Hotel Guests Flee From Fire Partly Clad

Congress Hotel Built forty-five Years Ago, Scene of Many Historical Gatherings Destroyed by Fire.

Prescott, Arizona, July 12.—Twenty-four guests, partly clad, escaped to the street when the Congress Hotel, Prescott's largest frame structure, built forty-five years ago, was destroyed by fire of undetermined origin today. The hotel was the scene of many pioneer functions and housed numerous political gatherings in Arizona's territorial and early statehood days.

The loss is estimated to be $50,000.00.

Between 3:10 a. m., when the alarm was first sounded, and 5 o'clock, the hotel, built by Frank Murphy, pioneer Santa Fe railroad constructor, was reduced to a charred mass in spite of every effort of the firemen to stop the flames.

The fire had already gained considerable headway when the firemen reached the hotel.

The entire north end of the third story was enveloped in flames, which had burst through the roof to a towering height. No flames reached below the second story, but the entire first floor was drenched and filled with charred timbers from the upper floors.

The hotel was operated on a lease by Mrs. L. A. Burgess, who came here from El Paso six months ago.

The loss is said to be partly covered by insurance.

"Oliver Twist"

Mr. Taylor's lease having expired at the Crystal Theatre, Mr. Wm. Sterling will assume charge of that popular resort on Saturday, July 15. Mr. Taylor has made a good manager during the time he has conducted the theatre, and has given his patrons some of the best films obtainable. His venture, we presume, has not been as abundantly profitable as it might have been as there has been many things to prevent good attendance. Many of our people have been in the mountains during the heated period, and many have been in other places on vacation trips, all of which would cause light attendance at the theatre.

In assuming charge again, Mr. Sterling wishes to announce that he has contracted for some of the best films on the market, one of which will be shown on the nights of July 24 and 25. In this picture, "Oliver Twist," Jackie Coogan, the child artist, is at his best. It is one of those wonderful pictures that brings forth praise from such metropolitan journals as the Los Angeles Record, Milwaukee Sentinel, Philadelphia Record, New York Journal, Omaha Bee and many others.

Let there be a big turn-out when these dates arrive.

Visiting at the Treat Home

Mrs. G. S. Treat of Great Bend, Kansas, mother of County Clerk, K. M. Treat, is visiting at her son's home and before returning east Mrs. Treat will visit another son in Roswell.

Keator on a Fishing Trip, Shoots a Grizzly.

Tucumcari American

Attorney M. B. Keator and wife returned from a two weeks fishing trip to the Black Lake country on the 4th inst. Mr. Keator made the record catch of mountain trout among our fishermen this season, so far, getting a number of the speckled beauties running from 16 to 18 inches in length.

Mr. Keator also brought down a grizzly bear which came to water near his camp. Mrs. Keator saw the bear coming into the marsh near the camp but thought it was a cow coming down to drink. As it moved away she saw it was a 'real' bear.

She called Mr. Keator, who was lying on his cot in the tent, and as soon as he could find his gun and fill the magazine the bear was reaching the edge of the timber some distance away.

The first shot brought him down, but he came out of it and escaped into the brush as other shots from Mr. Keator's rifle followed him. Mexican ranchmen living near the camp came and they and Mr. Keator trailed the bear, which was bleeding freely, into the timber until the trail disappeared in a rough canyon. The ranchmen said to Mr. Keator: "Shot him bad. He no come back. He die."

Gone to Wilmington

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Ferguson, daughter, Mora and Miss Lorene Brazel came down from the Nogal-Mesa Tuesday morning, Mora leaving on No. 8 for Wilmington, Calif., to pay a visit to her brothers, Champ and Don who have been in the Golden State for about six months. Miss Mora will return in time for opening of the fall school term.

After Forty Years of Idleness, Graphite Mines Will Resume Operations

Dr. F. S. Randles and P. J. Holtry returned on Sunday from Pine Lodge where they had been sojourning for ten days. Mr. Holtry returned to his home in Wichita, Kansas, and Dr. Randles motored to Cook's Peak, where he is with the Graphite Mine-people. The Graphite is an old silver and lead mine which produced large quantities of ore back in the eighties, but for the past forty years has been closed on account of litigation and now that the matter is out of the courts, operations will be resumed on July 15. Cook's Peak is twenty miles from Deming and nearly a half of a century ago was a thriving mining town.

Drouth Broken

The long drouth in this section was broken on Monday by a nice rainfall lasting several hours and was followed with good showers each day up to the time of this writing. Incoming ranchmen report good rains in their localities. Ex-Sheriff, Ramaldo Duran of Encinosa, Tom McDonald from the Mocking Bird Gap, J. B. French, Frank Maxwell, the Burch and Gallacher brothers whose ranch lands run from twenty to sixty miles north of here, Billy Ferguson and others from the Nogal-Mesa and the regions surrounding Capitan and in the White Mountain district, bring glad tidings of RAIN.—Stockmen are jubilant, business men are assuming an air of confidence and the Outlook hereby issues an apology to the weather man for what it said two weeks ago.

Here From Tucumcari

Mrs. E. L. Groves and sons, Harold and Fred, arrived here Monday from Tucumcari and are located in the Mayer residence on North Main Street. Harold will be employed at the C. D. Mayer Grocery & Meat Market where his father is in charge of the meat department and the family will become permanent residents.

George Barber, Jr., who had been visiting his parents, Attorney and Mrs. Geo. B. Barber, left for Bisbee, Ariz., on Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Kelley and daughter, Ruth, left Monday morning by motor for Riverside, Calif., to pay a visit to Mr. Kelley's parents and expect to return by the latter part of August.

Carrizozo Lodge No. 41 A. F. & A. M., held a special communication last Saturday night at Masonic Hall. Work in the Entered Apprentice and Master Mason degrees was performed.

Mr. and Mrs. A. V. Swearingen and son, Ansel, returned Wednesday from an extended trip through California, Oregon, Idaho and Utah, covering a period of seven weeks. They report a pleasant trip.

Mrs. Ben West and son, Ben Jr., left on Wednesday for their home in Tucson, Ariz., after a pleasant visit with Mrs. West's parents, Attorney and Mrs. Geo. B. Barber.

Sulked in Their Tents

Once upon a time, a band of Redmen pitched their tents far up in the mountains, even into the White Mountains where it is extremely cold in the winter time and no firewater. As the young braves waxed strong and handsome so that they were much admired by the young squaws, they fell to thinking and considered organizing a base ball club, which they did and prepared to give battle to the palefaces of the distant valley.

Now it came to pass that a certain club from a place called Carrizozo, hearing of the club in the Indian Village, betook themselves to the high mountain and engaged in battle with the Redmen and lo! many scalps were taken as the palefaces left some of their strongest men in the valley behind them. Then Chief "Rolled Socks" raised his voice and said: "This day have we taken their scalps, but the palefaces shall have a chance with a full set of their tribesmen. Be it even according to their wishes, we will give them battle on their own hunting grounds." But when the day came for the battle, the palefaced warriors laid in "amber" for the braves, but they did not come. All day long did the palefaces scan the hills for some signs of the Redmen, but they sulked in their tents and refused to come out. So, did the once noble son of the forest violate his word, but the end is not yet.

Base Ball Games Sunday

The local base ball team will cross bats with the Willard team next Sunday on the latter's grounds and the East Carrizozo team will play Fort Stanton at our local grounds. The boys from the Fort will come with a strong nine and the local boys have their line-up in good form to meet them. The admission will be only 25 cents and everyone should attend.

Everybody Going to the Big "Gold Ball" Dance.

The railroad and business men of Carrizozo are expecting a big crowd to the "Gold Ball" Dance tomorrow (Saturday) night. Tickets have been selling at a rapid rate, which insures one of the largest attended affairs of this nature ever given in Carrizozo. Good music will be on hand, furnished by the "Fidgety Four," and they will keep the good-natured crowd of pleasure seekers busy with their feet from beginning to end.

Many people are coming from surrounding towns, and the promoters have the assurance that a goodly number will be present from El Paso.

Everything is in readiness now. Let's go.

Three Linkers Meet

Carrizozo Lodge No. 30 I. O. O. F., held its regular weekly meeting Tuesday night and besides the transaction of business, work was performed in the first degree. Officers for the ensuing term of six months are as follows: Louis Adams, N. G.; L. M. McCall, V. G.; C. H. Haines, P. G.; W. J. Langston, Secretary; S. F. Miller, Treasurer.

Mr. and Mrs. Lee Prude were El Paso visitors on Tuesday.

St. Paul's Welcome for Tom is a K. O.

St. Paul, Minn., July 9—"Let's make it a knock-out," was the slogan adopted for St. Paul's welcome today to its famous fighter, Tommy Gibbons, on his return from Shelby, Montana.

And a knock-out it was. Hundreds of Twin Cities' admirers of Tommy—the man who won fame by staying the limit of 15 rounds with Jack Dempsey world's heavyweight champion, on July 4, gathered at the Union depot to greet him this morning.

Members of athletic organizations, the American Legion, and city, civic and social clubs were in the throng that met Gibbons and his family and escorted them to the town and country club for breakfast. At the club, an informal reception was held.

One of the first to greet Gibbons was his equally famous brother, "Phantom" Mike Gibbons. The two had been on the "outs" for several years, following a personal dispute. They had "made up" before the Shelby bout, however.

Tommy plans to take a long rest before resuming active training again. He may accept a vaudeville offer however, and spend several months on the stage.

Killed, Shocking Wheat

Amarillo, Texas, July 11—Two hours after he had obtained a job and started to work, Douglas O'Roke, 40, was killed by lightning 20 miles west of here near Wildorado, while shocking wheat. Two boys working with him were badly stunned. O'Roke had just come from Tucumcari where his family resides.

Good With Rod; Good at Throttle

Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Bell and children motored up to the North Fork of the Ruidoso last week and spent several days, during which time they caught the limit of fine trout measuring from nine to fourteen inches in length. Mr. Bell is as successful with the rod, as he is with running a railroad engine.

