Childrens' Day Program at Methodist Church Sunday Shows Effective Training And Merited Talent

Only those who attended the Childrens' Day exercises at the Methodist Church last Sunday night can fully appreciate the splendid program so effectually carried out on that occasion. At the appointed hour set for the beginning, a capacity house was in attendance to witness the affair, and from start to finish the interest was centered in the little ones, and we say with the utmost certainty, that they merited to the letter, every manifestation of appreciation that came from the large audience.

Loving hands brought feathered songsters and hung them about the church room and throughout the exercises they contributed their share of sweet music to the program which attracted the attention and interest of the audience. The program in its completeness, which we publish below, calls for the highest measure of praise. Every song or recitation that came in its turn, was loudly applauded as the children displayed the good results of effective training, marked by an abundance of natural talent. Following is the program:

- Mendelssohn's spring song.....
-Mrs. Donaldson
- Prayer song.....Bess White
- Children's Hosanna.....By school
- Invocation.....Rev. Lewelling
- "Jesus, Friend of Little Children".....Beginners Dept
- Song—"Sweet Story".....12 girls
- Reading—"To a Little Child".....
-Edna Lahan

New Commercial Hotel

J. W. Manney and Mrs. T. J. Rowden the managers, have remodeled and refitted the interior making a new and complete order of things the new feature. The management invites the public and guarantees the best of service and satisfaction.

Mrs. Albert Zeigler has returned from El Paso, much improved as a result of her recent operation.

Motto of This Paper

Pledged to the Undying Support of Its Country's Cause.

Roy Baird to the Bat

In the new registration on June 5th of young men who have attained their majority since June 5th, 1917, Roy Baird was the first to register, thus being the first man in line to obey the law of his country. This is the kind of American material that is going to win the war, for there is not the shadow of a doubt what Roy intends to do. There will be no getting behind the stump with this young man. He is there, that's all.

Entertained the Little Folks

Mrs. H. S. Kimbell and Miss Ethel Hoffman entertained the little folks of the Baptist Sunday School last Wednesday afternoon. The children enjoyed themselves with songs, recitations and playing games. Light refreshments were served and a general good time was experienced. Those present were: Rita Montgomery, Eva Harkey, Lois Harkey, Lily Harkey, Harold Pine, Maurice Benson, Esther Green and Hazel Green.

METHODIST CHURCH

Rev. Lowelling, Pastor

Mrs. I. J. Ayers will speak at 11 a. m. and at 8 p. m. Her message will be instructive and helpful to every patriotic American. Come and enjoy these great lectures. Mrs. Donaldson and her choir will furnish special music. Sunday School at 9:45 a. m. The School is going "Over the Top," be one of us.

Epworth League, 7:15 p. m. Remember we have the best young people's society in New Mexico. Come and enjoy the services.

Mrs. I. J. Ayers, one of the best lady speakers in the West, will occupy the Methodist pulpit Sunday morning and evening. Mrs. Ayers' addresses will be of vital interest to every patriotic American. Come and bring a friend. You cannot afford to miss this opportunity. Services are free to all.

J. W. Loftus who is an underwriter for the Rocky mountain Division of Allied Insurance companies, stopped over on his tour of the state, with his family, and spent several days with local agent R. T. Cribb.

SNOW-BRAZEL

At the Methodist Church parsonage Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock occurred the marriage of Mr. Chas. A. Snow and Miss Clara Brazel. The marriage came as a surprise to a great many friends of both parties, but cupid is a sly little fellow, and oftentimes works in mysterious ways in order to spring his pleasant surprises on the friends of those whom he seeks to make life companions.

The bride was raised in this locality and her friends are many all of whom extend their best and kindest wishes for their continued happiness and prosperity. The groom although not a native of this place, has since his coming among us, fully established himself in the confidence of the people as a gentleman of the front rank.

He has been in the employ of the Lincoln Light and Power Co. since locating here, as an electrician, in which capacity he is soon to serve his country as he is now awaiting a call to the colors, following his recent enlistment. As the young couple are both possessed of sunny dispositions, we predict for them a pilgrimage of unmolested happiness.

Ladies of the Eastern Star

Comet Chapter No. 29, Order of the Eastern Star, held an important meeting last Wednesday night, and after the usual business session, Miss Meda West was initiated into the mysteries of the order. After the initiatory ceremonies were performed, a social session followed at which delectable refreshments were served. The Chapter will hold its next meeting July 10th.

Becoming Window Display

The firms of Ziegler Bros. and the Carrizozo Trading Co. are showing a good amount of patriotism in their display windows here of late. The Trading Co., outside of its usual display of the season goods, have added a Red Cross nurse in full attire in the center window, surrounded by decorations of a patriotic nature, while at Ziegler Bros. pictures of Uncle Sam, General Pershing, reviewing the marching of our troops occupy a portion of the window space, bordered with emblems of a national nature. The windows of both places are very pretty and have been the subject of much favorable comment.

Novel Event in Birthday Affair Feature of The Farley Home

Home Decorated in Honor of Absent Husband as the Friends of Family Gather at Joint Celebration

As a becoming and novel departure from the usual custom of birthday observances, Mrs. I. D. Baker entertained a number of her lady friends last Friday evening, in honor of her husband, Mr. I. D. Baker who is now in France and fighting under the folds of Old Glory for the principles of Democracy. The affair was a joint arrangement, inasmuch as the birthday of Mrs. Baker being on the 29th, and that of her husband on the 31st, made the occasion fitting, thoughtful and appropriate.

The Farley home was decorated with patriotic emblems of different kinds in honor of the absent loved one, and although the hostess was one of the principles in the affair, she lost all self interest in making the home fires burn all the brighter for him who fortunes of war has led to other lands than ours in defense of the principles of freedom. After the guests had assembled, the hostess invited her friends to join her in attending the Crystal theatre, at which place the party enjoyed Marguerite Clark in "The Seven Swans."

On their return from the theatre, dainty refreshments were served and on the eve of their departure the guests presented Mrs. Baker with numerous birthday offerings, chief among which was a neat package containing a book of "Thrill Stamps" showing how thoughtful patriotic people are in time of war. Mr. Baker was too far away for presents of a material nature to reach, but the emblematic decorations in his honor which was an outward showing of loyalty, lasting remembrance and fond hopes of a future meeting, when clouds of war will no longer hover over life's happiness was more than human hands could give. The guests were: Misses Perla Stevens, Ruth Edmiston, Vera Harris, Kittle Tinnon, Anna Kirby, Alma and Carria Roberts, Cora Cole, Mesdames Adams and Charles.

THE RANCH AT THE WOLVERINE

An Interesting and Intimate View of Pioneer Days on the Plains

(Copyright, Little, Brown & Co.)

THE STRANGER INTRODUCES HIMSELF AS WARD WARREN WHO HAS A CLAIM ON MILL CREEK—MEMORIES HAUNT BILLY LOUISE, HAPPY MEMORIES

Synopsis.—Marthy and Jase Melke, pioneers, have for twenty years made a bare living out of their ranch at the Cove or Wolverine creek in the mountain range country of Idaho. Their neighbors, the MacDonalds, living several miles away, have a daughter, Billy Louise, now about nineteen years old, whom Marthy has secretly helped to educate. At the time the story opens Billy Louise is spending the afternoon with Marthy. A snowstorm comes up, and on her way home the girl meets an interesting stranger, who is invited to stay overnight at the MacDonald ranch.

