Murder at Rabenton

On Wednesday night at Rabenton a cold-blooded murder was committed, the victim being Miguel Montoya, a storekeeper at that place. A deep mystery surrounds the unfortunate affair, as no one that has visited the scene of the murder seems to have the slightest idea of what caused the crime or what the provocation, if any, led to the killing which was one of the most cowardly in the history of the state.

As near as can be learned, Montoya and two other men whose names could not be learned, were in a pool room, the last two mentioned leaving ahead of Montoya. Some say that the two men started a "fake" quarrel on the outside evidently to attract the appearance of Montoya, and if this was the scheme, it worked perfectly. By this time, the keeper of the pool room entered and in company with Montoya, stepped into the street, when two shots were fired, the first entering Montoya's left side, passing completely through his body and lodging in the muscle of his right arm. The second penetrated his breast. He died in a few minutes after the shooting. The shots were fired from ambush, and, at the present time, there is no clew to the murder or murderers as the case may be. Bloodhounds were wired for from Santa Fe, but there was such a demand for the hounds on other murder cases that they could not be obtained.

Republican Women Will Meet in Albuquerque, N. M., August 28

The call for the first annual meeting of the State Association of Republican Women, has been issued by Mrs. C. M. Foraker, temporary president, to take place in the rooms of the Chamber of Commerce in Albuquerque, on Monday, August 28.

At this meeting, which will be attended by delegates from each county in the state, the permanent organization will be perfected and officers elected. At 8:30 in the evening an elaborate dinner will be served at the Armory and men and women of prominence will address the assemblage.

School Opens

The schools of Carrizozo will open Sept. 4. Classes will be called, names of books and needed supplies given, and lessons, as far as possible, will be assigned, after which the pupils will be dismissed for the day; the real work will begin Tuesday.

Supt. Cole will be in his office all of next week and will be glad to consult with the parents and pupils concerning the work of the coming year. These consultations should occur before Saturday, as the superintendent will be busy with the teachers on that day.

The general teachers' meeting will be at 9 o'clock on Saturday, at which time all the teachers are expected to be present. The meeting of the high school faculty will be held at 10:30.

It is important that all pupils be present on the first day of school, thereby getting a good start. This is especially important to pupils of the high school where there is great privilege in the selection of studies, and where the daily program is arranged to meet the requirements of those who are about to graduate.

Public Roads Bureau Branch Ordered Here

Santa Fe, N. M., Aug. 21.—A branch office of the federal Bureau of Public Roads, which approved plans for federal aid roads submitted by the state highway department, is to be opened in Santa Fe—in Room 8, Federal building—Monday morning.

H. P. Martin, senior engineer, is to have charge of the office and a force of a half dozen men under him, including office men and inspectors and other employees who work on the "jobs."

This branch was left in Albuquerque several months ago when the district office for New Mexico and Arizona was moved from there to Phoenix, Arizona, but owing to the close relationship between this office and the state highway department in federal aid road building it was decided to move it to Santa Fe.

Carrizozo Entertainers

The Carrizozo Entertainers announce that their next number will be a moving picture. The proceeds from this entertainment will be applied on the indebtedness as if it were a regular attraction by the Entertainers themselves. The matter has been taken up with Mr. Sterling who courteously consented, four of the leading moving picture concerns were consulted and all agreed to select a picture, give a good reduction in price and allow its use for the purpose stated.

The committee finally selected a Pathe production, "Lady Godiva" story of the glory of a woman's purity. "Picture Play" states if you enjoy authentic Old World settings and skilled actors this will appeal to you.

It is recommended that all read "Lady Godiva" by Alfred Tennyson, read also the legend of the lady and be prepared to enjoy one of the greatest pictures shown here. Conditions are such that the Entertainers can put on this picture at their regular price of 25c and 50c.

Government to be Lenient With New Homesteaders

Washington, Aug. 21.—The government will be inclined to deal leniently with western reclamation "homesteaders" who, because of deflated crop prices, may find themselves unable to meet obligations due Uncle Sam this fall and winter. Secretary of the Interior Fall states in a message to the Reclamation Record on the 20th anniversary of the enactment of the federal reclamation act.

However, Fall sounded the sharp warning that his department intends to be stern in its refusal to defer payments from persons who are not true homesteaders and have been caught short by speculation or by their lack of fitness for farming. It is only the bonafide, sincere public land settlers that the government seeks to encourage and aid, the secretary asserted.

"Obviously," said Fall, "it is not the policy of the government to encourage the use of its bounty in the enrichment of those who do not make use of the land, or to extend relief indefinitely to those unqualified for farm life. To do either would be a distinct disservice to those who, by industry and hard toil, are meeting their obligations."

Fall expressed the opinion that the majority of irrigation settlers will meet their obligations to the government when due.

Fall handed out a few "success" tips to public land settlers. He urged, chiefly, moderate individual land holdings, personal supervision, diversified crops, more dairying and more method and organization in the marketing of crops.

One Dead One Dying

Prescott, Ariz., Aug. 23.—William S. Bourne, 49, is dead, and James McClure, 36, is reported dying as the result of a pistol duel at their lonely camp last night, following McClure's unexpected return from Colorado, according to word reaching here today. Mrs. McClure and her two daughters, one 14 and the other 12, were the only witnesses to the tragedy.

With Bourne slain and her husband shot through the head and dying, Mrs. McClure walked three miles to the nearest ranch and told her story to the cowboys there. One of the cowboys rode 15 miles through a terrific rainstorm to Wagoner, arriving there about 1 o'clock Wednesday morning. He notified Supervisor C. C. Stuckey, who rode to Kirkland and summoned the sheriff, coroner and doctors by telephone early this morning.

Bourne was the superintendent of the Independence Mining Development and Recovery company, a Gallup, N. M., corporation owning property 15 miles south of Wagoner.

McClure who had served overseas during the war, was also a mining man with properties in that district. In addition he owned a small ranch there, where, during his absence, Bourne had made his home.

Bourne was well known here. He was a brother to Mrs. W. R. White of Ruidoso, the latter named sister leaving for the scene as soon as the news was received.

The agreement provides for a claims commission to be composed of two commissioners and an umpire.

The trials and tribulations of senators are not so much concerned with the tariff, the soldiers' bonus and the ship subsidy as they are with the industrial crisis that completely overshadowed the legislative program. Senators are being bombarded with telegraphic appeals from their constituents for relief from actual or impending fuel shortages due to the coal strike, or from transportation or freight losses resulting from the railroad walkout.

The Intermediate Rate Association, composed of representatives of chambers of commerce and trade bodies in eight western states, decided to inaugurate a vigorous campaign to have the present Congress enact an absolute short and long haul law. Members of the association meeting at Salt Lake City declined to take any part in the discussion of the proposed legislation, which would place the international steamship carriers under the jurisdiction of the Interstate Commerce Commission for rate fixing purposes.

Formal announcement that recent oil land decisions of the Mexican Supreme Court do not, in the opinion of officials at Washington, effectively protect the rights of American land owners, was made recently in a statement issued by the State Department. The five court opinions upon which some Mexican officials have based a hope of recognition for the Obregon regime, were said in a statement to apparently establish a precedent protecting improved oil lands from confiscation, without furnishing the same guarantee for land in which mining operations had not been actually begun.

