

APPALLING LIST OF WAR HEROES HELPLESS, REPORT

War Risk Expert Makes Public First Figures of Soldier Dependents. Cost To America $325,000,000 A Year. 641,900 Maimed.

New York, May 6.—There are 641,900 veterans of the world war dependent on the bounty of the United States for future existence at annual cost of $325,000,000, according to Dr. W. C. Rucker, chief medical advisor of the bureau of war risk insurance, who reports this number discharged from the army and navy with disabilities.

These figures, said to represent the first authentic tabulation, were made public here today by the committee for aid to disabled veterans and referendum on the bonus.

Dr. Rucker's report shows that there are at least 75,588 cases of neuropsychiatric disease among the disabled discharged men, as follows:

Endocrinopathies, 4,323; epilepsy, 6,985; psychoneurosis, 13,944; inebriates, 1,858; insane, 12,544; feeble-minded, 22,538; constitutional psychopaths, 6,609.

In addition, there are 46,110 cases of tuberculosis; 75,000 surgical cases; 22,369 eye, ear, nose and throat, and 22,347 miscellaneous.

"To these figures," said Dr. Rucker, "should be added enough men to make 641,900, which is believed to be the maximum number discharged with disability."

Oklahoma Cyclone Death List Now 70

Muskogee, Okla., May 4.—The death toll of the cyclone that destroyed Peggs, Okla., Sunday night, reached 70, it was indicated today when reports of several additional deaths as a result of injuries, reached Muskogee. The deaths last night stood at 51. Physicians and rescue workers estimated that possibly a score of the several wounded would not survive.

There were 75 names on a list of severely injured compiled today by a local afternoon paper. This morning there was one large funeral for more than fifty victims. Whole families were placed in single graves. Aid is being sent the stricken town from Muskogee and Tahlequah and offers of assistance have been received from other towns. The financial loss was great but no estimate of its total is yet available. Not a building in the village carried tornado insurance, it is said. Damage to the farming community was heavy.

Bigamist Back in Prison; Body of Victim Sent Home

Los Angeles, Calif., May 5.—Walter Andrew Watson, alleged confessed bigamist and murderer, was returned to his prison ward in the county hospital today after his trip to El Centro during which he aided officers to locate the body of Nina Lee Delaney and testified at an inquest that he had killed her. The body of Nina Lee Delaney probably will be shipped to her former home in Kentucky.

High Official Branded Foe Of Labor

Washington, D. C., May 6.—Assailing what he described as "despicable propaganda against labor," Timothy Healy, president of the Brotherhood of Stationary Firemen and Oilers, charged before the railroad labor board today that "a high official of the government has been used most thoroughly to deceive the people into believing that if a man works for wages he is an enemy of our government."

Healy did not name the official to whom he referred, but much of his long prepared statement to the board had to do with the announcement by the department of justice concerning threatened demonstrations and violence on May day.

Chairman Barton, of the board, protested against criticism of other government departments being introduced into arguments before the board on the demands of railway workers for increased wages, but Healy said the men he represented were wrought up over attacks on labor by government officials and that he had been instructed to lay before the board a statement on the loyalty of railroad men.

Johnson Wins Over Hoover By Big Vote

San Francisco, May 5.—Senator Hiram W. Johnson stood today as the preferred presidential candidate on the republican ticket of the voters of California, his native state, on the face of yesterday's presidential primary returns from approximately two-thirds of the state's 5,729 precincts. Herbert C. Hoover, Senator Johnson's only opponent, also has his home in California.

Three hours and a half after the polls closed last night, Ralph P. Merritt, California campaign manager for Hoover, conceded Senator Johnson's election. The vote tabulated this morning stood: Johnson, 288,796; Hoover, 157,573.

Cotton, Woolen and Silk Goods Due to Drop, Dealer Says

Chicago, May 5.—A general reduction in the price of cotton, woolen and silk goods within the next few weeks was predicted today following announcement of a local silk dealer that he had sold 3,000,000 yards of belt silk at reductions ranging from 50 cents to $2 a yard under the prevailing prices.

The sales included all lines of manufactured silks.

One state street merchant said that the backward spring and tightening of money would force stores and manufacturers, in many cases overstocked, to slash prices to liquidate.

He predicted that a drop in the textile lines would be followed by reductions in food prices, so all markets run somewhat together.

Lordsburg, May 4.—Superintendent F. H. Perry of the King & Queen Copper company reports that conditions at the mine at the present time are very satisfactory and that he is making daily shipments of a good grade of lead-silver ore. Another new hoist is now on the ground and this will be installed as soon as possible for the contractor to get a force of workmen together. Smelter returns from the ore show that it runs about 20 per cent and five ounces of silver.

NEW HOTEL FOR CARRIZOZO NOW A DECIDED ASSURANCE

American Day Program Last Saturday

The American Day exercises scheduled to take place Saturday night were carried out before an audience that crowded the Lutz Hall to its full capacity. Dr. E. E. Cole, Superintendent of Schools called the meeting to order following with a few introductory remarks after which the large audience joined in singing "America." Mrs. Massie's class rendered "Many Flags in Many Lands" which was followed by the "May Pole," a duet, sung by the Misses Inez Holland and Verda Neff. The "Flag Drill" was next on the program by Miss Seale's class which was a beautiful patriotic exhibition.

The next in order was an address by Col. G. W. Prichard which concluded the patriotic program. Through the courtesy of the Crystal Theatre management, that place of amusement postponed the opening of the doors until the above program was finished. This act of courtesy was much appreciated as was evidenced by a capacity house after the exercises. Complimentary remarks were heard on all sides concerning those who took part in the program, and the opportunity of witnessing Robert Warwick in "Told in the Hills" at the Crystal.

Father Finds His Son After 12-Year Search

Olean, N. Y., May 5.—Parted from his only son 12 years ago, Thomas F. Sullivan, of Brooklyn, has reached the end of a seven-year search for Thomas F. Sullivan, Jr. There was a reunion in Westline, Pa., across the state line from Olean. The son, 19 years old, is a chemical wood worker.

Mr. Sullivan said he placed his boy, seven years old, in a boys' institution near New York before a journey to South America.

When he desired to find his son the trail led around New Jersey, and in Wellsville, Olean, Andover, Bradford, and other places.

Dentist Removes Mirrors; Patients Waste His Time

Knoxville, Tenn., May 5.—Women's vanity no longer finds a means of gratification in the office of Dr. Arthur R. Melendy, a dentist. Recently Dr. Melendy removed from his dental tray two large hand mirrors.

"I found I lost too much time waiting for patients to examine their mouths from various angles," said Dr. Melendy. "Women were the worst offenders, using the mirror for 'priming.' I find I can accomplish more work each day since I removed the mirrors."

Family Makes Record Flight in Airplane

Denver, Colo., May 5.—A new time record for an air flight between Denver and Colorado Springs was established when the Humphreys family made the 70 miles in 34 minutes. Mr. and Mrs. Ira Boyd Humphreys and their eight-year-old son made the trip.

Plenty of Money Subscribed to Build New Hotel. Ground Will be Broken in a Short Time. Long Anticipated Improvement Soon to be Realized.

Building of the big hotel for Carrizozo is now a certainty; Mr. C. H. Rollinson, promoter, spent all of last week in this locality in the interest of the proposition. He visited Captain, Lincoln, Oscura, Corona, and many other places where after convincing representative people of the benefit the hotel will be for the betterment of the entire county, the money was easy to raise.

Carrizozo will soon be a city indeed; the street lamps are being installed and this improvement with the new hotel to follow will cause visitors to "sit up" and take notice when they come to town. Messrs. Dingwall and McQuillen are busy in the work of installing the street lamps and the same is being done with swiftness and accuracy; but it will be impossible for them to suit everybody. The work is being done as good as the appropriation will allow at this time and the improvement is fine.

Old Dads Out; New Dads In

The City Council met in special session Monday night in order to allow the old council to close up affairs, and the new order of things to be instituted. The old council transacted the unfinished business after which the new mayor and council were sworn in as follows: A. J. Rolland, Mayor; W. W. Stadtman, Clerk; Councilmen, F. E. Richard, Julian Taylor, Benjamin Lujan, S. L. Squier. The new council after being duly qualified, adjourned to meet in regular session, Monday, May 10.

