

WHAT THE CENSUS TELLS OF NEW MEX.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 14.—According to the census of 1920, 37.1 per cent, or almost two-thirds of the people of the state of New Mexico are either infants or children under 14 years of age; 9.6 per cent are young people, 15 to 19 years old; 30.0 per cent, over one-third, are men and women in the prime of life, being from 20 to 44 years old; while 17.3 per cent, being 45 years of age or over, are well along in middle life; they have not reached old age.

Over one-half of the population 51.4 per cent, are old enough to vote being 21 or over; and in this class the men outnumber the women in the ratio of 124 to 100. The males of military or fighting age, 18 to 44 constitute 40.2 per cent of the male population and 21.2 per cent of the total population.

School Attendance in New Mexico.
According to the census of 1920 there are 60,430 children 7 to 13 years of age in the state and of this number 52,829 or 87.4 per cent were reported as attending school. In 1914 the percentage attending school was 77.1 thus indicating a decided improvement as regards school attendance between 1910 and 1920. Of the children 14 and 15 years of age in 1920, 80.4 per cent were attending school and of those 16 to 17 years of age 59.8 per cent.

Illiteracy in New Mexico.
The census says there are 41,037 illiterate persons 10 years of age and over in the state, "illiterate" meaning unable to write. Of this number 23,757 are native whites of native parentage, 1,762 are of foreign or mixed parentage, and 7,250 are of foreign birth and 8,553 Indians. The number of illiterate Negroes is 228. In the total population 10 years of age and over the percentage of illiteracy is 15.6, which, it is gratifying to note shows a diminution since 1910, when it was 20.2.

There is considerable more illiteracy in the rural districts of the state than in the cities, the percentage being 17.6 for the rural population and 7.1 for the urban.

By counties the percentage of illiteracy ranges from 39.8 in McKinley to 4.2 in Chaves county.

GOLDEN WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

The following account of the Golden Wedding Anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Ed. R. Kelley, will be of interest to their many Carrizozo friends. We are clipping from the Caldwell, Idaho Tribune, which says in substance:

Last Sunday the home of Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Gilbert was the scene of a very pretty and happy occasion. The day was chosen by the members of the family of Mr. and Mrs. Ed. R. Kelley to celebrate three anniversaries—the golden wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Kelley and their birthday anniversaries.

Fifty years ago in 1871, Edwin R. Kelley and Miss Mary Addie Goen were married. They were living then in Grandview, Texas. After living in Texas several years they moved to New Mexico. Seven children grew to manhood and womanhood in that state, three sons and four daughters. One son still resides there and is associated with his father in business. Two sons are living in California and the four daughters, Mrs. J. W. Harling, Mrs. Fred Rogers, Mrs. L. K. McNeill and Mrs. Clyde Gilbert, are all residents of this place.

The Gilbert home, as well as the lawn surrounding it was gay with golden decorations—the fall flowers lending all their beauty to the making of every nook lovely.

Just before luncheon, which was served cafeteria style on the lawn, Mildred Wilson, great granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kelley, presented the guests of honor, with an enormous golden colored gift basket filled to overflowing with gifts. Little Mildred, dressed in yellow, and bearing her pretty burden was a pleasing sight indeed.

After luncheon, which was enjoyed by 30 relatives, the afternoon was spent in entertaining friends.

THE COPPER SITUATION IMPROVING

The general prosperity of New Mexico and to a somewhat larger degree that of Arizona depends upon the copper market.

The largest volume of copper mining in the west is in Arizona, but New Mexico has some large copper properties in the western part of the state. Also, New Mexico furnishes large volumes of coke and coal and mining timbers when the mines are working. With a large sawmill in operation in Alamogordo to a considerable degree its success depends upon the market for its products at the copper mines of Arizona and New Mexico. The large copper mines of these two states closed down a few months ago on account of the low price and slight demand for copper. As to when the mines will open will naturally depend upon when the world at home and abroad begins to use large quantities of copper again.

The following recent review of the copper market is naturally of considerable local interest:

Reviewing conditions in the copper mining industry in the Great Lakes region, the Detroit News says:

"Notwithstanding the fact that the Copper Export association in a large measure controls metal business with Europe, there appears to be no one associated with the industry who can state with positiveness when the mines will resume. The general assumption is that there will be no great revival before spring, but the same authorities who venture this statement admit that the whole situation can change in 30 days and the entire surplus could disappear in two months. In any event production is at the lowest ebb in history, approximately 18,000,000 pounds being placed on the market a month while sales are in the neighborhood of 60,000,000 pounds a month. At this rate a year will elapse before the surplus is obliterated. Still if production is not resumed before the surplus is absorbed there will be a shortage and this should bring about the greatest boom the copper mines ever have enjoyed.

The copper mines ever have enjoyed. (Hope for great improvement in the industry within six months was expressed here by J. Parke Channing, New York, president of the Miami Copper company of Miami, Ariz., and the Seneca Copper corporation of Michigan, who is here inspecting the mines. "Curtailment, the only remedy that could revive the industry, is showing the effects," said Mr. Channing. "From a normal output of 100,000,000 pounds produced in the United States a month, the curtailment process has reduced production to 18,000,000 pounds, and the surplus is coming down appreciably. Consumers will awaken at no distant date to the fact that not more than six months supply is on hand and this will make for a shortage, for ordinarily 400,000,000 pounds of copper are in progress from the mouth of the mine to the docks in the form of refined copper. This means four months' output is constantly moving to meet a normal demand. There may be a very great increase in domestic business for a half year, but within that time Europe will be in a position to take our copper, both what it needs for ordinary manufacturing purposes and for replacement. Then there will be a scramble among domestic consumers and there will be no copper available."

FAMILY MAY HAVE 200 GALLONS WINE A YEAR FOR HOME USE, IS ANNOUNCED

Washington, D. C., Sept. 15.—Internal revenue bureau officials frankly acknowledged today that head of families, may, upon filing of notification with local revenue collectors manufacture 200 gallons of wine yearly for home use.

Treasury regulations making effective such a provision of the law, were issued by Internal Revenue Commissioner Roper with the approval of Secretary McAdoo in October, 1918.

Manufacture of wine at home, is possible, officials pointed out, provided the manufacture is by the head of a family and the wine produced be not sold or otherwise removed from the place of manufacture.

Founder of Exchange Bank Passes Away

Jefferson Reynolds, who founded the Exchange Bank at White Oaks in 1892, with Judge Hewitt, Geo. L. Ulrick, F. J. Sager and other stockholders, died in El Paso on Monday of this week. For 35 years the deceased was a partner to Mr. Ulrick. He was a brother to Joshua Reynolds, president of the First National Bank of El Paso and had two sons employed in the same bank. Funeral services were held in Las Vegas, Wednesday, Mr. Ulrick leaving on No. 2, Tuesday morning to attend the same.

BURSUM'S MAJORITY NOW OVER 7,000

With returns from counties giving democratic majorities practically complete, and with a number of large precincts in the larger republican counties still to report, the majority of Senator H. O. Bursum in Tuesday's election showed on the face of the returns at more than 7,000 with a probability that missing precincts would materially increase it. This county gave Bursum a majority of 250 as near as it can be ascertained.

GRAPE JUICE FIENDS ROB TRANSFER & STORAGE CO.

The first breaking and entering that occurred since City Marshal Anton Vega has been on the job, happened last Sunday night, but fortunately the thieves got away with but a few bottles of grape juice and some near-beer. This, even, would not have happened, had it not been that the officer's horse was crippled and it seems that the thieves knew of this. They turned off several of the city lights to attract his attention away from the place of the robbery and before he could make his round, the damage, small though it was, was accomplished. Mr. Vega has made a good marshal and his vigilance with the aid of his horse, will keep down petty crimes such as happened often, before his being on the beat.

PICNIC OF THE STARS

Last Saturday, Comet Chapter, No. 23, Order of Eastern Star, gave a delightful picnic at the Bar W ranch north of the city. At 10 o'clock, the members of the lodge met at Masonic Hall and headed by the committees in charge of affairs, were the first to depart for the grounds.