News of the approval of a tariff rate of 2.2 cents a pound on sugar by the Senate at Washington has been received with jubilation by Philippine planters. Virtually every important coal mine in Nova Scotia is closed by a strike of upward of 12,000 miners. Five thousand Cape Breton miners at a mass meeting at Glace Bay, and other large meetings, repudiated the agreement which their officers made with the British Empire Steel Corporation and declared for the strike. Terms of the latest company offer raised minimum day rates from $2.85 to $3.25 and contract rates 10 per cent. # CABINET IS FOR POINCARE

PREMIER'S PLAN FOR IMMEDIATE CONVENING OF PARLIAMENT MEETS OPPOSITION.

MORATORIUM REFUSED

FRENCH MINISTRY IS SILENT ON STEPS TO BE TAKEN IN MORATORIUM.

Rambouillet, France.—Sitting under the presidency of President Millerand the French cabinet at its session recently gave approval unanimously to the attitude taken by Premier Poincare at the recent conference of allied premiers in London and also discussed the question of a moratorium for Germany.

On the matter of a moratorium it was decided to await the forthcoming decision of the reparations commission, but plans were perfected regarding the measures to be adopted should the decision of the commission fail to agree with the French viewpoint.

Another decision arrived at was that for the time being the government need not call an extraordinary session of Parliament so that the deputies and senators might be acquainted with the exact situation and the program of the government. Freedom of action was reserved, however, to consult with parliament in the event that the plans adopted should require legislative endorsement.

M. Poincare's plan for an immediate convening of parliament developed opposition, of which President Millerand was the leader, and finally was defeated.

M. Poincare went to London with the specific mandate to execute a plan which had been signed by all the members of the cabinet without the slightest deviation. It is known that when Poincare made some concessions to David Lloyd George's counter proposal a telegram was dispatched to him from Rambouillet requesting the strict carrying out of the specific plan agreed upon.

All the ministers were in a sober mood as they emerged from the large sitting room of the Rambouillet palace. M. Poincare responded to the cheering of the people who had assembled at the Rambouillet station.

"This is the best republican opinion I can get," he remarked. What retaliatory measures will be taken by France should Germany be declared in wilful default of her reparations obligations is being kept a close secret. It appears that the French ministers are of the opinion that a moratorium will be refused Germany, but that they have little hope the reparations commission will declare Germany in wilful default.

The Belgian vote on the reparations commission is regarded as certain to be against a moratorium, or else the Belgian representative will abstain from voting on the proposal, which would be equivalent to a negative vote. But a similar abstention by the Belgian member on the French proposal to declare Germany in wilful default, would place France in the minority on that question.

Textile Mills to Restore Wages.
Lawrence, Mass.—The Pacific Mills Company announced that beginning Oct. 1 it would restore the rate of wages that existed prior to March 27 last. The present textile strike began upon announcement last March by the Pacific Mills of a 20 per cent wage cut.

"The Virginian" Hero Dies.
Los Angeles.—Edwin B. Trafton, whose experiences in the Jackson Hole country of Wyoming, was said to have formed the basis of Owen Wister's novel, "The Virginian," dropped dead while eating an ice cream soda a few days ago. Trafton was identified from letters in his pocket. One was written by James W. Melrose of Denver, who stated that Trafton, known also as Ed Harrington, had been a guide in Yellowstone park for thirty-five years, and had punched bulls "with Buffalo Bill," and had many exciting experiences in the days of the old West.

Pueblo Postmaster Gets Raise.
Washington.—In the readjustment of postmasters' salaries, following the computation of the postal receipts for the year ended Dec. 31, 1921, a number of increases have been made. These are effective as of July 1, and will continue until the next readjustment at the end of the present year. The postmaster at Pueblo, Colo., gets an increase from $3,000 to $4,000 and the postmaster at Casper, Wyo., from $3,500 to $5,000.

Society Founded to Avert Strikes.
Chicago.—The incorporation of a national society of the middle classes to act as a "balance of power" to prevent strikes and other forms of industrial strife, under the name of the Society of the American Commonwealth, was announced in Chicago recently. The object, according to Marvin V. Eshaw, head of the new society, is to create among the people a voice as powerful as such disastrous strikes as the country has faced recently would be deemed necessary.

At a joint meeting of the Santa Cruz county board of supervisors and the county highway commission it was decided to build a bridge costing approximately $18,000 across Sonolita creek at Patagonia. The structure will span the creek on the new state highway between Patagonia and Cochise county.

Construction of the new mill for the Stargo Mines, Inc., in the Clifton, Ariz., district, is being pushed and it is expected that the plant which will handle 150 tons daily, will be completed by the 15th of September. The Stargo Company, which is controlled by Benjamin Getzoff of New York, is now employing about fifty men.

The new railroad, extending from Lucero, on the National Lines of Mexico to the properties of the Abumunda Lead Company, and the Erupcion Mining Company of Warren, Ariz., which are located in the Los Lamentos district of Chihuahua, has been completed. Shipments of about 200 tons of lead ore will soon begin to the El Paso smelter.

Members of Fred Hillburn post, American Legion, met recently in Douglas to discuss definite plans for entertainment of the delegates to the state convention to be held in Douglas Sept. 18, 19 and 20. W. J. Murphy, chairman of the entertainment committee, presented an outline of a program the committee has prepared, which includes several novel and interesting numbers.

Several hundred men have been added to the United Verde Copper Company payroll with the operation of a third reverberatory at the Clarkdale, Ariz., smelter. Near Jerome steam shovels are handling some 3,000 yards of material a day and are approaching the old mine workings, from which it is expected a large tonnage of good smelting ore will be obtained. The recently completed Cottrell fume treating plant is now in operation.

Mating customs in vogue for countless generations among Indians on the Camp Verde reservation, fifty miles east of Prescott, are to be supplanted at once by the marital laws of the white man. Supt. J. O. Barnd of the reservation was busy recently issuing marriage licenses, and five ceremonies were performed as the first of a series of weddings in wholesale lots.

"We are attempting to make these people feel they are mating as human beings and not as animals," remarked Superintendent Barnd. Sam Jimula and a woman who has been his mate for thirty years after the custom of the Mohave Apache Indians, were the veterans of the unique group that faced a local justice of the peace.

That the War Department has no knowledge of a contemplated abandonment of Camp Harry J. Jones, as was rumored in Douglas recently, and that repairs to the buildings and an increase in the personnel is being contemplated is the information contained in two letters from Secretary Weeks to Representative Carl Hayden, copies of which were received by George E. Buxton, president of the Douglas Chamber of Commerce and Mines. The letters were replies to Representative Hayden's inquiries made at the behest of the Chamber of Commerce.

How I Got Well

Larwill, Indiana.—"My back was so bad I could not do my washing. I was always tired out and had no ambition. I was nervous and everything seemed to worry me and I had a headache in my right side. I felt badly about four years and could not do my work as it should have been done. I saw Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and verified so much and it did so many people good that I began to take it myself. I am feeling fine now and everyone tells me they never saw me looking so well. I live on a farm, do all my work, and have three little girls to take care of. I am recommending this medicine to my friends and know it will help them if they use it like I do."—Mrs. HIRSHMAN, LONG, R. R. 3, Box 7, Larwill, Indiana.

Many women keep about their work when it is a great effort. They are always tired out and have no ambition. When you are in this condition give it prompt attention.

Take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, for it is especially adapted to correct such troubles, as it did for Mrs. Long.

CLIENT "SPILLED THE BEANS"
Altogether Too Trustful in Answering Question Put to Him by His Own Attorney.