The old council has had many things to contend with which the public in general has been unaware of and the new administration will find that impossibilities will sometimes be expected of it, therefore, in consideration of the fact that the town is small and so many improvements are needed which cannot be made at the present time, the old council did well. Criticisms are easily made, but facts are stubborn things. Carrizozo is growing rapidly and with its growth the responsibilities of its city government will increase, therefore, we wish to repeat what we said after the election:

"The new council will have the support of the Outlook in every effort for the public good."

"Evangeline" the Beautiful

Do not forget the Senior Class Play Monday and Tuesday nights, May 10th and 11th. The play is a beautiful classic of Longfellow's, full of love, pathos, fine sentiment and wholesome maxims. The proceeds will be used for some beautiful token of remembrance to be left to the school and in view of this fact, the play should receive the good will, and support of the public in general. The purpose is worthy; let us hope that the patronage will be liberal. Every seat is a reserved seat; you will not have to go to the Crystal Theatre an hour or two before the play begins in order to obtain a seat. If you are late, your seat will be there for you when you come. Remember that if you want to see the play both nights, you have the privilege of doing so. The more tickets you buy, the more you will be patronizing a good cause. Buy early and often.

WHITE MAN

By GEORGE AGNEW
CHAMBERLAIN

Author of "Home," "Through Stained Glass," "John Bogardus," Etc.

(Copyright, 1919, by Bobbs-Merrill Co.)

ANDREA IS WARNED AGAINST ANOTHER WHITE MAN.

Andrea Pellor, handsome daughter of Lord Pellor, impetuous aristocrat, is doomed to marry an illiterate but wealthy middle-aged diamond mine owner. She disconsolately wanders from her hotel in South Africa, and discovers an aviator about to fly from the beach. Impulsively, of course imagining that the trip will be merely a pleasant excursion, she begs to be taken for a flight, although she does not know him. He somewhat unwillingly agrees, and they start. When she realizes her unknown aviator is not going back Andrea in desperation tries to choke him with one of her stockings. He thwarts her and they sail on into the very heart of Africa. Landing in an immense crag, Andrea finds the natives all bow in worship to her mysterious companion. White Man continues deaf to Andrea's pleadings to be restored to her friends. She goes on a day's hunting trip with White Man and thoroughly enjoys the exciting experience. White Man by a skillful shot saves her from the attack of a sable bull and she is fast becoming reconciled to her fate after eight days in the crag. On another expedition the donkey on which Andrea is mounted runs away with her and she is for a moment made ridiculous. White Man explains the African method of wife purchase, "obolo." She is horrified. After a tedious tramp three bull elephants are sighted and Andrea is transfixed by the excitement of the chase.

She dropped her head against him and sobbed. He put his arm around her and patted her awkwardly on the back. "There! There!" he said. "Don't. Please don't." Seemingly without his volition his arms drew closer and closer until he suddenly awoke to the fact that he was just plainly hugging Andrea Pellor.

He pushed her roughly from him. "Here," he said in quite a different voice, "this isn't my funeral. Come and cry on the elephant."

"All right," said Andrea, docilely. "How many were there? I heard a troupe—an army of them."

"You heard just one," said M'sungu. Dabbling at her eyes with soiled fists, she followed him to the side of the fallen monarch around which were gathered the natives, a sort of glazed awe on their faces, for the dead bull was a mighty tasker, carrying ivory to the value of eighty women. At M'sungu's approach their arms went up in a single gesture and from one throat they yelled. "Bal-ye-te!"

Scarcely had the cry of homage died away when a sound came to them through the bush that froze them into listening silence. Their faces expressed unbelief but their knowledge was insistent. It told them that they were hearing a death struggle, the whispering gush of blood from mighty lungs, mightily pierced. With a yell they broke toward that music and suddenly stopped, remembering that it is always wise with elephant to let the gun go first.

Andrea, frightened, stopped sniveling. "What is it?" she asked.

"I got two," said M'sungu apologetically. "That's the one that kept me waiting between heaven and hell."

"I remember. It was awful. But why did you wait? What did he have to do with it, poor dear?"

M'sungu smiled in spite of himself. "He had a great deal to do with it," he answered. "Until he started tearing the tree to pieces and took a half turn to dodge the damage, he was headed right down our trail, wasn't he?"

Andrea nodded.

"Well," continued M'sungu, kicking the mountain of flesh at his side. "Just as long as he was facing us, I couldn't take the fair mark of this old boy. That's one of the bits of knowledge that has been paid for with the lives of many men. A startled elephant doesn't charge; he bolts whichever way he's headed."

He looked up and added with pardonable pride: "And that, too, is how I know where to get him running—the other way. I made up my mind where to shoot before he was there."

They went to survey the second beast. He was quite dead; one long tusk gleaming white, an ivory island in a lake of bright blood. "Come away," said M'sungu quickly. He led her to the shade of one of the big trees where Marguerite, newly arrived, was already drowsing and dreaming happily of all the evil in the world. Around the nearby elephant, the natives awarmed like margots.

"Bathubi!" shouted M'sungu. "Chocuta!"

Bathubi turned lingeringly from the carcass, rushed over, dropped the lunch box at M'sungu's feet and plunged back again. "We'll have to forgive him," said M'sungu, sitting down and proceeding to open the tin and lay out Andrea's lunch for her. "The elephant—especially a dead one—holds a place in the native cosmos that no white man has ever quite succeeded in grasping. All these boys are quite mad. I've seen one sever his thumb from his body when he was told that and never notice it till he needed from loss of blood."

Andrea shivered but M'sungu did not notice it. "They believe," he continued, "that the meat of elephant is a compound of the flesh of all animals and that by eating it they acquire all the leading attributes—the courage of the lion, the slowness of the jackal, the gorging capacity of the snake, the eyesight of the hawk by day and of the feline by night, the industry of the ant and the homing instinct of the bee. You see the line? It's endless; and just because they have more than a smattering of the qualities they seek, the superstition will never die."

He stopped to give Andrea a drink of water and to feed her a first sandwich. "And that isn't the only thing that never dies," he went on, his eyes narrowing to a peculiar look she had never seen in them before, such a look as one is apt to connect only with mystics, fanatics, ardent believers, and thoroughly out of keeping with the conception of the White Man she had built for herself.

"Why, White Man!" she cried, "what do you mean? What's come over you?"

He looked away and then back at her. "Well," he said, a quizzical gleam creeping into his eyes, "who's afraid? Why shouldn't I tell once more a thing that's been written a hundred times by greater adepts than I and never believed? It's this, Andrea Pellor. Don't set yourself too high above the native and his worship of the greatest of beasts, for he knows what you can't even believe and that is that elephants are killed, they never die. In all the centuries that blacks, Arabs and whites have padded the myriad trails of Africa, no man has ever seen or heard of an elephant dying from old age or any other natural cause."

His eyes hardened on her face. "You see?" he whispered. "You can't believe it. Elephants never die."

Leading the march home over the back trail, M'sungu set a pace that kept Marguerite at a joggling trot. Andrea protested but to no avail. M'sungu, comfortably smoking pipe after pipe, had withdrawn into one of those male havens of the mind that remains marvelously untroubled by the tongues of women. Andrea stalked.

When they arrived at the river, there being but three natives in their reduced following, M'sungu promptly took his place as one of the four pal-bearers to Marguerite. There was something about being carried even in part by a white man that seemed to appeal to the old rogue's sense of humor. He threw up his barrel-long head and brayed an accompaniment to his triumphal progress into the scow. No sooner was he deposited than M'sungu seized his tall and bore down on it with all his weight. The music, suddenly ceased.

But Andrea's clear laughter still rang out. "Oh!" she cried when she could speak, "he is clever. I didn't realize how ridiculous you were until he laughed!" She let herself go again. M'sungu glared at her.

"And you were brutal," she continued. "You pulled his tail."

"I pulled his tail to make him shut up," said M'sungu. "I wish—" he paused.

"Say it," cried Andrea. "You wish you could make me shut up. Well, you can't. I'm going to laugh all I like. Listen!"

She opened wide her mouth for a stage "Ha! Ha! Ha!" but it never got out. M'sungu threw his arms around her and snatched her to him. His lips came closer and closer to hers. In his eyes was an exasperated twinkle. "Please don't," he begged.

Andrea glanced down her nose at his lips, saw that they had halted in their advance on hers and decided to struggle free from his embrace. "Why shouldn't I?" she asked argumentatively. "What is there about this muggy old river that has you—has you bluffed?"

