondly, the more a man has sinned in this direction the greater the woman's chance to raise him to her own level. Every woman will admit that she prefers the man whom other women desire. As 'Abe' Rotash remarks, a woman looks on every other woman as a competitor. Even if other women don't really desire the husband whom she loves, she will still imagine they do, and woman's imagination let loose is a fearful and wonderful thing."

"I have discussed this subject with different kinds of women. The consensus of feminine opinion seems to be that the wholly inexperienced Romeo is a 'pill.' The man of the world knows how to make love, they say—and that's the all-important thing with women. He makes the beautiful woman think that she is intelligent, and the intelligent woman think she is beautiful; he is at all times the master of the situation, and women, even modern ones, adore a masterful man."

Wastefulness Is Sinful; It Is a Crime When the Nation Calls for Thrift—Pointers.

The lover of thrift is often confronted by directions for household economy emanating, as trial shows, from abstract, rather than practical, domestic science. Try these suggestions from an old-fashioned New England housewife:

1. Eggs are not needed for a rice pudding.
2. Milk is not needed in cake made with baking powder.
3. Milk is not needed for any kind of whole wheat bread. Even when milk abounds and is cheap, water is preferable.
4. Half, or even quarter, of a yeast cake will raise a good amount of bread for baking.
5. "War Cake" which calls for a package of raisins and much shortening is not economical.
6. Do not allow a servant to throw out remnants of shredded wheat left in the bottom of the box. More than a cupful is often so lost.
7. An unstrained soup made from remnants of yesterday's meat makes a good meal. No meat course is required therewith.
8. Are you careful to make as many pies as possible from one squash?
9. Are you careful to allow every bit of the white to drain, or to scrape it from an egg which you break?
10. Neither broken crackers nor the crumbs in the bottom of the box should be thrown away. Use them for fish, oysters, etc.
11. Memoranda of all sorts, as well as rough drafts of Miss, may be kept on pieces of wrapping paper. This is the kind of economy which good housewives practiced during the Civil war.
12. Remember that the old New Englander considered wastefulness, even among the rich, sinful. It is a crime when the nation calls for thrift.

—Florence Mary Bennett of The Vigilantes.

Widows' Pensions.

An act of congress of October 8, 1917, provided that from and after its passage "the rate of pension for a widow of an officer or enlisted man of the army, navy or marine corps of the United States who served in the Civil war, the war with Spain, or the Philippine insurrection, now on the pension roll or hereafter to be placed on the pension roll, and entitled to receive a less rate than hereinafter provided, shall be construed to affect the additional allowance provided by existing pension laws on account of a helpless child or child under sixteen years of age." This law made $25 a month the uniform rate for all soldiers' widows then on the pension rolls at less than that rate or who should thereafter be placed on the pension roll.

ANY WOMAN TO ANY MAN

I cannot use the bayonet or sword,
Nor take the life that it is mine to give;
My spirit darses—but, ah, my flesh is weak,
And you—you would not have it otherwise.
A woman's strength lies not in force of arms;
In loving me, you love my weakness, too.
That challenges manhood of the race
To fierce protection of its womankind.

So you must go, and I must stay. For you
The mighty exultation of the fight,
The wild exhilaration of the fray;
For me, to ply the task that once was yours,
And fill your place as best I can, at home.

But, now that you are gone, all men should go—
All, all! My heart is filled with bitter hate
To see a man, still young enough to fight,
Doing the work that women well might do.

Away, away, and let us drive the car,
And run the engine—yes, and mine the coal!

Think not that when white Peace shall come again,
Like morning after nightmare, we shall wish
To keep the places only held for you.

Ah, never, never shall our homes afford
A sweeter shelter than when war shall cease!

The household tasks, once tiresome, then shall be
As altar service in a sanctuary,
Where you and I, and many more, please God,
Shall break the bread of life with tremulous hands,
And taste the wine of life with tremulous lips,
Remembering those who left a home like ours
And now have gone to the great Home of all.

So speed you, speed you, hero of my heart,
Upon the mightiest quest the world has known!

And I, if I be cold or hungry here,
Shall smile to think I share the loaf with you,
And warm your body with my meager fire.

—Florence Van Cleave, in New York Times.

Rest Rooms For Rural Women

Rest rooms have been established in more than 200 counties in the United States to meet the needs of the country woman in town on business. They provide a place, says the United States department of agriculture, where the farm woman has a right, without asking any favors, to the use of facilities for rest and refreshment. They have been established by women's rural organizations in co-operation with other local organizations, with individuals, and with village, town, or county authorities; by business corporations operating private city markets, and by individual merchants. Where farm women's organizations have been interested in establishing rest rooms, local farm women's clubs have been able to arouse the necessary community interest in the need for rest rooms to insure their financial support. This has been done through co-operating with other local farm women's clubs, with organizations of women in town, with civic leagues, with chambers of commerce, and with county agents.

In co-operating with other clubs in establishing a rest room, any local farm woman's club may take the initiative. Opportunity is given at club meetings for discussing the need for a rest room, and other local clubs may be asked to arrange similar discussions. Such co-operation is facilitated in rural communities where local clubs meet together for joint sessions three or four times a year.