At the Saunders Home

Mrs. Harold S. Jones of Spokane, Washington, niece of Mrs. D. A. Saunders, is visiting her aunt's family and will remain until Mr. Jones, who is traveling for one of the large business firms of Spokane passes through here from his eastern trip, when after a short stay, Mrs. Jones will accompany her husband on his northwestern trip which will terminate at home.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Bullard and daughters, Lois, Lucille and Mildred have returned from a pleasant visit to California.

Big Jess Loses To Angel Firpo In Eighth Round

By His Defeat, Willard Loses Chance to Meet Dempsey, While Winner Makes Good Showing.

Ringside, Jersey City, July 11. Jess Willard lost all chance to meet Jack Dempsey in a return bout for the world's title today, when he lost to Angel Firpo, the hard hitting Argentinian; who now is to meet the champion.

The settings of the battle lacked only the profusion of French flags that flapped from the top of the "bowling" when Georges Carpentier, the hero of France, was helping to make the first "battle of a century" against Jack Dempsey just a little over two years ago.

Rickard was right when he predicted that the crowd would exceed the record breaking throng that saw Dempsey and Carpentier.

With a broad smile plastered on his face, Rickard circled throughout the ringside crowds.

"We had 75,000 paid customers at the last big fight here and we will do much better than that tonight," Rickard said. He predicted that at least 90,000 would pay their way in and that the "dead-ends" would run the total to 100,000.

Firpo broke all precedent for fighters when he entered the arena a little after 7:30. He was recognized and the crowd rose to its feet and gave him a hearty cheer. He looked around at the huge throng that numbered at least 60,000 at that time and smiled.

Shortly afterward, Willard ploughed his ponderous way through the crowd. He stuck so far above the heads of the spectators that he was immediately recognized.

In the first round Firpo rushed Willard, forcing him to the ropes. Jess got in a few blows but they were light ones and did no apparent harm. As the round ended, he drove one right to the side of the head. In the second round, Willard was content with fighting on the defensive, and the men were sparring at the sound of the gong.

Willard got in one uppercut in the third and they clinched. Firpo crowded Jess into a corner pummeling him about the head, doing no damage, but Willard forced him to the ropes at the end of the round.

In the fourth, fifth and sixth they clinched repeatedly, each getting in good blows on head and face.

In the seventh, Willard shot a hard right that sent Firpo to the ropes, and in turn, Jess took several smashes in the jaw.

In the eighth, Willard came forward as the aggressor and landed two blows on Firpo's jaw. They clinched, and as they separated Firpo shot several blows to the head and neck that caused Willard to drop his guard. Seeing this, Firpo rained heavy blows, ending with a powerful right that sent Jess to his knees. He tried to rise but failed, and was assisted to his corner a defeated man.

Mrs. Anna Roberts and son, Albert, left on No. 8 Wednesday morning for Bisbee, Ariz., where they will visit with relatives for several weeks.

President Harding became the engineer of his own train a few days ago. He arose early at Falcon, Idaho, and for more than an hour rode the cab of the engine that pulled his train toward the Pacific coast.

The Santa Fe Railway Company's store of lumber at San Bernardino, valued at $1,000,000 was destroyed by fire believed to have been started by an incendiary. Fire departments from six adjacent cities were called on to fight the enormous blaze.

The closing of the Merchants and Farmers State Bank at Chino, Calif., by the state superintendent of banks, after an investigation by Edward F. Dishman of the State Corporation Department, has resulted in a nation-wide search for six stock brokers who are under indictment in connection with the bank's failure. Dishman announced in San Francisco.

A contract between a citizen and an alien ineligible to citizenship whereby the latter is to settle upon agricultural land for the purpose of preparing it for planting, receiving wages for his work and sharing in future profits on an equal basis, is not a violation of the alien land law passed by the California Legislature Nov. 2, 1920, the Supreme Court decided at San Francisco.

President Harding's power of speech failed him a few days ago for the first time since he left Washington. Standing at Artists' Point, overlooking the Grand Canyon of Yellowstone National Park, the chief executive was asked what he thought of the scene before him. He admitted his inability to reply, saying that the grandeur of the canon was beyond his power to describe.

The law permitting the state to quarantine against alfalfa hay is unconstitutional as constituting an embargo, and is so unlimited in its scope as to be unreasonable, counsel for the Oregon Washington Railway and Navigation Company contended in Superior Court at Olympia, Wash. In the so-called "alfalfa weevil case." The burden of testimony by the state tended to prove that stringent regulations were needed if the alfalfa weevil is to be controlled.

WASHINGTON

A reorganization within the Treasury Department with the shifting of several of the more important bureaus, is provided for in regulations issued at Washington simultaneous with the issuing of the regulations. It became known that Assistant Secretary Edward Clifford, whose jurisdiction with in the department will be materially changed under the reorganization is to resign.

Dr. J. H. Mohler, chief of the bureau of animal industry, announced he had concluded arrangements to commence on July 2 the vaccination of stocker and feeder cattle at public stockyards against hemorrhagic septicaemia, also known as stockyard pneumonia and shipping fever. Until the work is placed on the stable basis the government will furnish the vaccine and trained veterinarians to administer the treatment at actual cost.

Treasury officials revealed here for the first time that the proposal to seize liquor carrying liners in American waters had reached the stage where new regulations to carry such a policy into effect had been drafted in tentative form and were in the hands of the prohibition unit.

More than 110,000 acres of public land in four Western states were thrown open a few days ago to entry to ex-servicemen. The area comprises the second largest offering of public domain for homesteading in several years. The exact dates for filing will be announced by local land offices. Lands thrown open under the order include: California, 20,000 acres in San Bernardino county, near Kelso, and in San Diego county, near Campo. Colorado, 1,800 acres in Costilla county, near Russell. Nevada, 22,000 acres in Nye county, near Carrara. Utah, 40,000 acres in Washington county, near Central. In addition, about 11,000 acres in Junn county, near Mona, Utah, will be opened to ex-servicemen after the state has made selections from the tract in accordance with public land grants to it.

The United States District Court in San Francisco denied a motion asking for the dismissal of a petition by Charles Lockard, an owner of the Seattle Club in the Pacific Coast Baseball League, that W. H. McCarthy, president of the league, be compelled to wear him as a director of the parent organization. McCarthy has refused to permit the participation of the Seattle Club in the regular league meetings on the ground that there is evidence of it being owned in part by William Wrigley, Jr., a stockholder in the Los Angeles Club.

July 4 was proclaimed a full national holiday as a tribute to American independence in an executive decree published at Lima, Peru. An elaborate celebration was held.

Manila, gripped by a typhoon, was flooded. Many streets were under water. All loading and unloading of ships in the harbor was suspended. The typhoon was strongest over the central portion of the island of Luzon.

Three military barracks in Berlin have been converted into dormitories for needy Russian students. The German Red Cross, the Russian section of the League of Nations, the Young Men's Christian Association, and the European Students' Relief each contributed to the undertaking.

Foreign Secretary Curzon's flat rejection in London of the twelve-mile limit proposal apparently has countered effectually the effort of the State Department of the United States to clear away at one stroke the ship liquor controversy and the rum-smuggling problem along the Atlantic coast.

Newspapers of Mexico City recently carried a statement that the international recognition commission has reached an agreement. El Mundo, a government organ, claims to have inside information that an agreement was reached over a week ago and the work of the commission likely will end in a few days.

Premier Baldwin announced in the House of Commons that England is not prepared to co-operate with the United States in calling an aerial disarmament conference. Such a move at the present time would be premature, Baldwin said, and unlikely to succeed until the outstanding European problems of the moment are satisfactory settled.

Count de Saint Aulaire, French ambassador in London, has received complete instructions from the French foreign office to enable him to reply to the British government's recent questionnaire on the Ruhr situation and "any other questions on the Ruhr situation and France's policy on reparations which the British government may see fit to ask."

A German "terrorists" organization in the Ruhr is responsible for the series of outrages which culminated in the explosion of a high power dynamite bomb upon a train bearing several hundred Belgian soldiers, according to information received from Aix-la-Chapelle received in Brussels. It is believed that the death list from the explosion will reach twelve, as some of the soldiers wounded were dying in hospitals at Duisburg and Crefeld.

GENERAL

Handicapped by the horde of immigrants aboard the eleven ocean liners which reached quarantine, officials of the Treasury Department worked overtime checking up the liquor supplies aboard the ships.

Adj. Gen. Carlos E. Black of the Illinois National Guard is declared "derelict in duty and primarily to blame" for not sending troops to Williamson county at the time of the Herin riots, in the report of the legislative investigating committee which made its report to the Legislature at Springfield.

Approximately 2,500 unlawful floggings have taken place in Oklahoma in the last year, according to reports reaching Governor J. C. Walton. It was announced at Oklahoma City by Aldrich Blake, secretary to the executive. Blake's statement climaxed the first week of a campaign launched by Governor Walton to rid Oklahoma of mob violence.

Eighteen federal prohibition enforcement agents, most of them stationed in Manhattan and Brooklyn, were dropped from the staff of R. Q. Merrick, divisional chief for New York and northern New Jersey. The dismissals were said to have been made necessary by the lopping of $500,000 from the government's appropriation for enforcement in the fiscal year.

Lives of passengers on the Southern Pacific's Sunset Limited were imperiled recently when the train smashed into an automobile containing a large quantity of dynamite near Glendale, Calif., killing the car's driver and seriously injuring another occupant. Though hurled in all directions, the dynamite failed to explode.

One infant is dead and another is in a serious condition in a Schenectady, N. Y., hospital, in consequence, charity officials say, of an all-night ride of 165 miles with seventeen other children in a hired automobile from Brooklyn. The children, seven of them five months old or under, were brought to Schenectady by Mrs. Anna Blowers, the party arriving after a trip of twelve hours.

Creation by Edward Bok of Philadelphia, of an award of $100,000 to be called the American peace award and to be given to the American individual or organization presenting the best practical plan by which the United States may co-operate with other nations for the achievement and preservation of world peace was announced in New York City by the policy committee, organized to administer the award.