The remaining members and their friends who could not depart with the main portion, followed and at 12 o'clock one of the finest spreads was laid that has been set before guests at any event in this city. Before the throng began the feast, E. F. Woodruff, leader of the singing at the Baptist Church revival, who is an enthusiastic Mason and also a member of the Eastern Star, invoked the divine blessing on the occasion and on the order in general, after which Masons in particular, will testify that STARS surpass all others in serving and as general entertainers.

The day was an ideal one; not a cloud appeared to mar the festivities planned by those who had "Seen HIS Star in the EAST," consequently, the event was successful in the extreme. There was not only an abundance of good things to tempt the palates of the guests, but there was an ample amount left, which the STARS reserved and sent to the Masonic Hall for the meeting of the Masonic Lodge Saturday night and the same was partaken of by tired Masons after WORK in exemplifying degrees on 4 candidates. Much credit is due the committees which made the picnic such a grand success and Masons wish to "Thank Their Stars" for their courteous entertainment, both at the picnic and at the luncheon after the evening meeting.

MEXICAN INDEPENDENCE DAY CELEBRATION

Last Thursday and Friday, Mexican independence was celebrated here with merry-making of all kinds by the Mexican population and those from surrounding towns and districts. Friday morning, a parade was staged in which many floats nicely decorated made a tour of the principal streets accompanied by a band from El Paso. In the evening, speaking, dancing and refreshments were had at a pavillion erected on the east side of the track, attended by large crowds. At 11:30, Senator Heim O. Bursum spoke to the large audience with Demostri Perea as interpreter. There was nothing political connected with his speech, but he was confined to the liberties and privileges we enjoy under the American flag and commended the promoters on their mother country. The affair closed Friday night. The committee are to be congratulated on the manner in which the event was handled, the best of order prevailing throughout the entire time and the celebration highly successful.

WHITE OAKS ITEMS

Mrs. Chris Schale and her younger children are visiting Mrs. Wayne Van Schoeyck.

Mrs. Chas. Spence was called to Carroll, Iowa, by the illness of her father.

The high school girls are organizing a Basketball team and will contest with other teams of the county.

A very pleasant evening was spent at the home of Mrs. Leighe, honoring Mrs. Mabel Eberhardt her niece of Douglas, Arizona. Dinner was served to Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Hannar and Mr. Jessie Vandervert, and later Mrs. Barber, Mr. and Mrs. Bradley and Judge Hewitt were added to the number. The evening was spent in talking of old times. Mrs. Eberhardt will probably leave for her home the latter part of the week. We regret that we cannot have her with us longer.

MASONS MEET

Carrizozo Lodge No. 41, A. F. & A. M., held a meeting last Saturday night that was well attended by local and visiting members. Four candidates were initiated in the second degree and one responded to call for the first. After the initiatory ceremonies, refreshments were served. As the fall season approaches, Masonic work will also increase. There is plenty in sight at the present time.

CARRIZOZO SCHOOL NOTES

(By Supt. E. E. Cole)

Friday morning of last week the high school had the pleasure of a visit from Rev. Vermillion and Mr. Woodruff, the evangelist and the singer at the Baptist church. Mr. Woodruff had the high school sing the chorus of "There's A Long, Long Trail," followed by "America." Rev. Vermillion then addressed the students. He said, in substance: "You are a value or a detriment to society according to your life. So live as to bless your fellow men and make the world better. Properly relate yourself to God. Make your life count in the community. You are valuable to the world as you train yourself for service."

The girls of the seventh grade have organized a sewing club which meets Saturdays with Mrs. Nellie Clark, the teacher of the seventh grade, as leader. The name of the club is "The Busy Bees." They meet next Saturday afternoon with Louise Sweet.

The "Camp Fire Girls" have organized for the new year with Misses Herron and Fordson as "Guardians." This is a very fine organization of girls only, with the highest ideals, and their club last year realized the very best results.

The flag pole has been repaired and now "Old Glory" floats aloft every day of the year, unless the weather is too bad.

The "Boy Scouts" met at the school house last Thursday night. Three of the members became "Tenderfoot Scouts" by examination. This requires that the candidate know the "Scout" law, sign, salute, and the significance of the badge, the composition and history of the flag and the respect due the flag.

With the proceeds of the Class Play of last year, a fine large bas relief of "The Spirit of '76" has been purchased. The piece has just been received from Caproni Brothers, of Boston, and will be formally presented to the high school visitors' day, Oct. 5. The public is cordially invited to be present. The program will commence at 3:30 and will be as follows:

America..... High School Presentation..... Lillian Merchant Acceptance..... Horndon Rolly The Star Spangled Banner, High School The next "Visitors' Day" is Wednesday, October 6th.

GIANT GYROSCOPES STABILIZE OCEAN LINERS

Many a dizzy and distracted transatlantic passenger who has hung feverishly to the banisters when the good ship rolled in the trough of the sea has prayed fervently from the bottom of his well-shaken heart that said good ship would meekly tie up to come about hitching post in mid-ocean and let him sip his evening soup in peace. His fervent prayer has been answered.

The theory of the modern ship stabilizer calls into play the characteristic of the rapidly whirling gyroscope to maintain its axis of spin or plane of rotation rigidly in any direction.

When the powerful action of the waves tends to roll the ship, the spinning gyroscope, being dislodged from its vertical plane of rotation, at once opposes this rolling action by an equal force. The big wheel tilts in the proper direction, fore or aft, in a plane at right angles to the disturbance. Practically all of the power used to stabilize the vessel comes from the very waves that are creating the disturbance. In other words, the vessel is ultimately stabilized by the very force that tries to roll it.

The gyroscope, which furnishes the reactional power, consists of a cast-iron wheel or rotor, mounted in suitable bearings to carry its reaction through the steel casing and gudgeons to the vessel. In all experiments, with the exception of those of the largest battleships, one wheel mounted with vertical axis was sufficient to control the motion of the vessel.

The gyro wheel is run by a simple alternating current, squirrel-cage motor, with no brushes or slip rings. For the high rate of speed at which the wheel travels, a considerable supply of oil is necessary. This is automatically maintained at the proper flow by a gear pump connected to the rotor shaft.

The elimination of wallowing results in a considerable saving in power and fuel, for the greater percentage of force required to drive a vessel through the water is consumed in pushing aside the tons of water the friction of this water against the wetted surfaces of the vessel. It has been computed that in a high sea a 15,000-ton vessel at 20 miles an hour would lose 1,000 hp. or over four times the power required by a stabilizer to prevent this loss.

"BACK TO THE FARM" MOVEMENT

In the opinion of Hardy W. Campbell, agricultural expert for the Southern Pacific Railway Co., a general "Back to the Farm Movement" would provide a wholesome remedy for the problems of unemployment now in evidence throughout the country. Mr. Hardy says:

"There are hundreds of thousands of acres of semi-arid lands in this Great West, which if properly farmed would provide a livelihood for a vast population. My experience has ranged over many years in all parts of the West from Nebraska and Kansas to the Pacific Slope and I know that good production can be obtained from land where there is but slight rainfall and where as a matter of fact many farmers have met disaster through the lack of proper knowledge as to the proper course to pursue in preparing these lands and putting in their crops.

"The chief trouble in many instances of crop failure is that the ranchers who lost out lacked the knowledge as to how to handle their land, and in this connection I sincerely hope that many farmers will take advantage of the Farmers' Short Courses offered by the University of California. 'Knowledge is Power' and if the acreage lying idle in this state and other western states were farmed according to scientific teachings practically applied, this country would receive a great impetus toward prosperity.

"I believe that better crops can be obtained by better preparation of the seed bed, drilling instead of sowing in the case of wheat, and similar crops, and proper cultivation. In the case of wheat and other cereal crops I have found that the general practice has been to use too much seed. By using a smaller quantity of seed and different methods of preparing the land good crops of wheat and barley have been grown by various ranchers under my direction in Kern and Riverside counties and Northern California, in Nevada and in other sections along the Southern Pacific lines, where neighboring ranchers had crop failures, on account of light rainfall.

"With a large amount of semi-arid land available at low prices, it would seem to me that if the men would learn the right way of procedure and go back on the land, many of our problems would be solved.

