Deputy Disarmed Sheriff Killed

Early last Tuesday, word was received at Corona by Deputy Sheriff A. S. McCamant that two men who were charged with stealing saddles, etc., and in jail at Amarillo, Tex., had escaped and had been traced toward Corona. The deputy located, arrested and started with the men for here, but between Coyote and Ancho, one man overpowered McCamant while the other engaged the deputy's assistant. McCamant was disarmed and his assistant badly beaten up after which, the men boarded the car leaving the officers to their best way out of the difficulty.

They went to the R. E. P. Warden ranch where they were hurried to the nearest telephone, to send word to the sheriff, but by that time, the men had passed this point. On arriving here, they visited the store of Kelley & Co., where they purchased ammunition, going from there to Crawford's Garage where they bought gasoline and took a hasty leave of the town.

Word was sent to Alamogordo where sheriff Rutherford of Otero county kept watch on all incoming cars until at last in front of Rolland's Drug store a car halted, one of the occupants asking the sheriff what road to take for El Paso. The sheriff told him the car must be inspected and went to the rear to ascertain the number. At this time the car was started up and the sheriff caught it jumping on the running board. As he made an attempt to stop the car, one of the men placed a revolver against his throat and fired, completely breaking his neck. The sheriff fell in the street and died instantly.

On receipt of the news here, Sheriff Harris and Deputy Straley took the blood hounds that have been in training here for the past week and hurried to Alamogordo to follow the trail of the men.

On arriving at Alamogordo, they were met by a large posse of men and together they followed the course of the men until they reached Orogrande, where they found the car which had been abandoned on account of the lack of oil. The posse followed on foot, tracking the men into the desert and finally located them, but not before one of the men hunters had been shot from ambush, but fortunately, the wound was only slight. In this encounter several shots were exchanged, but the outlaws seeing so many men in the posse, surrendered. They were taken back to the track where the engine and caboose still stood taken back to Alamogordo and placed in jail. Judge Mechem, it is said, will call a special session of the grand jury for Feb. 28 and no doubt the murderers will have the proper punishment meted out to them which they justly deserve.

Dr. H. E. Kemper returned last Saturday from a trip to the Mogollon mountains and the Gila river countries, on a range inspection tour. The doctor says that the late fall rains through those regions have made grass sufficient to carry stock over the winter, a few only from the southern portion being shipped to Mexico. He found the cattle trap about 800000.

School Notes

(Supt. E. E. Cole)

Washington and Lincoln, the two greatest Americans.

Have you seen the new "Old Glory" on the flag pole in front of the high school building? The most beautiful piece of dry goods on the face of the earth! Long may it wave!

Wednesday was St. Valentine's Day. Nearly all the rooms had valentine boxes; some of them very beautiful. The box in Miss Humphrey's room was simply a beauty. It was highly decorated with hearts and other suitable figures. The decorating was done by Clara Lujan, Orene Mässey, Warden Maxwell and Lorenzo Garcia. In Mrs. Vaughn's room, a basket was beautifully decorated. In the Carrizozo schools, hundreds of valentines were made this week. In all of them the pupils put forth their very best efforts at art, skill and originality. A great many of them were fine examples of constructive effort and all of them expressed affection, respect and love. St. Valentine's Day is one of those days called "Expression Days," in which the pupils express in art what they have already learned.

In the high school building, the three glass doors of the rooms of Mrs. Tuton, Mrs. Vaughn and Mrs. Kelley were quite beautifully decorated with curtains and valentine designs. The inside of the rooms corresponded in decorations. St. Valentine's Day is really a valuable day in the school year.

Thursday of next week, February 22, the schools will honor Washington and Lincoln. It is the almost universal custom, in the United States, to honor these two great Americans on the same day, since their birthdays are so close together. All the rooms will have exercises and everybody is most cordially invited to visit the rooms on February 22, at 1:10 in the afternoon. After the programs, the pupils will be dismissed for the remainder of the day.

The girls' team of the Carrizozo high school won its eighth consecutive victory of the season last Saturday by defeating the El Paso high school girls by a score of 32 10. The game was full of pep and the Tigresses, though holding the small end of the score, fought gamely to the last whistle. The team work of both schools was fine but the speed of the Carrizozo team, together with the accurate shooting of their forwards easily won the game for the locals. The Carrizozo team has defeated the best teams in this section of the state and are in line for the championship of eastern and southern New Mexico. A return game is to be played in El Paso on March 10. Line ups as follows: Carrizozo—J. Johnson, L. Jones, forwards; C. Elliott, J. Rustin, centers; A. Corn, G. Taylor, Capt., guards; E. Johnson, B. Burr, Substitutes. Scoring: J. Johnson, 10 fields and 4 free goals; L. Jones, 3 field goals; E. Johnson, 1 field goal. El Paso—M. Mulcahy, Capt., K. Young, forwards; K. Kite, Colclazier, centers; W. Clewanger, R. Broadus, guards; M. O'Rourke, substitute. M. Mulcahy, 1 field and 2 free goals; K. Young, 3 field goals. Reported by Bryan Carter, Manager.

See What Lieut. Barth Brings Home

This photograph, just received from Coblenz, shows Lieutenant Barth Machine Gun Company M., Eighth United States Infantry, United States Army of the Rhine, and the trophy which he won as the best shot in the American Army of Occupation in Germany—the army that has now come back to the United States as ordered by President Harding.

Ancho School Notes

(By Mrs. P. H. Kersey)

The school bought a set of Walter Camp's health records or "daily dozen," which are enjoyed by the children as well as a great benefit. The west end of the auditorium has been cleared and made into a gymnasium for the morning exercises. We use the Camp's records and make good use of the room on cold days, the teachers enter into the indoor games with the pupils.

A new supply of heavy construction paper, colored crayon, beads, sewing cards, Indian craft and many patterns for the art class were received this week.

The boys are enjoying the new basket ball and court. Walter Gage and Robert Hall are inspectors this week.

There has been an average of 10 absent this week account of cold.

Monday, each pupil gave an account of Abraham Lincoln in memory of his birthday.

The fifth grade wrote a composition on "Home," Monday.

Mrs. J. E. Wilson and Mrs. H. M. Belknap, both members of the school board, delighted the pupils and teachers Tuesday, with a long visit during recitation period.

The fourth grade is keeping a record of the kind things they do for two weeks. They hope to improve in kindness to others.

The valentine boxes were a most entertaining affair nearly all the valentines were made during art period. Carol Wilson of the upper grades and Martha Warden of the primary room received the most.

Current events on Tuesday, quotations on Thursday, inspection every morning, an outside composition once a week and a debate with the 5th and 6th grade once a week keep the boys and girls busy. However they found time to make some artistic drawings and cuttings from construction paper. Miss Nanelou Sweeney, who is now teaching in Herington, Kansas, sent the school many new patterns for valentines and construction work; we thank you Miss Sweeney.

Old Schoolmates Meet

Readers of this paper were attracted last week to a notice or rather a form of request, that if a lady whose maiden name was Mary Warden would communicate with this office, she would receive information of interest to her. On Saturday morning Mrs. Frank Maxwell answered the notice and was informed that Mrs. Warner, wife of Major Warner, commanding officer at Fort Stanton, was the lady who was desirous of locating her. Mrs. Maxwell sent in a telephone call to the Fort. Mrs. Warner at once drove over to Carrizozo and visited at the Maxwell home for the major portion of the afternoon.

The facts were, that the two ladies, then the Misses Mary Warden and Edmonia Francisco, were collegemates at the Powhatten College, Charles City, W. Va., sixteen years ago. Since leaving college, their paths drifted far apart and they had been living within a distance of 20 miles apart for about one year before Mrs. Warner through some source, obtained the information that her school girl friend lived in this locality. The inquiry followed and old friends were united.

