

WOMEN REQUEST AMENDMENT

Demand That All Legal Disabilities or Inequalities in Constitution on Account of Sex or Marriage be Removed.

Washington, Sept. 25.—A woman's "bill of rights" proposed for enactment by the federal and all state governments to remove legal discriminations against women was outlined today in a statement by the national woman's party.

The program includes a new constitutional amendment, declaring "no political, civil, or legal disabilities or inequalities on account of her sex, or on account of marriage" shall prevail, together with a bill to give women the same rights, privileges and immunities as men.

It was announced that the proposed amendment would be introduced in congress October 1, and that copies of the new bill had been sent all state chapters of the woman's party, except Wisconsin, which has enacted the law.

Women would have the right, on marriage, to choose their names and have equal voice in the custody of their children, legitimate or illegitimate, under the proposed bill.

Other legal rights proposed include: Suffrage, eligibility for all offices; freedom from contract; choice of domicile, residence name; jury service; acquisition and control of property; control of labor and earnings; eligibility for judicial positions; equality in grounds for divorce and immunities and penalties for sex offense.

All common law disabilities of women would be abrogated.

A NEW MENACE TO THE RANGE CATTLE INDUSTRY

State College, N. M., Sept. 23.—"Contagious abortion" is the new menace that is confronting the stockmen of New Mexico.

For several years past the stockgrowers have had serious problems to contend with, due to drought and other conditions, but this new menace that is creeping into the stock growing, will, if not checked, paralyze the industry. No stockman can afford to buy high priced stock if it is not productive.

With contagious abortion in a herd, it is a very unprofitable investment. Prevention is the point to be aiming at, says the veterinarian of the Agricultural College. It is a herd is free from this disease, purchase no new stock unless a guarantee is given that the animals in question have been tested by the agnition and complement fixation methods and have been found free.

In the control of this disease, sanitation is an important factor. All debris should be burned, the aborting animal segregated, and the surrounding premises disinfected. Liquefied compost is 3 per cent, for external purposes and Log's solution 1/2 per cent for internal irrigation is recommended.

STATE COLLEGE STUDENTS BUILD ROADS AT THE STATE COLLEGE, N. M., SEPT. 25.

Three hundred and fifty students and instructors at the New Mexico College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts, on Saturday, September 24th, demonstrated the fact that curtailment of state appropriations to educational institutions, the a serious handicap, need not be an insurmountable obstacle.

Promptly at 8 o'clock, every able-bodied man in the student body and the faculty reported for work on the road from the College campus to the Camino Real, a stretch of road that has long needed improvement.

Trucks, trailers and wagons were furnished by the state and county highway commission, and the labor for loading, unloading and spreading the gravel was supplied by the college. Six hundred cubic yards of gravel were hauled from the college pits and spread on the half mile of road.

The students and instructors were divided into squads of six, each under command of a corporal. The work was under the direction of Mr. Crowder, of the county highway commission and Dean Goddard, of the college.

The girls of the college, women teachers and faculty wives served dinner to the men at work along the road.

The road had been graded previously, so with the gravel surface, the college can now boast of a well built road.

GOOD CROP OF PINON NUTS

Gallup, N. M., Sept. 24.—The Navajo Indians predict this year will produce the greatest crop of pinon nuts the world has ever seen. All over the western states the crop will be enormous.

The first gleanings of the crop have started to come in. The prices are holding up wonderfully under the circumstances. The wholesalers are offering five cents a pound for the pinons. One Indian trader in town is offering eight cents and on is offering ten cents. Of course, there have been only a few brought in to town up to the present time.

Following the first heavy frost the gathering of pinons will begin in earnest, as the frost cuts them all loose from the cones and they either fall to the ground or can be easily shaken from the trees.

Rats Aid in Gathering.

Pack-rats which are quite numerous in all parts of the Southwest, are great gatherers of pinons. They pile up great heaps of pinons in their burrows. Whenever a pinon gleaner is fortunate enough to find a pack-rat hole, he does a big day's work. A pack-rat is a great hunter when it comes to gathering pinons. He often carries two or three sacks of the little berry bean to his lair and stores them away for his winter rations. If a Navajo Indian finds one of these holes he immediately digs it up and sacks the pinons and hurries to town, because they are all good pinons, for a rat never makes a mistake and carries away a bad nut.

GOVERNOR MECHEM ANXIOUS TO SEE GUARD TURN OUT TO MANEUVERS AND PRACTICE

Las Cruces, N. M., Sept. 23.—Writing to the Las Cruces Chamber of Commerce, announcing the annual maneuvers and target practice of the National Guard of New Mexico at Lordsburg, Texas, Oct. 1 to 31, Adj. Gen. Henry Hays Johnson, commander, says among other things:

"The governor is anxious to see the citizen soldiery of the state become more closely affiliated with our other essential civic organizations, and the state is interested in maintaining a national guard as an exercise of its constitutional and sovereign right to bear arms. The intent of this constitutional provision was to place at the disposal of the chief executive a real means of enforcing law and order, should in his opinion such a force be justified.

The state of New Mexico spends a minimum of $50,000 annually on this force, for armories and administrative purposes. The federal government is interested in maintaining the guard of our state as a second line of defense to be used in case of national emergency and with a view to training and developing it progressively, the total expenses of the approaching campaign and an additional $20,000 for the pay of the officers and men and upkeep of public animals during the entire year.

Thus, it may be seen that a minimum of $70,000 in cash is expended annually on the guard in the state. This does not take into consideration the equipment, costing not less than $500,000, issued by the Federal Government without expense to the state.

General Brown adds that in consideration of the importance attached to this work by the Federal Government and state government and because of the appropriations of supporting the state laws with citizen soldiery, it is expected that the Chambers of Commerce and the public generally will give their active co-operation and influence to the encouragement.

"That the most training be disseminated," General Brown adds, "it is necessary that each guard organization go to camp with at least its minimum strength, namely, for company of infantry, three officers and 95 enlisted men."

ODD FELLOWS CELEBRATE

Tuesday night, Carrizozo Lodge, No. 30, I. O. O. F., entertained the Rebeccas in honor of the 70 Anniversary of the founding of the order. A splendid program was arranged for the occasion and a large crowd was present.

A short speech was made by Senator E. M. Brickley, solos rendered by the Misses, Carrie Roberts and Claire Adams, a quartette selection by the little Misses, Miller, Dinwiddie and Master Raymond Luckland. A piano solo by Mrs. D. S. Donaldson, musical reading by Mrs. Dinwiddie, and a few remarks by Rev. Huffman of the Baptist church closed the program which was followed by presentation of lodge dues to Rev. and Mrs. Huffman, who were about to leave for their new home in Colorado. After the exercises, a delightful luncheon was served.

FALL FESTIVAL EXERCISES AND BARBECUE, OCT. 7 & 8

A movement was launched this week for a two days' celebration here on the dates of October 7 and 8. The committee on arrangements have perfected a program that will be interesting and as usual, we will have a large attendance at the same. As will be seen by the program that follows, there will be all sorts of sports to satisfy every desire. A large attendance will be had from our neighboring towns and ranch districts, and ample provisions will be made for all. The program for the two days' celebration follows:

Table with columns: HOUR, EVENT, PRIZE. Includes Basket Ball Game, Boxing Match, Blinded Folded Boxing Match, Two Battles Royal, Second prize.

TRAINMEN TO STRIKE RATHER THAN ACCEPT CUT IN WAGES

Chicago, Sept. 26.—A majority of the 136,000 members of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, have voted to strike rather than accept the recent wage cut ordered by the United States Railroad Labor Board, general chairman of the brotherhood indicated today as they began an official canvass of the ballots.

Fifty-seven general chairmen who arrived during the day privately reported to Vice President James Murdock that their men were in favor of a strike unless their demands were met.

"Our past experience has been," Mr. Murdock commented, "that 93 per cent of the men will always vote for a strike."

Whether a general strike shall be called by the six most powerful railroad unions may be decided within the next two weeks. Officials of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen gathered here today to count the 150,000 strike ballots of their organization, cast to decide whether the men will accept the recent wage cut.

Next Monday officials of four more unions—the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, Order of Railway Conductors, Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Engineers, and the Switchmen's Union of North America will meet here to count strike ballots cast by their 250,000 members. More than 200,000 shop crafts employes have already voted by an overwhelming majority, according to figures announced a week ago, to strike rather than accept the wage cut, but on advice of their leaders are waiting for the labor board to complete its announcement of new working rules and for the other unions to decide whether or not they shall support the strike and make it general.

FOOD STUFFS CHEAPER THAN LAST YEAR, BUT NOT YET TO THE 1918 LEVEL OF PRICES

Prices of food and clothing are coming down, but so far the price to the man in the street has not kept pace with the price to the retailer. The wholesale price of cattle is very near the pre-war rates. But round steak is still up 60 per cent and sirloin costs the housewife at least 51 per cent more than before the war. So retail prices which went up less than wholesale during the expansion are coming down slower, though it is doubtful if they will ever reach the old level.

