The two find a dying man, Patrick Casey, pinned under an overturned wagon. Kneeling healds the wagon is his young daughter, Molly, fifteen. They extricate the old prospector, who dies repeating "Molly-mines!" "I'll look out for that pardner," says Sandy. It is agreed that Molly stays as mascot of the ranch, she and the "Three Musketcers" becoming partners in the mines. Jim Plimsoll gambler, visiting the ranch, insults Molly. He claims he grubetaked Casey, which made him the old man's partner. Mormon drives him off. Starting with A gold cagle. Molly's luck piece. Sandy, with Sam, plays faro at Plimsoil's piace, winning $10,000. It is arranged that Molly shall go East to be "eddicated." A neighbor, Miranda Balley, warns the ranchers that Jim Plimsoll, as Patrick Casey's "partner," claims guardianship, of Molly, and the Authorities stand in with him. Sandy determines to take the girl to New Moxico, to an old friend, Barbara Redding, for advice. The three mon, with the girl, set out. Pursued by the sheriff and Plimsoll, the ranchers separate. Mormon and Sam returning, and Sandy and Molly going on. The two are caught in a pass by a cloudburst, during which Gandy saves Molly's life. Sandy returns, announcing that Molly has been sent East to school. A party of ridors headed by a man named Brandon visits the Three-Bar, announcing their suspicions of Jim Plimsoll's conduct of his horse ranch. Gold is struck at Dynamits, where Molly's-claim is located. Plimsoll claims the Carey mine. Bandy and his two friends, with Miranda Balloy, procced to Dynamito. They find Plimsoil conducting a gambling place.

"As I understand it," replied Sandy, "he hits the porphyry where it's shaller, or worn off, like you said. An' he finds rich pay stuff right away, enough to start the camp. Quite a few works on that outcrop an' then it peters out. Casey sabed a bit about synclines. "Sure does," assented Mormon. "It you locate here, marm," he said to Miranda, "an' we-all make a strike, we'll be on the same vein. I reckon."

"It's all Greek to me," said the spinster. "How do we located I've come this far, an' I'll see the thing through to some sort of finish. How many claims can we take up an' what's the size of 'em, Mr. Westlake?"

The three partners left Miranda and the engineer measuring off and setting up their monuments at the corners of the side-hill, making for the valley, in slience, like men with business ahead of them that called for action rather than words.

"Here's the situation, as I sabe it," said Sandy. "Plimsoil met up with Pat Casey from time to time. Molly said so. There's other witnesses to that. "Shucks, it don't make no difference whose pay roll they're on." said Mormon. "They're claim-jumpers an', like you said, Sandy, a jump can be made two ways. Let's go look 'em over."

The tent was pitched on the hillside where the grade was too steep to permit of level ground enough for more than the actual floor space. The test flaps were open and showed cots on which blankets and clothing were roughly spread. On two of these beds men sprawled asleep. Five others were seated on boxes about a boulder that looked like porphyry outcrop. Its surface was flat enough to serve as a table. The five were playing poker. They were not a prepossesing lot, playing their game in silence, looking up with a scowl and movements toward gun butts at the visitors. "I've neen that tent afore," while-

The Vegetable Compound is a splendid medicine for women. It relieves the troubles which cause such, symptoms as backache, painful times, irregularity, tired and worn-out feelings and nervousness. This is shown again and again by such letters as Mrs. Robinson writes as well as by one woman telling another. These women know what it die for them. It is surely worth your trial.

A community or a family that has a small-pox epidemic these days has only itself to blame. In fact, since the discovery of the preventive powers of vaccination more than 100 years ago, small-pox has become one of the few diseases which are absolutely possible to control. A small-pox epidemic may well be re-cases at Clovis.