Local Firm Holds Valuable Leases

T. R. Wellband left Tuesday on No. 4 for Farmington, N. M., to open offices for Wetmore & Stimmel, who have secured 20,000 acres of land under state leases in the San Juan basin checkerboarded throughout the oil district, where the most valuable holdings are bringing such wonderful results. One of their leases adjoins the Midwest Oil Company's holdings where a well 760 feet in depth is producing 350 barrels of 58 gravity oil per day which is an exceedingly fine quality.

Other leases lay closely to the holdings; the Producers Refining Co. and those of other interests either drilling or making hurried preparations to spud in. Wetmore & Stimmel already have flattering offers for either portion of their holdings, but deals will not be considered until offices are properly opened.

May They Never Go Back

The Yanks are home, and may they never have to go back, but he would be a rash individual indeed who declared that it's over, over there.

Europe is teetering on a powder keg, like the stack of plates the juggler spins on a cane. If the plates drop off, the act is ruined. If Europe slides off its powder keg pivot, or the keg lets go, civilization will get a far worse jolt than the one which almost wrecked it in 1914.

What will Europe be a year from today? Only the fates know.

But Americans know this: No American army is in Europe. America is not a member of the League of Nations—has no European alliances, economic, political or military. What Europe does is now Europe's affair. The Old World is permeated with militarism, secret diplomacy, trade and territorial jealousies. To say that one nation is wrong and another is right is splitting a hair.

No nation in Europe today has a single worth while ideal or a national ambition except to grab off all it can, happen what may to other nations or to civilization itself.

The United States is well out the whole mess, galling through its aloofness must be Europe's jingo politicians. If Europe deplored the absence of America's ideals there would only be hope, but European leaders grieve only because of the lack of the absence of America's gold. If lack of that will hasten a return to sanity over there withholding it is the greatest favor this country could do to the people of Europe. —Albuquerque Journal.

Lincoln News

(Mrs. Grace Burleson)

The Lincoln High School organized a literary society Wednesday, Feb. 7, appointing the following officers:

President, Amelia Vigil; Vice Pres., Julia Penfield; Sec'y, Tinnie Raymond; Critic, Mannie Channey; Program Committee, Frances Bryant and Stella Gomez; Judicial Committee, Viola Kimbrell and Pearl Percella. The first society meeting was held Friday, Feb. 9, and was carried off successfully, with hope for a brilliant future.

Neighboring basketball teams must polish up their armor because Lincoln High is well equipped for coming victories. The Lincoln volley-ball team, too, is ready for battle!

The "flu" having been prevalent all year—we have as yet attained no "Attendance Banner."

L. C. S. is giving a Washington Dance Friday, Feb. 23, for the benefit of the school to get playground equipment for the primary grades at the old building. There will be good music, light refreshments will be served.

D. I. Forsythe, wife and two sons left this morning on No. 3 for Hurley, N. M., where Mr. Forsythe has accepted a position with the Santa Rita Mining Company in the construction work of that mining enterprise. He is thoroughly experienced in mining work of all kinds, having been connected with most of the leading ventures in the Sierra mountains and other parts of Lincoln county, besides different places in Arizona.

Legislature Doings to Date

Santa Fe, Feb. 13th.—Today, the 35th day of the legislative session, finds 203 bills introduced in the house and 90 in the senate. No important measure has been approved by the governor excepting the Colorado and La Plata river treaties.

The emergency public monies bill which reduced the bond of the state treasurer to one million dollars and relieves him of the custody of state securities will probably be signed by the governor today. Even with this reduction of the bond Mr. Corbin, who was elected State Treasurer on the democratic ticket will not be able to qualify. Personal bonds to be given by officials and banks provided by this measure will be hard to secure and of doubtful security to the state.

The finance committee of the house is still holding hearings on department and institution budgets and the work of drafting the appropriation bill has not yet been started.

Six highway bills carrying levies have been passed by the house and are now pending in the senate and eight more of the same character are now pending in the house, all together these bills provide special levies aggregating over one half million dollars.

In the senate this afternoon Senator Wright, with the pay rolls of the employees of the house for the first thirty days before him, criticized the house severally for increasing its employee list from 21 for the first fifteen day period, to 28 during the second fifteen day period, and showed that in spite of the fact that the house leaders announced that it would save a great deal of money on employees during the session, they have spent up to this time, within $131 of the constitutional allowance, while the senate is $330 under the amount allowed that body.

The house bill abolishing the state game commission passed the house this afternoon by a party vote, the few republican member of the house standing with the game protective association which that organization has worked hard to secure during the past three years.

It is now admitted that practically all chances of passing the statewide primary law promised by the last two democratic platforms has vanished as the democrats in the house are hopelessly divided on this measure and will not be able to redeem their pledges. The senate is more favorable and would be willing to pass a county wide primary as a beginning at this session.

Yesterday afternoon Gov. Hinkle appointed A. T. Hannett of McKinley county and R. C. Sowder of Lincoln county as members of the State Highway Commission, Chas. Springer the third member having four years yet to serve.

Economy was rather shattered yesterday when a petition asking for an increase in salary by the capital employes and reciting their duties was reported favorably by the house.

Mr. and Mrs. Shirley Phipps returned last week from Kentucky where they journeyed about one month ago on account of the serious illness of Mrs. Phipps' mother, who died several days after their arrival. Mrs. Phipps has resumed her teaching at school.

DESERT GOLD

The Indian led off into one of the gray patches between the tumbled streams of lava. At the apex of the notch, where two streams met, a narrow gully wound and ascended. Yaqui led Diablo into it, and then began the most laborious and vexatious and painful of all slow travel.

The disintegrating surface of a lava bed was at once the roughest, the hardest, the meanest, the cruelest, the most deceitful kind of ground to travel. The fugitives made slow progress. They picked a cautious, winding way to and fro in little steps here and there along the many twists of the trail, up and down the unavoidable depressions, round and round the loles. At noon, so winding back upon itself had been their course, they appeared to have come only a short distance up the lava slope.

It was rough work for them; it was terrible work for the horses. Blanco Diablo refused to answer to the power of the Yaqui. He balked, he plunged, he bit and kicked. He had to be pulled and beaten over many places. Mercedes' horse almost threw her, and she was put upon Blanco Sol. The white charger snorted a protest, then, obedient to Gale's stern call, patiently lowered his noble head and pawed the lava for a footing that would hold.

The lava caused Gale to toil and worry and pain, but he hated the choyas. He came almost to believe what he had heard claimed by desert travelers—that the choya was alive and leaped at man or beast. Certain it was when Gale passed one, if he did not put all attention to avoiding it, he was hooked through his chaps and held by barbed thorns. The pain was almost unendurable. It was like no other. It burned, stung, beat—almost seemed to freeze. It made useless arm or leg. It made him bite his tongue to keep from crying out. It made the sweat roll off him. It made him sick.

Moreover, bad as the choya was for man, it was infinitely worse for beast. A jagged stub from this poisoned cactus was the only thing Blanco Sol could not stand. Many times that day, before he carried Mercedes, he had wildly snorted, and then stood trembling while Gale picked broken thorns from the muscular legs. But after Mercedes had been put upon Sol Gale made sure no choya touched him.

The afternoon passed like the morning, in ceaseless winding and twisting and climbing along this abandoned trail. Gale saw many waterholes, mostly dry, some containing water, all of their catch-basins, full only after rainy season. Little ugly bunched bushes, that Gale scarcely recognized as mesquite, grew near these holes; also stunted greasewood and prickly pear. There was no grass, and the choya alone flourished in that hard soil.

Darkness overtook the party as they unjacked beside a pool of water deep under an overhanging shelf of lava. It had been a hard day. The horses drank their fill, and then stood patiently with drooping heads. Hunger and thirst were appeased, and a warm fire cheered the weary and footsore fugitives. Yaqui said, "Sleep." And so another night passed.