"Then the chores aren't done, I suppose." Billy Louise went over and took a lantern down from its nail, turning up the wick so that she could light it with the candle. "Go up to the fire and thaw out," she invited the man. "We'll have supper in a few minutes."

Instead he reached out and took the lantern from her as soon as she had lighted it. "You go to the fire yourself," he said. "I'll do what's necessary outside."

"Why?" Billy Louise, her fingers still clinging to the lantern, looked up at him. He was staring down at her with that intent look she had objected to on the trail, but she saw his mouth and the little smile that hid just back of his lips. She smiled back without knowing it. "I'll have to go along, anyway. There are cows to milk, and you couldn't very well find the cow stable alone."

"Think not?" Together they went out again into the storm they had left so eagerly. Billy Louise showed him where was the pitchfork and the hay and then did the milking while he piled full the mangers. After that they went together and turned the shivering work horses into the stable from the corral where they huddled, rumps to the storm, and the man lifted great forksful of hay and carried it into their stalls. While Billy Louise held the lantern high over her head like a western liberty. They did not talk much, except when there was need for speech, but they were beginning to feel a little glow of companionship by the time they were ready to fight their way against the blizzard to the house, Billy Louise going before with the lantern, while the man followed close behind, carrying the two pails of milk that was already freezing in little crystals to the tin.

"I didn't quite catch your name, mister." Mrs. MacDonald said after they had begun the meal. "But take another biscuit, anyway."

"Warren is my name," returned the man, with that hidden smile because she had never before given him any opportunity to tell it—"Ward Warren. I've got a claim over on Mill creek."

Billy Louise gave a little gasp and distractedly poured two spoonfuls of sugar in her tea, although she hated it sweetened.

I've got to tell you why even at the price of digestion. Long ago, when Billy Louise was twelve or so and lived largely in a dream world of her own, she had one day chanced upon a paragraph in a paper that had come from town wrapped around a package of matches. It was all about Ward Warren. The name caught her fancy, and the text of the paragraph seized upon her imagination. Until school filled her mind with other things she had built adventures without end in which Ward Warren was the central figure. Sometimes, when she rode in the hills, Ward Warren abducted her and led her into strange places, where she tried to shiver in honest dread. Often and often, however, Ward Warren was a fugitive who came to her for help. Then she would take him to a cave and hide him, perhaps, or she would mount her horse and lead him by devious ways to safety, and upon some hilltop from which she could point out the route he must follow she would bid him a touching adieu and beseech him in the impossible language of some old romancer to go and lead a blameless life.

"Jase has got all gone feelings now, memmie," Billy Louise remarked irrelevantly during a brief pause and relapsed into silence again. She knew that was good for at least five minutes of straight monologue with her mother in that talking mood. She finished her supper while Warren listened abstractedly to a complete biography of the Melkes and learned all about Marthy's energy and Jase's shiftlessness.

"Ward Warren" Billy Louise was saying to herself. "Ward Warren! There couldn't possibly be two Ward Warrens; it's such an odd name. Well!"

Then she went mentally over that paragraph. She wished she did not remember every single word of it, but she did. And she was afraid to look at him after that, and she wanted to dreadfully. She felt as though he belonged to her. Why, he was her old playmate! And she had saved his life hundreds of times at immense risk to hers, and he had always been her devoted slave afterward and never failed to appear at the precise moment when she was beset by Indians or robbers or something and in dire need. The blood he had shed in her behalf! At that point Billy Louise startled herself and the others by suddenly laughing out loud at the memory of one time when Ward Warren had killed enough Indians to fill a deep washout so that he might carry her across to the other side!

"Is there anything funny about Jase Melke dying, Billy Louise?" her mother asked her in a perfectly shocked tone.

"No. I was thinking of something else." She glanced at the man eying her so distrustfully from across the table and gurgled again. It was terribly silly, but she simply could not help seeing Ward Warren calmly filling that washout with dead Indians so that he might carry her across it in his arms.

The more she tried to forget that the funnier it became. She ended by leaving the table and retiring precipitately to her own tiny room in the lean-to where she buried her face as deep as it would go in a puffy pillow of wild duck feathers.

He, poor devil, could not be expected to know just what had amused her so. He did know that it somehow concerned himself, however. He took up his position mentally behind the wall of aloofness which stood between himself and an unfriendly world, and when Billy Louise came out later to help with the dishes he was sitting absorbed in a book.

The next morning the blizzard raged, so that Warren stayed as a matter of course. Peter Howling Dog had not returned, so Warren did the chores and would not let Billy Louise help with anything.

"I wish we could get him to stay all winter instead of that Peter Howling Dog," Mrs. MacDonald said anxiously after he had gone out. "I just know Peter's off drinking. I don't think he's a safe man to have around, Billy Louise. I didn't when you kissed him. I haven't felt easy a minute with him on the place. I wish you'd hire Mr. Warren, Billy Louise. He's nice and quiet."

"And he's got a ranch of his own. He doesn't strike me as a man who wants a job milking two cows and carrying slop to the pigs, memmie."

"Well, I'd feel a lot easier if he had him instead of that breed. Only we ain't even got the breed half the time. This is the third time he's disappeared in the two months we've had him. I really think you ought to speak to Mr. Warren, Billy Louise."

"Speak to him yourself. You're the one that wants him," Billy Louise answered somewhat sharply. She adored her mother, but if she had to run the ranch she did wish her mother would not interfere and give advice just at the wrong time.

"Well, you needn't be cross about it. You know yourself that Peter can't be depended on a minute. There he went off yesterday and never fed the pigs their noon slop, and I had to carry it out myself. And my lumber has bothered me ever since, just like it was going to give me another spell. You can't be here all the time, Billy Louise—leastways you ain't—and Peter—"

"Oh, good gracious, memmie! I told you to hire the man if you want him. Only Ward Warren isn't!"

and looked from one to the other, his eyes two question marks. "Isn't what?" he asked and shut the door behind him with the air of one who is ready for anything.

"Isn't the kind of man who wants to hire out to do chores," Billy Louise finished and looked at him straight. "Are you? Mommie wants to hire you."

"Oh, well, I was just about to ask for the job, anyway." He laughed, and the distrust left his eyes. "As a matter of fact, I was going over to Jim Larson's to hang out for the rest of the winter and get away from the lonesomeness of the hills. The old Turk's a pretty good friend of mine. But it looks to me as if you two needed something around that looks like a man a heap more than Jim does. I know Peter Howling Dog to a fare-you-well. You'll be all to the good if he forgets to come back. So if you'll stake me to a meal now and then and a place to sleep I'll be glad to see you through the winter or until you get some white man to take my place." He took up the two water pails and waited, glancing from one to the other with that repressed smile which Billy Louise was beginning to look for in his face.

Now that matters had approached the point of decision her mother stood looking at her helplessly, waiting for her to speak. Billy Louise drew herself up primly and ended by contradicting the action. She gave him a sidelong glance which he was least prepared to withstand, though, in justice to Billy Louise, she was absolutely unconscious of its general effectiveness and twisted her lips whimsically.

"We'll stake you to a book, a ban-nock and a bed if you want to stay, Mr. Warren," she said quite soberly; "also to a pitchfork and an ax, if you like, and regular wages."

His eyes went to her and steadied there with the intent expression in them. "Thanks. Out out the wages and I'll take the offer just as it stands," he told her and pulled his hat farther down on his head. "She's going to be one stormy night, lay-dees," he added in quite another tone on his way to the door. "Five o'clock by the town clock, and all-in's well!" This last in still another tone as he pushed out against the swooping wind and pulled the door shut with a slam. They heard him whistling a shrill, rollicking air on his way to the creek—at least it sounded rollicking the way he whistled it.