"Were I giving advice to a young lawyer," said an attorney the other day, "I would advise him to be careful about placing his client on the stand. It is at least as well to know what he is likely to answer to his attorney's leading questions. Some time ago," continued the lawyer, "a case was tried in which the plaintiff's attorney certainly 'spilled the beans,' though actually it was a cargo of bread, rolls and cake that was upset. A baker's wagon had been hit by a train in spite of the 'Stop, Look, Listen' sign, and the driver sued. On the stand he was asked how he conducted himself when he came to the crossing, and he replied: 'I just trotted gently across, looking the other way and thinking about nothing in particular.' The attorney threw up the case on the spot, but it was really a lack of foresight on his part," continued the narrator.

PUTTING MOTHER IN WRONG
Small Boy Quick to Observe Point That Might Enable Him to Escape Punishment.

It was cherry time and Richard insisted on running out in the orchard and eating the half-ripe cherries. His mother told him how much better it would be for every one if he only left the cherries until they were ripe, so they could be enjoyed. She also warned him she would punish him if he went to the orchard again.

"So a lady came to call on me once more. She was very fond of me, my keeper said, and she also said I made such nice stories.

"Not that I could write them—though I could write a little, perhaps, if I were taught. I don't think I could write lots of stories, but I'm willing to help do my part to make a contribution to literature.

"The lady said I was greatly flattered when I said that, but no matter!

"Well, I took her for walks and when I turned a corner I showed her how I wanted to turn and guided her carefully.

"She was impressed because I was not piggyish. She said she had been to see some pigs quite recently and that they were very piggyish—which of course was quite natural.

"I wouldn't have expected them to have been orang-utanish, if there is such a word, which I very much doubt!

"But she seemed surprised because when I ate a banana I always peeled it slowly and ate very slowly, taking small bites and enjoying it without being grasping and greedy in my manner.

"And a child who saw me taking off the skin of the banana seemed so surprised that I could do it myself.

"Gracious, I didn't know children were so ignorant of us and of our ways. Of course my eyes are a little bit bigger than my tummy—you know the old saying—it doesn't mean that eyes are really larger than stomachs, but that folks think they can eat more than they can because they like the appearance of the food.

"The children seemed surprised to see me walk partly on my heels and partly on my ankles, with the help of one arm and hand, while with the other I led the lady visitor about.

"The keeper told her how I made mud pies in the summer and how I played with sticks and built playhouses.

"But I entertained the lady visitor by showing how I could climb and move a chair about so it would help me climb on various places, and the keeper gave me an oil bath and told her how I played in a pan of water and kept very clean.

"I found a ribbon and tied it about my neck like a tie and I dressed up for the visitor, and I showed how well I looked dressed up.

"I showed, too, how I understood every word that was said to me.

"No one had to speak harshly to me. I understood the lady's speeches to me too, and that pleased her.

"And as I played and showed her how I spent a quiet morning in the keeper's room and in my cage, she took down many notes about me in a big note book.

"I looked at the note book too and I saw all sorts of pencil marks.

"Well, she was with me a long time and how much I enjoyed her company, for I am a gentle, sociable, friendly animal.

"And I was so pleased that my keeper was proud of me and wanted to show me off.

"Windy will make many a nice story," my keeper said, "and Windy is the sort boys and girls will want to hear about if they can't see him, for he's an interesting little chap, all right."

"Yes, I enjoyed 'Look at the Note my visitor and Book.'"

"I, too, have enjoyed myself, and when you're telling about me will you please say that Windy, the Orang-utan in the monkey house of the zoo sends his love and best wishes to boys and girls everywhere!

"And I feel sure she will tell as many as she can of Windy's message," he ended.

"They told me," said Windy, the Orang-utan who lived in the monkey house in the zoo, "that they were going to have a story about me, though they had written several already, and that they were going to call it 'Another Windy Story.'"

"I didn't think much of the title, myself, because it would sound as though there were another story about wind which blows!

"However, they said that they would speak of me at the very start and that I could tell my own story—and that they would translate it into People's Talk for me.

"So a lady came to call on me once more. She was very fond of me, my keeper said, and she also said I made such nice stories.

"Not that I could write them—though I could write a little, perhaps, if I were taught. I don't think I could write lots of stories, but I'm willing to help do my part to make a contribution to literature.

Hammond stood staring after the swaggering figure; for once he was speechless. The jaunty words had sent terror thrilling into him. He started impulsively to pursue that impudent acrobat—then he checked himself. Had the man guessed something? Had the man known something? Or had those words been only a bit of meaningless impertinence—a chance shaft which had accidentally flown home?

The last conjecture impressed itself on Hammond as being the truth, and his momentary fright died out. He concluded that the incident was not worth mentioning to Gramont, who surely had troubles enough of his own at this juncture.

As for Ben Chacherre, he sauntered from the alley, a careless whiffle upon his lips. Once out of Hammond's sight, however, he quickened his pace. Turning into a side street, he directed his step toward that part of the old quarter which, in the days before prohibition, had been given over to low cabarets and dives of various sorts. Coming to one of them, which appeared more dirty and desolate than the rest, Chacherre opened a side door and vanished.

He entered what had once been the Red Cat cabaret. At a table in the half-darkened main room sat two men. One of them, who was the proprietor, jerked his chin in an invitation to join him.

A man famous in the underworld circles, a man whose renown rested on curious facts and facts, this proprietor; few crooks in the country had not heard the name of Memphis Izzy Gumberts. He was a grizzled old bear now, but in times past he had been the head of a far-flung organization which, on each pay day, covered every army post in the country and diverted into its own pockets about two-thirds of Uncle Sam's payroll—a feat still related in criminal circles as the ne plus ultra of success. Those palmy days were gone, but Memphis Izzy, who had never been "mugged" in any gallery, sat in his deserted cabaret and still did not lack for power and influence.

The man at his side was apparently not anxious to linger, for he rose and made his farewells as Chacherre approached.

"We have about eighteen cars left," he said to Gumberts. "Charley the Goop can attend to them, and the place is safe enough. They're up to you. I'm drifting back to Chi."

"Drift along," and Gumberts nodded, a leer in his eyes. His face was broad, heavy-jawed, filled with a keen and forceful craft. "It's a cinch that nobody in this state is going to interfere with us. About them cars from Texas—any news?"

"I've sent orders to bring 'em in next week."

Gumberts nodded again, and the man departed. Into the chair which he had vacated dropped Ben Chacherre, and took from his pocket the money he had obtained at the bank. He laid it on the table before Gumberts.

"There you are," he said. "Amounts you want and all. The boss says to gimme a receipt."

"Wouldn't trust you, eh?" jeered Gumberts. "Why wouldn't the boss leave the money come out of the takin', hey?"

"I want to keep separate accounts," said Chacherre.

Gumberts nodded and produced two

"A CARNIVAL JOKE"

SYNOPSIS.—During the height of the New Orleans carnival season, Jackin Bell, wealthy though somewhat mysterious citizen, and Dr. Analey, are discussing a series of robberies by an individual known as the Midnight Masquer, who, in the way of the affair, meet a girl dressed as a Columbine, seemingly known to Bell, but masked, who accompanies them to the ball. Lucie Ledanos, recently the ward of her uncle, Joseph Mallard, is the Columbine. At the ball, Bob Mallard, son of the banker, again proposes to her and is refused. He offers to buy some of her property.

