TO THE PEOPLE OF NEW MEXICO:

The campaign for the Victory Liberty Loan will open throughout the United States on Monday, April 21st.

The fighting men of the nation have gloriously performed their part in bringing to a victorious end the world war, which threatened the destruction of our institutions and all that we hold dear.

The call is now to those who formed their supporting line at home, to the men and women of America who never failed in their support in supplying the sinews of war. Let us now show to our brave soldiers, sailors and marines, to the relatives and friends of those who gave up their lives in the service, and to the world, that we American citizens are ready and proud to meet the full measure of our obligations to pay the cost of victory and of peace.

Borrowing from our great martyred President's appeal to his countrymen near the close of the Civil War, "with malice toward none, with charity for all, with firmness in the right, as God gives us to see the right," let us go on and finish our work, to help bind up the world's wounds, to care for those who have borne the brunt of battle and for their widows and orphans, to the end that there may be a just and lasting peace throughout the world.

WHEREFORE, I, Benj. F. Pankey, Acting Governor of the State of New Mexico, do most earnestly call upon and request all the people of this State to enlist in the VICTORY LIBERTY LOAN drive, and to carry the banner of New Mexico OVER THE TOP, as you have done in every other campaign in support of the war.

Done at the Executive Office this the 16th day of April, 1919.

(SEAL)

WITNESS my hand and the Great Seal of the State of New Mexico.

BENJ. F. PANKEY,
Acting Governor.

Attested:

MANUEL MARTINEZ,
Secretary of State.

PALM CROIX DE GUERRE EMBLEM FOR LIEUT. BERRY

Carrizozo Boy Honored with French Cross in Recognition of Bravery and Loyalty

R. L. Berry, a brother of Lieut. R. I. Berry, whose tragic death occurred during the most severe part of the fighting in the late war, is in receipt of a letter from the French Government containing what is called the "Palm Croix de Guerre." This cross is issued only to relatives of soldiers who have performed deeds of gallantry in times of war, and in which they have lost their lives for their country's cause.

In this respect Lieut. Berry of Carrizozo exhibited the true American spirit. He did more; he demonstrated to those beyond the rolling seas that true American bravery was not confined to self-gratification, but consisted of using what might and principle it possesses to aid the weak even to the cost of that which is nearest and dearest to us all—LIFE. In a demonstration of this fact, Lieut. Berry, being mortally wounded in a certain engagement was taken from the field and an evacuation tag tied to his coat to designate him as one to be relieved of further service, having finished his course and ready for death. Little did they know of the true grit of this boy of the U. S. A. for after he had recovered sufficiently, he tore off the tag designating him as a "down and outer," made for the front, rejoined his company—and died.

In grateful recognition of this heroic act, the French Government sends Mr. Berry the Palm Croix de Guerre. The American Government has not only acknowledged in many ways its recognition of his sterling worth, but has seen fit to herald his name broadcast over the land as an example of patriotism seldom equalled in history of warfare. One of the Victory Loan ads is devoted exclusively to the above heroic act, which appeals to American patriotism in this manner: If Lieut. Berry gladly gave his life for a just and righteous cause, how should we, who are to enjoy the liberty preserved by patriots' blood stand by the Government in the great financial undertaking which is to square us with the world at large.

To Rest Eternal

At 4:30 last Tuesday morning occurred the death of Ellis Richardson at his ranch home about seven miles west of Ancho. Mr. Richardson came to this locality with his family in 1912, locating first in the Gallina Mountains where he lived for four years, after which he moved to Douglas, Ariz.

The family resided at Douglas for about three years when Mr. Richardson's health began to fail. This caused the family much concern, and they decided to return to this locality, which they did six months ago, locating as we have said near Ancho. The change seemed at first to be of benefit to Mr. Richardson, but here of late his condition grew worse resulting in his death at the time mentioned in the beginning of this article.

Undertaker T. E. Kelley being notified, at once proceeded to the ranch, gave the remains proper attention, brought them to Carrizozo and placed them in the morgue where they remained until relatives arrived from Baird, Texas, Thursday morning. Funeral services were held Thursday afternoon at the Methodist Church with the Rev. Lewelling conducting the services. The singing was beautifully rendered by a quartette composed of Mesdames Squier, Lemon, Forrest and Hooper, and Rev. Lewelling spoke words of comfort to the relatives of the deceased, his subject being "The Duality of Man," after which the remains were interred in the local cemetery.

Mr. Richardson was a model husband, a kind, loving father and a desirable neighbor. He believed that right living and square dealing with his fellow man was the one essential to a better life beyond the great divide which separates the tem-

To the business men of Carrizozo we wish especially to express our gratitude for the respect and lovely attention in the closing of places of business during the funeral, and the beautiful floral design.

Fourteenth Birthday on Fourteenth of April

On the fourteenth of April Mrs. F. E. Richard entertained in honor of her son Wayne, who was fourteen years of age on the above date.

Twenty-four of his schoolmates and friends in general were in attendance, the evening being spent in playing games of various kinds during which time refreshments were served. Master Wayne's popularity was shown by the many thoughtful and much appreciated presents he received.

The jolly guests made merry until the reasonable retiring hour when they dispersed, after wishing their friend many happy birthday celebrations to come.

poral and unreal from the eternal and everlasting. He is survived by the widow and two children; his son Prentiss Richardson, who is now undergoing foreign service in Siberia, and his daughter Mrs. J. G. Middleton, who now resides with her mother on the ranch. Two sisters of the deceased, Mrs. H. H. Ramsey and Mrs. Murray Harris, both of Baird, Texas, attended the funeral.

Girl of Mystery! House of Mystery!

Synopsis.—Thomas K. Barnes, a wealthy New Yorker on a walking trip in New England, is threatened by a mountain storm. At dusk at a lonely cross-roads, miles from Hart's tavern, where he intends to pass the night, he meets a girl in a similar plight, bound for a dwelling house called Green Fancy. Along comes an automobile for the girl. She gives him a lift to his tavern. There he falls in with a stranded troupe of "bar-storming" actors, of which Lyndon Rusercroft is the star and "Miss Thackeray" the leading woman. The theatrical people are doing hotel work for their board.

Barnes laughed aloud. There was no withstanding the fellow's sprightly impudence.

"I happen to enjoy walking," said he.

"If I enjoyed it as much as you do I'd be limping into Harlem by this time," said Mr. Dillingford sadly. "But you see I'm an actor. I'm too proud to walk."

The cracked bell on the office desk interrupted him, somewhat portentously. Mr. Dillingford's face assumed an expression of profound dignity. He lowered his voice as he gave vent to the following:

"That man Jones is the meanest human being God ever let— Yes, sir, coming, sir!" He started for the open door with surprising alacrity.

Barnes surveyed the little bedchamber. It was just what he had expected it would be. The walls were covered with a garish paper selected by one who had an eye but not a taste for color—bright pink flowers that looked more or less like chunks of a shattered watermelon spilt promiscuously over a background of pearl gray. The bedstead, bureau and washstand were ofensively modern. Everything was as clean as a pin, however, and the bed looked comfortable. He stepped to the small, many-paned window and looked out into the night. The storm was at its height. In all his life he never had heard such a clatter of rain, nor a wind that shrieked so appallingly.