"A lot of things," began M'sungu, his eyes shifting.

She saw a doubt and then a sudden decision come into his face. "All right," he said. "I'll tell you tonight." They reached the home crag at the setting of the sun. In rapid succession came tea, a hot bath, fresh clothes and dinner. With the first puff at her cigarette Andrea settled back in her chair and said, "Now."

The man did not pretend to be at a loss for her meaning. He nodded, lit his cigar and sat down. "All right," he said, "I'll trust you. Here's the cat out of the bag. I'm not the only white man in this bit of country. There's another who came in across the wilderness and has his camp about forty miles up the river. His business and mine have one thing and one thing only, thank God, in common. They are both clandestine. As it happens, I don't think he knows or cares what I'm up to, but I know all about him, because on those rare occasions when he comes down the river he is invariably peering drunk. His tongue never stops."

"Does he—ever?" asked Andrea. "You mean does he stop here?" She nodded.

"Yes, he does," said M'sungu. "I wish he didn't, but he always does."

"And what had you intended to do with me on his first visit?" she asked. "Well," said M'sungu, his brows puckering, "I've had in mind to tell you all about it just as I'm doing, and trust you. But if it hadn't come to that, I was going to gag you and lock you up."

"Oh, were you?" said Andrea, her eyes narrowing. "Let me tell you at once that I do not consider myself under parole. I don't mean by that that I'm going to sit on the river bank waiting for this man to come along, but when he comes I would be a fool to miss the chance of telling him just what my situation is. He might not be able to get me out, but at least I would no longer be totally in your power. If my disappearance should be completed there would be a credible witness to the incredible fact that I had really been here."

A dark flush spread over M'sungu's face. "At the risk of further arousing your curiosity," he said, "let me assure you that you are a thousand times safer in my sole power than in that of one of a dozen MacClosters."

"Is that his name—MacCloster?" asked Andrea coldly. M'sungu nodded.

"And what is his reprehensible business?"

"I can't conceive why I should tell you. One can't spread that sort of thing without harming one's self."

"So you don't trust me, after all," said Andrea.

"It isn't a question of trusting," replied M'sungu. "It's a question of whether it ever pays to tell tales out of school."

"And you don't think you are justified in telling me this man's business just as a warning?"

"You mean," said M'sungu, "so that you can believe me when I tell you it would be a disaster should he catch a glimpse of you? In other words, you want to be persuaded that I'm telling the truth."

"Not at all," said Andrea. "You're fishing for trouble. I mean—just a warning."

"Well, if you mean just that," said M'sungu, "it is quite unnecessary, for the man is his own warning. Only see him before he sees you and I won't have to gag you, I won't have to lock you up. I may, however, have to put the tracker on your trail into the bush."

"You think there is a man living I would run from?" said Andrea. "You don't know me."

"Perhaps you wouldn't," said M'sungu, "but in the case of MacCloster, it would be because you couldn't do account of jelly in the knees."

"Oh!" cried Andrea. "Now you have done it. Now I want to see him."

"Andrea Pellor," said M'sungu quietly, "please believe me when I tell you that you don't. I'm hoping the old devil won't go on a tear while you're here, but if he does and if he comes, just remember what I tell you. Rather than have MacCloster see you and teach you, I would gladly cut your throat."

"Why mine?" asked Andrea. "It would have impressed me a lot more if you'd said your own. Perhaps you realized that I couldn't quite believe that."

"Now you're trying to quarrel," said the white man coolly. "Are you sleepy?"

He paused.

"That's nice of you," said Andrea.

"And since you're interested, I might as well ask a few more questions. What were you doing on that d—beach with your airplane, anyway? Will that be telling tales out of school?"

He looked relieved. "Not at all. I'd wot off my third steamer load and I suddenly had news that put it up to me to change the captain's sailing orders before he passed beyond the reach of wireless. There wasn't time for anything but the old flying boat so I ran her out and jugged down the coast. I wasn't on that d—beach more than thirty minutes, all told."

"Thirty minutes," murmured Andrea. "Who would have thought that one little half-hour could ever matter?"

He looked at her musingly. "It doesn't pay to tell you things," he said. "We get along better just living."

"I wonder how you know!" said Andrea. "You've told me such a lot, haven't you? Where did you learn to fly?"

Her question seemed to send a shock through him, but he met her eyes squarely and said nothing. Andrea waited a full minute, then she began: "Who are you? What's your name? Where did you come from? Do you always take an airplane along? Are you an amateur? If you're not, why do you shrivel every time I say flying machine? Why do you?" She pounded the table.

The man's face paled and went whiter at each of her questions, but he held his tongue, and his silence madened her. Without taking her angry eyes off his face she swept two coffee cups, two saucers and two liqueur glasses to the ground with a crash.

Nothing could have served better to break the tension. The man smiled. "That was great," he said pleasantly. "You're like me—when in doubt, do something. Well," he continued in his lighter tone, "I can answer the spirit of all your questions and I will answer them because I don't want you ever to ask them again. Stubborn pride is the root of the whole mystery. During the first year of the war I was a flyer for the allies. I was on the way to a big name when my nerve went back on me. I couldn't believe it. I came down here and brought a machine with me, working on my old theory of contrasts. You saw how I flew—how I landed. You took me for an amateur. That's all. Please leave it. It's the flaw in my philosophy, the inevitable fly in the clear amber of a reasonably happy life."

He snapped his cigar away, sending after it a long last puff of smoke. Andrea no longer watched him. Her eyes fixed on the dying glow of the cigar butt. "I owe you several apologies," she said, quietly, "but I'm not to blame. I couldn't have guessed. I can understand some of what you feel because I've heard of several cases like yours—poor devils that look young and well but find terror in the unjust eyes of a world critical of slackers. But there was one—I remember his name. Robert Oddman Trevor, a Canadian."

That was a name that M'sungu knew best of all names in the world. It was his own. But even if Andrea had been watching him it is doubtful if she would have read correctly the sudden tenseness that shot through his frame. He turned on her a slanting glance. "What about Trevor?" he asked coolly.

"It was he that really made a flyer out of my brother Harry," said Andrea. "Harry was attached to the medical board that handled the case and he said that when the ranking M. O. passed sentence in the nicest way he could, but told Trevor he'd have to take a long holiday and that he would never fly again, because he had lost his nerve. Trevor, turned a bit white, stood very straight and said, 'You lie!'"

"D—fool," commented M'sungu.

"Perhaps," conceded Andrea. "But there must have been something in the way he did it that was deeper than the words, because all those officers were ready on the spot to swear that what they had heard was, 'Thank you, sir,' and Harry—Well, Harry has turned out a wonder, and he says it's because he always goes up on the honor of Trevor, the bravest man that ever flew."

Andrea looked at her companion and caught on his face a light of exaltation. "Why," she cried, outraged, "you haven't been listening!"

"Oh, yes I have," he answered promptly, coming back to earth. "Every word. Good for Harry."

Andrea studied his face, the shadow of a question in her own. "By the way," she said, "you are an American?"

"Sure thing," he answered, meeting her eyes squarely.

"Trevor was a Britisher, of course. But Canadians and Americans are a lot alike, aren't they?"

He contemplated his answer with a quirk of humor on his lips. "Nowadays," he said finally, "there's no reason why we should blush over saying 'yes' to that!"

CHAPTER VIII.

On the day following M'sungu received a message to the effect that his steamer had arrived and was already taking on the warehouse cargo and could do with three hundred tons more. Andrea had previously thought him a gourmand for work; now she discovered a maniac.

"It's a cleanup," he declared. "In another month the rains will be here, there'll be no working in the forest, the game will scatter, the natives will want to plant. And what's more, with this cargo I'll pass the million-dollar mark. That doesn't mean anything to you but it's my stake—the stake I'd set my heart on."

He took all hands off production and put them to baling and packing. From the reeds along the river he dragged to light a veritable fleet of scows. They were up-ended along the bank, scraped, calked and pitched. One after another they were floated out into waist-high water and anchored. The days were no longer enough. Every woman in the camp was set to making long, tightly bound palm-leaf torches and the pickanins from eight years up were organized into squads to light the night shift through the short hours of darkness. M'sungu took his sleep, if he took any, leaning against a tree near the nest of hand-pressure baling machines.