"I believe the business men of the country fail to realize the wonderful possibilities of these lands. If they would cooperate to aid this movement to the land they would in the end benefit as well as those whom they assist."

DOES IT PAY TO RAISE RUNTS QUERY PUT TO MANY FARMERS

A questionnaire survey conducted among 1,000 leading farmers and breeders by the United States Department of Agriculture indicates that about 7 per cent of the annual production of farm live-stock in the United States consists of runts and undersized specimens of the various breeds and classes. Farmers report that their annual incomes from live stock would be increased an average of 13 per cent if runts could be eliminated. Better methods of feeding and breeding better stock, the use of purebred registered sires, good care and systematic attention, better housing and sanitation, proper care of the dam before the birth of young, practical control of such objectionable parasites as worms and lice, the control of disease, and the culling from the farm of all stunted stock which indicates no possibilities of successful reformation and rehabilitation are the control methods recommended by these experienced farmers. About three-quarters of them say that it does not pay to raise runts, while the balance maintain that the Tom Thumb of the livestock world can be raised successfully only when well bred and when plenty of cheap feed is available. Dependable markets are readily accessible.

BABE IS SHOT.

Synopsis:—Young Carlyle Wilburton Dale, or "Bill Dale," as he is known, son of a wealthy coal operator, John K. Dale, arrives at the Halfway Switch, in eastern Tennessee, abandoning a life of idle ease—and incidentally a bride, Patricia Clavering, at the altar—determined to make his own way in life. He meets "Babe" Littleford, typical mountaineer girl. "By" Hack, a character of the hills, takes him to John Moreland's home. Moreland is chief of his "clan," which has an old feud with the Littlefords. He tells Dale of the killing of his brother, David Moreland, years ago, owner of rich coal deposits, by a man named Carlyle. Moreland's description of "Carlyle" causes Dale to believe the man was his father. Dale arranges to make his home with the Moreland family. Talking with "Babe" Littleford next day, Dale is ordered by "Black Adam" Ball, bully of the district, to leave "his girl" alone. Dale replies spiritedly, and they fight. Dale whips the bully though badly used up. He arranges with John Moreland to develop David's coal deposits. Ben Littleford sends a challenge to John Moreland to meet him with his followers next day, in battle. Moreland agrees. During the night all the guns belonging to the Littlefords and the Morelands mysteriously disappear. Dale arranges to go to Chattanooga to secure money for the mining of the coal. The two clans find their weapons, which the women had hidden, and line up for battle. A Littleford fires the first shot.

CHAPTER V—Continued.

Then came a puff of white smoke and a report from one of the Moreland rifles, then shots from both sides and the battle was on. Dale heard the nasty whine of a bullet in full flight. He heard the coarse "azz" of a half spent ratchet. He knew that he was in some danger now, and he was surprised to find that he was not frightened.

When he halted again it was on his knees behind the big white sycamore that sheltered John Moreland.

"Hack, are ye?" frowned the mountaineer. And with the grimmest humor I reckon ye had a fine, large time in Chubby's Yore friend Harri was well. I hope 'til that money from him?"

"But that out, said Bill Dale. "It doesn't get us anywhere. A bullet threw particles of sycamore bark to his face, interrupting. John Moreland pointed to a green furrow in the side of the tree.

"Ben Littleford himself," said Moreland. "He's afraid of that water oak across that 'bout stick yore head out."

The mountaineer turned his gaze over Dale's shoulder and his countenance seemed to freeze. Dale looked around quickly and saw Babe Littleford less than ten feet behind him. She had crept up through the tall grasses and weeds. In one hand she carried a white flag made of a man's handkerchief and a willow switch. She halted and sat up.

"Babe," Dale cried out. "What are you doing here?"

"Babe gave him a pale smile. "I paid about me a thinkin' I was a Moreland mebbe 't'd stop the ever lastin' fightin'," she said.

John Moreland stared, and Bill Dale stared. They were in a Presence and they knew it. Babe went on.

"I've come to save all o' yore lives, but if I do it ye'll haf to make yore men quit a fightin' right now. Jest or der em to stop a shootin', and hold up this here. And I promise ye on a Littleford's word at papil call ye a better man an him cause ye done it."

She tossed the white flag to him. "The ain't no time to lose. John Moreland hold up the flag. If ye don't, ye'll every one be killed, cause ye're every one in a trap."

"I don't believe ye, Babe," snapped the Moreland chief. "Yore people can hold up a white rag just as well as we can!"

"Babe went paler. There was a sudden burst of firing from the Moreland rifles, and she crept a little nearer to John Moreland in order that he might hear plainly that which she had to tell him next.

"I'm a goin' to tell ye o' this danger," she said, "and trust to yore bell's own enough to do what I axed ye to. Black Adam Ball, he's got a new-fashioned rifle and smokeless cartridges and steel bullets; and in a few minutes he'll be hid in a cleft o' cassinfras back thar in yore meadow, whar he means to set and pick off yore Morelands one by one—and you and Bill Dale fast. 'Count o' the beatin' you two put on thar—but say that you want to do with it. I've saved all o' yore lives, 'cause ye couldn't ha' heard the sound o' his rifle in all o' this noise; and ye couldn't ha' seen the smoke o' his gun, 'cause it don't make no smoke. Hold up the white flag, John Moreland—hurry!"

Babe thoughtlessly arose to her feet, and one side of her brown head appeared before the sights of her father's rifle—her father fired quickly, too quickly for a perfect aim—the bullet hit—

...across her temple and through her hair, and she crumpled at Bill Dale's knees, totally unconscious. Dale gave a hoarse cry and gathered her limp figure into his arms. John Moreland waved aloft the white handkerchief and bellowed to his kinsmen to stop firing. Then silence came.

"Come over here, Ben Littleford!" shouted John Moreland. "Ye've shot yore own gyral!"

And to his brother Abner, whose right forearm was wrapped in a blood-stained blue bandana:

"Black Adam is hid someweres in this meadow; go and ketch him, and don't take no chaut with him. Shoot him like a dawg ef he tries to trick ye!"

A dozen men ran to look for the would-be sniper. The Littlefords, still armed, came dashing across the river. Ben Littleford throw down his rifle and knelt beside his daughter; he wrung his big hands and cursed the day that had seen him born.

Dale held her close. His face was as white as hers, and his eyes were flaming.

"Why don't you shoot all your women-folk?" he said to the Littleford chief, and every word cut like a knife. "It's by far the simplest way; it's merciful, y'know. See, she isn't breaking her heart over your murderous fighting now. No, keep your hands away—Sew're not fit to touch her!"

They brought water and wet the young woman's face, and bathed the red streak across her temples. They did all they knew how to do to bring her back to consciousness. But, except for her beating pulse and her breathing, she remained as one dead. Hours passed, leaden hours, and her condition was unchanged.

Dale beckoned to John Moreland, who had just returned from having seen Adam Ball caught, disarmed, and imprisoned in an old tobacco barn. Moreland hastened to Dale, the new master.

"When does the next south-bound train pass the Halfway switch?" Dale wanted to know.

Moreland looked toward the sun. "We could make it, all right, but it's a fast train and it don't never stop at the switch."

"Then we'll hold it up," declared the new master in a voice of iron. "This is a case for a surgeon. Get a blanket and two poles and make a litter."

John Moreland hastened away obediently. Dale turned to Ben Littleford, who sat in a motionless heap beside the still figure of his daughter.

"It was only a few hours ago," he said accusingly, "that this poor girl told me she'd be glad to give her life to stop your fighting, and now, perhaps, she's done it! You're a brute, Littleford. I like to fight, myself, but not when it costs women anything."

The conscience-stricken hillman gave no sign that he had heard. There was silence save for the low murmur of the river and the tragic song of a bird somewhere in the branches of the big white sycamore.

CHAPTER VI.

Back Home.

Every mother's son of the fountlains was numbered in the party that fled across David Moreland's mountain to intercept the next south-bound train. The old enemy was for the time being forgotten. Members of one clan rubbed elbows with members of the other clan, and thought nothing of it. John Moreland himself carried one end of the crude litter that held the limp form of Babe Littleford; Bill Dale carried the other end.