The St. Louis unit of Piggly Wiggly Stores, Inc., including forty-nine grocery stores and a bakery, has been purchased by a syndicate of St. Louis financiers, headed by Mark C. Steinberg & Co. The announcement stated that the price was "more than $300,000."

Further military steps in Gov. J. C. Walton's drive to rid Oklahoma of "lawless mobs" will depend upon whether whippings, assaults and other forms of violence cease, it was said at the executive offices in Oklahoma City.

TOM GIBBONS SURPRISES WORLD

CHALLENGER IS GREATER HERO IN DEFEAT THAN DEMPSEY IS IN VICTORY

FIGHT GOES 15 ROUNDS

HEAVIER GUNS OF TITLE HOLDER ENABLE HIM TO WARD OFF BOMBARDMENT OF GIBBONS

Shelby, Mont.—The whole sporting world was wrong—with the exception of that courteous, smiling individual, Tommy Gibbons, of St. Paul.

The challenger, to the astonishment of the 25,000 spectators in the sun-baked arena on the edge of the oil boom town, was on his feet, still fighting at the end of his scheduled fifteen-round heavyweight championship battle with Jack Dempsey when almost everybody expected him to be knocked out in six or seven rounds.

Dempsey, the champion, was an overwhelming favorite to win by a knockout early in the battle. Referee Jimmy Dougherty of Philadelphia awarded Dempsey the decision when the going changed ending the fifteenth round, but Gibbons, who did not get a cent for fighting the champion, left the ring with a moral victory. It was the first time that any fighter had managed to face Dempsey and still be on his feet at the finish since he became champion. Gibbons has a reputation made in sixty-six fights of never having been knocked off his feet. That reputation is still good.

Dempsey had him dizzy and weary probably half a dozen times but failed to knock him out. The fight had an entirely different ending than any of the spectators expected. Even the enthusiastic Gibbons protagonists, shouting encouragement to their fighter, had not the slightest idea he would last more than seven or eight rounds. In fact, it was the consensus that four or five rounds would find Tommy on the floor, knocked out.

Tommy, a master boxer, and constantly on the lookout for the knockout blow, danced and hopped around the ring, occasionally slipping a right or left to Dempsey's face and then eluding danger by clinching or stepping backward. Toward the last Gibbons seemed to be fading fast and repeatedly went in to clinch with the champion. In the last round it appeared that his defenses were falling and many expected Dempsey to administer the expected knockout. The champion, seeing the condition of the challenger, furiously slashed at his head and body. But Tommy hung on and clinched and sidestepped until the saving grace of the final bell.

A majority of the newspaper experts at the ringside gave Gibbons a share in the fifth, eleventh and thirteenth rounds, the remaining twelve being accorded Dempsey without argument. Neither the champion or the challenger were ever off their feet, although once Gibbons nearly fell through the ropes and was helped back by Dempsey.

Although Gibbons was the undoubted favorite of the crowd, not a word of disension was heard over Referee Dougherty's decision. It had previously been rumored that if, by any chance, the fight went the limit, there would be a riot if the decision went to Dempsey. State and local police and many deputy sheriffs were on hand, but there was no disturbance at any time.

Dempsey was never in danger in any round of the fight. Although Gibbons cut and slightly blackened the champion's right eye in the opening round and Dempsey brought blood once or twice from the challenger, neither was marked by any appreciable extent. Elbowing his way through the cheering spectators, Chief Curley Bear of the Blackfeet Indians, climbed into the ring. The Indians recently adopted Tommy as a brother of the tribe. The tall chief, resplendent in feathers and rainbow hues, lifted his eagle-tipped war bonnet from his head and placed it on that of Gibbons, while the crowd yelled itself hoarse.

The wife of Mayor Jim Johnson of Shelby hurried to the ring and threw her arms around the challenger. Hundreds tried to shake hands with him. He smiled broadly at the demonstration, while his seconds removed his gloves.

Gate Receipts Total $201,485 Shelby, Mont.—The approximate total of gate receipts at the Dempsey-Gibbons heavyweight title bout was $201,485, according to figures made public by Charles Rasmussen, Montana collector of internal revenue.

Leviathan Sailed With Ben Voyage New York.—The reconitioned Leviathan, queen of the American merchant marine, sailed on Uncle Sam's birthday on her first transatlantic pleasure voyage under the Stars and Stripes. Thousands massed on the waterfront to bid ben voyage to the super-ship. Shoving her into the channel were fifty tugs with the power of titans. Off her starboard bow steamed a toy vessel—a reproduction of Robert Fulton's Clermont, America's first steamboat.

C. W. Harrison, president of the First National bank of Clovis, was elected president of the Panhandle Bankers' Association at the annual meeting held in Plainview, Texas. Plans are being made by the El Navajo Country Club for a big golf tournament on the Gallup course some time during July. Players from all over the central and western part of the state will be invited to take part in the matches and the event promises to be the best in the history of the club. The entrants likely will be handicapped from par, it is announced, although the colonel's level may be used.

The New Mexico Operating Corporation, recently organized at Silver City, is about to take over the operation of the old Homestake, Denver and Gold Frog mines in the Central mining district. New York capital is interested in the proposition and it is reported that several other claims in that district will soon be taken over by the new corporation. Work will be started at once and the mines will soon be on a paying basis.

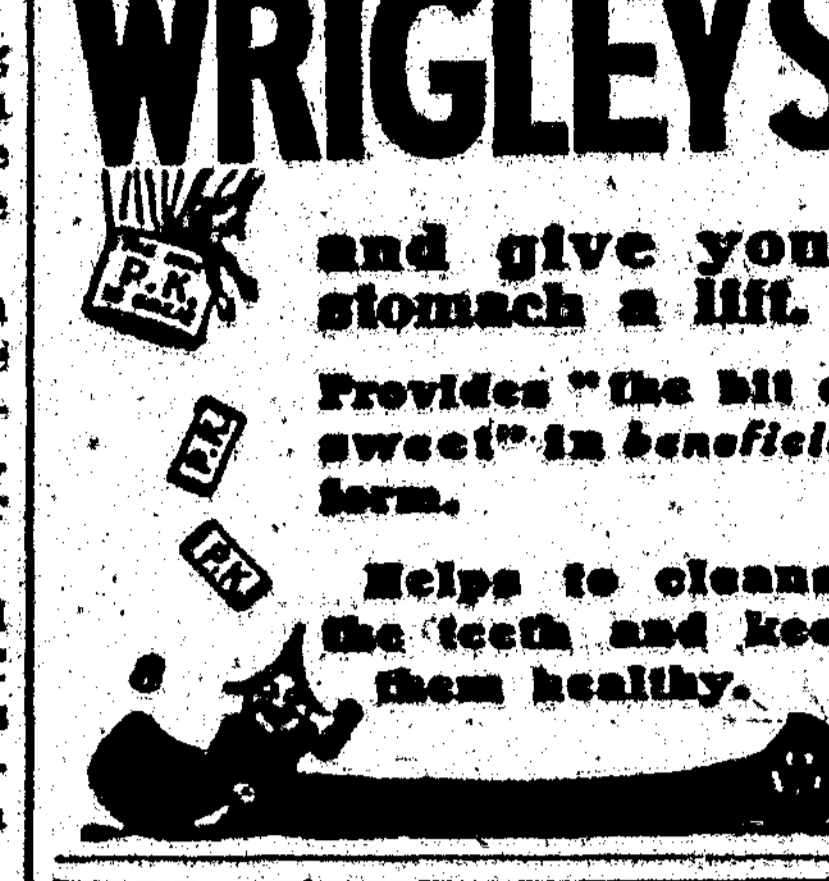

U. S. Army compensation records revealed the fact that John Arthur Martin, being held in the county jail in Clovis, on the charge of forgery, is an ex-service man. Martin, it is alleged, has been going under the name of R. O. Williams, and his real name came to light when he sought a compensation check through the Clovis post of the American Legion. It is alleged that Martin passed two forged checks at one of the Clovis banks.

Cattle losses throughout Grant county in the past month have been heavier than at any time during the year owing to the lack of water and not of feed. While there has been plenty of food on most of the ranges, there has been a shortage of water all over the county and many of the cattle have died of thirst or from overdrinking when the water was found. However, according to reports, the year will be far better than last season.

The Southwestern Tulnrosa Basin Oil Company, after being idle for some time, is now making plans to sink the test hole on the site near Alamogordo, 1,000 feet deeper. The well is now about 3,500 feet deep and finances have been secured that will make it possible to go to the depth of 4,500 feet. The big drill went through 400 feet of lime at the bottom of the hole and the officials in charge of the work believe that if the well can be sunk deeper there is a good chance of bringing in a producer. Several good showings of oil were encountered in the work and now that the financial trouble is out of the way the future of the well is assured.

Sportsmen in the section of Silver City are much concerned over the fact that thousands of trout in the Gila drainage streams are dying from some disease. Small spots appear on the fish which extend into the flesh, and spoil the meat for eating even if the fish are caught alive. The theory has been advanced that the spots are sun bruises, caused by lack of shade and the sun's hot rays striking the fish through the low water. Thorough investigation will be made into the means of stopping the trouble and saving the trout for these streams.

The relief that Sandy felt and dismissed as selfish, was marred by the cordial understanding that had sprung up between the two.

"I'll have to go first thing tomorrow," said Westlake. "I'm sorry, too. They've come up to my counter-offer, Bourke, and they want me to come on immediately. It means a lot to me, Everything," he added, with a smile that Molly returned.

"You'll write?" she said. "You promised."

Miranda broke in. "I'm sure glad it's good news," she said. "I've got some of my own. There's been trouble out to Jim Pillsoll's. He shot at Wyatt or Wyatt at him, I don't know which rightly. But there was sides taken on a general rumpus. Several of his men quit or was run off the place. Pillsoll's aimin' to sell out, Ed heard. It'll be a good rideance."

"I'll have a telegram for you to take back, Miranda," said Sandy. "You sendin' one, Westlake?"

"If you'll take it, Miss Bailey," "Glad to."

Westlake and Molly were both standing. They moved toward the door and out to the moonlit veranda together.

"They seem to hit it off well, that pair," said Miranda. Kate Nicholson murmured something about the kitchen and left the room to attend to some refreshments.

