Metal Mining Coming Back to New Mexico

(Las Vegas Optic)
Metal mining in New Mexico is gradually coming back. The Chino Copper Company, the most important copper producer in the state is producing 6,000 tons of ore a day as against a former maximum of 12,000 tons a day. About 600 tons of concentrate a day is shipped to the smelter in El Paso. The Hanover-Bessemer Iron and Copper Company, also located in Grant county near the Chino properties, is shipping about 1,000 tons of ore a day. This ore averages 35 per cent iron. Many gold and silver mines are also being worked in the Magdalena district, ten car loads a month of lead concentrates are shipped to El Paso and fifteen cars a month are shipped to Coffeyville, Kansas. Fluorspar continues to be mined at Las Cruces and other points near there.

Copper, lead, zinc and last, but most important of all, gold mining ventures have a good year ahead of them. The market for all these metals is growing better and better every day and also in every way, per Dr. Cone. New Mexico can hope for larger investments and employment of more labor in mining than ever before in its history. The legislature should be slow to impose new taxes, new regulations, or heavier license fees of any kind on mining operations. Industries that employ large investments of capital and maintain big payrolls, must sell their products in the open markets of the world. Political handicaps only restrict operations and prevent the largest possible amount of money from being placed in circulation through labor and development.

Ancho School Notes

(By Mrs. P. H. Kersey)
Monday was one of the most pleasant days the school has had this year. Mrs. Louise Coe, County Supt. of Schools, spent the day with us; her many suggestions and effective talks we enjoyed and gained new ideas.

The eighth grade on Monday of this week wrote an extensive and instructive composition about the Indian ceremonial chamber or Kiva, called the "Estufas" by the Spaniards.

The sixth grade is taking a review on percentage, parallelograms, triangles, measuring wood and surface of floors, walls while working on the wood problems the class went over to the wood pile along the track and measured it, telling exactly how many cords were stacked ready for shipment.

Cooper Hightower and Ervis Williams, are inspectors this week.

The sixth grade history memorized all the presidents of the United States and terms.

This week each class had a review examination for the month.

The children of the upper grades were sorry to lose one of their members, Bill Hightower, who went to El Paso to enter the High School there. We are glad for Bill to have that opportunity.

The spirit of competition is truly alive in the primary room. Those who succeed in winning

Educational News

The executive committee of the New Mexico Educational Association appointed a legislative committee to work in cooperation with a committee of the State Board of Education to draft needed changes in school legislation to be presented to the coming session of the Legislature. This joint committee held a preliminary meeting in the office of the State Superintendent of Public Instruction, Wednesday afternoon, January 3rd. The committee agreed upon the following policies:

First—That they would refuse to recommend any legislation looking toward increased expenditure of funds during the coming biennium.

Second—That they would attempt to make a study of school laws and proposed legislation toward harmonization of present legislation which may be in conflict.

Third—The committee will attempt to introduce legislation which will attempt to equalize tax burdens where they are unequal and to distribute funds where they are at present unequally distributed.

The State Board of Education expects to adopt an entirely new plan of certification of teachers at a meeting to be held within the next two weeks. The joint legislative committee will propose a new schedule of salaries for teachers based upon the new certification regulations.

The new salary schedule will attempt to base salaries upon professional attainment of teachers and to correct injustices being done to some of the teachers by the present salary schedule.

The committee announced as a definite policy that it expects to cooperate with the chairman of the educational committee in both houses of the State Legislature, the New Mexico Taxpayers Association, the educational auditor and all other interested agencies. The committee will attempt to have all school legislation proposed by school officials presented to the Legislature through the committee rather than independent of the committee.

In speed and accuracy in the various tests used, receive bright colored stars on the board. Quite an amount of pleasure is in evidence when they win these in a fair and square way.

The second and third grades are having thorough reviews; their teacher believing that through thorough repetition, the knowledge gained, remains.

The little folks are very enthusiastic over weaving baskets and material used being principally the tops of "bear grass." These are rather effective and are made at little or no cost.

On Wednesday the sixth grade English had a very interesting and close debate, Resolved, "That summer is a more desirable than winter." The affirmative were Cooper Hightower, Ophello Abila, Joe Mel Hall, Ervis Williams, and Walter Gage. Negatives were Louise Hall, Virgil Peters, Jim Dale, Robert Hall, Domingo Hernandez. Judges were Carol Wilson, Velma Gage, Helen Kilgore.

Chicago Baby Develops Remarkably

Little Norma Loeb, five-weeks-old daughter of Dr. Carl Loeb of Chicago, shows the most wonderful development of any child born in Chicago during the last decade. Norma sleeps on her stomach on a board covered with a cloth to develop her stomach muscles. She has lived on fruit juice since she was one week old. She sits in a chair without any support and walks when supported by her mother. She took several steps for the benefit of the photographer.

Town Council Meeting

Members present: J. M. Taylor, Mayor; W. W. Stadtman, Clerk; Fred Lalone, G. T. McQuillen, T. E. Kelley, Trustees, and A. M. Vega, Marshal. There was also present contractor for Water Works System, F. A. English and Water Works Supt. R. H. Taylor. Member absent F. E. Richard, Trustee.

The minutes of the last regular meeting held on Dec. 11th were read and approved, also the minutes of regular meeting held Jan. 8th, were read and approved. Report of special committee appointed to determine the rate to be charged customers of the Village for water, and other matters pertaining to the distribution of water to customers and connection and service charges was submitted and on motion of T. E. Kelley, seconded by Fred Lalone said report is approved. T. E. Kelley then makes a motion to authorize and instruct the Clerk to take up the matter of drawing an ordinance covering the operation of the Water System, which motion on being seconded by Fred Lalone is put to a vote and carried. On motion of G. T. McQuillen seconded by T. E. Kelley, the Clerk is requested to write the Health Department of the State for instructions relating to the construction of cess pools and Septic Tanks and report at the next meeting. On motion made by Fred Lalone and seconded by G. T. McQuillen, Frank English is awarded the contract for making connections to the property lines from the water mains, said connections to conform to the specifications and ordinances of the Village or instructions of the Village Council, each connection to be made for $12.00. On motion of G. T. McQuillen, seconded by T. E. Kelley, R. H. Taylor is retained as Water Works Superintendent at $50 per month. The duties of said superintendent to cover inspection of plumbing, making of repairs on any part of water system, reading of meters monthly and turning of water on or off at individual or customers meters, and the care of all equipment, tools, instruments and materials pertaining to the water works system. On motion of Fred Lalone seconded by T. E. Kelley, the Village Clerk's salary is increased the sum of $35 per month to cover the extra duties in connection with the operation of the Water Works system and such increase to be paid from the water fund, beginning Jan. 15, 1923. A petition of the Woman's Club of Carrizozo, petitioning for more rigid enforcement of the stray animal law and ordinances is presented and after consideration by the Board the Village Marshal is instructed to see that these ordinances be more rigidly enforced. Bills to the amount of $6,625.82 were presented by the clerk and warrants for same were ordered drawn and the meeting adjourned.