A Franciscan monk interests her. He turns out to be Prince Gramont. In his library Joseph Mallard and a group of his friends are held up and robbed by the Midnight Masquer. Lucie Ledanos, the last of an old family, is in straitened circumstances. Joseph Mallard's handling of her funds has been unfortunate. Fell is an old friend of her parents and deeply interested in the girl. Henry Gramont, really the Prince de Gramont, is enamored of Lucie. Lucie talks with Fell about her affairs and the Masked Masquer's character. Gramont, Hammond, sergeant in the A. E. F., lives with him. He was the original Midnight Masquer, and Gramont had assumed the role. Where Hammond had been a robber for Gramont, of course, is not. He arranges to return the "loot" to those whom he has robbed. Gramont and Hammond put the jewels and money in individual packages to be returned the next day. An explanation is included in each.

large sealed envelopes, which he pushed across the table.

"There's a rakeoff for week before last," he announced. "Last week will be the big business, judgin' from early reports."

Chacherre pocketed the envelopes, lighted a cigarette, and leaned forward.

"Say, Izzy! You got to send a new man down to the Bayou Latouche right away. Lafarge was there, you know; a judge shot him yesterday. The nigger threatened to squeal unless he got his money back—Lafarge was a fool and didn't know how to handle him. The boss says to shoot a new man down there. Also, he says, you'd better watch out about spreadin' the lottery into Texas and Alabama, account of the government rules."

The heavy features of Gumberts closed in a scowl.

"You tell your boss," he said, "that when it comes to steerin' clear of federal men, I don't want no instructions from nobody! We got every man in this state spotted. Every one that can be fixed is fixed—and that goes for the legislators and politicians clear up the line! Tell your boss to handle the local government as well as I handle other things, and he'll do all that's necessary. What he'd ought to attend to, for one thing, is this here guy who calls himself the Midnight Masquer. I've told him before that this guy was playin' h—l with my system! This Masquer gets no protection, see? The quicker Fell goes after him the better for all concerned."

Chacherre laughed, not without a swagger.

"We've attended to all that, Izzy—we've dropped on him and settled him! The guy was doin' it for a carnival joke, that's all. His loot is all goin' back to the owners today. It needn't worry you, anyhow! There was nothin' much to it—jewelry that couldn't be disposed of, for the most part. We couldn't take chances on that sort o' junk."

"I should say not," Gumberts regarded him with a scowl. "You've got the stuff!"

"The boss has. Look here, Izzy. I want you to use a little influence with headquarters on this deal—the boss doesn't want to show his hand there," and leaning forward, Ben Chacherre spoke in a low tone. Then, Gumberts heard him out, chuckled, and nodded assent.

At two that afternoon Henry Gramont was summoned to the telephone. He was greeted by a voice which he did not recognize, but which announced itself promptly.

"This is Mr. Gramont? Police headquarters speakin'. You laid a charge this morning against a fellow named Chacherre?"

"Yes," answered Gramont.

"Must ha' been some mistake, then," came the response. "We thought the prints fitted, but found later they didn't. We looked up the Chacherre guy and found he was workin' steady and strictly O. K. What's more to the point, he proved up a dead sure alibi for the other night."

"Oh!" said Gramont. "Then, there's nothing to be done?"

"Not yet. We're workin' on it, and maybe we'll have some news later, Goodby."

Gramont hung up the receiver, a puzzled frown creasing his brow. But, after a minute, he laughed softly—a trace of anger in the laugh.

"Ah!" he murmured. "If congratulated you on your efficiency, Mr. Fell! But now wait a little—and we'll meet again. I think I'm getting somewhere at last, and I'll have a surprise for you one of these days!"

We've Attended to All That, Izzy— We've Dropped on Him and Settled Him!

Gramont gazed long at this note, his brows drawn down into a harsh line. It was not like Lucie in its tone, somehow; he sensed something amiss, something vaguely but mostly decidedly out of tune. "Eleven tomorrow morning, eh?" he murmured. "That's queer, too, for she's to be at the Proteus ball tonight. Most girls would not be conducting business affairs at eleven in the morning, after being up all night at Proteus! It must be something important. Besides, she's not in a class with anyone else. She's a rare gal; no nonsense in her—full of a deep, strong sense of things—"

He forced himself from thoughts of Lucie, forced himself from her personality, and returned to his reports with an effort of concentration.

When Gramont went to bed that night it was with a startling and audacious scheme well defined in his brain; a scheme whose first conception seemed ludicrous and impossible, yet which, on second consideration, appeared in a very different light. It deserved serious thought—and Gramont had made his decision before he went to sleep.

The following day was Tuesday—Mardi Gras, Shrove Tuesday, the last day before Lent began, and the final culminating day of carnival. Henry Gramont, however, was destined to find little in its beginning of much personal pleasure.

At eleven in the morning Hammond drove him to the Ledanos home, where Gramont was admitted by one of the colored servants and shown into the parlor. A moment later Lucie herself appeared. At first glance her smiling greeting removed the half-sensed apprehensions of Gramont. Almost immediately afterward, however, he noted a perceptible change in her manner, as she led him toward the rear of the room, and gestured toward a mahogany tilt-top table which stood in a corner.

"Come over here, please. I have something which I wish to show you."

She needed to say no more. Gramont, following her, found himself staring blankly down at the symbol of consternation which overwhelmed him. For upon that table lay all those boxes which he himself had packed with the loot of the Midnight Masquer—the identical boxes, apparently unopened, which had been stolen from his automobile by the supposed thief, Chacherre!

CHAPTER VII.

In the Open.

In New Orleans the carnival season is always opened by the ball of the Twelfth Night Revelers soon after Christmas, and is closed by that of the Krewe of Comus on Mardi Gras night. Upon this evening of "Fat Tuesday," indeed, both Rex and Comus hold forth. Rex is the popular ball, the affair of the people, and is held in the Athenaeum. From here, about midnight, the king and queen proceed to Comus ball.

Comus is an assembly of such rigid exclusiveness that even the tickets to the gallery are considered social prizes. The persons of the Krewe, on this particular year, as in all previous ones, would remain unknown; there is no unmasking at Comus. This institution, a tremendous social power and potentially a financial power also, during decades of the city's life, is held absolutely above any taint of favoritism or commercialism. Even the families of those concerned might not always be certain whether their sons and brothers belonged to the Krewe of Comus.

Henry Gramont did not attend the ball of Proteus on Monday night. Instead, he sat in his own room, while through the streets of the French quarter outside was raging the carnival at its height. Before him were maps and reports upon the gas and oil fields about Bayou Terrebonne—fields where great domes of natural gas were already located and in use, and where oil was being found in some quantity. Early on Wednesday morning Gramont intended to set forth to his work. He had been engaged to make a report to Bob Mallard's company, and he would make it. Then he would resign his advisory job, and be free. A smile curled his lips as he thought of young Mallard and the company.

"The young gentleman will be sadly surprised to discover that I've gotten out from under—and that his respected father holds my stock!" he reflected. "That was a good deal; I lost a thousand to old Mallard in order to have the balance of thirty thousand!"

A knock at his door interrupted the thread of his thought. Gramont opened, to find the concierge with a note which had been left at the door below by a masked Harlequin, who had then disappeared without awaiting any reply.

Gramont recognized the writing on the envelope, and hastened to the note inside. His face changed, however, as he read it:

"Please call promptly at eleven tomorrow morning. I wish to see you upon a matter of business.

"LUCIE LEDANOS."

Gramont gazed long at this note, his brows drawn down into a harsh line. It was not like Lucie in its tone, somehow; he sensed something amiss, something vaguely but mostly decidedly out of tune. "Eleven tomorrow morning, eh?" he murmured. "That's queer, too, for she's to be at the Proteus ball tonight. Most girls would not be conducting business affairs at eleven in the morning, after being up all night at Proteus! It must be something important. Besides, she's not in a class with anyone else. She's a rare gal; no nonsense in her—full of a deep, strong sense of things—"

He forced himself from thoughts of Lucie, forced himself from her personality, and returned to his reports with an effort of concentration.

