Boys' and Girls' Club In Industrial Work Show Interest

Organization under Direction Of Mrs. W. L. Gumm in Interesting Studies Prove Of Great Value to Students

Profitable activity of school children during the summer months has been a study of many parents and educators. In cities and thickly settled communities the problem has been satisfactorily met by the employment of directors to oversee athletics, gardening, manual science, cooking, sewing, and similar endeavors. But this does not reach the majority of the children of our country who are in need of systematic training.

The marked success of specially planned work for the children on the farms was noticed by the U. S. Department of Agriculture and on investigation was found to be of great value in keeping the boys and girls on the farms, increasing the quantity and quality of crops and improving rural social conditions. With able corps of enthusiastic workers industrial clubs have become an important part of the extension service of agricultural colleges.

By studying local conditions, and the success and failure of club members lessons have been adapted to the strength, ability, and surroundings of the children in the various parts of the United States. For New Mexico interesting projects are arranged in gardening, canning, and drying, raising pigs and poultry, sewing, cooking, field crops of corn, beans, potatoes, and forage crops.

A valuable part of this training is in record kept by each club member of the work done and its actual cost in time and money.

Any child between ten and eighteen years of age is eligible to membership. There are no fees; lesson record sheets instructions, are furnished by the Government. Five members and a leader make a club which can participate in state and county contests.

Under instruction from the Department of Agriculture at Washington, our state in the Extension Department of the A. & M. College, has an efficient organization with A. G. Cooley, director, Charles Orchard Smith, state leader, three state assistants, and county leaders in most counties.

County Agricultural Agent, Stewart Sterling, with assistance of state experts formed a number of clubs in this county; but as he did not have sufficient time to devote to them, the club work has been put in charge of Mrs. W. L. Gumm of Carrizozo. A sewing club in Carrizozo, Mrs. M. L. Blaney leader, has done much excellent work on garments for Belgian refugees. The Capitan Club with Mrs. C. S. Rockwell as leader, plans to sew and cook.

Two girls' clubs at Lincoln will sew. Miss Chavez will care for the work until Mrs. Mabel Smith returns.

At Idlewilde the children will garden and sew.

Mrs. Clara Wootson will be in charge at Hondo during Mrs. Dixon's vacation. This club's activities includes cooking, gardening, sewing and pig raising.

Clubs are forming at Picacho with Miss Lillian Garner, leader, with Mrs. B. J. Bonnell at Glencoe and at the Alto-Angus neighborhood.

For any information as to clubs, address

Mrs. Elizabeth Gumm,
Carrizozo, N. M.

Ancho-Jicarilla Red Cross

Red Cross workers of Ancho and Jicarilla performed a noble part in big drive which was finished on May 27th. The committee in charge of the drive laid their plans systematically, and the results were fine.

The total amount realized was $308.75. The dance given on the 27th for the benefit of the cause was well attended and helped to swell the fund.

The people of Ancho and vicinity, workers and givers are to be commended on the splendid showing made in the interest of the great cause.

Notice to Junior Red Cross

The Junior Red Cross meets every Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock and a great amount of interest is being manifested by the young pupils, and their attendance is good but there should be a larger attendance by the larger ones. The committee, therefore, earnestly solicit those who are more advanced to turn out not only for the good they derive from it themselves, but to offer encouragement to the younger, and engage in the work which is in a great measure for those further advanced in the work. From two to four teachers will be present to give instructions and Misses Kenneday and Stevens and Mrs. Massie will in all probability be here all summer.

Ordered to Report

Men ordered to report at Carrizozo N. Mex. for entrapment to Camp Lee, Virginia, June 1st, 1918.

Ira C. Johnson, Carrizozo; Johnnie M. Melton, Corona; (Buck) William H. Jennings, and James R. Greer, Parsons.

I. E. Schaeffer, C. C.

Mrs. Helen Wahl and daughter Miss M. B. Wahl registered at the Carrizozo Eating House Monday, on their way to Parsons to take charge of the bookkeeping and stenography at the Parsons mine.

Old Settler Passes Away

On May 24th, 1918, occurred the death of one of the oldest settlers in this part of the country. Mr. Benjamin F. Gumm, who was the father of Wallace Gumm came to White Oaks in 1880, in company with the late Gov. McDonald, and remained at that place until the death of his wife, in May 1904.

He was one of the pioneers who helped to blaze the way in this region for future generations that were to follow him, and was much loved by the many who knew him.

Since the death of Mrs. Gumm, he has divided his time among his children but has always claimed this locality as his home. He is survived by all of his children: Joseph A.; Wallace L.; Elmer J.; Charles R., John F.; and Mrs. J. J. McCourt. At the time of his death he had been at the home of his son John for a short time. The funeral was held at that place.

Aged Pioneer Answers Call

Coincident with the death of Benjamin F. Gumm, another old and highly respected pioneer of this locality passed away on the 24th day of this month. Frederick W. Pellman, the father of our Mrs. J. B. Garven, after a life of usefulness, died at Alamogordo, leaving behind him a host of friends to mourn his death. Mr. Pellman came to New Mexico in 1882 and accepted a position as clerk at the Mescalero Indian Reservation, which he held during the incumbencies of four different agents. The experiences of young Pellman during this time were varied and interesting, and he was always glad when in reminiscent mood to relate incidents of the past to his friends.

Mr. Pellman quit the Indian service in 1891, and engaged in business over on the Rio Grande, but only remained for a few years, when he came to Tularosa, where he supervised the interests of the Cogley Company. Later on he engaged in the cattle business between Alamogordo and the San Augustine ranch. He had the reputation of being one of the most efficient bookkeepers in the southwest. He leaves a widow and six children; Mesdames Delia Grant and Fred Crosby of Alamogordo, N. M.; Frank Lautery of Fort Worth, Texas; J. B. Garven of Carrizozo; Messrs Wm. Pellman of Seattle, Wash.; and Francis Pellman who is in the service, stationed at the Great Lake Training Station near Chicago, Ill. He leaves sixteen grandchildren and one great grandchild, all of whom were present at his death except two. The remains was laid to rest in family burial grounds at Alamogordo.

Messrs F. J. Sager, John Haley and Walker C. Hyde motored over to Capitan Wednesday, and helped in organizing a community council there. The names will appear next week.

Arise and be Sworn

Last week a party composed of Mr. Ed Harris and wife, Ira Johnson and wife, and the Misses Vera Harris and Cora Cole, Sallie Johnson, and Jennie Boone of Capitan, motored up to the Pecos river and enjoyed several days of recreation in that locality. Mr. Harris is authority for the broad statement that on a certain afternoon he caught a channel catfish weighing over twelve pounds, and the same fish furnished the entire party with an abundant supply for both supper and breakfast. This family gathering so to speak, is perhaps the last of this kind the folks will be able to enjoy together, as Mr. Ira Johnson is expected to be summoned to the service in the near future.

Nogal Notes

Vaughn Hobby has sold his farm and moved to Carrizozo where he will work for the Johnson Bros. Garage.

Quite a lot of cattle are dying on account of lack of vegetation. Jesse May has lost five valuable head at the Tortilafe Canyon.

R. H. Henly and son are in Vaughn and will remain there for a while at least, they have sent for their carpenter tools.

The Rev. Yocum of Oklahoma occupied the Henley Chapel pulpit Sunday May 19th. He preached to a large congregation and his text was, "Adam Where Art Thou." Rev. Yocum is a Nazarene and thinks of moving here soon.