In discussing small-pox there is but one thing to say, "Vaccination." In communities where vaccination is compulsory and the law is enforced it is practically non-existent. Vaccination should be done about the fourth to sixth month of the baby's life. In 90 per cent of cases the first vaccination "take." In most cases the first vaccination protects a person throughout life but in some people the immunity dies out in a few years; but the size of the scar is not a true indication of the need for additional vaccination. The safest rule to follow is that of vaccination in babyhood, in adolescence, and again in middle age. If small pox breaks out in a community, however, you should be vaccinated again at once, regardless of the number of previous times. If it "takes," It shows you were susceptible to infection and would likely have contracted small-pox without the vaccination. So what's the use of taking a chance on the pest house and a pitted face the rest of your life.

THE CLEARING HOUSE OF NATIONAL THOUGHT

Do you know that Uncle Sam conducts the largest printing-plant in the world? It requires live thousand people and a plant worth five million dollars to produce the printing utilized in operating the government. Then there is the seven million dollar building-one of the most beautiful in the world—housing the Library of Congress.

The story of the small beginnings of these two great institutions, their steady growth, and their present importance in the work of the nation, is told in an attractively illustrated folder of the series on Our Government now being issued by this Institution.

There has been a great demand for these stories and It is evident that they have been doing a valuable work in informing the people of this community about our government.

The following paragraphs are in Mr. Hawes' own words:

Evading the Darwinian theory as applied to the dog, for fear it may become involved in that broader field of present debate, it may be said that the modern dog has developed in much the same way as our domestic fowl and utility animals, but he must not be classed with those, because his association with man is closer and more personal and is botter described as "domesticated" than "domestie."

We find his drawing upon the tembs of Egyptian kings, upon the tites of the Assyrians, in the sculpture of the Greeks and Romans.

He has not been neglected by history or forgotten by the poets.

Columbus discovered him in the West Indies. our American Indians found him useful, and whether at the North pole or the Equator he has had a home and a place in the affairs of men.

There are more different breeds of dogs than of horses, cattle, sheep or poultry.

He is the oldest domesticated animal, and assisted his master to procure food and defend against his enemy before horses, cattle and poultry came under control.

His story runs back to prehistoric times. He was used as a sacrifice upon the altar of Pagan gods. His place in history, art, fletion and poetry ranks second only to man. Next to man he ranks bighest in intelligence, being susceptible to all human passions—hatred, love, fear, hope, joy, distress, courage, timidity and Ralousy. Man requires service from all animals, but only from this one receives friendship. He is the only animal that eats all of man's food, flesh and vexetable.

Man is taught chivalry; the dog has it naturally. He never attacks the female of his species, oven when feeding.

He is the delight of the poor man's hovel and the rich man's mansion. Faithfully follows his master who tramps the dusty readside, and alta proudly upon the cushloned seat of the millionalro's de luxo machine.

Wealth, caste, social distinction are all one to him. He is content and useful in every station assigned to him by fate.

But he knows the just from the unjust, the kind from the unkind, the charitable from the unchartemple, the true from the false, the man from the hypocrite

Disgulae does not deceive him. Paint, tinsel. allk and Jewels are no more to him than tatters. rage, worn shoes, or ragged hat. But it is what these things cover, the man, who wins his affection or dislike.

Ills master's triends are his friends, his master's enemies are his enemies, no matter what their station. He does not count the cost, but gives his life

With devoted strength he has rescued his master from a watery grave and stragged a child from an BASTE Are.

Over bleak and frozen mountains he has carried ing. food and drink and brought assistance to the wounded and those in dire distress. Peary could not have reached the North pole nor Scott the South polo without the faithful dog. He has taken the place of the horse and the ox his skin has been used for cheiter and for clothes, his figsh as food, his eyes have found the things his master sought, his nose has bared the trail his master could not find. One small dog in a home has more terror for the burgiar than an armed man outside. In the yard he sounds the warning and the night prowler encaks away. In hunting he is almost indispensable.

An American, Paul Rainey, surprised the sporting world by hunting the flon in Africa with dogs trained in Mississippi and Louislana. When properly trained he can handle cattle, sheep and swine better than a man. He excels as a ratter and destroyer of mink and other vermin. The expressman and peddler, in delivering their packages and wares, usually leave a four-footed set well. guardian in charge.

Troupes of performing dogs delight the audiences in our vaudeville houses and demonstrate what they can do when skillfully trained.