Human Tide Now Flows to South America

Emigration from Europe that has been checked by the immigration restrictions of the United States, is finding an outlet to South America. All of the countries there present big opportunities for the energetic immigrant, and reports show that the rate of influx is growing every month, assisted by the activities of European-shipping concerns. It is probable that the movement will bring about a rapid stimulation of South American industry and an earlier development of the natural resources.

The outlook should cause no apprehension in the United States; on the contrary, the enlarged markets for American goods that are bound to be a part of the movement ought to bring great encouragement to American manufacturers. It is up to them to be constantly on the job and see to it that the United States supplies the needed machinery and other material for South American growth. Suitable credit arrangements must be made to meet Latin American customs of payment, specifications must be made to accord with the peculiar requirements of those countries, packing for shipment must be thorough, dependable ocean transport routes must be maintained, and in general, a special study must be made of how to win and keep South American trade in competition with the countries of the Old World. American initiative and energy are equal to the task.—Las Vegas Optic.

Can't Keep From Mining

CHAPTER VII—Continued.

A great fenced field of velvety green alfalfa furnished a rich background for the drive of about twenty white horses. Blanco Diablo was the only one to the field that was not free to roam and graze where he listed. A stake and a halter held him to one corner, where he was severely let alone by the other horses. He did not like this isolation. Blanco Diablo was not happy unless he was running, or fighting a rival. Of the two he would rather fight. If anything white could resemble a devil, this horse surely did. He had nothing beautiful about him, yet he drew the gaze and held it. The look of him suggested discontent, anger, revolt, viciousness. When he was not gnawing or prancing, he held his long lean head level pointing his nose and showing his teeth. Belding's favorite was almost all the world to him, and he swore Diablo could stand more heat and thirst and carter than any other horse he owned, and could run down and kill any horse in the Southwest.

The cowboys admitted some of Belding's claims for Diablo, but they gave loyal and unshakable allegiance to Blanco Sol. As for Dick, he had to fight himself to keep out of arguments, for he sometimes imagined he was unreasonable about the horse. Though he could not understand himself, he knew he loved Sol as a man loved a friend, a brother. Free of heavy saddle and the clumsy leg shields, Blanco Sol was somehow all satisfying to the eyes of the rangers. The dazzling whiteness of the desert sun shone from his coat; he had the fire and spirit of the desert in his noble head, its strength and power in his glancing frame.

"Belding swears Sol never beat Diablo," Dick was saying.
"He believes it," replied Nell. "Dad is queer about that horse."
"I've often wondered how Belding ever came to give Blanco Sol to me," said Dick.
"I think he wanted to get rid of Sol."

"Maybe he surely has strange notions for horses. I think I understand better than I used to. I owned a couple of racers once. They were just animals to me, I guess. But Blanco Sol!"
"Do you love him?" asked Nell; and now a warm, blue flash of eyes swept his face.
"Do I? Well, rather."
"I'm glad. Sol has been finer, a better horse since you owned him. He loves you. Dick. Sol always hated Diablo, and never had much use for Dad."

Dick looked up at her.
"It'll be pretty hard to leave Sol when I go away."
Nell sat perfectly still.
"Go away?" she asked, presently, with just the faintest tremor in her voice.

"Yes. Sometimes when I get blue—as I am today—I think I'll go. But in sober truth, Nell, it's not likely that I'll spend all my life here."
"There was no answer to this. Dick put his hand softly over hers and despite her half-hearted struggle to free it, he held on.

"Nell!"
Her color fled. He saw her lips part. Then a heavy sigh on the gravel, a cheerful, resplending smile. She slipped her hand, and released Nell and drew back. Belding strode into view round the adobe shed.
"Hey, Dick, that damned Yaqui he ain't be driven or hired or coaxed to leave Fortorn River. He's well enough to travel. I offered him horse, gun, blanket, grub. But no go."

"That's funny," replied Gale, with a smile. "Let him stay—put him to work."
"It doesn't strike me funny. But I'll tell you what I think. That poor, homeless, heartbroken Indian has taken a liking to you, Dick. You saved his life. That sort of thing counts big with any Indian, even with an Apache. With a Yaqui, maybe it's of deep significance. I've heard a Yaqui say that with his tribe no debt to friend or foe ever went unpaid. Perhaps that's what ails this fellow."
"Dick, don't laugh," said Nell. "I've noticed the Yaqui. It's pathetic the way his great gloomy eyes follow you."

"You've made a friend," continued Belding. "A Yaqui could be a real friend on this desert. If he gets his strength back he'll be of service to you, don't mistake me. He's welcome here. But you're responsible for him, and you'll have trouble keeping him from massacring all the Greasers in Fortorn River."

The probability of a visit from the raiders, and a dash bolder than usual on the outskirts of a ranch, led Belding to build a new corral. It was not slightly to the eye, but it was high and exceedingly strong. The gate was a massive affair, swinging on huge hinges and fastened with heavy chains and padlocks.

At night Belding locked his white horses in this corral. The Papago herdsmen slept in the adobe shed adjoining. Belding did not imagine that any wooden fence, however substantially built, could keep determined raiders from breaking it down. They would have to take time, however, and make considerable noise; and Belding relied on these facts. Belding did not believe a band of night raiders would hold out against a hot rifle fire. Ladd did not share Belding's sanguine hopes.

One January morning Dick Gale was awakened by a shrill, menacing cry. He leaped up bewildered and frightened. He heard Belding's booming voice answering shouts, and rapid steps on flagstones. But these had not awakened him. Heavy breaths, almost sobs, seemed at his very door. In the cold and gray dawn Dick saw something white. Gun in hand, he bounded across the room. Just outside his door stood Blanco Sol.

It was not unusual for Sol to come poking his head in at Dick's door during daylight. But now in the early dawn, when he had been locked in the corral, it meant raiders—no less, Dick called softly to the snoring horse; and, hurriedly getting into clothes and boots, he went out with a gun in each hand. Sol was quivering in every muscle. Like a dog he followed Dick around the house. Hearing shouts in the direction of the corrals, Gale bent swift steps that way.