Food in general which was over 130 per cent above pre-war prices last year is now a little over 90 per cent above. Clothing has dropped from over 250 per cent, wholesale, last year to 80 per cent now. These facts are from figures compiled by the Chemical National Bank of New York, from government and other authoritative sources.

It is however, pointed out that most of the price changes of the last few months have been in the direction of stability and there are indications that the price system in general is recovering its stability.

Building materials, the cost of which directly influences the home, went up some 240 per cent and are still upwards of 100 per cent above the figures for 1913. Yet it is shown that the average wholesale price of 12 basic commodities is only 6 per cent above the 1913 average. It is really the disturbance of the old relations between the wholesale and retail prices more than the rise and fall of the general level that is so dangerous to prosperity. And this disturbance is now apparently beginning to rectify itself.

N. M. GETS NAT'L FOREST RECEIPTS

Albuquerque, N. M., Sept. 23.—New Mexico has just received a check for $23,584.87 from the Treasurer of the United States as its share of the National Forest receipts for the year ending July 1. This amount consists of $21,491.12 which represents 25 per cent of the receipts from the National Forests in the state and $1,093.45 because of school lands in the Forests.

The amounts are considerably smaller than usual because of the greatly reduced National Forest receipts. In 1920 the total receipts of the forests in New Mexico were $313,000 while this year they dropped to $84,000. This reduction is due largely to the concession made to the stockmen by giving them until December 1 to pay their grazing fees which would ordinarily have been paid last spring. A portion of the reduction is due also to reduced sales of timber.

New Mexico's share because of school lands within Forests is so small since the state has given back many of these lands to the United States, taking in their stead, lands outside of the National Forests.

In addition to the funds sent the state, District Forester F. C. W. Pooler has just received $8,596.46 from Washington for the construction of roads and trails within the National Forests of the State. This amount represents 10 per cent of the National Forest receipts.

Under existing laws the states, in which the National Forests exist may benefit through National Forest receipts in three ways. First they receive 25 per cent of the receipts for roads and schools. These funds are turned over to the states for distribution to the counties within which the National Forests exist. They are given to the counties in lieu of taxes, the amounts given each county depending upon the area of National Forest lands within it.

In additional 10 per cent of the forest receipts are spent within the Forests for roads and trails. These funds are spent by the Forest Service but of course the counties benefit directly by them. In Arizona and New Mexico, thru their enabling act, the Forest Service also administers the school section within the National Forests, turning over the receipts to the state for school purposes. The states, however, have the privilege of giving back these school lands to the United States and taking in lieu thereof, other government lands outside the National Forests, in which case, of course, the receipts from this source are reduced.

CARRIZOZO SCHOOL NOTES

Next Visitor's Day is October 5, Wednesday. Come, get acquainted with the teacher of your child, see school conditions, what the pupil is doing and how he is doing it.

Last week the Domestic Science class made a special study of meats, their different food values, qualities, colors, texture, etc. A helpful and interesting demonstration was given the class Thursday by Mr. Wooten, in Mayor's store. He explained and showed the different cuts and prices for them. These studies were followed by the cooking of meats and making from them certain foods such as beef steaks, with tomato sauce and stuffed potatoes. Miss Cowan wishes the mothers to cooperate with her and the girls, helping to make the home work more practical and helpful and showing interest in the home economics work of their daughters.

The following is the program for the "Library" to be held Friday, Oct. 7: Reading of Minutes.....Will Kahler. Current Events.....Will Kahler. Instrumental Solo.....Lola Jones. Debate: Will Johnson, Roy Stimmel, Dayton Herron, Rollo Pisce. Scientific Talk.....Kastler Taylor. Paper: Jeannette Johnson and Ada Corn. "It Can't Be Done".....Charles Scott. CLEAN-UP SQUAD HERE

The Clean-Up Squad, to look after the soldier boys who have in any manner failed to receive compensation for services under the government, arrived the early part of this week and after attending to the wants of the boys as they were so informed, left Thursday night on their mission of mercy for other fields.

SOUTHWEST TRAIL CONVENTION A convention of delegates representing interests in the Southwest Trail Convention, has been called to meet at Canadian, Texas, at 2 p. m., October 15. The Southwest trail runs from Kansas City to the great Southwest, and delegates are especially requested to be present from Kansas City, Wichita, Canadian, Amarillo, Clovis, Rowell, El Paso and intermediate cities and towns.

RADIUM STIMULANT FOR PLANTS

Investigations Made With Radium Ores By An Eastern Professor Have Revealed That Emanations Act As Tonic.

Silver City Enterprise.—Investigations made with radium by an eastern professor have revealed the fact that the emanations from this act as a tonic and a stimulant on plants. This discovery opens a new range of possibilities for the immense deposits of radium-bearing ores at White Signal, since the amount of radium needed to serve as a fertilizer for plants is exceedingly minute. The experiments in the east, which are reported successful, were made with the tailings from radium ore in which all but a trace of radium had been removed. Should very low grade radium ores prove in general demand, Grant county will be able to supply a vast amount from the White Signal district, where these ores are known to exist over a wide area. The article is as follows:

Radium is worth around seventy million dollars a pound, and there is very little of it even at that price. Nevertheless there is a way to get radium for fertilizer purposes. The plants are able to utilize the radium in the soil if it is there; and in radium ore from which radium has been extracted there always remains a minute quantity which is quite sufficient to serve as a tremendous stimulant to plant life.

It occurred to Prof. H. H. Rusby of Columbia University to grind up some waste radium ore as ordinary commercial fertilizer for use in his garden at Nutley, N. J. He divided his garden into five plots, in which he used the new fertilizer in different amounts.

One noticeable effect was the way in which the influence of the radium appeared to travel through the soil, so that plants adjoining and unfertilized plots were greatly stimulated.

Root crops seem to derive special benefit from radium. Radishes, for example, produced a crop 70 per cent greater in heavily fertilized plots than they did in a plot that had been left unfertilized. Flat turnips showed a gain of 30 per cent; long turnips, 129 per cent; Kockey Ford melons produced an 80 per cent larger crop when fertilized with this magic substance; squash, 40 per cent; string beans, 11 per cent. The result was with 100 pounds of fertilizer to the acre, with 25 pounds to the acre, peas jumped 23 1/2 per cent; Cucumbers 35 per cent; squash, 25 per cent; late corn 50 per cent, and lettuce, 39 per cent.

On a farm Prof. Rusby has in Ohio, the yields were even larger. Pumpkins treated with a hundred pounds of fertilizer to the acre showed a gain of 135 per cent over those grown in an adjacent unfertilized field; corn gained 105 per cent; tomatoes, 60 per cent; oats, 50 per cent early potatoes, 60 per cent; early cabbage, 68 per cent, and many other vegetables from 25 per cent upward.

Besides the increase in field crops, two very important effects from the use of radium were noted. Many forms of insect life which attacked the vegetables in the unfertilized fields kept away from the fertilized plants. There was also an improvement in the edible grown properties of the vegetables grown in the radium-fertilized fields.

Considering the enormous quantities of radium ore that must be handled to produce even the smallest commercial amounts of radium salts, and the fact that the waste ores would be thrown away, it is quite possible that radio-active fertilizers may be put on the market some day at a price that will bring them in the range of the ordinary farmers of the future.

BADLY BURNED

Last Tuesday, W. P. Loughrey and G. R. Reichel made an attempt to disinfect a chicken house belonging to the latter, and after all preliminaries were finished, they sprinkled gasoline through the place, prepared to light it. Mr. Loughrey held the match ready and as he struck it, yelled to a boy, who was assisting him, to get away. He threw the burning match into the chicken house, but in attempting to get away from the danger himself, ran into the boy which tripped him, throwing him headlong into the burning mass.

Severe as the heat was, Mr. Loughrey retained presence of mind enough to give himself a lurch which threw him again into the open air, but he sustained a badly burned face and his hands are also in a painful condition. He received medical aid from Dr. Paden after which he was advised to go to Hotel Dieu in El Paso and left on No. 4 Wednesday morning, where he will be treated by company doctors and will soon be at his post of duty again. It is the hope of his many friends in Carrizozo.