"Now tell me about Keith," demanded Miranda. "What's he been up to?"

Sandy told her. "I ain't a mite surprised. That Westlake acts white. I liked him from the start. What are you goin' to do about Molly? You ain't told her yet?"

"No use spollin' her holiday before we have it," said Sandy. "I'm goin' to talk with Keith first."

Kate Nicholson returned and the talk changed. Westlake and Molly remained outside until the food was served. Then there was music. Miranda departed at last with the telegrams. Molly lingered as good-nights were said.

"I've got something to tell you, Sandy," she said. "It's a private, for the present," she added with a glance toward Westlake.

Sandy sat down by the fire with a sinking qualm. Molly perched herself on the arm of his chair, silent for a moment or two.

"It's a love story, Sandy," she said presently.

"Westlake?" "Yes. He wanted me to tell you before he went. He's very fond of you, Sandy."

"Is he?" Sandy spoke slowly, rousing himself with an effort. "I think he's a fine chap. I sure wish him all the luck in the world." He fancied his voice sounded flat.

"I suppose you wondered why we were so chummy all the evening?" "Yes. I wondered a little about that." Sandy did not look at her, but gazed into the dying fire. He saw himself sitting there, lonely, woman-shy once more, through the long stretch of years, with a letter coming once in a while from far-off places telling of a happiness that he had hoped for and yet had known could not be for him; Sandy Bourke, cow-puncher, two-gun man, rancher, growing old. "I was the first girl he had seen for a long while, you see," Molly was saying. "And he had to talk it over with someone. He told me about it first this mornin' and then the telegrams came."

"Talkin' about what?" "His sweetheart. Now he can marry her with this opportunity. She may sail with him. Isn't it fine? He showed me her picture."

"It's the best news I've heard of a long time," answered Sandy soberly. "I'm sleepy," said Molly. "Good-night, Sandy, dear."

She put her lips to his tanned cheek and left him in a maze. The dying fire leaped up and the room lightened. It died down again, but Sandy sat there, smoking cigarette after cigarette.

CHAPTER XVIII

Dehorned.

Miranda Bailey had offered to come in for Westlake with her car, but the train went early and he had refused. Molly drove him in the buckboard, his grips stowed behind, and Sandy saw them go with the old light back in his eyes. He gave Westlake a grip of the hand that made him wince.

"You can rely upon my information being correct," were Westlake's last words, spoken aside before he climbed into the buckboard and Molly flitted the reins over the backs of the team shooting off at top speed.

She came back a little before noon, her eyes wide with excitement.

"Mr. Keith's in town," she said. "With Donald and his secretary, Mr. Blake. He asked me if Mr. Westlake had been here and he seemed annoyed when I told him I had just seen him off on the train. They all came from Casey Town in the big car. Mr. Keith has some business in Hereford. He and Mr. Blake will stay on their private car. He told me to tell you he would be out tomorrow to see you. Oh, here's a telegram for you."

"Thanks," Sandy tucked the envelope in his pocket. "Hop out, Molly, an' I'll put up the team."

"I'll help you. I haven't forgotten how to unhitch." Her nimble fingers worked as fast as Sandy's with buckles, colling traces and looping reins.

"Goin' to take Donald Keith out for a real ride on a real hawass?" he asked her.

"Yes. Tomorrow. He's keen to go. You'll come. And Sam and Kate?"

"I've got a hunch I'm goin' to be busy ter-morrer. Keith's comin', fo' one thing."

"I forgot. I wish you could come." Molly went into the house and he opened the telegram. It was from Brandon, as he expected.

"Thanks. Coming immediately. Was starting anyway. That trap worked. May need horses for eight. Will you arrange?"

"BRANDON." "It sure looks like a busy day ter-morrer," Sandy said half aloud. "Keith and Brandon—which means roundin' up Jim Pillsoll. Sam don't get to any picnic, either. He'll have to tend to the hawasses."

The Keith touring car arrived in mid-afternoon with young Keith at the wheel, the chauffeur beside him, grips in the tonneau. Young Keith inspected the corrals and the stock with eager interest and the riders with a certain measure of awe, which he transferred to Sandy on learning that he had broken two colts that morning.

"Know what time yore father expects to be out?" Sandy asked him.

"He didn't say. He's got some business to attend to. Some time in the forenoon, I imagine."

Keith Senior arrived after lunch had been cleared the next day. He was brisk and brusque, breathing prosperity.

"I was detained in Hereford, Bourke," he said. "I haven't much time for anything but a flying visit. Donald's out with Molly, you say. I'll leave him with you on your invitation and pick him up when we go back East. That will be in about a week. Sooner than I expected. I'd like to spare a day to look over the ranch. I've heard fine things about it."

"Thanks," drawled Sandy laconically. "Glad to have a talk with you, Sam. Mr. Blake might like to see the hawasses gentled that came up this mornin'."

Keith raised his eyebrows but said nothing. Leaving Blake, Sandy led Keith to his office, rolled a cigarette, offered a chair to his visitor and smoked, waiting for the latter to open the talk.

"There are some papers for you to examine, as Molly's guardian," said Keith. "But Blake has them."

"We'll take them up later. Anything else?"

"Nothing of great importance. I hear Westlake has been over here, Bourke. We had a misunderstanding. Sorry to lose him, since you recommended him. His opinion clashed with that of my engineer-in-charge, an expert of high standing. Westlake was hot-headed and would not brook being overruled. There is no doubt but that he was mistaken. He is a valuable man, under a superior, but he is intolerant." "He didn't strike me that way," said Sandy. "Ma, I set a good deal on his opinion."

"I didn't imagine you knew much about mining, Bourke," Keith looked at his watch. "I'll really have to be going as soon as you have looked over those papers. Hadn't we better call Blake?"

Sandy looked out of the window. He saw Miranda Bailey's flivver halting by the big car, Mormon walking toward her, and wondered what had brought her over. Then he saw Mormon leave Miranda and come toward the office, howling along at top speed.

"Excuse me a minute, Keith," he said. "My partner wants to see me." Keith's face wore a scowl as Sandy stepped outside. His conscience was not entirely clear and he did not like the general atmosphere of the office. He took out a cigar, bit off the end savagely and lit it.

"Mirandy wants to see you," panted Mormon. "She's found out something about Keith that sure shows his play. He's been disardin'!"

The Keith chauffeur had wandered off to the corrals where Sam was showing Blake around. Miranda handed Sandy a long envelope.

"Hen Collins had an accident last night," she said. "Blow a tire on the bridge by our place an' smashed through the railin'. Busted a rib or two an' was knocked out. We took him in. Hen was grateful to Ed fo' takin' him in an' puttin' him to bed an' sendin' fo' the doctor. Don't open that envelop, that Keith weasel might be lookin'. I reckon you'll want to spring it on him sudden."

"Sure," said Sandy. "Spring what?" "I'm flustered," admitted Miranda. "I usually talk straight. Now I'll start to the beginnin'. When Keith arrived on this trip he held quite a reception in his private car. Ed was there with the rest. He invited them up fo' cigars. Talked big about Casey Town an' generally patted himself on the back. Said it was too bad all the stock of the Molly wasn't held locally, but of co'se the pore promoter had to have somethin' fo' his money. He was real affable."

"This time, when he come back yesterday, he brings up the subject ag'in. I don't know how many he saw or jest what he said, but this is what he told Hen. That Casey Town was boom'in' big an' that his own holdin's was nettin' him a heap. That he liked Hen fine an' had picked him out as a representative citizen. With a lot mo' blush, the upshot of which was that he lets him have a hundred shares of the Molly mine at par. Hen was to say nothin' about it because, says Keith, if it got out he was sellin' stock, it would send down the price of the shares. Hen was sure tickled. He w'udn't have said a word about it on'y Ed picks these shares up out of the bed of the creek an' give them to Hen after he'd been fixed up."

"Ed went nosin' around Hereford this mornin'. He got eight men—their names is inside the envelope—Creel one of 'em—to admit they'd bought some shares. Mighty glad they was to have 'em. Ed didn't tell 'em anything different, but he come scottin' home at noon an' I borrowed Hen's certificate, seein' he was asleep. An' here it is."

"Mirandy," said Sandy, "I'll let Mormon tell you what we all think of you. You've sure dealt me an ace."

He returned to the office. Keith eyed the envelope.

"Blake comin'?" he asked. "Not yet. When do we get another dividend from the Molly, Keith?"

Keith laughed. "Needin' some ready money?"

"How about the dividend?" "Why, that depends upon the output," Keith's voice purred but his eyes had narrowed. "The output has been big. The Molly has been a bonanza, so far. I do not think it wise always to pay dividends according to the immediate production, however. It is better, as a rule, to average it, generally to develop the mine as a whole rather than work the first rich veins."

"That why you boarded up the stopes?" Keith's face grew dark. The veins twitched at his temples.

"Look here, Bourke," he blustered. "You've been listening to some fool talk from that cub, Westlake. I know my business. You've got some stock in the mine, twenty-five per cent. I've put money and brains into it and I've got forty-nine per cent. Molly . . ."

"If you had fo'ty-nine per cent I wouldn't be worryin' so much."

"What the devil do you mean?" "I took you fo' a betteh gambler than to git mad," said Sandy. "I'll jest ask you a question on behalf of myself an' partners' twenty-five per cent, an' Molly's twenty-six, me bein' her guardian. Plump an' plain, is the Molly pinched out? How about it?"

"It's a d—d falsehood."

"Then why are you sellin' your stock?"

The words came like bullets as Sandy whipped the certificate out of the envelope and slapped it smartly on the desk. Keith whitened, flushed again, recovered himself.

"If I was not friendly to you, Bourke, I should take that as a direct insult. I can understand that you believe in Westlake and take stock in what he told you. But he is a discharged employee. He has every reason . . ."

Sandy held up his hand. "He's a friend of mine," he said. "Keith, I may not know the minin' game—as you play it. In some ways I'm gambler, like playin' poker. I've played that a heap. I can tell-pitty well when a man's bluffin', Mebbe you're losin' some of yore nerve lately. You show it in yore face. I don't hanker to insult a man but—I don't believe you. An' here's this stock you sold. I've got the names of more you sold it to. Why?"