All hands were kept steadily at work until it was completed. At its finish, when all the available material was stacked along the edge of the forest in great oblong piles that looked like newly cut lumber, M'sungu gave a great spread.

To each ten men he allotted a tin of marmalade; to each twenty a box of crackers, a sack of flour, one load of salt and a demijohn of cheap but sound wine. Andrea watched this wholesale depletion of the white man's stores and began to wonder. As she wondered, her heart went way up and then way down. Was this the beginning of another end? Was she sorry or was she glad? She looked back on the few days of her new life and they seemed already to have stretched late years. She was too young or too careless to have learned that time passes slowly only to those who are in a rut of daily routine, dragging tragically under the blows of sorrow and almost forgetting itself entirely when joys are various.

The day came when the last of the barges, towing a little scow stacked with an overflow remnant of bales, was dispatched and M'sungu could take a long breath and turn his attention to putting the camp in order. This in itself was no small task. All branches, chips, bark, refuse and other rubbish consequent upon the work in the forest was gathered and burned. Then, as squad after squad of laborers left for home and the planting, their grass huts, scattered without the limits of the permanent crag, were also set on fire.

"Within a week of the first rains," said M'sungu to a listless Andrea, "the wilderness will have returned altogether to its own to all outward appearance. Three weeks after that, anyone penetrating to the clearing we have made will find nothing beyond a flourishing shamba or corn patch, the very natural property of the crag."

On a night of downpour Andrea sat in her room, hands crossed upon a discarded book in her lap and eyes widely fixed on some point of focus far beyond the encircling walls of her hut. She was frightened, for her soul had come to talk with her and there was no escape. She could not phone up a taxi and a party of four and go to a show and supper afterward, thus losing the universal guest.

With a childish gesture of despair, she crept into bed, curled up with her face against the pillow and wept. The more she cried, the more it rained; the more it rained, the more she cried. There was no end to that—no end—no end—she did it best to take and hold her but tonight its grip was uncertain and long before morning it saw defeat coming and made a dastardly retreat.

Andrea awoke, not slowly, not swimming up to consciousness through drowsy gradations, but suddenly with a snapping of eyes wide open on a great emptiness. She was alone, terribly alone, and hopelessly awake. She lay staring up at the wicker chair that she had purposely left burning. Its chimney was smoked. Outside, rain still poured.

They get to know each other better.

Prayed for Cure Finds it After 10 Years Food Would Sour and Boil —Teeth Like Chalk

Mr. Herbert M. Gessner writes from his home in Berlin, N. H.:

I had stomach trouble over ten years; kept getting worse. I tried everything for relief but it came back worse than ever. Last fall I got awfully bad; could only eat light loaf bread and tea. In January I got so bad that what I would eat would sour and boil; my teeth would be like chalk. I suffered terribly. I prayed every day for something to cure me. One day I read about EATONIC and told my wife to get me a box at the drug store as I was going to work at 4 p. m. I took one-third of it and began to feel relief; when it was three-fourths gone, I felt fine, and when it was used up I had no pains. While getting another box but I have felt the pain but twice. I used five tablets out of the new box and I have no more stomach trouble. Now I write to tell you how thankful I am that I heard of EATONIC. I feel like a new man; I eat what I like, drink plenty of water, and it never hurts me at all.

How much should I give to make this a better world?

A CERTAIN man in New York filled out his income tax report.

It showed an income so large that his tax was 53%. And his total gifts to church and charity for the year were $148.

Think of it—thousands spent for luxuries and pleasure for himself; and $148 to leave the world a little better than he found it!

Most of us do better than that; but not so very much better.

Our average daily gift for all church causes is

- less than we spend for daily papers
- less than a local telephone call
- less than a third of the day's car fare
- less than 3 cents a day

No wonder that 80% of the ministers of America are paid less than $20 a week. No wonder that the church hospitals turn away thousands of sick people a year. No wonder that China has only one doctor for every 400,000 people. No wonder that every church board and charity society is forever meeting deficits, forever passing the hat.

It isn't because we are selfish; it isn't because we don't want to help. It's just because no one has ever put up a great big program to us, and asked us to think of the work of the church in a systematic businesslike way.

The Interchurch World Movement represents the united program of thirty denominations. They have surveyed their whole task, no business could have done it better.

They have budgeted their needs; no business could have a more scientific budget. They have united to prevent the possibility of waste and duplication. At least a million dollars will be saved by the fact that thirty individual campaigns are joined in one united effort.

And they come to the men or women who love America—to you—this week asking you to use them as the channel through which a certain definite part of your income can be applied to make this a better world.

Only you can determine what part of your income that should be.

It's a good time right now to answer that question. We're passing through the world just once; how much better will the world be because you passed through?

Teachers' Salaries

Santa Fe, N. M., May 5.—That teachers' salaries must be increased throughout New Mexico next fall, but that increased efficiency must accompany the increases in pay for service was the unanimous conclusion of the convention of New Mexico county school superintendents held here yesterday. Twenty-four of the state's twenty-nine county superintendents were present. The entire day was devoted to discussion of the preparation of the school budgets for the coming year, to the problems of securing competent teachers and to questions of school finance, equipment, transportation, etc. Competence first was the view expressed by every county superintendent. A tentative scale of salaries for teachers, submitted by the department of education was generally approved, the salaries ranging from $65 per month for third grade teachers without experience, to $130 a month for teachers having full professional training and practical experience. As a result of the conference a uniform budget form will be submitted this year to every board of county commissioners in the state thus greatly simplifying the work of estimating school tax requirements in future years.

Dr. Cole Receives Handsome Present

On Wednesday of this week Dr. E. E. Cole, Superintendent of the Carrizozo schools was presented with a handsome gentlemen's traveling case, fully equipped with military brushes, combs, razor and all conveniences for the gentlemen's toilet. The gift which came from the High School was a token of the high esteem in which the superintendent is held and is in turn much appreciated by Dr. Cole, who on being presented with the gift, responded with a pleasant and grateful acknowledgment of his thanks.

There is more Cataract in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Cataract to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Cataract Cure, manufactured by E. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circular and testimonials.

Questionable Vouchers

On April 23 Attorney General Palmer issued a statement declaring that the United States lost millions on war contracts and that suits would be brought to recover the money. Says his statement, "Questionable vouchers unearthed in one class of contracts alone have resulted in the withholding of payments by the government amounting approximately $4,420,000."

"Questionable vouchers" would seem to imply some sort of negligence or connivance on the part of some government employee. However that may be, the statement of the Attorney General that some of the four millions of dollars of fraudulent transactions have been uncovered in only one class of contracts is a sufficient condemnation of the charges made. It is noted by the Congressional Committee that there had been waste if any graft of public funds. After deriding the investigating committee and heaping abuse without limit upon members of the legislative branch of the government, the executive branch now testifies to the accuracy of the charges made.

THE UNIVERSAL CAR

The Ford car can well be called the "people's car," because there are more than 3,000,000 of them in daily operation. That is about four to one of the nearest follower in the motor car industry. This would not be so if the Ford car had not for sixteen years proven its superiority in service, in durability, and in the low cost for operation and maintenance; this would not be so if the Ford car was not so easy to understand, so simple in construction that anybody and everybody can safely drive it. Wild Mule Purchase

Smith Brothers bought 20 head of wild mules this week, 12 from Tom Kirkland of Hondo, 3 from Geo. Titsworth, of Capitan, and 2 from Allie Stover of Glencoe. These mules have never been ridden or worked in harness, consequently, they are what might be considered unmanageable. Now comes Joe Stratton, M. M. Duke and George Murray who have agreed to ride these wild creatures at the 4th of July picnic to be given in the Nogal canyon. This feature added to the program will excite the curiosity of many people who have never witnessed a performance of this kind. Many other stunts like the above will be on the program, but the wild mule riding will be worth going many miles to see.

Tests For Tuberculosis

Stuart Stirling has been engaged for the past two weeks in making tests of the dairy herds in Carrizozo and vicinity. Last week he finished a test for the Rustin herd which proved by the test to be absolutely free from disease contamination. The work of testing the McCall herd is about finished and bids fair to be equally as free from contagion as the Rustin herd. This will be glad news to milk consumers, as the result of these tests increases the confidence of the pure milk product of which Carrizozo has always boasted.

