

DISTRICT COURT DOINGS FOR THE PRESENT WEEK OUTLINED

Judge Mechem's Court The Center of Interest as Attorneys Engage in Legal Battle for Supremacy in Favor of Clients. Supulver Case Ended.

Dullness in Judge Mechem's court was enlivened Monday by the beginning of the case of George Supulver, plaintiff; vs the Gilchrist Dawson Co., Inc., of Fierro, N. M., wherein plaintiff, through his attorneys Pritchard & Merchant, sued for the recovery of the sum of $2,617.05 which he claimed was taken from him by defendant in the month of June, 1919 and an additional claim for the recovery of goods to the amount of $500 taken from his house in Fierro when said plaintiff was according to his claim, arrested with his wife and daughter, imprisoned and himself sentenced to the penitentiary.

The defendant's attorney, Mr. Wilson of Silver City, produced a list of articles which he claimed were found in the house at the time of the arrest which he enumerated to witnesses on plaintiff's side, asking if they recognized such articles to which witnesses claimed no knowledge of seeing at any time. The task of enumerating these different articles consumed about three hours of the attorney's time and included everything from a shoe string to a silk dress that would cost $200. If Mr. Supulver had those goods in his possession, the house must have been exceedingly large, for the list contained enough goods to fill every store in New Mexico. The money taken from plaintiff according to his claim, was his own and not that of the company's and the jury seemed to agree with him, for the verdict was in his favor, but reduced the original amount contained in the claim, to $2,369.05 as the $250, was said to belong to plaintiff's daughter, Mabel Supulver and in order to recover that amount she must sue in separate action.

The next case is Spence & Sons vs the E. P. & S. W. for damages for the loss of 35 cattle which according to plaintiff's claim had died while in the care of said company. This case is also being prosecuted by Pritchard & Merchant, with Judge Hewitt in the chair and will consume the balance of the week.

Portales Is Visited By Severe Hail Storm

Portales, N. M., May 12.—The drouth here was broken Sunday afternoon when, without much warning, a hail and rain storm struck Portales and vicinity in all its fury. The large "ice slugs" that usually accompany such a storm were missing, but hailstones as long as a small hen egg were plentiful and came with such force that they bounded at least ten feet when they struck the ground. It was forty-five minutes from the time the hail began falling until it ceased, and the rain continued longer. No damage was done to buildings, except that in some cases roofs were pretty badly damaged.

Encinias had the other man arrested but due to the fact that Encinias had struck the first blow, Meredith was released upon the payment of the costs and returning $2 to Encinias, which he claimed was due because of the overalls being torn.

Class of 1920 Assisted by The Junior-Senior High School and Others Play to Crowded Houses May 10 and 11. Remarkable Talent Noted in Cast.

Longfellow's "Evangeline," the beautiful love story was told again on Monday and Tuesday nights at the Crystal Theatre by the graduating class of 1920 with the assistance of the Junior-Senior High School, and a few others who kindly tendered their aid in view of the fact that the class this year is smaller than usual. The cast of characters from beginning to end was exceptionally good, each performing his or her part with promptness, regularity and realism. We wish it were possible to be able to dwell at length on the merits of each character in the play. They performed their parts in a manner more than worthy of special mention, but taking the cast collectively, is the only manner in which we can do justice to all concerned.

Mrs. E. E. Cole, who trained each member of the cast, worked hard and with earnest endeavor to perfect as far as possible in the short space of time allotted to the task, and the good results were noticeable from the fact that no prompting was necessary at any time, therefore, much credit is due Mrs. Cole.

The Commencement exercises of the Carrizozo school were held at the Crystal Theatre, Thursday evening where the following program was carried out in the presence of a large and appreciative audience:

WHITE MAN

By
GEORGE AGNEW CHAMBERLAIN

Author of "Home," "Through Stained Glass," "John Bogardus," Etc.

(Copyright, 1919, by Bobbs-Merrill Co.)

"NEVER FORGET. I AM HERE FOR YOU."

Andrea Pellor, handsome daughter of Lord Pellor, impeccable aristocrat, is doomed to marry an illiterate but wealthy middle-aged diamond mine owner. She desolately wanders from her hotel in South Africa, and discovers an aviator about to fly from the beach. Impulsively, of course imagining that the trip will be merely a pleasant excursion, she begs to be taken for a flight, although she does not know him. He somewhat unwillingly agrees, and they start. When she realizes her unknown aviator is not going back Andrea in desperation tries to choke him with one of her stockings. He thwarts her and they fall on into the very heart of Africa. Landing in an immense caual, Andrea finds the natives all bow in worship to her mysterious companion. White Man continues deaf to Andrea's pleadings to be restored to her friends. She goes on a day's hunting trip with White Man and thoroughly enjoys the exciting experience. White Man by a skillful shot saves her from the attack of a sable bull and she is fast becoming reconciled to her fate after eight days in the caual. On another expedition the donkey on which Andrea is mounted runs away with her and she is for a moment made ridiculous. White Man explains the African method of wife purchase, "obolo." She is horrified. After a tedious tramp three bull elephants are sighted and Andrea is transfixed by the excitement of the chase. Back at the camp White Man warns Andrea against another white man in the region. She makes light of the warning.

She decided to cry a little more and found she couldn't. Tears had withdrawn before an ineffectual rage. Her face hardened. Well, if she couldn't cry, something must happen; if not on its own, then it must be forced. She wondered what the white man was doing. Perhaps he was sound asleep; perhaps he was even snoring! What did she know about this man, anyway? Was he human? Had he five points of contact or was he an impalpable creation of her sick brain? Perhaps she wasn't here at all! If she screamed, would Aunt Gwen come running in or— Her eyes, following the sequence of her thoughts, fell upon the barred door.

She arose, put on her slippers and her bathrobe, walked deliberately to the door, grasped the bar with two trembling hands and threw it up with all her strength. The clanging of the far-away gong rang out above the din of the droning rain. Following it instantly came the thud of a falling chair. The door, released, swung slowly open with a long drawn creak of unrolled hinges. Andrea was suddenly frightened.

Coming through the covered way she could hear the swift crush of hurrying steps. M'sungo, fully dressed, shot into the center of her room and whirled. In his hands, held at the hip, finger on trigger was a villainous cowed off shotgun. Only his long trailing to look to see before he fired saved Andrea when his eyes brought him the startling conviction that besides himself she was the only other living thing in the room. She stared at him, wide-eyed and trembling. She saw his figure, leaped to one sort of combat, relaxed to grow slowly tense again. He turned, laid the shotgun aside and came toward her with swift sure strides. For an instant his eyes wavered but as he drew nearer they steadied to transfix and held her pinned against the wall.

She felt herself struggling as against an unjust accusation. Under her trembling hands, her heart beat with great irregular throbs. A lump rose in her throat and it seemed as though it must strangle her if she did not let it out. In her desperation she hurried herself forward, threw her arms about M'sungo's neck, pressed her face against him and sobbed.

"Oh, White Man," she gasped, "I was so lonely—I am so lonely." The embrace of a woman is one thing; the clinging of a child quite another. The sternness in M'sungo's eyes died suddenly; the hard look in his face faded, vanished and gave place to one of great tenderness. He gathered Andrea up in his arms and carried her quickly through the covered way. He told himself there was every reason to hasten, for he could feel her soft warm body, shaken with sobs, wrapping itself round his heart and crushing it beyond repair. He laid her on the couch in his room, made a nest for her to the many pelts with which it was covered, pillowed her head in a bundle of furs and drew over her a gayly figured sarong.

"You were cold," he said, as he tucked her in; then he knelt beside her, took her hand in both of his and suddenly laid his face in her open palm, still moist with her tears. Andrea drew a long whimpering sigh and nestled down against the warm furs. Her eyes gazed impersonally and a little wonderingly at M'sungo's bowed head; then they wandered about the room. So this was where he had lived and worked during many months! It was a bachelor's room, arranged at once for comfort, utility and sloth. On one side was his cot, permanently inclosed in mosquito netting and having at its head a lantern for reading in bed. Next to it came a high draughtsman's desk roughly made of packing cases. On each end of it, guttering candles, with lighted, rose from mysterious pedestals, empty bottles, disguised under cascades of molten wax.