He caught up with Jim Lash, who was also leading a white horse. They reached the corral to find Belding shaking, roaring like a madman. The gate was open, the corral was empty. "Tom, where's the Papago?" said Ladd.

"He's gone, Laddy—gone!"
"Doubtless crossed us, eh? I see here a cracker grin by the gatepost. That Indian fetched it from the force. It was used to pry out the bolts and staples. Tom, I reckon there wasn't much time for ferris' that gate."

Daylight made clear some details of the raid. The cowboys found tracks of about a dozen horses coming from the river bed where their horses had been left. Evidently the Papago had been held in his track. His personal belongings were gone. More horses were found loose in the field.

The men soon rounded up eleven of the whites, all more or less frightened.

Belding was unconsoled. He cursed and railed, and finally declared he was going to trail the raiders.

"Tom, you just ain't goin' to do nothin' of the kind," said Laddy, coolly.
Belding groaned and bowed his head.
"Laddy, you're right," he replied, presently. "I've got to stand it. I can't leave the women and my property. But it's sure tough. I'm sure way down deep, and nothin' but blood would ever satisfy me."

"Leave that to me an' Jim," said Ladd.
"What do you mean to do?" demanded Belding, starting up.
"Shore I don't know yet. . . . Give me a light for my pipe. An' Dick, go fetch out your Yaqui."

CHAPTER VIII

"The Running of Blanco Sol. The Yaqui's strange glance roved over the corral, the swinging gate with its broken fastenings, the tracks in the road, and then rested upon Belding.

"Malo," he said, and his Spanish was clear.
"Shore, Yaqui, about eight bad men, an' a traitor Indian," said Ladd.
"I think he means my herder," added Belding. "If he does, that settles any doubt it might be decent to have—Yaqui—malo Papago—Si?"

The Yaqui spread wide his hands. Then he bent over the tracks in the road. They led everywhere, but gradually he worked out of the thick net to take the trail that the cowboys had followed down to the river. Belding and the rangers kept close at his heels. He found a trampled spot where the raiders had left their horses. From this point a deeply defined narrow trail led across the dry river bed.

The trail of the raiders took a southeasterly course over untrampled desert. The Yaqui spoke in his own tongue, then in Spanish.
"This he means slow march," said Belding. "Laddy, from the looks of that trail the Greasers are having trouble with the horses."
"Tom, shore a boy could see that," replied Laddy. "Ask Yaqui to tell us where the raiders are headin', an' if there's water."

It was wonderful to see the Yaqui point. With a stick he traced a line in the sand, and then at the end of that another line at right angles. He made crosses and marks and holes, and as he drew the red map he talked in Yaqui, in Spanish; with a word here and there in English. Belding translated as best he could. The raiders were heading southeast toward the railroad that ran from Nogales down into Sonora. It was four days' travel, bad trail, good sure waterhole one day out; then water not sure for two days. Raiders, not looking for pursuit, could be headed and ambushed that night at the great waterhole, a natural trap in a valley.

The men returned to the ranch. The rangers ate and drank while making hurried preparations for travel. Blanco Sol and the cowboys' horses were fed, watered, and saddled. Ladd refused to ride one of Belding's whites. He was quick and cold.
"Get me a long-range rifle an' lots of shells. Rustle, now," he said. "I want a gun that'll shoot out the dinky little carbines an' muskets used by the rebels. Trifles one out an' be quick."
"I've got a .403, a long-barreled heavy rifle that'll shoot a mile. I use it for mountain sheep. But Laddy, I'll break that bronch's back."
"His back won't break so easy. . . . Dick, take plenty of shells for your Remington. An' don't forget your field glass."

In less than an hour after the time of the raid the three rangers, heavily armed and superbly mounted on fresh horses, rode out on the trail. As Gale turned to look back from the far bank of Fortorn River, he saw Nell waving a white scarf. He stood high in his stirrups and waved his sombrero. Then the mesquite hid the girl's slight figure, and Gale wheeled grim-faced to follow the rangers.

They rode in single file with Ladd in the lead. He took a beeline course for the white escarpment located the raiders and horses. In another hour's travel the rangers could see with naked eyes a long, faint moving streak of black and white dots.

"They're headin' for that yellow pass," said Ladd, pointing to a break in the eastern end of the escarpment. "When they get out of sight we'll trail 'em. I'm thinkin' that waterhole the Yaqui spoke of lies in the pass."
The rangers traveled swiftly over the remaining miles of level desert leading to the ascent of the escarpment. When they achieved the gateway of the pass the sun was low in the west. Ladd gave the word to lie up horses and go forward on foot.

The narrow neck of the pass opened and descended into a valley half a mile wide, perhaps twice that in length. It had apparently unscalable slopes of weathered rock leading up to beetling walls.

"Keep down, boys," said Ladd. "There's the waterhole, an' horses have sharp eyes. Shore the Yaqui figured this place. I never seen it like for a trap."

Both white and black horses showed against the green, and a thin curling column of blue smoke rose lazily from amid the mesquites.
"I reckon we'd better wait till dark, or maybe daylight," said Jim Lash.
"Let me figger some. Dick, what do you make of the outer to this hole? Looks rough to me."

With his glass Gale studied the narrow construction of walls and roughened rising floor.
"Laddy, it's harder to get out at that end than here," he replied.
"Shore that's hard enough. Let me have a look. . . . Well, boys, it don't take no figgerin' for this job, Jim, I'll want you at the other end blockin' the pass when we're ready to start."

"When'll that be?" inquired Jim.
"Soon as it's light enough in the mornin'. That Greaser outfit will hang till tomorrow. There's no sure water ahead for two days, you remember."

The rangers stole back from the vantage point and returned to their horses, which they untied and left farther round among broken sections of cliff. For the horses it was a dry, hungry camp, but the rangers built a fire and had their short though strengthening meal.

Jim Lash rolled in his saddle blanket, his feet near the fire, and went to sleep. Ladd told Gale to do likewise while he kept the fire up and waited until he was late enough for Jim to undertake circling round the raiders. When Gale awakened, Jim was up saddling his horse, and Ladd was talking low.

With Ladd leading, they moved away into the gloom. Advance was exceedingly slow, careful, silent. Finally the trail showed pale in the gloom, and eastern stars twinkled between the lofty ramparts of the pass.