THE CLAN CALL

"LONESOME"

Synopsis.—Young Carlyle Wilbur, son of John K. Dale, a wealthy coal operator, John K. Dale, arrives at the Halfway Switch, in eastern Tennessee, abandoning a life of idle ease and incidentally a bride, Patricia Clay, at the altar—determined to make his own way in life. He meets Babe Littleford, typical mountaineer girl. "By Heck," a character of the hills, takes him to John Moreland's home. Moreland is chief of his "clan," which has an old feud with the Littlefords. He tells Dale of the killing of his brother, David Moreland, years ago, owner of rich coal deposits, by a man named Carlyle. Dale believes the man was his father. Dale makes his home with the Morelands. Talking with Babe, Dale is ordered by "Mister Adam" Hill to leave "his girl" alone. Dale whips the bully. He arranges with John Moreland to develop the coal deposits. Ben Littleford sends a challenge to John Moreland to a challenge in John Moreland to meet him with his followers in battle. Moreland agrees. The two clans line up for battle. A Littleford free the first shot. Babe, in an effort to stop the fighting, crosses to the Moreland side of the river and is accidentally shot by her father and seriously wounded. The fight stops and Babe is taken to the city. Doctors announce she is not seriously hurt. Dale meets an old friend, Bobby McLaurin, who has married Patricia Clay. Dale's father admits he killed David Moreland and offers him funds to develop the coal.

"You needn't" broke in the embarrassed Bill Dale. "I can get the necessary funds without difficulty. I'll pay the debt myself. You've had a great many years in which to try to make upends and you haven't done anything. You might have helped the Morelands without their even knowing that it was you, especially as they seem to have known you by another name and that's the only way you could have helped them. Here you have one reason why I cannot accept assistance from you; don't you see, father? The Morelands wouldn't have it, and I couldn't lie to them."

He nodded to McLaurin, who had looked on the lower veranda step in order that he might not overhear, and turned and walked away. McLaurin followed, and soon overtook him.

Bill Dale stopped suddenly and faced back to his father.

Remember that Bobby gets his money and lot?

Yes, replied John K. Dale. "Bobby got his house and lot."

It went sadly toward the mansion that seemed to him now a good deal like a tomb. Young Dale touched his forehead on the arm.

"Tell me what did mother say? I know it's going to hurt, but tell it."

"She was sitting beside an open window in the library," said McLaurin. "I told her that you were at the gate, and asked if she would like to see you. At first I was afraid she hadn't heard me. Then she opened a book that she was reading, found her place and marked it with a finger, and looked at me.

"Who did you say was at the gate, Mr. McLaurin?" she asked.

"Your son Carlyle," I answered.

"Mr. McLaurin," she said to me coldly. "I want you never to forget this: To me there is no such person on earth as Carlyle Dale."

They went downstairs in silence.

CHAPTER VII.

LONESOME.

When John Moreland and Ben Littleford had finished their breakfast, there in the dining room of the Blaisdell, they drank the water from their fingerbells, threatened with sudden death the waiter who, snickered, and found the way to the lobby.

To Littleford the minutes dragged suddenly. Finally he told Moreland, in a sentence filled with double negatives, that he could bear the suspense no longer, and proposed that they set out at once for Doctor Braeiner's hospital. The hotel manager overheard some of the one-sided conversation; he phoned the surgeon and learned that the young woman was resting easily, which information he passed on to the mountain men.

Ben Littleford was quiet for five minutes, more or less. Then he again proposed to John Moreland that they go to the hospital to see Babe. Moreland refused flatly, and accompanied his refusal with an unmistakable look of contempt.

"You're as restless as a dawg in a flea town," he told his old enemy, and with that he walked away.

A few minutes later Ben Littleford stole out unnoticed by his neighbor, "Frog" the Big One, and went at a brisk trot to the street. Moreland found it out shortly afterward; he followed the Littleford chief halffoot, and overtook him. Trust your hill dweller to note landmarks when he goes into unknown territory—Littleford was headed straight for the hospital.

They walked for two blocks in silence. Moreland had assumed the attitude of one who has had the guardianship of an irresponsible person thrust upon him. But soon he softened somewhat.

"I shore can't understand Ben," he drawled, "how Bill Dale ever could bear it to live here."

"I wonder," Littleford said absent-mindedly, as though he had not heard, "what Bill Dale is at? It's mighty lonesome without him, ain't it? That was good hair we had for breakfast, John."

"It wasn't him. It was beef."

"It was beef."

"It was him."

"Don't ye reckon," dared John Moreland, "that I know a dang cos a meat when I see it? It was beef!"

They had halted in the middle of a stream of pedestrians. A policeman crowded his way to them.

"Move on!" he growled.

Bill Dale was at that moment entering the lobby of the Blaisdell with Robert McLaurin at his side. Dale had just told McLaurin that he meant to go to Cincinnati to borrow money from his wealthy friend Harris. Then McLaurin told Dale something that saved him the journey to Cincinnati.

"You haven't heard about Harris, huh? I'm sorry, because he would have accommodated you. He went broke a few days ago in the cotton smash. He was here yesterday, and left last night for Cincy."

Dale did not try to conceal his surprise and disappointment. Harris, for all his youth, had been a business man.

"I'll have to try somebody here, I guess. But I won't take it from my father—mother wouldn't permit it, any way, if she knew—and there are several other reasons. Queer how a fellow's mother would turn him down like this! Usually, y'know, it's a fellow's mother that sticks by him the longest."

I wonder where I could find old Newton Wheatley, of the Lather-Wheatley iron company? I know him, all right. He always liked me, Bobby."

"You'll find him at home," McLaurin answered. "It's out of business, and here all the time now. He might take a shot at coal. Why not 'phone him from here?"

"I'll do that," Dale decided. "Look up my two friends for me, Bobby, will you?"

He was soon speaking to Newton Wheatley. He was brief in stating his wishes. To the question as to why he did not go to his father for funds—well, he had his reasons, and it was rather a private matter. Wheatley, of course, remembered the near-wedding. The old iron man was silent for what seemed to Dale a very long time. Then his voice came over the wire with an almost ominous calm:

"Who besides you has seen this vein, Carlyle? Anybody that knows coal?"

"Yes, my father," Dale answered quickly. "He went over it years ago. Ask him about the coal in David Moreland's mountain. 'Phone him, and then 'phone me. I'm waiting at the Blaisdell."

Wheatley agreed a little reluctantly. Dale waited patiently for fifteen minutes. Then the clerk called him to the 'phone. He took up the receiver with hopeful eagerness.

Wheatley began cordially: "Your father tells me it's a good proposition, Carlyle, so I'll let you have all the money you'll need. And if you want a good mining man, I know where you can lay your hands on one; also I can furnish you, at half the original cost, all the necessary machinery and accessories. You didn't know the old Lather-Wheatley company worked in coal as well as iron, eh? Well, it did. Let me see you at three o'clock this afternoon."

Dale was jubilant. Here was a rare stroke of good fortune. He went to McLaurin—who had not yet found John Moreland and Ben Littleford—and told him about it. McLaurin was almost as happy as Dale over it. A bellboy appeared like a jack-in-the-box in the center of the floor. "Mistoh Cahlyle Dale! Mistoh Cahlyle Dale!" Dale wheeled. "Well?"

"Wanted immediately at Doctor Braeiner's hospital, sir."

Dale shook hands with McLaurin and hurried toward the street.

A few minutes later Doctor Braeiner met him in the reception room.

"What's wrong, doctor?"

"The surgeon beckoned. 'Come with me.'"

He turned and led the way through a long corridor and to a sunny white room where Babe Littleford lay with a bandage about her temples. Ben Littleford was on his knees at his daughter's bedside; he was slowly wringing his big, rough hands and begging piteously to be forgiven.

Babe stared at him a trifle coldly. She had not yet seen the two men who stood in the doorway. Then she interrupted her father:

"I Was a-Tryin' to Ocker Him Out o' Fightin' Any More," She Interrupted.

"You must, pap, and go away. I'd told ye a hundred times about lightin' a bear murder, and 'specially to ye women-folks, and you never would pay any 'tention to me. You must, pap, and go away. If I die, I'll just let to die in peace. Go way, pap."

"But ye must live, Babe, honey!" Ben Littleford moaned. "If you was to die, what'd I do?"

"I don't know what ye'd do, pap," Babe said wearily. "You ought to thought o' that afore, pap. It may be too late now. I want ye to go on off and let me alone. If I die, I want to die in peace. The Lord knows I never got to live in peace!"

There was a worried look in her wonderful brown eyes, and the doctor saw it. He strode forward decisively and helped Littleford to his feet. The hillman wiped away a tear with his faded blue bandanna, and hung his head. He had been made a broken man in one day.

"Go out to your friend Moreland," smiled the doctor, "and wait there for a little while."

Babe's father walked unsteadily out of the room. Dale went to Doctor Braeiner and whispered, "Don't she go to make it?" anxiously.

"Certainly she's going to make it," Braeiner assured him. "Go on; she wants to see you."

Dale drew a chair up close to the white bed and sat down. Babe's eyes lighted at once, and she put a hand uncertainly out toward him. Dale took the hand in his. He saw that it was a little pale under its delicate sunburn.