"That's 'The Old Chisholm Trail' he's whistling," Billy Louise observed under her breath, smiling reminiscently. "The very song I need to pretend he always sang when he came down the canyon to rescue me. But of course I knew all the time he's a cowboy. It said so—"

The whistling broke, and he began to sing at the top of a clear, strong lunged voice an old, old trail song beloved of punchers the West over.

"What did you say, Billy Louise? I'm sure it's a comfort to have him here, and you see he was glad and willing—"

But Billy Louise was holding the door open half an inch, listening and slipping back into the child world wherein Ward Warren came stinging down the canyon to rescue her. The words came gently from the creek down the slope:

"No chaps, no steeper, and a-peasin' down rain, And I swear by the Lord I'll never night-herd again, Come to y' yessy, yessy-a, yessy-a, Come to y' yessy, yessy-a!"

"Foot in the stirrups and seat in the saddle, I hang and rattled with them long-horn cattle, Come to y'—"

"Do shut the door, Billy Louise! What you want to stand there like that for? And the wind freezing everything inside! I can feel a terrible draft on my feet and ankles, and you know what that leads to!"

So Billy Louise closed the door and laid another alder rest on the coals in the fireplace while her mind was given over to dreamy speculations, and the words of that old trail song ran on in her memory, though she could no longer hear him singing. Her mother talked on about Peter and the storm and this man who had ridden straight from the land of day dreams to her door, but the girl was not listening.

"Now, ain't you relieved yourself that he's going to stay?"

Billy Louise, kneeling on the hearth and staring abstractedly into the fire, came back with a jerk to reality. The little smile that had been in her eyes and on her lips fled back with the dreams that had brought it. She gave her shoulders an impatient twitch and got up.

"Oh, I guess he'll be more agreeable to have around than Peter," she admitted tactfully, which was as close to her real opinion of the man as a mere mother might hope to come.

When spring came at last and Ward Warren rode regretfully back to his claim on Mill creek he was not at all the morose Ward Warren who had ridden down to the Wolverine that stormy night in January. The distrust had left his eyes, and that guarded remoteness was gone from his manner. He thought and he planned as other men thought and planned and looked into the future eagerly and dreamed dreams of his own, dreams that brought the hidden smile often to his lips and his eyes.

Still, the thing those dreams were built upon was yet locked tight in his heart, and not even Billy Louise, whose instinct was so keen and so sure in all things else, knew anything of them or of the bright hue of hope they were built upon.

CHAPTER III.

Marthy Buries Her Dead and Greets Her Nephew.

JASE did not move or give his customary, querulous grunt when Marthy nudged him at daylight, one morning in mid April. Marthy gave another poke with her elbow and lay still, numbed by a sudden dread. She moved cautiously out of the bed and half across the cramped room before she turned her head toward him. Then she stood still, and looked and looked, her hard face growing each moment more pinched and stony and gray.

Jase had died while the coyotes were yapping their dawn song up on the rim of the cove. He lay rigid under the coarse, gray blanket, the flesh of his face drawn close to the bones, his skinny, gray beard tilted upward.

Marthy's jaw set into a harsher outline than ever. She dressed with slow, heavy movements and went out and fed the stock. In stolid calm she did the milking and turned out the cows into the pasture. She gathered an apron full of chips and started a fire, just as she had done every morning for twenty-nine years, and she put the coffee-pot on the greasy stove and boiled the brew of yesterday, which was also her habit.

She sat for some time with her head leaning upon her grimy hand and stared unseeingly out upon a peach tree in full bloom and at a pair of busy robins who had chosen a convenient crotch for their nest. Finally she rose stiffly, as if she had grown older within the last hour, and went outside to the place where she had been mending the irrigating ditch the day before. She knocked the wet sand off the shovel she had left sticking in the soft bank and went out of the yard and up the slope toward the rock wall.

On a tiny, level place above the main ditch and just under the wall Marthy began to dig, setting her broad, flat foot uncompromisingly upon the shoulder of the shovel and sending it deep into the yellow soil. She worked slowly and methodically and steadily, just as she did everything else. When she had dug down as deep as she could and still manage to climb out and had the hole wide enough and long enough, she got awkwardly to the grassy surface and set for a long while upon a rock, staring numbly at the gaunt, brown hills across the river.

She returned to the cabin at last, and with the manner of one who drags and doing what must be done, she went in where Jase lay stiff and cold under the blankets.

Early that afternoon Marthy went staggering up the slope, wheeling Jase's body before her on the creaky, homemade wheelbarrow. In the same harsh, primitive manner in which they both lived Marthy buried her dead. And though in life she had given him few words save in command or upbraiding, with never a hint of love or sweetening days for either, yet she went whimpering away from that grave. She broke off three branches of precious peach blossoms and carried them up the slope. She stuck them upright in the lumpy soil over Jase's head and stood there a long while with tear streaked face, staring down at the grave and at the nodding pink blossoms.

Billy Louise rode stinging down the rocky trail through the deep, narrow gorge to where the hawthorn and cherry cherries hid the opening to the cove.

From there to the pink drift of peach bloom against the dull brown of the bluff Blue galloped angrily, leaving deep, black prints in the soft green of the meadow. So they came headlong upon Marthy, just as she was knocking the yellow clay of the grave from her irrigating shovel against the pole fence of her pigpen.

"Why, Marthy!" Once before in her life Billy Louise had seen Marthy's chin quivering like that and big, slow tears sliding down the network of lines on Marthy's leathery cheeks. With a painful slump her spirits went heavy with her sympathy. "Marthy!"

She knew without a word of explanation just what had happened. From Marthy's bent shoulders she knew and from her tear stained face and from the yellow soil clinging still to the shovel in her hand. The wide eyes of Billy Louise sent seeking glances up the slope where the soil was yellow, went to the long, raw ridge under the wall, with the peach blossoms standing pitifully awry upon the western end. Her eyes filled with tears. "Oh, Marthy! When was it?"

"In the night, some time, I guess." Marthy's voice had a harsh huskiness. "He was—gone—when I woke up. Well—he's better off than I be. I dunno what woulda become of him if I'd went first." There, at last, was a note of tenderness, stifled though it was and fleeting. "Git down, Billy Louise, and come in. I been kinda lookin' for you to come ever sence the weather opened up. How's your maw?"

"What are you going to do now, Marthy?" Billy Louise was perfectly capable of opening a conversational door even when it had been closed decisively in her face. "You can't get on here alone, you know. Did you send for that nephew? If you haven't you must hire somebody till—"

"He's comin'. That letter you sent over last month was from him. I dunno when he'll git here; he's liable to come most any time. I ain't going to hire nobody. Charlie Fox, his name is. I hope he turns out a good worker. I've never had a chance to git ahead any, but if Charlie 'll jest take hold I'll mobby git some comfort outa life yet."

"He ought to, I'm sure. And every one thinks you've done awfully well, Marthy. What can I do now? Wash the dishes and straighten things up, I guess."

"You needn't do nothin' you ain't a mind to do, Billy Louise. I don't want you to think you got to slop around washin' my dirty dishes. I'm goin' on down into the medder and work on a ditch I'm puttin' in. You jest do what you've a mind to." She picked up the shovel and went off down the jungly path, herself the ugliest object in the cove, where she had created so much beauty.