When Gramont went to bed that night it was with a startling and audacious scheme well defined in his brain; a scheme whose first conception seemed ludicrous and impossible, yet which, on second consideration, appeared in a very different light. It deserved serious thought—and Gramont had made his decision before he went to sleep.

The following day was Tuesday—Mardi Gras, Shrove Tuesday, the last day before Lent began, and the final culminating day of carnival. Henry Gramont, however, was destined to find little in its beginning of much personal pleasure.

At eleven in the morning Hammond drove him to the Ledanos home, where Gramont was admitted by one of the colored servants and shown into the parlor. A moment later Lucie herself appeared. At first glance her smiling greeting removed the half-sensed apprehensions of Gramont. Almost immediately afterward, however, he noted a perceptible change in her manner, as she led him toward the rear of the room, and gestured toward a mahogany tilt-top table which stood in a corner.

"Come over here, please. I have something which I wish to show you."

She needed to say no more. Gramont, following her, found himself staring blankly down at the symbol of consternation which overwhelmed him. For upon that table lay all those boxes which he himself had packed with the loot of the Midnight Masquer—the identical boxes, apparently unopened, which had been stolen from his automobile by the supposed thief, Chacherre!

"Tell me, Henry Gramont, what mad impulse brought you to all this?"

Beware of the Tongue of Evil Report

The most deadly weapon that can be used by evil - designing people is the tongue of the evil report. By this we mean in other words, FALSEHOODS. The greatest man that ever trod the globe knew what he was saying when he said, concerning the devil, that "He is a liar, and the Father of it." The evil report is used oftentimes to damage beyond repair, ones that are the most helpless and the least able to bear the burden of the disgrace. The falsehood is the shroud in which love, esteem, reverence and affection is buried. A man, it is said, can live down a falsehood, while with a woman, no matter how it is circulated, oftentimes follows her, and, with tantalizing, cruel fangs, fastens itself on her good name, and makes her life, where it should be one of pleasure and happiness, one of dread and danger to the end. Beware of evil reports!

The Republican Party

It preserved the Union from destruction in the dark days of the Civil War

It assisted in the growth and development of our industries and in raising the wages of labor by establishing a protective tariff system.

It checked the growing power and influence of enormous combinations of capital by anti-trust legislation.

It improved the conditions of labor by the enactment of Employers' Liability Acts and other similar laws.

It placed our currency system on a sound basis and led the fight for Civil Service reform.

It has numbered among its leaders practically all the great American Statesmen of the last sixty years.

It is a national and not a sectional party. Proof of this is furnished in the fact that the Republican party has had control of the government forty-six out of the last sixty-two years and during that period all sections of the United States have prospered and developed under the policies of the party.

It has never wavered in its patriotism in any war, nor in its stand for the protection of the rights of American citizens wherever they may be.

It is the party of patriotism, prosperity, efficiency and constructive progress.

Its past guarantees its future.

Announcement

With the endorsement of many Republicans, both men and women, I hereby announce my candidacy for the Republican nomination for the Representative from New Mexico in the United States Congress.

I believe that the judgment of the people in electing a Republican administration has been sufficiently vindicated; therefore, I will stand with the National Administration in its efforts to make the United States a factor in promoting world peace and world justice.

If elected, I will attempt to represent consistently the interests of all the people of New Mexico with special attention to the Reclamation Bill; the tariff schedules; the extension of necessary credits to farmers and stock raisers; the just liquidation of the debt the nation owes to those who defended it during the late war.

I highly endorse the Budget System, because I believe that, as we begin to get results from this system, the tax burdens will be lessened without reducing the efficiency of the government.

I will, further, work for all possible federal aid which will help the state to progress in matters of health and child welfare; and I will favor an amendment to the Constitution, if necessary, to make a child labor-legislation effective.

If I am the choice of the Republican Convention for this office, I shall consider it an honor and an opportunity for service.

THE DURABLE FINISH

You Wouldn't Wear Rags to a Party

Unless You Wanted to Create Unfavorable Comment

Yet, an unpainted house causes almost as much unfavorable comment as a breach of common courtesy.

You owe it to your house, yourself and your neighbors, to paint up.

But don't confuse cheapness and economy. Many paints sound cheap because of the price per gallon. Pratt & Lambert's is economical because of the price per job and per year. Economical because Pratt & Lambert's carries more oil, goes farther and lasts longer, for linseed oil is the life blood of your paint.

There's no secret or mystery about good paint. Pratt & Lambert's is good because good lead, good zinc and good oil are put into it, the best that money can buy. Cheaper paints are made by putting cheaper things in, yet with a lower price per gallon, you have a higher cost per job.

It costs only 1-1-4c per square foot to use Pratt & Lambert's on the average job. Measure your house and come in; ask us to prove our statements. If you want a painter, call up, we can recommend good men for your work.

Our Aviation Problem

SENATOR WALSH (MASS.) WOULD HAVE DEPARTMENT OF NATIONAL DEFENSE, COMBINING ARMY, NAVY AND AIR

By JOHN DICKINSON SHERMAN

YOU'VE often heard of Eddie Heckenbucker, our American ace-of-aerona. Well, he started recently on an aerial tour of the United States. He was to visit all the states and to report to the federal government on the condition and availability of landing fields and on other aviation matters. Probably he had a good machine; it is to be presumed that he had the best available. And what did Eddie Heckenbucker report? Nothing, nothing at all. His machine was forced down four days in succession. Thereupon he abandoned the trip.

In Chicago, not long ago, a local flyer took up a bridegroom and bride for a short flight. They were honeymooning and wanted the best there was going in the way of seeing the sights. The machine crashed. Both passengers were killed.

President Harding was making an open-air address recently in Washington. A commercial flyer took his plane full of nightseers so close that the President's voice was drowned out and so close to the vast crowd that had the plane fallen scores would have been killed and injured.

These are but three incidents—any issue of a newspaper will furnish more—which clearly indicate, according to the experts, that aviation in the United States is at loose ends and that the situation is so bad that something really must be done about it.

By way of emphasis to our own do-nothing policy, the experts declare, Europe is dotted with landing places and lined with air routes. European nations are stimulating commercial aviation with subsidies.

On the other hand, according to the experts, the results of systematic development are shown by the fact that the air mail service of the Post Office Department has just completed a year without a single fatal accident, with 1,750,000 miles covered.

In congress the Wadsworth-Hicks bill is pending. This provides for a United States bureau of commercial aviation.

Out of congress the National Aeronautic Association and the Society of Automotive Engineers are cooperating in the drafting of an aeronautic safety code, with the assistance of experts of the bureau of standards. Pending the passage of the Wadsworth-Hicks bill the draft of its safety code is tentative, but its principal provisions will include:

Inspection of aviators and aircraft in connection with the granting of licenses to pilots and air transportation companies; prohibiting of dangerous proximity of aircraft in flight; rules governing personnel and equipment of airplanes, including medical and signal equipment; aircraft radio regulation rules for landing fields; lighthouses for night flying and landing.

In the senate the other day Senator Thomas J. Walsh of Montana, read into the Congressional Record an article, "Our Aviation Problem," contributed to the New York Times by Senator David J. Walsh of Massachusetts, saying that it was an interesting discussion of the problems of aviation, pertinent to the discussion of the bill now before the senate.