Ladd halted and stood silent a moment. "Luck again!" he whispered. "The wind's in your face, Jim. The horses won't scent you. Try to get up as high as this at the other end. Wait till daylight before riskin' a loose slope. I'll be ridin' the job early. That's all."

Ladd's cool, easy speech was scarcely significant of the perilous undertaking. Lash moved very slowly away, leading his horse. Then Ladd touched Dick's arm, and turned back up the trail.

Together they picked a way back through the winding recesses of cliff. The campfire was smoldering. Ladd replenished it and lay down to get a few hours' sleep, while Gale kept watch. The after part of the night wore on till the paling of stars, the thickening of gloom indicated the dark hour before dawn. Ladd awoke before the faintest gray appeared. The rangers ate and drank. When the black did lighten to gray they saddled the horses and led them out to the pass and down to the point where they had parted with Lash. Here they awaited daylight.

The valley grew clear of gray shadow except under leaning walls on the eastern side. Then a straight column of smoke rose from among the mesquites. Manifestly this was what Ladd had been awaiting. He took the long .403 from its sheath and fired the lever. Then he lifted a cartridge belt from the pommel of his saddle. Every ring held a shell and these shells were four inches long. He buckled the belt round him.

"Come on, Dick."

Ladd led the way down the steep wall he reached a position that commanded the rising of the trail from a level. It was the only place where a horse could leave the trail for the pass.

"Dick, here's your stand. If any raider rides in range take a crack at him. . . . Now I want the lead at your heels."

"Blanco Sol!" exclaimed Gale, more in amazement than in reluctance to lead him.
"Will you let me have him?" Ladd repeated, almost curtly.
"Certainly, Laddy."

A smile momentarily chased the dark, cold gloom that had set upon the ranger's lean face.

"Shore I appreciate it, Dick. I know how you care for that horse. I guess maybe Charley Ladd has loved a horse. An' one not so good as Sol. I was only tryin' your nerve, Dick, askin' you without tellin' my plan. Sol won't get a scratch, you can gamble on that. I'll ride him down into the valley an' pull the Greasers out into the open. They've got short-ranged carbines. They can't keep out of range of the .403, an' I'll be takin' the dust of their lead. They can't gain on Sol, an' he'll run them down when I want. Can you beat it?"
"No, it's great!" . . . But suppose a raider comes out on Blanco Diablo?"

"I reckon that's the one weak place in my plan. But if they do, well, Sol can outrun Diablo. An' I can always kill the white devil!"

Ladd's strange hate of the horse showed in the passion of his last words, in his hardening jaw and grim set lips.

Gale's hand went swiftly to the ranger's shoulder.

"Laddy, don't kill Diablo unless it's to save your life."
"All right. But by G—d, if I get a chance I'll make Blanco Sol run him off his legs!"

He spoke no more and set about changing the length of Sol's stirrups. When he had them adjusted to suit, he mounted and rode down the trail and out upon the level. He rode leisurely as if merely going to water his horse. The long black rifle lying across his saddle, however, was ominous.

Gale securely tied the other horse to a mesquite at hand, and took a position behind a low rock over which he could easily see and shoot when necessary. Ladd rode a quarter of a mile out upon the flat before anything happened. Then a whistle rent the still, cold air. A horse had seen or scented Blanco Sol. The whistle was prolonged, faint, but clear. It made the blood thrum in Gale's ears. Sol halted. His head shot up with the old, wild, spritid sweep. Gale leveled his glass at the patch of mesquites. He saw the raiders running to an open place, pointing, gesticulating. Then he got only white and dark gleams of moving bodies. Evidently that moment was one of boots, guns and saddles for the raiders.

Then Gale saw a rider gallop swiftly from the group toward the farther outlet of the valley. This might have been owing to characteristic cowardice; but it was more likely a move of the raiders to make sure of retreat. Undoubtedly Ladd saw this galloping horseman. A few waiting moments ensued. The galloping horseman reached the slope, began to climb, with naked eye Gale saw a puff of white smoke spring out of the rocks. Then the raider wheeled his plunging horse back to the level, and went racing wildly down the valley.

The compact bunch of boys and blacks seemed to break apart and spread rapidly from the edge of the mesquites. Puffs of white smoke indicated firing, and showed the nature of the raiders' excitement. They were far out of ordinary range; but they spurred toward Ladd, shooting as they rode. The raiders' bullets, striking low, were slipping along the hard, bare floor of the valley. Then Ladd raised the long rifle. There was no smoke, but three high, spanging reports rang out. A gap opened in the dark line of advancing horsemen; then a riderless steed sheered off to the right. Blanco Sol seemed to turn as on a pivot and charged back toward the lower end of the valley. He circled over to Gale's right and stretched out into his run. There were now five raiders in pursuit, and they came sweeping down, yelling and shooting, evidently sure of their quarry. Ladd reserved his fire. He kept turning from back to front in his saddle.

Manifestly he intended to try to lead the raiders round in front of Gale's position, and, presently, Gale saw he was going to succeed. The raiders, riding like vagabonds, swept on in a curve, cutting off what distance they could. Blanco Sol pounded by, his rapid, rhythmic hoofbeats plainly to be heard. He was beating easily.

Gale tried to still the jump of heart and pulse, and turned his eye again on the nearest pursuer. This raider was crossing in his carbine held muzzle up in his right hand, and he was coming swiftly. It was a long shot, upward of five hundred yards. Gale had not time to adjust the sights of the Remington, but he knew the gun and, holding coarsely upon the swiftly moving blot, he began to shoot. The rifle was automatic; Gale needed only to pull the trigger. Swiftly he worked it. Suddenly the leading horse leaped convulsively, not up nor aside, but straight ahead, and then he crashed to the ground, throwing his rider like a catapult, and then slid and rolled. He half got up, fell back, and kicked; but his rider never moved.

DOCTORS WANTED TO OPERATE

Mrs. Quillen Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Saved Her from an Operation.

Monkton, Michigan. "After doctoring for eight or nine years with different physicians without any relief at all, they said that the medicine would not reach my channels. I should have an operation. I had heard of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and often saw it advertised in different papers where some women had suffered just as I did and got well and strong again by taking the Vegetable Compound. I decided to see what it would do for me, and before I had finished the fourth bottle I was much better, the weakness stopped and the severe pains in my sides left me. I am now much stronger and do my own work and work in the factory besides. I am still taking the Vegetable Compound and give it all the praise. —Mrs. NELLIE QUILLEN, 17 Morris St., Monkton, Mich.