Upon the following morning, ten miles or more up the slow-ascending lava slope, Gale was in the rear of all the other horses, so as to take, for Mercedes' sake, the advantage of the broken trail. Yaqui was leading Diablo, winding around a break. His head was bent as he stepped slowly and unevenly upon the lava. Gale turned to look back, the first time in several days. He thought, of course, of Rojas in certain pursuit; but it seemed absurd to look for him.

Yaqui led on, and Gale often glanced up from his task to watch the Indian. Presently he saw him stop, turn, and look back. Ladd did likewise, and then Jim and Thorne. Gale found the dealer Presidible. Thereafter he often reared Blanco Sol, and looked back the while. He had his field-glass, but did not choose to use it.

"Rojas will follow," said Mercedes. Gale regarded her in amazement. The tone of her voice had been indefinable. If there were fear then he failed to detect it. She was gazing back down the colored slope, and something about her, perhaps the steady, fateful gaze of her magnificent eyes, reminded him of Yaqui.

Many times during the ensuing hour the Indian faced about, and always his followers did likewise. It was high noon, with the sun heating hot and the lava rattling hot, when Yaqui halted for a rest. The horses bunched and drooped their heads. The rangers were about to slip the packs and remove saddles when Yaqui restrained them.

He fixed a changeless, gleaming gaze on the slow descent; but did not seem to look afar.

Suddenly he uttered his strange cry—the one Gale considered involuntary; no also significant of some tribal trait or feeling. Yaqui pointed down the lava slope, pointing with finger and arm and neck and head—his whole being seemed to have been animated and then frozen.

"There he sees something!" said Ladd. "But my eyes are no good."

"I reckon I ain't wery of none," replied Jim. "I'm hindered by a sin matter's streak down there."

Thorne seemed utterly down on his knees beside Mercedes, who sat motionless, staring the slope. Gale looked and looked till he hurt his eyes. Then he took his glass out of its case on Sol's saddle.

There appeared to be nothing upon the lava but the innumerable dots of choyas, shining in the sun. Gale swept his glass slowly forward and back. Then into a nearer field of vision crept a long white-and-black line of horses and men. Without a word he handed the glass to Ladd. The ranger used it, muttering to himself.

"They're on the lava fifteen miles down in an air line," he said, presently. "Jim, shore they're twice that an' more accordin' to the trail."

Jim had his look and replied: "I reckon we're a day an' a night in the lead."

"Is it Rojas?" burred out Thorne with set jaw.

"Yes, Thorne. It's Rojas and a dozen or more," replied Gale, and he looked up at Mercedes.

She was transformed. She might have been a medieval princess, embodying all the Spanish power and passion of that time, breathing revenge, hate, unquenchable spirit of fire. If her beauty had been wonderful in her helpless and appealing moments, now, when she looked back white-faced and flame-eyed, it was transcendent.

Gale drew a long, deep breath. The mood which had presaged pursuit, strife, blood on this smoldering desert, returned to him tenfold. He saw Thorne's face corded by black veins, and his teeth exposed like those of a snarling wolf. These rangers, who had coolly risked death many times, and had dealt it often, were white as no fear or pain could have made them.

Then, on the moment, Yaqui raised his hand, not clenched or doubled tight, but curled rigid like an eagle's claw; and he shook it in a strange, slow gesture which was menacing and terrible.

It was the woman that called to the depths of these men. And their passion to kill and to have was surpassed only by the wild hate which was yet love, the unfathomable emotion of a poor slave. Gale marveled at it, while he felt his whole being cold and tense, as he turned once more to follow in the tracks of his leaders. The fight predicted by Belding was at hand. What a fight that must be! Rojas was travelling light and fast. He was gaining. He had bought his men with gold, with extravagant promises, perhaps with offers of the body and blood of an aristocrat hateful to their kind. Lastly, there was the wild, desolate environment, a tortured wilderness of jagged lava and poisoned choyas, a lonely, fierce and repellent world, a red stage most somberly and fittingly colored for a supreme struggle between men.

Yaqui looked back no more. Mercedes looked back no more. But the other looked, and the time came when Gale saw the creeping line of pursuers with naked eyes.

A level line above marked the rim of the plateau. Sand began to show in the little lava pits. On and upward toiled the cavalcade, still very slowly advancing. At last Yaqui reached the rim. He stood with his hand on Blanco Diablo; and both were silhouetted against the sky. That was the outlook for a Yaqui. And his great horse, damasked white in the sunlight, with head wildly and proudly erect, mane and tail flying in the wind, made a magnificent picture. The others toiled on and upward, and at last Gale led Blanco Sol over the rim. Then all looked down the red slope.

But shadows were gathering there and no more; no more could be seen.

Yaqui mounted and wheeled Diablo away. The others followed. The Yaqui led them into a cove of water. The top of the earth seemed to have been blown out in holes from a few rods in width to large canyons, some shallow, others deep, and all red as fire. Yaqui circled close to abysses which yawned sheer from a lava surface, and he appeared always to be turning upon his course to avoid them.

The plateau had now a considerable dip to the west. Gale marked the slow heave and ripple of the ocean of lava to the south, where high, rounded peaks marked the center of this volcanic region. The uneven nature of the slope westward prevented any extended view, until suddenly the fugitives emerged from a rugged break to come upon a sublime and awe-inspiring spectacle.

They were upon a high point of the western slope of the plateau. It was strange to Gale, and perhaps to the others, to see their guide lead Diablo into a smooth and well-worn trail along the rim of the awful crater. Gale looked down into that red chasm. It resembled an inferno. The dark cliffs upon the opposite side were veiled in blue haze that seemed like smoke. Here Yaqui was at home. He moved and looked about him as a man coming at last into his own. Gale saw him stop and gaze out over that red-rimmed void to the Gulf.

Gale declined that somewhere along this crater of hell the Yaqui would make his final stand; and one look into his strange, inscrutable eyes made imagination picture a fitting doom for the pursuing Rojas.

CHAPTER XII

The Crater of Hell.

Presently Gale, upon turning a sharp corner, was utterly amazed to see that the split in the lava sloped out and widened into an arroyo. It was so green and soft and beautiful in all the angry, contorted red surrounding that Gale could scarcely credit his sight. Blanco Sol whistled his welcome to the scent of water. Then Gale saw a great hole, a pit in the abing lava, a dark, cool, shady well. There was evidence of the fact that at flood seasons water had an outlet into the arroyo. The soil appeared to be a fine sand, in which a reddish tinge predominated; and it was abundantly covered with a long grass, still partly green. Mesquites and palo verde dotted the arroyo and gradually closed in thickets that obstructed the view.

"Shore it all beats me," exclaimed Ladd. "What a place to hole-up in! We could have hid here for a long time. Belding was shore right about the Indian. An' I can see Rojas' shab somewhere up along that awful well-hole."

Camp was made on a level spot. Yaqui took the horses to water, and then turned them loose in the arroyo. It was a tired and somber group that sat down to eat. Mercedes was calm, but her great dark eyes burned in her white face. Yaqui watched her. The others looked at her with unspoken pride. Presently Thorne wrapped her in his blankets, and she seemed to fall asleep at once.

Little of Yaqui's purpose or plan could be elicited from him. The rangers and Thorne, however, talked in low tones. It was absolutely impossible for Rojas and his men to reach the waterhole before noon of the next day. And long before that time the fugitives would have decided on a plan of defense.

"What stuns me is that Rojas stuck to our trail," said Thorne, his lined and haggard face expressive of dark passion. "He has followed us into this fearful desert. He'll lose men, horses, perhaps his life. He's only a bandit, and he stands to win no gold. All for a poor little helpless woman—just a woman! I can't understand it."

"Shore—just a woman!" replied Ladd, solemnly nodding his head.

Then there was a long silence, during which the men gazed into the fire. Those were cold, hard, grim faces upon which the light flickered.

"Sleep," said Yaqui.