In the shadow of the high desk stood the one utterly incongruous bit of furniture, a glistening mahogany phonograph. Andrea's eyes passed it and then went back to linger for an instant in vague wonder. Why had M'sungo never brought it out? Never played it? She was not interested enough to ask aloud.

Andrea's eyes finished their slow circuit of the room and came back to the white man's bowed head. He had not moved and she herself had lain very still, more through languor than by volition. She had been in that state of subdued consciousness which sweeps troubled humanity back to the borderland of childhood, but now her mind awoke. A deep flush stained her neck and crept up through her cheeks, carrying with it to her eyes a look of sudden age. Her hand, imprisoned under the man's cheek, doubled and contracted into a hard little fist. He looked up quickly and saw the transition that has come to her face. "Don't give in to it," he said, throwing one arm across her knees. "Don't give in to age. Do you think I am so blind that I don't know where I found you? Why do you think I am on my knees? It's in reverence before the glimpse that I caught of the girlhood of Andrea Pellor. My arms are trembling because they have dared to carry her clean youth, soft and warm as it was before the touch of the world and years, and my heart is aching with a memory that will never die."

"White Man," said Andrea, her face unsoftened, "would you pay three pounds for me?" He stared at her, leaped to his feet and started padding up and down beside the couch, a look of thunder on his brow. "No," he said, "I wouldn't." Without looking at her he went to the bookcase and, after a moment, drew out a worn volume; then he placed a chair close to the couch so that the light of the lantern would fall over his shoulder, sat down and began to read aloud.

Very gradually the hardened and cheapened look in Andrea's eyes died out. They grew wide again and dwelt dreamily on the man's slim figure. She saw many things about him she had never noted before. His hair was crisp and touched with premature gray at the temples; his shoulders were broad and his hips very narrow. He had a good "boot leg," but his feet were small enough to preserve balance even there. In spite of his height, he was well-knit by grace of the life he had led.

"He is very strong," thought Andrea as she remembered how lightly he had swung her into his arms. Then she began to think of other things about him. He never was too tired to shave before the evening meal. He had shown an almost uncanny tact in forecasting and preventing the embarrassing situations that one would have thought inevitable under the circumstances of their life together. He never forgot. He had called her "my dear girl" once and she had shown that she hated it. It was enough.

"How old are you, White Man?" she asked. "Thirty-four, normally," he answered instantly, and went on with his absorbing reading almost without a break.

Andrea fell silent, even her thoughts stopped talking. Gradually the glowing voice possessed her, picked her up lightly, bore her away and away. In other words, she slept as children sleep when put to bed in the good old way.

When she awoke, hours later, the room was heavy with the acrid smell of lanterns burned too low, but to make up for that, the rain had ceased and sunlight poured in through the open door. M'sungo was sitting as he had sat, reading as he had been reading. The flow of his voice was exactly the same as though he himself had been caught in a current that would not let him stop.

Andrea drew a quivering breath. She saw instinctively the workings of his mind. He wished her to awake without awaking—to come to the new day with the selfsame smile in her heart that had been there when she slept. He called upon her to play the game through and she decided to do it. She stretched her bare arms, yawned, rubbed her eyes with doubled fists, laughed and then threw out both hands to him.

"Take me back," she said. The book fell from his hands. He turned and stared at her with the hungry eyes of a man who sees for the first time one of the rarest of God's creatures—namely, a woman whose youth stands by her in the disheveled morning, defies the ugly finger of gross slumber and proclaims her love beyond the limits set by the wrinkling seams of coarser and less blessed fabrics. For a moment his gaze wavered as though before too strong a light, then it steadied and his face grew stern. He arose.

"Come on," he said. She threw her arms about his neck; he picked her up, swung and all, and passed solemnly the length of the covered way. He could feel her face pressed hard against his shoulder and her loosened hair was like a cloud beneath his chin. Her arms clung to him tightly, her body trembled, her eyes twinkled and her lips murmured audibly, "Remember, Andrea Pellor, you're just a tiddle."

He dropped her on her cot with a thud that surprised the six straddling legs of that sturdy campaigner into stringent protest and incidentally startled one young lady.

"There you are, you little devil," he growled and strode from the room with the satisfied air of a dog who has just carried home eight pounds of prime roast intact.

Andrea watched him go, then she arose, took the cord from her bathrobe and advanced upon the door to the covered way. She closed it, let down the bar and with the cord bound it in place. She tied knot after hard knot, and as she drew each one of them tight she said, "Just to give you time to think twice, Andrea Pellor."

CHAPTER IX.

Scarcely had she finished when a sudden languor seized her. She knew that she ought to bathe and dress quickly, for M'sungo would be keen for his breakfast after his "white" night. Why did all Latins call a sleepless night "white," anyway? Her brows puckered over that problem and it seemed as though she must puzzle it out before she did anything else. She crept into her cot to attend to it. A cold wave swept over her body and left it frozen; a pain stabbed into her side.

The pain was like a knife, red-hot it terrified her. In an instant her tongue was parched, her eyes were burning. So suddenly had sickness come upon her that even in the face of its clamorous presence, her mind declared it incredible. Surely it would pass swiftly as it had come. She clenched her teeth and waited. There was a look in her face as though she listened.

The pain ceased. When it came back again it was no longer a knife but the raving fangs of a wolf tearing their way toward the vitals of her body. She tried to clench her teeth, to keep silence until the spasm passed but she could not hold out. "White Man!" she moaned and then, realizing that she must make him hear now or never, she gathered all her strength and screamed.

She heard quick steps coming from the caual, a thundering on her door and then his voice, "Am I to come in?"

She tried to cry out again and could not; tears poured down her cheeks. But the white man did not wait; another moment and he was standing over her twisted body. She looked up. The stricken look in her frightened eyes was as nothing to the sudden terror that had come into his own. He sank to his knees. "You are ill!" he breathed.

He passed his cool hand across her forehead, held his fingers to the pulse in her throat, grasped her wrists and found them burning—all burning. "Last night," he said, "when you were in here, you didn't use your curtain! You left the light on!"

She did not answer beyond a stare from glassy eyes. Her face was white, her lips a straight purple line. Her shoulders were rigid, but beneath them her body was twisting and turning as though in a desperate effort to tear itself away from the sentient seat of pain.

"Is it as bad as that?" said M'sungo. Into his voice had already come the calm of a man accustomed to the face of danger. "I'm going to leave you for a moment," he continued. "When I come I'll take the pain away."

He stepped toward the barred door and tried to open it. So intent was he on getting to his room that he glanced at the cord and saw only that it was hindering him. He drew out his knife, cut the bar free and hurried on. The three minutes he was gone seemed an eternity to Andrea. When he came back he carried in one hand a medicine case and in the other a hypodermic syringe already filled. He set the case down carefully, grasped and bared Andrea's forearm, rubbed it with alcohol and quickly gave her an injection. "Skip the next five minutes," he said. "Fasten your mind to five minutes from now." She only moaned to show that she heard him.

But even before the five minutes were up she could feel peace coming to her body slowly and from far away, as though it feared to pounce upon her suddenly. When it settled upon her it brought with it a drowsy and ineffable relief. Her eyes could move once more in their sockets. They followed the white man as he made his rapid preparation for a long siege. She heard him call Bathub and issue a string of orders; then he brought a chair close to the cot and sat down.

"Andrea!" he said quietly, "we're up against it, you and I. I can't say just what it is. It may be ptomaine, you may have been sickening for appendicitis, but I'm almost afraid it isn't either of those. If it's fever, it is pernicious." Her eyes stared at him, hung upon his face.

He took one of her hands in his. "I'm breaking all the rules by frightening you," he went on, "and I do it purposely. I do it because I've learned that you and I are brothers in one thing. We're fighters. All the blood in our veins flows one way—up hill to battle. We don't know when to quit. No d— fever can show us where to get off. It's going to be shoulder to shoulder, and if you go back on me I'll go back on God, for I trust you as I've never trusted any living thing."

Her hands twisted in his and gripped his fingers. "You're great, White Man," she said softly. "You're like that—a fighter—and it's sweet of you to ring me in. No d— fever can show you—no d— fever!" She crumpled up and cried.