Women should heed such warning symptoms as bearing-down pains and weakness, for they indicate some female trouble, and a persistent and faithful use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will seldom fail to help.

By the Use of Nujol

Nujol is a lubricant—not a medicine or laxative—so cannot grip. When you are constipated, not enough of Nature's lubricating liquid is produced in the bowel to keep the food waste soft and moving. Do not use medicine. Prescribe Nujol because it acts like this natural lubricant and thus replaces it. Try Nujol. A LUBRICANT—NOT A LAXATIVE.

He Had Enough.
Political activity in a small Indiana town won for one of the village lights the postmastership. Quite properly, politically speaking, he ran both thumbs in the plum pudding and thought he was a great boy. But he was no bookkeeper. His accounts soon got in what might be called a mess. Finally he got word to prepare for checking out. He rushed over the accounts for hours and late into the evening.
"Come on out to supper," pleaded a friend.
"Supper!" exclaimed the troubled one. "I don't want no supper. I'm full of figures!"

Old Store Ancient Tongue

Scientist, Assisted by Self-Taught Indian, Seeks Key to Language of Quiches.

NEW METHOD BEING EMPLOYED

Hopes to Unravel Secrets of Maya Hieroglyphic Writings and Inscriptions Which Have Baffled Scholars for Centuries.

Charlottesville, Va.—Restoration of an almost forgotten language with the aid of an uneducated, nearly illiterate, self-taught, full-blooded Indian from the highlands of Guatemala, is being undertaken by Dr. William Gates of Charlottesville. The Indian is Quiche, and his language, which heretofore never had been thoroughly studied, bears the same name. The race and tongue are offshoots of the ancient Mayas, whose high civilization, the most advanced of any early American people, flourished before the Spanish arrived in South and Central America. The Mayas built marvelous cities, palaces and temples, the ruins of which dot Yucatan and Guatemala. Their descendants are the Indians and peon class which inhabit that region today. Only the mountain tribes have escaped the advance of civilization.

Will Use New Methods. Through the application of a new scientific method which reaches to the root of language, Doctor Gates expects to restore the decadent tongue, decipher the hitherto unraveled secrets of the ancient Maya hieroglyphic writings and inscriptions, which have baffled archeologists for centuries, compile books for the instruction of the Indians and eventually restore the literature.

In his experiments the scientist has been recording on a smoked paper cylinder the vibrations of a stylus actuated by the Indian's words spoken into a mouthpiece. These records are preserved for study of the intricate variations of pronunciation, and already, working with manuscripts written in the Indian tongue by the earliest Spanish missionaries, Gates has found a remarkable preservation of the ancient speech.

The instrument he used is known as the "kymograph," or wave-writer, and was invented by an eminent French ethnologist for language study. Doctor Gates was aided by John P. Harrington, ethnologist of the Smithsonian Institution, who has studied practically all North American Indian languages. Indian Teaches Himself. Probably the most interesting feature of Doctor Gates' work is the investigation, Doctor Gates said, was due not only to the use of the kymograph in his research, but to study of the grammar of the present tongue and application of the rules thus worked out to the writing found in the inscriptions.

The final success of his extended investigation, Doctor Gates said, was due not only to the use of the kymograph in his research, but to study of the grammar of the present tongue and application of the rules thus worked out to the writing found in the inscriptions.

Yanks Corrupt German Police

Chiefs of Two Divisions Complain of Americans Undermining Morale of Force.

LURE TRAFFIC COP FROM POST

Melodious Foreign Prisoners Stir Up Entire Neighborhood to Protest—Jailer Closes Jail and Goes on Joy Ride.

Berlin.—Heads of two police districts in Berlin have complained to Chief Richter that Americans are undermining the morale of their force. They are unable to combat the sinister influence of the care-free foreigners.

The other night, traffic at the busy corner of Unter den Linden and Wilhelmstrasse became hopelessly jammed when two Americans bound toward an expensive restaurant were suddenly stricken with pity for the poor officer who stood in the rain and cold wind managing all the traffic by himself. They invited him to accompany them and, ensconced in a cozy corner of a high-class restaurant, they bought him repeated rounds of Napoleon brandy until the policeman forgot the roaring traffic and passed an hour swapping anecdotes of the war. When he reappeared on his beat where frantic taxicab drivers were untangling their vehicles from a maze of horse cabs and omnibuses, he carried a quart of expensive liquor in his hip pocket. The Inspector finally sent reinforcements to unscramble the traffic tangle. Close Up Jail. This offense of the Americans followed an early Sunday morning episode of two weeks before, in which a whole station was corrupted. Two Americans after a joyous Saturday night roused the exclusive West End with a ribald singing of some of America's best known barber shop symphonies. They were arrested and taken to jail. Refusing to be irritated by their arrest they prevailed upon one of the reserves to visit a nearby all night cafe and bring back champagne. With each visit of the policemen, who arranged shifts between the station house and the cafe, the melodies became more mellow and the American repertory was varied with the old German favorites.

By five o'clock in the morning the neighbors began to complain and the indignant policemen decided, upon the suggestion of the Americans, to close the jail. Accordingly they repaired to one of the uptown hotels and visiting the rooms of several friends of the Americans, who were to sail for America the same day, pronounced all their passports invalid in such an earnest manner that the sleepy guests were obliged to buy more champagne when the "joke" was discovered.

Chief Is Indignant. When the chief of the outlying station arrived and found the place locked up he was a bit more than surprised, but when his trusted officers finally returned in taxicabs, still singing snatches of American songs and telling about the "regular fellows" they had in jail the night before, he was astounded and penned an indignant report to the police chief, suggesting that all Americans be made ineligible for at least the quiet, residential district prisons.

Thus far there has been no ruling excluding the visitors from the United States from jails.

HEART BEAT IDENTIFIES THUG

Doctor, His Victim, Uses Novel Method on Holdup Man Patient in New York.

New York.—Harry Sinclair, arrested as a burglar suspect, has been identified by his heart throbs. Thinking the prisoner's description tallied with that given by Dr. Henry Moeller of the man who one Sunday night entered his office as a patient and attacked and robbed him, police sent for Doctor Moeller. Assisted by his son, also a physician, Doctor Moeller examined Sinclair with a stethoscope and declared the prisoner's heart beat was the same as that of the man he examined in his office. Sinclair, who said he was an actor, was identified also by Doctor Moeller's two daughters, Anita and Marie Moeller, as the man they saw in their father's office.