"I have a right to sell my stock." "You ain't goin' to exercise that right, Keith. You may make a business sellin' chances to folks who like to buy 'em, but you can't sell Hereford's folks paper when they think they're buyin' gold. You'll give me the money you got fo' the shares with a list of the men you sold 'em to an' I'll tell 'em the Molly is pinched out—as it is."

"You must be crazy, man! They wouldn't believe you. If you went round with a statement like that you'd lose every cent of your own and your ward's. You have no right . . ."

"Trouble is with you, you don't know the meanin' of that last word," said Sandy. "Right is jest what I aim to do. We'll put it up to Molly an' you'll see where she stands. We don't do business out West the way you do. We don't rob our friends or even try an' run a razzo on strangers. The Molly'll shut down: I'll git you to give me a statement long with the money an' the list fo' me to check up, sayin' you've jest had news the vein has petered out sudden—like it has. That's lettin' you down easy. I'm doin' this 'count of the fact you folks have looked out fo' Molly. An' I'm tellin' you, Keith, that if Hereford's folks knew you'd deliberately sold them rotten stock, you an' yore private car might suffer considerable damage befo' you got away. I'd sure advise you to come across."

Keith looked into the face of Sandy and, briefly, into his eyes, hard as steel. He made one more attempt.

"Let's talk common sense, Bourke. The Molly is capitalized for a quarter of a million dollars. The stock can be sold at par if it's done quietly. I can dispose of it for you. There is no certainty that the mine will not produce richly when we strike through the second level of porphyry. There are plenty of people willing to buy shares on that chance after the showing already made. People buy stock as a gamble."

"No sense in you talkin' any mo' that way, Keith. Mebbe you sell paper to folks who gamble on it, an' on what you tell 'em about the chances, makin' yore story gold-colored. Folks may like to git somethin' fo' nex' to nothin', but I won't sell 'em nothin' fo' somethin', neithev will my partners, neithev will Molly Casey. She's a western gal. Above all, I won't gold-brick my friends. I know the mine is petered out. We've had our share of the gold in it an', we won't sell the dirt. No mo' wud Pat Casey, lyin' out there by the spring, if he was alive."

"Suppose I refuse?" asked Keith, his square face obstinate. "I've done nothing outside the law."

"To h—l with that kind of law! We make laws of our own out here once in a while. Justice is what we look fo', not law. I reckon you'll come through. Fo' one thing I expect to have yore boy visit with us till you do."

The promoter's face twisted uglyly and he lost control of himself.

"Kidnapin'?" A western method of justice. Not the first time you've been mixed up in it either, from what I hear. You don't dare . . ."

Keith stopped abruptly. Sandy had not moved, but his eyes, from resembling orbs of chilled steel, seemed suddenly to throw off the blaze and heat of the molten metal.

"Fo' a promoter yore a mighty pore judge of men," he said. "I'm warnin' you not to ride any further along that trail. Yore son can stay here or we can tell the Hereford folk what you've tried to hand to them. Yore apt to look like a buzzard that's fallen into a tar barrel after they git through with you, Keith. I can find out who you sold stock to easy enough, but I don't care to waste the time. You an' me can ride into town in yore car an' clean this all up befo' the bank closes. We'll leave the money with Creel of the Hereford National. Then you can come back an' git yore boy."

"I don't remember the names. Blake took the record of them," said Keith sullenly.

"Then we'll have him in."

Men are reasoning creatures, but, paradoxically, mighty unreasonable.

Keith Looked Into the Face of Sandy and, Briefly, into His Eyes, Hard as Steel.

Rats Quite Hard to Exterminate

All-Important Control Measures Are Removal of All Food and Shelter.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

A few very simple measures consistently employed will rid a farm or a community of rats, it is stated in a new farmers' bulletin, "How to Get Rid of Rats," by James Silver, biological assistant of the biological survey, United States Department of Agriculture. Many of the poisons, viruses, traps and contrivances sold for the purpose accomplish little real good. Rats are hard to exterminate, and regardless of the method employed, success attends only close application and persistent effort.

The all-important measures to be taken are the removal of food and shelter from the rats, poisoning and trapping them, and, certain conditions, fumigating their burrows. These measures should be taken not only by individuals but by entire communities. Foodstuffs should be stored in rat-proof containers, waste and garbage should be disposed of in tightly covered vessels, and no trash or refuse should be allowed to accumulate to provide food, shelter or breeding places for the pests.

Barium Carbonate Is Best.

The most effective means known to the department for destroying rats is by poisoning, wherever it can be employed with safety. Barium carbonate has been found the most satisfactory of the various poisons that might be used. The bulletin gives directions for applying it successfully. Trapping is equally effective, but requires more skill and labor. It is recommended where the use of poison seems inadvisable. The simple and inexpensive snap type of trap, strongly made, is all that is necessary. Where there are large numbers of rats a good many traps should be used.

In fields, along ditches, banks and levees, around farm buildings and in dirt cellars rat burrows dug in solid earth may sometimes be fumigated with carbon bisulphide, or with the exhaust from a gasoline engine, such as an automobile or tractor. The exhaust is directed into the rat burrow by means of a hose, and the entrance around the hose is sealed with damp earth. In seed warehouses and similar structures where sacked grain is stored temporarily, a liberal supply of flake naphthaline has been found to keep rats away. The use of these flakes where foodstuffs are stored is not recommended on account of the odor.

Cheap Rat Insurance.

The importance of rat-proofing existing buildings as far as possible and of building new ones so that they are absolutely rat-proof cannot be too greatly emphasized. Rat-proofing a building is in the long run the cheapest rat insurance, and is the best and most permanent means of rat eradication.

Efficient rat dogs often help, but cats are rarely useful against rats. Co-operative rat hunts are effective and furnish good sport to participants. Organized rat campaigns are very desirable because without general community co-operation individual places which are cleaned up are constantly exposed to reinfestation from adjacent property. Assistance in planning, organizing and prosecuting antir rat campaigns will gladly be given by the biological survey in the form of direct aid whenever practicable, or by furnishing plans, instructions, publicity material and sample posters with which communities can carry on their own campaign against this most destructive animal in the world.

Corrosive Sublimate Is Best to Kill Maggots

The best authorities on insect pests of garden plants recommend the use of corrosive sublimate solution for the cabbage root maggot. W. P. Flint, state entomologist of Illinois, advises treating the cabbage plant with a solution of one ounce of corrosive sublimate in ten gallons of water, applying the treatment within three days after the plants are set and repeating a week later. About one-third to one-half cupful of the solution should be applied to the soil around each plant. It is best to dissolve the corrosive sublimate in a small amount of hot water before diluting to the above strength. If but a few plants are to be treated, the corrosive sublimate tablets may be used, at the rate of one tablet per pint of water.

The corrosive sublimate solution must be carefully handled, because of its poisonous and caustic properties. If allowed to come in contact with the skin, as on the hands, it will cause burns. Its caustic properties also make it necessary to store the solution in glass or earthenware, rather than in metal vessels.

Ten Medium-Sized Pigs to One Acre of Alfalfa

In pasturing hogs on alfalfa, do not run more than twenty to the acre, and then only when the plants are strong and well grown. If the field begins to wear down take the hogs out and give the plants a chance to grow up again. With ten medium-sized pigs to the acre, well-grown plants will hold their own throughout the season if the weather is favorable. If the ground is wet the animals are apt to spoil the alfalfa by rooting and tramping the swards.

Principles Shown in Feeding Dairy Cows

Adequate Diet Must Contain Mineral Ingredients.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Experiments in nutrition during the last few years have resulted in the discovery of new principles in nutrition, many of which are important in the proper feeding of dairy cattle, says the United States Department of Agriculture. It has been found that an adequate diet must contain certain mineral ingredients, and also certain organic compounds whose exact chemical nature is still unknown but which have been called vitamins. It is quite possible to make up a diet from ordinary feedstuffs which will contain sufficient protein and energy, and yet be deficient in either minerals or vitamins, or both. There is every reason for believing that the whole subject of feeding for the maintenance of high milk yields can be very much simplified as compared with the systems of feeding now practiced, and also great economies introduced into feeding practices, by a systematic study of the vitamin and mineral contents of dairy feeds and of the relation of these to milk production.

It seems probable, also, that the mineral and vitamin contents of dairy feeds may be found to have an important bearing on the breeding vigor, or reproductive ability, of dairy cattle. These studies are under way and results of considerable practical importance have been obtained, some of which show that high-producing dairy cows suffer from a shortage of lime unless they are fed much larger amounts of legume hay than is customary in many parts of the country, and that there is a vitamin in fresh, green feed which will probably promote the assimilation of lime by milking animals. It has also been shown that there are differences in the values of protein for feeding dairy cows.

Powdered Hellebore Is Good to Kill Fly Larvae

One of the most common breeding places of the common house fly is the manure pile, which it is not always possible to spread on the land frequently enough to bring about destruction of the contained larvae. The addition of chemicals to manure for the purpose of destroying these larvae has its limitation, since some substances used for this purpose destroy the fertilizer value of the manure, others are so poisonous that there is danger of poisoning farm animals and poultry, while others are harmful to vegetation when applied to the land.

After a careful study of a large number of chemicals, the United States Department of Agriculture has found that powdered hellebore, one-half pound in ten gallons of water, will prevent the development of fly larvae in eight bushels of manure and possesses none of the objectionable features mentioned above. Borax is also a satisfactory chemical for use in manure which is not applied too thickly to the land. Too much borax in the soil will interfere with plant growth when used. Clean premises, closed garbage cans, screened manure pits and outdoor fly traps will also pay in fly time. —R. F. Bourne, Veterinary Department, Colorado Agricultural College.

Profitable Business in Feeding Orphaned Pigs

Orphaned pigs that rob a hog raiser of a lot of good money every year can be made into a profitable business with a little extra work, if they are not orphaned too young. If they are purebreds it will be more worth while to try to raise them than otherwise, although it has been found to pay with any kind of pig.