HAD ONLY GIVEN PRICE OF ONE AUTO TIRE TO GOD'S WORK

10,000,000 Christian Stewards Will Be Gained in February in Interchurch Move.

February, the Christian Stewardship month, which is being featured by the Interchurch World Movement, is rapidly drawing to a close. February 22 was Stewardship Acknowledgement Sunday, when thousands of this country recognized the principle that we are only trustees of wealth which God himself permits us to direct, and that our labor and income must be used in acknowledging this ownership.

The Protestant denominations in co-operation with the Interchurch World Movement have designated February as Christian Stewardship month. The goal of the churches together is 10,000,000 Christian Stewards, regularly enrolled in the habit of giving of themselves and their resources to the Christian work of the world.

"Do you see what we have done?" remarked one man who has been impressed by the business-like attitude of the churches in the world movement. "Why, for amusement and our automobile we have allotted ten times as much as we are planning to give to the church and charities. I never realized it before."

The sum he remarked would just about buy one automobile tire. So this man, as thousands of others are doing, is setting aside first of all now, a definite proportion of his income to the work of the Christian work.

CHURCHES TO AID LONELY SHEEP SHEARERS OF WEST

The bleat of the sheep on the backbone of the continent calls men to the mountains. On high uplands from the Canadian border to Mexico, in lonely and inaccessible places, one of the most romantic examples of the country's migrant worker—the sheep shearer—plies his trade.

Unheard of though he is to thousands of his fellow workers, it was for him that the immigration regulations of three countries—Canada, the United States and Mexico—were modified during the war. This permitted freedom of movement to many hundreds of this strange craft.

Yet, for all his importance in the ranks of the nation's great Marching Army of the Employed, what sort of life does this man lead? The migrant fruit packer, or wheat harvester, or farmhand, or lumberman often roams inland through cities and the congested spots of civilization. But the sheep shearer, by the nature of his trade, is cut off from such influences.

Through a survey of the nation's migrant labor now being made by the Interchurch World Movement, it is suggested that for men of this class relief may be afforded through churches in outlying districts. For social and other purposes these men, with proper co-operation by church bodies, could make use of many of the facilities without which they are doomed to a life of isolation.

Any Wheel Which Does Not Pull Equally With the Others Acts as a Brake

Look again at the drawing! You see four factors necessary in keeping the Big Wheel of continuous telephone service revolving at the proper speed. This Big Wheel must turn smoothly to grind out its daily grit of 30,800,000 calls over 11,793,747 telephones, of which 7,000,000 are Bell-owned.

Industrial progress depends more each day on the telephone to destroy space, save time and increase the efficiency of every worker in every field.

Therefore, the responsibility of each smaller wheel within the Big Wheel increases daily.

It is the duty of the public to pay an adequate rate for adequate service, and to protect the employes supplying the service.

It is the duty of the employes to provide sufficient satisfactory service to the end that the public will pay rates necessary to support the business.

It is the duty of the owners to provide efficient management to operate the property honestly and fairly. The management must co-ordinate the whole effort and conduct the business to the end that:

- the public receives sufficient, continuous and efficient service.
- the employes receive fair wages and protection against a sudden shutting down of the industry. Their positions must be secure through lean and fat years.
- the owners who buy shares of stock receive a fair wage for their savings invested in the business. A stockholder provides money to expand the business which grows daily; he must receive a fair rate of interest on his money invested.

Therefore, the management represents the employes in dealing with the owners and the public. The management represents the owners and the public in dealing with the employes. The management must co-ordinate the effort of each smaller wheel to the end that the Wheel of Continuous Service revolve every hour of every day, every year, at the speed necessary to protect industrial progress.

URIC ACID IN MEAT CLOGS THE KIDNEYS

Take a Glass of Salts if Your Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers.

If you must have your meat every day, eat it, but flush your kidneys with salts occasionally, says a noted authority who tells us that meat forms uric acid which almost paralyzes the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood.

To neutralize these irritating acids, to cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's urinous waste get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink.—Adv.

Made It Specific.

A little girl had been naughty, and her mother told her she must have no pudding for dinner. Later, the others ate a nice jam-pudding, while the culprit received only bread and butter.

"Now, Jennie," said her mother, at the end of the meal, "say grace."

Jennie obeyed. Closing her eyes and her hands, she said, with emphasis:

"For what they have received may they be truly thankful."

A man seldom acts like a fool unless he is the real thing.

SIX MONTHS I COULD NOT WORK

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Made Me Strong and Able to Work—I Recommend It To All My Friends.

Bayonne, N. J.—"I had pains in back and legs so that I could not stand caused by female trouble. I felt so tired all the time, had bad headaches, and for six months I could not work. I was treated by a physician and took other remedies but got no relief. A friend told me about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it has helped me very much. I am well and strong and now able to do my work. I cannot thank you enough and I recommend your medicine to my friends who are sick."—Mrs. SUMA SACATANSKY, 25 East 17th St., Bayonne, N. J.

It must be admitted by every fair-minded, intelligent person, that a medicine could not live and grow in popularity for over forty years, and today hold a record for such wonderful success as does Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, without possessing great virtues and actual worth. Such medicines must be looked upon and termed both standard and dependable by every thinking person.

THE GREAT BULL.

"Isn't it wonderful?" "It was an honor," said the Great Bull after he had returned home. "Tell us about it," said one of the other bulls.

"Well, you know that I am named Financial Sensation."

"Gracious," said the others, "what in the world does that mean?"

"It means," said Financial Sensation, "that I was a financial sensation."

"Well, we know no more than we did before," the others said.

"I will explain," said Financial Sensation.

"Do," the others urged.

"You see," he said, "I cost sixty thousand dollars and that was what my master paid for me. I think, in fact I am sure, more was paid for me than for any other bull in the whole world. Well, because I was paid for at such an enormous figure, or rather that such heaps and heaps of money were paid for me, I was called Financial Sensation. Sensation is a word meaning something very startling, something enough to make you jump up and down with surprise, to startle you out of your boots if you had boots. And financial means money, or having to do with money, something about dollars and cents and banks and so forth.

"Well, you see such a great deal of money was paid for me that it startled everyone. Therefore I was a sensation and I was a financial sensation because it was finance or money that was given for me. I don't believe I should say that finance was given for me, but money was and money has to do with finance as I said before. Therefore I was a financial sensation, and so I received that name.

"Well, as you can see, I'm black and very beautiful. I'm just home from the milk exposition, as you know. They had cows there and they showed what beautiful milk the cows gave, and yet no one received the honor I did. For I was taken to a big hotel and had a big ball room turned over to me where I was shown. Many folks came to see the great bull who had had so much money paid for him.

"Isn't it Wonderful?"

They looked at me and said, 'Gracious goodness! Isn't it wonderful to think that he is worth so much money.'

"They didn't mean of course that I had all that money in my pockets or in my ears or tied about my tail, for of course I never carry money."

"I have no money to carry in the first place, and in the second place, I have no purse or pocketbook in which to carry it. But they meant that I was worth so much money when I had so much money paid for me."

"Well, I can tell you, that was a beautiful hotel, all full of lights and bell boys and beautifully dressed ladies and handsome gentlemen. But I didn't act surprised at anything. I felt to do such a thing would be beneath my dignity."

"So I stood about and gazed at all the people as they watched me and admired me, but I was thinking it was pretty different there from the pasture. And they fed me. I had a banquet all to myself and by myself."

"Other people watched me eat, but no one took a thing on my table. I knew it was my table for it was so large and there were all the things upon it I liked best."

"They asked me if I wanted a finger-bowl. I don't know what they meant. Perhaps they meant to say toe-bowl and perhaps they meant did I want to peddle my toes in it. But I wasn't sure, so to be quite on the safe side I shook my head politely."

"All, it was a great day for me, a great day. I met many fine folks but they didn't thank much of themselves. They spent all their time watching Financial Sensation, the Great Bull, who is now talking to you." "Wonderful, wonderful," exclaimed the other bulls.

BIRDS WON HONOR

Pigeons Certainly "Did Their Bit" in the Great War.

Achievements Acknowledged to Be Worthy of Mention in Records—Thousands of Lives Saved by Messages They Carried.

Membership in the A. P. S. is a military honor no mere man may achieve.

The A. P. S. stands for the American Pigeon Service of the United States Army.

When the history of the greatest of all wars is written, these American birds will have their names in the annals.