Thorne rolled in his blanket close beside Mercedes. Then one by one the rangers stretched out feet to the fire. Gale found that he could not sleep. His eyes were weary, but they would not stay shut; his body ached for rest, yet he could not lie still. The Yaqui sat like an image carved out of lava. The others lay prone and quiet. Would another light see any of them lie that way, quiet forever? Gale sat up after a while and again watched the fire. Nell's sweet face floated like a wraith in the pale smoke—glowed, and flushed and smiled in the embers. Other faces shone there—his sister's—that of his mother. Gale shook off the tender memories. This desolate wilderness with its forbidding silence and its dark promise of hell on the morrow—this was not the place to nurse's sweet with thoughts of love and home.

Toward dawn Gale managed to get some sleep. Then the morning broke with the sun hidden back of the split of the plateau. The horses trooped up the arroyo and snorted for water. After a hurried breakfast the packers were hidden in holes in the lava. The saddles were left where they were, and the horses allowed to graze and ponder at will. Mercedes there filled a small bag with soap, and Gale and blankets made into a bundle. Then Yaqui faced the steep ascent of the lava slope.

The trail he followed led up on the right side of the fissure, opposite to the one he had come down. It was a steep climb, and encumbered as the men were they made but slow progress. At length the rims whitened out and the red, smoky crater yawned beneath. Yaqui left the trail and began clambering down over the rough and twisted convolutions of lava which formed the rim. It was with extreme difficulty that the party followed him. The choyas were there to hinder passage. Finally the Indian halted upon a narrow bench of flat, smooth lava, and his followers worked with exceeding care and effort down to his position.

At the back of this bench, between bunches of choyas, was a niche, a shallow cave with floor lined apparently with mold. Yaqui spread blankets inside, left the canteen and the sack of food, and with a gesture at once humble, yet that of a chief, he invited Mercedes to enter. A few more gestures and fewer words disclosed his plan. In this inaccessible nook Mercedes was to be hidden. The men were to go around upon the opposite rim, and block the trail leading down to the waterhole.

Ladd chose the smallest gun in the party and gave it to Mercedes.

"Shore it's best to go the limit on belt—ready," he said, simply. "The chances are you'll never need it. But if you do—"

He left off there, and his break was significant. Mercedes answered him with a fearless and indomitable flash of eyes. Thorne was the only one who showed any shaken nerve. His leaving-taking of his wife was affecting and hurried. Then he and the rangers carefully stepped in the tracks of the Yaqui. He strode on up the trail toward a higher point, where presently his dark figure stood motionless against the sky. The rangers and Thorne selected a deep depression, out of which led several runs deep enough for cover. Here the men laid down rifles and guns, and, removing their heavy cartridge belts, settled down to wait.

Jim Lash crawled into a little strip of shade and hid the time tranquilly. Ladd was restless, and impatient and watchful, every little while rising to look up the far-reaching slope, and then to the right, where Yaqui's dark figure stood out from a high point of the rim. Thorne grew silent, and seemed consumed by a slow, sullen rage. Gale was neither calm nor free of a gnawing suspense nor of a waiting wrath. But as best he could he put the pending action out of mind.

It came over him all of a sudden that he had not grasped the stupendous nature of this desert setting. There was the measureless red slope, its lower ridges finally sinking into white sand dunes toward the blue sea. The cold, sparkling light, the white sun, the deep azure of sky, the feeling of boundless expanse all around him—these meant high altitude. Southward the barren red simply merged into distance. The field of craters rose in high, dark wheels toward the dominating peaks. When Gale withdrew his gaze from the magnitude of these spaces and heights, the crater beneath him seemed amplified. Yet while he gazed it spread and deepened and multiplied his ragged lines. No, he could not grasp the meaning of size or distance here. There was too much to stun the sight. But in the mood in which nature had created this convulsed world seized hold upon him.

The hours passed. As the sun climbed the clear sky, steely lights vanished, the blue hazes deepened, and slowly the glistening surfaces of lava turned redder. Ladd was concerned to discover that Yaqui was missing from his outlook upon the high point. Jim Lash came out of the shady crevice, and stood up to buckle on his cartridge belt. His narrow, gray planes slowly roved from the height of lava down along the slope, paused in doubt, and then swept on to reascend the whole vast eastern dip of the plateau.

"I reckon my eyes are pore," he said. "Mebbe it's this d—n red glare. Anyway, what's them creepin' spots up there?"

"Shore I seen them. Mountain sheep," replied Ladd.

"Guess again, Ladd. Dick, I reckon you'd better flash the glass up the slope."

Gale adjusted the field glass and began to search the lava, beginning close at hand and working away from him. Presently the glass became stationary.

"I see half a dozen small animals, brown in color. They look like sheep. But I couldn't distinguish mountain sheep from antelope."

"Shore they're highborn," said Ladd. "I reckon if you'll pull around to the east an' search under that long wall of lava—there—you'll see what I see," added Jim.

The glass climbed and circled, wavered an instant, then fixed steady as a rock. There was a breathless silence.

"Fourteen horses—two packed—some mounted—others without riders, and lanes," said Gale, slowly.

Yaqui appeared far up the trail, reading swiftly. Presently he saw the rangers and halted to wave his arms and point. Then he vanished as if the lava had opened beneath him.

"Shore they're highborn," said Ladd. "I reckon if you'll pull around to the east an' search under that long wall of lava—there—you'll see what I see," added Jim.

From time to time the rangers looked inquiringly at Gale. The field glass, however, like the naked sight, could not catch the slightest moving object out there upon the lava. A long hour of slow, mounting suspense wore on.

"Shore it's all gold to be as queer as the Yaqui," said Ladd.

Indeed, the strange mien, the silent action, the somber character of the Indian had not been without effect upon the minds of the men. Then the weird, desolate, tragic scene added to the vague sense of mystery. And now the disappearance of Rojas' band, the long wait in the silence, the boding certainty of invisible foes crawling, circling closer and closer; lent to the situation a final touch that made it unreal.

"I'm reckonin' there's a mind behind them Greasers," replied Jim. "Or mebbe we ain't done Rojas' credit. If somethin' would only come on!"

That last, the coolest, the most provokingly nonchalant of men in times of peril, should begin to show a nervous strain was all the more indicative of a subtle pervading unreality.

"Boys, look sharp!" suddenly called Lash. "Low down to the left—mebbe three hundred yards. See—along by them seams of lava—behind the choyas. First off I thought it was a sheep. But it's the Yaqui! Crawl in swift as a lizard! Can't you see him?"

It was a full moment before Jim's companions could locate the Indian. Flat as a snake, Yaqui wound himself along with incredible rapidity.

"He's Ralain' His Rifle Slow. Lord, How Slow He Is!"

His advance was all the more remarkable for the fact that he appeared to pass directly under the dreaded choyas. Sometimes he paused to lift his head and look.

"Shore he's headin' for that high place," said Ladd. "He's going slow now. There, he's stopped behind some choyas. He's gettin' up—no, he's kneelin' . . . Now what the d—n!"

"Ladd, take a peek at the side of that lava ridge," sharply called Jim. "I guess mebbe somethin' ain't comin' off. See! There's Rojas an' his outfit climbin'. Don't make out no horses . . . Dick, use your glass an' tell us what's doin'. I'll watch Yaqui an' tell you what his move means."

Clearly and distinctly, almost as if he could have touched them, Gale had Rojas and his followers in sight. They were toiling up the rough lava on foot.

"They're almost up now," Gale was saying. "There! They halt on top. I see Rojas. He looks wild. By—! fellows, an Indian! It's a Papago, Belding's old herder! The Indian points—this way—then down. He's showing Rojas the lay of the trail."

"Boys, Yaqui's in range of that bunch," said Jim, swiftly. "He's ralin' his rifle slow—Lord, how slow he is! . . . He's covered someone. Which one I can't say. But I think he'll pick Rojas."

"The Yaqui can shoot. He'll pick Rojas," added Gale, grimly.