The Red Cross met and organized May 26th with a membership of 17 but Carrizozo help did not arrive we suppose because of the high winds.

Lieut. R. T. Lucas Returns

Lieutenant R. T. Lucas returned on a ten days leave of absence Saturday morning, from the Medical Officers' Training Camp at Fort Riley, Kansas. The Dr. looks in the pink of condition and is greatly pleased with the work in the service. Among other things he says, the drawings for the foreign service in the Medical Camp are arranged in alphabetical order, the amount necessary in the last drawing was reached in the letter L. just two names before his own. Had his name been included in the drawing, the Lieutenant would have been on the road to France at this time, instead of enjoying a ten day leave of absence at home.

Get in the "Flag Galley!"

Mrs. Dr. Carl Freeman of White Oaks left last week for her old home in St. Joseph, Mo, to pay a visit to relatives. She visited friends at Kansas City, and other points in the state, before she returned on May 30th.

Shadow of the Cross Reaches Past the $5,000 Mark

Success of big Drive due to Heroic Efforts and Patriot- ic Sacrifices by Mercy Band and Cheerful Givers

Well done, good and faithful servants; the figures in the head of this article show how completely you have responded to the call of the government for more funds with which to prosecute the struggle to maintain a democracy that is a glowing example to the world, and to preserve it for future generations to come.

In this article, it is our aim to give credit collectively to all who assisted in the solicitation of this handsome amount, and also to commend the generosity of the givers. Messrs J. B. French and Brent Paden, who acted as president and secretary of the drive, are deserving of the highest of praise, for toil and sacrifice, while the able assistants who supported them come in for their share of the credit. If it were possible to chronicle in detail every account of the work done during this drive, and could it be shown to just what extent the good people made sacrifices in order to support the mercy fund, it would be enough to turn pages blue into gold.

For an example: one of the "Sisters of the Cross" tells of a little girl whose mother toils hard and long to earn a livelihood for herself and children, came voluntarily and with an amount, small though it was, said her mother wanted to do something for the cause. It was the "widows mite," but only Him that see'eth in secret, can estimate its value. The big drive is over; the different towns throughout the county responded nobly and as far as possible we are making separate mention of the good work that has been done. The Outlook congratulates one and all.

Justice in Imposed Fine

Albuquerque, N. M. May 30. — Word is received from Magdalena that Jake Hulse was fined $207.50 and costs on the 22nd of this month before the Justice of the Peace of that city for the killing of two antelope, on the evidence secured and presented by Forest Ranger Benton S. Rogers of the Datil National Forest.

Mrs. Shulda Goes East

Mrs. E. J. Shulda and children left Saturday evening for Galesburg, Ill. to spend several weeks with relatives in that city.

Boy—Born to Mrs. and Mrs. Julian Taylor, May 29th. Both doing well.

THE RANCH AT THE WOLVERINE

A tale of the wild outdoor life of pioneer days that called forth all the courage and resourcefulness of men and women inured to danger and hardship

By B. M. BOWER

(Copyright, Little, Brown & Co.)

The trouble with so many Western stories is that they are preposterous. The hero is always young, handsome and a dead shot. He never has even a remote fear of anything, no matter what the circumstances, and he is a glutton for hardships. The heroine is never anything less than beautiful. She rides like a goddess, handles a gun like a veteran, and possesses the wisdom of the ages, though she be not old enough to vote. In "The Ranch at the Wolverine" there is a refreshing difference. The hero, the heroine, and the various and sundry other characters in the story, perform like regular human beings. The men seem to be the kind that cuss and chew tobacco when out of sight and sound of their wives. The women have crying spells and fits of temper and gossiping bees and so on, just like women in real life. There's not a dead shot in the tale, and nobody is too handsome and good to be human. You will surely enjoy this serial.

THE EDITOR.

CHAPTER I.

Let Us Start at the Beginning.
FOUR trail worn oxen, their necks bowed to the yoke of patient servitude, should really begin this story. But to follow the trail they made would take several chapters which you certainly would skip—unless you like to hear the tale of how the wilderness was tamed and can thrill at the stern history of those who did the taming while they fought to keep their stomachs fairly well filled with food and their hard muscled bodies fit for the fray.

There was a woman, low browed, uncombed, harsh of voice and speech and nature, who drove the four oxen forward over lava rock and rough prairie and the scanty sage. I might tell you a great deal about Marthy, who plodded stolidly across the desert and the low lying hills along the Blackfoot, and of her weak souled, shiftless husband whom she called Jase when she did not call him worse.

They were the pioneers whose lurching wagon first forded the singing Wolverine stream just where it greens the tiny valley and then slips between huge lava rock ledges to join the larger stream. Jase would have stopped there and called home the sheltered little green spot in the gray barrenness. But Marthy went on up the farther hill and across the upland, another full day's journey with the sweating oxen.

They camped that night on another little, singing stream in another little valley which was not so level or so green or so wholly pleasing to the eye. And that night two of the oxen, impelled by a urger instinct than their human owners, strayed away down a narrow, winding gorge and so discovered the Cove and feasted upon its rich grasses. It was Marthy who went after them and who recognized the little, hidden Eden as the place of her dreams—supposing she ever had dreams. So Marthy and Jase and the four oxen took possession, and with much labor and many hard years for the woman and with the same number of years and the little labor as he could manage on the man's part they tamed the Cove and made it a beauty spot in that wild land. A beauty spot, though their lives held nothing but treadmill toll and harsh words and a mental horizon narrowed almost to the limits of the grim, gray rock wall that surrounded them.

Another sturdy souled couple came afterward and saw the Wolverine and made for the selves a home upon its banks. And in the rough little log cabin was born the girl child I want you to meet—a girl child when she should have been a boy to meet her father's need and great desire; a girl child whose very name was a compromise between the parents. For they called her Billy for sake of the boy her father wanted and Louise for the girl her mother had longed for to lighten that terrible loneliness which the far frontier brings to the women who brave its stern emptiness.

When Billy Louise was twelve she wanted to do something big, though she was hazy as to the particular nature of that big something. She tried to talk it over with Marthy, but Marthy could not seem to think beyond the Cove.

When she was thirteen Billy Louise rode over with a loaf of bread she had baked all by herself, and she put this problem to Marthy:

"I've been thinking I'd go ahead and write poetry Marthy—a whole book of it with pictures. But I do love to make bread—and people have to eat bread. What would you be, Marthy—a poet or a cook?"

Marthy looked at her a minute, lent her attention briefly to the question and gave what she considered good advice.

"You learn how to cook, Billy Louise. Yuh don't want to go and get notions. Your maw ain't healthy, and your paw likes good grub. Poetry is all foolshness. There ain't any money in it."

"Walter Scott paid his debts writing poetry," said Billy Louise argumentatively. She had just read all about Walter Scott in a magazine which a passing cowboy had given her. Perhaps that had something to do with her new ambition.

"Mebby he did and mebbly he didn't. I'd like to see our debts paid off with poetry. It'd have to be worth a hull lot more'n what I'd give for it."

"Oh! Have you got debts, too, Marthy?" Billy Louise at thirteen was still ready with sympathy. "Daddy's got lots and piles of 'em. He bought some cattle and now he talks to mommie all the time about debts. Mommie wants me to go to Boise to school next winter, to Aunt Sarah's. And daddy says there's debts to pay. I didn't know you had any, Marthy."