It will be told how the Finns were organized into shotgun squads to kill the winged messengers, but how 98 per cent of them outdistanced the bullets and "homed" with messages that enabled American artillery to locate and silence the enemy guns, to destroy trains of the foe's ammunition and to save thousands of American lives by reinforcements and timely rescues.

"Heavier-than-air" planes were not the only ones who sailed above the enemy's heads. The army signal corps had 10,000 pigeons overseas and 10,000 in America to be sent if they were needed. Birds carried 403 messages of incalculable importance, and at times when all other means of communication were unavailable.

"The Mocker," with his eye destroyed by a piece of shrapnel and his head a welter of clotted blood, homed in splendid time on the morning of September 12, a few minutes after 7 o'clock, in a thick fog and heavy rain.

Never faltering, he bore tidings of a particularly important objective reached and gave the location of several of the enemy's heavy batteries which were doing terrible execution on the advancing American troops.

No less valiant is the record of "President Wilson," a huge blue bird of wonderful vitality and rapidity of flight. So gallant was his work during the operations of the tanks on the St. Mihiel front that he received the commendation of the signal officer of the first corps. He was then transferred to the Meuse-Argonne sector.

On the morning of November 5, through heavy rain and fog, and with a leg shot-off, the big blue arrived at his loft with an important message. This was his second flight on this front and he made over 20 kilometers (12 1/2 miles) in 21 minutes. "President Wilson" also recovered and is now in the Hall of Honor of the American Pigeon Service.

Perhaps the most heroic bird that died on the American front was "Cher Ami." He carried a tremendously important message from Grand Pre, on the Argonne, over 25 miles of hills and dales, to his loft in Rampont.

He shot up from behind the American breastworks like a rocket. His pigeonier saw him falter and flutter in the air a moment, recover, poise in mid-air for a second and then, like a flash of light, shoot away with his head pointing homeward.

At Rampont straight out of the sky like a plummet he dropped, striking his left breast first. Sergt. Kockler, his trainer, found the message tube was hanging from the ligaments of his leg, and he had a hole in his breast. "Cher Ami" died from his wounds and his body is mounted in the Smithsonian Institute.

Perhaps the busiest bird on the American front was "Spike." "Spike" is the color of the sky, flies like greased lightning and eluded the Boche bullets. He delivered 52 important messages, never made a mistake and didn't get a scratch. He, too, is back in Washington.

No. 67552 has no name yet. As far as is known, he was the only German bird captured alive.

Last of the Barons.

The last holder of the judicial title of baron in Great Britain passed with the recent death in Dublin of Christopher Pallas, who was baron of the exchequer in Ireland. The title of baron was abolished when the court of exchequer was merged with the queen's bench, and Lord Chief Baron Pallas was the last bearer of it.

He was the solicitor general for Ireland in 1872, and the same year was promoted attorney general. After holding the latter office for two years, he became lord chief baron and held that position until 1916.

He was one of the ablest lawyers on the Irish bench and one of the wittiest, but had a great regard for the dignity of his court. He was eighty-nine years old when he died.

Probably Mature. "About how old is Miss Tibbert?" "I can't tell you exactly how old she is, of course, but I can give you some idea of her age." "Well?" "In 1817 she was old enough to leave home and be a farmerette."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

This feature added to the program will excite the curiosity of many people who have never witnessed a performance of this kind. Many other stunts like the above will be on the program, but the wild mule riding will be worth going many miles to see.

Tests For Tuberculosis

Stuart Stirling has been engaged for the past two weeks in making tests of the dairy herds in Carrizozo and vicinity. Last week he finished a test for the Rustin herd which proved by the test to be absolutely free from disease contamination. The work of testing the McCall herd is about finished and bids fair to be equally as free from contagion as the Rustin herd. This will be glad news to milk consumers, as the result of these tests increases the confidence of the pure milk product of which Carrizozo has always boasted.

MICKIE SAYS

HAD ONLY GIVEN PRICE OF ONE AUTO TIRE TO GOD'S WORK

10,000,000 Christian Stewards Will Be Gained in February in Interchurch Move.

February, the Christian Stewardship month, which is being featured by the Interchurch World Movement, is rapidly drawing to a close. February 22 was Stewardship Acknowledgment Sunday, when thousands of this country recognized the principle that we are only trustees of wealth which God himself permits us to direct, and that our labor and income must be used in acknowledging this ownership.

The Protestant denominations in cooperation with the Interchurch World Movement have designated February as Christian Stewardship month. The goal of the churches together is 10,000,000 Christian Stewards, personally enrolled in the habit of giving of themselves and their resources to the Christian work of the world.

"Do you see what we have done?" remarked one man who has been impressed by the business-like attitude of the churches in the world movement. "Why, for amusement and our amusements we have allotted ten times as much as we are planning to give to the church and charities. I never realized it before."

"The sum he remarked would just about buy one automobile tire. So this man, as thousands of others are doing, is setting aside first of all now, a definite proportion of his income to the work of the Christian work."

CHURCHES TO AID LONELY SHEEP SHEARERS OF WEST

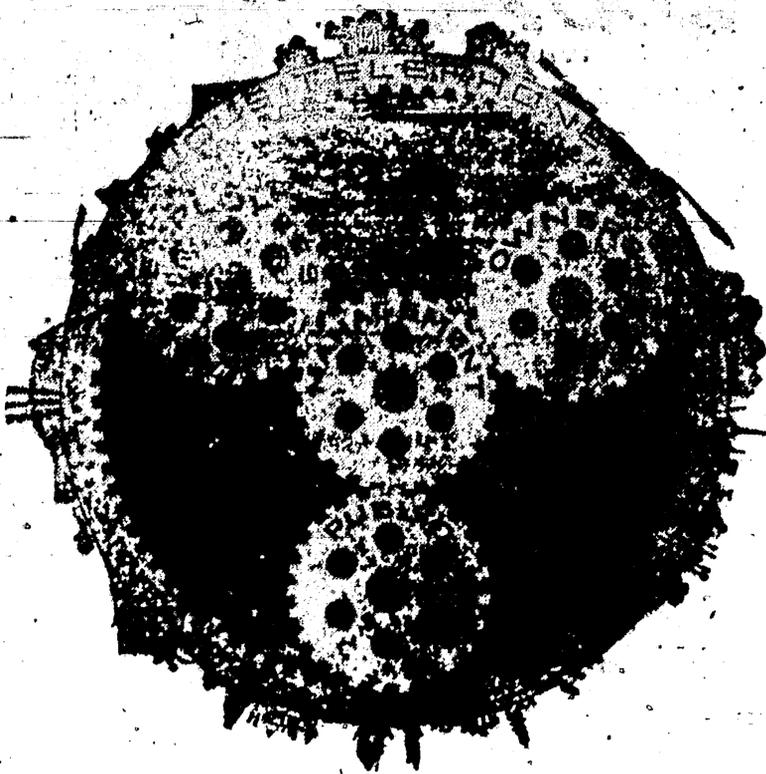

The bleat of the sheep on the backbone of the continent calls men to the mountains. On high uplands from the Canadian border to Mexico, in lonely and inaccessible places, one of the most romantic examples of the country's migrant worker—the sheep shearer—plies his trade.

Unheard of though he is to thousands of his fellow workers, it was for him that the immigration regulations of three countries—Canada, the United States and Mexico—were modified during the war. This permitted freedom of movement to many hundreds of his strange craft.

Yet, for all his importance in the ranks of the nation's great Marching Army of the Employed, what sort of life does this man lead? The migrant fruit packer, or wheat harvester, or farmhand, or lumberman often roams inland through cities and the congested spots of civilization. But the sheep shearer, by the nature of his trade, is cut off from such influences.

Through a survey of the nation's migrant labor now being made by the Interchurch World Movement, it is suggested that for men of this class relief may be afforded through churches in outlying districts. For social and other purposes these men, with proper co-operation by church societies, could make use of many of the facilities without which they are doomed to a life of isolation.

Any Wheel Which Does Not Pull Equally With the Others Acts as a Brake

Look again at the drawing! You see four factors necessary in keeping the Big Wheel of continuous telephone service revolving at the proper speed. This Big Wheel must turn smoothly to grind out its daily grit of 30,800,000 calls over 11,795,747 telephones, of which 7,000,000 are Bell-owned.