"Rojas—yes—yes!" cried Thorne, in passion of suspense.

"Not on your life!" Ladd's voice cut in with scorn. "Gentlemen, you can gamble Yaqui'll kill the Papago. That traitor Indian knows these sheep haunts. He's tellin' Rojas—"

"Ladd's right," called Gale. The Papago's hit—his arm falls. There, he tumbles."

The Boycott

W. N. U. DENVER, NO. 4-1924

The word boycott means to combine to refuse to work for, deal, or associate with or assist a person; a species of excommunication; to place merchandise under a ban to prevent its sale. It was a method of intimidation adopted by the Irish Land League in 1880, and Captain Boycott was one of its first victims.

MR. SUN

"I shine to make the flowers grow," said good old Mr. Sun.

"And though I keep on working, my work is never done." "So all you grown-ups and children and flowers need never have a fear that Mr. Sun will not be here most days of every year."

"Of course," Mr. Sun continued, "that little verse is my summer verse and a spring verse and an autumn verse."

"I'm anxious to hear the other verses," said Peter Gnome. "Not because I am polite," he added.

"You're not rude, though," said Mr. Sun. "No," said Peter Gnome, "perhaps not rude, but I mean that I am not asking you to recite your verses for me because I wish to be polite."

"Such is not my reason at all. I really and truly am very anxious to hear your verses."

"All right," said Mr. Sun, "and I'd be delighted to recite them to you." "Which one will you recite to me first?" asked Peter Gnome.

"Well," said Mr. Sun, "I'm not particular." "I think," said Peter Gnome, "it might be nice to end off with the one about the winter as the winter is the time of the year which we're now having, and so it would be suitable, I think, to end off with that one."

"As you say, as you say," grinned Mr. Sun. "Let us hear the autumn one next," said Peter Gnome.

"Mr. Sun began: 'I shine in the autumn 'most every day. When I don't shine I'm hiding away. For I like a game of hide-and-seek. And now and again I hide for a week. I love the bright colors of all the trees. I love the fresh and pleasant breeze. But now and again I take a good rest. For that makes me feel my very best.'"

Mr. Sun smiled upon Peter Gnome. "That is all there is to the one on the autumn, though it is a little longer than the summer one, you see."

Denver.—Colorado farmers now have 5,039,000 head of livestock on the farms and ranges, compared to 4,560,000 on Jan. 1, 1922, according to the report released by the federal-state crop reporting service. The value of this stock is placed at $33,574,000, compared with a total of $33,640,000 last year. While this is an increase in aggregate value of 57 per cent the numbers increased over 10.3 per cent. At present the sheep of the state number 2,444,000, which is an increase of 300,000 (11.2 per cent) from a year ago; the value per head advanced $3 (43 per cent) during the period. The number on hand is 350,000 (12.4 per cent) more than in 1920, but the present value ($7.00) per head represents a decline in terms of dollars and cents during the three-year period of $1.50, or 16.5 per cent. Colorado farmers have approximately 623,000 head of swine, an increase of 63,000 (15 per cent) during the past year. In the same period there was a raise in value of 30 cents per head, or 3.4 per cent. The number this year is 73,000 (10 per cent) more than the 450,000 reported by the federal census for Jan. 1, 1920, the value per head, however, is $7.50 (41.7 per cent) less than three years ago.

Rhineland Republic Is Planned. Berlin.—Berlin received reports from Coblenz that the proclamation of a Rhineland republic had been planned, the contemplated coup to be sprung with the aid of the French and Belgian military. Nothing confirmatory of this has developed from other sources. Industrial isolation of the Ruhr from unoccupied Germany, began Thursday by the cutting off of coal and other shipments, may be carried still further if Germany fails to come to terms.

Many Irish Homes Destroyed. Dublin.—The campaign of incendiarism continued unabated and is directed largely against the homes of members of the legislature. Cases of complete or partial destruction included the residences of two senators, Colonel Moore of Ballyglass, brother of George Moore, the novelist, and Thomas Linnahan of Whitechurch, County Cork. Both houses were completely destroyed. Moore's hall, the Moore residence, was a fine historic mansion.

A Dark Day for Dawson

(Santa Fe New Mexican)

An impression of the futility of science and invention is incapable in contemplation of another terrible mine disaster at Dawson, with a toll of 120 lives. Not a decade ago Dawson shocked the nation with a similar catastrophe when 263 lives were snuffed out in one of the worst colliery accidents in history. And Dawson has undoubtedly one of the most modern, best constructed, and scientifically protected mines in the country.

The hearts of people of New Mexico go out to the stricken widows and children who bear the burden of this latest calamity in the coal industry. There is no spectacle of more terrible pathos than a woman standing with hand on breast at the open door of a miner's cottage gazing white faced at an eruption from the mouth of the mine in whose depths husband and father has been at work. And imagination can hardly conjure up the picture of a grimmer death.

There is every reason to believe that the Phelps-Dodge company has exercised every reasonable precaution to safeguard its employees. The mounting number of these disasters almost persuades one that precautions are futile. The situation is one that demands some action by the government looking to the devising of ways and means of furnishing real protection to underground workers, perhaps the summoning of coal operators from all over the country in a national conference to attack the problem more vigorously than ever before.

Wheels Slip Instead of Pulling

The Roswell Evening News, a publication flaunting the headlines, "A Straight Democratic Newspaper for Southeastern New Mexico," is evidently displeased with the doings of the present legislature according to a lengthy article appearing in its issue of Feb. 12, a portion of which we are quoting for the benefit of its democratic readers who noticed the support it gave the present administration in the recent campaign. We quote in substance, as follows:

"There is no denying the fact that the democrats of the house have been shooting a little wild for the thirty days past and that they must be brought under better control if anything is accomplished for the benefit of the party and up to now there have been twenty-seven and a half different ideas on almost every important measure before the thirty-three democratic members of the house and so far, no man has found a way to get them all pulling together. The wheels seem to slip instead of taking traction and slipping wheels do very little pulling.

It is rumored that a political revolution is coming all the way from Washington to New Mexico in the shape of a sharp inquiry from the Associated Press as to just why certain New Mexico publications have seen fit to change, interline, falsify, misrepresent and mangle news reports handed out of Washington on the public inquiry in connection with the Bureau bill. From a newspaper standpoint, this is a very serious inquiry and may be connected up with such officials as to make it, interesting for any newspaper to be found guilty. It is reported that an investigation of other newspaper activities is on the way."

The Fatal Marriage

As far back as the nineteenth century husbands and wives had many of the problems they face today. The missing husband who returns years after his disappearance to find his young wife grown old and married to another is not entirely a modern character. Lord Tennyson made him a figure in his immortal poem
"Enoch Arden." D. W. Griffith
manner with Wallace Reid and Lillian Gish in the star roles and now R.C. Pictures announces it as a brilliant revival under the title of "The Fatal Marriage."
It will be screened at the Crystal
Theatre on Saturday, Feb. 4.

The "Americanization Bulletin" Welcome

Washington, Feb. 15 (Capital News Service).—Published by the pupils of the Washington Americanization schools, the Americanization Bulletin, first journal of its kind in the world, has been successfully launched.
The purpose of the paper is to supplant that written in the native tongues of immigrants, which, circulating among them,
retard their progress in the mastery of English. It is hoped it will bring closer union between Americans and newly arrived immigrants, and aid in the naturalization of the latter.

The first issue has been financed by the Richard Arnold chapter of the D. A. R. It is hoped, however, that succeeding issues will support themselves through advertisements and subscriptions solicited by the students. O. T.
Moore, chief naturalization examiner of the District of Columbia, will conduct a column in the succeeding issues in which he will answer all questions on Americanization.