Billy Louise sat down on the rock where Marthy had rested after digging the grave and, with her chin in her two cupped palms, stared out across the river at the heaped bluffs and down at the pink and white patch of fruit trees. She was trying, as the young will always try, to solve the riddle of life, and she was baffled and unhappy because she could not find any answer at all that pleased both her ideals and her reason. And then she heard a man's voice lifted up in riotous song and she turned her head toward the opening of the gorge and listened, her eyes brightening while she waited.

Ward came into sight through the little meadow, riding slowly, with both hands clasped over the horn of the saddle, his hat tilted back on his head and his whole attitude one of absolute content with life. He saw Billy Louise almost as soon as she glimpsed him, and she had been watching that bit of road quite closely. He slipped the reins to one side and turned from the trail to ride straight up the slope to where she was.

Billy Louise, with a self reproachful glance at the grave, ran down the slope to meet him—an unexpected welcome, which made Ward's heart leap in his chest.

"Oh, Ward, for heaven's sake, don't be singing that come-all-ye at the top of your voice, like that. Don't you—"

"Now I was given to understand that you liked that same come-all-ye. Have you been educating your musical taste in the last week, Miss William Louise?"

Ward stopped his horse before her and with his hands still clasped over the saddle horn looked down at her with that hidden smile—and something else.

"No, I haven't. I don't have to educate myself to the point where I know the 'Chisholm Trail' isn't a proper kind of funeral hymn, Ward Warren." Billy Louise glanced over her shoulder and lowered her voice instinctively, as we all do when death has come close and stopped. "Jase died last night; that's his grave up there. Isn't it perfectly pitiful? Poor old Marthy was here all solitary alone with him. And—Ward, she dug that grave her ownself and took him up and buried him! And, Ward, she—she wheeled him up in the wheelbarrow! She had to, of course. She couldn't carry him. But isn't it awful?" Her hands were up, patting and smoothing the neck of his horse, and her face was bent to hide the tears that stood in her eyes and the quiver of her mouth.

Several minutes they stood there talking, while Billy Louise patted the horse absently, and Ward looked down at her and did not miss one little light or shadow in her face.

Charlie Fox arrives on the scene and helps Marthy run the place after the death of Jase. Along comes a mystery.

Take Care of Your Tires

America's greatest need is for ships—more ships.

Every available vessel is being utilized in government service.

Many ships that have been carrying rubber from Sumatra and Brazil have been taken for active transport duty.

This will necessarily force a temporary curtailment of tire production.

So, make the most of the tires you have.

Use good tires.

Take good care of them. Keep them in perfect repair. See that they are properly inflated.

Increase their mileage by careful driving. Keep out of car tracks and away from bumps. Don't scrape the curb or apply brakes too suddenly.

Get every mile your tires have in them.

Only in that way can you be assured of your car's continuous service.

Yellow Streak and No Crust

A certain Spanish-American war veteran at Washington, incapacitated from further service by the loss of a limb, fails to approve of numerous press agents coming to Washington and obtaining "soft" government jobs. Recently, while talking to one of the very men for whom he held a special dislike, he said: "You fellows remind me of a lemon meringue pie. You are yellow all the way through and haven't got enough crust to go over the top."

WHEAT AND FLOUR

Total Commercial Stocks as Shown by Partial Tabulation of Food Survey of December 31, 1917

The total stocks of wheat in commercial channels on December 31, 1917, as indicated by a partial tabulation of the food survey of the latter date, were approximately one-half as large as the commercial stocks on hand December 31, 1916, according to a statement issued by the United States department of agriculture. In this connection it is pointed out that the commercial visible supply figures published by the Chicago board of trade showed stocks on hand January 5, 1918, about 80 per cent of the commercial visible supply reported for January 5, 1917, while the visible supply reported by Bradstreet for January 5, 1918, was approximately 36 per cent of that reported for January 6, 1917.

The commercial stocks of wheat at the end of December, 1917, compared more favorably with those of a year earlier than did the stocks at the end of August, 1917, the holdings of December 31, 1917, being 50 per cent of those reported for the corresponding date in 1916, while the commercial stocks of August 31, 1917, were only 37 per cent of those for the same date in 1916. At the same time it is indicated that there was only a slight change in the relative importance of the commercial stocks of flour on the dates of the two surveys as compared with the corresponding dates a year earlier. On August 31, 1917, the commercial stocks of flour were about 75 per cent of the stocks reported on hand August 31, 1916, while on December 31, 1917, the stocks of flour were 70 per cent of those reported for the corresponding date in 1916. The total wheat crop of 1917 was approximately 650,000,000 bushels, as compared with 640,000,000 bushels for the previous year and with 808,000,000 bushels, the average for the five-year period 1911-1915.

The final figures for the August 31, 1917, food survey show that the total commercial stocks of wheat on that date were 75,000,000 bushels, or less than a two months' supply, while the commercial stocks of flour were about 12,000,000 barrels, representing approximately a six weeks' supply.

The elevators, mills, and wholesale grain dealers held 88.4 per cent of the commercial stocks of wheat reported for August 31, 1917, and 85.8 per cent of the total commercial stocks of flour reported for that date. In the case of flour, retail dealers held 24.9 per cent, bakers 20.3 per cent, wholesale grocers 0.7 per cent, and storage warehouses 5.3 per cent.

Minnesota and California reported the largest commercial stocks of wheat on August 31, 1917, their holdings being 7,290,000 and 6,891,000 bushels, respectively, while Missouri, Illinois, and Kansas each held about 5,000,000 bushels. The combined holdings of these five states amounted to 28,000,000 bushels, or more than 45 per cent of the total for the United States. In the case of flour, eight states reported about one-half of the total stocks of the country, New York leading with 812,890 barrels, followed by Pennsylvania with 659,438, Illinois with 639,120, and Nebraska with 634,915 barrels, while California, Texas, Minnesota, and Missouri each reported about 500,000 barrels.

Certain-teed

Roofing

The roof that copes with all conditions.

Sparks, smoke, gases, acids or fumes have no effect on a Certain-teed roof. Rust cannot corrode Certain-teed. The heat of the sun cannot cause it to melt or run. Certain-teed has the ability to resist every form of roofing attack, and the durability to give years of weather-proof service, with little or no maintenance cost. Certain-teed offers every practical roofing advantage with a minimum roofing investment.

In every town, city and section you will find Certain-teed. Everywhere Certain-teed is chosen for buildings of all types and sizes—

For factories, found houses, elevators, garages, warehouses, hotels, farm buildings, stores, outbuildings, etc.

In arctic red or green algalia, Certain-teed is very popular for residences.

Certain-teed costs less than any other type of roof—first cost and lasting cost low, and maintenance practically nothing. Certain-teed is more economical than ordinary roofing, because it costs no more to lay and lasts much longer.

Varieties of Cheese Catalogued

(By the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The distinct varieties of cheese number probably about 18, although the names given to the manufactured kinds total several hundred. This statement is made in the United States department of agriculture's bulletin No. 606, "Varieties of Cheese, Descriptions and Analysis," which is a revision of former government publications on the subject. More than 40 names of cheese are given in the bulletin and are of local origin, usually having been derived from towns or communities.

A list of the best-known names applied to the distinct varieties or groups is as follows:

Brick, caelocavallo, camembert, cheddar, cottage, diy, edan, emmental, gouda, hand, holstein, limburg, neuf-chatel, parmesan, roquefort, sapsago, scanno and trappist. Descriptions and chemical analyses of the foreign and domestic cheese mentioned in the bulletin are given alphabetically.