It is said jogs may be dispelled by means of electric waves.

LOST FAITH IN PHYSICIAN

Mrs. Giles' Husbandly Insistence at His Frank Admission of Ignorance of Medicine.

Mrs. Giles' husband had been very ill. For days he had been gradually getting worse, but at last there came a change for the better.

When the doctor called and had a look at his patient, he announced: "He is convalescent."

On hearing this, Mrs. Giles regarded the physician suspiciously; and her suspicion increased when he prepared to go without further comment.

"Well, doctor," said Mrs. Giles, "what are you going to do about it?" "Do?" was the answer. "There ain't nothing to be done."

"Well, you are a doctor, ain't you?" retorted the enraged lady. "Ain't you got no medicine for this ere convalescence?"

Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Never Suspect It

Applicants for Insurance Often Rejected.

Judging from reports from druggists who are constantly in direct touch with the public, there is one preparation that has been very successful in overcoming these conditions. The mild and healing influence of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its remarkable record of success.

An examining physician for one of the prominent life insurance companies, in an interview on the subject, made the astonishing statement that one reason why so many applicants for insurance are rejected is because kidney trouble is so common to the American people, and the large majority of those whose applications are declined do not even suspect that they have the disease. Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is on sale at all drug stores in bottles of two sizes, medium and large.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.—Advertisement.

PUSSY HAD TO COME FIRST

Good Reason Why Impetuous Pair Couldn't Afford to Steal Cat's Provisions.

A certain artist and his wife—who is an artist, too—recall an incident of their early studio days. A friend leaving the city for a few weeks left in their care a large, healthy and hungry looking cat with injunctions to give it good care. The feline's owner left with them sufficient funds to keep the cat in meat.

The artistic pair, not having attained their present success, were the reverse of affluent at the time.

"There we were, not eating regularly ourselves," said the husband the other evening as he consumed the last of a large pork chop, "and we seldom had meat. But we had to sit around and watch the cat eat good liver."

"Why didn't you steal the cat's liver sometimes?" he was asked.

"We wanted to," he answered, "but the animal wasn't fat and we were afraid its ribs would show when its mistress got back."

BONEHEAD PLAY OF NOAH'S

Asleep at the Switch When He Had Opportunity to Benefit the Human Race.

Boneheads have been pulled since the dawn of light. The idea that any particular age sees them running wild is a mistake. The first famous bonehead that history records was pulled by no less a personage than old Noah.

Noah simply couldn't see things right; he had no vision and, therefore, missed the "Golden Chance." He had 40 long nights in which to get up and put the two mosquitoes in the world out of business. He could have done it with one smash of his fly swatter. But Noah snored away at the switch and in time the dove appeared with the olive branch and the next day the people walked off the ark onto land—and the mosquitoes went with them.

There are many other famous boneheads that might be here recorded, but none of them equals old Noah's as a work of art, so the committee appointed for the purpose has decided unanimously to place his name in the hall of fame.—Bert Walker in the Topeka Capital.

Railroad Robberies.

French railroads in the past three years have paid a total of 698,500,000 francs indemnity for merchandise stolen in stations and transit, lost, or deteriorated. It was announced recently. All but a few millions of this sum which is considerably greater than the budget voted for France's army this year—covered the work of railroad robbers. No wonder that the French passed legislation increasing greatly the penalties of this type of theft and providing in extreme cases the penalty of hard labor for life.

Out of Date.

The mild-Victorian aunt was paying her annual visit. It was Sunday afternoon and she had been left in charge of the baby snapper. Wondering how she should entertain her, she said: "Shall I tell you a story?" "Yes," assented the youngster in rather bored tones. "How would you like to hear about Adam and Eve in the beautiful garden?" "Oh, I'm sick of the Adamses. Don't you know anything else?"

As soon as the moon gets three-quarters it proceeds to get full.

Few great men have introspection enough to tell how it feels to be great.

U. S. WILL SELL HISTORIC SPOTS

Sites Might Have Become Famous if Used by Army.

Federal Government Propose to Dispose of Real Estate Acquired in Early Times for Fortification Purposes.

Washington.—Bits of land which have, or, if developed, might have figured largely in the history of the South are included in the War department's "land junk" sale.

The bill authorizing the sale shows that the federal government plans to dispose of real estate which was acquired as early as 1700 for fortification purposes, but which modern warfare has relegated to the class of "surplus and unnecessary government property."

Communications received by a number of senators from Southern states indicate some of the property will be purchased by historical societies. Examination of the history of the tracts to be offered for sale revealed that the deeds to two tracts, Old Fort Jackson at Savannah, Ga., and Perry Point in Norfolk county, Virginia, were made out and stand today, to "Thomas Jefferson, President of the United States and his successors in office."

Another tract, Fort Nelson, also in Norfolk county, Virginia, and bought as a site for fortifications for Norfolk, is covered by a deed made out to John Quincy Adams and his successors in the office of President.

Two parcels to be sold also are shown to include Beacon Island, off the North Carolina coast, which was acquired by the government in 1700, as a site for fortifications off Newbern, which was an important city at the close of the Revolutionary war.

Other sites to be sold are Fort Mcon, near Beaufort and Morehead City, N. C., bought in 1810 and 1828 as a site for the defense of Old Topsail Inlet and Fort St. Phillip, on the Mississippi river south of New Orleans, which was acquired as "defense against the British" prior to the battle of New Orleans.

DIG UP PEAT ON "U" CAMPUS

Professor of the University of Michigan Sees Great Scientific Value in Discovery.

Ann Arbor, Mich.—In the excavations being made on the campus for the literary building and the physics building, Prof. H. E. Bartlett has discovered pellets of peat which will, it is believed, be of great scientific value.

It is believed this discovery will enable scientists to determine the type of vegetation existing in the glacial period. According to Professor Bartlett's theory, these pellets came from a peat bed that existed during the glacial period, disintegrated in the break-up and was carried out with the gravel.

The pellets found here are two and three inches across. They have no commercial value.

Public Forests Widely Used by Vacationists

Albuquerque, N. M., Jan. 17.—National Forests in Arizona and New Mexico attracted a hundred thousand vacationists last year, says the District Forester and the report of the Chief Forester shows the country's forests at large acted as a host for more than five million.

Motors and good roads, as pointed out by the annual report of the Forest Service, United States Department of Agriculture, issued by Chief Forester W. B. Greely, have combined to effect a radical change in the outdoor recreational habits of the American people. Vacation time is now a period of travel to widely separated scenes and of simple living in the open.