"Good for you," said M'sungo promptly, "cry now. It can't do you a bit of harm and it will probably put you to sleep. But when you wake, if you want to cry then, please come up crying mad and ready to set your teeth in the throat of pain. For he'll have you, Kiddie, he'll have you in a half-Nelson and I can't always stick him with the needle."

It was even as he said. All day and all night the battle raged, and there were moments when Andrea forgot that she was a fighter, begged with gasping, heartrending moans for opium and relief, and when he refused, her tongue turned bitter, sharp as a serpent's tooth. Each word she said was chosen to wound. Herself the most fair-minded of women, she became unjust, ungenerous and cruel as dead love.

He was giving her the treatment for pernicious malaria. Together with every other white man who has served apprenticeship to Africa he had an extraordinary store of rough and ready medical knowledge. To such men only six drugs are essential, all others being classed as furbelows of the pampered sick room, and with these they work as with elementals. Kill or cure is their motto, the saving idea being that if the patient can't stand punishment, he would go under in any case.

On those rare occasions when Andrea's spasms conquered his reluctance to use the needle he would watch her until the opiate stilled her and then fall into his chair and to sleep. "I am here," he would say even as his lids closed. "Never forget, I'm here for you. Touch me or speak to me and I'll awake." It was true. In spite of his long vigil he kept deep slumber at a distance by an effort of the will like a man who sets a clock in his mind and trusts to his subconscious self to call him at the hour marked.

The afternoon of the second day found Andrea unusually subdued and still, but he was not deceived. He looked at her eyes and saw that their pupils still appeared convex and glassy like the eyes of a fish. They stared at him with an immeasurable gravity. When her dry lips parted, he shrank even before she spoke.

"I wish you would go away," she said quietly. "I don't like to look at you; I don't wish you to look at me. I will be glad if I never see you again. There is no one in the world that I wish ever to see again. Please send me that nigger, Bathub. If I must have some one I would rather have him."

He arose, called Bathub and made him squat on the floor where her eyes could quickly find him; then he went to the door behind her and stood for a long time looking out across the glaring caual. The rays of the sun descended on that beaten space with an almost audible contact. The leaves of the acacias were shriveled; not a woman or a child was visible, and even the fowls crowded close in the shadows of the eaves.

He took one step out and looked up into the bowl of blue. His tired eyes searched it from horizon to zenith and back to the hot level of the earth. It was empty. Its hollow infinity pressed down upon his breast with a measureless weight. He had come out for a parley, remonstrance on his lips, but he had forgotten that in the tropics God walks only at night.

He turned, went back to his post and sat down, dismissing Bathub with a nod. Andrea's eyes were still fixed in a listless stare. Presently she began to speak. "You bring me here, you let me fall ill, you shame my body. You are like the men that strap down little dogs and open them. You are like that. You have been staring at my heart, at my bare lungs and all the unnamable beastly things inside of me. You leave me alone with a nigger—when I'm torn open. I don't hate you. You are nothing."

Her voice went on for a long time. He dropped his face in his hands, but he did not try to stop his ears. They listened to all she said, they told him she was suffering as he had known no one ever to suffer before. Her spirit spoke from beyond pain. In that hour he learned a great truth. Pain is a wall, a barrier. So far and no farther can flesh go and still hold to the memories, the fears and affections of everyday life. Beyond that barrier is a void where love itself is a stranger, where life and death are one and equally of no account.

He did not know when he fell asleep or when her voice ceased, but on awakening such a silence met him as struck his heart cold. She was still—still as death. Night had fallen, but he was unaware of darkness. He felt that never again would he need light or eyes or air to breathe. He was cold as though the sun in setting had slipped down and out beyond any rising. He leaned over and put his face close to her lips. They were parted. Her hand was lying outside the coverlet. He took it up gently. It was warm and moist. She was sleeping.

He drew erect, his body tense in the first realization of a great and overwhelming relief; then his spirit melted within him and his nerves relaxed from the long, hard strain. His limbs crumpled, his head nodded and fell forward, lower and lower until, one arm outstretched, he lay with his face half buried in the covers of the cot. When again he awoke, the sun had changed its mind and come back; day was streaming across the floor in a single band of light; but he did not stir. On his head he felt Andrea's hand, and in his ears was the lingering caress of her voice. "Lots of good it did to tell you to go away, White Man," she was murmuring. "You came back. You brought me back. White Man, I love you a little."

The other white man appears.

At the Circus.

One day a certain young woman took two of her small neighbors to the circus. Both children were wide-eyed with amazement, and could not be satisfied with merely looking at the performance, but seemed to think that it was necessary to call the attention of others to the various attractions. So when the acrobats came running forth in all the splendor of pink and white tights, little Dorothy said: "Oh, lookie, Albert, they are in their underwear."

Bank Has a Liqueur License.

The Bank of England has the right to sell beer without a license. This privilege was granted to the bank in its charter of incorporation under the great seal, dated July 27, 1694. And so the bank, if it liked, could open a public house in Threadneedle street, or could send trays round and deliver beer from door to door.—Tit-Bits.

Peppermint Production.

Peppermint for oil is produced in Michigan and Indiana. The crop of 1918 has the estimate of 300,000 pounds of oil from 10,000 acres and marks another step in the continuous decline from 600,000 pounds from 18,000 acres in 1914. The average yield is about 30 pounds of oil per acre.

American Legion in Paris to Decorate Graves of U. S. Dead

Washington, May 12.—Plans for honoring on Memorial day 50,000 American soldiers who are buried in France are being made by the Paris post No. 1 of the American Legion.

Every American cemetery in France will be visited by delegations from the Paris post, who will place wreaths at each burial ground and conduct memorial services. The American Red Cross will furnish automobiles in which the veterans will travel to the cemeteries.

It is planned to request the American army of occupation on the Rhine to furnish buglers who will blow "taps" over the graves of the fallen at the close of each service. At the suggestion of Mandre Tardieu, minister of the devastated regions of France. French veteran societies will be invited to attend the ceremonies.

On the same day delegations from the Paris post No. 1 will visit a French cemetery, to be indicated by the French authorities, and, in token of America's sympathy for her dead, her great ally will conduct ceremonies similar to those planned for the burial grounds.

Double Wedding at Tombstone

News has just reached here of a double wedding which occurred at Tombstone, Arizona early this week. The contracting parties with the exception of one were Carrizozo young folks, namely Mr. Jacob Cole and Miss Vera Harris, Mr. Pruitt and Miss Cora Cole. As the account of the double wedding was meagre, it carried no particulars other than the single statement of the wedding.

Miss Harris and Miss Cole, likewise Mr. Cole, were raised in this locality where they have many friends who join in wishing them lifelong happiness. The Coles moved to Arizona about six months ago, and Miss Vera Harris has for a short time been a guest of the Cole family at Lowell. Full particulars will be announced when more information can be received.

My, What a Change!

Several old residents who have been absent from town for the past month or so, came in this week. They happened to arrive in the night and thought the conductor had put them off at the wrong station. On meeting David Smith, one of the party said: "Are we really in Carrizozo, or are we dreaming." Of course he referred to the new street lights that have been installed during their absence, and this goes to show how good will be the effect on strangers entering our borders. But we have forgotten to give the names of these grateful Carrizozo men, they were: A. C. Wingfield, E. C. Monroe, Walker Hyde and A. H. Harvey.

Erratic

Readers of the church column will notice that the note under the Episcopal Church head was erroneously left over from our last week's issue and had reference to last Sunday night's services. Mistakes will happen—Please pardon us.

VILLA JOINS REBEL TROOPS

REVOLUTIONARY LEADER WITH 2,000 MEN HAS JOINED FORCES AT SAN ROMICO.

TO MARCH ON CAPITAL

10,000 TROOPS WILL MOVE ON CITY OF MEXICO, IS. REPORT.

Western Newspaper Union News Service.

Nogales, Ariz., May 6.—Francisco Villa, with 2,000 men, has joined the revolutionary forces at San Romico, Chihuahua, according to reports received in Nogales. Villa, it is said, will bring 10,000 supporters to the side of Obregon.