Attempts to make emmental and limburg cheese in this country have been very successful, the bulletin says. These varieties are being made by 500 factories in Wisconsin alone and by factories in Ohio, New York and northern Illinois. Investigation also has shown that camembert and a cheese of the same general nature as roquefort or stilton, can be made successfully in this country.

"There is no reason," says the bulletin, "to believe that any variety of cheese imported cannot be made here, although with present knowledge it would not be advisable to try to make many kinds. Probably scientific investigation would show how to improve on the average quality of the cheese made in the other countries, for it must be remembered that only the very best is shipped by the European makers, the rest, or poorer grades, being consumed at home. Unfortunately a feeling prevails in the United States that cheese equal to the best of the European product cannot be produced here. This feeling is based upon a lack of knowledge of actual conditions in Europe and of the conditions affecting the quality of cheese. Certain parts of Europe are better favored by desirable climatic conditions and by more general dissemination of the bacteria or molds necessary to the characteristic ripening of different varieties, but even the best average natural conditions can be improved on by artificial means since necessary molds or bacteria can be grown in pure culture and utilized anywhere. However, the cost may render it impracticable."

The Better Way.

"Do you tell bedtime stories to your house?"
"I used to until my wife got next to me. Now I either get home in good season or say nothing about it."

Carries His Own Bones Around as a Mascot for Coming Diamond Season

All ball players believe in luck and most carry a talisman of some sort, but it remains for Forrest Cady, Mack's new big catcher, to carry around with him the strangest token of all. It is nothing less than two bones from his own body.

Last winter Cady was in a motor accident and had his shoulder broken in several places. Two pieces of bone were removed, and now Cady is never without them.

"They are a part of me or were," Cady explains, "and I'm only carrying them as near where they belong as I can. My arm's as good as ever, although I thought for a time that I would never play ball again. Yet somehow I feel that if I lost those two little pieces of bone my arm would go back on me."

Salaries Paid to Governors by Various States of Union

Governors of Vermont and Nebraska receive $2,500 a year, the governors of Arizona, Maine, New Hampshire, New Mexico, Rhode Island and South Dakota receive $3,000 a year; the governor of South Carolina receives $3,500 a year; the governors of Arkansas, Connecticut, Delaware, Nevada, North Carolina, Texas, Utah and Wyoming receive $4,000 a year; the governors of Maryland, Mississippi and Oklahoma receive $4,500 a year; the governor of Iowa receives $4,600 a year; the governors of Alabama, Colorado, Florida, Georgia, Idaho, Kansas, Louisiana, Michigan, Missouri, Montana, Oregon, Virginia, West Virginia and Wisconsin receive $5,000 a year; the governors of North Dakota and Washington receive $6,000 a year; the governor of Kentucky receives $6,500 a year; the governors of Minnesota and Tennessee receive $7,500 a year; the governors of Indiana and Massachusetts receive $8,000 a year; the governors of California, New Jersey, Ohio and Pennsylvania receive $10,000 a year; the governor of Illinois receives $12,000 a year; the governor of New York receives $30,000 a year.

BATCH OF SMILES

It All Helps.

"I ordered my garden seed today."
"Your garden was a failure last year, wasn't it?"

"In a way it was. Still, my neighbors' chickens got fat on the seed I planted, so my work still had some effect toward relieving the food shortage."

Dropped Within Reach.
"Do you like your eggs dropped?"
"You bet! I was delighted when they came down twenty cents!"

Playing Safe.
"You have planted mostly onions and radishes."
"Yes," returned Mr. Crosslots.
"Nobody at our house eats them. So if they don't happen to grow it won't make so much difference."

Two His Senior in Years.
A lady, anxious to find out how many children a new neighbor had asked one of the boys, "How many of you are there?"
"Five," he answered.
"Are you the oldest?" questioned the lady.
"No," the boy replied, "there are two older'n me—ma and pa."

His Ear to the Ground.
"What is your idea as to the political situation?"
"My friend," replied Senator Borghum, "we regular expert politicians know how to go with the people. And just now all of our people are fighting for our country and not for jobs."

New Calendar Demanded.
"These old calendars are no good."
"Don't they give you the day of the week, month and year?"
"Yes, but who cares. What I want to learn when I get up in the morning is what I go without today."

Unless people swallow flattery it is apt to make them sick.

WHITE OAKS

Miss Eva Moffet of Alamo-gordo is visiting her sister, Mrs. W. A. Neve.

Allen Lane and wife, Mrs. Spence and Mrs. Neve were in Carrizozo Saturday.

Ed Queen and family left for Elephant Butte Dam Friday. They expect to fish for a few days and then continue westward for points in Arizona.

Roy Watson and wife, Mrs. Wm. Watson and Kenith Watson have moved to Roswell where Roy will work in one of the shops. Kenith has enlisted as second class fireman in the Navy.

The Red Cross of White-Oaks has decided to meet twice each month in the Congregational Church. The meetings will take place on the second and last Fridays of each month. Any visiting members will be cordially invited.

The White Oaks school closed May 24th with a picnic near Mrs. Wells' place. An enjoyable lunch with camp fire coffee was served to the hungry picknickers.

Mrs. Dudley and daughter, Velma and Florence Currant left for Silver City, where they expect to attend the Teachers' Normal College of that place.

Miss Lois Dudley is visiting in Berlin, N. M.

Miss Lucile Lindsey, the teacher of the intermediate grades, is attending the Normal University at Las Vegas this summer.

Mrs. Ward and family have moved to their ranch east of White Oaks.

Misses Robbie Taylor and Josephine Schale intend to take up Red Cross training with a view of going into the service in France. They leave for El Paso shortly.

Miss Fannie Orthofer has returned to White Oaks and Mrs. Orthofer is expected in a few days.

Little Misses Allene and Vivian Lane returned from a week's visit in El Paso Saturday.

An interesting and amusing show was given at the Hall Saturday and Sunday evening.

Mrs. Leslie and wife are visiting their son Ben near Capitan.

Nogal Lake Picnic Party

Last Saturday evening Miss Blanche Garvin of Nogal Mesa entertained a number of friends with a picnic dinner at Nogal Lake. The affair was given in honor of Miss Mary Nelson Johnson, of San Antonio, Texas. The young folks were treated to an invigorating row on the lake, before they were invited to an appetizing picnic dinner. After dinner, a large camp fire was built around which the guests gathered and with music and song spent the balance of the time to the extreme pleasure of all concerned. At a late hour the guests departed giving Miss Garvin a vote of thanks as being a royal entertainer. Among those present, including the hostess were: Misses Mary Nelson Johnson, of San Antonio, J. N. Baskin and wife, Mrs. Wm. Garvin, O. Z. Finley and wife, J. F. Kimbell and wife, Mr. Rummels and wife, Charles S. Henning of El Paso, Espey Miller of Fort Davis, Texas, Charles A. Mr. Hulse Objects

The article appearing in last week's issue headed "Justice in Imposed Fine" was challenged early this week when the party, Jake Hulse, mentioned as the one on whom the fine was imposed, came into the Outlook office, and denied that he had at any time been guilty of such an act as shooting antelope against the law. Mr. Hulse was very indignant; he at first was inclined to attach blame to the Outlook, but when it was explained to him (by the timid newspaper man who is always ready trying to dodge a blow,) that the advice came from Albuquerque, he became sympathetic and forgave us, but asked that some correction be made, which was impossible for us to do. However, we will quote him as follows: "I have not been in Socorro county for over a year and on the date mentioned that the fine was imposed, I was in Carrizozo assisting in the prosecution of the Encinosa bank robbers." Mr. Hulse is a well driller and his business takes him over large territory. In justice to him we publish the above statement as a denial of the charge.