"Well, I have got. We bought some cattle, too, and they ain't done's well's they might. If I had a man that was any good on earth I could put up more hay. But I can't git nothing outa Jase but whines. Your paw oughta send you to school, Billy Louise, even if he has got debts."

"He says he wishes he could, but he don't know where the money's coming from."

"How much 's it goin' to take?" asked Marthy heavily.

"Oh, piles," Billy Louise spoke airily to hide her pride in the importance of the subject. "Fifty dollars, I guess. I've got to have some new clothes, mommie says. I'd like a blue dress."

"And your paw can't raise fifty dollars?" Marthy's tone was plainly beligerent.

"Got to pay interest," said Billy Louise importantly.

Marthy said not another word about debts or the duties of parents. What she did was more to the point, however, for she hitched the mules to a rattly old buckboard next day and drove over to the MacDonald ranch on the Wolverine. She carried $50 in her pocket, and that was practically all the money Marthy possessed and had been saved for the debts that harassed her. She gave the money to Billy Louise's mother and said that it was a present for Billy Louise and meant for "school money." She said that she hadn't any girl of her own to spend the money on and that Billy Louise was a good girl and a smart girl, and she wanted to do a little something toward her schooling.

A woman will sacrifice more pride than you would believe if she sees a way toward helping her children to an education. Mrs. MacDonald took the money, and she promised secrecy—with a feeling of relief that Marthy wished it. She was astonished to find that Marthy had any feelings not directly connected with work or the shortcomings of Jase, but she never suspected that Marthy had made any sacrifice for Billy Louise.

So Billy Louise went away to school and never knew whose money had made it possible to go, and Marthy worked harder and drove Jase more relentlessly to make up that $50. She never mentioned the matter to any one. The next year it was the same. When in August she questioned Billy Louise clumsily upon the subject of finances and learned that daddy still talked about debts and interest and didn't know where the money was coming from she drove over again with money for the schooling. And again she extracted a promise of silence.

She did this for four years, and not a soul knew that it cost her anything in the way of extra work and extra harassment of mind. She bought more cattle and cut more hay and went deeper into debt, for as Billy Louise grew older and prettier and more accustomed to the ways of town she needed more money, and the August gift grew proportionately larger. The mother was thankful beyond the point of questioning. An August without Marthy and Marthy's gift of money would have been a tragedy, and so selfish is mother love sometimes that she would have accepted the gift even if she had known what it cost the giver.

At eighteen, then, Billy Louise knew some things not taught by the wide plains and the wild hills around her. She was not spoiled by her little learning, which was a good thing. And when her father died tragically beneath an overturned load of poles from the mountain at the head of the canyon Billy Louise came home. The Billy of her tried to take his place and the Louise of her attempted to take care of her mother, who was unfitted both by nature and habit to take care of herself. Which was, after all, a rather big thing for any one to attempt.

Jase began to complain of having "all gone" feelings during the winter after Billy Louise came home and took up the whole burden of the Wolverine ranch. He complained to Billy Louise when she rode over one clear, sunny day in January. He said that he was getting old, which was perfectly true, and that he was not as able-bodied as he might be and didn't expect to last much longer. Billy Louise spoke of it to Marthy, and Marthy snorted.

"He's able-bodied enough at meal-times, I notice," she retorted. "I've heard that tune ever since I knowed him. He can't fool me!"

Jase mandered in at that moment, and Marthy turned and glared at Jase with what Billy Louise considered a perfectly uncalled for animosity. In reality, Marthy was covertly looking for visible symptoms of the all-goneness. She shut her harsh lips together tightly at what she saw. Jase certainly was puffy under his watery, pink rimmed eyes, and the withered cheeks above his thin graying beard really did have a pasty gray look.

"D'you turn them calves out into the corral?" she demanded, her voice harder because of her secret uneasiness.

"I was goin' to, but the wind's changed into the north, 'n I thought mebbly you wouldn't want 'em out." Jase turned back aimlessly to the door. His voice was getting cracked and husky, and the deprecating note dominated pathetically all that he said. "You'll have to face the wind goin' home," he said to Billy Louise. "Morn' likely you'll be facin' snow too. Looks bad off that way."

"You go on and turn them calves out!" Marthy commanded him harshly. "Billy Louise ain't goin' home if it storms. I sh'd think you'd know enough to know that."

"Oh, but I'll have to go anyway," the girl interrupted. "Mommie can't be there alone; she'd worry herself to death if I didn't show up by dark. She worries about every little thing since daddy died. I ought to have gone before—or I oughtn't to have come. But she was worrying about you, Marthy. She hadn't seen or heard of you for a month, and she was afraid you might be sick or something. Why don't you get some one to stay with you? I think you ought to." She looked toward the door, which Jase had closed upon his departure. "If Jase should—get sick or anything—"

"Jase ain't goin' to git sick," Marthy retorted glumly. "Yuh don't want to let him worry yuh, Billy Louise. If I'd worried every time, he would around about being sick I'd be dead or crazy by now. I dunno but maybe I'll have somebody to help with the work, though," she added after a pause, during which she had swiped the dishrag around the sides of the pan once or twice and had opened the door and thrown the water out beyond the doorstep like the maven she was. "I got a nephew that wants to come out. He's been in a bank, but he's quit and wants to git on to a ranch. I dunno but I'll have him come in the spring."

"Do," urged Billy Louise, perfectly unconscious of the potentialities of the future. "I hate to think of you two down here alone. I don't suppose any one ever comes down here except me—and that isn't often."

"Nobody's got any call to come down," said Marthy stolidly. "They sure ain't going to come for our company, and there ain't nothing else to bring 'em."

"Well, there aren't many to come, you know," laughed Billy Louise, shaking out the dish towel and spreading it over two nails, as she did at home. "I'm your nearest neighbor, and I've got six miles to ride—against the wind at that. I think I'd better start. We've got a half breed doing chores for us, but he has to be looked after or he neglects things. I'll not get another chance to come very soon, I'm afraid. Mommie hates to have me ride around much in the winter. You send for my nephew right away, why don't you, Marthy?" It was like Billy Louise to mix command and entreaty together.

"Really, I don't think Jase looks a bit well."

"A good strong steppin' of sage 'n fix him all right, only he ain't sick, as I see. You take this shawi."

Billy Louise refused the shawi and ran down the twisted path fringed with long, reaching fingers of the bare berry bushes. At the stable she stopped for an aimless dialogue with Jase and then rode away, past the orchard whose leafless branches gave glimpses of the low, sod roofed cabin, with Marthy standing rather disconsolately on the rough doorstep watching her go.

Blue was climbing steadily out of the gorge, twitching an ear backward with flattering attention whenever his lady spoke. The horse went on, calmly stepping over this rock and around that as if it were the simplest thing in the world to find sure footing and carry his lady smoothly up that trail. He threw up his head so suddenly that Billy Louise was startled out of her aimless dreamings and pointed nose and ears toward the little creek bottom above, where Marthy had lighted her campfire long and long ago.

A few steps farther and Blue stopped short in the trail to look and listen. Billy Louise could see the nervous twitchings of his muscles under the skin of neck and shoulders, and she smiled to herself. Nothing could ever come upon her unaware when she rode alone so long as she rode Blue. A hunting dog was not more keenly alive to his surroundings.

"Go on, Blue," she commanded after a minute. "If it's a bear or anything like that you can make a run for it; if it's a wolf I'll shoot it. You needn't stand here all night, anyway."