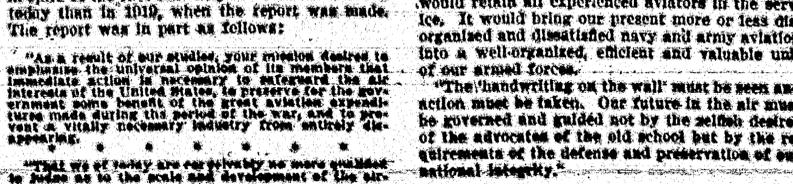

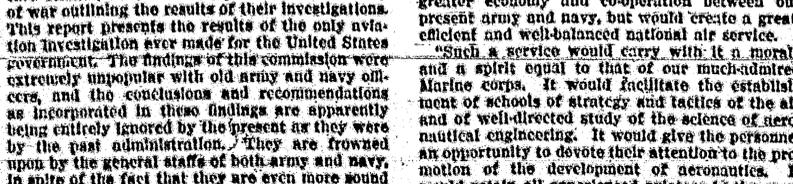

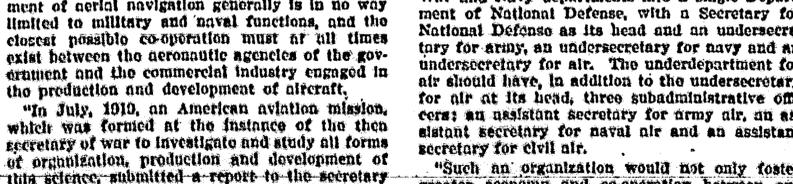

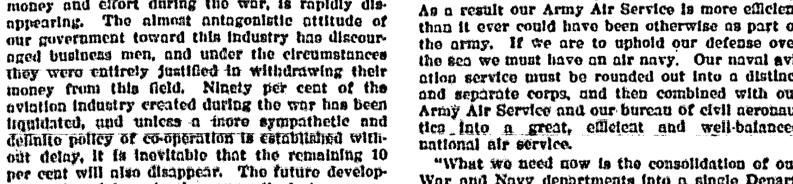

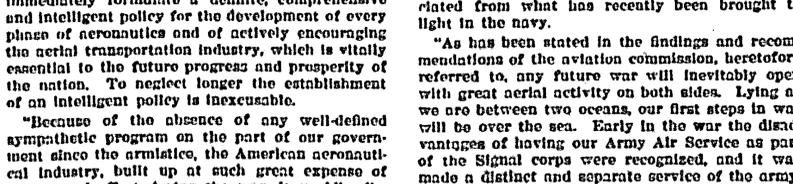

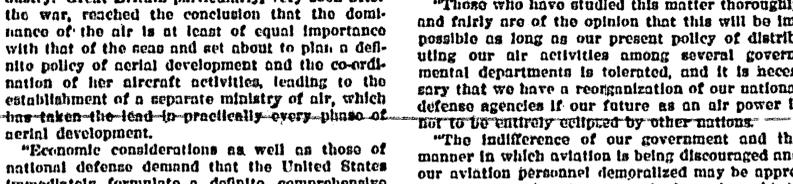

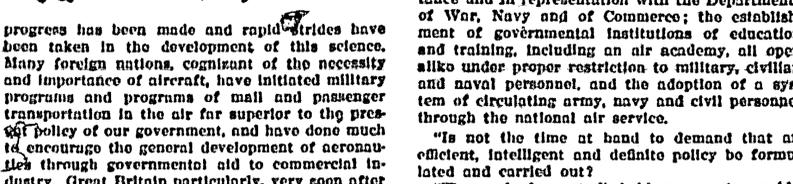

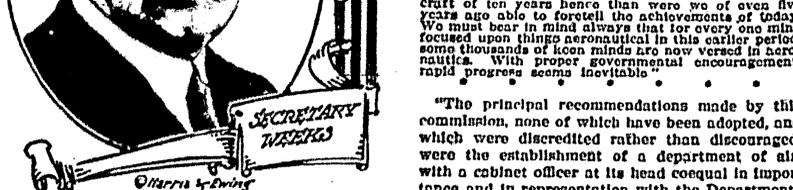

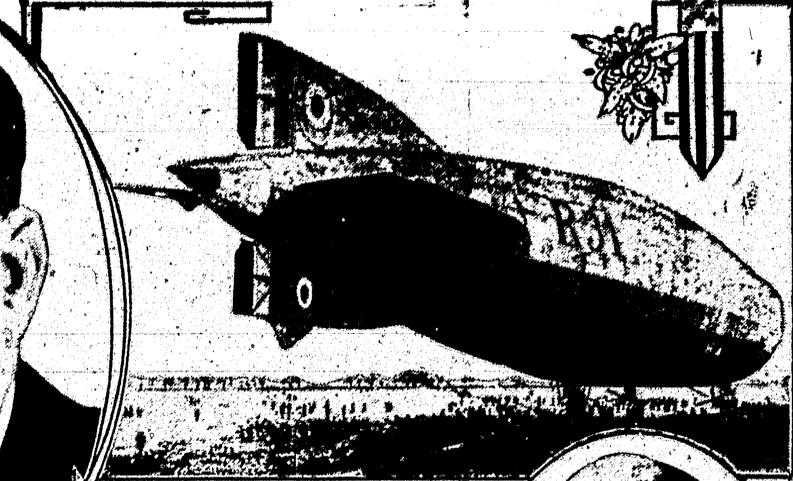

Senator Walsh of Massachusetts in this article says that what we now need is the consolidation of the Army and Navy departments into the Department of National Defense, with a secretary at its head, and three undersecretaries for the army, navy and air.

Here are some of the points made by Senator Walsh of Massachusetts in the article:

"It is regrettable that in or out of congress there is so little interest in what our government is doing, or rather failing to do, to stimulate interest in aeronautical matters and to foster and encourage in every manner possible this most important means of defense and transportation which has come to be generally acknowledged among progressive nations as of vital necessity to their commercial and industrial expansion and to their protection and prosperity.

"The incalculable value of this comparatively new science was demonstrated during the World war, and no one will deny that it must play an even larger part in any future controversy between nations—whether on land or on the sea.

"Since the termination of the World war much

CROPS ALL GOOD

Western Canada Farmers Jubilant Over Prospects.

Harvest in Southwestern Manitoba Expected to Come Close to bumper Yield of 1918.

Those who have friends in Western Canada will be anxious to learn of the conditions there, and will be interested in knowing that generally the crop prospect is very favorable. Cutting and harvesting have become general, and it is anticipated that the results which will appear when thrashing is completed will be highly satisfactory.

With the widely varying weather conditions that have prevailed in the different sections of the prairie provinces it would be impossible to forecast with any degree of accuracy as to how the crop is made. The Manitoba crop has held its own, and the outlook for the province as a whole is decidedly good.

With the exception of an area south and west of Brandon, grain crops in Manitoba continue to give promise of a good harvest, the best in fact for a number of seasons, reports the Canadian National Railways for the week ended July 22. Recent rains and favorable temperatures have improved conditions wonderfully.

Southwestern Manitoba will reap a harvest which will nearly equal the bumper harvest of 1918. Farmers in the district are very optimistic. The rye crop is exceptionally good; many fields will yield upwards of 30 bushels per acre. The fields are remarkably free of weeds, and the grasshopper menace, which has been evident in the southwestern portion of the province for the past three years, has been almost entirely obliterated. No damage has been done to the wheat crop by rust, and the oats crop will average more than 60 bushels to the acre.