Industrial progress depends more each day on the telephone to destroy space, save time and increase the efficiency of every worker in every field.

Therefore, the responsibility of each smaller wheel within the Big Wheel increases daily.

It is the duty of the public to pay an adequate rate for adequate service, and to protect the employes accepting the service.

It is the duty of the employes to provide sufficient satisfactory service to the end that the public will pay rates necessary to support the business.

It is the duty of the owners to provide efficient management to operate the property honestly and fairly. The management must co-ordinate the whole effort and conduct the business to the end that:

—the public receives sufficient, continuous and efficient service.

—the employes receive fair wages and protection against a sudden shutting down of the industry. Their positions must be secure through lean and fat years.

—the owners who buy shares of stock receive a fair wage for their savings invested in the business. A stockholder provides money to expand the business which grows daily; he must receive a fair rate of interest on his money invested.

Therefore, the management represents the employes in dealing with the owners and the public. The management represents the owners and the public in dealing with the employes. The management must co-ordinate the effort of each smaller wheel to the end that the Wheel of Continuous Service revolves every hour of every day, every year, at the speed necessary to protect industrial progress.

Heavy Milkers are Summer Fed

Look up the production records of cows that show a big gain over your own, and you will find that they are all summer fed. Their owners have reached the desideratum of only grass. Alas, it can't produce a maximum flow, because a cow can't consume sufficient grass to supply the necessary protein. The protein in grass varies throughout the year.

These deficiencies of a grass diet are perfectly corrected by using

Purina Cow Chow

It not only furnishes ample protein—24%—but it is rich in vitamins, essential to the health of the cow. Purina Cow Chow will make the average cow produce 4 lbs. more milk per day; or added 40¢ about 4¢.

URIC ACID IN MEAT CLOGS THE KIDNEYS

Take a Glass of Salts if Your Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers.

If you must have your meat every day, eat it, but flush your kidneys with salts occasionally, says a noted authority who tells us that meat forms uric acid which almost paralyzes the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood.

To neutralize these irritating acids, to cleanse the kidneys and flush out the body's urinous waste get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink.—Adv.

Made It Specific.

A little girl had been naughty, and her mother told her she must have no pudding for dinner. Later, the others ate a nice jam pudding, while the culprit received only bread and butter.

"Now, Jennie," said her mother, at the end of the meal, "say grace."

Jennie obeyed. Closing her eyes and her hands, she said, with emphasis:

"For what they have received may they be truly thankful."

SIX MONTHS I COULD NOT WORK

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Made Me Strong and Able to Work—I Recommend It To All My Friends.

Bayonne, N. J.—"I had pains in back and legs so that I could not stand caused by female trouble. I felt so tired all the time, had bad headaches, and for six months I could not work. I was treated by a physician and took other remedies but got no relief. A friend told me about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it has helped me very much. I am well and strong and now able to do my work. I cannot thank you enough and I recommend your medicine to my friends who are sick."—Mrs. SUSIE SACATANSKY, 25 East 17th St., Bayonne, N. J.

It must be admitted by every fair-minded, intelligent person, that a medicine could not live and grow in popularity for over forty years, and today hold a record for such wonderful success as does Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, without possessing great virtues and actual worth. Such medicines must be looked upon and termed both standard and dependable by every thinking person.

THE GREAT BULL.

"Isn't it wonderful?" "It was an honor," said the Great Bull after he had returned home. "Tell us about it," said one of the other bulls.

"Well, you know that I am named Financial Sensation."

"Gracious," said the others, "what in the world does that mean?"

"It means," said Financial Sensation, "that I was a financial sensation."

"Well, we know no more than we did before," the others said.

"I will explain," said Financial Sensation.

"Do," the others urged.

"You see," he said, "I cost sixty thousand dollars and that was what my master paid for me. I think, in fact I am sure, more was paid for me than for any other bull in the whole world. 'Well, because I was paid for at such an enormous figure, or rather that such heaps and heaps of money were paid for me, I was called Financial Sensation. Sensation is a word meaning something very startling, something enough to make you jump up and down with surprise, to startle you out of your boots if you had boots. And financial means money, or having to do with money, something about dollars and cents and banks and so forth.

"Well, you see such a great deal of money was paid for me that it startled everyone. Therefore I was a sensation and I was a financial sensation because it was finance or money that was given for me. I don't believe I should say that finance was given for me, but money was and money has to do with finance as I said before. Therefore I was a financial sensation, and so I received that name.

"Well, as you can see, I'm black and very beautiful. I'm just home from the milk exposition, as you know. They had cows there and they showed what beautiful milk the cows gave, and yet no one received the honor I did. For I was taken to a big hotel and had a big ball room turned over to me where I was shown. Many folks came to see the great bull who had had so much money paid for him.

"Isn't it Wonderful?"

They looked at me and said, 'Gracious goodness! Isn't it wonderful to think that he is worth so much money.'

"They didn't mean of course that I had all that money in my pockets or in my ears or tied about my tail, for of course I never carry money.

"I have no money to carry in the first place, and in the second place, I have no purse or pocketbook in which to carry it. But they meant that I was worth so much money when I had so much money paid for me.

"Well, I can tell you, that was a beautiful hotel, all full of lights and bell boys and beautifully dressed ladies and handsome gentlemen. But I didn't act surprised at anything. I felt to do such a thing would be beneath my dignity.

"So I stood about and gazed at all the people as they watched me and admired me, but I was thinking it was pretty different there from the pasture. And they fed me. I had a banquet all to myself and by myself.

"Other people watched me eat, but no one took a thing on my table. I knew it was my table for it was so large and there were all the things upon it I liked best.

"They asked me if I wanted a finger-bowl. I don't know what they meant. Perhaps they meant to say toe-bowl and perhaps they meant did I want to paddle my toes in it. But I wasn't sure, so to be quite on the safe side I shook my head politely.

"Ah, it was a great day for me, a great day. I met many fine folks but they didn't think much of themselves. They spent all their time watching Financial Sensation, the Great Bull, who is now talking to you."

"Wonderful, wonderful," exclaimed the other bulls.

BIRDS WON HONOR

Pigeons Certainly "Did Their Bit" in the Great War.

Achievements Acknowledged to Be Worthy of Mention in Records—Thousands of Lives Saved by Messages They Carried.

Membership in the A. P. S. is a military honor no mere man may achieve.

The A. P. S. stands for the American pigeon service of the United States army.

When the history of the greatest of all wars is written, these American birds will have their names in the annals.

It will be told how the Huns were organized into shotgun squads to kill the winged messengers, but how 98 per cent of them outdistanced the bullets and "homed" with messages that enabled American artillery to locate and silence the enemy guns, to destroy trains of the foe's ammunition and to save thousands of American lives by re-enforcements and timely rescues.

"Heavier-than-air" planes were not the only ones who sailed above the enemy's heads. The army signal corps had 10,000 pigeons overseas and 10,000 in America to be sent if they were needed. Birds carried 403 messages of incalculable importance, and at times when all other means of communication were unavailable.

"The Mocker," with his eye destroyed by a piece of shrapnel and his head a welter of clotted blood, homed in splendid time on the morning of September 12, a few minutes after 7 o'clock, in a thick fog and heavy rain.

Never faltering, he bore tidings of a particularly important objective reached and gave the location of several of the enemy's heavy batteries which were doing terrible execution on the advancing American troops.

No less valiant is the record of "President Wilson," a huge blue bird of wonderful vitality and rapidity of flight. So gallant was his work during the operations of the tanks on the St. Mihiel front that he received the commendation of the signal officer of the first corps. He was then transferred to the Meuse-Argonne sector.

On the morning of November 5, through heavy rain and fog, and with a leg shot off, the big blue arrived at his loft with an important message. This was his second flight on this front and he made over 20 kilometers (12 1/2 miles) in 21 minutes. "President Wilson" also recovered and is now in the Hall of Honor of the American pigeon service.

Perhaps the most heroic bird that died on the American front was "Cher Ami." He carried a tremendously important message from Grand Pre, on the Argonne, over 25 miles of hills and dales, to his loft in Rampant.

He shot up from behind the American breastworks like a rocket. His pigeoneer saw him falter and flutter in the air a moment, recover, poise in mid-air for a second and then, like a flash of light, shoot away with his head pointing homeward.