There are many thousands of forms in the United States. Practically all have one dog: frequently two or more. They guard the home, destroy destructive animals, act as companion and care for the stock and protect the garden and orchard.

The bench show brings into competition the best dogs of the various breeds. The dog winning ten blue ribbons in open competition in different shows becomes a champion. This is not easy and sometimes requires years for its accomplishment.

Field trials are held for sporting dogs in various portions of the United States. The setter and walk. pointer here compete in speed, bird sense, deportment and scenting qualities. They extend all the way from Manitoba, Canada, down through the Eastern and Southern states, the championship being run in Tennessee each January.

Greyhound coursing matches are held under much the same conditions, and the contest between beagle hounds is particularly attractive. The dogs winning their championships only under the most exacting conditions then become exceedingly valuable.

Wills Divergence of Opinion Over the Matter.

Estimates Vary as Much as Ten Thou sand to One Million Yearsimpossible to Fix Date.

Much speculation as to the age of man has arisen as a result of the recent discoveries of fossil human skulls in South America, Patagonia and the island of Jersey. The estimates as to the antiquity of the human race range all the way from 10,000 to 1,000,000 years.

Doctor Wolfs reported discovery in Patagonia of a fossilised human skull of the tertlary period, however, may nullify all previous scientific calculations on this subject, and the public is now getting a little chary about accepting even scientists estimates regarding the date of the origin of the human race.

Ever since the unearthing of the remains of King Tut-Ankh-Amen who, in the view of anthropologists, is to be reckoned only as an "infant," as the age of man goes, startling discoveries have been made all over the world which upset all well-established anthropological foundations.

Dr. A. Smith Woodward, director of to son, but Sobrero didn't know it un- the geological department of the British museum, makes some interesting my productions had been anonymous." commentaries on the latest discoveries in skulls and bones.

> "For a moment," says he, "the public seemed to assume that we had found at last the first man who lived on earth. I fear, however, that these conjectures are as baseless as they are interesting. Since the skall from Jerboy is said to have been found near a neolithic burial chamber, it is probably much nearer our period than any of the skulls of fossil men which show resemblance to their ape-like ancestors. And since the specimen from Pata-Ronia comes from a country which has furnished more 'mare's nests' in the study of prehistoric and ancestral man than any other part of the world, it will not excite interest among anthropologists until some geologist admittedly skilled in such matters has satisfied himself that this is a true fossil definitely associated with the re> mains of extinct animals." Who, then, Doctor Woodward asks. was the first man on earth? "To be strictly accurate," he replies, "we have not yet found him, although we have some reason to think we know where to look. In the dim borderland of time which separates man from monkey there reamed, somewhere in central Asia, a form of large-brained ape destined to be the precursor of man. It is impossible to fix a date for his appearance, but we do know that when he came into being the Himalayan mountains had not yet reared their peaks."

> It was in the Neanderthal, near Duesseldorf, Germany, writes Doctor Woodward, that the remains of the earliest man of whom anything is really known were discovered.

"Compared with our knowledge of his ancestors," he says. "he is an intimate acquaintance. But it is impossible to assign him a date in years. Swedish geologists reckon his ago as about 12,000 years."

"Neanderthal man," continues the British scientist, "was definitely a tipk?" man. He lived in caves from which he sallied forth to hunt the animals, such as mammoth, rhinoceros, reindeer and bison, which then roamed over Europe.

"We have found his tools, flint and bone pins with which possibly the early women fastened the rough skins which served them for petticonts. We have also found remains of paint and rouga which seem to signify the dawn of vanity."

Trade Follows the Film.

American films go everywhere, and, it seems that spectators in other lands have been getting more from them than breathless entertainment, "chases" and custard comedy. They have been getting ideas on clothing, office furniture, up-to-date automobiles, domestic conveniences-particularly clothing. Commerce Reports, the government trade publication, instances a citizen of Buenos Aires who sees with his wife an American-made picture. He notices the leading man's smart clothing. while the lady studies the alluring gowns of the heroine. Both conclude that they want their clothes made in America.