His thoughts went quite naturally to the woman who was out there in the thick of it. He wondered how she was faring and lamented that she was not in his place now and he in hers. What was she doing up in this God-forsaken country? What was the name of the place she was bound for? Green Fancy! What an odd name for a house! And what sort of house—

His reflections were interrupted by the return of Mr. Dillingford, who carried a huge powder pitcher from which steam arose in volume. At his heels strode a tall, cadaverous person in a checked suit.

Never had Barnes seen anything quite so overpowering in the way of a suit. Joseph's coat of many colors was no longer a vision of childhood. It was a reality. The checks were an inch square and each cube had a narrow border of azure blue. The general tone was a dirty gray, due no doubt to age and a constitution that would not allow it to outlive its usefulness. "Meet Mr. Bacon, Mr. Barnes," introduced Mr. Dillingford, going to the needless exertion of indicating Mr. Bacon with a generous sweep of his frock coat. "Our heavy leads. Mr. Montague Bacon, also of New York."

"Ham and eggs, pork tenderloin, country sausage, rump steak and spring chicken," said Mr. Bacon in a cavernous voice, getting it over with while the fat was fresh in his memory. "Fried and boiled potatoes, beans, succotash, onions, stewed tomatoes and—er—just a moment, please. Fried and boiled potatoes, beans—"

"Ham and eggs, potatoes and a cup or two of coffee," said Barnes, suppressing a desire to laugh.

"And apple pie," concluded the waiter triumphantly. "I knew I'd get it if you gave me time. As you may have observed, my dear sir, I am not what you would call an experienced waiter. As a matter of fact, I—"

The bell downstairs rang violently. Mr. Bacon departed in great haste.

While the traveler performed his ablutions Mr. Dillingford, for the moment disengaged, sat upon the edge of the bed and enjoyed himself. He talked,

"We were nine at the start," said he pensively. "Gradually we were reduced to seven, not including the manager. Two of 'em escaped before the smash. The low comedian and character old woman. Joe Buckley and his wife. That left the old man—I mean Mr. Rusercroft, the star—Lyndon Rusercroft, you know—myself and Bacon. Tommy Gray, Miss Rusercroft, Miss Hughes and a woman named Bradley, seven of us. The woman named Bradley said her mother was dying in Buffalo, so the rest of us scraped together all the money we had—nine dollars and sixty cents—and did the right thing by her. Actors are always doing darn-fool things like that, Mr. Barnes. And what do you suppose she did? She took that money and bought two tickets to Albany, one for herself and another for the manager of the company—the lowest, meanest ornery white man that ever— But I am crabbing the old man's part. You ought to hear what he has to say about Mr. Manager. He can use words I never even heard of before. So that leaves just the four of us here, working off the two days' board bill of Bradley and the manager, Rusercroft's ungodly spree, and at the same time keeping our own slate clean. Miss Thackeray will no doubt make up your bed in the morning. She is temporarily a chambermaid. Cracking fine girl, too. Are you all ready? I'll lead you to the dining room. Or would you prefer a little appetizer beforehand? The taproom is right on the way. You mustn't call it the bar. Everybody in that little graveyard town down the road would turn over completely if you did. Hallowed tradition, you know."

"I don't mind having a cocktail. Will you join me?"

"As a matter of fact, I'm expected to," confessed Mr. Dillingford. "We've been drawing quite a bit of custom to the taproom. The rubes like to sit around and listen to conversation about Broadway and Bunker Hill and Old Point Comfort and other places, and then go home and tell the neighbors that they know quite a number of stage people. Human nature, I guess. Listen! Hear that? Rusercroft reciting 'Gunga Din.' You can't hear the thunder for the noise he's making."

They descended the stairs and entered the taproom, where a dozen men were seated around the tables, all of them with pewter mugs in front of them. Standing at the top table—that is to say, the one farthest removed from the door and commanding the attention of every creature in the room—was the imposing figure of Lyndon Rusercroft. He was reciting, in a sonorous voice and with tremendous fervor, the famous Kipling poem. A genial smile wiped the tragic expression from his face. He advanced upon Barnes and the beaming Mr. Dillingford, his hand extended.

"My dear fellow," he exclaimed resoundingly, "how are you?" Cordiality boomed in his voice. "I heard you had arrived. Welcome—thricefold welcome!" He neglected to say that Mr. Montague Bacon, in passing a few minutes before, had leaned over and whispered behind his hand: "Fellow upstairs from New York, Mr. Rusercroft—fellow named Barnes. Quite a swell, hellow me."

It was a well-placed tip, for Mr. Rusercroft had been telling the natives for days that he knew everybody worth knowing in New York. Barnes was momentarily taken aback. Then he rose to the spirit of the occasion.

"Hello, Rusercroft," he greeted, as if meeting an old-time and greatly beloved friend. "This is good. For my soul you are like a thriving date palm in the middle of an endless desert. How are you?"

"They shook hands warmly. Mr. Dillingford slapped the newcomer on the shoulder affectionately, familiarly, and shouted: "Who would have dreamed we'd run across good old Barnes up here? By Jove, it's marvelous!"

"Friends, countrymen," boomed Mr. Rusercroft, "this is Mr. Barnes of New York. Not the man the book was written about but one of the best fellows God ever put into this little world of ours. I do not recall your names, gentlemen, or I would introduce each of you separately and divinely."

Lyndon Rusercroft was a tall, saggy man of fifty. Despite his detestable erectness he was inclined to sag from the shoulders down. His head, huge and gray, appeared to be stuck too ponderous for his yielding body, and yet he carried it manfully, even theatrically. The lines in his dark, se-soned face were like furrows; his nose was large and somewhat bulbous, his mouth wide and grim. Thick, black eyebrows shaded a pair of eyes in which white was no longer apparent—it had given way to a permanent red. A two-days' stubble covered his chin and cheeks. Altogether he was a singular exemplification of one's idea of the old-time actor.

Passing through the office, his arm linked in one of Barnes', Mr. Rusercroft hesitated long enough to impress upon Landlord Jones the importance of providing his "distinguished friend, Robert W. Barnes," with the very best that the establishment afforded. Putnam Jones blinked slightly and his eyes sought the register as if to secure or justify his memory. Then he spat copiously into the corner, a necessary preliminary to a grin. He hadn't much use for the great Lyndon Rusercroft. His grin was sardonic. Something told him that Mr. Rusercroft was about to be liberally fed.

CHAPTER III.

Mr. Rusercroft Dissolves, Mr. Jones Intervenes, and Two Men Ride Away.

Mr. Rusercroft explained that he had had his supper. In fact, he went on to confess, he had been compelled, like the dog, to "speak" for it. "What could be more disgusting, more degrading, he mourned, than the spectacle of a man who had appeared in all of the principal theaters of the land as star and leading support to stars, settling for his supper by telling stories and reciting poetry in the taproom of a tavern?"