"WE, THE PEOPLE OF THE UNITED STATES,—"
As decade after decade passes, we who live and prosper under the Constitution marvel more and more at the matchless wisdom, the almost prophetic vision of those early leaders of the nation who could devise a plan of government so perfect that it has endured basically unchanged for over a hundred and thirty years.
The story of the making of the Constitution and what it means to us is told in an absorbingly interesting manner in the latest of the Our Government stories now being issued by this Institution.

THE WORLD IN PARAGRAPHS

A BRIEF RECORD OF PASSING EVENTS IN THIS AND FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

IN LATE DISPATCHES

DOINGS AND HAPPENINGS THAT MARK THE PROGRESS OF THE AGE.

WESTERN

Two measures repealing the prohibition laws in Nevada were passed by the State Assembly by a vote of 27 to 9. The measures previously had been passed by the Senate.

Governor Scruggs vetoed the bill repealing the initiative act of 1918 by which Nevada became a non-dry state. The repeal bill passed both branches of the Legislature by large majorities, but it is not believed sufficient votes can be mustered to override executive disapproval.

Chicago, Burlington & Quincy railroad office headquarters reports at Omaha characterized as a "miracle" that no one was killed or injured when three rear cars of train No. 42, Billings, Mont., to St. Louis, were derailed at Muller, Neb. A broken rail was responsible. The cause of the break in the rail is unknown, and investigation is being made.

Two bodies identified as those of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Wood, newly married Idaho Falls, Idaho, residents, aged 21 and 18, respectively, were found in a Pacific Fruit Express refrigerator car at Montpelier. Officers believe the young couple were stealing a honeymoon ride aboard the express car when they were overcome by fumes from a charcoal burner.

Josephine Fisher was arrested at the Union depot at Salt Lake City within a few minutes after she stepped from the train from San Francisco. With the woman was a year-old boy, whom she is alleged to have kidnapped. She claims the child is her own. The arrest was made upon telegraphic instructions and description from Chief of Police J. D. O'Brien of San Francisco.

Excitement was created among nearly 800 prisoners in the Jute mill of the state penitentiary at San Quentin, Calif., when six convicts set fire to a score of the looms which wove jute into bags. All available gangs were marshaled by Supt. Ernest Zuber and, assisted by prisoners, quenched the flames with chemicals from fire extinguishers. Some damage was done to the mill and machinery and much jute was destroyed.

WASHINGTON

Unqualified acceptance of Henry Ford's Muscle Shoals offer was proposed in the House by Chairman Madden of the appropriations committee. Representative Madden declared he viewed the matter purely from a business standpoint and that his desire was to put the great Alabama project in the hands of a man of demonstrated capacity, irrespective of his politics. Administration leaders in all branches of the government have expressed confidence that speedy and favorable action would be taken by Congress on the British debt funding settlement bill which is submitted by the President. While it was generally admitted that opposition to the plan would develop considerable strength, administration spokesmen argued that a free discussion of the plan would win support for it both in Congress and throughout the country.

About 50,000,000 bushels, or more than 11 per cent of last year's record crop of white potatoes, were wasted or consumed on farms or left rotting, the Department of Agriculture announced. Heavy production last year resulted in prices which made it unprofitable for many farmers to dig their crop.

Undismayed by the rebukes administered by the Senate the day before in twice ordering expunged from the record his remarks reflecting on other senators, Senator Heflin, Democrat, reviewed the whole incident again in the Senate, declaring he had been treated unfairly by the "substituted press" and threatening steps to prevent "certain press representatives" from sitting in the press gallery.

Statehood for that part of Alaska lying south of the Arctic circle and east of the 132nd meridian of longitude is advocated by Col. William J. Greley, chief forester of the United States, in a report to the secretary of agriculture in which he says that from the standpoint of the national forest administration and development, no happier step could be taken than admission of that part of the territory to the full rights of an American commonwealth.

Charles Earnest Fellow, only surviving son of Henry Edward Fellow, who died at Washington recently, announced that he would renounce his American citizenship and return soon to England to sit in the House of Lords as the eldest of the family. A title inherited last August by his father, Henry Edward Fellow was 34 years old when he inherited the British title through the death of a great nephew, and declined to return to England because of his advanced age, reserving his rights as an American citizen.

Deputy Sheriff Bob Tummias has returned to Tombstone from Sanderson, Texas, having in custody Louis Jones, one of the Uren-Chaves-Jones-Hudson quartet that escaped from the county jail during the latter part of December. Jones and Chaves made their escape on Dec. 15 and Uren and Hudson on the 25th.

The Santa Fe has authorized the expenditure of $80,000 in improvements at Glendale to facilitate the movement of the Salt River valley cantaloupe crop. The program includes extension of four tracks at Glendale and construction of an icing dock 1,000 feet long, from which twenty-five freight cars can be loaded at one time.

According to a statement of Frager Miller, president of the New Mexico Wool Growers' Association, the prospects for the growers during the coming season are bright. In most places the stock is in good condition in spite of the long dry season, and recent rain and snow will do much to bring the ranges back to normal during the early spring.

A coroner's jury returned a verdict at Phoenix that George W. Stevenson died of tuberculosis. Stevenson's family and friends for eight days after he had lost consciousness held to the belief that he was in a state of suspended animation and refused to surrender the body for burial until an autopsy was performed under orders issued by Coroner Fred C. Boten.

The birth rate in Arizona during the year 1922 exceeded the mortality rate by 1,722 according to a statistical report issued by the State Board of Health and made public at Phoenix. The report shows that 4,923 children were born during the year, and that the deaths numbered 4,000. The report was compiled by Mrs. Ruth W. Fritzel, former statistician for the board.

Jewels valued at $40,000 to $50,000, shipped in a trunk from Chicago to Chandler, Ariz., recently by Mrs. A. Maitland of Chicago, were missing from the trunk when it reached its destination, according to a report to the sheriff's office at Phoenix. According to the report, the trunk was checked as baggage from Chicago to Phoenix and was hauled from Phoenix to Chandler by truck.

W. L. Bratton, a rancher, paid $25 for whatever pleasure he may have derived from lassoing Robert Stout. Bratton, according to testimony at Phoenix, was driving a herd of cattle several days ago. The herd was giving him some trouble and, somehow, Bratton tossed his lariat around Stout's neck. Stout said he was roped because he refused to help Bratton with the herd.

Harlan D. Clark, war veteran of Tucson, who recently became heir to several thousand acres of choice ranch land in Texas and a bequest of $10,000, was perhaps fatally injured at Deming, N. M. Clark, it is believed, had attempted to beat his way to Harlingen, Mo., to claim his inheritance. He was found near the railroad track at Deming, suffering from a fractured skull.

Dr. Carlos Montezuma, a graduate of Northwestern University, and for many years a practicing physician at Chicago, was buried at Fort McDowell, an old Indian post near Phoenix, where many of the historical works of his kinsmen were waged. Dr. Montezuma was a full-blooded Apache, and the ancient tribal custom of the race was invoked in impressive services that continued throughout Saturday night.

NATIONAL GREETINGS ST. MICHEL ARMY

FOREIGN-BORN WIVES OF RETURNING DOUGHBOYS ARE CENTER OF INTEREST.

U. S. SOLDIERS HOME

LAST OF TROOPS FROM GER-MANY RECEIVE WELCOME AT SAVANNAH, GA.

Savannah, Ga.—America's "last thousand" to come home from Europe, signaling the nation's closing action in its participation in the World War.

From the deck of the United States army transport St. Michel, the soldiers who kept watch on the Rhine gulfed their first glimpse of their homeland after an absence of five years. With them were French, Belgian and German wives and children, who saw for the first time the land they are to call home.

Savannah turned out a man to welcome home in behalf of America's returning troops and to greet the women and children from the country's former allies and enemy nations. The reception began shortly after 11 o'clock in the morning when the cutter Yamagraw and the tug McCauley, met the transport beyond Tybee Bar. At quarantine, a party of representatives, Gov. Thomas W. Hardwick of Georgia; Mayor Paul E. Seabrook and other state and local officials and army officers boarded the St. Michel from the cutter Yamagraw.