"Glad to see you, Babe," he told her softly. "Why do you think you're going to die, Babe?"

She smiled at him. "Why, I don't think I'm a-goin' to die," she said. "I know I'm a-goin' to live, Bill Dale. I feel like I could walk fifty miles right now!"

"But I heard you tell your father—"

"I was a-tryin' to ocker him out o' fightin' any more," she interrupted. "And I believe I 'bout done it, don't you?"

Dale was relieved. "I do. Is there anything you want, honey? If there is, I'll get it for you if it's in the universe."

"The universe?" she repeated inquiringly. "What's the universe, Bill Dale? 'Specially to eat?"

"The world, the sun, the moon, and the stars."

She smiled at him again. "No," she said. "The ain't nothin' I want, and ain't nothin' ye can do for me. I

"But I thought, as they sent for me—"

Babe Littleford's fingers held tightly to his. "It was me that sent for you."

She turned her face the other way. "I was so lonesome, Bill Dale!"

Robert McLaurin's wife, Patricia, visited Babe twice daily, and a friendship that was none the less warm for being unique sprang up quickly between them. Patricia declared to her husband that she was going to keep Babe—whom she was already calling by her proper name, "the same being Elizabeth—and educate her. There was room in the bungalow, Patricia said, and she really needed company, because Bobby was away so much.

Babe accepted little Mrs. McLaurin's offer as soon as Bill Dale convinced her that she wouldn't be merely an object of charity. The hill pride's first law is that one must pay for what he gets—and it's probably the first law God laid down for old Adam in Eden. Ben Littleford seemed bewildered and blue when they told him of the arrangement, but he voiced no objection. Dale pressed upon him a loan of a hundred dollars, and ordered him to give it to his daughter, which he did. Elizabeth Littleford, of course, would need no clothing.

"I ain't even got any dresses at home," she whispered to Patricia, "but two."

Bill Dale was sure now that he loved Babe, and he was almost sure that she cared for him. But he was quite properly in no haste to come to an understanding. He had known all along that Babe would have to be educated! and a woman's tastes, he reasoned, might change with education. And he wanted her to have the opportunity of knowing other men of his class. If she couldn't love him with a lasting love, he didn't want her to love him at all.

Oddy or not, he never thought of Jimmy Payne.

CHAPTER VIII.

Major Bradley and Henderson Goff.

When Bill Dale, the expert mining man Hayes and the two mountaineers stepped from a short passenger train at the Halfway Switch, they were approached by the moonshiner, Heck, and a man whom Dale had never seen before. He was tall, and his bearing was erect and soldierlike, though he was every day of sixty years old. His eyes were blue and twinkling with everlasting good humor; his gray mustaches and imperial were exceedingly well cared for; his teeth were his own, and as white as a school-girl's, and they bore out his general air of neatness. He was, plainly, a Southerner of the old type.

"Who's that?" whispered Dale to John Moreland.

But Moreland didn't hear. He ran forward with his right hand outstretched, and so did Ben Littleford. Men could not have greeted a brother with more gladness, Dale thought.

"Hi, thar, Major Bradley!" the hillman cried. "And how d'ye come on today?"

"I am very well, gentlemen, thank you," said the major, smiling.

He shook their hands heartily. "The trainmen gave us your message yesterday," he went on, still smiling, "and we were delighted to learn that the young woman was out of danger. I trust you are all in good health, gentlemen."

They assured him that they were. Moreland turned to introduce Bill Dale and the mining man. From the moment that Major Bradley gripped Dale's hand they were friends.

"Mighty glad to know you, sir!" exclaimed the old lawyer. "I've been hearing a great deal about you, sir. I seem to think there's nobody just like Bill Dale! It was Bill Dale this, and Bill Dale that; it was 'Here's where Bill Dale whipped Black Adam,' or, 'Here's where Bill Dale was standing when such-and-such happened,' or, 'Here's where Bill Dale crossed the fence!'"

"Hah-hah-hah!" sluggishly laughed By Heck, who stood leaning on the muzzle of his rifle. "Bill Dale is all right, major; ye've shore got my word fo' that."

The others laughed. Then John Moreland said they'd better be moving, or they'd be late for dinner.

When they had put a hundred yards of David Moreland's mountain behind them, the old Southerner tugged slyly at Dale's sleeve and whispered:

"Let us fall behind a little, if you please. I want to speak with you privately."

They began to lag, and soon there was a distance of several rods between them and the others.

"I heard through Addie Moreland," began Bradley, his idly hand on the younger man's arm, "about you and what you're planning to do for the Morelands. I tell you, sir, I thanked heaven for your coming, and you may count on me to help in any way I can. The Morelands are quite friendly to me now, though up to the middle of last summer they didn't like me any see well because I made Ben Littleford's cabin my home when she was here.

"It was a simple thing that brought us together. John Moreland's little nephew was lost in the woods and his mother was frantic. There are but-there, you know, and wildcats, rattlers, and copperheads. I was fortunate enough to find the boy, and carried him home. That was all. They're a fine people, my boy, and so are the Littlefords. Good old English blood that somehow wandered off. There's no purer, cleaner blood in America, sir."

"And now—how are you getting along with your plans for the operation of the coal mine?"

"Excellently," answered Dale. "We have the necessary finance; a geared locomotive and cars and light steel rails have been bargained for."

"Good!" Bradley gave Dale a hearty slap on the shoulder.

"There's something else I wanted to say, Mr. Dale," he continued, his voice grave. "You're nearly certain to have a barrel of trouble with a shyster coal man named Henderson Goff. He's a villain, sir, if ever there was one! And he's quite the smoothest article I've ever seen. He can make you believe black is white, if only you'll listen to him long enough."

"Is he—has he been here recently?" Dale wanted to know.

"He's here now," answered the major. "He's been here for three days, and he's been working devilment fast. He was up here last summer, trying to buy the Moreland coal for a song; he knys all the people, you see. As soon as he landed here on this present trip, he found out about your intentions. Then, at night, he freed Adam Ball from his tobacco barn prison, and went home with him."

"Well, by Heck followed them and did some eavesdropping—poor By has his strong points! the major went on. "Goff learned that Adam Ball's father knew about the coal vein long before David Moreland discovered it and got lawful possession of the mountain. Then Goff made the Balls believe that they were due a big share of the proceeds of the Moreland coal—"

It wasn't very hard to do, I guess. The Balls, this set, at least, were originally lowlanders; they took to the mountains, I understand, to keep from being forced to fight during the Civil war."

"Goff's idea," muttered Dale, "is to get the Balls to scare me into selling instead of developing, eh?"

"Exactly," nodded old Bradley. "Then he would settle with the Balls by giving them a dollar or two a day for digging coal; perhaps he would put them off until the mine was worked out for half of that, and then slip. Anyway, Goff would come out at the big end."

"I see," said Dale.

"If there's anything that I can do, at any time, you won't hesitate to let me know?" said the major.

"You may consider yourself attorney and legal adviser for the Moreland Coal company, of which I have the honor to be general manager," smiled Dale, "if you will."

Major Bradley's voice came happily. "My dear boy, I am glad to accept! And there shall be no charge for any service that I may render."

They were not long in reaching the green valley, which lay very beautiful and very peaceful in the warm light of the early July sun. The soft murmuring of the crystal river and the low, slow tinkling of the cowbells made music that was sweet and pleasing.

Suddenly John Moreland stopped, uttered a swearword under his breath, turned and went back to Dale.

"That's a man a-waitin' on us ahead thar, Bill," he drawled, "at ye shore want to watch like a hawk to keep him from a-stealin' the eyeteeth out o' yore head. His name is Henderson Goff, and he wants coal."

They went on. Soon they met a man who, in clothing and manner, made Dale think of stories he had heard and read of Mississippi river steamboat gamblers of the long ago. His eyes were black, and as keen as a pair of spear-points; his mustaches, too, were black, and they had sharp, upturned ends like those of a Memphis. The major had said that he was a smooth article; he certainly looked it.

He met John Moreland with an oily smile and thrust out his hand. But Moreland wouldn't see the hand.

"Anything ye've got to say about coal," he growled, "ye can say to Bill Dale thar," pointing with a calloused thumb. "Bill he's the high light o' the whole business; and when he opens his month, ye can cock yore head to one side and listen fo' gawp."

Goff was delighted to meet Mr. Dale, of whom he had already heard. Dale had nothing whatever to say. They walked on toward the cabin of the Moreland chief, with Goff keeping up a running fire of talk concerning the scenery, the climate—anything but coal.

At John Moreland's gate, Goff nudged Dale with an elbow and whispered:

"Meet me at one o'clock down there where the big sycamore lies across the river. I've got something to tell you that will interest you."

"I want you Littlefords to be on good terms with your neighbors, the Morelands."