"Still," he consented, when Mr. Barnes insisted that it would be a kindness to him, "since you put it that way, I dare say I could do with a little snack, as you so aptly put it. Just a bite or two. What have you ready, Miss Tilly?"

Miss Tilly was a buxom female of forty or thereabouts, with spectacles. She was one of a pair of sedentary waitresses who had been so long in the employ of Mr. Jones that he hated the sight of them.

Mr. Rusercroft's conception of a bite or two may have staggered Barnes but it did not bewilder Miss Tilly. He had four eggs with his ham, and other things in proportion. He talked a great deal, proving in that way that it was a supper well worth speaking for. Among other things he dilated at great length upon his reasons for not being a member of the Players or the Lambs in New York city. It seems that he had promised his dear, devoted wife that he would never join a club of any description. Dear old girl, he would as soon have cut off his right hand as to break any promise made to her. He brushed something away from his eyes, and his chin, contracting, trembled slightly. "What is it, Mr. Bacon? Any word from New York?"

Mr. Bacon hovered near, perhaps hungrily.

"Our genial host has instructed me to say to his latest guest that the rates are two dollars a day, in advance, all dining-room checks payable on presentation," said Mr. Bacon, apologetically.

Rusercroft exploded. "O scurvy, insult," he boomed. "Confound him—"

The new guest was amiable. He interrupted the outraged star. "Tell Mr. Jones that I shall settle promptly," he said with a smile.

"It has just entered his brain that you may be an actor, Mr. Barnes," said Bacon.

Miss Tilly, overheating, drew a step or two nearer. A sudden interest in Mr. Barnes developed. She had not noticed before that he was an uncommonly good-looking fellow. She always had said that she adored strong, "athletic" faces.

Later on she felt inspired to jot down, for use no doubt in some future literary production, a concise, though general, description of the magnificent Mr. Barnes. She utilized the back of the bill of fare and she wrote with the feverish ardor of one who dreads the loss of a first impression. I herewith append her visual estimate of the hero of this story:

"He was a tall, shapely specimen of mankind," wrote Miss Tilly. "Broad-shouldered. Smooth-shaved face. Penetrating gray eyes. Short, curly hair about the color of mine. Strong hands of good shape. Face tanned considerably. Heavy dark eyebrows. Good teeth, very white. Square chin. Lovely smile that seemed to light up the room for everybody within hearing. Nose ideal. Mouth same. Voice aristocratic and reverberating with education. Age about thirty or thirty-one. Rich as Croesus. Well-turned legs. Would make a good nobleman."

All this would appear to be reasonably definite were it not for the note regarding the color of his hair. It leaves to me the simple task of completing the very admirable description of Mr. Barnes by announcing that Miss Tilly's hair was an extremely dark brown.

Also it is advisable to append the following biographical information: Thomas Kingsbury Barnes, engineer, born in Montclair, N. J., September 26, 1885. Cornell and Beaux Arts, Paris. Son of the late Stephen S. Barnes, engineer, and Edith (Valentine) Barnes. Office, Metropolitan building, New York city. Residence, Amsterdam mansion. Clubs: (Lack of space prevents listing them here). Recreations, golf, tennis and horse-back riding. Fellow of the Royal Geographical society. Member of the Loyal Legion and the Sons of the American Revolution.

Added to this, the mere announcement that he was in a position to indulge in a fancy for long and perhaps aimless walking tours through more or less out-of-the-way sections of his own country, to say nothing of excursions in Europe.

He was rich. Perhaps not as rich as measured in these Midas-like days, but rich beyond the demands of avarice. His legacy had been an ample one. The fact that he worked hard at his profession from one year's end to the other—not excluding the six devoted to mentally productive jaunts—is proof sufficient that he was not content to subsist on the fruits of another man's enterprise. He was a worker.

The first fortnight of a proposed six weeks' jaunt through upper New England terminated when, he laid aside his heavy pack in the little bedroom at Hart's Tavern. Cockcrow would find him ready and eager to begin his third week. At least so he thought. But, truth is, he had come to his journey's end; he was not to sling his pack for many a day to come.

After setting the mind of the landlord at rest Barnes declined Mr. Rusercroft's invitation to "qualify" a cordial with him in the taproom, explaining that he was exceedingly tired and intended to retire early.

Instead of going up to his room immediately, however, he decided to have a look at the weather. His uneasiness concerning the young woman of the crossroads increased as he peered at the wall of blackness looming up beyond the circle of light. She was somewhere outside that sinister black wall and in the smothering grasp of those invisible hills, but was she living or dead? Had she reached her journey's end safely? He tried to extract comfort from the confidence she had expressed in the ability and integrity of the old man who drove with far greater recklessness than one would have looked for in a wild and irresponsible youngster.

He recalled with a thrill the imperious manner in which she gave directions to the man, and his surprising servility. It suddenly occurred to him that she was no ordinary person; he was rather amazed that he had not thought of it before.

Moreover, now that he thought of it, there was, even in the agreeable recollections she had made to his offerings, the faint suggestion of an accent that should have struck him at the time but did not for the obvious reason that he was, then not at all interested in her. Her English was so perfect that he had failed to detect the almost imperceptible foreign flavor that now took definite form in his reflections. He tried to place this accent. Was it French or Italian or Spanish? Certainly it was not German.

He took a few turns up and down the long porch, stopping finally at the upper end. The clear, inspiring clang of a hammer on an anvil fell suddenly upon his ears. He looked at his watch. The hour was nine, certainly an unusual time for men to be at work in a forge. He remembered two men in the taproom who were bare-armed and wore the shapeless leather aprons of the smithy.

Hart's tavern is entertainingly serio-comic, when suddenly tragedy takes the stage—battle, murder and sudden death.

Fewer of Imagination. To those who see only with their eyes, the distant is always indistinct and little, becoming less and less as it recedes, till utterly lost; but to the imagination, which thus reverses the perspective of the senses, the far off is great and imposing, the magnitude increasing with the distance.—Mrs. Jameson (Studies).

Clarke-Shrader

We knew they were over from Glencoe, but we did not know the reason "why;" but it turned out all right after all; for Thursday evening at 8:30 Mr. Harold P. Clarke and Miss Loraine Shrader were united in marriage at the Methodist Church parsonage with Rev. Lewelling officiating.

The newly married couple are both of Glencoe; Miss Shrader was originally from Roswell, being a daughter of G. W. Shrader, a former merchant of that city, but for some time she has resided at Glencoe and teaching school on the Ruidoso. In both places mentioned she has many admiring friends whose good wishes will follow her in her new life.

Mr. Clarke is an energetic, industrious ranchman of Glencoe, who, like Mrs. Clarke, has made many loyal friends in this locality. He came here several years ago from the state of New York, taking his stand in the ranks of other young men from the east to risk his future in the Great West, in which we are glad to say, he has succeeded. Since coming to Lincoln County Mr. Mr. Clarke, who is a Republican in politics, received recognition from his party to the extent that at the last county election he was nominated as one of the County Commissioners, making a showing that was remarkable. The Outlook extends its best wishes to the Clarks and may their future be one of undisturbed happiness.

ANTIQUITY OF DECORATIVE ART

Strange Sources From Which Pigments Used by Modern Painters Are Derived.