Close behind the litter walked Babe's father, seeming old and broken with remorse for the thing he had done. The grief of Ben Littleford was touching now, and Dale was a little sorry that he had spoken so bitterly to him. They reached the Halfway switch ten minutes before the arrival of the fast mail. A short passenger train was on the long siding, waiting for the south-bound to pass. Dale gave his end of the litter to Caleb Moreland, and strode up to the locomotive. The engineer sat quietly smoking in his cab.

Dale wanted the fast mail stopped, and gave his reasons.

The engineer smoked and considered. It was against rules. Dale swore at rules. The engineer said he would see the conductor. He did, and the conductor stepped to the ground and began to consider.

"Better put her on my train," he said finally, "and take her to Barton's station. There's a good doctor at Barton's."

"But this is a case for a surgeon," impatiently interrupted Bill Dale.

They disagreed. The old traluman was a close friend of the doctor at Barton's station. What was the difference between a doctor and a surgeon, anyway?

Dale became angry. "You'll stop the fast mail for us," he snapped, "or we'll take your d—d red flag and hold her up long enough to put the girl aboard, and you've got only half a second to decide which!"

The conductor was obdurate. The mountain men were too hot-headed to bear with him longer. The positions of a dozen rifles underwent a sudden change. The conductor immediately went pale and mentioned the law—but he agreed to stop the south-bound.

As he ordered his flagman up the tracks, the sound of the fast train's whistle came to their ears.

The fier came to a screeching halt with sparks streaming from its wheels. Bill Dale and John Moreland passed the litter and its burden into the baggage car and followed it hastily, and Ben Littleford climbed in after them. John Moreland leaned out of the doorway and ordered his son Luke to pass him his rifle, and Luke obeyed promptly.

There was a shriek from the whistle, and the brakes were released; the train began to gather momentum. A baggageman approached John Moreland and asked why the rifle, Moreland half closed one keen grey eye and patted the walnut stock of his repeater.

"Oh, I jest brought it along to see at everybody has a straight deal," he drawled—"go on about yore business, minter."

The baggageman went about his business. The conductor of the fast train was very unlike the conductor of the north-bound. When he had learned something of the circumstances, he insisted that Dale had done exactly the right thing. He would see whether there was a doctor aboard.

Within five more minutes he returned in company with an elderly man wearing a pointed beard and nose glasses.

"Doctor McKenzie," he said politely. "Mr. —"

"Dale."

The two nodded, and the physician knelt beside the litter, which had been placed with its ends on boxes to allow the center to swing free. He made as though an examination as was possible under the conditions, then arose and stood looking down upon the young woman with something like admiration in his sober, professional eyes.

"Perfect physique," he said as though to himself. "She will have to undergo an operation," he told Dale. "The bone there is broken in slightly, making a compression; she will doubtless be unconscious until the pressure is relieved. But she has the chances for a quick and entire recovery, with a good surgeon on the job, so there's not much ground for worry."

Dale was glad. They were all glad. Ben Littleford laughed nervously in his sudden joy. He went down to his knees beside his daughter, took up one of her limp hands and stroked it in a way that was pitiful.

When he arose he spoke cordially to Moreland. But Moreland didn't reply. He still looked upon his old enemy with contempt.

Doctor McKenzie was leaving the train at the next town of importance, and he would wire Doctor Braemer to meet them with an ambulance, it Dale wished.

"If you please," said Dale.

They reached the city shortly before midnight, and were promptly met by the surgeon. Braemer took charge of the patient, put her into his ambulance, and hurried her to his private hospital. Bill Dale and the two clan chiefs followed in an automobile. The hillman had never before seen an automobile; but they asked no questions about it, and the only word of comment was this, from John Moreland: "I don't like the smell."

Everything had been made ready for the operation, and Babe received surgical aid without delay.

The two mountaineers and Dale waited in another room. Dale had induced John Moreland to unoad his rifle, both chamber and magazine. Babe's father paced the floor anxiously now and then. Moreland sat like a stone, with his empty rifle between his knees, and watched his old enemy, queerly.

It seemed a long time before Braemer came to them and told them smilingly that it was all over and that the girl was then coming from under the effects of the ether. She would be all right soon, he was reasonably certain. No, they'd better not see her just then. But perhaps they could see her at some time during the afternoon of the following day.

Dale escorted his two companions to a modest hotel and then put them in a room that had but one bed; by thus throwing them together in a strange land, he hoped to do something toward making them friends.

Then Dale went to another room, undressed and went to bed.

It may be noted, parenthetically as it were, that John Moreland and Ben Littleford quickly reached a wordless agreement not to sleep together—they divided the pillows and linens evenly, tore the odd coverlet exactly in half, and slept on the floor.

When Dale went down to the lobby the following morning an alert-eyed young fellow sprang from a chair and hastened up to him.

"By George, Bobby!" Dale exclaimed, as they began to shake hands. "How did you know I was here, anyway? Your boasted nose for news, eh?"

"Guilty," smiled McLaurin. "I got word last night that a mountain girl had been brought to Braemer's, accidentally shot, and I smelted a feud; so I hurried over to get the story. You had just left, and Braemer's didn't know much about it. It was too soon after the operation, they said, for her to see me; then one of the nurses whispered to me that you had brought her, and said that I would find you here. No here I am, Bill, and I want the story. I'll phone it in, and then I'll give you some news."

"The story wasn't to be published, Bobby," Dale replied. "For one reason, there is a feud; and if the law knew, it might take a hand—you see, I think there is a better way to take care of that feud. And I am of the opinion that the girl wouldn't like the publicity. Suppose you forget all about it, Bobby."

If McLaurin was disappointed, he kept it well to himself.

"They said she was handsome, a sort of primitive Venus," he winked. "Is there a romance connected, Bill?"

"Not yet," smiled Dale.

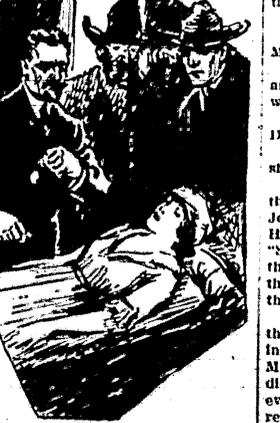

"But soon?"

"Who can tell?" Dale shrugged a little. "Tell me the news."

"All right," McLaurin drew his friend toward a pair of empty chairs. "I married Patricia (Clavering the day before yesterday. We—"

"Bully! Go on."

"We were married in an automobile, with her father and 'poor dear Harry' chasing us like wildfire in another car. Yesterday we went to housekeeping in a cute little suburban bungalow, furniture on the installment plan. Her people won't even look at us, Bill! But do we care? Bill Dale, I ask you, old dear, do I seem to be worrying? Honest, I'm so happy I'm afraid something is going to happen to me. I'm to have a lift in salary soon, and we won't be long in paying for the furniture; and when that's done, we'll buy the bungalow.

"Perfect Physique," He Said, as Though to Himself.

"And I'm informing you now, old savage," he continued, "that you're having dinner with us this evening. You'll find it pleasant. We do as we please, you see. If you like, you may stir your coffee with your finger; eat with your knife, reach clean across the table, and pick your teeth with your fork. You can eat with your hat on, and you may have your dessert first. You can have an extra chair for your feet, and you can go to sleep at the table. Don't fail us. Pat wants to thank you for 'casting her aside' at the altar."

Dale laughed boyishly. McLaurin went on:

"There's more news. Your father has been trying hard to find you. He sent a man to Atlanta to look for you. He told me he'd give me a house and lot if I'd find you—and if there was a little more of the highway robber in me, I'd call his hand!"

"And mother—have you seen her?" Dale muttered.

"I've seen her twice since the near-wedding."

"Did she have anything to say about me? Tell me the whole truth, Bobby. I can take it, old man. I'm big enough."

McLaurin frowned. "Since you've asked me, Bill, your mother—I overheard her telling your father that she would never forgive you for the 'utterly shameful, disgraceful scene' you made in church."

"I see," said Dale. He brightened and went on. "As soon as I can get my two friends down to the dining room, Bobby, you're going with me to father. We're going to claim that house and lot for you."

"For Patricia's sake, I've a thundering big notion to take you up," laughed McLaurin. "Your dad would never miss it."