Juarez, Mexico.—Ten thousand revolutionary soldiers shortly will begin a march upon Mexico City from the state of Chihuahua, according to an announcement made here by Jesus M. Cuen, former federal judge of the Juarez district, recently appointed aid in the transfer of federal funds here incidental to the change of government.

"Six thousand of the soldiers will come from Sonora," Senor Cuen said. "The other 4,000 will join the column on its way south from Juarez."

Washington.—Recognition of Carranza's rapidly diminishing power in Mexico is admitted by government officials, but the dispatch of a flotilla of destroyers to southern waters was not taken to indicate that foreigners are in immediate danger. The six destroyers which sailed from New York have arrived at Key West and will be used along the east coast only in the event that necessity arises. Before this departure, Capt. Byron Long, commanding the flotilla, conferred with the secretary of the navy, who gave him instructions as to the policy to be pursued.

Developments of the revolution as reported to the government has been so rapid as to convince many officials, and especially army officers, that Carranza cannot maintain his authority much longer, not so much because he is opposed by a formidable military force, as because he commands an army that is daily dissolving before the rebels' advance, instead of offering battle.

Rebel claims that Carranza would have difficulty now in leaving the country are supported by reports from official sources.

Agua Prieta, Sonora.—Military information reaching here is to the effect that Carranza forces were concentrating at Monterey and San Luis Potosi, in the northeastern part of Mexico, for a stand against the rebels and also at Terreon, south of Chihuahua. Officials here said they expected the first battle of the revolution to occur at one of these cities.

While the revolution has progressed thus far without a clash of any size, none here are so optimistic as to forecast taking control of all Mexico without bloodshed.

Committee Oppose Ship Bill.

Tornado Sweeps Northern Colorado.

Fort Collins, Colo.—A tornado hit northern Colorado in the vicinity of the Weld-Larimer county line, around Severance and east of Fort Collins, razing several houses, killing livestock and wrecking telephone wires, but without injury to human life so far as could be learned. Several narrow escapes were reported. Severance, sixteen miles northwest of Greeley, apparently was the only town directly in the storm's path and it miraculously escaped serious damage. The worst property loss in the tornado was reported east of Fort Collins, where three houses were destroyed and many cattle were killed.

Swissman to Bar Kapp.

Geneva.—Dr. Wolfgang Kapp, leader of the recent revolt in Berlin, has been refused permission by the Swiss government to reside in Switzerland. LIFE WAS A MISERY TO HER Says this Woman Until Relieved by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Carrington, Ky.—"I suffered almost two years with female weakness. I could not walk any distance, ride or take any exercise at all without resting. If I swept the floor or did any kind of work it would bring my sickness on. I was weak and languid, had no energy, and life was misery to me. I was under the care of a good physician for several months and tried other remedies. I had read of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and decided to try it. After taking twelve bottles I found myself much improved and I took six more. I have never had any more trouble in that respect since. I have done all kinds of work and at present am an attendant at a photo studio and am feeling fine. I have recommended your Vegetable Compound to dozens of my friends and shall always recommend it."—LIZZIE TAYLOR, 321 N. 5th St., Carrington, Ky.

Closing Exercises at Hondo and Lincoln Schools

Wednesday, May 5 was the closing day for the Hondo school, and in order to make the day one of enjoyment complete, a picnic was held at Fritz's Spring, where patrons of the school provided an abundance of delicious refreshments for the occasion. Clinton P. Anderson, on behalf of the state, presented the school with two pennants, one from the state of New Mexico and one from the United States. These pennants were for the Hondo school which earned them by holding the highest percentage for the observance of health rules. There were only 10 prizes given out by the United States and the Hondo school secured one of the ten offered.

Miss Priscilla Gonzales received the prizes for the school in a well worded speech of acceptance after which the amusements arranged by the committee were carried out. Hondo is to be congratulated on capturing these pennants and the teachers are to be commended for their diligence in training the pupils along the lines mentioned.

On the following day, the Lincoln consolidated school 8th grade exercises were held. On this occasion a splendid program was arranged consisting of demonstrations of fine needle work, basketry, painting, besides a review of the lessons in language, history and geography. Clay modeling was also featured on the program. Pupils interested in this particular line arranged what is known as a "sand box." With the sand a valley was laid out, the main portion of which was fashioned into mountains much resembling those of the surrounding country. Through the valley ran an artificial stream made of glass and clay models of men, horses, cattle and sheep distributed through the entire mechanical structure an air of Western prosperity.

A basket ball game by two teams from the Lincoln school was played, the result being 24 to 15, in favor of the Reds. In the evening, a fine program was arranged by the children of the school consisting of singing, recitations, etc., the principal speaker of the evening being Mrs. M. L. Blaney, County School Superintendent. The "Song of the Frogs" sung by the boys of the school dressed in neat fitting frog costumes made by the teachers and songs by the girls, "Raindrops" and "Spring Flowers" were especially interesting. Much credit is due teachers and scholars alike, for the successful outcome of these closing exercises.

Women's Club Meeting

The Carrizozo Women's Club met at the Lutz Hall Saturday with a good attendance considering the fact that many were busily engaged in work connected with the school exercises. The constitution and by-laws of the society were read and adopted. On account of many of the members planning vacation trips for the summer months, it was decided to adjourn subject to a call from the president which call will be made about the first of September. The constitution and by-laws will be published in this paper next week.

Corona Educational Notes

Mrs. M. L. Blaney visited the Corona school last week and was specially attracted by a motto which read: "Take Your Job as a Tonic, Not an Anaesthetic" and was much pleased to find that the pupils were living up to the motto. Friday evening, the patrons of the school arranged a pleasant reception for the County School Superintendent over which Mr. E. L. Moulton of the County Board of Education presided. As the Outlook begins its travel through the mails, the commencement exercises of the Corona Grammar School is being carried out in the following order:

TWO THOUSAND COUNTIES IN CONFERENCE.

In 2,000 counties in thirty-six states the pastors and laymen of thirty great denominations will meet in conference this month.

It is the kind of conference that generalists hold before a critical engagement; that business men hold before entering a new market. A conference of judgment, not emotion; a clear-eyed facing of the facts.

A Survey that Business Men Must Admire.

For more than a year hundreds of workers have been quietly engaged in making a scientific survey of the mission fields, and of America county by county.

The facts developed are startling. The charts and maps will amaze you. No such picture of America's religious situation has ever before been drawn.

On the basis of these surveys thirty Protestant denominations are uniting in a Nation-Wide Co-operative Campaign. Each of the thirty denominations has its own "Forward Movement" organized and officered. The Interchurch World Movement is the clearing house for all of these.

It is the agency which the churches have created to avoid duplication, to foster co-operation and make sure that every man and dollar render the utmost service possible.

The month of April will be devoted to making the facts of the survey known to America; in the week of April 26th-May 2nd, will come a united simultaneous financial campaign.

Whether You are Inside the Church or Out.