PRESERVATION OF SURFACES.

Crude but Effective Processes Employed by the Egyptians and Greeks of Pliny's Day—Noah Prudently Waterproofed the Ark.

Whether paint was invented in answer to a need for a preservative or to meet a desire for beauty is a question fully as knotty as the ancient one about the relative time of arrival of the chicken or the egg. It was invented, though, and it serves both purposes equally; so whether it is an offspring of mother necessity or an adopted son of beauty remains forever a disputed question.

The first men, cowering under the fierce and glaring eyes of the biblical countries, constructed rude huts of wood to shelter them. The perishable nature of these structures caused rapid decay, and it is probable that the occupants, seeking some artificial means of preservation, hit upon the elements of the earth in their search. It is perhaps natural to suppose that it was the instinct of preservation that led men to the search, although the glories of the sunsets and the beauties of the rainbow may have created a desire to imitate those wonders in their own dwellings.

The earliest record of the application of a preservative to a wooden structure dates from the ark, which was, according to the Bible, "pitched within and without." The pitch was a triumph of preservation whatever it lacked as a thing of beauty.

Decoration applied to buildings first comes to light with ancient Babylon, whose walls were covered with representations of hunting scenes and of combat. These were done in red and the method followed was to paint the scene on the bricks at the time of manufacture, assuring permanence by baking. Strictly speaking, this was not painting so much as it was the earliest manifestation of our own familiar kalsomining.

The first Hebrew to mention painting is Moses. In the thirty-third chapter of the book of Numbers he instructs the Israelites, "When ye have passed over the Jordan into the land of Canaan, then shall ye drive out all the inhabitants of the land from before you and destroy all their pictures."

At later periods the Jews adopted many customs of the peoples who successively obtained power over them and in the apocryphal book of the Maccabees is found this allusion to the art of decorating, "For as the master builder of a new house must care for the whole building, but, he that undertaketh to set it out and paint it, must seek out things for the adorning thereof."

Although Homer gives credit to a Greek for the discovery of paint, the allusions to it in the books of Moses, the painted mummy cases of the Egyptians and the decorated walls of Babylon and Thebes fix its origin at a period long antecedent to the Grecian era. The walls of Thebes were painted 1,900 years before the coming of Christ and 996 years before "Omer smote his bloomin' lyre."

The Greeks recognized the value of paint as a preservative and made use of something akin to it on their ships. Pliny writes of the mode of boiling wax and painting ships with it, after which, he continues, "neither the sea, nor the wind, nor the sun can destroy the wood thus protected."

The Romans, being essentially a warlike people, never brought the decoration of buildings to the high plane it had reached with the Greeks. For all that the ruins of Pompeii show many structures whose mural decorations are in fair shape today. The colors used were glaring. A black background was the usual one and the combinations worked thereon red, yellow and blue.

In the early Christian era the use of mosaics for churches somewhat supplanted mural painting. Still, during the reign of Justinian the Church of Saint Sophia was built at Constantinople and its walls were adorned with paintings.

In modern times the uses of paint have come to be as numerous as its myriad shades and tints. Paint is unique in that its name has no synonym and for it there is no substitute material. Bread is the staff of life, but paint is the life of the staff.

No one thinks of the exterior of a wooden building now except in terms of paint coated. Interiors, too, from painted walls and stained furniture down to the lowliest kitchen utensil, all receive their protective covering. Steel, so often associated with cement re-enforcing, is painted before it goes to give solidity to the manufactured stone. The huge girders of the skyscrapers are daubed an ugly but efficient red underneath the surface coat of black. Perhaps the best example of the value of paint on steel is found in the venerable Brooklyn bridge, on which a gang of painters is kept going continually. It is scarce possible to think of a single manufactured article which does not meet paint somewhere in the course of its construction. So has paint grown into the very marrow of our lives.

TRIBUTE TO YANKEE FIGHTER Magazine Writer Describes the "Doughboy" as All the World Has Come to Know Him. George Pattull, a magazine writer who has been with General Pershing's army in France, has paid a tribute to the American fighting men that is worthy of reproduction in every county in the United States. Says Mr. Pattull: "The American soldier is about the finest human specimen on top of the earth—rough and ready, grumbling, never giving up; always able to laugh, even at his own plight; a holy terror in a fight; ruthless to an enemy capable of resistance; generous to a fault to a beaten foe; hating nobody, fearing none; with backbone enough to storm hell, and the gentleness to win a child." France knows this, England knows it, even Germany has a hazy idea that a Yankee doughboy is a combination of an angel from heaven and a devil from hell. Isn't it about time for Americans to realize the worth of their fighting sons?—Exchange. Mystifying "Ada." A city advertisement was headed: "Two sisters want washing." So do a good many brothers. Another advertisement was: "Wanted—a boy to sandpaper." The rareness of a day in June doesn't worry the average man half as much as the rareness of his pay days. Common-Sense Methods of Dealing With Children Will Always Be Found Effective. A horrid exaggeration and perversion of the natural desire which all children feel for notice by their elders, is held by Thomson to be the cause of abnormal naughtiness in children. These cases are of essentially the same nature as those of "moral imbecility" in children who are in some degree mentally defective. The proper lines of treatment are clear enough, and when carried out consistently and thoroughly are rapidly and completely successful. They may be summarized as follows: (1) All severe corporal punishment must be stopped—it never does any good. (2) Nobody must ever appear shocked, amused or even surprised at anything a child does. (3) His misdeeds are never to be alluded to, much less described, in his presence; and, lastly, he should be noticed and encouraged in every way when he is good and altogether ignored when he is naughty. —British Journal of Children's Diseases. The Usual Kind. "What kind of work is the old college coach doing now?" "I suppose his usual hack work." A woman who is popular with other women is seldom a reigning favorite with men.

Reserve Pastures on National Forests

Albuquerque, N. M., April 24.
 -The Forester has recently approved recommendations of the District Forester at Albuquerque, N. M., allowing stockmen on the National Forests to construct, free of charge, reserve pastures to be used for short periods in the spring for the purpose of caring for poor stock which are in need of extra feed and attention.

One hundred acres will be allowed permittees grazing fifty head or less and not to exceed two additional acres, depending on the character of the forage, for each head of yearlong permits in excess of fifty. Such pastures should produce an excellent crop of forage for use during the spring since the foliage plants will not be subject to vitiating influence of heavy grazing during the growing season. The use of reserve pastures as such will provide a better use of the forage and should be a means of distinctly bettering the condition of the range.

The granting of such pastures will, without doubt, be of great benefit to the permittees on the Forests, and is considered one of the biggest steps forward in the progressive range management which has been initiated by the Forest Service.

State Convention American Legion

Carrizozo is ably identified in the temporary State Committee that has been selected with Lieut. Col. Chas. M. De Bremond of Roswell as chairman to arrange a State Convention at Albuquerque May 1, to select six delegates to the St. Louis Convention at which the American Legion of War Veterans will be organized.