In Saskatchewan there are large areas where the crops are excellent. In places where the prospects some few weeks ago were not encouraging, material change for the better is apparent. In these places unusually dry weather during a portion of the growing season kept the crops back, but what was most remarkable was the effect that the spring moisture had. While light in some places, this moisture kept sufficient strength in the growing crops to ensure a fair yield of a good quality of grain. This condition arises in the mid-central districts of the province.

The southern portions of the province have been exceptionally favored, reports showing that the yield of all grains will be wonderfully good. The crops of all Saskatchewan are a week or ten days later than those of Manitoba.

Conditions in Alberta are said to be good, especially in southern Alberta, where copious and plentiful showers came in time to give assurance of good paying yields. This applies to nearly all sections of that district.

Northern Alberta, or at least that portion of it lying within thirty miles of Edmonton, has suffered from lack of moisture, a very unusual thing for that district, where there is generally an abundance. As a result, the heavy yields of wheat, oats and barley for which the district is noted will show considerable falling off over past years. The grain, though, is of excellent quality and the yield will be fair.

Pastureage is poor, and the hay crop will fall short of that of any previous year for quite an extended period.

On the whole, the prairie provinces of Western Canada will have a crop that will warrant the statement that it will prove satisfactory and remunerative.

A number of farmers put in corn this year, and from present appearances there is a likelihood of an abundant yield for fodder and ensilage, while a good deal of it will fully mature. A number of silos were erected this season. While grain growing is losing none of its interest, it is highly pleasing to note the number of farmers who are adding dairying to the grain growing industry.—Advertisement.

To Go to Higher Court.
Denver.—Petitions for an injunction against the Moffat tunnel commission will be heard in the District Court of Golden, Aug. 28, and will be carried immediately to the Supreme Court by the loser in the case. The case was set by Judge Samuel W. Johnson recently when he granted the petitioners a continuance of three weeks. Norton Montgomery, the tunnel commission's attorney, said that the case can be carried to the Supreme Court and given immediate hearing if completed by Sept. 1.

John R. Smith, attorney, seeks an injunction on his own behalf and of the Wolfe Brothers' Land Company.

Attorney Montgomery urged upon the court the necessity of quick settlement of the case, in order that the work of tunnel construction may start at the earliest possible moment. Based upon the proposed rental of the tunnel for $500,000 a year, delay is costing $2,000 a day, he said.

Shot While Playing William Tell.
El Paso, Texas.—Capt. Roberto Bravo shot and killed Mrs. Romella De La Rosa at Santa Rosalia, Chihuahua, while playing William Tell, according to travelers who reached Juarez recently. The captain snapped a telephone wire with a bullet from his pistol, shattered an electric light globe and shot a glass from Mrs. De La Rosa's hand. "Let's see you shoot this hat off my head," said the woman, placing the captain's cap on her head, according to the story. The captain pulled the trigger and the woman fell with a bullet in her brain. The officer was arrested, according to informants.

Navy Has New Combat Plane

Meets Every Requirement of Fighting in Connection With Fleet Operations.

CAN LAND ON DECK OR WATER

TS Type Tested Out, Winning High Praises From Government Experts—Equals Any Combat Plane Now in Use.

Washington.—A shipplane designed to meet every requirement of combat and pursuit in connection with fleet operations, of navy design and built at the naval aircraft factory, Philadelphia, is undergoing final tests at the Anacostia air station here under the supervision of the bureau of aeronautics, navy department.

Another plane of the same type was recently completed by the Curtiss company at Garden City, L. I., and will shortly be flown to Anacostia for further tests.

The tests on the new plane of navy design, called a TS, have been uniformly satisfactory, and naval aviation experts consider it as good a combat plane as any in use by military services from land bases. In addition to operating from a land base, this plane can be quickly converted into the sea type by substituting pontoons for the wheel landing gear.

A statement prepared by the bureau of aeronautics concerning the need for such a plane describes the TS as follows:

Analysis of the Design.

The function of the combat plane is to protect our own aircraft by destroying or dispersing the enemy aircraft. With the development of aircraft carriers to a point where they are now recognized as an essential arm of the naval force, it has been necessary to tackle the problem to be solved in producing suitable designs of aircraft to operate from the carriers. These problems in a few words included the following questions:

How to evolve aircraft of the various types and possessing the following qualities: (a) Best performance, (b) greatest radius of action, (c) smallest dimensions, (d) best adapted to handling and stowage on board ship, and operating from a ship or air-drome.

It must be speedy and have superior qualities of maneuverability and stability; it must be lightly constructed but rugged.

The TS, which the new plane has been designated, in recent tests, has demonstrated all of the above qualities in a manner extremely satisfactory to government experts, and it is expected that quantity production of this type will go ahead within the near future.

The plane is equipped with a Lawrence 200 h. p. air-cooled motor, which is the highest-powered air-cooled motor built in the country. The construction of the wings is such as to permit of rapid assembly.

Lands on Deck or Water.

A standard equipment of two types of landing gear is provided, viz., wheels for landing on the deck of carriers or on land and pontoons for landing on the water. Both types of landing gear will be supplied so that the rapid conversion from landplane to seaplane may be effected. This is one of the most noteworthy features of the craft in that it will double its usefulness and make possible land operations by combat planes based on the fleet as well as providing a swift fighting seaplane equipped for making landings on the water.

The naval battles of the future will depend largely on gaining and maintaining control of the air. Spotting, scouting and observation from aircraft will give to that fleet possessing these facilities an advantage that will be practically decisive. The torpedo plane has also entered into naval problems within the past two years to an extent that places an entirely new complexion on this method of attack. But all of these invaluable aids to the successful outcome of the naval battle are dependent on the combat plane that is able to take the air in sufficient numbers and with sufficiently superior fighting qualities to sweep enemy aircraft before it.

The new TS combat plane gives every prospect of fulfilling these exacting conditions.

Air Heroes to Rest at Verdun

Members of Lafayette Escadrille Who Fell in War to Lie Together.

SIXTY-FOUR NAMES ON LIST

With Approval of Their Relatives Bodies Will Be Gathered and Will Rest Beneath Mausoleum Worthiness of Their Valor.

Verdun.—Verdun will be the final resting place of the American heroes who fell while fighting with the Lafayette Escadrille.

Scattered along the line of death from the sand dunes of Neuport to the swamps of Salonika, their bodies—will be gathered, and beneath a mausoleum worthy of their valor on a shell-orn hill of the shrine of heroism, they will await the final call, a symbol of the purest sacrifice ever made by man.

Sixty-four names will adorn the monument, but only 62 bodies will be there, that future generations may rever their memory indelibly engraved in the hearts of the living. Nothing was found of the mortal remains of Sergt. Victor Chapman of New York and Lieut. Carter Ovington. They met their fate while soaring high above the clouds, and like Guyener, they vanished into space, leaving no trace.

A small urn will suffice to contain all that is left of Maj. Raoul Lufbery, cremated alive in his burning plane. Their bodies may have gone to dust, but for each one of these 64 men a place will be set apart as an individual memorial which either now or at any time can be used as a place of interment. In any case, the name of each will appear among the names of his comrades.

A Burial Garden.

This is the program of the Lafayette Escadrille Memorial association. Born of the initiative of Lieut. E. G. Hamilton, it has undertaken to create and maintain in France a burial garden for the heroes of the Lafayette Flying corps who enlisted under the flag of France and gave their lives for the cause they defended.