Every year the primitive charm of the wilderness and the appeal of natural scenery are drawing increased numbers to the National Forests. Campers, hunters, fishermen, naturalists, kodakgers and prospectors come by auto, by wagon and on horse back and many even on foot to enjoy a vacation without restriction except to leave a clean camp and have a care with fire. National Forests are widely distributed and many are close to the cities and communities which makes them the natural centers for summer recreations.

CATARRHAL DEAFNESS
is greatly relieved by constitutional treatment. HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE is a constitutional remedy. Catarrhal deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian tube. When this tube is inflamed it has a swelling around or in part of it, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result. Unless the inflammation can be removed, your hearing will be permanently lost. HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE acts through the blood at the mucous surface of the Eustachian tube, removing the inflammation and

The Carrizozo Entertainers will show the costly production,
"Don't Ever Marry," at the Crystal Theater on the evening of February 1. The reason for substituting a first-class moving picture at this time, is the absence of the manager from the city. This will afford the public an opportunity to see one of the leading shows and a thrilling comedy "Meeting All Trains," in one number. These pictures and a regular number of the Entertainers' program which will be given in the spring will conclude the series of enter-

WHY DID SMITHSON CHOOSE
THE UNITED STATES?
No one knows why James Smithson, an Englishman, bequeathed his fortune to the United States to found, at Washington, an "establishment for the increase and diffusion of knowledge among men."
Whatever his reason, it is certain that his gift formed the basis of the most important scientific organization in the country. The story of the Smithsonian Insti-

Mrs. Anna Kain.
Iola, Kans.—I can highly recommend Dr. Pierce's medicine. Some years ago my health failed, I became all run down and had a chronic cough that annoyed me considerably, but after taking Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery my health returned and I became stronger. What this medicine did for me I feel it will do for others if they will but give it a trial.—Mrs. Anna Kain, 413 South St.

Start now on the road to health by obtaining the Discovery in tablets or liquid from your druggist. Write Dr. Pierce, President Invalids' Hotel, in Buffalo, N. Y., for free medical advice.

MAN SAYS IT NEVER FAILS

"Tanlac is my secret, and I wouldn't think of being without it. It has set me on my feet more than once when I had such bad spells of stomach trouble. I thought I couldn't get well." This emphatic statement was made recently by W. C. Wallace, 320 N. Normandy Place, Los Angeles, Calif.

"An acid stomach and indigestion caused me indescribable suffering for more than four years," he said. "Awful pains would strike me soon after eating, and I would be almost doubled up in agony. Often I had to take to my bed, and I would lose much weight with every spell. I was told I had ulcers, enlarged stomach and other ailments, but all my efforts to get relief failed. I kept getting worse, and figured I would have to get something to help me or I couldn't keep going much longer."

"I read in the papers where Tanlac was helping others with stomach troubles, so I began taking it." It never failed to straighten me out, and I gained back my lost weight, too. "I am more grateful than I can say for the good this medicine has done me, and I do not hesitate to give it my fullest recommendation."

Tanlac is sold by all good druggists. Over 37 million bottles sold—Advertisement.

ADVENTURE'S FAILY Tale

BY MARY GRAHAM BONNER

BAD BUTCHER BIRD

"There are very few birds I don't like," said Daddy, "and I think you've both told me that there were very few that you two children didn't care for."

"We don't like the Goshawk family," said Nancy.

"Nor the butcher birds," said Nick.

"I think I've forgotten about the butcher birds," said Nancy, "or perhaps I don't remember them for the moment."

"Tell us a story about them," Daddy please," said Nick. "I'd like to know more about them. A boy was asking me about them only the other day and I told the little fellow. I'd like to be able to tell more."

"Do tell us about the butcher birds," urged Nancy. "Won't you please, Daddy?"

"Of course I will," said Daddy. "Well, the butcher bird," Daddy commenced, "is one of the very few birds, as I've said, that I do not like."

"In the first place they hunt and kill for the fun of hunting and killing and not only because they must eat."

"They kill more than they can eat, which is the most dreadful thing about them."

"You can always tell the butcher bird by its white and black and gray feathers."

"The butcher bird is a cousin of the dear vireo family but they are as different as different can be."

"The vireo family eat insects and do all the good they can, while the butcher bird does all the harm possible."

"The butcher bird hunts in the fashion of a bully and a scoundrel and a scamp!"

"You see I do not like the butcher bird."

"We see that," said Nick and Nancy. "We don't blame you, though, Daddy," added Nick.

"I have no use for creatures who hunt for the sake of hunting," Daddy continued, "and who kill for the sake of killing."

"Well, the butcher bird is more cruel in his ways than the hawk."

"The butcher bird will capture mice and small birds and hang them upon twigs in his cold lair and for this reason he has been given the name of butcher bird. For where he lives it looks like a butcher shop with many pieces of food hanging up. And his name is really not one that half describes him."

"For in a real butcher shop there is only the food that is to be eaten by those who come to buy, whereas the butcher bird gets so much more than can be used that it just hangs up until the wind blows it away."

"Yes, that is where he is so dreadful. He doesn't get what he needs to eat. He simply kills for the sake of killing!"

"The butcher bird cannot hold his prey between his feet, so that is another reason why he puts it on twigs or on thorns, and then he can cut it up with his hooked beak."

"The butcher bird makes a noise something like a catbird and he often tries to imitate the voice of a catbird."

"Their nests are of twigs and weeds and they build them so that they look quite rough and unattractive and place them where they find a thorny tree."

"They lay four or five grayish-whitish eggs with brown spots, and they go father far north in the summer time."

"They are about a great deal in the winter time, too, though some of the family are not."

"They can strike down upon their prey from the air in much the way a hawk can do."

"But I think that is enough about the butcher bird. His real name is Northern Shrike."

"But let us be thankful there are so few birds like him and that almost all of our birds are so gentle and sweet, so pretty and so musical, so friendly and so helpful and so free from greed and cruelty."

"I think the butcher bird stands out as a bad bird because a bad bird is so unusual."

People Blast of Dynamite Plan to Destroy What Chicago Took Centuries to Build.

The next time you pass one of the excavations that are being made in the solid rock here, there and everywhere in New York these days for foundations of new buildings, stop, look and wonder, says the New York Sun. Every foot of rock that is destroyed by these workers with pick and steam shovel, drill and dynamite, nature spent a hundred years to make.