Each county is to have two delegates to the New Mexico convention, except Bernalillo, Chavez, San Miguel and Santa Fe, which will be allotted three delegates each. Preliminary steps have been completed by H. H. Dorman of Santa Fe, delegated by the national temporary committee to form a state committee here preparatory to a state convention.

In the list of delegates to the New Mexico Convention Lieut. Henry Lutz and Eb K. Jones are mentioned from Lincoln County and we are glad to say the selection was well made. They have both had an abundance of valuable experience which entitles them to recognition in any movement of a patriotic nature. Therefore, the selection could not have been better.

Listening to the marvelous fidelity of the soft vibrations of the violin, the strong melody of the orchestra or band, and every voice modulation of the great artist, as rendered by the Pathephone, you will realize you are hearing musical masterpieces reproduced in all their purity, tone strength and detail of technique. Music lovers everywhere have been so impressed with the natural performance of the Pathephone that they all agree it should be called the actual duplication of the living voices of the artist, for in "reproduction" some tone qualities are bound to be lost. As rendered by the Pathephone, nothing is lost—not a single delicate tone shading, not an overtone, not even the inspirational thrill of the artist.

Army Aircraft To Fight Forest Fires

Army airplanes and captive balloons will cover portions of the National Forests of California, Arizona, New Mexico and other states this summer, to aid in detecting and suppressing forest fires. In compliance with an order from Secretary Baker directing the Air Service to cooperate with the Forest Service in this work, conferences are under way to determine where and to what extent the air scouts will supplement the Forest rangers.

That there is a distinct and important place for aircraft in fire protection of timberlands is regarded by the forest officials as beyond doubt, but experimental trial of methods and possibilities will have to be the first step. This is what is being planned for the coming fire season. Existing airdromes and bases possessed by the army will be utilized for the experiments. Examples of such bases, near enough to National Forests to be used advantageously, are the flying fields at San Diego, Riverside and Arcadia, in southern California. Other points in the west and in the east are under consideration, including one near the White Mountains in New Hampshire.

One of the interesting possibilities to be tested is bombing fires to put them out. Another plan is to be tested transporting fire fighters by dirigibles from which ladders can be lowered to the ground.

The chief use of the aircraft this summer, however, will doubtless be for fire detection. At present the Forest Service relies for this partly on patrol, usually by men on horses, motorcycles, or railroad speeders, and partly on watchers stationed at lookout points. Aircraft have many points of obvious superiority for both classes of detection work.

Lookouts in a very broken country, cut up by deep canyons or where mountain ridges obstruct the view, or in a flat country that affords no good points of vantage, are often unable to pick up all fires quickly by the rising smoke, or to locate them accurately. For precise location the system in use depends on triangulation through reports telephoned from separate observation points. Airplanes would use wireless in reporting fires, as they have done in communicating with the artillery, and would locate fires by coordinates in the same way that gunfire in war is directed to a particular spot or object.

From the army standpoint, the use of aircraft in protecting the National Forests affords a valuable opportunity for training fliers and developing further the possibilities of aircraft and the art of flying.

Promoters Elect

A meeting of the promoters of the O'Rourke Oil and Gas Leasing Co., was held in Carrizozo on Saturday, April 19, 1919, when the following officers were elected: President, J. J. O'Rourke of El Paso; Vice President, W. J. LaFleur of Carrizozo; Sec. Treas., J. W. Palmer of Alamogordo. These three gentlemen, with Messrs. R. E. Hoffman, W. O. Daniel, R. E. Stidham and H. L. Powell of Carrizozo and W. J. Davis of Alamogordo will complete the Board of Directors.

This company has applied for incorporation, with capital of $100,000.00, which it proposes to use for development purposes on their holdings in the Tularosa Basin, where they control over 6000 acres of the best oil land in the Basin. In the near future the company expects to put its stock on the market for sale at $1.00 per share. In the meantime they are preparing to sublease some of their holdings. Details of this can be obtained from the Secretary-Treasurer at Alamogordo, N. M.

STATUS OF GERMANY FIXED

TERMS OF TREATY ITEM BY ITEM IS SETTLED BY PEACE CONGRESS.

TREATY 70,000 WORDS

PROBABLE THAT HUNS WILL NOT BE ALLOWED TO DISCUSS TERMS.

Western Newspaper Union News Service.

Paris, April 18.—The drafting of the final form of the peace treaty is proceeding rapidly in order to have it ready for presentation to the German delegates when they arrive at Versailles.

Then comes a declaration of impressive brevity not exceeding thirty words, stating that on the conclusion of the treaty and the exchange of ratifications, the war shall come to an end.

Following upon the declaration of peace, the present intention of the peace delegates is to have the covenant of the League of Nations occupy the place of honor in the treaty and to be the first subject treated in detail.

It will thus take the priority it had in the program of the peace conference. Then, in succession, will follow the military, naval and aerial terms, reparations, responsibilities, the Rhine frontier, the Saar region, Alsace-Lorraine, Poland, the status of Danzig as an international port, Germany's Schleswig-Holstein frontier and a large number of special subjects, including the labor convention adopted at the last plenary session of the conference; international ports and waterways, and extended economic and financial provisions not directly connected with reparations.

The textual form of all these subdivisions has been completed, so that the work at present going on is chiefly fitting together the parts into a homogeneous whole. This is being done by international experts representing the five great powers.

Their work is largely formal, as the council of four and the commissions have adopted the language of the various parts now being fitted together. It is estimated that the treaty as a whole will exceed 70,000 words, or the contents of a large, closely printed volume. The text is being prepared in French and English, and, as a means of expediting action, a German text may be prepared, though it is foreseen that the German plenipotentiaries may ask for a considerable time to peruse a document of such magnitude.

After the treaty is actually delivered, it is intended to allow adequate time for the Germans to make inquiries concerning the various details before returning to Weimar.

This is expected to take about two days, the first day being devoted to the Germans to familiarizing themselves with the terms, and the second day to answering such queries as they may make.

There is no purpose to have this assume the character of a discussion, but merely the elucidation of any points which may assist in obtaining prompt and favorable action when the plenipotentiaries return to Weimar.

The procedure on the arrival of the German plenipotentiaries at Versailles has virtually been decided upon.

It is believed the stay of the plenipotentiaries at Weimar will cover a week, thus bringing them back to Versailles about May 8 to 10. This, however, is conjectural, for it is dependent upon the rapidity of the decisions reached at Weimar.

HERE COME THE TANKS

Tanks played an important part in the big battles of the war. Twenty of these armored vessels will visit this District, manned by boys who actually handled the tanks in France. They called these boys the "Treat 'em Rough" boys, because that's what they did to the boche. The tanks are fully equipped with guns and ammunition just as they went onto the battlefields, and you will get a real taste of war when these guns are fired. Eloquent speakers will accompany the tanks to tell you all about them, and what it cost your Government to "Treat 'em Rough." Your Victory Liberty Loan County Chairman will have charge of the routing of these tanks in your county. Don't fail to see them.