Through their organizations town and country women have co-operated in providing rest rooms near railroad stations, where the waiting-room facilities at the stations were inadequate. They have co-operated in establishing libraries which provide convenient and adequate rest rooms for town and country women. Aroused community interest frequently results in securing a vacant room in the town hall, county courthouse, public market, or other public building.

Frequently the county agent, as the representative of the rural interests of a county, will take the initiative and secure the co-operation of the chamber of commerce or the county commissioners.

Frequently rest rooms are provided in dry goods stores and in grocery stores. A rest room at Kalamazoo, Mich., has been in use since 1882, and has become the common meeting place for country people living in different directions from the city. The number of country women dealing with these business houses warranted the establishment of rest rooms by the proprietors to meet the needs of their customers.

It Sometimes Happens.

"What does that irascible man mean by asking if this is a cattle car?"
"I presume some other passenger has stepped on his foot, jabbed an elbow into his waistband and poked a corner of a newspaper in his eye with what appeared to be one and the same motion."

Our Part in Feeding the Nation

(Special Information Service, United States Department of Agriculture.)

ENGLAND FINDS WOMEN NEED TRAINING FOR FARMS

On Practice Farms, Sometimes Conducted at Agricultural Colleges, English Women Learn to Do Light Farm Work.

ENGLAND TO USE WOMEN ON FARMS

Attempt, Not Only to Maintain Agricultural Production, but to Increase It.

PLAN TO OBTAIN VOLUNTEERS

Must Pass Examination as to Ability to Endure Work—Labor Usually Undertaken Has Been Connected With Live Stock.

Great Britain has attempted, on account of the submarine warfare, not only to maintain her agricultural production but to increase it. To do this an active campaign was undertaken to place women on the land. This work is carried on under the direct supervision of their national board of agriculture. The organization is somewhat similar to that found in our county agent organization, there being district agents, a county community with a county organizer and local agents in every county. The functions of the local organizations are: first, to secure women land workers; second, to train them; and third, to find farms for them to work on. The work of obtaining volunteers has been carried on by means of posters, personal visits, meetings, competitions, and so on.

As soon as a woman indicates her desire to take up work on the land, she must submit to a physical examination in order that the committee may be sure that she is physically fit to endure the strain of farm work. She is also examined as to her personality, in order to determine whether she can get on with farm conditions.

Types of Practice Farms. After she has been accepted, she is sent to one of the practice farms. These farms are of various types. In some instances they are agricultural colleges that have been turned over to the training women. In other instances, the women are gathered together in a home and sent out to the neighboring farms to be trained by experienced farm workers. In still other instances successful farmers have turned their farms over to the county organizations to be used in training women, the women living on the farm and participating in all operations. During the training period the workers are without any expense as far as their living is concerned, and are furnished with a complete outfit, consisting of boots, clogs, leggings, breeches, hat, and two pairs of overalls.

Work Undertaken. The most usual types of agricultural labor undertaken by the workers have been those connected with live stock and intensive farming, such as growing mangel, raising calves, milking, care of live stock, etc. The period of training generally lasted four weeks. If, at the end of this time, the students showed sufficient skill, they were listed and efforts were made to place them on farms. However, before any of the women land workers were allowed to undertake farm work, the farm was inspected and suitable quarters were found for the workers. Their experience seems to show that it is impracticable to send the women out to work as individuals, but that they must be kept together. As a result of this situation, usually one member of the group becomes matron of the party and general chaperon. Another, more skilled than the rest, becomes group leader or forewoman. Although many of the workers were from the well-to-do classes, they were compelled to accept the prevailing wage in the community and were required to do as much as the regular agricultural workers for the same pay.

In order to increase the demand for women workers, and to add interest in this kind of work, competitions have been held throughout the country. The competitors were judged upon their ability to milk, kill and dress poultry, harness horses, hoe root-crops, drive a harrow, spread manure, trim a hedge, and drive a cart. Thus it is found that our English-speaking allies have increased their production under actual war conditions.

VALUABLE EXPERIENCE.

England's experience in training more than 800,000 women to help make up the deficiency in man power on her farms will be valuable to workers in this country should it become necessary under labor stringencies in certain sections to enlist women farm workers. At this time it is not apparent to officials of the United States department of agriculture that the farm labor needs will require the services of women in other than the lighter tasks to which they already are accustomed. But in order that food production plans for this year shall not fall down, the department has advised its field representatives to be prepared to encourage women to perform farm labor if the situation demands it.

Towns Can Help Farmers.

There is an opportunity now for urban people sympathetically and constructively to study the farm-labor situation and to render assistance, said David E. Houston, secretary of agriculture, in a recent statement. In many towns and cities there are men who have had farming experience, who are able-bodied and who doubtless would be willing to serve the nation in the field of agriculture at this time. Especially for the seasonal strains of planting, cultivating and harvesting, it will not be too much to ask such men to aid the farmers in the necessary undertaking of maintaining and, if possible, supplementing, the food supply in order to feed the armies and to sustain the civilian population behind them.