Blue went on, out from behind the willow growth that hid the open. He returned to his calm, picking a smooth trail through the scattered rocks and tiny washouts. It was the girl's turn to stare and speculate. She did not know this horseman who sat negligently in the saddle and looked up at the cedar grown bluff beyond while his horse stood knee deep in the little stream. She did not know him, and there were not so many travelers in the land that strangers were a matter of indifference.

Blue welcomed the horse with a democratic nicker and went forward briskly. And the rider turned his head, eyed the girl sharply as she came up and nodded a cursory greeting. His horse lifted its head to look, decided that it wanted another swallow or two and lowered its muzzle again to the water.

Billy Louise could not form any opinion of the man's age or personality, for he was encased in a wolfskin coat which covered him completely from hat to ankles. She got an impression of a thin, dark face and a sharp glance from eyes that seemed dark also. There was a thin, high nose, and beyond that Billy Louise did not look. If she had the mouth must certainly have reassured her somewhat.

Blue stepped nonchalantly down into the stream beside the strange horse and went across without stopping to drink. The strange horse moved on also, as if that were the natural thing to do—which it was, since chance sent them traveling the same trail. Billy Louise set her teeth together with the queer little vicious click that had always been her habit when she felt thwarted and constrained to yield to circumstances and straightened herself in the saddle.

"Looks like a storm," the fur coated one observed, with a perfectly transparent attempt to lighten the awkwardness.

Billy Louise tilted her chin upward and gazed at the gray sweep of clouds moving sullenly toward the mountains at her back. She glanced at the man and caught him looking intently at her face.

He did not look away immediately, as he should have done, and Billy Louise felt a little heat wave of embarrassment, emphasized by resentment.

"Are you going far?" he queried in the same tone he had employed before.

"Six miles," she answered shortly, though she tried to be decently civil.

"I've about eighteen," he said. "Looks like we'll both get caught out in a blizzard."

Certainly he had a pleasant enough voice, and, after all, it was not his fault that he happened to be at the crossing when she rode out of the gorge. Billy Louise, in common justice, laid aside her resentment and looked at him with a hint of a smile at the corners of her lips.

"That's what we have to expect when we travel in this country in the winter," she replied. "Eighteen miles will take you long after dark."

"Well, I was sort of figuring on putting up at some ranch if it got too bad. There's a ranch somewhere ahead on the Wolverine, isn't there?"

"Yes," Billy Louise bit her lip, but hospitality is an unwritten law of the West, a law not to be lightly broken. "That's where I live. We'll be glad to have you stop there of course."

The stranger must have felt and admired the unconscious dignity of her tone and words, for he thanked her simply and refrained from looking too intently at her face.

Fine sittings of snow, like meal flung down from a gigantic sieve, swept into their faces as they rode on. The man turned his face toward her after a long silence.

"You'd better ride on ahead and get in out of this," he said curtly. "Your horse is fresh. It's going to be worse and more of it before long. This cayuse of mine has had thirty miles or so of rough going."

"I think I'd better wait for you," she said primly. "There are bad places where the trail goes close to the bluff, and the lava rock will be slippery with this snow, and it's getting dark so fast that a stranger might go over."

"If that's the case the sooner you are past the bad places the better. I'm all right. You drift along."

Billy Louise speculated briefly upon the note of calm authority in his voice. He did not know evidently that she was more accustomed to giving commands than to obeying them. Her lips gave a little quirk of amusement at his mistake.

"You go on. I don't want a guide." He tilted his head peremptorily toward the blurred trail ahead.

Billy Louise laughed a little. She did not feel in the least embarrassed now. "Do you never get what you don't want?" she asked mildly. "I'd a lot rather lead you past those places than have you go over the edge," she said, "because nobody could get you up or even go down and bury you decently. It wouldn't be a bit nice. It's much simpler to keep you on top."

He said something, but Billy Louise could not hear what it was. She suspected him of swearing. She rode on in silence.

"Blue's a dandy horse on bad trails and in the dark," she observed companionably at last. "He simply can't lose his footing or his way."

"Yes? That's nice." Billy Louise felt like putting out her tongue at him for the cool remoteness of his tone. It would serve him right to ride on and let him break his neck over the bluff if he wanted to. She shut her teeth together and turned her face away from him.

So, in silence and with no very good feeling between them, they went precariously down the steep hill (the hill up which Marthy and the oxen and Jase had toiled so laboriously twenty-seven years before) and across the tiny flat to where the cabin window winked a welcome at them through the storm.

CHAPTER II.

A Book, a Bannock, and a Bed.

BLUE led the way straight to the low, dirt roofed stable of logs and stopped with his nose against the closed door. Billy Louise herself was deceived by the whirl of snow and would have missed the stable entirely if the leadership had been hers. She patted Blue gratefully on the shoulder when she unsaddled him. She groped with her fingers for the wooden peg in the wall where the saddle should hang failed to find it and so laid the saddle down against the logs and covered it with the blanket.

"Just turn your horse in loose," she directed the man shortly. "Blue won't fight, and I think the rest of the horses are in the other part. And come on to the house."

It pleased her a little to see that he obeyed her without protest, but she was not so pleased at his silence, and she led the way rather indignantly toward the winking eye which was the cabin's window.

At the sound of their feet on the wide doorstep her mother pulled open the door and stood fair in the light looking out with an anxious look.

"Is that you, Billy Louise? Oh, ain't Peter Howling Dog with you? What makes you so terrible late, Billy Louise? Come right in, stranger. I don't know your name, but I don't need to know it. A storm like this is all the interduction a fellow needs, I guess."

"What about Peter?" Billy Louise asked. "Isn't he here?"

"No, and he ain't been since an hour or so after you left. He saddled up and rode off down the river, to the reservation, I reckon."

The stranger introduced himself as Ward Warren, who has a claim on Mill creek. Billy Louise has had many day dreams about a man bearing that name.

Make Cottage Cheese

Food That Is Nutritious and Cheaper Than Most Meats in Furnishing Protein

Preparing Homemade Cottage Cheese for the Market.

If a condenser is within reasonable distance the creameryman sometimes can sell his skim milk there. Very few creameries, however, are so situated, and the largest opportunity for the creameryman to divert skim milk and buttermilk into channels of human consumption is by the manufacture of cottage cheese, says the United States department of agriculture. This product is easy to make and utilizes skim milk and good grades of buttermilk.

Cottage cheese is one of the important meat substitutes. It contains a larger percentage of protein (the chief material for body building) than most meats and furnishes this material at a lower cost. In every pound of cottage cheese there is about one-fifth of a pound of protein, nearly all of which is digestible. Meats, on the other hand, usually contain less protein and besides have a certain waste, such as bone and other inedible material. A pound of cottage cheese daily would supply all the protein required by the ordinary adult engaged in a sedentary occupation.

The following table shows that cottage cheese is much cheaper than meats in furnishing protein for the diet.

For supplying protein, 1 pound of cottage cheese equals:

1.27 pounds sirloin steak.
1.09 pounds round steak.
1.37 pounds chuck rib beef.
1.52 pounds fowl.
1.46 pounds fresh ham.
1.44 pounds smoked ham.
1.58 pounds loin pork chop.
1.51 pounds hind leg of lamb.
1.87 pounds breast of veal.

In addition to protein, energy for performing body work must be furnished by food. As a source of energy, also, cottage cheese is cheaper than most meats at present prices. The following table shows the comparison when energy is considered.