"That's it—take me up for Pat's sake," said Dale, rising. "You'd be foolish if you didn't. You should be willing to do anything, almost, for Pat. She's a jewel, Bobby."

Half an hour later they caught a passing car that soon carried them to a palace of granite and stone and cream-colored brick—the home of the old coal king, John K. Dale.

At the wide front gateway young Dale drew back.

"Bring father out here," he said in a low voice. "From what you told me, I guess mother wouldn't want me to come in. But you can find out about that—"

He hoped his mother would want to see him. While she had never seemed to care for him as other mothers care for their boys; while she hadn't been quite so dear to him as she might have been—

"And if she wants to see me, Bobby, let me know."

McLaurin smiled a somewhat worried smile, and went up to the front door. A moment later he was shown in. Yet another moment, and John K. Dale, his florid face beaming with gladness, hastened out to the gateway. Young Dale was instantly touched by his father's new attitude toward him; then he remembered the long night of David Moreland's people, and he stiffened a little and drew back a pace.

"You've come home to stay, haven't you, Carlyle?" said the older man, and his voice was filled with pleading. "What you did is all right; we'll never mention it again. You'll stay, won't you, Carlyle, my boy?"

"No," answered the son, a trifle coldly in spite of himself. "I've spent all the idle, useless years I'll ever spend. I'm getting ready to develop the coal in David Moreland's mountain."

"David—Moreland's—mountain?" The retired coal magnate breathed the three words in a husky tone. He put forth a hand and rested it against one of the huge stone gateposts, as though to steady himself, and some of the color went from his face.

"You say David Moreland's mountain, Carlyle?" jerkily.

"Yes."

"And you—you learned about David Moreland?"

"Yes," Bill Dale folded his arms and stood there looking at his father with eyes that accused.

"You know who killed him?" old Dale muttered.

"I do, and it was a shame—a black shame."

"Yes, it was a shame. Nobody knows that half so well as I know it," said John K. Dale. His mouth quivered. He looked downward, looked up again. "Son, you can never say or think worse things about me than I have said and thought about myself—because of that."

Dale the younger glanced toward the house. Robert McLaurin was coming slowly down the veranda steps. Mrs. Dale was nowhere in sight. "She didn't want to see her son; she didn't even want him in the house. Bill Dale read it all in his friend's downcast countenance, and it was somehow a great disappointment.

"You'll need money if you're going to develop that coal property," Dale the elder was saying. "You haven't any money, and those mountain folk haven't any. I'll give you all that's needed, I'll send you mining machinery, and expert mining men; I'll—"

She turned her face the other way. "I was so loquacious, Bill Dale."

THIS YOUNG MOTHER

Tells Childless Women What Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Did for Her

Millston, Wis.—"I want to give you a word of praise for your wonderful medicine. We are very fond of children and for a considerable time after we married I feared I would not have any owing to my weak condition. I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and now I have a nice, strong, healthy baby girl. I can honestly say that I did not suffer much more when my baby was born than I used to suffer with my periods before I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound years ago. I give all the credit to your medicine and shall always recommend it very highly."—Mrs. H. H. JANSSEN, Millston, Wisconsin.

How can women who are weak and sickly expect or hope to become mothers of healthy children? Their first duty is to themselves. They should overcome the derangement or debility that is dragging them down, and strengthen the entire system, as did Mrs. Janssen, by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and then their children will be in a position to give their children the blessing of a good constitution.

Hygienic Dish-Washing.

The hygienic importance of electric dish-washing has been shown in a report by Surgeon J. G. Cummings of the United States Army. Investigating the effects of the influenza epidemic in institutions having a quarter of a million people, it was found that where dishes were washed by hand there were 324 cases of the disease per 1,000 persons; but in hotels and other places having electric dish-washers the rate was only one-third as great, or 103 per 1,000. The washing by the machines is not only more thorough than hand washing, but hotter water is used, and this insures more effective sterilization.

A Feeling of Security

You naturally feel secure when you know that the medicine you are about to take is absolutely pure and contains no harmful or habit producing drugs.

Such a medicine is Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, kidney, liver and bladder remedy. The same standard of purity, strength and excellence is maintained in every bottle of Swamp-Root.

It is scientifically compounded from vegetable herbs. It is not a stimulant and is taken in teaspoonful doses. It is not recommended for everything. It is nature's great helper in relieving and overcoming kidney, liver and bladder troubles.

A sworn statement of purity is with every bottle of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root.

If you need a medicine, you should have the best. On sale at all drug stores in bottles of two sizes, medium and large. However, if you wish first to try this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper—Advertisement.

Would Signal Correct Time.

A dimming of electric lights each night at eight o'clock as a national time signal is being urged as a measure that will distribute the correct time regularly to all who are within sight of an electric light. In the same way that the time ball is dropped down the staff at noon and clocks are regulated by telegraphic or radio signals from the naval observatory in Washington, it is suggested that power plants regularly flash the correct time daily over their electrical systems.

SUN AND MOON.

"I got a message the other day," said Mr. Sun, smiling brightly, "and it pleased me so much.

"The message was sent to me by Special Air Delivery and it was addressed to me. My street address and home place address were also on the message, for it was addressed to me at Shining Street, the Universe.

"In the message I read such cheering words. The message was sent to me by the Health and Happiness Institute, and it was asked that I should answer the message, which I have since done.

"The message read as follows: 'We have heard so many reports and received so many accounts of your good work in increasing health and happiness. We have been told you are a very great doctor. We feel sure that we may always count on you in the future to help us, too. We cannot very well pay you for your work, as you are so far away and have no need for our money, but may we pay for your work with our smiles?'

"Well, I sent back a message, that they would always be able to count on me to help them, and that I couldn't ask for more than their smiles as payment."

As Mr. Sun was talking Mr. Moon came up.

"Hello, Mr. Sun; going to bed soon, eh?"

"Very soon," said Mr. Sun. "By the way," said Mr. Moon, "I heard you talking of the message you received, and I want to tell you of the one I received, too. It was very cheering and pleasant. You will stay a moment while I tell you, won't you?"

"Indeed, yes," said Mr. Sun; "though I will have to be on my way soon. We can't talk together for very long at a time ever, and sometimes not at all; quite often not at all.

"But pray tell me of your message. How nice it has been to receive a message, hasn't it? I'm sure your message was nice, too, for you have said it was cheering and pleasant. So it must have been nice."

"It was an extremely nice message," said Mr. Moon, "and I will tell you about it at once.

"My message was addressed to me as The Moon. Then it was sent to my street address of Starlit Way and my home town address—or home residence address—of The Sky.

"The message was as follows: 'You've done great service in shedding beauty and pleasure. Your greatest work has been to give to men and women and boys and girls a beautiful light which is full of lovely fairy-land romance and love and all things beautiful. You've taken the leading part in the great play called Love, for it is love that makes a difference in the world.

"Without love where would we all be? Mothers and Daddies would be sad, children would be very miserable, and even dogs would run about slowly and their tails would not wag.

"We must have love in the world, and you are Love's Lantern. Will you always take that part?"

"The message was signed by the members of the Love Committee. Grow-ups, Children, Animals, the World," ended Mr. Moon.

"Of course," he continued, after a moment, "I sent them a message, and told them they could always depend upon me. I suppose you sent back a message like that, too, eh, Mr. Sun?"

"I did," said Mr. Sun. "That was the sort of message I sent back."

"But, Mr. Moon, I must go to bed now, for I am very sleepy. And, besides, my bedtime has come. I can't sit up beyond my bedtime. It's not the right thing for the Sun to do at all.

"Good-night, Mr. Moon."

"Good-night, Mr. Sun; pleasant dreams."

"Thank you, thank you," said Mr. Sun, "and may you have a nice evening, looking down over the world."

"I'll have a nice evening, never fear," said Mr. Moon. "The world is a pretty nice place to look down upon; a pretty nice spot, it is!"

"It is," smiled Mr. Sun. "It is," he ended as he went behind his bedroom hill.

IS POOR BARGAIN

Foolish Indeed for Man to Sell Himself to Evil.

Many Have Done It Unconsciously, and Their Reward Has Always Been Exceedingly Small.