Orphaned pigs at the Iowa station have been found to put on gains at a lesser outlay of dry matter per unit than the combined sow and suckling litter. The pigs do well when fed whole cows' milk for the first few days, followed by buttermilk later. It is estimated that an orphaned litter is worth from $1 to $4 per pig, and this makes it worth while to use a little extra care.

Some pointers in feeding orphaned pigs are: Be sure to feed them adequate rations; feed often enough and regularly; feed sufficient vitamins; allow sunlight and be sanitary; encourage the pigs to get plenty of exercise; give plenty of clean water, and keep the pigs warm in well-ventilated quarters.

Guard Little Chickens Against Many Accidents

Never place sacks of feed around the colony houses where they can tip over. Do not stand boards on the chick range where they can blow over. If anything blows over on a chick range it is a safe bet that you will find one or more crushed chicks underneath. Chicks just naturally seem to enjoy committing suicide if they have half a chance.

Fowls Molting in July Should Be Disposed Of

Cull hens which molt in July; they are unprofitable to keep. See whether you can't get your county agent to give a culling demonstration in your district. The Department of Agriculture will help you if you write and ask for assistance. The bureau of animal industry has the poultry week in its charge.

Taft Blames Prohibition Yet Defends Enactment

The personal views of Chief Justice Taft on the prohibition situation, lately expressed in the foreword of a book written by Lord Shaw, of England, furnishes food for thought in more ways than one. First of all, he says, he was against the measure when it came before Congress, and gives as his reason, he feared it could never be enforced. Now, he says he favors its enforcement, but follows by claiming it to be the child of religious enthusiasm and wave of reformation engendered during the war period with all its excitement and he could well have added, its lack of good judgment. He admits that the situation which now confronts us does not meet with the approval of the people, as whole, but at the same time issues a warning to the effect that if the same is not enforced, it will injure our great experiment in pure rule of the people.

He had other fears, he says, one of which was that the question would force itself into politics and divert the public mind from important issues, thus creating a confusion that would prevent well considered decisions regarding them. By this, may we beg to ask, did, or does, the Chief Justice consider prohibition a thing of importance, now or at any time? We believe not. As a matter of fact, the measure was one which bore a political countenance from the first and was brought about as we firmly believe, by those whose selfish aim was to create strife and discord among the American people. If one will read carefully between the lines he will see that the Justice as much as admits it to be true, yet for sake of what one of his fears was, (the matter getting into politics) he defends its enactment and insists on its enforcement. In his satisfaction over the absence of the open saloon, he has many who will rejoice with him, but a vast amount of these are bitterly opposed to being totally deprived of the privilege of an occasional look into the cup by a law framed in a fever of excitement and as Mr. Taft says, "causing a disturbance in the nice balance between national and state powers in our system."

This very question is now engendering strife between this country and our neighbors across the seas. Even in their bankrupt conditions, there are ugly rumors of war coming from the other side and as an evidence of the fact that we are not chasing moonbeams, our latest dispatches tell of a bill which will be presented to the next Congress and endorsed by Secretary Weeks, for a re-writing of a civilian draft, which its opponents are openly regarding as stacking the cards for war. What could cause such a movement on the part of our public men but this same question which the Chief Justice feared would breed strife, contention and perhaps a call to arms? If this country is involved in another war, the Volstead law will be the chief contributor to the cause unless something is done toward its modification and will be the object of those who framed it; if our young men are again called on to sacrifice themselves on the battlefields, it may be in defense of what a cluster of long-haired, pin-headed fanatics have fastened upon us in order to satisfy their own desires, plunge the country into more trouble and call it Christianity, when it is nothing but "wolf in sheep's clothing."

EXTERMINATOR vs. Man o' War! The year 1925 is a banner year on the American turf, with good horses, big purses, great crowds and much enthusiasm.

There is one particular race, however, unfinished at this writing, in which the American racing public is seemingly interested beyond all others the race of Exterminator against the record of Man o' War as the champion money-winner of American turf history.

Man o' War is believed by many to be the best horse of American history. Certain it is that he retired to the stud at the close of his second year on the turf (1920), with but one defeat against him, the holder of several speed records and the winner of $249,465. He now holds court at Faraway farm in Kentucky.

This is Exterminator's seventh season on the turf. When the year began he was only a few thousand behind Man o' War. In his first three starts this year he finished third in the Hartford handicap, first in the Philadelphia handicap; and second in the Old Dominion handicap. That put him but $1,400 behind Man o' War.

So, as early as May the struggle for money honors between "Red" Man o' War's stable name—and "Old Bones," as Exterminator's attendants and many racing devotees call him. The public figured it out that "Old Bones" was sure to win if he stayed sound. It refused to believe that the handicapper could put weight enough on the veteran campaigner to keep him from victory sooner or later.

After the Old Dominion handicap "Old Bones" was reported to have "gone amiss." Word now comes from Tidewater, Virginia, that he is enjoying a summer's rest there and will come back to the races in the fall in fine fettle.

"When 'Old Bones' becomes American champion—if he does—then he'll go out after the record of Inglass world champion, winner of $291,275 on the English turf. Inglass piled up his large total which has stood as the world's record since 1894, by running only 12 races. Eleven of these he won. In the other he was second. The Two Thousand Guineas, the Derby, St. Leger, Eclipse and Jockey club stakes accounted for $178,200 of his total earnings. Ravensbury was the best horse he had to beat in any of the classic races, in all of which that horse ran second. In the Eclipse stakes ($40,425) Inglass carried 142 pounds and defeated Ladas (130), the Derby winner of that year, at one mile and a quarter.

"Come on, you Exterminator!" "Come on, 'Old Bones'!" These cries have been shouted by thousands every time the popular old gelding has run this year. Unmistakably the racing public is rooting for "Old Bones" to beat "Red." Seldom has the American turf seen scenes of greater enthusiasm than when he has appeared this year.

Why should the public be so set on Exterminator's success in passing Man o' War's record? The answer probably is seen in a comparison of the records of the two horses.

Man o' War is by Fair Play—Mahuba, by Rock Sand. He was bred by Maj. August Belmont. He is owned by Samuel D. Riddle of Philadelphia, who races in the name of Glen Riddle-Farm. He started in 21 races in his two years on the turf and was beaten only once. His one defeat was in the Sanford Memorial of 1918 at Saratoga, in which he was beaten a neck by Uget in 1:11 1-5. His jockey, J. Loftus, got him practically left at the post. At their next meeting he beat Uget like breaking sticks. Incidentally J. Loftus could not go to license to ride last year or this. "Red" holds several speed records, including these: Withers, 1 mile, 1:18 pounds, 1:25 4-5, the fastest American mile in actual racing; Belmont, 1 3-8 miles, 1:20 pounds, 2:14 1-5, a world record; Dwyer, 1 1-8 miles, 120 pounds, 1:49 1-5, a world record.

Man o' War won his $249,465 in two seasons. As a two-year-old he won $83,825. The Futurity alone brought him $26,650. The Preakness, Withers, Belmont and the Dwyer made his three-year-old earnings enormous. And then came the "match race" between Man o' War and Sir Barton in Canada for a purse of $50,000—a purely commercial proposition and a foregone conclusion. So Man o' War, a turf aristocrat, had easy pickings against horses of his own age.

Exterminator, by McGee—Fair Empress, by Jim Gore, is now eight years old. He was bred by Frederick D. Knight and is owned by Willis Sharp Hulmer of Binghamton, N. Y. He has started 62 times, finishing first 47 times, second 17 times, third 15 times and unplaced 10 times. He holds one speed record: 2 miles, 129 pounds, 2:31 4-5, Belmont Park, 1920. His winnings have been hard-earned. His Kentucky Derby of 1918 brought him only $14,700. His four successive victories in the Saratoga Cup at 1 1/2 miles, 1919-22, brought him only about $20,000.

Moreover, "Old Bones" has won his quarter of a million largely in races open to the world. He has won at all distances and against horses of all ages. Most of his losing races were in handicaps where he was asked to concede jumps of weight to the winners. In these races he was often the best horse but could not overcome the handicap. Mighty few horses have ever beaten him at weight for age or at even weight.

For instance, when the three-year-old Chickadee beat him by a nose this year in the Old Dominion handicap at a mile and 70 yards at Havre de Grace, the winner carried 101 pounds and the loser 132 pounds. Exterminator came from behind and would have won in another stride.

In the Philadelphia handicap at Havre de Grace Exterminator carried 129 pounds and won at 1 1-10 miles from Paul Jones (0), 109; Fair Phantom (4), 107; Irish King (8), 109; Comie Song (4), 106, and Rouleau (0), 107. Exterminator got off well, and then was placed by McAttee behind the leaders. Comie Song led to the stretch, with Fair Phantom forcing the pace and looking all over the winner. Paul Jones made his move in the stretch and then came along "Old Bones" from fourth place. He and Paul Jones had it ding-dong down the stretch on even terms. Then Paul Jones weakened a trifle and "Old Bones" kept right on to win by a neck. Exterminator was a top-heavy favorite over the field at 4-5.

So Exterminator, not so much of a turf aristocrat as Man o' War, has worked hard for his winnings during seven strenuous years of campaigning, during which he has dodged no man's horse and has run at all distances and under all conditions.

And in this probably lies the reason why the racing public is rooting for "Old Bones" to pass "Red's" record.

A great horse is as hard to define with exactness as a gentleman. But he must have speed, and he must have courage. He must be able to carry right and to go a distance. He must have intelligence. He must be consistent in performance. He must be willing to do his best always. He should have a good disposition, an equable temperament, a sound body and a rugged constitution. And, above all, he must have that indefinable something called class—the quality which enables the stake horse to look the plater in the eye and go on to win.

Exterminator has these qualities—and every one of them.

To say that the defeat of Exterminator in the Old Dominion was a bitter disappointment is the crowd that cheered him for his heroic failure, is putting it mildly," says an account of the race. "Cheer after cheer roared the air as he paraded to the post. Encouragement roared from the throats of those that had planned their faith to him and those that had wagered against him, as he fought valiantly through the last eighth and barely failed to get up."