President Millerand, Premier Poincare and Minister of War Maginot have accepted the patronage of the association, whose president is Marshal Foch and its vice president Ambassador Herrick.

The plan for the memorial garden, designed by Alexandre Marcel, chief architect of the French government, has been mailed to every relative of the dead aviators. The garden will occupy a site about two miles from Verdun, the ground having been donated by the French government for this purpose. In the letter which accompanies the plan the committee says:

"We feel that these men who were actuated by the same noble motives, who together underwent the arduous life of training and faced the dangers of the front; who in many instances had been close comrades in life, should in death lie together in this memorial garden, which for all time shall be a testimonial to their devotion to an ideal which was stronger than their love of life. It is for their relatives themselves to decide whether or no the body shall be moved to the place reserved for it. The committee pledges itself that the removals will be done with the utmost care and reverence."

crows gave no mercy, and but for the timely arrival of Mr. Hall and other farmers who were plowing corn in the fields near by the affair might have ended in a tragedy.

The men drove the crows away and were going to pick up the fallen eagle when his ready talons and waiting beak warned them away. Mr. Hall found a solution by procuring a horse blanket and throwing it over the vanquished eagle. Then he carried him to his house and put him in a cage, the crows following as a triumphant escort to see that the thing was done properly and without deceit.

Sol Stephan, manager of the zoo, says the eagle is a fine specimen, measuring nine feet from tip to tip of his dull bronze wings. Except for broken feathers, the big bird is none the worse for his terrible mauling. Mr. Stephan says.

The United States Lighthouse service maintains lights and other aids to navigation along 46,366 miles of coast line and river channels, a length equal to nearly twice the circumference of the earth.

This beautiful statue cast in bronze, standing over nine feet high, was recently completed by George Julian Zolnay, a Washington artist, in memory of the mothers and sons who gave their best during the World War, with the words "I gave my best to make a better world." It will be mounted on a granite pedestal in Centennial park, Nashville, Tenn., by the Nashville Kiwanis club.

CROWS HUMBLE GOLDEN EAGLE

Beat Huge King Bird of Air to Earth in Bitter Fight.

Defeated Bird, Its Feathers Broken, Picked Up and Sent to Cincinnati Zoo—Distress Signal Brings Hundreds of Crows.

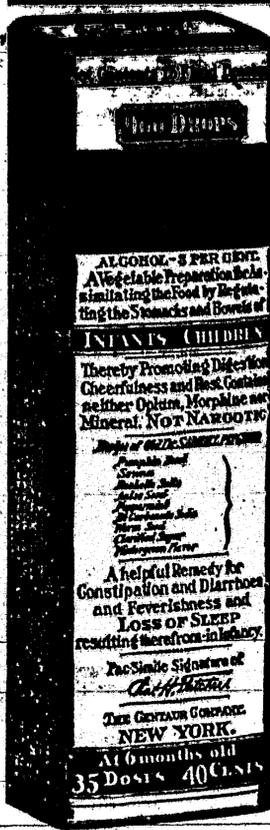

Cincinnati.—A golden eagle sat motionless in the eagle house at the zoo, doing his best to straighten and preen the broken feathers of his once proud coat. No wonder. The huge eagle had been humbled by members of the crow clan.

The eagle arrived from Williamsburg, crated and riding on top of an automobile truck driven by Harry Hall. Mr. Hall said he captured the huge bird several days ago on his farm after the eagle had alighted near a crow's nest containing young birds. Mr. and Mrs. Crow were standing guard over the brood, and when the eagle dropped out of the sky they let out frantic squawks for help. Instantly, from all points of the horizon, there began to materialize a fleet of angry crows. In a few moments the air was black with crows and blue with crow epithets.

The hubbly eagle stared defiance at the threatening cloud of feathered warriors wheeling past and clung to his limb. Bolder and bolder became the crows; closer and closer they swept to the enemy, their wing feathers brushing his face, their beaks snapping defiance and hatred. More than a hundred of the ebony fighters assembled at last, and finally the bolder spirits began delivering blows along with the threats and oaths.

The finish came swiftly. The eagle and the nest which the crows were trying to defend were both knocked from the limb and went tumbling to earth in a pecking, clawing, cursing mass. Even after they had their enemy on the ground the victorious

Special Care of Baby.

That Baby should have a bed of its own all are agreed. Yet it is more reasonable for an infant to sleep with grown-ups than to use a man's medicine in an attempt to regulate the delicate organism of that same infant. Either practice is to be shunned. Neither would be tolerated by specialists in children's disease.

Your Physician will tell you that Baby's medicine must be prepared with even greater care than Baby's food.

A Baby's stomach when in good health is too often disarranged by improper food. Could you for a moment, then, think of giving to your ailing child anything but a medicine especially prepared for Infants and Children? Don't be deceived.

Make a mental note of this:—It is important, Mothers, that you should remember that to function well, the digestive organs of your Baby must receive special care. No Baby is so abnormal that the desired results may be had from the use of medicines primarily prepared for grown-ups.

TO THE REPUBLICAN VOTERS OF LINCOLN COUNTY

We ask your active support in behalf of the nomination by the Republican state convention of Stephen B. Davis, of Las Vegas, for the office of United States senator.

During his service as justice of the state supreme court Judge Davis refused to make any effort in behalf of his nomination or to permit his friends to do so. The growing conviction among Republicans throughout the state that Judge Davis would be the strongest candidate our party could nominate resulted in representations to him which prevailed upon him to announce his candidacy, coincident with his resignation from the court. This action comes too late to permit Judge Davis to make any active campaign for the nomination, even were he disposed to do so. His position is that he does not desire to take any steps to force his candidacy upon his party; that if, in the judgment of the republican voters his nomination is for the welfare of the party, he is ready to accept and will welcome the opportunity and appreciate the honor.

We who have been active in urging Judge Davis to stand for the nomination are convinced that his nomination will result not only in his election but that it will contribute in an important way to the success of our entire state and congressional ticket.

Judge Davis is a man of outstanding ability as a lawyer and as a business man. This ability has been demonstrated by his career during his twenty-five years of citizenship in New Mexico. Coming to the state without money, or friends he has won his way to a place of leadership in his profession and in many lines of business and industrial activity that have contributed to the progress of our state. His record as a Republican is one of unswerving loyalty and effective service in the ranks. Such office and honors as have come to him invariably have been in recognition of his equipment for service or for service well performed. He is free of any handicap of factional activity or opposition and will command the united and enthusiastic support of all Republicans, as his record and ability must command the approval of all citizens. His entire life is an open book and an unbroken record of high purpose and honorable endeavor.

Judge Davis a profound student of the political, economic and social history of our country as well as of its present day life and problems. An adherent to the broad principles of the Republican party, he is a man of independent thought and action; a determined, forceful character whose course will be guided in the future, as it has been in the past by what he believes to be wise and just.

Thus Judge Davis, by education, experience and temperament is equipped for most useful, service to his party, his state and the nation. His record in the past is adequate guaranty for the high character of his service in the event of his nomination and election.

From the practical standpoint of campaign efficiency, Judge Davis is a vigorous, convincing campaigner. A resident and a leader in the strongest Republican county in the state he will command the united, enthusiastic support of the whole group of republican counties whose majorities determine the measure of republican success in our state. Our common purpose in nominating a candidate for the United States senate is to elect a Republican senator. Judge Davis can and will be elected.

We present these facts for your thoughtful consideration with confidence that they furnish ample basis upon which to request your support for Judge Davis before the convention and in the campaign.