More than one writer has been fascinated by the idea of selling one's soul to the devil. Indeed, that thought has served as the basis of many a poem and plot.

The idea is that of a man bargaining his soul to Satan for all eternity on condition that for a limited period he may enjoy all possible pleasure. The thought is most familiar, perhaps, in the tragedy of Faust; but that was neither the beginning nor the end of it.

You may find the idea in the "Arabian Nights," and no one knows how old those roots of the literature may be. Balzac, in "The Magic Skin" portrayed Oscar Wilde had the essential idea in "Dorian Gray." Stevenson had it in his "Doctor Jekyll and Mr. Hyde."

All these authors were honest enough to show that, in the end, the game was not worth the candle. Imagine the terror of the possessor of all the wishes of the "Magic Skin" as he realized that with every wish the skin shrank, and its power of sensual gratification lessened!

How many times, as his pleasures began to pall upon him, must Faust have regretted his bargain!

If there is any justification of the exploitation of the idea of a bargain with the devil, either in the opera of Faust or in a novel or in the movies, it is the plain lesson at the end that the sort of bargain which the devil offers does not pay.

But there is one mistake which men often make with regard to this matter, which is in supposing that this is the real way in which the thing is done.

As a matter of fact, men sell themselves unconsciously and for very much less than the devil is supposed to offer in any of these works of fiction.

Read the story of the next scandal with murder following it, and find, if you are curious, when the bargain with the devil was made and in what sort the devil paid.

For the devil pays. Judas got his 30 pieces of silver; Faust had Marguerite.

But the devil is even more prompt in his collections.

If you do not believe it, read the Bible or the daily papers.

The reward of sin is death. The devil gets his due.

But how little does the man get who sells his soul to the devil!—Dr. William E. Barton in the Chicago Post.

Koreans Flock to Holy Place.

Kelyong, the lonely mountain of Korea, is experiencing a real estate boom that makes the oil-town promoter pale into insignificance. On a tiny piece of land on the mountain side are now encamped 2,502 persons forming 518 households, while hundreds more are gathered at the base, bidding high prices for the privilege of buying a bit of land among the favored. The Korean prophet Chryng Kam, whose writings have been preserved in the ancestral mausoleum of the one-time imperial family of Korea, long ago prophesied that Mount Kelyong would be chosen as the religious center of the sect which he founded and as the future capital and metropolis of the peninsula. His prophecy has recently been given great publicity, and thousands of Koreans now are flocking to the mountain, firm in their belief that it is to be one of the greatest cities of the world, and that they are "getting in on the ground floor."

Restoring Black Walnut.

In an effort to restore the black walnut 150 bushels of seed have recently been planted at Mont Alto, Pa., and next spring it is expected that fully 100,000 seedlings will be available for replanting in groves in various parts of the state.

It is not difficult to start a walnut plantation, says the American Forestry Magazine, and it cites the case of an Indian farmer in the Far West, who, a few years ago, after an exceptionally heavy seed year, drove his wagon down to the Wabash bottoms and shoveled it full of nuts and litter. Then going up to his field he spread the nuts from the tail of the cart on the frozen ground in the same way manure is spread. In the spring when the frost was coming out of the ground and the soil was soft he had his boys take wooden mallets and go out and pound into the soil every nut they could see. It is reported that he has an excellent young grove at the present time.

Sucked Infant's Breath.

An old and weird tale of cats killing children by inhaling the breath was corroborated by an incident, which has occurred in Atlantic City. Awakened by a gasping sound from his nine-months-old daughter, a man discovered a huge black cat perched on the child's chest, sucking the infant's breath. He hurled the animal through a window. The baby was unconscious and barely alive, when a physician reached the house. The child was not resuscitated until a half hour later. The animal did not belong to the family and must have entered the room through an open window. It is said that cats in instances of this sort are attracted by the faint odor of milk on the infant's breath.

"I guess I know," said George, seriously. "I've got on Henry's shirt and his pants and his shoes."

BURSUM'S HANDSOME MAJORITY

The handsome majority given to Senator Holm O. Bursum on Tuesday was one which our Senator should be justly proud of. Proud of, for more reasons than one.

His victory is an assurance to his many friends in both great political parties, who felt that he was not only the man for the place, but that no other could do as much for our de-serving commonwealth, as Senator Bursum.

In the beginning of this contest we said that "mud slinging" would be the second downfall of Judge Hanna. How near we were right, was evidenced by the returns which were a rebuke to all slanderous attacks and the vindication of the man the people believed in.

BASE BALL DANCE

A benefit dance was given at Lutz Hall Saturday night for the base ball team and the same was well attended. Ferguson's "Joy Makers" furnished the music, and the receipts figured up to a nice sum which will be used to replenish the fund to carry the team through the balance of the season.

FOR RENT—Furnished apartment. Two rooms, kitchenette, and bath. Steam heat—Apply to Carrizozo Trading Company.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured
 by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a running ear or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.
 We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by Catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure.

Turks Pass by Unveiled Girls

Change in Custom Does Not Find Favor Among the Men of the Orient.

FLIRTING IN PUBLIC BARRED

Preachments of Halide Hanum and Other Workers for Freedom of Women Find Favor in Angora—Vell Custom Modified.

Angora.—Turkish men still refuse to look upon unveiled Turkish women when passing them in the streets or on the roads, despite the attempt of the latter to adopt the preachments of Halide Hanum and other workers for the freedom of women in Asia Minor. "According to our customs, it is impolite to flirt in public or address or look on the face of our women, and I can't break the custom," explained a Turkish officer traveling with the correspondent.

Angora Sees Change.

In the nationalist capital of Angora, Halide Hanum Mevde Ferid Hanum, the author and wife of the former minister of finance, and many other women who came out from Constantinople to support the nationalist movement, go about the streets or ride horseback with their veils turned back and folded into a handsome head-dress, modeled after the Russian style.

But outside of Angora, despite the example set by American women of charity organizations, or of the example of Greek and Armenian women, most of the Turkish women strictly maintain the old custom.

Modify Custom.

The custom of veiling has long been modified to the extent that the face may be shown freely to the men of the village or of the party with whom the women may be working or traveling, but so soon as a stranger, whether Turk or European, approaches, the veil is drawn. If the stranger is a Turk, he looks straight ahead as if the women were not present. As the pretty gauze or thin cloth of brower days, white, blue, black or brown cannot be had, the veils are often of coarse white cotton, and in the case of the working women, the cloth may be of a stiff, heavy cotton, which serves as a sunbonnet. If the wearer be very poor, the veil and other garments may be but a crazy quilt thing of patches of all colors and thicknesses, pathetically mended and browned by sun and weather.

SHOWS COIN MADE IN 700 B. C.

American Collector Displays a "Mite" at Boston Exhibition—Worth .02 of a Cent.

Boston.—Obsolete and rare coins, some of which bore dates hundreds of years before Christ, were included in an exhibition of the American Numismatic society.

What was said to be the oldest coin in the United States, and of the smallest value ever issued, was shown by a southern collector. It was a "mite," with a face value of one-fiftieth of an American cent, and was coined in 700 B. C., at Aegina.

FUNERAL 3,000 FEET IN AIR

Widow Sees Her Husband's Ashes Scattered to Winds by Son in Airplane.

New York.—Flying at an altitude of 3,000 feet over Long Island sound, Charles S. Haight unfolded an American flag containing the ashes of his father, Charles F. Haight, and scattered them to the winds. This strange ceremony was viewed from the ground by the dead man's widow and two other members of the family. The unique disposal of the remains of the late Mr. Haight, a widely known Brooklyn insurance official, was in accordance with a wish expressed just prior to his death, July 28, in his sixty-fifth year.

BUST OF CARUSO

Onorio Ruotolo, the celebrated Italian-American sculptor, has just completed this monumental bust of Enrico Caruso, which will be erected in the foyer of the Metropolitan opera house as the gift of the Italian-American Musical League of New York, of which Caruso was the honorary president. Ruotolo's portrait is inserted.

Southwest News From All Over New Mexico and Arizona

All the cities along the route of the Ozark Trails in New Mexico are now raising money towards a fund to repair the road and keep the bridges in good condition.