At Rampant straight out of the sky like a plummet he dropped, striking his left breast first. Sergt. Kockler, his trainer, found the message tube was hanging from the ligaments of his leg, and he had a hole in his breast. "Cher Ami" died from his wounds and his body is mounted in the Smithsonian institute.

Perhaps the busiest bird on the American front was "Spike." "Spike" is the color of the sky, flies like greased lightning and eluded the Boche bullets. He delivered 52 important messages, never made a mistake and didn't get a scratch. He, too, is back in Washington.

No. 67552 has no name yet. As far as is known, he was the only German bird captured alive.

Last of the Barons.

The last holder of the judicial title of baron in Great Britain passed with the recent death in Dublin of Christopher Pailles, who was baron of the exchequer in Ireland. The title of baron was abolished when the court of exchequer was merged with the queen's bench, and Lord Chief Baron Pailles was the last bearer of it.

He was the solicitor general for Ireland in 1872, and the same year was promoted attorney general. After holding the latter office for two years, he became lord chief baron and held that position until 1916.

He was one of the ablest lawyers on the Irish bench and one of the wittiest, but had a great regard for the dignity of his court. He was eighty-nine years old when he died.

Probably Mature.

"About how old is Miss Fibbert?" "I can't tell you exactly how old she is, of course, but I can give you some idea of her age."

"Well?"

"In 1917 she was old enough to leave home and be a farmwife."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

The Coming Fourth

In a little less than two months from now we will be ready to celebrate the glorious 4th of July, and in contemplation of the same leading men and women of Lincoln County have been casting about for a suitable place to stage the celebration.

In conversation with representative parties from each locality there seems to be a united opinion in favor of holding the celebration at Nogal, which offers the best advantages of any place under consideration. First, it is the most centrally located. Second, the Nogal Canyon with the beautiful Walnut grove is an ideal place for a picnic ground. Outside of this, there is plenty of room for base ball games, broncho riding, roping, and other sports which will be included among the day's amusements.

A committee will, it is understood, be appointed shortly whose duty it will be to arrange for speakers and a full program of sports of different kinds which will give the people of Lincoln County a day of enjoyment they could not duplicate by going elsewhere. Good music will be on hand to enliven the occasion and a platform will be built in the grove for dancing. The committee will begin early so as to advise the people of the celebration so that there will be no need going to other places in search of pleasure on the National holiday.

Fort Bayard Hospital

It is a sense of satisfaction to know that the military hospital at Fort Bayard is to be formally opened May 16; it is also gratifying to know that had it not been for Senator Fall that institution would now be in the state of Colorado. Political demagogues sought to have it disbanded and removed to that state but notwithstanding the fact that they had almost accomplished their purpose, the New Mexico Senator hurried to Washington to enter his protest, which after being considered by the proper officials Fort Bayard was allowed to remain in the Sunshine State.

The situation of the Fort is the very best; the altitude best for patients at all times of year. No excessive heat causes discomfort during the summer months and the winters are not extremely cold, which makes Fort Bayard an ideal place for a military hospital. Let us hope that politics may never again seek its removal.

Ten miles used to be a long way

WHAT a difference in these motor-car days, when every point in the county is hardly more than "just around the corner."

People's ideas are changing, too.

They're beginning to figure out how much it is costing them to keep a car. And the man who is doing the greatest amount of figuring is the man with the moderate-price car.

II

There still seems to be a notion in some quarters that any tire is good enough for a small car.

That's not what the man who owns it thinks.

In recommending and selling U. S. Tires we are trying to see his side of the proposition—finding out what he wants in a tire and giving him that.

III

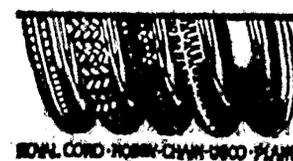

Large or small, U. S. Tires are built to only one standard of quality—the standard that produced the first straight side automobile tire, the first pneumatic truck tire.

Every tire that bears the name "U. S." is built the best way its makers know how. It isn't the car, but the man who owns the car, that counts with the oldest and largest rubber concern in the world.

IV

As representatives of U. S. Tires in this town, we offer you the benefit of our experience and advice in settling your tire problem.

Select your tires according to the roads they have to travel:
In sandy or hilly country, wherever the going is apt to be heavy—The U. S. Nobby.
For ordinary country roads—The U. S. Chain or Usco.
For front wheels—The U. S. Plain.
For best results—everywhere—U. S. Royal Cords.

Personal and Social Mention

Effective on May 1, Mr. J. E. Farley was appointed Division Foreman of the E. P. & S. W. at this point, and Mr. L. T. Bacot, Jr. was appointed Roundhouse Foreman. Both of these gentlemen are masters of the positions to which they have been appointed. Mr. Farley, the new division foreman has been in the employ of the company for the past 14 years, holding the position of roundhouse foreman for 10 years of that time.

While not so long in the company's service as Mr. Farley, Mr. Bacot's efficiency was recognized by his call to fill the vacancy caused by the departure of former division foreman, W. C. Leland, and until Mr. Farley's appointment became effective. Both gentlemen are to be congratulated and also the company, on the wisdom of the appointments.

David Baker and family left Tuesday for Dunsmier, California, where Mr. Baker has an important position awaiting him, and where the family will make their future home. We regret the departure of the Bakers as they had lived in Carrizozo so long that we began to entertain the idea that their stay would be permanent, however, as much as we regret their loss, California will gain by receiving them. Their many friends here wish them success in their new home.

The Carrizozo Live Stock Commission Company has leased the building formerly occupied by the Carrizozo Meat Market and took possession last Saturday. A new sign is being made which will be erected in a few days to attract the attention of patrons to the new place of business. A partition will be put in and the Carrizozo Transfer & Storage Company will occupy the rear portion reserving plenty of room for the office of the stock company in the front.

The "Feast of the Five Tables" was enjoyed by many, who availed themselves of the opportunity of partaking of the delicious repast served in such novel well arranged fashion. The ladies of the Methodist Church netted the sum of $110.00 as a result of the "Feast" and these figures would be larger if the supply had not been exhausted. This is the third treat the public has enjoyed of late by the ladies of the three churches, Baptist, Episcopal and Methodist which were successful, socially and financially, the ladies being pronounced royal entertainers and servers.

The first street light was installed Wednesday on the crossing immediately in front of the Wetmore building. Messrs. McQuillen and Dingwall report that an ample amount of the material and fixtures have now arrived so that the work of installing lights on Alamo Avenue will shortly be done. By this time it is said, the balance of what is needed will be on hand to furnish the work.

Rev. Smith of the Carrizozo Baptist Church leaves Saturday for Washington to the Southern Baptist convention which begins May 12 and lasts four days. 10,000 delegates will be in attendance and the convention will be the largest in the history of the church taking into consideration the full attendance, a heavy percentage of which will be interested aside from the actual delegates.

Mrs. Harold Wilcox left for Duran Sunday where she joined her mother, who accompanied her to St. Louis, where they will spend several weeks with relatives and friends after which they will return to Duran. Mrs. Wilcox will spend about two weeks more with the home folks before returning to Carrizozo.

Reilly, Stratton & Harris sold 20 head of fine registered Hereford steers to Will Ed Harris. The steers are two-year-olds, were delivered last Wednesday and are now added to the herds on the -OZ ranch in the White Mountains.

Mr. and Mrs. R. T. Cribb, Mr. and Mrs. D. S. Donaldson, Rev. and Mrs. A. C. Douglas, and children, motored up to the Nogal canyon last Sunday afternoon after their labors were completed at church spending several hours in viewing the scenery, and breathing in the pure mountain air.

Mrs. Pearl Hughes came in Saturday from the Cravens home in Water Canyon and returned in company with A. C. Hornberger and wife, who spent Sunday with the Cravens family returning to Carrizozo Sunday evening.

Mrs. J. E. Farley, Mrs. I. D. Baker, and daughter came up from El Paso Tuesday on No. 4. Mrs. Baker will spend several weeks with the home folks.

Mr. and Mrs. I. O. Wetmore, accompanied by Mesdames Lovelace and Prince of Corona, motored over to Roswell and spent the week-end with friends in Chavez county.

Attorney George Spence and wife have both been ill for the past week, but are improving nicely. Mr. Spence attended court Thursday for the first time since that body has been in session.

Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Claunch came up from El Paso Tuesday to spend several weeks with the children on the Pueblo Pardo ranch.