625,000 BOTTLES SOLD IN NEW YORK

The fact that 625,000 bottles of Tanlac have been sold in the state of New York since its introduction there less than one year ago, is a big business item that will attract unusual attention throughout the entire East, for nothing like it has ever happened before. It breaks all records.

Mr. George B. Evans, manager of the Gibson-Snow Company, the well-known wholesale druggists, with branches in Albany, Buffalo, Rochester and Syracuse, recently announced that the preparation was now selling in their trade territories alone at the phenomenal rate of approximately 500,000 bottles a year.

"If the present rate continues," said Mr. Evans, "this rate alone will probably require considerably over 750,000 bottles a year. This is a tremendous figure, but I am really conservative in making this statement."

CATARHAL DEAFNESS

is greatly relieved by constitutional treatment. HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE is a constitutional remedy. Catarrhal deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result. Unless the inflammation can be reduced, your hearing may be destroyed forever. HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE acts through the blood on the mucous surfaces of the system, thus reducing the inflammation and causing Nature in restoring normal conditions.

Which Kind of A Pipe-Smoker Are You?

There's the man who doesn't care what kind of tobacco he smokes in his pipe just to hold fire and makes rings.

And there's the man, muddled to have all there is to smoking, who will fill his pipe only with tobacco of real quality and flavor.

The man who insists upon having quality and flavor in his pipe-tobacco may have to pay somewhat more for it nowadays than before the war. That's true of Edgeworth and of good tobacco in all forms.

But the difference in price a man pays for good tobacco is too narrow to influence the judgment of a pipe-smoker who loves his own brand. Other things—all things—cost more in proportion, and he is generally a tolerant fellow who knows that when it is time for good tobacco to come down in price, it will come.

There is something in the very nature of the business of making tobacco that seems to prevent injustice in the matter of price. Whether or not it is the good fellow-ship, the comradeship of pipe-smoking that reaches back into the factory, we don't know. But we know we do try to keep the price as low as we can without detracting one iota from the quality.

We feel that an Edgeworth smoker wants Edgeworth and will pay a right price for his smoke. There's such a lot of comfort in a smoke. It smoothes away a lot of small worries and fits a man to tackle things as they are.

Provided it's the tobacco that absolutely suits his taste.

Every man knows what a good smoke is. The old pipe, a brimming bowl of the right tobacco, a few minutes of perfect comfort.

If you haven't yet found just the right tobacco, we wish you would try Edgeworth. Edgeworth may or may not be just the right tobacco for you, but you can learn at our expense.

Merely write upon a postcard your name and address, then that of the dealer usually filling your smoking needs, and we will willingly send you generous samples of Edgeworth in both forms—Plug Slice and Ready-Rubbed.

Edgeworth Plug Slice is pressed into cakes, then cut into very thin slices. One moist, wafery slice rubbed between the hands makes an average pipe load.

Edgeworth Ready-Rubbed reaches you ready to pour right from can to pipe. It packs well and burns evenly, freely.

Edgeworth is sold in various sizes, suited to the needs and means of all purchasers. Both Edgeworth Plug Slice and Edgeworth Ready-Rubbed come in small, pocket-size packages, in attractive tin humidor and glass jars, and in economical in-between sizes.

For the free samples, address Larus & Brother Company, 41 South 21st Street, Richmond, Va.

To Retail Tobacco Merchants—If your jobber cannot supply you with Edgeworth, Larus & Brother Company will gladly send you prepaid by parcel post a one or two-ounce carton of any size of Plug Slice or Ready-Rubbed for the same price you would pay the jobber.

A solemn ceremonial to voice at once the nation's gratitude to the soldier dead and its hope of deliverance from heavy armaments will be observed from coast to coast on Armistice day under the leadership of President Harding and officials of his administration.

Travelers paid 163 railroads $573,234,211 in passenger fares under increased rates for the first six months of this year as against $564,582,242 for the same period of 1920, before the increase went into effect, the Interstate Commerce Commission announced. Fares were paid by 522,195,000 persons as compared with 505,771,000 in 1920, the average journey in 1921 being 35.04 as against 34.41 miles in 1920. Each traveler paid an average of 3.133 cents a mile this year as against 2.603 in 1920.

Decision of the transcontinental railroads to reduce rates on vegetables from California and other Pacific coast territory points to the territory between the Rocky mountains and Chicago and the Mississippi river was announced by the Interstate Commerce Commission. The reductions will substitute a 15 per cent increase over the rates in effect Aug. 25, 1920, for the 33 1/2 per cent increase which went into effect Aug. 26, 1920, thus removing more than half of the increase made at that time," the commission said.

Dr. J. D. Prince, a language professor at Columbia University and president of the State Civil Commission of New Jersey, has been selected by President Harding as minister to Denmark.

A torrential rain which descended upon Omaha recently flooded the low sections of the city. Water ran five feet deep in the streets in certain residential sections. A bridge on the Burlington railway between Omaha and Hastings, a suburb, was washed out.

THE SUN.

"Some creatures," said Mr. Sun, as he sat back and talked to Mr. Dark Cloud, "think that I've nothing else to do but please them."

"They think I can disappear if they want rain, and that I can appear when they want me to; whereas, as you know, I must do just as Old Man Weather says, though of course I can make special requests sometimes, but not too often."

"Now, I had something said to me only a few minutes ago which annoyed me frightfully."

"What was that?" asked Mr. Dark Cloud. "I'll punish anyone who said anything to you which annoyed you. Yes, I'll be so angry I'll burst and then I'll pour down my anger upon them, and my anger is very wet, unpleasant anger."

"You know I can do that!" "Indeed I do know that," said Mr. Sun, "but then if you did that on the wrong person and that wouldn't do any good."

"But tell me what it was that annoyed you so?" asked Mr. Dark Cloud. "Well," said Mr. Sun, "I was just waiting about and not shinning very much. I was chatting it up with the King of the Clouds and I had not quite made up my mind what to do."

"I had been told by Old Man Weather that he didn't mind what I did."

"And you know I couldn't make up my mind. That happens sometimes, and I simply cannot make up my mind at all. Everyone is like that at times, wondering just what they will do or what they will not do. Making up their minds, in other words."

"As I was making up my mind I heard someone say something very rude."

"The person said: 'Oh, dear, why can't the sun come out and be a man?' And this person grumbled a great deal."

"Now, this person was a lady, and it seems she had been washing her hair. Of course, perhaps I may not be sympathetic and understanding because I never have to wash my hair, not having hair to wash."

"If I had hair to wash I might have been able to understand better what she meant."

"That is, I might have been able to excuse her rudeness with more ease."

"But to me she was very rude. It is true, I suppose, I would have been a great help."

"But I just couldn't be after the way she spoke to me and of me."

"I saw her with her wet hair dripping down her back and over her forehead and getting down into the back of her neck, and pity almost came into my sunny heart, but then I thought how greatly she had annoyed me by losing her temper as she had, so I just came back here for a chat."

"If she had asked me without losing her temper I might have had pity on that dripping wet hair of hers. I still feel rather sorry for her. But I must punish her."

"She will appreciate old Mr. Sun more in the future."

"Yes, she will appreciate me more. And though I am such a sunny creature, I, too, like to be cheered up by a word of thanks and cheer once in a while."

"Well, maybe if her hair isn't dried I may still help her a bit."

"I'm still feeling rather sorry for her, for I did notice that wet hair, and the thought of it has somehow stuck in my mind."

"Of course, when she was so cross she shouldn't have anything done for her, even now, but alas, and alack, those who should be punished often aren't, and those who shouldn't be often are."

"Perhaps I shouldn't have used the word 'often.' 'Sometimes' is better."

"But I did feel sorry for her with the water trickling down her back." "And Mr. Sun left Mr. Dark Cloud and went back and dried the lady's hair!"

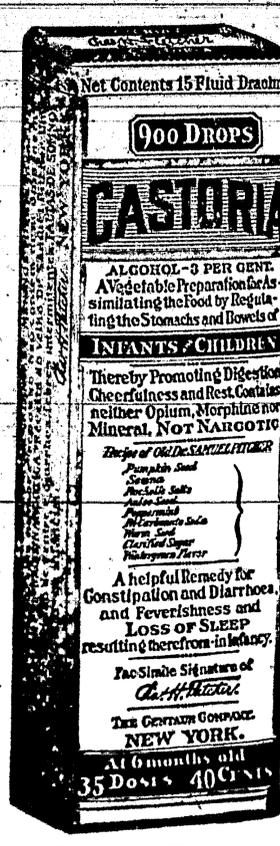

Some More Truths.

WOULD you use a steam shovel to move a pebble? Certainly not. Implements are built according to the work they have to do.

Would you use a grown-up's remedy for your baby's ills? Certainly not. Remedies are prepared according to the work THEY have to do.