SEE GREAT WAR FILM

Among the pictures which will aid in floating the Victory Liberty Loan is the remarkable film, "The Price of Peace," in the taking of which one of the photographers was killed. The film tells the animated story of the great attack at Chateau Thierry; shows a German airplane being destroyed in the air; shows a field gun and its crew being destroyed by a high explosive shell, and concludes with scenes of the American Army in Germany. The film is 2000 feet long. This picture will be shown without admission charge in as many theatres as can be reached during the Loan campaign.

WATCH THE SKIES

Probably every one of you has seen an aeroplane in flight. But how many of you have seen it make a landing? How many of you have seen its pilot at close range and have talked with him about it? You will be given the opportunity to see these boys and to talk with them. Arrangements are being made to secure planes to visit the majority of the towns in the Eleventh District during the Victory Liberty Loan drive. Remember the aeroplane, the "eyes of the Army" played a big part in winning the war. Watch the skies.

U.S. NO LONGER ON DEBTOR LIST

Conditions of Few Years Ago Have Been Entirely Reversed by War.

DUTY NOW TO PAY OUR WAY

Looking to World Leadership in National Ethics and International Commerce Brings Us Face to Face With Problem.

By WILLIAM C. REDFIELD, Secretary of Commerce.

Five years ago the United States was a debtor nation. We had financed many of our largest enterprises with the aid of European funds. The visible balance of trade was in our favor but was nearly or quite offset by such unseen items as payments for interest, for services (transportation) for the expenditures of Americans travelling abroad, etc. We were as a whole an expending rather than an investing country. The work of developing the full range of our resources was incomplete. We were far from being independent in the economic sense, but looked to the world outside our limits for many essentials, viz.: for credits, for materials and for many manufactured products which we did not ourselves produce.

There were then three great competitors in the international market—Great Britain, Germany and the United States—which ranked in the order stated. The first two were entrenched all around the globe with banking facilities and transportation systems everywhere at their command. Great Britain possessed the largest merchant fleet and the greatest aggregate of liquid capital in the world. Germany backed her industries on science and her world commerce on research and backed both by government aid. It speaks volumes for the competing power of American industry that against competition of this nature she was a close competitor in a common field.

Conditions Reversed by War.

These conditions are today reversed; the war has changed them all. Germany has for years been excluded from the world markets and has lost her good will in them. Her fleets have vanished. At home she is disgraced by defeat and civil strife. Abroad her methods have been discredited because the trail of evil is over them all. The earlier years of the world war altered the currents of thought and action so that Great Britain and her allies looked to us for credits and other essentials. First they recalled the investments made here and we repaid them a sum estimated at from $4,000,000,000 to $5,000,000,000. Then while looking to us for further loans they called upon our natural resources and our industries for vast volumes of raw and manufactured materials. Thus the balance of trade in our favor grew immensely and the ordinary effects against it were removed. While others were fighting we accumulated wealth. We paid what we owed abroad and became in turn a creditor nation. When we saw that the great contest was one in which we were vitally concerned and entered the war this process was accelerated. We loaned vast sums to the nations with which we were associated so that today not only has our foreign debt to Europe disappeared, but a debt from Europe to us of eight and a half billions has taken its place. We have accumulated the greatest stock of gold in the history of the world. Now that the strife seems over the world looks to us for essential materials and equipment with which to rebuild that which war has destroyed and to resume the normal work of life. We must not only feed and supply the world, but must furnish in large part the credits from which we shall be paid. Industries which we did not have are created and operated. We are far more economically independent than ever before and have come to realize the danger of being dependent on foreign sources of supply for any essential factors of commerce.

Vast Change is Wrought.

We may not, therefore, think in the present and of the future as we thought in and of the past. Ideas which seemed remote have been condensed into the facts. Relations that seemed dreams are now realities. Isolation has been changed into world leadership. We can no longer confine thought and action to the three-mile limit but have entered into the wide realm of world activity. This calls on us for action and for finance on a scale enlarged to fit the time, the facts and the duty. We cannot escape the responsibility that comes with power. It is not a talent we can bury in a napkin; our power must be used. No one argues that we use it for ill—we can only use it for good.

First and foremost in the future steps lies the duty to pay our way. We have fought the fight, we have kept the faith. It remains to pay the bill. We who have given credit to others must now sustain our own. We who look normally to world leadership in national ethics and international commerce must base both upon paying promptly what we owe. The call, therefore, to finance the government is as inspiring, as vitally necessary, as basic in its demand on judgment and conscience as were the calls of those previous loans made in the stress of war.

GREAT WAR TAUGHT ECONOMY

Millions of Men, Women and Children Proudly Responded to Urgent Appeal to Give and Help Win.

By GEORGE M. REYNOLDS, President, Continental & Commercial National Bank of Chicago.

By tradition and training Americans possess, in marked degree, those qualities that fit them for the larger relationships that are bound to grow out of the sacrifices and achievements of the great war. Our mixture of citizenry and ancestry makes it very vital, in this time of looking forward to a greater America, that we should study American history, learn to revere American institutions and strive to discover and attain American ideals. These have made us great, guided our matchless progress in the past; these will lead us into a more glorious future.

From the experience of the past four years, first as onlookers and later as participants, we have gained a more intimate knowledge of the outside world, a knowledge that will be of inestimable value in our foreign relations, commercially, financially and diplomatically. We have also been getting a much clearer understanding of our own responsibilities to each other.

Fired by ambition born of equal opportunity that exists to a greater degree here than anywhere else, we have always been an industrious people, and when we cease to be industrious we shall begin to go backwards.

Habits of industry and thrift are the two great essentials to success. Extravagance has been one of our outstanding characteristics and it has cost us much; it has robbed us of the real fruits of prodigious production, for in the seasons of abundance we have squandered that which should have been saved for the hour of adversity.

War Has Taught Economy.

One of the lessons taught by the war was economy. The government needed all kinds of supplies, expensive munitions, and millions of men who had to be fed and clothed. It was forced to build ships on an unprecedented scale. It did not have the money with which to do all this. It appealed to the people to save their money and buy Liberty bonds and War Savings stamps, and millions of men, women and children who had never known the importance of economy and of investments became savers and bond buyers.

Patriotism, as well as self-interest, prompted us to buy bonds while war was being waged. The patriotic duty to buy government bonds is no less now, for our soldiers must be cared for until demobilization is complete and they are again back in their old places on farms, in the factories and other places of employment. The promptings of self-interest are greater now, because the treaty of peace is being worked out; we are gradually returning to a normal basis, and we know that Liberty bonds will sell at or above par within a reasonable time.

Development and expansion mean general prosperity and employment for everybody, but we cannot continue even normal development of our great resources and expansion of our business, as we should, without new capital, and now capital for these purposes must come from the savings of the people. Therefore we are all vitally interested in the practice of economy now, although the war is over.

Our Financial Resources.

We hold $3,000,000,000 of gold in this country, which is one-third of the world's supply. Our government has loaned the allied governments over $3,500,000,000, and they have marketed here, privately, another $2,000,000,000 of securities. Since August, 1914, we have bought back several billion dollars' worth of American securities that were then owned abroad. During the war our excess of exports over imports have totaled about $11,000,000,000. The estimated national wealth of the United States is $250,000,000,000, or within $10,000,000,000 of the combined national wealth of Great Britain, France, Germany and Austria-Hungary. Their estimates were made before the outbreak of the war. Since then they have lost in resources, while we have gained, so that an estimate today would probably show that our wealth equals or exceeds the four nations named.