On the basis of energy supplied, 1 pound of cottage cheese equals:

8 1-8 ounces sirloin steak.
11 1/2 ounces round steak.
11 1/2 ounces chuck rib beef.
10 1/2 ounces fowl.
6 1/2 ounces fresh ham.
5 ounces smoked ham.
6 ounces loin pork chop.
7 1-8 ounces hind leg of lamb.
12 1/2 ounces breast of veal.

A yield of 15 or more pounds of cottage cheese from 100 pounds of skim milk can readily be obtained, or a mixture of two parts skim milk and one of buttermilk will give the same results. The wholesale price on most established markets varies from 4 1/2 cents a pound during the early summer to 7 cents during the winter, the 1917 price showing marked increases over former years. When making as much as 800 pounds a day the total cost of manufacture, including labor, coal, power, water, packing (tubs), and depreciation on equipment, is from 8 to 10 cents a hundred pounds of skim milk.

It is quite evident that the creameryman is in position to make his patrons a good business proposition. In most sections he can offer them a cash market for their skim milk at a price at least equivalent to the value obtained from feeding to animals.

no larger than one would cut for himself at the table, and by making sure that the fat does not exceed 10 per cent of the scraps fed at one time the dangers in feeding it are avoided.

The best way to save kitchen waste for poultry is to keep a one-gallon jar, of glazed or galvanized ware, with a cover in a convenient place, putting into this scraps of bread, cake, and meat from the table, remnants of servings of vegetables, cereals, pies, puddings, etc., and whatever waste from the preparation of meals is suitable to combine with these things in a mash.

Once a day the contents of the jar should be turned into a pail of appropriate size and as much ground feed-stuff mixed with them as can be stirred in with a strong iron spoon or a wooden stirring stick. The amount and kinds of ground feeds to be used will depend upon the quantity of water with the scraps and whether any particular article predominates.

FEEDING SCRAPS TO THE CHICKENS

By feeding kitchen scraps to poultry the last bit of waste of human food may be converted into good fresh eggs or meat, as may be desired, says the U. S. Department of Agriculture. Fowls will eat all the leavings that are in edible form. By special preparation some things not adapted to human consumption become valuable feed for poultry. Fresh bones, crushed or ground, are a delicacy for them. They will eat considerable amounts of the parings of all kinds of vegetables if these are given in such form that the birds can swallow them readily. Many poultry keepers save parings, cook them with small potatoes and other waste vegetables, and fed mixed with meals.

Not all kitchen waste, however, makes poultry fed. The skins of bananas, oranges and lemons are not edible and should not be mixed with scraps that are to be fed to poultry, for the birds leave such stuff, and as it accumulates it makes the place where the birds are fed look sleazey. Coffee grounds, and tea leaves in small quantities are not objectionable, but in large quantities should be disposed of separately. Fat meat in large pieces should not be put with scraps for poultry because a hen can swallow a much larger piece of fat than is good for her. By setting waste fat in pieces

HYMN TO THE NIGHT

I heard the trailing garments of the night
Sweep through her marble halls!
I saw her sable skirts all fringed with light
From the celestial walls!

I felt her presence, by its spell of night,
Stoop o'er me from above;
The calm, majestic presence of the night,
As of the one I love.

I heard the sounds of sorrow and delight,
The manifold, soft chimes,
That fill the haunted chambers of the night,
Like some old poet's rhymes.

From the cool cisterns of the midnight air
My spirit drank repose;
The fountain of perpetual peace flows there—
From those deep cisterns flows.

O holy night! from thee I learn to bear
What man has borne before!
Thou layest thy finger on the lips of care,
And they complain no more.

Peace! Peace! Orestes-like I breathe this prayer!
Descend with broad-winged flight,
The welcome, the thrice-prayed for, the most fair,
The best beloved night.

—Longfellow.

PREVENT FIRE LOSSES

By the U. S. Department of Agriculture

Millions of dollars' worth of agricultural wealth is destroyed by fire each year in the United States. At normal prices and with an average yield it would take the greater part of the potato crop of the country to offset all that is lost annually through fires on farms. This is a dead loss to the nation—for the fact that most individual losers are partially reimbursed by insurance does not in the least reduce the drain on our national resources—and it is a loss that is largely preventable.

The problem of fighting or preventing fire in the country districts is a most serious one, for organized fire prevention work such as has been developed to a science in many cities is practically impossible in the country. Some fires on farms may be unavoidable, but a great many of them could be prevented by a comparatively small amount of time intelligently applied by the individual farmers in the study of conditions which are likely to cause fire, and by placing simple and inexpensive fire-fighting equipment in convenient places about the farm buildings.

The farmer should study his buildings and their contents from the point of view of the fire inspector of the city, whose sole business is to see all the things that can be done to improve conditions so that fire cannot easily start, and to determine the best ways of fighting any fires that may start. He should remember that any preventive or protective measures which he may take are for his own benefit, and that protection sufficient to prevent a fire is cheap as compared with the loss entailed by the average farm fire. Every building or set of buildings has certain points which are more susceptible to fires than others, but adequate protection must be provided for the entire premises before the owner can be sure that some weakness due to oversight or neglect will not neutralize the good effect of all the work previously done.

Most farmers carry fire insurance on their buildings and contents sufficient partly to repay for any losses that may occur—but this insurance is paid from premiums which are nothing more than a tax collected from the policyholders for this purpose. The loss occasioned by a serious fire is such that very few people can afford to be without fire insurance, but attention of the prevention of fire would result in reducing the number of fires, and, therefore, the rate of premiums necessary to cover the fire losses. This would be felt quickly in mutual companies which are owned and managed by the policyholders themselves and in which the premiums are fixed by the actual losses.

Girls Wearing Overalls at University of Washington

Hooveralls! What are they? The official garb of the American housewife. That's all.

No, they're not trouserettes. Nor have they a split-skirt effect.

The girls in the cookery classes at the University of Washington, Seattle, have donned them in place of the all-white garb hitherto in use in the home economics department.

"Hooveralls" are real dresses of light blue chambray, belted, with white collars and cuffs. As the name indicates, Herbert Hoover, the national food administrator, has endorsed them. He wants to see every American housewife wearing them.

High Cattle Prices Accompany High Beef Prices

If consumers are to pay less for beef, live-stock raisers naturally will receive less for cattle.

If farmers are paid more for live stock, consumers will necessarily pay more for meat.

Swift & Company pays for cattle approximately 90 per cent of the price received for beef and by-products. The remaining 10 per cent pays for dressing, freight to market, operation of distributing houses, and in most cases, delivery to the retailer. Net profits also have to come out of this 10 per cent.

This margin cannot be squeezed arbitrarily without danger of crippling the only effective means of performing the complex service of converting cattle into meat and distributing this meat to the fighting forces and to consumers.

Swift & Company's net profit on beef during 1917 was only 1/4 of a cent per pound. On all products, it was a little less than four cents on each dollar of sales. Complete elimination of these profits would not affect appreciably retail prices of meat, or farm prices of live stock.

Swift & Company will be glad to co-operate in devising methods that will improve conditions in the meat and live stock industry.

"Over the Top" Three

Times and Then Some

The White Oaks workers turned in their report this week and the figures amounted to $264.45, which is remarkable for the small territory the workers had, for the field is so small when compared to others. In realization of this fact, their apportionment was fixed at $30.00; the White Oaks people forgot all about quotas or apportionments in their zeal for the mercy fund. They passed their quota like a flash; on and on they went until the time to strike the total when it was found they had gone over the quota three times and "then some", to the amount of $24.40. The ladies and gentlemen who successfully carried out the campaign were Messers Mayer Bros., Queen, Hewitt, and Rudiselle, Mesdames C. D. and Paul Mayer, Spence, Queen, and their able assistants whom we would be glad to mention if we had the names in our possession. This same little band of heroic workers turned in on the second and third Liberty Loan Drives, about $24,000.