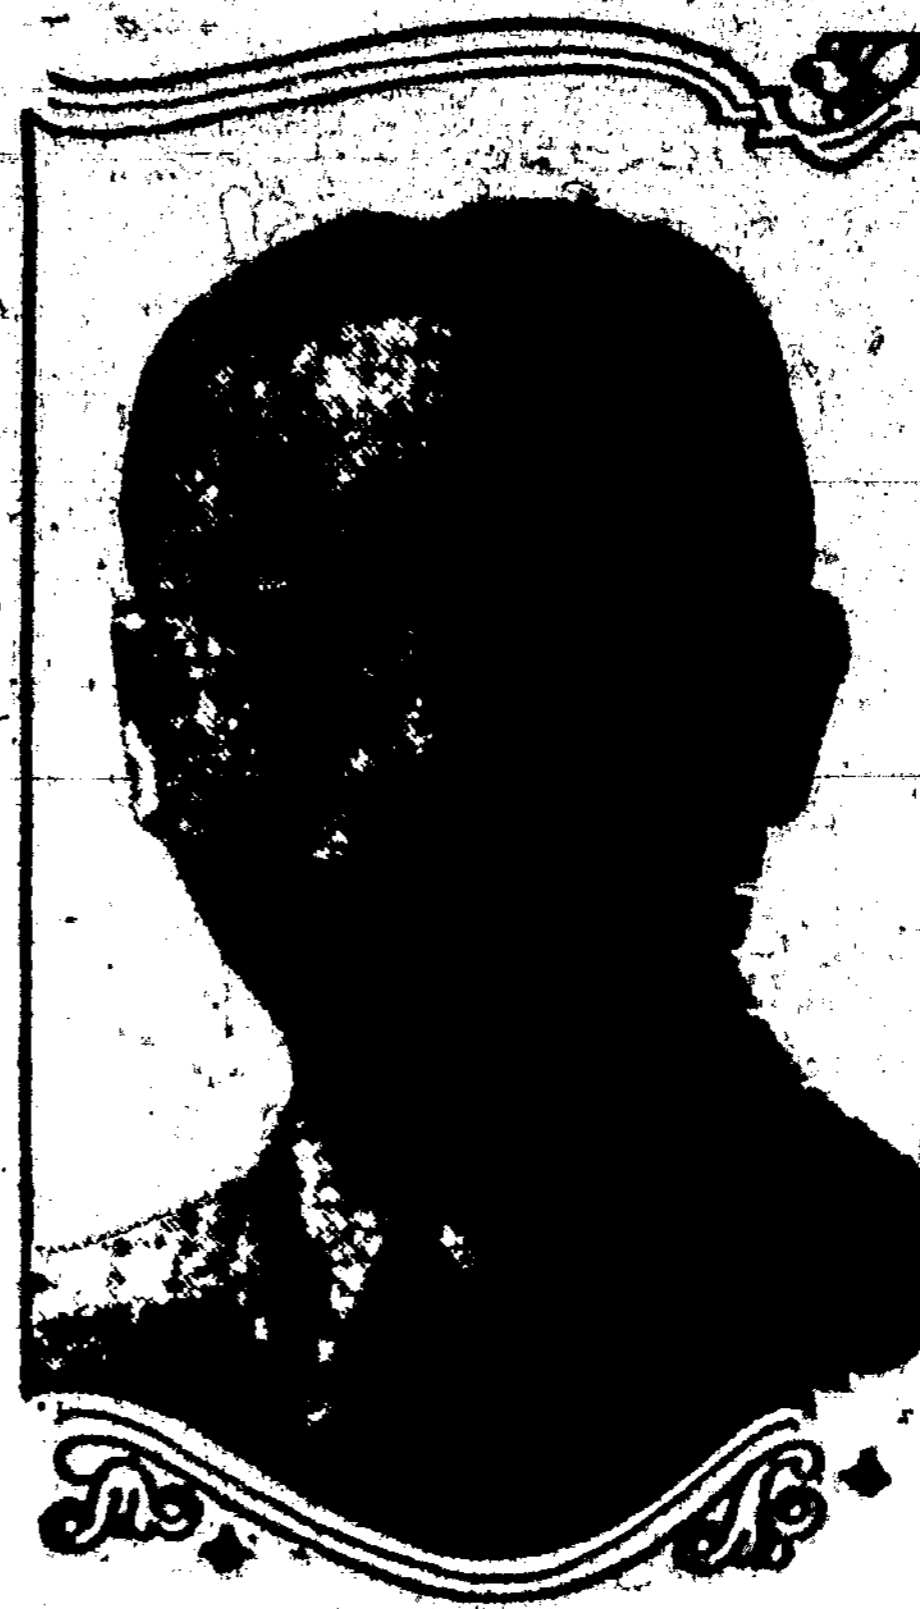

To every man and every woman who loves his country, these 2,000 county conferences are vitally important.

For the facts developed by this great survey show vividly what forces are at work in America—and what kind of a country this country is to be.

WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN.

"I have long since reached the conclusion that the religion of Christ furnish not a solution, but the ONLY solution of the world's difficulties and would like to see such religion more fully recognized of the commission which is before us."

MEET THE DE VEYRA FAMILY!
They Are Putting the Philippines on the Map in Washington

Hon. Jaime C. de Veyra, Who Has Just Been Re-elected as Philippine Commissioner to the U. S.

Mrs. Jaime C. de Veyra, She is Doing Important Work for Her People in America.

THE CHILDREN OF THE PHILIPPINE COMMISSIONER. The Baby of This Group Speaks Three Languages—Visayan, Spanish and English.

Permit us to present the De Veyra family.

The Hon. Jaime C. de Veyra is the Resident Commissioner from the Philippine Islands to the United States and has just been elected to a second term of three years. As Resident Commissioner he has a seat on the floor of the American Congress, the privilege of taking part in debates, although no vote.

Commissioner de Veyra has an interesting wife and four bright Filipino kiddies. The De Veyra family, individually and collectively, constitute the best argument as to the tact and capabilities of Filipinos that the Philippine Islands have in Washington.

The commissioner is a 100 per cent Filipino, a Visayan, and is one of the foremost leaders of the party in power in the islands. During American occupation he has been successively governor of his province, member of the Philippine legislature, cabinet member and executive secretary of the islands.

Like many statesmen of the Philippines, he was originally a newspaper man. He was one of the founders of El Nuevo Dia of Cebu, the first Filipino paper published advocating Philippine independence. The paper came under the censorship of General McIntyre, and on the appearance of the first number the editors were left in the singular position of seeing every prominent article blue penciled.

Mrs. de Veyra, like her husband, is a "live wire" in the Philippines' cause. She is the best known Filipina in America. She is an interesting public speaker and is constantly giving illustrated lectures at women's clubs and other gatherings. Mrs. de Veyra is a publicity bureau all in herself and has put the Philippines on the map, so far as the women folk of Washington congressional circles are concerned.

"I find that the Filipino people have been much misrepresented in the United States," says Mrs. de Veyra. "I do not mean to infer we are perfect, for we are not. My people have most of the defects, I suppose, that other humans have, but at the same time we are far from the people that many Americans have been made to believe. Not only are we a Christian people, but our race has a history that we are not ashamed of. Throughout the Philippine Islands the people are now working earnestly to improve themselves and their conditions so they will be prepared to take over their own affairs. We all love America for giving us a chance to help ourselves and for having promised us our independence, which is one of the dearest desires of the entire citizenship of the islands."

To American women whose ideas of Filipinos have been founded on Sunday supplement descriptions of wild tribes, Mrs. de Veyra's gentle manner and evident culture have been a revelation. She is sought by women's clubs because of her charming manner as an impromptu speaker on the subject nearest her heart—the women of her country.

At a recent Washington gathering she gave in perfect English a concise account of the work of a woman's club in Manila which supplies milk to the babies of the poor and trains mothers to care for their young children. She told of another woman's club which has branches all over the Philippine Islands and which maintains day nurseries for the children of the working women, provides Christmas cheer for the lepers, the insane and the convicts, and gathers data to influence legislation for the benefit of Filipino women and children.

The four little De Veyras, shown in the picture, having attended the public schools in Manila, slipped right into the same grades in the schools of Washington. Even little Mary, the baby of the family, speaks three languages—her native tongue, Spanish and English.

The Eighth grade school examination will be held May 20 and 21, throughout the county, but in case certain schools are closed at that time, pupils in need of examination will call at the office of County School Superintendent and be accommodated.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a fatal disease and prescribed local treatment, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by J. C. HENRY & CO., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system.

B. Y. P. U. NOTES
 Last Thursday was a gala day was held in the afternoon at the Smith Brothers' ranch near Cub mountain where games, singing, recitations and other forms of amusement were indulged in.

 There were 24 present and the afternoon was spent in a pleasant and profitable manner.

On the evening of the same day, the B. Y. P. U., through the hospitality of Mrs. George Benson entertained at the Benson home with the Epworth League of the Methodist Church as their guests. The evening, like the afternoon was spent in playing games, singing, recitations during which time refreshments were served. The B. Y.
 P. U. is to be commended on this form of good fellowship in extending the invitation to the sister organization and the inauguration of this custom will be pro-motive of a greater strength for both societies in the future.

The Ford car can well be called the "people's car," because there are more than 3,000,000 of them in daily operation. That is about four to one of the nearest follower in the motor car industry. This would not be so if the Ford car had not for sixteen years proven its superiority in service, in durability, and in the low cost for operation and maintenance; this would not be so if the Ford car was not so easy to understand, so simple in construction that anybody and everybody can safely drive it. Why hens go on a strike!