As the transport neared Savannah, she was greeted by a salvo from two historic cannons, presented to the Chatham artillery by George Washington, and from a battery of French 75s, trophies of the World War. The soldiers answered each blast with cheers. Spectators scattered along a mile and a half of waterfront kept pace with the transport as she sped up the river.

They stormed the docks, overpowering police guards. Fire hose was brought into play, to clear the crowd from about the ship. The stream of water struck members of the congressional reception committee just as the party boarded the transport. The congressional committee, including Senators Harris and Robinson, and Congressman Johnson, Linberger, Scott Corday and Bulwinkle, were met aboard ship by Col. Walter T. Bates of the eighth infantry, in command of the troops.

Debarcation followed the formal welcome in behalf of the nation. The married soldiers stayed aboard with their families while their comrades formed to parade through the city. They were reviewed by Major General Farnsworth and Major General Shanks.

Nearly every state in the Union is represented in the personnel landed by the transport, although almost half of the enlisted men were reported from Southern states.

Savannah divided its interest between the returning doughboys and their foreign-born wives. The wives were given first place at the transport's rail as the vessel came up the river. They returned greetings, shouted to them from the shore, several holding up children for a glimpse of the throng lining the water front.

The St. Michel brought back 608 officers and men, comprising two battalions and service company of the 8th infantry, a detachment of the First Engineers, who wear the French fourragere for valor, the 20th service company, signal corps, and a detachment of medical corps men.

Allies Reject Demands of Turkey.

London.—After conversations between the British and French governments, it was agreed, in terms proposed by the French, to reject the Turkish demand that the allied warships leave Smyrna. The British and French have sent a reply to Ankara to that effect and warning the Ankara government that the Anglo-French warships have been instructed to defend themselves if attacked. There are two allied warships at Smyrna—the British cruiser Calypso and the French cruiser Ernest Renan.

Search in Desert for Aviators Fruitless Tucson, Ariz.—Engaged in continuation of the search for Col. Francis Marshall and Lieutenant Webber, who were lost last December while on a flight from San Diego to this port, Maj. T. C. McCauley passed through the city the other day. An intensive search of the border territory between Yuma and Nogales has failed to disclose any signs of the missing men or plane, and Major McCauley left for Olla Head, at which point he will make his headquarters.

Hurdling Approves British Debt Bill. Washington.—Congressional approval of the war debt funding agreement negotiated with Great Britain was requested by President Harding as a "recommitment of the English-speaking world to the validity of contract." Coupled with this approval the President added, in an address at a joint session of the Senate and House, Congress should enact into law the recommitment act, bill because "it is an important step toward securing the world's credit."

Why Bake At Home when you can buy bread like it, ready baked?

COUNT the raisins—at least eight big, plump, tender fruit-meats to the slice. Taste it—see how the raisin flavor permeates the bread. No need to bake at home when we've arranged with bakers in almost every town and city to bake this full-fruited raisin bread. Just phone and they'll deliver it—all ready to surprise the family tonight. It comes from master bakers' modern ovens in your city. And it's made with Sun-Maid Raisins. That's another reason for its superiority. A rare combination of nutritious cereal and fruit—both good and good for you, so you should serve it at least twice a week. Use Sun-Maid Raisins also in puddings, cakes and cookies. You may be offered other brands that you know less well than Sun-Maid, but the kind you want is the kind you know is good. Insist, therefore, on Sun-Maid brand. They cost no more than ordinary raisins. Mail coupon for free book of tested Sun-Maid recipes.

Papa's Spelling Book. A youngster who stuck at the spelling of "acquaintance" was advised by his father to consult a dictionary. This, however, failed to settle the point, and father himself called for the book to be brought to him. "Bully boy," he snapped. "Of course, you wouldn't find it under 'Aq.' Sure, you know better than that. Look under 'AK'."—London Times.

Memorable Masons to Brother George Washington

Enlarged photograph of Washington, D.C., showing the Washington Monument and the White House.

By JOHN DICKINSON SHERMAN
GORGE WASHINGTON—as the poets and historians put it—needs no memorial; the Father of His Country lives in the hearts of the people of America. And if George Washington did need a memorial, Washington, the Capital City, is practically that memorial. Then, there's the Washington monument, one of the greatest memorials of this earth. And Mount Vernon—any American who can visit it without thrills is dead from the waist up. In addition, there is the National Civic Hall to be erected in Washington by the George Washington Memorial association under the authorization of congress at a cost of about $2,500,000.

George Washington's Bible, preserved in the St. John's Lodge.

And now the Masons of the United States are going to erect their memorial to Brother George Washington at Alexandria, Va., almost within a stone's throw of the Capital City. Masonry, as everybody knows, is very old and world-wide. What the encyclopedias call the "historic period of Masonry" begins with the formation, in 1717, of the first Masonic Grand Lodge of the World in London. Masonry was introduced into America about 1730; there was a lodge in Philadelphia in 1731, and one in Boston in 1733. After the Revolution the American lodges withdrew their allegiance to the parent lodges in England and Scotland and created grand lodges in several states. Since then the growth in membership has been steady, with the exception of a few years following 1826, when a short-lived Anti-Masonic political party was formed.

April 30, 1789, on the steps of the federal building in Wall street, in New York. A photograph of it is here reproduced. It was also carried in Washington's funeral procession. It also served at the inauguration of President Harding, who is a thirty-second degree Mason. It belongs to St. John's Lodge, No. 1, F. and A. M. of New York city.

Underdonk, master of St. John's lodge, headed the official delegation, which numbered about 80, and included prominent Masons of the city and state. When President Harding took his oath of office the Bible was opened at the same page as when it was used at Washington's inauguration. "That is the page," said Mr. Underdonk, "containing the last of the forty-ninth chapter of Genesis and the beginning of the fiftieth chapter." "According to our records, Washington kept his hand on this page while he took the oath, blessed this page, and then, perhaps, in nervousness, turned over the page, where the Book of Exodus begins. The upper corner of this page is creased a little as if it had been turned down as a marker either during or after the historic ceremony." Although Washington had been a Mason for many years, had been founder and master of a lodge, this Bible was not used in the inauguration by intention, but by accident. The committee, composed largely of Masons, had forgotten to provide a Bible. The head of this committee was R. R. Livingston, chancellor of the state and also grand master of the Masons of the state.

Brother George Washington assumed his Masonic obligations November 4, 1782, at Fredericksburg, Va., at the age of twenty. This was the year before Washington was sent by Governor Dismas of Virginia to order the French pioneers out of the Ohio valley. The French and Indian war (1754-1763) broke out, and soon afterward Braddock's defeat took place in 1755. The Alexandria-Washington lodge, No. 22, Virginia, has what is called the "Masonic Portrait of Brother George Washington." It is an "original pastel portrait from life by William Williams, Philadelphia, September, 1794, painted at the request of Alexandria Lodge No. 23, A. E. M." There is also a copy in the museum of the H. W. Grand Lodge, F. and A. M. of Pennsylvania. Brother George Washington was master of the Alexandria lodge. He is shown wearing the Masonic regalia. The features are not exactly like those of any other of the many portraits of Washington. The reproductions of it are not pleasing. In one history it is described as a "disagreeable, feeble picture." It was painted while George Washington was serving his second term as President in Philadelphia. There are two "Washington" Bibles, which Masons include among their priceless relics. One is the Bible on which Washington took his Masonic obligations as a member of the Fredericksburg lodge in Virginia. The other, "Washington" Bible, more famous, is the book on which Washington took his oath of office as first president of the United States.