Three days of races and cowboy sports have been arranged in the program for the northern New Mexico fair which will be held in Raton, October 4, 5, 6 and 7.

In the past three months the number of cases of indigents in Maricopa county, Arizona, has decreased about 50 per cent, Charles Sabin, county indigent officer, stated at Phoenix.

Lupe Gonzales of Trowell, who was shot by Juan Rubio, died at the St. Mary's hospital. Following his death the charge of assault against Rubio was withdrawn and formal complaint of murder filed.

City mail delivery was started in Clayton, N. M., the first of September and deliveries will be made over the entire city twice a day. The service started with two carriers and the force will be increased as the town requires it.

The new highway travel law now in effect in Arizona. It provides that all vehicles must carry a light at night, that headlights must throw a beam ranging not over forty-two inches from the roadway, that cutouts must not extend downward to the possible injury of the roadbed, that no unusual noises shall be made and that a person who drives from an accident in which he participated may be guilty of a felony.

Business conditions in Arizona are improving if it can be judged by the increased number of articles of incorporation which have been filed with the State Corporation Commission of late. New business enterprises often mean new money coming into the state; they place money in circulation, and if nothing more they are based on the supposition that an enterprise has been found which will attract investors by its merits.

The recent destruction crew which has been at work for some time on the Zuni Indian reservation is meeting with good success, and by late fall most of the prairie dogs will have been killed. The tract of land which the crew has been working on is about thirty miles long by ten wide and contains about 50,000 acres. The land is said to be valuable for agriculture purposes, but for a long time has been almost worthless on account of the intrusions of the dogs.

Mining properties in the Twelfth Federal Reserve district, including the seven states of Arizona, California, Idaho, Nevada, Oregon, Utah and Washington, produced more silver, gold and lead, and less copper during July than in the corresponding month last year, according to reports made public by John Perrin, federal reserve agent at San Francisco. The reports were received from twelve largest mines located in Arizona, California, Nevada, Utah and Idaho.

A movement has been started in Gallup to divert the flood waters of the Puerco river so that there will be no danger of future floods. Several times this season the west side of the city has been under from one to two feet of water and the loss in property has been heavy and plans are now being made for the construction of dykes to prevent this. If the funds can be raised a concrete wall about ten feet high will be built so that the river will be held in its channel instead of flowing over the low lands of the city. The total cost of the improvement will be about $40,000 when it is completed.

Fort Bayard, N. M., will soon have a troop of Boy Scouts which will be under the management of H. L. Mitchell, newly arrived patient at the big hospital. It is expected that about thirty members will be recruited by the first of the month.

Gov. M. C. McChesin announced the appointment of Stephen B. Davis, Jr. of Las Vegas, as justice of the State Supreme Court, to take the place of Clarence J. Roberts, chief justice, who, it is announced, will resign Nov. 1 to enter upon the practice of law in Santa Fe. The appointment of Mr. Davis is made pending the general election in 1922.

At a recent meeting of the Sweet Potato Growers' Association, plans were completed for the new warehouse which will be erected in Fort Sumner, N. M., to care for the season's crop. The lots for the site have been purchased and actual construction work will be started soon as the material can be placed on the ground. The crop this year will be one of the largest ever grown in the valley and it is possible that the growing of sweet potatoes will soon become one of the principal industries of the valley.

That no one in Arizona in 1919 had a personal income exceeding $300,000 and that only one citizen would boast an income of this amount is shown in the list of personal income tax returns as filed for that, an account of which was released by Judge Alfred Franklin, collector of internal revenue for the district of Arizona.

Frank George, convicted murderer of Under Sheriff Ed Bowers at Prescott on July 1, was sentenced to life imprisonment in the state penitentiary by Judge H. C. Stanford of Maricopa county in the Superior Court.

Special Used Motor Oil
A company has been organized in London with the object of redistributing state lubricating oil. The waste oil can be bought at prices ranging up to about $100 per ton and in some cases can be had for the cost of collection. It is planned to establish immediately a plant near London with a capacity of treating 50 tons per week, which it is believed, can be easily collected in London and other plants in the various cities of the kingdom.—Scientific American.

The Men Who Smoke

Why is it that the big men of the big countries are almost always smokers? Isn't it because men who work on nerve know the need of something that makes them let up and rest once in a while between times?
That's what your pipe-smoker does. He drops for a moment the matter that is worrying him. He sinks into an easy position, lights his pipe, and after a few absent-minded, restful puffs his mind swings back on that subject fresh and with a bang.

This habit must have something to do with making great thinkers and great fighters, for most of them smoke, and after a smoke-rest, something breaks.
Take Einstein; the man who has upset the world of philosophers by his theories of time and space. It is said that his ideas are so hard to understand that only a dozen people in the world do understand them. We don't. But we know that he must be a great thinker; he must have to concentrate for long, intense hours on his problems. And we know that he loves his briar pipe.

When he talked of his pipe on his recent visit to New York, it was with a warmth and affection that was in direct contrast to the involved, abstract problems he works on.

Even to the greatest men, a pipe of tobacco is a real solace. It is such a simple thing to hold in about one cubic inch of space so much pleasure and contentment.

A pipe-smoker asks but little. He wants a good pipe, but he simply must have the tobacco that just suits him. If you happen to be sort of half-worrying along without exactly the tobacco you want, we would be glad to have you try Edgeworth.

It may not suit your individual taste, but it has made a hit with many finicky pipe-smokers. And you can decide whether or not you like it so easily!

Simply send us your address together with that of the dealer ordinarily supplying you, and we will dispatch to you generous samples of Edgeworth in both forms—Plug Slices and Ready-Rubbed.

Edgeworth Plug Slices is pressed in cakes, then cut into thin moist slices. A slice rubbed in the hands makes an average pipe-load.

Edgeworth Ready-Rubbed is ready to pour straight into your pipe. It packs nicely, and burns freely, evenly. Edgeworth is sold in various sizes, suited to the needs and means of all purchasers. Both Edgeworth Ready-Rubbed and Edgeworth Plug Slices come in small pocket-size packages in attractive tin humidors and glass jars, and also in economical in-between quantities for customers wanting more than a small package, but not quite the humidior size.

For the free samples, address Larus & Brother Co., 41 South 21st Street, Richmond, Va.

To Retail Tobacco Merchants—If your jobber cannot supply you with Edgeworth, Larus & Brother Company will gladly send you prepaid by parcel post a one- or two-dozen carton of any size of Plug Slices or Ready-Rubbed for the same price you would pay the jobber.

France Has Its "Wallingford"

Get-Rich-Quick Banker Projects Gigantic Financial Schemes, Then Goes Bankrupt.

AMASSES 40,000,000 FRANCS

Brought to Trial Eight Times, Imprisoned Six Times and Becomes Bankrupt for 21,000,000 Francs—Is Free Again.

Paris.—America, to be sure, has no monopoly of the tribe of Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford. It may not be that "they order this matter better in France," but at least they do not fall behind the cutest Yankee. In witness whereof note the case of Monsieur Marie Renaud.

From time to time the attention of Paris has been attracted to a man who projects gigantic financial schemes, but invariably becomes bankrupt as soon as he has separated a sufficient number of easy marks from their money. Today he has once more come into conflict with the criminal law of the country.

Man of Profession.

M. Renaud is now about seventy-seven years old, and, therefore, may well be reckoned the dean, the Nestor, of his profession in France. It was after the war of 1870-71 that he made his debut in Paris. Though he stopped on that occasion at a small inn he conceived the grandiose scheme of conquering Paris. Three years later the banker, M. Marie Renaud, owned a palace on the Bois de Boulogne and conducted a bank in partnership with a mesmerist who bewitched the customers.

After a couple of years the firm was dissolved and Renaud was arrested, tried and convicted, but on appeal was acquitted. He then removed to Brussels and founded the "Credit International," which promised its shareholders 500 per cent interest and which went to smash in 1904. He was arrested, but again got clear and then went to London. He was again brought before a tribunal in Paris on a bankrupt with 21,000,000 francs liabilities. Again he got free by means known only to himself.

In Jail Six Times.