The food elements that make whites of eggs are entirely different from those that make yolks. When hens aren't fed both the white and yolk making elements, they can't lay.

Missouri Experiment Station tests prove that 100 lbs. of wheat, corn, oats, barley and kafir corn make (above bodily maintenance) an average of 224 yolks to 154 whites. Based on data from the same experiments, Purina formulas produce, (above bodily maintenance), as follows:

Purina Scratch Feed	247.49 yolks	142.11 whites
Purina Chicken Chowder	182.05 yolks	252.55 whites
Combined Ration	429.54 yolks	424.66 whites

These Purina feeds not only make a practically equal number of whites and yolks but more of both than ordinary feeds.

Note that Purina Chicken Chowder contains the necessary white-forming elements to balance up the yolk-making grain ration. That's why it makes hens lay so heavily! Instead of the yolks being absorbed by the hen's system, Purina Chicken Chowder makes the whites to complete the eggs and they are laid. Thus we can absolutely guarantee more eggs or money back on Purina Chicken Chowder if fed with Purina Scratch Feed adirected. You take no risk.

Broken Leg, Result Of Runaway

Last Saturday Tom Johnson, foreman of the Hatchet Brothers ranch in Three Rivers, gave orders to his camp cook, and a portion of the forces on the Hayfield ranch situated across the malpais to break camp and return to Three Rivers which they prepared to do, all going well until the first wagon containing the camp equipment and driven by camp cook, Merle Wingfield, neared the malpais, when the horses became frightened, started on a wild dash which the driver could have checked had it not been that the left wheel of the wagon struck a large piece of charred lava which threw Wingfield heavily to the ground the right hind wheel passing over his leg, breaking it in two places above the knee.

The team continued their flight across the lava beds until they reached this side where they were caught by parties who were approaching the malpais from this side and held to await the arrival of the owners. The wagon following that of Mr. Wingfield's fortunately contained a door and the sufferer was placed on this crude but welcome stretcher and brought over the lava beds where one of the men was dispatched to the nearest phone where he called up Oscura for help at the same time phoning Dr. Paden, who hurried to the scene and after making the injured man as comfortable as possible the party drove to Carrizozo assisted by foreman Tom Johnson and Chas. E. Grey, who had by that time answered the call for help. After arriving here, the sufferer was given all medical aid possible by Dr. Paden and sent to El Paso on No. 1 Sunday morning. After an X Ray examination the injured member was treated and at last reports the patient was resting easy.

DADDY'S EVENING FAIRY TALE

MARY GRHAM BONNER

LAST STORE STORY.

The Wishing Fairy and the Fairy knew that almost everything in the big store had now had enough of wishing to be someone else.

"You're So Big."

And one of the doll's houses had wanted to be something else, too—one of the doll's houses which hadn't changed before.

"I'm sorry you don't like me," said the moon, grinning from ear to ear.

"I thought," said one of the mates of the pair of gloves, "that I would get the most wonderful thing in the world if I got the moon for my wish."

The blue apron was weeping now. It had disgraced itself by suggesting to one of its new companions, whom it wanted to be like, a silken jacket, that when they went calling as they planned to do, they'd better wear aprons over themselves in case they were asked to dust or sweep or clean doll's houses.

And the silken jacket had turned up its top button which it called its nose and had said, "Kod and I will not go calling together. We drink cambric tea or cocoa when we go a-calling. We're not invited to sweep. Your mother, alas and alack, must have been made of very coarse and cheap and ordinary material!"

The doll's house was tired of being different kinds of toys. It wanted to be a doll's house again, so it would always be loved, and not changed off for a new toy in several times in the same evening.

The great children's store now began to grow smaller and was no longer the enormous thing it had been during the night. Now it was its usual size again.

The different dresses, the canary bird, the pair of gloves—all were weeping and sighing.

"What is it?" asked the first fairy. "Didn't the Wishing Fairy grant your wishes?"