If it appears that the farmers of a community or region are not able to secure the necessary labor by the usual methods, then the leaders in the town or city immediately dependent upon that region should organize, establish touch with representative farm leaders, and see if they cannot assist in solving the problem. The department of agriculture and labor will render every possible aid, but each community knows its own problems, and urban people, especially business men, could co-operate effectively with the farmers and also render much assistance.

Men and Boys First!

The farmers will need human help to handle and harvest the vast acreages needed to produce enough bread for the nation and the allies. This work calls for brawn, muscle, physical endurance. Time to think of women at heavy work in the fields when there are no American men and boys to be spared from store, office or factory.

No business save fighting and providing the things fighters must have to win battles is more important than producing enough food. Give your attention to food production on some farm. Help your employees to get out to the farms at harvest and other critical seasons.

Use plenty of fertilizer in the garden, either barnyard manure or commercial fertilizer adapted to the crop.

Important Instructions

All Chairmen of the auxiliaries and knitting societies will please take notice of the new instructions for knitting socks. They should be purled four and one half inches at the top; knit plain, six and one half inches; knit heel three inches; turn heel according to Red Cross instructions. After turning heel, knit eight or nine inches; to narrow the toe on each side, to nine stitches on the two needles, or eighteen stitches in all. Take off according to instructions. When finished, socks should measure fourteen inches from the top to the bottom of the heel. The foot should measure eleven inches in length at least.

Providence Church Organize Auxilliary

Last Sunday a new auxilliary was organized to add to the ever increasing strength of the Red Cross Society. The new wing of the Lincoln County Chapter was organized at the Providence Church on the Mesa with twenty charter members which is a remarkable showing, and shows the keen interest manifested by our neighbors on the Mesa. Four auto loads of Red Cross Workers started from here early Sunday morning, the party composed of the following ladies and gentlemen: Mayor and Mrs. H. S. Campbell, Mrs. J. B. French and daughter Evelyn, W. H. Osborn, wife and little daughter Sarah, Mrs. R. T. Lucas, Mrs. J. A. Kimbell, Mrs. Geo. Dingwall, Messers Nye, Rolland, Brickley, Haley and Dr. Johnson.

As the Providence Church had planned an all-day service including the organizing of the auxillary, the usual services of course proceeded the Red Cross portion of the days work. Chairman J. A. Haley, of the Lincoln County Chapter of the Red Cross, opened the meeting with a well worded speech in which he eulogized the movement and calling the attention of all present to the Big Drive of the human Meery about to be launched. The next in order, being a permanent organization, the following officers were elected: Mesdames DeArmond, Chairman; J. H. Skinner, Sec.; R. G. Skinner, Treasurer.

Mrs. J. A. Kimbell gave an interesting talk on the amount of comfort bags and Mrs. J. B. French interested her hearers with some instructions on how to make sawed goods for the soldiers. A. J. Rolland gave a descriptive account of the committee's work on the Third Liberty Loan Drive, E. M. Brick spoke about conditions resulting from the war, and the obligations we are under to do our utmost to help win this war. The meeting on the whole was decidedly successful; and the people of the Mesa are to be commended on their display of patriotic enthusiasm, which will be a telling factor in our future work.

Following the work of the organization, a bountiful dinner was served on the church grounds the same being furnished by the good people of the Mesa. The Carrizozo delegation returned late in the afternoon, with words of praise for the hospitality of our neighbors and the success they made of their first attempt at Red Cross organization.

They will make a splendid addition to the sister auxillary recently organized on the Nogal Mesa. Both branches will be heard from in the near future with their efficient, conscientious, patriotic work in Red Cross circles.

Lt. Gregory Addresses Merchants and Coal and Grain Dealers of Carrizozo

Tuesday night in the offices of the Carrizozo Trading Co., Lieut. Gregory of the U. S. Food Administration, made a splendid explanation of the rules and regulations as to the handling of flour and the flour substitutes and other food products. The regulation at present, as no doubt you all know, is six pounds of wheat flour per person for thirty days, with an equal amount of wheat flour substitute. Lt. Gregory complimented the merchants and also the citizens of Carrizozo very highly for the manner in which they have been handling these rules. We must all continue to do so and help lick the kaiser.

He explained further that in the near future everything will be put on a strictly cash and carry basis. This rule will be very beneficial to every one who buys anything these strenuous times.

The Retail Merchant's Association of Carrizozo are now trying to arrange for a return engagement of Lt. Gregory on Decoration Day, May 30th. Further announcement will be made later.

He is a splendid speaker and every person in Carrizozo and Lincoln county should hear him.

Halt! Lift up your eyes!
Salute that Star!
It tells that a MAN has gone to war!
It tells of a mother's love and tears!
It tells of a father's hope—his fears!
It tells of a sister's broken heart!
It tells of a brother doing his part!
It tells of a sweetheart's sacrifice!
It tells of Hell and Paradise!
It tells that a MAN has gone to war!
Halt! Lift up your eyes!
Salute that Star!