"While the stands fairly thundered with cheers Exterminator came back again to victory at Havre de Grace today in the Philadelphia handicap," says the official report. "Winners and losers alike joined in the riotous applause for the success of one of the most popular idols of the American turf. Beginning his seventh year of endeavor in the turf, this marvelous old son of McGee and Fair Empress is now on his way to be the greatest money winning thoroughbred of American turf history."

Though Exterminator seems likely to achieve the distinction of having won more money than any other horse in turf history, he is still a long, long way from being the largest winner of races. That hard-earned distinction probably belongs to the American horse Kingston. He started 139 times, won 59 races, was second 34 times, third 11 times and unplaced only four times. His earnings were $138,017. This is a truly wonderful record in its high percentage of winning performances and its low percentage of "also runs."

Among all the great money winning horses of the British turf, the quest for one like Kingston or Exterminator is in vain. In a list of 150 that show the largest earnings, not one has run as many races as "Old Bones" has already run. Katanian stands out among them with his record of 71 starts and 41 winning performances. He was nine times second, five times third and 10 times unplaced. Of the horses that won $100,000 or more in England Tristan was the leading winner of races. He started 63 times, was 29 times first, 12 times second, 6 times third and 6 times unplaced. His earnings were $126,800.

The American turf boasts 26 horses that have run more than 100 races, and this count does not go back to the brave days of old, but is limited to the period since the Civil War. Bad News was the busiest race horse of record. He started 185 times, winning 54 races and $47,823. The famous mare, Imp, started 171 times and won 62 races and $70,000. Jack Atkin, whose progeny are now running and winning, started 139 times and won 56 races and $95,150. Banquet's score was 163 starts, 62 wins and $118,533.

In the meantime a new money-winning star has appeared upon the horizon—Zev, winner of the Kentucky Derby and the Withers, the Paumonok and the Rainbow. He is a three-year-old son of the Finn—Miss Kearney, has won four out of his five starts this year and belongs to Harry F. Sinclair, the oil man, who races under the name of the Rancocas stable. Zev won $23,603 as a two-year-old and his winnings this year already total $70,800, so he has a $104,463 start toward the money-winning championship at this writing. Moreover he is in the hands of the "wizard trainer," Sam Hildreth, under whom the Rancocas stable has already won in 24 days of racing over $140,000 and was the leading American winner in 1921 and 1922.

Zev apparently has the speed to go to the front quickly in any field. He led all the way in the Kentucky Derby and ran the mile and a quarter in 2:05 2-5, with 120 pounds up, winning by one and one-half lengths from a field of 21 horses. He also led all the way in the Withers and ran the mile in 1:37 2-5, the fastest time for a three-year-old ever recorded at Belmont. In the Paumonok and Rainbow he beat older horses, the best sprinters in training in the metropolitan circuit.

MUST EARN RANK

How Man Graduates From "Chechaco" to "Sourdough."

Indisputable Law of the Yukon is That He Has to See Ice in River Come and Go.

Until a man has lived long enough in the Yukon valley to see the ice come and go he is a "Chechaco" (chechaw-ker), after which he is a "Sourdough." Such is the unwritten, but indisputable law of the frozen North.

Those who had already passed through the mill of experience selected the Indian word "Chechaco"—signifying extreme youthfulness in matters not particularly relating to age—as the fit and proper appellation for all the uninitiated; assuming themselves the title "Sourdough," because nothing but that article can be depended on to leaven bread in a country where the grip of winter is so strong.

A "Chechaco" who has determined to become a "Sourdough" watches with interest the endless string of ice floes drifting down the mighty stream in the fall. . . . By and by each little bay is frozen solid; the river itself becomes a flexible, moving mass of piled-up ice. The big white thing heaves lazily as it passes by, anon lumbering against the ice ledge, or receding, exposing a black streak of swirling water. . . . The heavy grinding roar goes on continuously, an incalculable weight heaving against the immovable rocks until at last it shivers, and with a noise like the screeching of innumerable ungreased cart wheels, slowly, very slowly, it comes to a standstill. The vanquished Yukon settles down for her long winter's slumber.

The "Chechaco" has learned his first lesson; he patiently awaits the last. When the days lengthen out he watches the snow depart from the hills with wonder. It slips away with alarming rapidity and the little creeks foam and grumble because the freshet is heavy. Rumor reports that the river is breaking up and he hastens thither to complete his education. The Yukon begins breaking up at its source. The warmer water of the melting snow pours into it through innumerable channels, dissolving and wearing off the under side of the thick ice. Presently the swelling body of water can no longer be confined beneath its icy trammels; the ice is rent asunder and heaved up. It is carried downstream until a sharp bend is reached, where it packs, forming often a dam some 80 feet in height, flooding, incidentally, the surrounding country. The ice below the dam is soon broken up by the weight of water falling on it, but the pack remains intact, a colossal berg imbedded deeply in the channel bottom. It is often several hundred feet thick and stretches from shore to shore, forming a miniature Niagara.

At last the jam breaks and the huge floes go dancing down the swirling torrent in elephantine gambols, anon uprearing themselves high in the air, sometimes leaping quite clear of the water. . . . No man can hear another's voice in the thunderous din; yet above all rings the bell-like note of the floes as they collide, sounding like the musical clink of a wine glass. A few minutes later the great stream has resumed its peaceful appearance of last summer. Tiny wavelets sparkle in the sunshine, eddies whirl round in their accustomed places, and none could guess that but a short time before it was the scene of a grand natural convulsion.

The "Chechaco" turns away with heart too full for words. He has won the proud distinction of "Sourdough."—Percy Dent in Chambers' Journal.

Adjustable Window Sashes. A multiple-sash window, whose several sashes slide horizontally in the window frame, so as to permit adjustment to suit any external weather conditions, is described and illustrated in Popular Mechanics Magazine. Two or more sets of sashes may be mounted in the frame, of which one set may be provided with glass, and the others with wire screenings, or Venetian blinds. In the winter all may be fitted with glass, insuring an absolutely weather-tight window for keeping the cold out. Horizontally grooved frames, invisible in the window wall, receive the flanged rollers with which each sash is provided; and the wall is recessed, of course, to receive those sashes which are not in use. The sides of the frame proper are also provided with a stop catch to limit the movement of each sash.

Daring Feat of Aviator. A landing has been made with an airplane on the brink of the crater of a volcano in eruption. The hero of the exploit is Chanteloup, the famous French pilot, who, with three friends, went to Java in search of the most daring feat he could achieve in a small airplane. He effected a landing on Bromo, one of the series of active volcanoes in the Tenger chain of mountains, and more than 8,000 feet high.

TO RELIEVE PAIN AND BACKACHE

Women May Depend upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Minneapolis, Minn.—"I had heard so much about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that when I realized I needed to take something to relieve my pains and backache, and to help build me up I began to take that. I had been sick off and on for years and barely weighed a hundred pounds, but now I have had such good results that I am recommending the Vegetable Compound to every one."—Mrs. J. J. Finds a True Friend
"Every woman who values her health should be proud to have a true friend like the Vegetable Compound," says Mrs. W. E. Shaw, 3227 Walnut Street, Chicago, Illinois. "I had female weakness so badly that I could not stand on my feet. Half of my time was spent in bed and I had pains in my back which were unbearable. I tried everything I could think of to help myself, and when a friend advised Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I began taking it at once. I recommend it without hesitation."

Gas Hazards of Mines Reduced

Discovery Just Made Cuts Down Danger From Fumes of Carbon Monoxide.

Pittsburgh.—Carbon monoxide gas poisoning, the nemesis of workers in mines, mills, garages, tunnels and various industries, as well as the occupant of the home, is the subject of an important discovery just made by experts of the Pittsburgh station of the United States bureau of mines.

The discovery affords a quick and sure method of determining the presence of carbon monoxide poison in the blood, and, according to the experts, will not only prove a boon to sufferers from the dreaded gas, but will be useful in a legal way, in that it will prove conclusively the cause of such deaths.

Dr. R. R. Sayers and W. B. Yant, chemist of the bureau, made the discovery, and, after months of research work and actual tests upon human beings, they have reported that their simple system could be operated by anyone.

Matrimonial Agents Affect Social Aims

Paris.—Matrimonial agencies have mounted in the social scale higher in France since the war. The shortage of men has made the women more anxious to secure one and has made the men more exacting about securing the best possible one.

The matrimonial agencies practice a ceremonious discretion in all the formalities of arranging the meetings of their clients combined with the hard practicality of a pawnbroker in examining the "dot" of the woman or the financial pretensions of the man.

The most ambitious of the matrimo-cial agencies have connections with socially prominent women and manage to introduce their clients to each other at a tea or reception under the most impeccably natural circumstances.

Or if the man is not inclined to spend enough money to stage such a meeting as this, his next choice on the scale of tariffs is a rendezvous during the intermission of a concert or at the races, where an imposing dowager, acting for the agency, will recognize the young man and present him, as a matter of course, to the girl who is with her.

Burn Youth as Sacrifice; Six Sentenced to Death

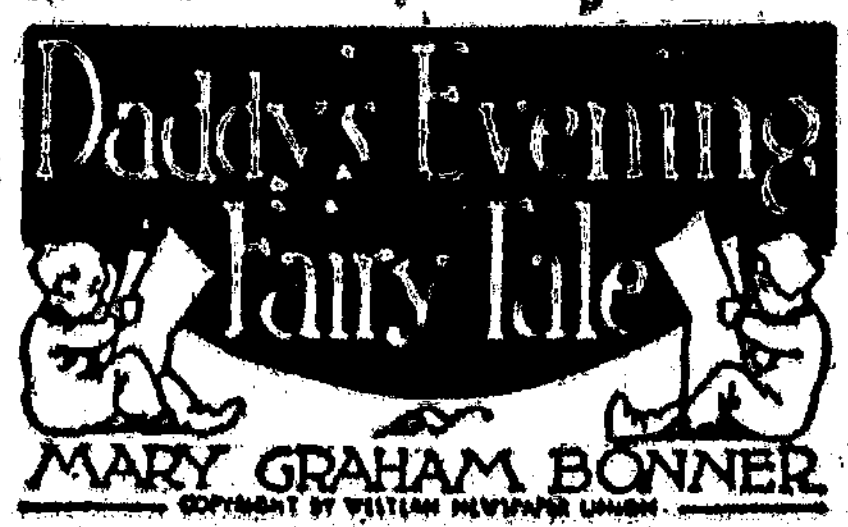

Salisbury, Southern Rhodesia.—Human sacrifice still is practiced in some parts of the old world, it was shown when six members of a local tribe were sentenced to death for burning alive a young man named Manduza in order to appease the rain goddess.