Big Red Cross Diamond.

One of the finest and largest diamonds in the world has been presented to the Red Cross sale by the Diamond syndicate of London. The stone, which is of the tint known as "pale canary" weighs 205 karats and is practically twice as large as the Kohinoor (108 karats). It is highly phosphorescent, and after brilliant illumination emits the rays it has absorbed, thus becoming self-luminous in the dark.

The stone, which originally weighed 270 karats and was discovered in 1901 in the Des Biers mines in Grigueland West, has been cut in very original and beautiful form at Amsterdam, a feature of the cutting being that a Maltese cross is visible in the facets. This peculiarity is only shared by the Pitt diamond.

Some idea of its value may be gained from the fact that a yellow diamond of 85 karats, belonging to the crown jewels of Austria, is valued at $110,000, and from the model of this one which was shown recently is far inferior to the "Red Cross" diamond.—London Chronicle.

Wanted to Hear Him Howl.

A Jennings county teacher says he criticized a pupil who was late in getting to school and demanded an explanation. The boy informed him that in passing the home of his playmate he saw the boy undergoing several applications with a slipper in the hand of his playmate's mother.

"But why should that cause you to be late?" asked the teacher.

"Well, you see, it was this way. I wanted to hear him howl," was the reply.—Indianapolis News.

The Horse's False Teeth.

Four-year-old David was greatly impressed when his grandmother removed her teeth at bedtime. The next day David saw a man taking the bit from a horse's mouth.

"Grandmother!" he exclaimed, "look at that man taking the horse's teeth out!"

PROVEN SWAMP-ROOT

AIDS WEAK KIDNEYS

The symptoms of kidney and bladder troubles are often very distressing and leave the system in a run-down condition. The kidneys seem to suffer most, as almost every victim complains of lame back and urinary troubles which should not be neglected, as these danger signals often lead to more dangerous kidney troubles.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, which, so many people say, soon heals and strengthens the kidneys, is a splendid kidney, liver and bladder medicine, and, being an herbal compound, has a gentle healing effect on the kidneys, which is almost immediately noticed in most cases by those who use it.

A trial will convince anyone who may be in need of it. Better get a bottle from your nearest drug store, and start treatment at once.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.—Adv.

FATHEAD FISH.

"There's one thing I am thankful for," said Mrs. Fathead Fish.

"And what is that, my dear?" asked Mr. Fathead Fish, looking at her out of his glassy blue eyes.

"I may be called Mrs. Fathead Fish," she said, "because my head is rather fat. But your head is much, much fatter, and that is how we have the name—all from your head."

"I think it's a great honor," said Mr. Fathead Fish, "to be named after one's head. The head is the most important part of a creature. In the head are the eyes with which we see."

"That's no news to me," said Mrs. Fathead.

"And there are the ears with which we hear."

"How bright you are," Mrs. Fathead said, splashing as if she did not think so at all!

"And there are our mouths, our happy mouths."

"Why happy, pray tell?" asked Mrs. Fathead, who was curious now.

"Because into our mouths goes the food—the goodies that we eat. So our mouths are happy."

"I never heard mouths spoken of in just that way before," said Mrs. Fathead.

"My dear, are you losing your mind?" asked Mr. Fathead as he looked at his wife in a very worried manner. "Do you mean to tell me that you've forgotten that we eat with our mouths?"

"I haven't forgotten that," said Mrs. Fathead, "but I never before heard anyone call mouths happy. It's just queer—that's all."

"I'm queer, and glad of it," said Mr. Fathead.

"And I suppose I liked you because you had a still fatter head, and I thought it was beautiful. Just lately I've been longing to see thin heads, or ordinary heads."

"Don't long for the impossible," said Mr. Fathead. "Be a sensible fish like myself."

"The fish families were never noted for much sense," said Mrs. Fathead.

"Then be as sensible as you can," replied Mr. Fathead.

Now Mr. Fathead Fish has a much fatter head than Mrs. Fathead has. His forehead is really extremely fat. He is quite a peculiar fish and has 12 dorsal spines. His sides and his fins are usually bright red and he is very proud of his handsome color.

"I think I'll give some swimming races this afternoon," said Mrs. Fathead.

"Good idea," said Mr. Fathead. "We'll have all the Fathead family, and we'll see which one can swim the fastest, and the one which can do the most tricks. We haven't had any swimming races for a long time. That was a happy suggestion of yours."

"Dear me," said Mrs. Fathead, "how happy things here are according to you. There are happy mouths and happy suggestions."

"Shows my fine disposition," said Mr. Fathead with a silly grin.

Soon the races began and how queerly all of the Mr. Fatheads did look, but they were so used to having queer heads that they did not mind in the least.

Into Our Mouths Goes the Food.

pared and then Mr. Fathead told his famous story of the importance in having a fine, fat head as he called it.

"Well," said Mr. Fathead, after the guests had left, "we may have fat heads and some folks and some fishes may not think we are beautiful, but we have a good time in spite of it. Yes, we have a very happy time."

Mrs. Fathead's fins shook as she laughed, for Mr. Fathead certainly called everything "happy"—"happy mouths," "happy suggestions," and "happy times."

GATUN LAKE IS BIG AFFAIR

Reservoir, Built by Americans, Far Outdoes Anything Else That the World Has Known.

The government fisheries bureau is planting Gatun lake with fishes. The first shipment for the purpose, made by steamer the other day, consisted of catfish, sunfish, carp and black bass, all of "fingerling" size. The bass were planted in the Chagres river, the principal tributary of the lake.

A Pharaoh of the twelfth dynasty constructed a reservoir (known today as Lake Moeris) which covered 63 square miles. It was an artificial lake, regarded in its day as one of the wonders of the world, and was designed to regulate the flow of the Nile.

In its way it was the most remarkable engineering achievement of antiquity. But Gatun lake, on the line of the Panama canal, beats it, being about three times as big. Its object is similar—namely, to take care of the flood waters of the Chagres river and prevent them from doing mischief.

Gatun lake is the largest artificial body of water ever known in the world. It is, in fact, the most important feature of the transisthmian canal, extending two-thirds of the distance from the Caribbean sea to the Pacific ocean.

It occupies a basin that was dry land before the canal was built; and because the area covered by it is very hilly and topographically irregular, it stretches in a multiple of arms far up into its marshy shores.

One reason why its shores are marshy is that in its shallows there develops with astonishing luxuriance a kind of grass which sends out runners in all directions. On this account its banks are not easily accessible even to small craft.

As for fishes, it is hoped that they will multiply and furnish a worthwhile food supply.

Appearances Were Against Her.

An amusing story was told to me the other day concerning Lady Sybil Grant, daughter of the earl of Rosebery.

It appears that her ladyship, who is an enthusiastic war worker, recently assisted in waiting upon some wounded soldiers at a concert and tea got up for their entertainment.

At the close of the meal one of the guests, not in the least realizing who she was, shyly offered her a tip, which was politely declined.

"I really don't need it, you know," said Lady Sybil smilingly. "I've got plenty of money."

"Is that so?" exclaimed the soldier, in tones of evident surprise, allowing his gaze to rest on the plain linen overalls she had donned for the occasion.

"You've got plenty of money, have you?"