All this is preliminary to reminding you that Fletcher's Castoria was sought out, found and is prepared solely as a remedy for Infants and Children. And let this be a warning against Substitutes, Counterfeits and the Just-as-good stuff that may be all right for you in all your strength, but dangerous for the little babe.

All the mother-love that lies within your heart cries out to you: Be true to Baby. And being true to Baby you will keep in the house remedies specially prepared for babies as you would a baby's food, hairbrush, toothbrush or sponge.

Children Cry For Fletcher's CASTORIA

Are You Prepared?

A doctor in the house all the time would be a good idea. Yet you can't afford to keep a doctor in the family to keep baby well or prevent sickness. But you can do almost the same thing by having at hand a bottle of Fletcher's Castoria, because it is a wonderful remedy for indigestion, colic, feverishness, fretfulness and all the other disorders that result from common ailments that babies have.

Fletcher's Castoria is perfectly safe to use. It is a harmless substitute for Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrups. Children cry for Fletcher's Castoria, and mothers recommend it because they have found it a comfort to children and a mother's friend.

If you love your baby, you know how sweet it is to be able to help baby when trouble comes. You cannot always call upon a doctor. But doctors have nothing but good to say of Fletcher's Castoria, because they know that it can only do good—that it can't do any harm—and they wouldn't want you to use for baby a remedy that you would use for yourself.

Discriminating. At a church lawn social, at which most of the candles consisted of homemade fudge given by the ladies of the church, a little miss was having difficulty in selecting the fifth penny's worth of candy to complete her purchase. The saleslady, wishing to help her to decide, inquired if she would like some of "this nice, white fudge." The little girl gave one look at it, and said: "Ugh, no, I believe my mamma made that."

Western Canada Offers Health and Wealth and brought contentment and happiness to thousands of home seekers and their families who have started on their FREE homestead or bought land at attractive prices. They have established their own homes and secured prosperity and independence. In the great prairie growing sections of the prairie provinces there is still to be had on easy terms

Fertile Land at $15 to $30 an Acre—land similar to that which through many years has yielded from 20 to 40 bushels of wheat to the acre—cattle, barley and flax also in great abundance, while raising horses, cattle, sheep and hogs is really profitable. Hundreds of farmers in Western Canada have raised crops in a single season worth more than the whole cost of their land. Healthful climate, good neighbors, churches, schools, rural telephone, excellent markets and shipping facilities. The climate and soil offer inducements for almost every branch of agriculture. The advantages for

WHY DRUGGISTS RECOMMEND SWAMP-ROOT.

For many years druggists have watched with much interest the remarkable record maintained by Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder medicine.

It is a physician's prescription. Swamp-Root is a strengthening medicine. It helps the kidneys, liver and bladder do the work nature intended they should do.

Swamp-Root has stood the test of years. It is sold by all druggists on its merit and it should help you. No other kidney medicine has so many friends.

Be sure to get Swamp-Root and start treatment at once.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.—Advertisement.

Cats, unlike politicians, give voice to the most decided utterances while on the fence.

"Miss Lily White will please stand up!" But Phoebe upward wriggled! "I'm Lily White—with Faultless Starch!" And all the Pupils giggled.

FAULTLESS STARCH

What to Take for CONSTIPATION

Take a good dose of Carter's Little Liver Pills—then take 2 or 3 for a few nights after. They cleanse your system of all waste matter and regulate your bowels. Mild—as easy to take as sugar. Contains no harmful ingredients. Small Pill. Small Dose. Small Price.

Victor Hugo's Dream And Disarmament

Years ago, when Victor Hugo preached wildly, as most people thought, yet they little realized that their descendants would some day see his dreams come true. The thought those days of disarming nations of the earth and quieting the dogs of war which if not continually in the fight, were straining at their leashes, was a condition so remote, that it was laughed to scorn.

But now, we are beginning to realize that his wildest dream (so called) will, let us hope, soon be a reality. Representatives of the nations of the earth are soon to gather in Washington with the one purpose in view—Disarmament of the world—Think of it! When wars shall be no more; when hands that once clutched at each other's throats, will be clasped across the high seas. The dream (or revelation) as we may choose to term it, follows:

"A day will come, when the only battlefield will be, the market open to commerce and the mind open to new ideas. A day will come, when bullets and bombshells will be replaced by votes, by universal suffrage of nations; by arbitration of a sovereign senate which will be to Europe, what the parliament is to England, the diet is to Germany and the assembly is to France. The day will come, when canon balls will be exhibited in public museums just as instruments of torture are now and the people will be astonished, at how such a thing could have been. A day will come, when these two immense groups, the United States of America and the United States of Europe shall be seen extending the hand of fellowship across the ocean, exchanging their products, their industry, their arts, their genius; clearing the earth, populating the deserts, improving creation under the eye of the Creator and uniting for the good of all, these two irresistible powers—the fraternity of men and the power of God."

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; else cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous membrane.
 We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness caused by catarrh that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure.

Buffalo Bills Grave

PAHASKA TEPEO

By JOHN DICKINSON SHERMAN.

YOU presumably know, as all good Americans should, that Buffalo Bill, Col. William F. Cody, is buried at Lookout Mountain in the Front range of the Colorado Rockies.

But do you know that more people visit Buffalo Bill's grave each year than go to the graves of Washington and Lincoln? Well, it is so. And there appears to be ground for the statement that within a few years Buffalo Bill's grave will be the most-visited grave in the world.

This is the way of it: The city and county of Denver have established the Denver Mountain parks, lying between the city and the peaks of the continental divide. There are 3,230 acres; the cost has been $477,850; there are 60 miles of roads. Lookout Mountain is one of the scenic features of these parks. The main automobile road, of which the Larain trail is a part, climbs to its summit. Buffalo Bill's grave is on the east slope of Lookout Mountain, and is easily reached by a road that turns out at the Golden reservoir on the summit. Close by the grave the city has established a Buffalo Bill museum. In the summer of 1921 approximately 250,000 visitors entered the gates of the Denver Mountain parks. Of these visitors about one-quarter was from other states. Most of these out-of-state visitors stopped to see the grave and the museum. So much for the present.

The tourist business of the scenic West is increasing tremendously year by year. Denver is geographically the gateway to this scenic West with its twelve national parks and thirty-two national monuments. It is the starting point of the National Park-to-Park highway. Most visitors to Denver in the summer drive through the Denver Mountain parks. So, as the tourists grow in numbers, the visitors to Buffalo Bill's grave will increase.

The Buffalo Bill museum on Lookout mountain was opened to the public last Memorial day. The park officials report that, in connection with Buffalo Bill's grave, has proved to be the most popular feature of the mountain parks this last summer.

Pahaska Tepeo is the official name of the Buffalo Bill museum. The name is well taken. "Pahaska" is the name given Buffalo Bill by the Sioux Indians. The word means "Long Hair." The building is typically mountain style in construction. Within it are housed the personal relics and collections of Buffalo Bill. This was made possible through the interest and generosity of his widow, Mrs. Louisa M. Cody, to whom nearly the whole collection belongs. And the crowning touch of the museum is the fact that Johnny Baker is in charge of it. Yes, the very same world's champion shotgun and rifle shot who was Buffalo Bill's right-hand man so many years in the show business.

Certainly it is that no American youngster—to say nothing of the grownups—can pass by Pahaska Tepeo without stopping. The museum houses a decidedly interesting collection. Some of these are:

The more important paintings of Buffalo Bill. Among these is the Papacena equestrian portrait, presented to the city of Denver. When the monument is erected over Buffalo Bill's grave, this painting will be done into bronze. The photograph given herewith gives an idea of how the equestrian statue will fit in with the surroundings.

Paintings of frontier life done for Buffalo Bill by noted artists in accordance with his descriptions of scenes and incidents.

The scalp of Yellow Hand and the knife with which Buffalo Bill killed the chief and lifted his scalp. Yellow Hand was a noted Cheyenne chief who took part in the Sioux war of 1870. Buffalo Bill was serving as a government scout. At the battle of Indian Creek the scout and the chief met in personal combat in full view of the contending forces. In those days it was the proper thing for a victor to "count his coups"; hence the scalp.

The gun used by Sitting Bull in the battle of the Little Big Horn; Sitting Bull's scalp, shirt and peace pipe. Sitting Bull (1837-90) was the famous Sioux chief who led the 6,000 Indians who wiped out Gen. George A. Custer, and his 277 men in 1876. He escaped to Canada, returned in 1890 and was killed in an attempt to rescue him from arrest.

"Lucretia Borgia," the rifle which gave Buffalo Bill his name. When the Union Pacific was being built the scout made a contract with the railroad company to furnish its laborers with meat. In eighteen months, 1867-8, Buffalo Bill is said to have killed 4,350 buffalo with this rifle in carrying out his contract.

Buffalo Bill's guns, saddles, bridles and personal ornaments, including many gifts made to him by Indian chiefs and by crowned heads in Europe.