DADDY'S EVENING FAIRY TALE

By Mary Graham Bonner

THE DEWDROPS.

"Oh, do we hear them?"
"I do believe we do."
"Oh, goggle, goggle," said the rest of the dewdrops. For the little speakers had been the dewdrops and they had asked the fairies to come to breakfast with them. They found it rather hard to get their invitations to the fairies before they had made any other engagement, for they got up at just such a time on these mornings, and they couldn't send their invitations before.

Fairy Princess Joy had been around early in the morning and she had seen the Dewdrop fairies. They had asked her if she would ask the other fairies to come to breakfast, for they had not had a dewdrop breakfast for ever and ever so long.

Fairy Princess Joy said she didn't think the fairies had made any other plan or engagement this morning, and that they would be delighted to come. "But if you can come, do come right away, so as not to waste any time," they had said, and Fairy Princess Joy had promised.

"Yes, we not only hear them coming, but I can see them," said a dewdrop on top of a high bush. And all the little dewdrops on the grass said: "We can't see them yet, but we're so glad to hear such good news."

And then the fairies came running, and scampering and flying over the grass. And the dewdrops glistened and seemed to sparkle with joy. They laughed and they talked and they said: "Breakfast is all ready."

"Oh," said Fairy Princess Joy, "you should have heard the fairies answer when I asked them if they wanted to come to a breakfast party given by the dewdrops."

All of the dewdrops smiled and said: "What did the fairies say, Princess Joy? You most certainly do make everyone happy, for you tell everyone the nice things you've heard."

"But it's the truth," said the fairies in chorus, and the dewdrops looked up at Mr. Sun and said: "Isn't that glorious? Now, please, Mr. Sun, let us have time to hear the story of what the fairies said when they were asked to our breakfast. And please, too, Mr. Sun, let us have time for a nice breakfast and an early morning dewdrop dance. Will you, Mr. Sun?"

"I most certainly will," said Mr. Sun, as he beamed and smiled. "I will enjoy seeing the fun myself."
"So tell us, Fairy Princess Joy," they urged.

"I went back to the fairies and they were all opening their eyes and singing softly:
"Let us wake up and play,
For it will be a nice day."

"And I said at once that they were right, and that it would be a nice day. Then when they heard the news that we were asked to the breakfast party given by the dewdrops, they all said that they felt that something particularly nice was going to happen.

"They cried with joy when they heard about the party, and they all got up at once and put on these pale-green dresses which they are wearing, as they thought they would look their best for a breakfast party."

"Oh, we're so glad to hear they wanted to come," said the dewdrops. "And now drink of our magic water, dance o'er the grass, the bushes, the spring flowers, and we will sparkle like little diamonds while our own band will sing and play."

And as the dewdrops said this the robins appeared from everywhere and hopping about on the lawn sang a glorious song about sunshine and dewdrops, the early morning and the fairies.

And the fairies drank of the magic dewdrop water before Mr. Sun had to drive them all away for the real work of the day, and as the fairies drank it they said: "Ah, this water gives us long life and makes us happy and makes us try to help others to be happy and glad, too."

And the dewdrops smiled, for their party had been a success.

West On Job; Nabs Deserter

The result of a recent arrest made by Detective Ben West revealed the fact that the culprit, Timothy J. Sullivan, was a deserter from the United States Army, having been a member of Troop D, 5th Cavalry and stationed at Ft. Bliss.

Mr. West made the arrest on the 17th of this month; but for some cause best known to themselves, the government authorities failed to put in an appearance until Wednesday. On the day mentioned, Corporal Vincent Clock arrived, taking the prisoner from whence he came. Before the officer's arrival, however, the Detective forced a confession from Sullivan to the effect that he was not only a deserter, but had been a prisoner in the stockade, but managed to make his escape the day before his trial. He was making his way east when apprehended by the officer. As we have said before and wish to repeat, this is a bad stopping place for deserters unless they wish to be apprehended and taken back to face the charge, for West surely nabs them—"He is on the job!"

Your Telephone Service in Peace, War and Reconstruction

Peace

An abundance of materials for telephone construction purposes, an always available supply of labor, a well knit business organization, and normal and long anticipated demands for service—

Telephone service of the type that the Rocky Mountain West received in those pre-war days was within the bounds of possibility.

War

But then came the day when the nation squared its jaw and turned its face toward war—when industry in general lined up behind the nation in one solid phalanx to bring about the Great Result.

There was no longer an abundance of labor and material available for any purpose not directly connected with the prosecution of the war. Thousands of highly trained telephone men and women were called upon to devote all their time and skill to meeting the needs of the government.

And neither was there the same normal demand for service. The candle was burned at both ends. While the supplies of the things that made service possible at all fell far below normal, the demand for the service rose steadily until the daily number of calls reached tremendous proportions.

During this period we rendered the best telephone service that war-time conditions would permit, but it was not and could not be the same type of service that the public enjoyed in days of Peace.

Reconstruction

We have gone through the troubled period of war and we face to-day the important period of reconstruction.

But it has not been possible to overcome in a few months the handicaps imposed by nearly two years of restricted construction. New buildings and completed switchboards cannot be improvised nor can large numbers of additional employees be trained to the highest point of efficiency in so short a period of time.

We have not yet been able, under these conditions, to bring your telephone service back to the same high standards that characterized it in pre-war days.

But the same policy of striving to give the Best Telephone Service in the World still exists, and to-day our efforts are centered in the work of supplying the most efficient service that the present unsettled conditions will permit.

May we expect your confidence and cooperation while waiting for that period of normality to which all business is looking forward?

United War Veterans

THE UNITED WAR VETERANS, a National organization, has been formed to include in its active membership all veterans of the Civil War, Spanish War and World War.

The objects are: To unite in fraternal bonds, through national, state, local and foreign organizations, all soldiers and sailors of the United States; to perpetuate Memorial Day, as established by the Grand Army of the Republic and to preserve from neglect the graves of Our Nation's Dead; to secure employment for and to assist our comrades, their widows, orphans and dependent relatives; to promote loyalty, mutual aid and co-operation among them in all lines of endeavor; to secure from Congress and other legislative bodies the enactment of laws beneficial to our comrades; and to secure employment for those who have returned to civil pursuits in consonance with laws which prefer honorably discharged soldiers and sailors for government service; to provide and establish homes for orphans and dependent children of our comrades; and to inculcate the principles of universal liberty and justice to all mankind of loyalty to our country, reverence for its institutions, obedience to its laws and to discountenance whatever tends to weaken these sentiments.

The organization consists of active members, called comrades, and in addition thereto an honorary membership consisting of persons who performed distinguished service or engaged in efforts for relief of disabled and suffering soldiers and sailors, or who to a conspicuous extent became interested in promoting the moral welfare and physical comfort of troops in camp or field, or who are honorably discharged soldiers or sailors of any of the Allies of the United States in the World War.