For stratified rock forms at the rate of about one foot in a century. So it follows that if you see an excavation through stratified rock 30 feet deep, this means that within a few weeks' time 3,000 years of nature's labor has been destroyed through the brain and brawn of man.

This is one thing to wonder over when looking at such an excavation. But it is not all.

When this rock was being formed man had not appeared on the earth. Yet the earth in those dim ages of the past teemed with living creatures. Creatures that, through the passing of untold millions of years, developed from weak invertebrates into huge, weird monsters unlike anything known today. They ruled the earth, the air and the water. And part of their dominion was this region of New York where man's dominion is now supreme.

Some of these creatures, as they walked over this region, stepped into shallow water and left the imprint of their footprints in the mud, which, as it hardened into rock preserved the imprint, a perfect outline on the surface of the stone. Others, sinking to the bottom of deeper water that was then where is now dry land, were buried in the mud. As this mud turned to rock, their bones fossilized into the water from the land and the streams, settled to the bottom and, in its turn, was hardened into stone. And so, layer on layer, the rock was formed, miles in depth. As it formed it imprisoned and turned to fossils the bones of many a bizarre creature that no man ever saw, but whose likenesses and history may be found in these records of stone.

A blast of dynamite! The rock falls shattered. Men lift the pieces into containers. The great cranes, as by magic, lift the containers and dump the contents into the wagons waiting above. Who cares if the work of 30 centuries is destroyed? Soon this great hole will be the basement of a skyscraper. It will be filled all day and every day with men carrying on their busy bustling activities with no thought of the strange animals that made this very spot their home millions of years ago by.

Pulverized Coal.

With the commercial advent of pulverized coal many engineers who made preliminary tests with the substance drew conclusions that it would never become an important factor in power development. At that time the remarkable ability of the internal combustion engine became known and coal-power engines, as a whole, were given but a short period of life. Investigations have proved, however, that coal as a power factor will live for many years to come, at least in this country, as the United States contains more than half the available coal deposits of the world.

Pulverized coal has one decided advantage—it burns almost smokelessly. Injecting the pulverized material into the furnace is accomplished by much simpler means also than with lump coal. Boiler repairs are less frequent in factories using pulverized coal than in those employing lump coal.

Advertising.

Advertising has become such a monumental feature of newspapers today, that it is somewhat refreshing to see how unsophisticated appear the advertising attempts of a couple of centuries ago. The following is taken from a copy of the American Weekly Mercury, dated November 23, 1722:

"Whereas, Matthew Burns of Chester county served John Camm two years (that is, 10 or 12 months), at stocking weaving and other work, during which time John Camm's stockings bore many reflections, and now the said Matthew Burns goes about selling stockings in John Camm's name, as though they were his make, which is false and not true."

It is sincerely to be hoped that "said Matthew Burns" felt that he got his money's worth from the insertion of this notice.

Plantigrade.

Interesting is the origin of the word "plantigrade," frequently used in the science of zoology. Its classic origin is the Latin "planta," the sole of the foot, and "gradus," meaning a step.

The species homo, with the exception of the man with a broken instep, is not, however, properly speaking, a plantigrade, because he does not walk on the entire, or nearly the entire, sole of his foot.

This high instep saves men from being designated as plantigrade.—Chicago Journal.

Denver—Wind increasing in velocity from an abnormal rate of thirty-six miles an hour to between sixty-five and seventy miles an hour, set a record in Denver that seldom, if ever, has been equalled for ferocity in the annals of the weather bureau. Wreckage and havoc were left in the wake of the storm, which descended from the mountains in the west and swept the entire eastern slope of the Rocky mountains.

Suspected.
The general manager entered the president's office, mysteriously.

"That new assistant to the superintendent," he said, "reports every morning on time, works hard all day, never darts with the stenographer, attends strictly to business and is the last to leave at night."

The president turned white and trembled.

"It is as I expected!" he exclaimed. "A detective."—New York World.

Federal Building Fund Bought.

Washington.—Immediate authorization of from $25,000,000 to $30,000,000 for erection in Washington of buildings to house government agencies now in rented quarters was recommended in a report to Congress by the public buildings commission, of which Senator Smoot, Republican, Utah, is chairman. Economy through rental savings was the basis of the recommendations, which included also a proposal for erection in the historic pension building court, where many presidential inaugural balls have been held, of steel racks for filing government records.

Fire Threatens New York Tenants.

New York.—Six persons had narrow escapes from death and more than a hundred others scantly clad were driven into the snow-covered streets during a fire which damaged several tenement buildings on Greenwich street and threatened for a time to spread over an entire block. Starting in a two-story double building occupied by a paper box factory, the flames spread quickly to tenements on both sides.

Swine Breeding on Increase.

Denver.—That swine breeding and feeding in the West is on the increase is indicated by the largest entry list of swine ever made for the National Western Stock Show. There will be over 800 head of hogs in the show—the largest show ever held in Colorado. Of these nearly 300 head will be fat barrows. They are distributed among the breeds as follows: Duroc, 27; Poland, 44; Hampshire, 65; Berkshire, 3; grade and crossbred, 50.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL MENTION

Special sale on Comforts Monday only, $3.19 for $5.00 and $6.00 values. --Ziegler Bros.

Mrs. J. H. Fulmer and son of Parsons are spending the weekend in Carrizozo.

Miss Marguerite Sweet returned last Monday from Socorro, where she had been visiting with friends since Christmas. Miss Sweet intended to return about Jan. 1 but entertainments which had been arranged in her honor extended beyond that date and she remained until Jan. 12.

Joe West, who had been employed as car inspector at the local railroad station, left last Saturday for Tucuman where he will be employed in the same line of work as he was engaged in here.

E. F. Rudd of El Paso has purchased the interests of the Consumers' Coal Co. located about eight miles south of here. A car load of new machinery has arrived; new hoists have been put in and a general line of changes are being made. The mines yield a good grade of coal and extensive development will begin at once.

J. P. Pendergrass, S. G. and J. P. VanWinkle, stockmen, and R. E. McFarland, merchant of Spindle, were here today. M. Pendergrass says his cattle are doing nicely in spite of the dry season. They make regular daily trips to the mountains where they find plenty of feed, returning every night for salt and water.

Mrs. Ellen V. Crutcher, who has been stenographer in the Exchange Bank for the past five years will leave in a short time for Tularosa where she will reside for the future with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. V. Nilsson. Mrs. Crutcher's many friends will regret to hear of her departure and will wish her an abundance of prosperity with her new surroundings.