Mementoes of the tours of the "Wild West Show" in Europe.

Now, lest the younger generation should think of Buffalo Bill as merely an Indian fighter, buffalo killer and showman, here are the principal facts in his life, in brief: Born in 1846 in Scott county, Iowa; 1850, "Pony Express" rider; 1861-3, cavalry scout for the Union in Civil war; 1872, member Nebraska legislature; 1870-1, brigadier general Nebraska National Guard in Indian wars; 1871, organized Wild West show; 1901, president of Cody Military college, Wyoming; judge advocate general of Wyoming National Guard; president Shoshone Irrigation company; author of five books written between 1870 and 1910.

Municipal Facts, an official Denver publication, gives the following information of Pahaska Tepeo and its purpose:

The city of Denver, largely through the instrumentality of W. F. R. Mills, chairman of the mountain parks advisory commission, erected the museum building in accordance with an agreement with Johnny Baker, the world champion shotgun and rifle shot, who was with Colonel Cody in his show business from the time that Baker operated the building as a concession, but no admission is ever to be charged to the Buffalo Bill museum.

Aside from the historical and romantic interest attached to the building through the collection, the structure itself is so absolutely suited to the purpose for which it was designed, that it seems to have been inspired. The structure is built of undressed pine logs, covered with hand-split shingles. The crowning feature of the building from an architectural standpoint, is the remarkable use made of gnarled and curved logs and branches, stumps and roots of trees. There is probably no chandelier in the world so unique as that which hangs from the two-story ceiling of the Tepee.

Heads and skins of wild animals hang from the walls and balcony rails. Two snarling wolves' heads gleam from recesses in the great stone fireplace. At the entrance an ancient buffalo skull, with the skin and hair partly adhering, bears the legend, "The Last of the Buffalo."

Aside from the museum features Pahaska Tepeo fills a long-felt want in the mountain parks. For several years the park authorities of Denver have been desirous of establishing a pavilion somewhere in Lookout Mountain park, equipped with a high-class, popular-priced restaurant, for the convenience of Denver's residents and guests.

Fronting the plains is an immense balcony from which, with a pair of field glasses, one may look into the states of Wyoming, Nebraska and Kansas, the states that, with Colorado, were the stamping grounds of Buffalo Bill during his life as hunter and government scout. Denver stretches out on the plains, ten miles distant on an air line, and at night the lights of the city, twinkling in unison with the stars above, blize in a wide diamond-studded bank from north to south. The view is superlative either by day or night; there are few views in America more interesting and impressive.

Eventually a monument to Colonel Cody is to be erected at his grave. The Cody Memorial association was raising funds for this purpose when America entered the war and, of course, the movement, like many similar ones throughout the country, had to be abandoned for the time being. It is expected that the association will now revive the project.

BLAST WRECKS GERMAN CITY

OPPAU, THE SCENE OF TRAGEDY, RESEMBLES A BATTLEFIELD.

EXPLOSION KILLS 1,000

FRENCH MEDICAL UNITS AID WRECKED CITY ON RHINE.

(Western Newspaper Union News Service.)

Mayerne, Germany.—A great explosion at the chemical products plant of Oppau on the Rhine, wrecked the town and spread death and destruction. The number of killed is estimated at from 1,000 to 1,500, and the injured nearly 2,000.

Oppau is a scene of desolation, more than a third of the houses having been destroyed, while the roofs of the others were swept off. Here also many were killed or injured.

The explosion is attributed by some to excess pressure in two adjoining gasometers, this part of the works being pulverized. Where the gasometers stood is now a funnel-shaped hole 130 yards wide and forty-five yards deep, while twisted girders and debris lie scattered about. For several hundred yards not a wall is left standing.

Ludwigshafen reports say three workmen's trains were hurled under the wreckage and many children injured.

Heartrending scenes were witnessed. At the little cemetery near Oppau numerous tombstones were hurled in various directions. There was not a door or window left intact for a radius of three miles.

French medical units helped in the rescue work. Assistance also was rushed from neighboring towns, and all public and private motor cars and vehicles were requisitioned.

The shock was felt as far as Frankfurt, more than forty miles away, and many windows were broken there.

The whole district was enveloped in thick smoke which, together with the cutting of telegraph and telephone communication with neighboring towns hampered the efforts of assistance.

All the available fire brigades were rushed to the spot but the work of rescue was found by the relief parties to be exceedingly difficult.

Rescuers who penetrated Oppau reported finding hundreds of dead and wounded lying in the debris. The uninjured inhabitants fled in panic when the explosion occurred.

A late statement issued by the management of the Oppau factory says that the explosion occurred in a reservoir containing 200 tons of ammonium sulphate. It adds that all necessary precautions had been taken so that an explosion appeared impossible.

Vienna Money Changers Mobbed. Vienna.—Serious disorders and demonstrations against profiteering occurred in this city following the closing of the bourse. WOMEN WHO CANNOT WORK

Read Mrs. Corley's Letter and Benefit by Her Experience

Edmund, S. G.—"I was run down with nervousness and female troubles and suffered every month. I was not able to do any work, and tried a lot of medicine, but got no relief. I saw your medicine advertised in a little book that was thrown in my door, and I had not taken two bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound before I could see it was helping me. I am keeping house now and am able to do all of my work. I cannot say enough for your medicine. It has done more for me than any doctor. I have not paper enough to tell you how much it has done for me and for my friends. You may print this letter if you wish."—Elizabeth C. Corley, care of A. P. Corley, Edmund, S. G.

Ability to stand the strain of work is the privilege of the strong and healthy, but how our hearts ache for the weak and sickly women struggling with their daily rounds of household duties, with backaches, headaches, nervousness and almost every movement brings a new pain. Why will not the mass of letters from women all over this country, which we have been publishing, convince such women that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help them just as surely as it did Mrs. Corley?

"SHOWING OFF" THE COLONEL

Storekeeper Had Eye for Business in Keeping Good-Looking Customer Waiting for Attention.

A woman in a small town asked her husband, Colonel Blank, to call in at the dairy when passing to order some new-laid eggs. After making a brief demur the colonel yielded. A little later he called at the shop in question, quite a small and unimportant establishment on a back street.

Two or three minutes passed; then, as no one came to serve him, the colonel gave a gentle knock on the counter. This had no effect; so a smart double rap was given. Then a curly-headed youngster put his head around the door and announced, "Father's a-comin'."

By the time the father arrived the colonel was boiling with rage. "What do you mean by keeping me waiting all this time?" he roared. "Very sorry, sir," said the man, "but you see it's like this. You're the very first good-looking man that I've had in my shop, and as there were a lot of people passing by I thought what a good advertisement you was a-standin' there."—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Considerable Agitation. "Either my eyes are acting funny or else there's something powerful wrong with yore house," said an acquaintance who had halted in the big road to stare at the Johnson domicile. "I reckon it must be my eyesight, but the doggone house 'pears to be shakin' and shiverin' like it was going to tumble down."

"Av, I reckon jikely my fourteen children happen to have took a notion to scratch their chiggers at the same-put!—same time," replied Gap Johnson of Rumpus Ridge, who was hanging over his own front fence, hooked on by the elbows.—Kansas City Star.

Do you discriminate at the dining table—or are you thoughtless?

In thousands of homes, a "line" is drawn at the breakfast table. Tea or coffee is served for "grown-ups" and Postum for children. But some parents do not discriminate. Caffeine and tannin, the injurious contents of coffee and tea, seriously retard the development of the delicate nerve tissues in children.

Consequently, instead of rich, satisfying Postum, children are over-stimulated by the drugs in tea and coffee; and so may grow up irritable and nervous. Any doctor can tell you that this is a great evil and should be corrected.

Although some parents feel a certain justification for the personal indulgence in coffee, yet the harm to them may be equally serious. It may take a little while longer for the drugs in coffee and tea to affect

PELTRY HAS CALL

Fur to Acorn Suits and Coats as Collars, Cuffs, Borders.

Tricotone Suits for Early Wear. With Moussyne and Duvet de Laine for Winter.

Fabrics which have found especial favor for the fall season are represented in the collection of suits and coats now being shown. For early wear tricotone is a medium used to fashion suits, with moussyne and duvet de laine for colder weather. Coats evidence a liking for panvelaine moussyne and bolivia. Fur is used to advantage on both suits and coats, forming collars, cuffs and borders.

A suit of corrento blue moussyne shows the jacket trimmed with a blue fox collar and cuffs, the blue tones further accented in floss embroideries which describe arrow motifs at the bust and at the back form a panel showing greater width at the shoulders than at the hips. Finger-tip length jackets are highly favored.

A suit devoid of fur adornment, developed along more tailored lines, is also formed of moussyne. An interesting treatment is noted in the back section of the jacket, where soft fullness above the waistline develops into steep treatments below the waistline. The treatment is reversed at the front, where strappings terminate in softly pouched pockets.