It urges that members of other patriotic organizations continue their memberships in such organizations, but join the United War Veterans in addition, in order to

SEAT CHOSEN FOR LEAGUE

LEAGUE DRAFT AMENDED TO SAFEGUARD THE MONROE DOCTRINE.

BIG FOUR FIX PENALTIES

PEACE TREATY MAY NOT BE PUBLISHED BEFORE IT IS SUBMITTED TO GERMANY.

Western Newspaper Union News Service.

Paris, April 11.—At the meeting of the commission on a League of Nations, ten sections of the covenant were considered and passed. The Japanese amendment was not reached, and the actual text of the section exempting the Monroe doctrine from the provisions of the covenant of the League of Nations is not yet available. American commissioners stated, however, that the doctrine was definitely named in the provision guaranteeing that it will not be affected by the terms in the covenant. The adoption of the section exempting the Monroe doctrine was the only real exemption made during the meeting. President Wilson offered the amendment and made a plea for it, saying that he believed the doctrine was protected under the terms of the covenant as they stood, but because of the demands for specific exemption, he felt it imperative that the amendment should be added. There was some adverse argument, but the amendment was adopted without prolonged opposition.

Paris.—Geneva, Switzerland, has been chosen as the seat of the League of Nations, according to announcement here.

Paris.—The League of Nations commission adopted a new section to the covenant, specifically providing that the Monroe doctrine is not to be affected by the provisions of the covenant. The Monroe doctrine amendment was prepared by Col. Edward M. House. Provision that the League of Nations shall exercise general supervision of the Saar valley for a period of fifteen years was contained in the settlement of the Saar problem effected by the council of four.

At the end of the fifteen-year period, a plebiscite will be taken to determine the wishes of the inhabitants regarding the future form of government. The change was made to avoid annexation, and to establish the principle of self-determination.

France is given economic control of the coal fields of the Saar valley up to an amount to recompense her for the losses sustained from German occupation of the coal fields of northern France.

Indications are that there may be interpolations concerning the secrecy with which the big four is surrounding itself, and rumors are heard that negotiations may open with the Germans without fully advising all the peace delegations of the terms of the treaty. The council of four is strongly opposed to official publication of the peace treaty before its submission to the Germans. It maintains that it is allowing positive decisions to be announced, and that consequently the public will be advised on all the main points before the treaty is signed.

Reds Battle Czecho.

Dodge Jay Messure.
Sacramento, Calif.—A decision not to press to an immediate vote the report of the Senate rules committee denying him permission to introduce a bill preventing Japanese leasing agricultural land in California was reached by Senator Inman in the midst of debate on his demand for a record vote of the Senate on the report. Inman demanded a vote on the report following the reading of a cablegram from Secretary Lansing saying: "It would be particularly unfortunate" to have the bill introduced at this time.

Lassen Erupting.
Redding, Cal.—Mount Lassen, the only active volcano in America, is showing some renewed action again. White sulphurous smoke is pouring from the northern part of the crater and drifting southward, but not ascending high. The spectacle is striking, but does not approach the grandeur of the eruption of four years ago. The volcano lapsed into inactivity in 1915. This is its 169th eruption.

Starving in the Midst of Plenty

Acid-Stomach Steals Strength and Good Feelings From Millions

One of the worst features of acid-stomach is that very often it literally starves its victims in the midst of plenty. And the strange thing about it is that the people with acid-stomach seldom know what their trouble really is.

No matter how good or wholesome the food may be, or how much they eat, they do not gain in strength. This is clearly explained by the fact that an acid-stomach cannot properly digest food. Instead of healthy, normal digestion, the excess acid causes the food to sour and ferment. Then when this mass of sour, fermented food, charged with excess acid, passes into the intestines, it becomes the breeding place for all kinds of germs and toxic poisons, which in turn are absorbed into the blood and in this way distributed throughout the entire body. And that is exactly why it is that so many thousands of people eat and eat and keep on eating and yet are literally starving in the midst of plenty. Their acid-stomachs make it absolutely impossible for them to get the full measure of nourishment out of their food. And it doesn't take long for this poor nourishment to show its ill effects in a weakened, emaciated body.

You may say: "My stomach doesn't hurt me." That may be true because many victims of acid-stomach do not actually suffer stomach pain. Then again, there are millions who do suffer all kinds of aches and pains—headaches, rheumatic twinges, gout, lumbago, pains around the heart and in the chest—who never dream that an acid-stomach is the real cause of the trouble.

Naturally, the sensible thing to do is to strike right at the very cause of this trouble and clean the excess acid out of the stomach. There is a quick, easy way to do this. A wonderful new remedy quickly removes the excess acid without the slightest discomfort. It is EATONIC. Made in the form of tablets—they are good to eat—just like a bit of candy. They literally absorb the injurious excess acid and carry it away through the intestines. They also drive the heat out of the body—in fact you can fairly feel it work. Make a test of EATONIC in your own case today. Get a big box of EATONIC from your druggist. See for yourself how surely it brings quick relief in those painful attacks of indigestion, bitter heartburn, belching, disgusting food repeating, that awful bloated, lumpy feeling after eating and other stomach miseries. Banish all your stomach troubles so completely that you forget you have a stomach. Then you can eat what you like and digest your food in comfort without fear of distressing after effects.

If EATONIC does not relieve you, it will not cost you one penny. You can return it to your druggist and get your money back. So if you have the slightest question about your health—if you feel you are not getting all the strength out of your food—if you are not feeling tip-top, ready for your work, full of vim and vigor—do give EATONIC a fair trial this very day and see how much better you will feel.

A colorful affair has just occurred in one of our neighboring states. A man had been importuned by his wife to assist in the hour of spring housecleaning. Instead of beating the carpet he made such a convincing effort to beat his wife that the neighbors were forced to interfere.

Use Your Ears As Well As Your Eyes

when buying Phonographs, don't buy simply furniture; get musical instruments as well. Of course the way a phonograph looks is important, that is the reason why the Pathe Cabinets are made by artists, not carpenters.

PATHE RECORDS

have the latest hits, first and best, the new songs that Broadway is humming; One-step with pep, dreamy waltzes; stirring military marches; and the old ballads you love so well.

Each instrument is a finished work of art. But the distinctive feature of the Pathe Phonograph and records is the perfect tone—clear as a crystal. The sapphire ball—a round polished jewel, does not miss a single sound wave. The music flows from the records, is not scratched off. The Pathe sound box is all wood, which means no harsh metallic sound.

Records played on the Pathe practically never wear out. Played with the sapphire ball, a Pathe record is guaranteed to play at least 1000 times perfectly.

WEBSTER DEFINES VALUE as the power which an object confers upon its possessor, irrespective of personal sentiment.

A strong and interesting definition, isn't it?

Now think of a bank account in the light of that analysis of value. Doesn't it begin to have a personal application?

Whether your business will be large or small—whether it be in the form of a Checking or Savings account, it confers a power upon you "irrespective of personal sentiment."

Now to this natural power add the usefulness in the willing, personal service to be found at this bank, and see the new force that is in your possession.

Come in and see us; the present is vital and a great deal of mutual good will result from an early conference.