The dimensions over all, will be 10x220 feet, exclusive of steps, terraces and approaches. The height to the summit of the covered observation platform, from which visitors may obtain a striking panoramic view of the country where Washington spent the greater part of his life, will be 200 feet. In the center of the spacious structure will be an atrium, 70x100 feet, to form a memorial hall, which will contain a lifelike statue of Washington. This memorial hall, 64 feet in height, will rise by a elevator above the surrounding portion of the building, and will be environed by a number of rooms dedicated to the use of Masonic interests, wherein every Masonic organization in the United States may have space. Rising above the memorial hall and forming the second story of the tower will be a museum, to which will be transferred some of the most treasured possessions of the Alexandria-Washington Masonic lodge. The New York "Washington" Bible, belonging to St. John's Lodge, No. 1, F. and A. M., was taken to Washington for President Harding's inauguration with much pomp and ceremony. Rarely has the lodge permitted the Bible to be taken from its repository in the Masonic temple. Frederick A.

When the stately Washington had finished repeating the oath, with his right hand resting on the open book and his head bowed in reverential manner, he said in a clear and distinct voice, "I swear, so help me God!" Then bowing over this magnificent Bible, he reverently kissed it. Whereupon Chancellor Livingston, in a ringing voice exclaimed, "Long Live George Washington, President of the United States!" "The Bible was printed by Mark Baskett, Printer to the King's Most Excellent Majesty, London, 1747."

Do Hardest Job First
 Handle the hardest job first each day. Easy ones are pleasanter. Do not be afraid of criticism—criticize yourself often. Be glad and rejoice in the other fellow's success—study his methods. Do not be misled by slicks. Add rather than subtract. However, both dillies and acids may be used to advantage. Be authentic—It is contagious. Do not have the notion that success means simply money making. Be fair, and do at least one decent act every day in the year. Honor the chief. There must be a head to everything. Have confidence in yourself, and make yourself it. Harmonize your work. Let sunshine radiate and penetrate. Knowledge sharpens sight. Wonderful stories are told of the powers of vision possessed by savage races. During a recent anthropological expedition to Torres Straits the visual acuity of the natives was tar-fully tested, and the scientist who conducted the tests concluded that the excellence of vision shown by the savages had a psychological origin, that is to say, it arises from knowing what to look for. When the European acquires familiarity with the environment he can see as far as they can. Thus the power of an Indian to tell the sex of a deer at such a distance that distinguishing features like antlers were invisible was found to rest upon his knowledge of the peculiar gait of the male deer.

Chicago, Ill.—"I was weak and nervous and in such a nervous condition that I could hardly do my work. I was tired all the time, and could not sleep and had no appetite. I tried different medicines for years, but they did not help me. Then I read in the papers about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and what it had done for other women and gave it a trial. I began to eat better and could sleep, and consider it a wonderful medicine. I recommend it to my friends and will never be without it."
 —Mrs. M. O'Leary, 2640 S. Marshall Ave., Chicago, Illinois.

It is such letters as these that testify to the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. This woman speaks from the fullness of her heart. She describes as correctly as she can her condition, first the symptoms that bothered her the most, and later the disappearance of those symptoms. It is a sincere expression of gratitude. For nearly fifty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been so praised by women.

The Last Word in Umbrellas.
 A youngster in the eighth grade at public school No. 27 was once walking along the street with his mother, when a shower came up. While they were waiting in the shelter of a building, watching the umbrellas which were suddenly appearing, the boy said, "Mother, I wish I had a fannel umbrella."
 "Why?" inquired the mother.
 "Oh, to keep it's ribs warm," was the reply.—Indianapolis News.

Operation Avoided
 Elkhart, Kan.—"About two years ago I began to suffer with pain and soreness in both sides, (especially my right side), that I was almost unable to do any housework. I was also very nervous. Doctors advised an operation, but this I wished to avoid if possible. So I wrote to Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel, describing my condition, and was advised to take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and Ironic Tablets, and before I had finished one bottle of each I was feeling much better. I took seven bottles of the 'Prescription' and two of the 'Ironic Tablets' and weighed more and felt better than I had for some time. There is no doubt about it, Dr. Pierce's medicines cured me, for I took no other."—Mrs. W. E. Dean, Route B.

Why Farmers are Turning to

In 1922 Chevrolet jumped from seventh to second place in sales of all cars, and to first place in sales of fully equipped modern cars. Purchases by farmers were the chief factor in this remarkable development. Farmers want automobiles not only of low first price, but also of low later cost for operation and maintenance. They want room, comfort, and the ability to stand up under hard conditions. They find that Chevrolet, fully equipped as sold, is the best value per dollar in the low-priced field, and neighbors tell them it costs less per mile to operate.

Some Danger in Combination of Potash Tablets and Potassium Chlorate.

Delivery Man's Bright Scheme for Getting Rid of Dog Somehow Didn't Seem to Work.

At a merry party in England, one of the guests suddenly found himself emitting a shower of sparks. The place of origin was his coat pocket. Everybody laughed, and thought it was a well-contrived joke. But it was not. That was proved by a burned jacket, chair, carpet, and hand. Investigation showed that the guest had in his pocket a packet of potash tablets. Also he had there a box of safety matches.

William Rugenstein, delivery man for the Big Four railroad, one time owned a houn' dog that he wished to get rid of. As a certain means of accomplishing his object, he locked the dog in a freight car bound for Springfield, Ohio, heaved a sigh of relief and went about his work, glad with the thought that he finally had got rid of that dog.

Now a safety match is coated with potassium chlorate, and it strikes when it is rubbed against phosphorus painted on the box surface. But potash tablets are made of potassium chlorate, and so they, too, are likely to strike on a safety matchbox. This is what they had done. Some of them had escaped from their pocket and were loose in the jacket pocket, ready to make a fireworks display if they rubbed against the matchbox. If you carry a safety matchbox, be careful what else you carry in the same pocket. Mind it is not potash tablets for a sore throat, or you may "go off" unawares in a private fireworks display.

Two weeks later, Rugenstein was opening a car containing a consignment of goods from Springfield. He heard something scratching on the door. As he opened it, out bounded three emaciated, raw-boned cur dogs. On the door of the car was written in chalk:

"Pull Down Your Vest."
 An American colloquialism, meaning, originally, "Attend to your own business," but now used as a mere senseless exclamation of wittings. It comes to us from the time when trousers and waistcoats were alike shorter than they are at present, and when a wide gap of linen shirt induced careful mothers, wives or discriminating friends to use the adjuration to the negligent. The phrase soon became general and for a time was used ad nauseum.—Chicago Journal.

Concern for Santa.
 Little Letha is about the smallest patron of the West Indianapolis library, and was being taught a piece to speak for her Sunday school Christmas entertainment. "I come to say, good night, sleep tight."
 "For Santa will be speeding," prompted her mother.
 "Santa will be what, mother?" exclaimed the little girl.
 Mother patiently repeated the lines and Letha's concern grew.
 "Oh, mother, Shank will get him, and he'll get arrested," she said in frightened earnestness.—Indianapolis News.

A necessary part of your diet

 VARIETY in foods is essential, of course, but in providing variety do not overlook the importance of nourishment.

Crisp, delicious Grape-Nuts is a highly nourishing cereal food in unusually compact form. It supplies the rich nutrition of wheat and malted barley, including the mineral elements of these splendid grains, without which health and strength cannot be maintained. Grape-Nuts, with good milk, is a complete food. Economical, too, because a moderate amount provides unusual nourishment.

His fourteen years of service with our firm before coming here, speaks well for him, and is of itself one of his best recommendations. He is attending to Mr. Ziegler's interests during his absence.

Revival meetings at the Baptist church continue with increasing interest. Rev. Ellis of Tucumcari does the preaching and Rev. Woodruff of Estancia conducts the singing. Good attendance is reported, notwithstanding the fact that the unpleasant weather of the past week has been a severe drawback to gatherings of all kinds. The men's meeting at Lutz hall was well attended, all present shaking hands with the speaker after the services were over. Meetings will continue until Sunday night, and possibly longer; announcement of which will be made next Sunday. Come.