BEST IN THE LONG RUN

Who Began Trench Warfare?

THE trench, which always encircled the Roman castra, or camp, was brought to France by Julius Caesar and used by him on the very battlefield where to-day the Allies and the Huns have 25,000 miles of trenches.

With rings of trenches, gradually drawn smaller, probably the first modern trench warfare, the Turks in 1667 took Candia.

Vauban, builder of Verdun, in 1673 employed the first parallel trenches, the system of the present war.

Defeat, not foresight, turned the Germans to trench warfare. But Goodrich never had to dig in.

Since twenty-two years ago Goodrich manufactured the first American pneumatic automobile tire, Goodrich has driven ahead to the big, graceful, masterful—

GOODRICH SERVICE VALUE TIRES

But whether Goodrich was revolutionizing tire manufacture by bringing forth the first American clincher tire— Or originating the one practical non-skid, the cross-har, safety-tread, or tough black tread rubber— Goodrich built tires to one end—SERVICE VALUE—what they are worth to the motorist on his car and on the road in COMFORT of an easier riding car—ECONOMY in gasoline saved,—and LONG MILEAGE.

Small difference whether you buy GOODRICH SILVERTOWN CORDS, or BLACK SAFETY TREADS, you get SERVICE VALUE TIRES.

HIGHEST QUALITY AWARDS

SASH AND GIRDLE

Adornment Among Leading Features of Spring Clothes.

Metallic Cloths, Tissues and Ribbons Given Preference Over Metallic Laces Which Are Banished.

The colored sash is a dominating feature on evening gowns. It is made of Chinese blue taffeta, of yellow satin, of transparent Egyptian gauze, beaded and spangled, of brocaded velvet and satin ribbon and of plain charmeuse. The most sumptuous evening gown of jet, metallic tissue and thread lace will have a sash of Copenhagen blue silk, with one streamer falling over the short tulle train.

Gipsy girdles taken from Roumania and the Syrian countries are made of soft, exquisite brocades. A girdle of Chinese embroidery and brocade is wrapped around the hips or lifted above the waist on a chiffon or satin gown and the long ends are heavily weighted with beads or fringe.

House gowns made from three and four-colored chiffons, superimposed, are girdled from the waist half way to knees, loosely and gracefully, with pliant brocaded ribbon.

It is interesting that the dressmakers have thrown the weight of their influence in favor of sumptuous metallic cloths, tissues and ribbons, while they banish metallic laces, according to a fashion authority. There may be wisdom and policy behind this act. The French dressmakers are desirous of instituting a widespread desire for thread laces. They have put them on a multitude of new spring frocks. The shops wish to sell their great quantities of laces. The dressmakers find in the lace fever a fashion easily handled by those who are skilled in drapery. Therefore, the balance is against the metallic laces, but all the world shows kindness toward metallic tissues. It seems strange that they should be introduced in such quantities at the beginning of warm weather, but they are not only used for evening gowns, but combined with navy blue serge and crepe de chine for afternoon wear.

While broad sashes are used for house gowns, there is clever ingenuity shown in a multitude of narrow girdles. These are made of metallic ribbons, plain, beaded in colors, or embroidered. They do not confine the waist; they are merely used to break the line of the garment.

Beaded Indian strings are again in high favor, after their partial failure last October. However, they are not as much sought after by the public as the gold and black metal ribbon or the steel and blue.

Gold and black Chinese ribbons, sumptuously brocaded, are used for entire evening gowns. They are draped, in the Chinese fashion, from waist to hem, and they have underfoundations, in the occidental fashion, of black tulle over gold tissue. The bodice of such a gown is made entirely of the ribbon wrapped around the figure, with the black tulle shoulder piece holding long or short sleeves.

SPRING CLOTHES IN PARIS

French Taste in Smarter Frocks Bears the Hallmark of the Times, Simplicity, Says Writer.

At a place where about 150 frocks were shown every one was marked by that hallmark of French taste in clothes, simplicity, according to a Paris letter in the London Times. Tailor made, little dresses, dinner gowns, were all simple; exaggerations were not to be found. Black silk jersey was much used for tailor made, with long waistcoats of embroidered linen, the neatest of these being a white one finely embroidered in jet beads. Skirts

MAKES A PRETTY SPARE ROOM

Bed With Low Head and Footboard, Comfy Bench or Stool, Dainty Lampshade, Among Features.

A good-looking "spare room" recently seen has but few pieces of furniture in it. One is a brown mahogany bed with low head and footboard, a feather bolster at either end, and a printed linen cover. Another piece is—well, shall we call it a bench or a stool? It is no higher nor wider than a little footstool, but is almost as long as the bed. On it is the most delightful pad, covered with taffeta.

This piece is really nothing more than a revival of the old-fashioned bedstep. You sit on it to take off your shoes, you kneel on it to say your prayers, and the soft silk pad is curiously luxurious to the sole of the bare foot when you step out on it in the morning.

Another effective touch in this little room is the lampshade, which is not, as too many lampshades are, made stiffly on a set form, with just about as much supple charm as the plaited are short and slim, coats are either redingote or short, the three-quarter coat being nowhere. There are pockets and buttons, but the pockets do not bulge; they lie flat and have buttoned back flaps.

Collars are no longer important for size, but there are some well-cut shawl collars on the coats, some of which run off into a waist belt and button behind. Beige, sand color, gray, navy blue and black are the colors for tailored suits; some show practically no trimming except in the waistcoat, or in pockets and buttons. Basques show a slight fullness on the hips, and skirts look even narrower than they are, as they often have a deep hidden plait.

Little dresses of all kinds are shown this season, from the most simple of country frocks in linen to the most elaborate town dress in taffetas, crepe de chine, silk crepons and mousseline de sole. Two materials are still used to make one frock, and embroidery is much used for trimming. A favorite embroidery is gray Angora mixed with white or blue, and there are some good little dresses in black crepe de chine with fawn and gray embroideries or impressions. The sleeveless pinafore tunic with wide shoulders and loose sash belt is general. Sashes, loose belts and girdles are common. Short sleeves are as general as long ones, especially for the young.

"ONE-PIECE" ECONOMY GOWN

The war time economy frock for women is here. It is in "one piece," and is called a silhouette gown. This pictured model in the new terra cotta color crepe de chine is draped to give a silhouette effect as the wearer walks along. The drapery in the back, which reaches to the waist, is stylish. The tassel falling from the neck in back is an unusual feature.

Field Flowers of Feathers. Field flowers for hats have acquired a tremendous popularity this season, and simulating these, a most attractive wreath is used about the crown of a large Swiss straw shape in purple with the wreath made entirely of feathers, and giving a soft, fluffy appearance to this most unusual model.

lining of a casket. The shaped underpart, stretched well to the wire frame, is of rose silk, and the overpart is a tasseled square of Persian chiffon—Exchange.

Boston Fern Ball. A Boston fern makes a splendid fern ball, far more satisfactory than any of the Japanese ones you can buy. Get a wire ox muzzle, like it with moss and in it place the fern roots, allowing some of the fronds to come through the open meshes of the wire. Fill up the center with good dirt and keep very moist. It will grow most luxuriantly, some of the fronds attaining the length of a yard.