Lady Sybil nodded assent. "Well, m'les," was the somewhat disconcerting reply, "you'll excuse me saying so, won't you? But—you don't look it."—Pearson's Weekly.

Three Seasons in Year.

The Egyptian year was divided into three seasons. These were Shait, the season of waters, being the time occupied by the rising spread and recession of the Nile; Pirut, the season of vegetation; the Shonmu, the season of harvest. These seasons are supposed to have been arranged by the god Thot. Each season was divided into four months and they were known in official documents by numbers only. Thus we have the first, second, third and fourth months of Shait, the months of each of the other seasons being designated in the same manner. Each month, however, had a patron god and the people ordinarily gave to it, in their daily intercourse, the name of its god. These deity names of the months were transcribed into Greek, then into Arabic and are now largely used by the Christian inhabitants of Egypt in preference to the Mussulman appellations.

Sailor Now German Prisoner.

Men serving on the destroyer Jacob Jones of the American fleet in foreign waters had a terrific fight with the sea after their ship had been sunk by a German submarine. The attack came suddenly, late in the afternoon. Although every effort was made to return the fight and save the ship, she finally settled and went down. Many of the men got into the boats and, on the rafts and a great number were seen swimming in the sea. Two of these were picked up by the Germans. One of these men, John Francis Murphy, is now held as a prisoner by the Germans. After having gone through the ordeal of being torpedoed Murphy made a heroic struggle to save members of the ship's crew. No further news has been heard from him beyond the fact that he is held prisoner in Germany. Murphy was a ship's cook, first class, on the Jones.

The completion of the new $8,000,000 Bevo plant in St. Louis is a notable war time industrial achievement. After years of scientific experiments Bevo was created for two purposes: as an aid to Mr. Busch's plans for a real, sane temperance program in America, based upon education and intelligent moral development, and to supply the public with the highest quality of non-alcoholic beverage that skill and science could produce. Bevo has been a positive aid to the Government in carrying out its military temperance program, for it has already become the favorite of both the Army and Navy.

SIRUPS AND HONEY BY PARCEL POST

These Containers Can Carry Syrups and Honey in the Mails Long Distances, the Bureau of Markets Learned.

LIQUID SWEETS BY PARCEL POST

Average Distance 654 Miles in Experimental Shipments by Bureau of Markets.

LOSS IN THREE SHIPMENTS

Tin Containers With Screw Cap Found Satisfactory for Syrups and Honey—Urge Only High-Grade Products Be Shipped.

Producers and consumers may find it to their advantage to use the parcel post for marketing syrups and extracted honey, according to a statement from the bureau of markets, United States department of agriculture. Experimental shipments of maple, cane, sorghum syrups, and extracted honey, made from many parts of the country over many different mail routes, have shown the possibilities of marketing these products by parcel post. A total of 894 trial shipments were made over distances averaging 654 miles, a much greater distance, it is pointed out, than syrups are likely to be sent by mail. Of these shipments only three showed any material loss of contents because of seepage or leakage and this was due to unusually rough handling.

Tin Containers Used.
Two types of tin containers were found satisfactory for parcel post shipments of syrups and honey. Both types have screw caps and are provided with outer cartons of corrugated paper board. The screw caps contain snugly fitting pieces of cork that cover the opening in the cans when the screw caps are properly closed. As a protection to the screw caps, squares of corrugated paper board are placed on top of the cans beside the screw caps. Such packages properly wrapped and securely tied, marked "fragile" as required by the postal regulations for packages containing liquids, will carry without danger of leakage in the mails.

High Cost of Containers.
While the cost of containers is high at the present time, there are doubtless many cases in which parcel post marketing would be desirable and economical, as syrups and extracted honey are good substitutes for sugar. Suggestions on obtaining customers and conducting business with them by parcel post may be found in Farmers' Bulletin 922, "Parcel Post Business Methods."

In order to retain customers, say the specialists, it is necessary that only high-grade products be shipped, as the principal incentive to buying by parcel post is to obtain products of high quality. Persons desiring further particulars in regard to shipping syrups and extracted honey by parcel post may apply to the bureau of markets, United States department of agriculture.

Care Makes Bees Efficient.
Because of lack of attention fully half the bees now kept in the United States are virtually useless to their owners and consequently beekeeping is often condemned as unprofitable. Probably in an average season for the United States, as a whole the surplus honey obtained by good beekeepers scarcely will exceed 50 pounds to the colony. Assuming that 400 pounds is the average needed by a hive to maintain its existence during the year, this 50-pound surplus represents then only one-ninth of the nectar gathered by the bees. In such an average season an apiary of 100 colonies may gather nectar equivalent to 2 1/2 tons of honey where the "honey crop" or surplus honey will be only 2 1/4 tons. That 100 colonies of bees can find nectar sufficient to make 2 1/2 tons of honey within a range of about two miles gives some idea of the amount of sugar available in the form of nectar. This amount doubtless is much below the actual sugar at hand, for when nectar is flowing freely bees do not get it all. Furthermore, in many places more than 50 pounds of surplus are obtained and often more than 100 colonies can be kept profitably in one place.

In the face of these facts it is regrettable to find so many beekeepers who fail to get even the small percentage which belongs to the beekeeper. There are parts of the United States where 90 per cent of all colonies of bees are in hollow logs or plain square boxes in which combs of bees cannot be handled. There are few parts of the country where the box hive is not found and probably one-third of all the bees in the country are so housed. In this case both equipment and management are poor and the energy of the bees is misdirected. Even of those who keep their bees in modern hives of movable frames the vast majority do not get the full crop. By failing to control swarming by providing a sufficient room for storage or by lack of proper care in winter their crop is often reduced one-half or more.

HOW MANY FARMERS ARE CO-OPERATING

Farmers' co-operative purchasing and marketing associations now number about 14,000 with about two million members and do an annual business estimated at one and one-half billion dollars. On the basis of the value of products handled the elevator associations lead, followed in order by fruit and produce organizations, and creameries and cheese factories.

IN SMART CLOTHES

Women Given Chance in American-Made Cloth Costume.

Millady, if Rushed for Time, and Dresses Carelessly, Cannot Adopt, Without Working Injury to Herself.

The American woman is given a chance to look extremely smart in her American-made cloth costume. If she has the ability to live up to the part assigned her by the designers. However, observes a fashion writer, it gives one a sinking feeling, after looking at a few dozens of remarkably good tailored frocks and suits designed here, that no woman who is rushed for time and dresses carelessly can adopt these clothes without working injury to herself.

Those who do not care to give a single extra moment to their dressing, heaved a sigh of relief when they realized that the straight cloth skirt and simple jacket would be considered exceedingly smart for the ten working hours of the day. But I think the sigh of relief was premature. The woman who wants to tumble into a comfortable skirt and slip on a loose jacket with a white shirtwaist, will not have her wish gratified this season, if she expects to remain in the fashion.

Skirts are not especially comfortable to the careless women, because they must be slimly cut and narrow at the hem, and they are really intended for slim women. Jackets are not loose, and they cannot be carelessly adjusted. They have narrow shoulders, tight armholes, long sleeves, slim underarm lines, and they need to be adjusted over a figure that is properly dressed from the skin up.