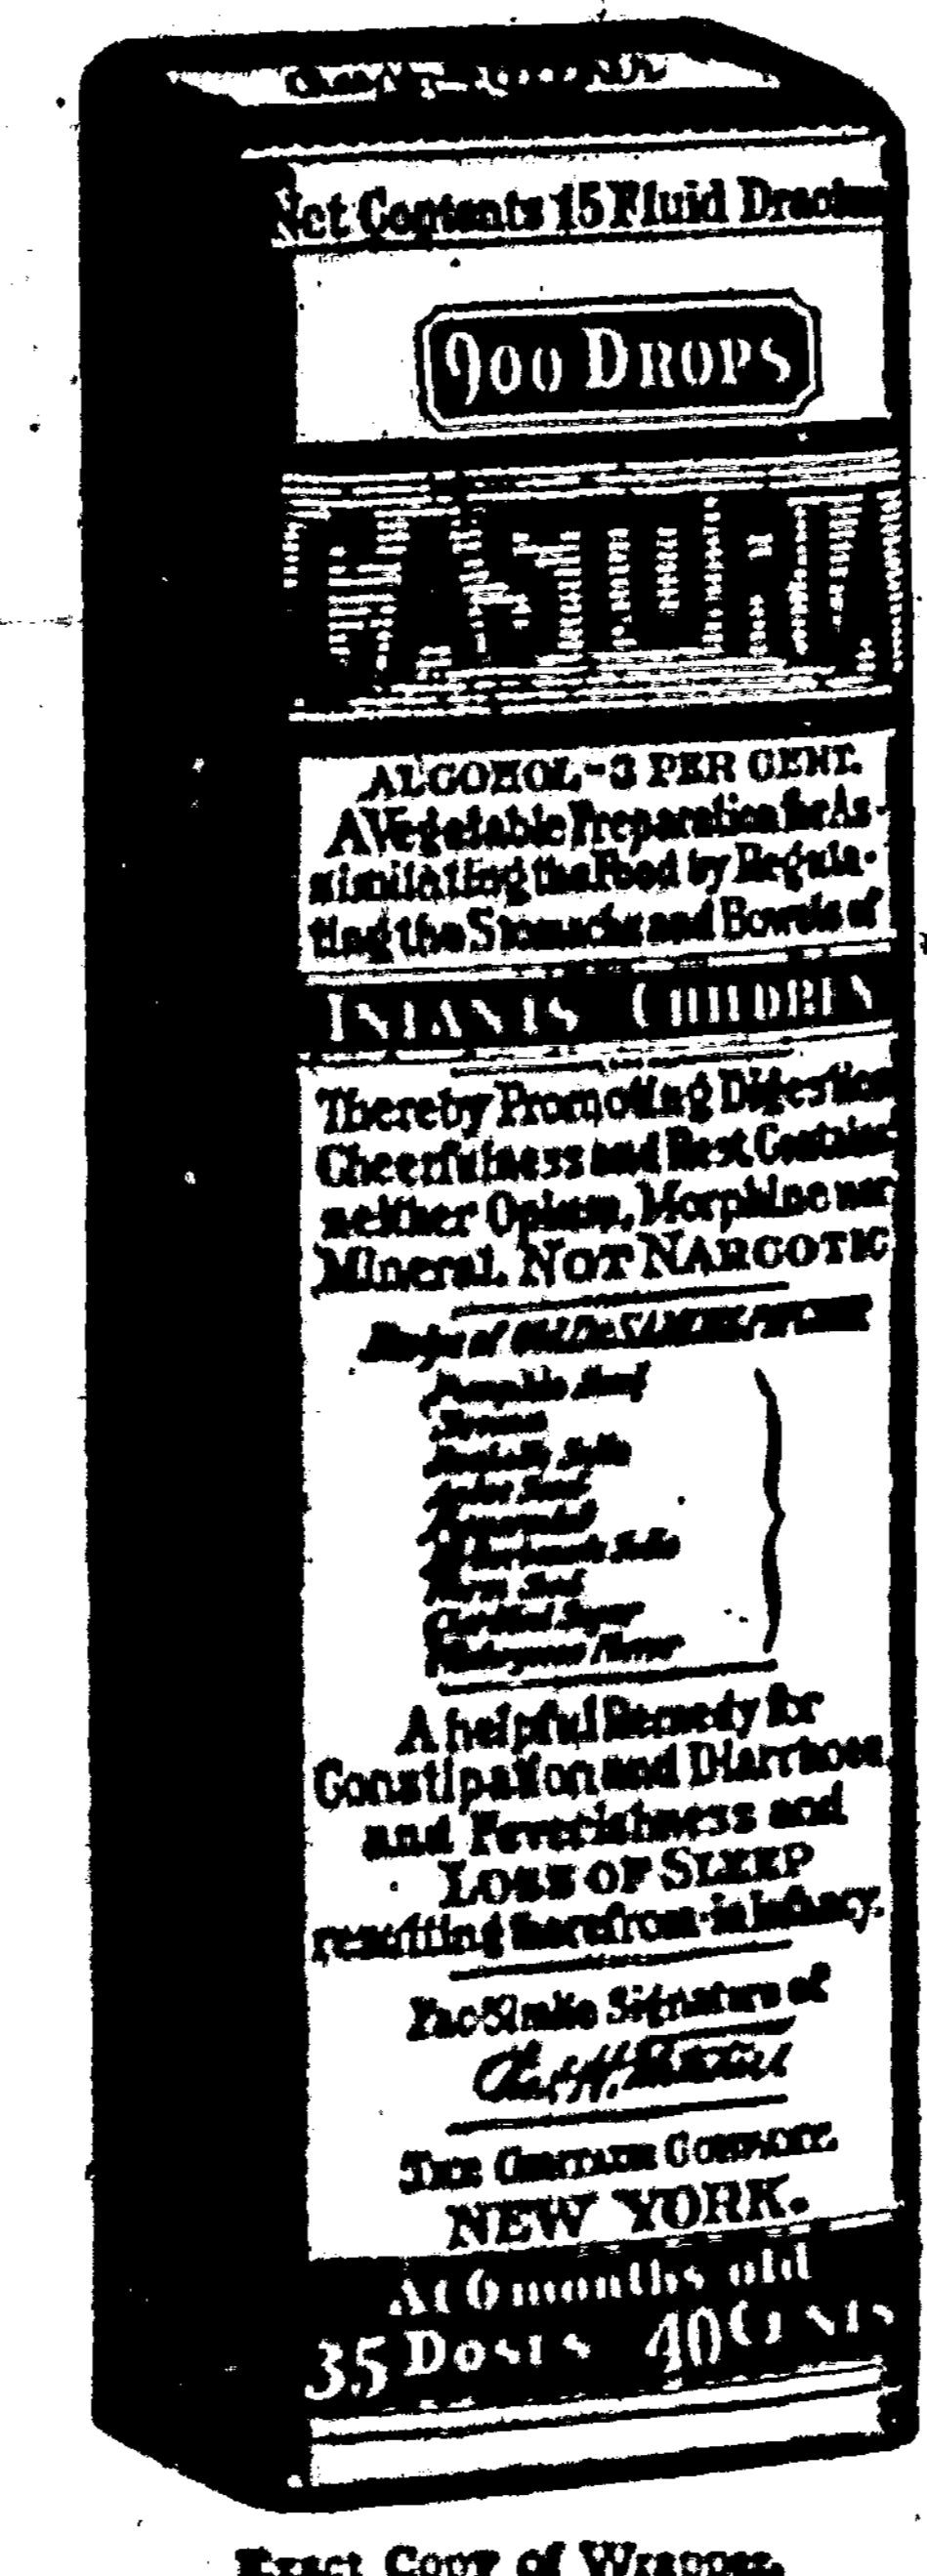

Baby Specialists.

THAT there are Physicians who specialize on Infant ailments you know. All Physicians understand Infant troubles: all Physicians treat them.

But in serious cases he calls in the Specialist: Why? He knows as every Mother knows, or ought to know, that Baby is just a baby, needing special treatment, special remedies.

Can a Mother be less thoughtful? Can a Mother try to relieve Baby with a remedy that she would use for herself? Ask yourself; and answer honestly!

Always remember that Baby is just a baby. And remembering this you will remember that Fletcher's Castoria is made especially for Infants and Children.

Advertising by the use of large space, the expenditure of huge sums of money have placed on the market, have put in your home, perhaps, many articles that today have been discarded, as you will readily admit.

Do you recall anything that has more modestly appealed to the public than has Fletcher's Castoria: modest in all its claims, pleading at all times—and truthfully—for our babies?

The big splash, the misleading claims may win for a time, but the honest truth-telling advertiser is like the old story of the tortoise that beat the hare.

Mothers everywhere, and their daughters, now mothers, speak frankly, glowingly, enthusiastically in praise of Fletcher's Castoria. Speak of it lovingly as a friend that has brought comfort, cheer and smiles to their little-ones.

North Star Shows Loss

The average cost of each ounce of gold taken during 1919 from the North Star Mine at Grass Valley, California, one of the biggest gold mines in the West, owned by the Phelps-Dodge interests, was $18.04, compared to $9.51 in 1918. This increase was principally due to the higher cost of mining says the annual report of the North Star Mines Company, just issued, which shows a deficit of $184,828 on the year's operations which totalled $919,799.93.

This is one of best managed mines in the country or it could not operate at all.

The price of gold has been $20.67 cents an ounce for years and at this price is standard of all values.

To remedy the falling off in gold production, the McFadden bill now in congress would provide a tax of $10.00 an ounce on all gold used for other than coinage purposes. The U. S. Treasury would then pay the sum of $10.00 an ounce to producers of new gold thus encouraging production without expense to taxpayers or upsetting of values.

Waiting at the Post

John H. Rosseter, Vice Pres. and Gen. Mgr. of the Pacific Mail Steamship Co., in commenting on the oil situation says that the United States faces a great economic problem unless it takes steps to bring about the American development of foreign oil fields. Several months ago Rosseter voiced a warning that the prompt adoption of a vigorous and adequate policy by the United States in fostering of the foreign development of oil by Americans was necessary if the country was to be saved from economic disaster of becoming dependent upon other nations, notably Great Britain, for fuel oil.

It took Congress 10 years to pass a leasing bill which opened up reserves for oil development. With such a record for procrastination what chance will there be for adopting a foreign policy which will give the American investor an opportunity to meet foreign competition? It looks very much as if we would be left waiting at the post with an empty gasoline tank while our competitors obtain control of foreign fields.

Secretary Post seems rather a poor post for the administration in the up to.—Burlington (Vt.) News.

The Legion Remembers

The following letter has been addressed to members of the American Legion by Post Commander E. M. Brickley, concerning the coming Salvation Army Drive shortly to begin in Lincoln county. The members of the Legion will be glad to respond to this appeal, for they are all of the same mind when it comes to helping a movement that is inaugurated by this organization. To quote the words of one of our boys, who unsolicited, said: "I served overseas for 18 months. When in France, the Salvation Army was there. When in Germany, I found the Army with the outstretched hand actively engaged in helping the needy. Anything I can do for this movement will be done gladly and willingly." Mr. Brickley's letter follows:

Carrizozo, New Mexico.
May, 11, 1920.

Dear Comrade:

At the present time there is a drive on for funds for the Salvation Army. Mrs. W. L. Gumm, Carrizozo, N. M. has been appointed to organize the drive for this County. She has appointed local Chairmen in each of the various precincts, but quite a number of them have failed to respond in the proper manner and to indicate that they will assume the responsibility of organizing their district.

Mrs. Gumm and the State Organizer have asked me to appeal to you for assistance. I have no hesitancy in doing this. The amount to be raised is not large and I know that you appreciate the spirit of the Salvation Army. I make the suggestion that you seek out your local Chairman and encourage him or her to go ahead. Offer your assistance and place yourself in readiness to do what you can if called upon. Just a word from you will do a lot toward spurring up the local chairman.

Most of you who will read this letter do not need any assistance but there are many not so fortunately situated. The Salvation Army does for those who can not do for themselves. There lives no one to whom they will not go, no difference how far they have slipped and when the whole world is looking to many a poor fellow like a savior of "No Man's Land" on a rainy morning, the "Sweetheart of the Dough Boy" will go to him if she knows where he is and I have an idea that many of us should be so unfortunate as to draw our ticket for the wrong destination when for us "Taps" blow for the last time, that the outposts on both sides will have to be doubled or some one from the Salvation Army will be slipping down to us with a doughnut and a cup of coffee.