Roll for Tablecloth. Use two round pasteboard boxes, such as are used to contain baking powder or hominy, and a piece of stiff cardboard wide enough to slip the round box over it and long enough to wrap the tablecloth over when folded lengthwise. Cover with muslin or paper. This is an easy way to keep the linen and save a great deal of time on ironing day.

Blind Nightingale

of New Mexico

The following poem was written by a convict in Sing Sing after he had heard Miss Elizabeth Garrett sing:

They call her blind!
They call her blind yet could she lead

A thousand soul-sick men
From cold gray stones, and make them heed

The song of wind and rain.
From gloomy cell and dew near
To sun and stars and sky,
And show the message all could read

Of love and peace and hope.
They call her blind.

They call her blind yet could she see

A neighbor's heart in each
A heart that neither Pharases
Nor Levite tried to reach,
The wine of song she poured,
like He

The oil of love she bore,
And showed to men what men could be

Thro' faith and hope and truth.
They call her blind.

They call her blind, yet could she paint

A message each could see,
A clarion call for those who faint
In notes of sweetest song
And when they told her of the taint

That each before her bore,
She would not see, but, like the saint

Saw faith and hope and love.
We called her blind!

HELPING OUR UNCLE HENRYS

Bureau of Markets Shows Daily Picture of Conditions Throughout Country—Guesswork in Shipping Is Eliminated.

The station agent at Highland wired his division superintendent "four cars strawberries to Chicago." The superintendent added these four cars to figures received from other station agents, and wired the total to the department of agriculture at Washington.

The agent at Highland wondered why anyone should want to know about cars of strawberries moving to Chicago. A few years ago his Uncle Henry had "gone broke" raising strawberries because he couldn't sell them for enough to pay his expenses. While he was wondering about this, messages were coming to Washington from all railroads and soon word was flashed back to points in producing sections showing that a total of 40 cars of strawberries were on the way to Chicago, and that comparatively few shipments were going to other important markets.

Shipment Diverted.

"Forty cars will swamp the Chicago market tomorrow," said a strawberry man, who received the wire from Washington, and he reached for the telephone. Messages went to railroad officials to divert certain cars headed for Chicago to other cities where strawberries were not abundant.

Next day Chicago received only 20 cars of strawberries instead of the 40 that would have gone there except for the market news service of the bureau of markets. Chicago could use 20 cars but not 40, and because the other 20 cars went to different markets many growers received checks that gave them a profit on their shipments.

Helping the Uncle Henrys.

Guesswork in marketing of fruits and vegetables has gone. The market news service is working for many "Uncle Henrys" and also for dealers and consumers. No one profits when a city receives more of any fruit or vegetable than it can consume, and as a means of correcting such a condition it is necessary to know how much produce is en route to that city.

The market news service for fruits and vegetables, with its many agents and with assistance from railroad officials, gives daily a picture of market conditions throughout the country for both shipper and dealer and places this picture in the form of a typed report in the hands of all persons interested. The bureau of markets uses leased wires to gather this information and furnishes market news, including prices and supplies, to more than 50,000 individuals in 32 states. The reports, which are issued simultaneously in many cities and in producing sections, covered in 1917, 21 commodities, including strawberries, tomatoes, peaches, cantaloupes, onions, potatoes, apples, grapes, watermelons, and asparagus. Each report carries market information from most of the large cities as well as giving shipping point information.

Farmers or others wishing to receive any of these reports from field agents should apply to the Bureau of Markets, Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

BETTER TO DRILL THAN CHECK WEAK SEED CORN

Where necessary to plant weak seed corn, checking is not as satisfactory as drilling, according to specialists of the United States department of agriculture. Plant right at first—plant the extra amount of seed at first, for replanting means additional work, late planting, and uneven and late maturity. Drilled corn is easily thinned. Harrows or cultivators can be used in thinning by driving across the corn rows. Without the loss of time, the thinning can proceed for several weeks while the corn is being cultivated and is growing, but replanting is altogether unsatisfactory and usually unprofitable.

Make Sweet Potato Flour.

Sweet potatoes, dried and ground into a flour in an ordinary kitchen coffee grinder, can be used in a variety of ways in cooking. Specialists of the United States department of agriculture believe that in many localities where sweet potatoes are abundant the making of sweet potato flour in the home may furnish a practical way to save the sweet potatoes from spoiling. The flour will keep well in dry containers.

To make the flour the potatoes should first be cut into small lengthwise pieces and thoroughly dried. A small drier that fits on top of the oven or warming closet of a range or gas stove can be used. If an electric fan is available it will serve admirably. The nut knife of a meat grinder also can be used for this purpose. Flour made by such process can be kept for some time if put into a dry container, or the flour may be made from the dry potatoes as it is needed. A quart of the dry potatoes makes a cup of flour.

The use of sweet potato flour in cake or bread making will materially reduce the amount of other flour used. The proportions may be half and half. When used in cakes the sugar could also be reduced a little. Sweet potato flour is useful as a thickening agent, having the same value in this respect as cornstarch. Recipes for the use of sweet potato flour have been tested and found to be excellent by food specialists of the United States department of agriculture.

FIGHTING TOOLS OF OUR SOLDIERS

Standardized Equipment, Quality, Efficiency, Determine Advantage Over Enemy.

WORK OF ORDNANCE BRANCH

Department Has in Washington, Alone 3,000 Officers With Thousands of Civilian Employees and Many Being Added.

By JAMES H. COLLINS, [From the Committee on Public Information, Washington, D. C.]

Of all the large activities conducted by Uncle Sam in his war establishment, the ordnance department of the army is second largest in expenditure, being exceeded only by the quartermaster department. And as our war program develops, ordnance might easily come to be the largest single activity.

This department has the responsibility for furnishing artillery, rifles, ammunition, motor transports, and practically all the fighting tools our army needs, except aircraft, together with means for assembling and storing them in this country and delivering them on the fighting front in France. With expenditures now approaching twice what is called for by our entire shipbuilding program, the operations of ordnance are naturally of great magnitude, and its problems are complex, for in furnishing the tools of war it has to enlist enormous productive capacity by converting old industries and creating new ones, as well as go back of the munitions factories in many instances and find enormous supplies of raw materials.

During January the ordnance department was thoroughly reorganized.

Let us try to look at the proposition through the soldier's eyes, and see it whole if we can. It may be well to begin at the A B C of the subject and ask ourselves: What is a soldier? The answer to this question might be: A soldier is a man whose occupation is fighting. What does a soldier fight with? He fights with tools. How do a soldier's tools compare with tools used by other craftsmen? They show practically the same characteristics as those in any peaceful modern industry.

In the first place, they have been wonderfully amplified in recent years by the use of power, and increased in compactly and complexity. Practically every labor-saving contrivance invented for peaceful calling has been applied to present-day war. The machine excavator that lays our water and sewer pipe quickly in peace times can be taken into the field to dig trenches, and a battle front requires construction work, power plants, telephone and telegraph systems and railroad transportation far beyond peace requirements for equal population, and these requirements must be met under the pressure of war's emergencies.

Soldier Like Factory Workman.

Present-day war involves the organization of great communities back of the fighting front, so that the soldier may follow his actual trade of fighting with the greatest efficiency. And when he actually reaches the fighting front with his real fighting equipment he is comparable to craftsmen in other trades in that his fighting tools are more or less standardized and that success or failure turns upon the quality of his tools and improvements in design and efficiency which give him a definite advantage over the enemy for the time being.