His last—or latest—enterprise was the foundation of a "National Bank" in 1916, calling himself Rockland, alias Count Roqueplou. In the course of his career he has been brought to trial eight times, has been imprisoned six times and has "annexed," "conveyed" or otherwise acquired about 40,000,000 francs. What he today appears like a well-preserved man of fifty, elegant in attire and manner, and everybody in Paris expects that he is about to start his ninth "bank."

Frightened Child Too Quiet to Suit Snakes

Suffern, N. Y.—Jennie Van Olsen, twelve, had a thrilling experience with two large rattlesnakes while on a berry picking party in the Ramapo mountains. The child had wandered some distance from the rest of the party when she heard a humming noise, and turned about to see two snakes near her. The child was motionless with fright, which probably saved her life. Other members of the party saw her standing, investigated and killed the snakes, which were as large as any ever killed in this section.

PICK CHILD EXPERIMENT SITE

National Health Experts Will Develop Ohio Town and County for Five Years.

Washington, D. C.—Selection of the town of Mansfield and the county of Richland, O., as the location of its five-year experiment in the development of children was announced by the National Child Health Council. The Ohio communities were picked from 80 which sought the distinction as most nearly complying with the qualifications of a typical American community.

The demonstration, which will be directed by Dr. Walter H. Brown, formerly health officer of Bridgeport, Conn., will be conducted, the council announced, to show what can be done through concerted action to increase the health and strength of the rising generation.

SOO RAPIDS NO MORE A MENACE

Once Navigable Stream Reduced to Rocks and Pools.

Fishermen Gather Big Catches in Streamlets Where Once Angry Torrents Raged.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich.—Modern engineering has broken the prestige of the old-time Soo rapids, reducing to rocks and shallow pools a stream which, in the days before the civil war, schooners plied with no fear of hitting bottom.

Completion of the last of the compensating dams above the rapids has brought to the surface moss-encrusted rocks hidden for centuries, and it is now possible to wade across a space where, in 1852, there was a stream of such respectable volume that the sailing schooner Uncle Sam passed easily.

Capitulation of the rapids, which has drawn nearer and nearer during seventy years, reached its climax with startling quickness recently when, within an hour after the closing of the dam, the rapids became gout rock and desolate rivulets.

The scent of fish and moss filled the air. In pools were some unwary creatures of the water who had not fled in time, and anglers hastened for their kits. Most of the fish in the rapids had taken refuge in the lower river as the water receded.

But the passing of the rapids brings some joy, for fishermen believe the remaining pools, some of them several feet deep, will attract the rainbow and speckled trout, and that these will be more easily snared.

Dams above the rapids were constructed to regulate the depth of Lake Superior and to obtain a steady drift of water in the locks.

The elder Dumas, in one phenomenal year, actually turned out volumes at the rate of one a week.

Money Circulation Shrinks.

Washington.—The pocket-book of the average American held 50 cents less in August than in July, according to the monthly circulation statement issued by the treasury. On Aug. 1 the per capita circulation on an estimated population of 108,228,000 persons was $53, which on Sept. 1 had dropped to $52.41, on the basis of an estimated population of 108,965,000 persons.

Washington Girl Is U. S. Beauty.

Atlantic City, N. J.—Miss Margaret Gorman of Washington, D. C., was acclaimed the most beautiful girl in the United States by more than 2,000 persons who assembled on the steel pier to decide by popular applause the winner of the Golden Mermaid, the $5,000 trophy awarded in connection with Atlantic City's fall pageant.

Policeman Spills Romance.

Chicago, Ill.—It was love at first sight! Naturally he spent his savings on her. She appreciated that—so they decided to get married.

And they might have lived happily ever after, but—

She was Lillian Quintilla, just turned 3 year old—

He was Billy Van Billiard, quite a "young man" of 5 years!

And they made the mistake of asking a policeman to marry them.

He took them to the station house where their parents called for them.

Portland Cement Productions.

The production of Portland cement in 1920 was 100,023,245 barrels, exceeding that in 1917, the next highest year in production, by 7,200,043 barrels. This amount was an increase of 24 per cent over the production in 1919—80,777,835 barrels. The stocks at the mills increased from 3,254,000 barrels at the end of 1919 to 8,041,040 barrels at the end of 1920.

Estimates of the production and shipment of Portland cement in 1920 were only about 0.3 per cent and 0.02 per cent, respectively, higher than these final figures for the year.

Child Stops Panic.

Chicago. A dance hall panic was stopped when Ellen Griffin, pretty little 8-year-old girl, played the piano. A storm broke over Gable park and the crowded dance hall was thrown in confusion. The band stopped playing, men rushed for exits and women screamed. Suddenly "The Wearing of the Green" bounced from a big concert piano. Little Ellen was pounding the keys. "I knew 'The Wearing of the Green' so I thought I'd play that," said Ellen. "I started playing it right away and the folks began to laugh. Then I played 'Mother March' and the panic was over."

U. S. Deficit $161,464,744.

Washington. A net deficit of $161,464,774 in the current expenses of the government for the first two months of the present fiscal year has been announced by Secretary Mellon in a letter to banking institutions offering for subscription combined issues of treasury obligations of about $600,000,000, dated Sept. 15. "With the payment of income and profits taxes in September, however," he said, "there should be, according to the best information obtainable, a small net current surplus for the quarter." The treasury, he explained, has maturities of principal and interest amounting to $635,000,000 due Sept. 15, and similarly $527,000,000 due Oct. 15. Against the payments, he said, the treasury expects to receive during September about $525,000,000 from income and profits taxes, in addition to ordinary revenue from other sources.

California's Lefty Mountains.

At least sixty mountains in California rise more than 13,000 feet above sea level, but they stand amid a wealth of mountain scenery so rich and varied that they are not considered sufficiently noteworthy to be named, according to the United States Geological Survey, Department of the Interior. Yet if any one of these unnamed mountain peaks were in the eastern part of the United States it would be visited annually by millions of people.

Beloved son of Mr. and Mrs. F. P. Cleghorn of White Oaks whose birth we announced last week passed away on Wednesday last and was buried yesterday. The Cleghorns have the sympathy of their many friends in our community.

Rev. and Mrs. C. C. Higbee left the first of this week for El Paso. The Rev., expects to undergo an operation for a throat trouble. Mrs. Higbee will return by the last of the week, but Rev. Higbee will be absent for about 8 days. Before his departure, he united in marriage, Edgar P. May and Miss Alice Palmer both of La Luz, N. M.

A new shipment of tricotine and serge dresses at exceptionally low prices, arrived this week.—Carrizozo Trading Company.

C. D. Mayer is now permanently located in the grocery business as a competent successor to Mr. Patty, who leaves Sunday for his new place in Clovis, to make that city his future home. While we regret the loss of Mr. Patty, we welcome Mr. Mayer, who needs no introduction to the people of Carrizozo, and it is a safe prediction, that he will enjoy the same measure of business success that Mr. Patty has had. Give him a call.

CHICKEN PIE SUPPER
 The ladies of the M. E. Church will serve a chicken pie supper on Friday evening, Sept. 30 at Lutz Hall from 6 to 8 o'clock.

The following is the menu:
 Chicken pie, includes gravy, mashed potatoes, and needless to say, bread and butter sandwiches, choice of pie or ice cream, cake, coffee.

Tickets 75 cents. A special effort is being made to raise $400 before the next annual conference. Your patronage is helping a home institution.

The Ladies of the M. E. Church will bear in mind that the missionary meeting to be held at Mrs. Ralph Treat's home Tuesday afternoon, Sept. 27th is an important one. There will be an interesting program followed by a business session.

Corset Discomfort a Thing of the Past
American Lady PLIO-TOP Corsets
 Boned throughout with Mightybone
 NO LONGER need you bear the discomfort of wearing corsets that dig into the diaphragm. "Plio-Top" Corsets, by eliminating this pressure, reduce and, what is equally important, prevent fleshy development. Not only do they fit trimly, but no matter how long the corset is worn, or how actively used, they adjust themselves comfortably to every bend of the body.
 And with every "Plio-Top" Corset goes all the expert designing that you have always enjoyed in wearing American Lady Corsets, boned throughout with Mightybone. "Plio-Top" is exclusively American Lady made. Choice of all materials; styles for every individual figure demand.