It is said that all the corsets and lingerie had to be changed to correspond with the new costumes, and one can well believe it. If one's outer garment is to be cut after the silhouette of a pencil, there can be no comfort to the wearer unless the corset and the lingerie are correspondingly cut. There must be no gathers at the hips, no rough lines at the waist, no fullness across the bust, no bungling at the armholes caused by undershirts or chemises. The woman who is about to step into one of these new and accepted tailored suits or gowns, must be as shipshape as a race horse going to the track. There must not be one unnecessary ounce of clothing on her, nor a single curve or bulge or bit of unassisted material from neck to heels.

MUSHROOM HAT APPEARS

The mushroom type of hat, that bears so striking a resemblance to the hats the coolie boatmen of the Chinese rivers wear, is back again in style. This smart hat is fashioned of flame-colored straw. The brim is set low in front, and tilted high on the crown in the back.

SPRING DRESSES IN PARIS

Two Materials Are Still Used to Make One Frock—Embroidery Is Much Used for Trimming.

At a place where about one hundred and fifty frocks were shown every one was marked by that hallmark of French taste in clothes—simplicity, observes a Paris correspondent. Tailor-made, little dresses, dinner gowns, were all simple; exaggerations were not to be found. Black silk jersey was much used for tailor-made, with long waistscoats of embroidered linen, the neatest of these being a white one finely embroidered in jet beads. Skirts are short and slim, coats are either redingote or short, the three-quarter coat being nowhere. There are pockets and buttons, but the pockets do not bulge; they lie flat and have buttoned back flaps.

Collars are no longer important for size, but there are some well-cut shawl collars on the coats, some of which run off into a waistband and button behind. Beige, sand color, gray, navy blue and black are the colors for tailored suits;

Unless she learns that lesson and learns it thoroughly, she may as well pass by the new American and French clothes and wear the loose, full ones of a year ago.

HAS KNITTING POCKETS

Patriotism and fashion are going hand in hand this spring. In this dress a chance to combine a roomy knitting pocket with the new barrel silhouette effect is given. The dress is a two-piece creation of pussy-willow taffeta. The long fold around the neck extends down the paneled front of the frock. The paneled front gives added charm to the white net vestee. The oriental design is in red, blue, yellow and green.

SOME DRESSY COAT BLOUSES

Peplum Models Chosen by French Women in Preference to All Others, Paris Correspondent Writes.

Blouse designers continue to show peplum models, but many insist they be called "coat" blouses, inasmuch as the word peplum has not proved itself a sales maker during the past two or three seasons. French women prefer the peplum model to all others, says a Paris writer, and there is no denying that a blouse that extends below the waistline is more dressy than the conventional model that reaches just to the waist and must depend upon some sort of belt, matching either the skirt, of which it is the proper companion piece, or matching the blouse itself, to finish it off.

Peplum or coat blouses have a better chance of life during the warm months because in cold weather they are seldom worn except as accompaniment pieces for suits. In summer a blouse and a separate skirt make up a correct outfit, and if the skirt has a matching coat it is more often than not merely an "incidental" and is swung over the arm.

Service Paper.

Have you seen the new service paper? It comes in regular letter sheets and in tablets and is just like any other paper except that at the top of each sheet there is a service star—or two or three, according to individual needs.

some show practically no trimming except in the waistband, or in pockets and buttons. Baques show a slight fullness on the hips, and skirts look even narrower than they are, as they often have a deep hidden plait.

Little dresses of all kinds are shown this season, from the most simple of country frocks in linen to the most elaborate town dress in taffetas, crepe de chine, silk crepons and mousseline de soie. Two materials are still used to make one frock, and embroidery is much used for trimming. A favorite embroidery is gray Angora mixed with white or blue, and there are some good little dresses in black crepe de chine with dawn and gray embroideries or impressions. The sleeveless pinafore tunic with wide shoulders and loose sash belt is general. Sashes, loose belts and girdles are common. Short sleeves are as general as long ones, especially for the young.

Drapery seems to be the order of the latest spring fashions.

Smart military frocks are very much in evidence for children.

GOT AWAY FROM IT NEATLY

Lightning Calculator Also Proved He Was Lightning Quick at Dodging the Issue.

Congressman Benjamin G. Humphries of Mississippi told this story at a social gathering as an illustration of the masterful way in which some people can evade an issue.

At a vaudeville performance one night one of the troupe offered to answer by mental arithmetic any question that might be asked him by those in the audience. So long as the question remained in the expected channel there was plain sailing, but finally one man got beyond the buoys.

"If you please, sir," asked this individual, "how far off can one hear thunder?"

"I am very sorry, sir," responded the wonder on the stage, "but I can't tell you."

"You can't tell me," returned the questioner. "Why, I thought—"

"Not about thunder," interposed the stage party, doing a quick piece of dodging. "You see I am only a lightning calculator."—Philadelphia Evening Telegraph.

The Red Cross workers of Glencoe and Ruidoso joined hands in the work of raising of amount of their share of the mercy fund in the big drive and headed by Bert Bonnel they went into the work with a zeal characteristic of the good people of these two patriotic sections.

At Glencoe, a box supper was held which netted $231.50. The Ruidoso people turned out in gallant manner doing everything in their power to advance the interest of the cause, and made a fine showing, thus adding their portion and more beyond that amount, to make the hands of the Red Cross clock move to the magnificent total that has been so grandly attained.

Miss Elizabeth Garrett, the sweet singer of New Mexico who recently sang to the prisoners at Sing Sing, furnished the inspiration for the beautiful poem written by one of the inmates of that institution, who was fortunate enough to hear her singing.

Mr. and Mrs. R. Cribb motored up the Mesa Decoration day, and were the guests of Miss Clara Brazil. The day was spent pleasantly, and on returning Mr. Cribb congratulated himself on giving the sandstorm the "go by" when between here and Nogal he encountered an avalanche of sand and dust that made the storm here at home fade into nothingness.

The air was thick; it was hard to discern an object ten feet away and it was with the utmost caution that he made the return trip in safety. So oftentimes "The best laid plans of mice and men gang aft a-glee."

METHODIST CHURCH

Rev. Lewelling, Pastor

Sunday School 9:45 a. m. The school has the largest attendance since my pastorate began. Help us to hold it up through the summer.

Preaching at the eleven o'clock hour. A short gospel sermon and good music.

Children's day program at 8 p. m. You will enjoy this service.

Our Aim is service. We specialize in short sermons, good music, expert teaching, and friendliness.

emonies and Messers Spence, Haley and Hudspeth gave interesting talks, and were followed by others on the program who performed their parts in a commendable manner. Miss Carrie Roberts sang a patriotic solo, the Misses Cooper, Place, and Mr. Gladney White sang a pretty trio entitled "Italia."

The music, (which is doubly deserving of special mention) was furnished by Mr. Ferguson, and Pitts and was rendered in such pleasing and inspiring manner that the people "just had to dance," that was all. These gentlemen donated their services as they have on other occasions, as did all others appearing on the program.

This date, closing as it did, the successful Red Cross drive, the big Red Cross rooster "Robison" donated by Captain John Baird, was brought forward and auctioned off, the amount realized being $17. It was a good natured crowd and everybody enjoyed themselves.

Mrs. H. S. Fairbank returned from San Antonio, last Thursday.

CRYSTAL THEATRE

Picnic on the Bonito

The beautiful Bonito was the scene of innocent matrimony. last Tuesday, when the Sunday school classes of Mrs. Lewelling, and Miss Zeuch enjoyed themselves in a splendid days outing at that popular place.

The children amused themselves with games of different kinds and the day was given over to casting dull care away, joining with nature the freedom that is only found in pleasant retreats of this kind. The picnics returned in the late evening, tired but happy after the days pleasure.