The soldier on the fighting front is not unlike a workman in a factory. Modern industrial production, under competitive conditions, seeks advantage by standardization of equipment, large scale production and ceaseless activity in the improvement of tools. It was along this great general trend of modern war, the making of better fighting tools, that the recent reorganization in the ordnance department was carried out. When war was declared we had an establishment of military men whose business it was to design tools of war. They not only knew how these tools were used by the soldier but kept track of improvements in fighting tools in every modern army, and the almost daily changes in the way fighting tools are used. That was their job, and a highly technical profession. They corresponded in every respect to the technical men in any peaceful industry, making researches and tests and utilizing all the refinements of invention and design to keep pace with competitors in war equipment, and secure every advantage possible.

In peaceful industries the public is satisfied to judge by the quality of the final product. When the history of the present war is written, it will probably be found that this was the proper measure of our fighting industry, the results secured on the battle front. Those results will be secured by the American military officer trained to design the equipment of an army, and the weight of expert opinion both from military men of other nations and capable business men in this country who are working with the war department is to the effect that we have as good a system of development as exists.

In ordinary times our requirements for fighting tools are so small that they can be supplied as an incident to peaceful industry. The American military expert was able to center upon the design of rifles, guns and ammunition, turning his blue prints and specifications over to manufacturers who were waiting to bid upon contracts. When the design was finished he simply advertised for bids and secured deliveries through the penalty clause in government contracts, and saw that quality was maintained by careful inspection of material delivered.

For several months after war was declared the ordnance department found its whole scheme of organization fairly satisfactory, and for a reason which will be apparent to everyone when it is stated.

Regardless of the magnitude of our war task and the urgency which has not been lost sight of our new army and our war preparations had to be arranged on an orderly program of growth. Soldiers for the army had to be drafted and trained. This was work which would consume months of time no matter how well the plans were laid. And while the men were being mobilized and instructed, the ordnance department could arrange for their fighting tools. There was even time to spend on thorough tests to determine which type of rifle, machine gun, etc., would give the best results on the fighting front. The peace-time plan of organization was therefore adhered to, but with full provision for growth as the new army was trained and sent to France. It was possible to plot the requirements for each bureau, increase the organization by drawing in more technical men from civil life for each specific task, and provide new bureaus to deal with new tasks. A bureau of supplies became necessary, for instance, and was started last May, with two men in a single room, who proceeded to map out that bureau's functions for 18 months, taking into account the delivery of supplies from factories, and their distribution to every army camp in the United States, as required by the army's developments in this country, and finally taking care of its requirements when it reached the western front. This bureau of supplies today has about 5,000 workers, and more are being added daily according to orderly growth of work, and by the end of this year there will be fully 10,000.

The ordnance department is now arranged in a way that makes it an efficient, self-contained agency for the performance of its particular work on the largest scale, and with the most careful attention to all details for the period of the war. At the head of the department today is the chief of ordnance, which position is still held by Maj. Gen. William Crozier. General Crozier, however, is at present in France, applying his ability and experience to the study of the army's requirements in the field. Brig. Gen. Charles B. Wheeler, as acting chief of staff, is in charge in this country. General Wheeler is a West Pointer, thoroughly familiar with the requirements of the army, and is assisted by three other regular army officers, each at the head of a bureau carrying part of the detail work.

The engineering bureau, under Col. John H. Rice, conducts researches and experiments, deals with inventions and designs, determines types of military equipment, conducts tests and draws up specifications.

The control bureau, under Col. Tracy C. Dickson, attends to estimates and schedules of requirements, co-ordinates and supervises the various operating divisions, deals with methods, organization, industrial relations, transportation and the adjustment of complaints and disputes.

The general administration bureau, under Col. William S. Pierce, looks after arsenal administration, finance, property, legal and advisory details, the personnel of the army, both military and civilian, attends to the department's mail, records, publications, library and information generally.

In addition, the chief of ordnance is in touch with the general military situation through the war council and general staff of the army, and military attaches of foreign governments stationed in Washington for advisory service.

The ordnance department now has in Washington alone approximately 3,000 commissioned officers with thousands of civilian employees, and this organization will steadily increase in size as the war program develops. When it is remembered that much of the work was accomplished in peace times by a chief and a very small force in one office, some idea of the magnitude of the new war organization is realized.

Prior to the war, on April 6, 1917, there were 79 ordnance officers; about 60 in Washington.

To drive a tank, handle the guns, and sweep over the enemy trenches, takes strong nerves, good rich blood, a good stomach, liver and kidneys. When the time comes, the man with red blood in his veins "is up and at it." He has iron nerves for hardships—an interest in his work grips him. That's the way you feel when you have taken a blood and nerve tonic, made up of Blood root, Golden Seal root, Stone root, Cherry bark, and rolled into a sugar-coated tablet and sold in sixty-cent vials by almost all druggists for past fifty years as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. This tonic, in liquid or tablet form, is just what you need this spring to give you vim, vigor and vitality. At the fag end of a hard winter, no wonder you feel "run-down," blue, out of sorts. Try this "Medical Discovery" of Dr. Pierce's. Don't wait! To-day is the day to begin! A little "pep," and you laugh and live.

The best means to oil the machinery of the body, put tone into the liver, kidneys and circulatory system, is to first practice a good house-cleaning. I know of nothing better as a laxative than a vegetable pill made up of May-apple, leaves of aloe and jalap. This is commonly sold by all druggists as Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets, and should be taken at least once a week to clear the twenty-five feet of intestines. You will thus clean the system—expel the poisons and keep well. Now is the time to clean house. Give yourself a spring house cleaning.—Adv.

New Idea in Sea Transportation. The detachable power plant method of speeding up ocean transportation, as proposed by H. de M. Snell, has been interesting British engineers. The plan is to fit a set of Diesel engines driving electric generators into a special steel caisson, which would have also quarters for the engineers, and to mount this caisson detachably on the stern of any one of several hulls. By special pontoons the transfer would be made very quickly from a vessel arriving in port to one ready to depart. Each hull would have its own electric motors running the propellers, but current would be supplied through wires from the generating caisson. Not least of the advantages, it is claimed, would be a subdivision of the hull insuring greater security against submarines.

Arranges Compact Nautical Chart. Economizing time, space and paper, Capt. Fritz E. Ullmark, head of a government nautical school in New York, has devised a new chart for finding a ship's position at sea. A vessel's position by the present method can be ascertained only after a protracted calculation on about 200 square feet of charts. This difficulty has been overcome by a plotting chart less than one square foot in area.

GROOMS' SANITARY STORE

Sometime ago we called attention to the fact that we are making Nationally Advertised goods a specialty.

We have succeeded so well by following this line that we are trying harder and harder to eliminate the cheap brands of goods that are not up to the highest standard. Of course, you understand that the Nationally Advertised goods on account of their great demand are costing more and more and our profits are smaller than ever before, but we feel that by holding up the quality of our goods at the lowest possible cost during these trying times we will be able to build up a lasting business that will mean success in the future.

Again we call your attention to the fact that in the leading magazines you will find large advertisements of products that you will be pleased to learn that we carry.

Power of Money-Force

HOW are you applying your money-force? Are you concentrating it—making it represent your character and ability?

Money-force is the compensation you receive for your labor—a symbol of the energy you have expended in service.

You add power to your money-force when you retain a per centage of it in an interest-bearing surplus. If you have no surplus you are the plaything of chance.

The most certain way to develop a surplus is to open a savings account with this strong bank and deposit regularly a fixed portion of your earnings.

The four per cent interest, compounded twice a year, that we pay, will constantly add to your money-force.