Coats in many instances feature the flat back and front with fullness introduced at the sides, an effect at once youthful and flattering. Panvelaine fashions a coat of this sort, the lower skirt section treated with a series of self-cut turkings which are repeated on the flare sleeves. A shawl collar of squirrel adds to the attractiveness of this number.

The wide flowing sleeve is advanced, one model showing a marked use of this mode being made of panvelaine. The sleeves are so cut as to be worn flying open at the lower edge.

HOW THE NEW VEILS ARE WORN

Face Covering Floats Out and Hangs to Shoulders, Adding Gracefulness to Wearer.

How do you wear your veil? Inquires the New York Sun. Do you pull a large meshed veil over your face so that the tip of your round-ended nose pushes through or the end of your pointed nose sticks out? Do you pull the veil tightly across your forehead so that your eyelashes catch in it? Do you always have an irritating little excess of veil under the chin that you repeatedly roll and twist into a little bunch to get it out of the way? Do you get the veil on so that it draws in some places and sags in others? Do you have trouble because the veil slips from around your hat down over your eyes, while it remains secure around your neck and chin? Do you lose the ends at the back from their fastening and find them floating out in the winds of heaven behind you?

Of course if you follow the mode in veils you need do none of these things, for the really smart veil nowadays floats loosely at the back and is not held in at all, unless around the throat. Some of the new veils are made with little ruffs of feather or tulle or ribbon that fasten about the throat. Above this band the veil puffs and balloons, and little effort is made to keep it taut and smooth. Some of the new veils are exceedingly attractive. They are made so that they flare in almost circular shape from the small hats with which they are worn. They float out and hang to the shoulders and add much gracefulness to their wearer.

The tight, snug veil is often considered in Europe a typically American trick. That is to say, Europeans consider the American woman a past mistress at arranging the neat face veil.

WOOL SHAWLS FOR WINTER

Wrap That May Be Thrown Across Shoulders Carelessly Will Keep Out Frigid Blasts.

The desire for Spanish shawls is not, it seems, just an isolated flight, for we are to have shawls for the winter, too. They are to be of wool and embroidered, and, generally speaking, they are to retain much of the grace and charm possessed by the highly colored ones of this season. Women have found them too becoming to part with them lightly, and they are practical adjuncts to the wardrobe, to be sure, for they can be thrown across the shoulders carelessly, yet effectively, if keeping out frigid blasts happens to be a subject of any moment.

Select from among the new richings, lace plisse crepe or gathered ruffles, the special neck adornment which is most becoming. One of these dainty accessories adds irrepressible chic to the dark suit or dress.

THE SILK SPORT SWEATER

The silk and wool jersey sport skirt continues popular. If, as illustrated, there is a new detail in the design, all the better. A black silk sweater completes the outfit.

The bodice section is cut full and atright and embroidered on the sleeves and back with self floss and gold metal thread. A round cord girdle marks the low waistline at the back with a self belt crossing the front and tying loosely.

Gray bolivia is chosen to fashion a coat trimmed with beaver. This is a full straight model with a hand of the fur marking the low waistline. Self tucks of slender order emanate from the neckline in sunburst effect, and an interesting handling is seen in the sleeves cut with a deep armhole, the lower sleeve in ruffle form, the wrist belted with a band of the fur. A wide beaver collar finishes the neck.

FASHIONS IN BRIEF

Cape frocks are worn by both grown-ups and children.

Foulard dresses with narrow flower girdles are being worn.

An evening gown of black lace has a neck which is high in front and slopes to the girdle in back.

Petticoats are carefully fitted at the waistline so that there may be no extra bulk in unnecessary gathers.

Black crepe de chine dresses with monkey fur fringe in perpendicular rows from waist to hem are shown.

In the evening gown, the soft radi um taffetas are preferred in the Empress Eugenie types with the long, slim bodice.

A sleeveless afternoon gown of taffeta worn with a pair of black fancy gauntlets and black ruch around your neck is mighty stylish.

Very up to date girls are wearing kid gauntlets generously embroidered, some in plain silks and beads, but mostly in steel. Very often these will sport upon the cuff the wearer's monogram.

Georgettes and laces, and now wraps of silk and lace, or silk voile and georgette have taken to their hearts linings of velvet, duvetyne and fur, thus upsetting our established notions as to material propriety.

Cotton. Spot cotton prices declined 181 points during the week, closing at 18.55¢ per pound. New York October futures lost 265 points closing at 18.10¢.

Hay. Light hay receipts at Cincinnati, Chicago and Minneapolis have caused demand and an advance of $2 per ton at Minneapolis. Eastern and southern markets quiet and unchanged. Some export inquiry at New York. Demand generally only local and will not absorb heavy receipts. Quoted No. 1 timothy, No. 2 timothy $18.50, No. 3 timothy $17.50. Chicago $25, Minneapolis $18.50, Atlanta $27, Memphis $22, No. 1 alfalfa $14.50, No. 2 alfalfa $13.50, No. 3 alfalfa $12.50, Kansas City $10.50.

Feed. Feed markets generally quiet and but little change in quotations. Minneapolis reports strength in wheat feeds caused by higher grain prices. Excellent pasture, curtailing demand. Fall offerings of cottonseed meal 22 below spot sales. Hominy feed lower on selling pressure. Linnecorn meal and oak firm at Kansas City, quiet at other markets. Quoted Spring bran, New York $22.50, Minneapolis $13, Chicago $12.50. Hard winter bran, Kansas City $11, Standard middlings, Minneapolis $14, Grey shorts Kansas City $17.50. Cottonseed meal, 36 per cent, Memphis $26, Atlanta $27, Linnecorn meal, New York $47.50, Minneapolis $23, White hominy feed, Chicago $23, Alfalfa meal, Kansas City $18.

DENVER LIVE STOCK

Cattle. Sales being made on a steady basis. High good beef steers selling at $6.50 to $7.50 and heifers at $5.50. Beef stock continues in good demand and quality stock was quotable at $5.75 to $6.25. Fair feeding cattle ranging between $5.00 and $5.50. Inquiries for cows fair, but the choice type was quotable at $4.75 to $5.00, and less desirable cows at $3.25 to $4.00.

Hogs. Trading in the hog market has been strong and active, with supplies moving readily under a good demand. Prices from 25 to 50 cents higher on all types. Heavier types helped the biggest part of the advance with 300-pound hogs selling for $6.50. Packing and smaller hogs were equally interested as buyers, and top sales at $8.50 were touched by both. Good lightweight stock was quotable at $8.25 to $8.50. Heavy throats at $5.25 and fairly desirable heavies at $8.00 to $8.50.

Sheep. Demand for feeding lambs fair and steady and quotations of this type would hold fairly steady. Choice fat stock was quotable at $8.25 to $8.50, with medium grades bringing $7.25 to $7.50. Ewes were quoted at $5.75 to $5.25. Not many ewes included in the offering, but the type was quoted at $2.25 to $3.00.

Notice to Automobile Owners and Drivers

The law governing operation of motor vehicles is very stringent and penalties for violation are very severe. The new law limits speed to 35 miles per hour on public highways; 15 miles per hour in limits of towns and villages; prohibits driving by children under 14; and provides for arrest without warrant, of all violators. There has been two very serious accidents in Dona Ana County recently, both caused by violations of this law. To prevent injuries and deaths, the sheriffs have been notified to arrest violators of this law and they will be prosecuted and punished accordingly. Your observance of this law may save a life and will obviate prosecutions.

Who Am I?

I was born on the 1st day of June, 1909, at Duran, of sturdy, loyal and honest parentage, of the type that held above everything the much sought after and once attained, cherished Ideal, of Righteous Service to their fellowman, and it was during my short but pleasant sojourn in the vicinity of Duran that I learned from practical experience the great inestimable value of the true and loyal friendship of the happy people of this thriving community.

Then, like to the impulse that is best known to youth I moved to Vaughn, where the great Ideal which was my heritage began to manifest itself and like perhaps best to the Pine which having attained sufficient age to bear its cones; my Ideal began to bud forth and prove its true worth by the many true and loyal friends I acquired during my residence in this peaceful thrifty sector, many of whom I still have the pleasure of meeting now and then to renew our unbroken friendship.

Having grown somewhat older while my dauntless spirit craved for more. True and Loyal Friendship. I moved to Corona to take up my abode and settle down for life and where I have now lived for the past seven years and more, and where I think I can best serve all. It is here where my Ideal is blooming, which is being made possible through the loyal and cheerful support I received from newly formed acquaintances and staunch friendship I have been able to enjoy here blended together with those whom I met earlier in life, all of which gives me the true value of my Ideal which I hope to preserve through eternity, and which has made me what I am to-day.