I believe that it is up to you to break at least one lance for the Salvation Army. If you do not know just how to go about it, write Mrs. Gumm or write me. "Hit the Line" a few times and show that the "Legion" still remembers.

Yours very truly,
ERNEST M. BRICKLEY,
Post Commander.

MR. T. E. KELLEY,
Carrizozo, N. M.,

Dear Sir:—

Your letter of April 12 to the Forest Supervisor at Alamogordo requesting the co-operation of the Forest Service in constructing the road between Alto and Eagle Creek has been referred to this office for action.

I am glad to inform you that we have today allotted $1,000 to the credit of the Forest Supervisor at Alamogordo for use in repairing and reconstructing the road in question. This work will be handled under direct supervision of the Forest Supervisor.

Very sincerely yours,
FRANK C. W. POOLER,
District Forester.
By WARD SHEPARD, Acting.

The above letter to Mr. Kelley shows the good effect of the work performed by our delegation during the recent meeting of the convention at Santa Fe in the interest of good roads and forest protective matters. Through the recommendation of the local association, Mr. J. McSmith has been appointed deputy game warden for the district in which the club ground is located and he is now established with headquarters at the lodge on the club reserve. His district covers the Ruidoso, Bonito, and the North and South Fork of Eagle Creek. His presence in that locality to be on the job at all time will be of an assurance of preservation of game in the White mountains and adjoining regions.

Frantic With Pain

A Physical Wreck From Kidney Trouble, But DOAN'S Made Her Well.

"Kidney trouble made a complete wreck of me," says Mrs. Wm. Harvey, 621 N. Eighth St., Grants Pass, Ore. "I was so despondent and miserable it seemed I had nothing left to live for. Death would have been a welcome relief. For six months I was in bed and never expected to leave it alive. I was too weak to move without the help of my nurse and so nervous I screamed when she touched me. My back and head hurt like a throbbing toothache. I had awful dizzy spells, my eyesight failed, my hands and feet felt dead. I was pain-racked all over. The kidney secretions looked like thick black coffee, and burned terribly. They almost stopped passing and then my feet bloated like bags of water. I was frantic with pain, and thought I would lose my reason."

"I had lost all faith in medicine and tried Doan's Kidney Pills only because a dear friend asked me. Right from the start I began to feel better. Doan's cured me."

ONION SMUT CAN BE CONTROLLED

After Experiments Solution of Formaldehyde Is Recommended by Specialists.

YOUNG SEEDLINGS ATTACKED

After Plants Are About Three Inches High They Become Immune to Infection—Care Necessary in Applying Treatment.

The spread of onion smut into the large northern onion sections and its increasing prevalence each year have emphasized the importance of a practical means of control for this disease. After careful experimentation, specialists of the United States department of agriculture recommend a solution of formaldehyde in the furrow with the seed.

Onion smut is caused by a fungous parasite which lives in the soil and, when once introduced, spreads slowly to adjoining areas. In the spring, at the time when the onion seeds are germinating, the smut spores, or seed bodies, also germinate and infect the young seedlings, causing brown to black elongated blisters within the scales or leaves, which often split open, exposing the powdery black masses of spores. Affected leaves usually are slightly thickened and often curve downward. Many of the young seedlings are so heavily attacked that they die within three to five weeks after germination.

Controlled by Formaldehyde. A peculiar and important fact about onion smut is that the onion plant can be attacked by a fungus only while in the young seedling stage. After the plants are about three inches high they become immune to infection by the smut fungus, and onion sets or seedlings three to four inches high

GARDEN SEED SUPPLY IS QUITE PLENTIFUL

Certain Varieties of Peas Are Possible Exception.

Conditions Should Prove Favorable to Extensive Planting—Shortage of Labor Is Reported on Eastern Truck Farms.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Indication that there is a plentiful supply of garden seeds this spring, with the possible exception of certain varieties of peas, is contained in reports received by the bureau of markets from representative seed dealers engaged in wholesale, retail and mail-order business. Study of several mail-order catalogues indicates that in the majority of cases the prices of seeds are less than for the past two years, the greatest reduction being for cabbage seed. Marked reductions are also shown in the prices for garden beet, carrot, onion, spinach and English and Swedish turnip seed. An increase of about 13 per cent is noted in the prices for garden peas, while similar increases are shown for muskmelon, summer and winter squash, and tomato seed. This condition should prove favorable to extensive garden planting, which is urged by the United States department of agriculture.

Replies to inquiries addressed to representative seed dealers showed that a few in industrial centers, particularly in the East, were selling from 10 to 20 per cent less seed than last year. The cause, apparently, was the shortage of labor on truck farms. Compared with normal conditions before the war, the reduction in these Eastern centers ranges from 10 to 45 per cent.

On the whole the sales to home gardeners seem to be larger than those of last year, ranging from a 5 per cent increase in some sections to 50 per cent in others. Dealers in the most Northern cities were unable to report adequately because the season had not advanced sufficiently at the time replies were sent in.

CROSS-BREEDING IS FAVORED

Using Purebred Male on Flock of Mongrels Is Step Taken in Right Direction.

Cross-breeding to improve a flock, by using a purebred male on mongrel females, is a step in the right direction, but better progress is made by disposing of mongrels entirely and buying a pen of purebred fowls from a specialty breeder.

Onion Smut Can Be Controlled by Application of a Solution of Formaldehyde in the Furrow With the Seed.

transplanted to smut-infested soil will not contract the disease. In the large commercial onion districts of the Northern states, where the use of sets or seedlings is impractical, advantage is taken of the fact that onion smut can be controlled by the application of a solution of formaldehyde in the furrow with the seed. Since the young onion seedling is susceptible to the disease for only a short time, it is necessary to use only enough of the disinfectant to keep the fungus in check in the soil close to the seed. The apparatus for applying the formaldehyde solution consists of a galvanized iron tank, which is attached to the onion seeder. Such an attachment is illustrated and described in detail in United States department of agriculture Farmers' Bulletin 1090.

GENERAL FARM NOTES

Alfalfa will grow best on high well-drained soils.

Inoculation helps the spring seeding of alfalfa, white sweet clover and soybeans.

Excessive feeding of lubricating oils often causes deposits of carbon in the tractor engine.

The cost of dusting, counting both labor and materials, is about the same as for spraying.

The best lands for barley are well-drained soils that are not sandy. The best returns are obtained from early seedings.

Rhubarb hills may be hastened by putting a glass frame over them and banking around the sides with manure.

Try a few new things each year but don't depend much on them until they have proved their value.

Plant smooth peas, onion seed and onion sets as soon as the ground can be worked in the spring.

The home garden should be near the house, but not too near the hen house.

Asparagus is one of the most useful of garden vegetables in the spring. Plant a large bed of it this spring.

Rhodes grass bears drought well but is liable to be "winter killed" in temperatures of less than 15 degrees.

Either sweet clover or alfalfa may be sown with oats or on wheat in the spring. Inoculated seed should be used in either case.

The silo makes farmers less dependent on weather conditions than when hay is made and enables them to get along with smaller barns than otherwise.

BELOVED GOLF GAME FIRST

Little Things Like Marital Ties and the Demands of Business Didn't Worry These Devotees.

A golfer's wife had just told her husband that she intended to leave him forever, not because he was a golfer, but for some other reason.

"Will nothing alter your decision? Will nothing induce you to stay?" he asked.

The wife was obdurate. "Well," he said, "it is a terrible shock, but while you are packing, I think I will go out on the lawn and do a little putting."

This is reminiscent of a story of one of the heroes of golf, an Edinburgh innkeeper who lived a hundred years ago or thereabouts. He was so devoted to the game that he started playing at dawn and was seen at night putting on the greens by the light of a candle. At last his wife applied for a separation on the ground that her husband was not attending to his business.

He went to the court, admitted the impeachment, and said: "She can have all I got if she will give me so much a week to buy golf balls. She can look after the business!"

"It does," replied the jeweler.

"Then where does your profit come in?" asked Jones in amazement.