Rhodesia had been suffering from a severe drought, and some of the native tribes ascribed it to the wrath of the goddess, who, they believed, had been violated. Inquiries led the tribal chief to believe that his son was guilty of having assaulted the goddess, and he thereupon ordered his incarceration. The rain goddess, a young and handsome girl, did not testify against him.

Defense counsel commented on the high motives which led the chief to sacrifice his son for rain, and referred to parallel cases in Hebrew and Semitic history.

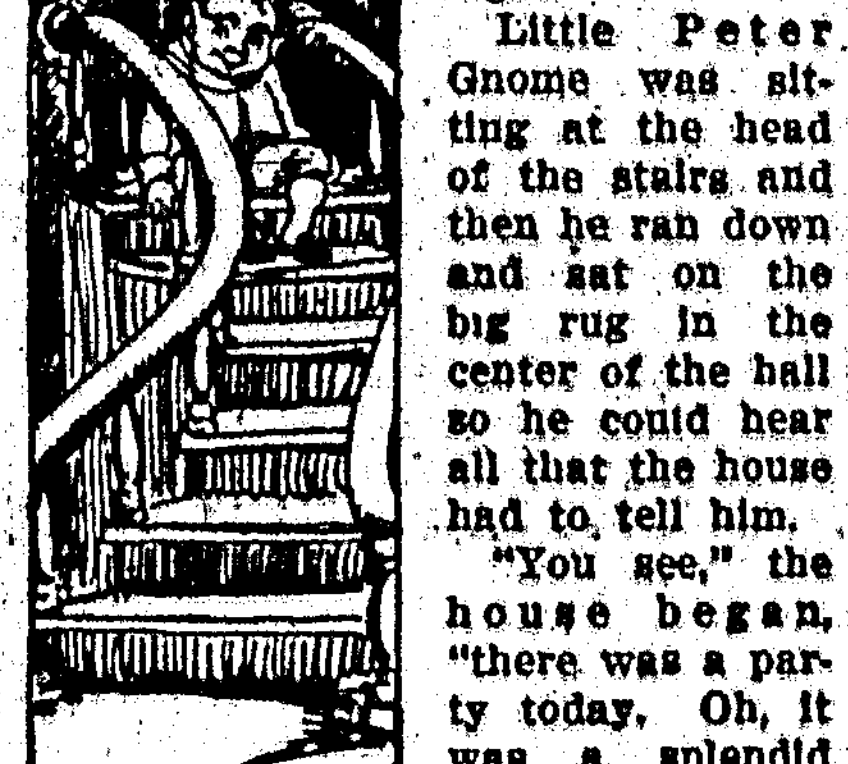

Rain fell soon after Manduza was burned alive.

DRESSED-UP HOUSE

The house was creaking and talking when all was quite quiet at night.

"At the Head of the Stairs."

Little Peter Gnome was sitting at the head of the stairs and then he ran down and sat on the big rug in the center of the hall so he could hear all that the house had to tell him.

"You see," the house began, "there was a party today. Oh, it was a splendid party. Ever and ever so many children came to it."

"I can't tell you how I enjoyed myself. Perhaps some people think a house doesn't enjoy itself. Well, in its own way it does, I can tell you."

"Now, I'm a wooden house and I enjoy a party in my wooden fashion. We certainly can be marked or scratched and so that shows you that we have feelings. But anyway I want to tell you about the party for I know I don't have to tell you about our feelings. I'm sure you understand."

"Oh yes," said Peter Gnome, "I know you have feelings."

"Why, I was looking behind one of the curtains today, dressed in my costume which none can see, and I could tell how happy you are. Why, house, you were smiling all over yourself. And, house, I've seen you said, oh, so sad, when there was sickness. And when you were afraid. House, you've been afraid at times, haven't you?"

"Oh yes," said the house, "and oh, the relief that comes when that fear is over."

"It is sickness that makes me afraid, nothing else," the house continued, "and we had some bad sickness last year. That was when you saw me afraid, I am sure."

"That was the time," said Peter Gnome.

"Oh, it was so wonderful when that quietness that comes over me when there is sickness is lifted. I couldn't help but be quiet, Peter Gnome. I was just as quiet as quiet could be. I didn't feel like smiling. I didn't feel like anything."

"I couldn't have stood it if people then had made a great noise. But as a rule I love noise. And oh, Peter Gnome, how I love laughter. To hear laughter through my great halls and rooms and from the cellar to the garret is so wonderful. But I wanted to tell you about the party and about my dressing up for it. You were here, did you say? Did you see me?"

"I was just here for a moment," said Peter Gnome. "I just saw you smiling. Tell me about it all."

"Well," said the house, "they dressed me up. Yes, every part of me was dressed up. First of all I was cleaned so beautifully. Oh, I was as sweet and clean as ever a house could be, and every part of me was dusted and polished and I did look so spick and span and so shining and fine."

"I just felt so clean and polished and you know it's a beautiful feeling. Then flowers were put all about, and best things were brought out and lovely ferns decorated my corners, and flowers—well—when I said flowers were put all about, I was speaking the truth."

"Everywhere there were flowers. And how they did improve my appearance. They made me smile, the lovely things, helping me to look so fine. Then the children's voices were so gay and merry and the grown-ups seemed to be so cheery and no one scolded and no one was cross and everything was just perfect. And then, Peter Gnome, I received such beautiful compliments. You should have heard the people who said: 'Doesn't the house look too lovely for words?'"

"Yes, they thought I was too lovely for words!"

"Now, that was pretty fine, wasn't it? And they said I was so beautiful a house and that I dressed up so handsomely, and that I was worth spending some time over fixing up, and just any number of magnificent compliments."

"And you deserved every one of them, house," said Peter Gnome. "You've done your part in giving happiness and you deserve all the praise you get."

"And the house creaked a very happy 'thank you.'"

Just What Did It. "I understand you are at the foot of the spelling class, Tommy."

"Yes, dad."

"Well, how did it happen?"

"I put too many s's in scissors."

U. S. Measures Roads' Value

Device Records Traffic on Highways Constructed With Government Aid.

Washington.—Uncle Sam is taking an automatic permanent record of the economic worth of our highways, which he is helping the individual states to build, that will also show the development of highway transportation.

An automatic device for recording traffic which shows not only the number of vehicles which pass over it, but also their weight, is now being installed on the Washington-Baltimore boulevard in front of the campus of the University of Maryland at College park, Maryland, through co-operation of the university with the state roads commission of Maryland. Officials of the Department of Agriculture expect this device to confirm the results of investigations previously made which show that a good road is such a paying investment that it is the poorest kind of business judgment to do without it.

Establishes Road Worth.

This device which is being installed on the Washington-Baltimore road was thought out in the bureau of public roads.

"The value that such a record will have is most obvious," said Dean A. N. Johnson of the engineering department of the university. "It will give a basis for determining the economic worth of our roads and indicate into what our highway transportation is developing."

Work is in progress at the university at present of calibrating the apparatus, casting the slabs of which will form the covering, and otherwise getting everything in readiness for the installation.

This first installation will be experimental, for the purpose of perfecting and developing the apparatus. When installed the roadway will be unimpaired, the concrete slabs, which will form the covering, being so laid as to preserve intact the original surface. This is highly important in order that, as the traffic rolls over the apparatus, there will be no inequalities in the surface which would induce the impact loads.

Show Highways Repay Cost.

The United States bureau of public roads produces figures based on a survey of traffic in Connecticut to prove that a good road soon repays all its cost. An actual count of the traffic on the Boston post road showed that the average weight of vehicles and commodities passing over the road in nine hours each day was 1,140 tons. Adding one-third as a conservative estimate for the full day increases the weight to 1,520 gross tons daily.

Galen Humphrey, who will be one hundred years old next September, has been elected public surveyor of the town of Warshaw, Mass.

Victor Told Mussolini a Joke

Ordinarily the lens catches Premier Mussolini "on parade," looking as stern and "old Roman" as he possibly can, but this time King Victor Emmanuel, his mustache uplifted by a broad and most unregal grin, must have told a good one just as the camera snapped, for the apostle of Fascism is smiling most humanly.

NEW LORE SOUGHT BY 26 SCIENTIFIC EXPEDITIONS

To Conduct Studies Mostly in the United States.

Chicago.—Twenty-six scientific expeditions from nine colleges and universities of the Middle West will be working in various parts of the world during this summer.

In addition to the nine expeditions from the University of Chicago and seven from the University of Iowa, as announced some time ago, Ohio State university, the University of Oklahoma and Purdue university each will have two expeditions working for them, while single expeditions will go out from Indiana university, Earlham college, Notre Dame and the Indiana State Normal school.

Ohio State university will send Dr. W. C. Mills to investigate the mode of living of prehistoric men in Ohio a thousand years ago and Prof. Robert F. Webb will head a party of students who will study rock construction, stratigraphy and plateau construction in Arizona, Colorado and New Mexico.

The University of Oklahoma will send one expedition under the leadership of Dr. Samuel Weidman to study ore deposits in the Miami region, and another, under Dr. V. E. Monnett, to investigate and study structural geology in the Arbuckle mountains.

Indiana university students, under Prof. W. A. Cogshall, will go to Lower California to obtain photographic records of the solar corona during the total eclipse of the sun September 10. Earlham college students will make the trip to Yellowstone park for a summer field course.

Purdue university plans two expeditions within the boundaries of the state. One will be to the sand dunes in northern Indiana, while the other will be made to southeastern Indiana.
