Celebrate Fourth With Wisdom

(Capital News Service)

On July 4th, this great nation will celebrate Independence Day. Cannon will roar, bells will ring, salutes be given the flag, speeches made, fireworks displayed and a general outpouring of patriotism and gladness will mark the "day of days." It is fitting that we thus commemorate the birth of this country, but it was never right and fitting that we made of it a day for the slaughter of the innocents, a day of human sacrifice, a day of torture to little children and agony to their parents. It is not so long ago that the universal use of fireworks, firecrackers, toy cannon, etc., left a train of accidents such as deaths, burnings and blindness as sad reminders that we celebrated, not wisely, but too well.

In the larger cities, the custom has had an enforced passing; wise police laws prohibit the sale or use of explosives in unskilled hands and demand that burning of powder be a municipal rather than a private privilege. All over the country are smaller towns and villages where the trustees say: "Oh, let the children have their fun," as if "fun," which may blind or kill a child, is a good kind of fun in order to show reverence for the flag and gratitude for liberty.

All Signs Fail In Carrizozo

Patiently and were we good enough, we might say, prayerfully, yet vainly, have we watched, waited, sweated, cursed and discussed, the question of rainfall for so long that the situation seems unbearable. Last Sunday night, a heavy cloud appeared over the Oscura range; it looked angry. Vivid lightning with occasional peals of thunder seemed to give us the evidence that after all our patience and forbearance, relief was surely at hand. The cloud hovered over us for a short while, during which time, it danced, shimmered and after playing all sorts of aerial pranks, the weather man stuck his bean over the mountains and said: "Now you see me" and as it vanished, "Now you don't see me." How long the "rain gods" will hold their receptacles with doleful supplications, we are at loss to know, but in the meantime, all signs fail and we are still in our sins.

One on Pleasure Visit; Others on Mercy's Errand

Mrs. J. K. Vines, son, Jacob, wife, son, Roy, with Mrs. L. C. Otto, passed through here on Tuesday from Magdalena en route for Nogal, where Mrs. Otto will visit her sister, Mrs. A. Emerson, while Mrs. Vines and family will go to Roswell to visit and comfort Mrs. Vines' youngest son, Lee, who is ill.

Pinned Under Heavy Iron Pipes

While engaged in hauling a load of corrugated iron culverts for a public highway near Tinnie, a town east of here, Francisco Navarro's horses became frightened, turning the wagon over and pinned him under the heavy iron pipes. Wm. Read, who has the service car between that point and Carrizozo, was the first man on the scene. He succeeded in rolling the pipes away and found the victim mashed in a horrible manner. Read took him to the road camp, after which he was hurried to a hospital in Roswell. His recovery is doubtful.

Narrow Escape

Tuesday morning, while in the attempt at passing through what he thought was an open gate two miles north of here which proved to have two wires stretched across near the ground, J. C. McDaniel's car collided with the wires, smashing the wind shield, the glass flying into his face, cutting an ugly gash across his forehead long enough to necessitate six stitches to close the wound. The knuckles of his right hand were badly lacerated and it will be several weeks before he is able to resume his labor at the railroad shops in Albuquerque. Mr. McDaniel had obtained a six-weeks vacation and was here for the purpose of proving up on his homestead near French's east well.

One Held; One Released

Last Friday afternoon near Robsart, a station eight miles north of here, Alta and Sarah GraVee engaged in a quarrel with their brother-in-law, Thomas Shields, resulting in Alta firing two shots at him, none of which took effect. The girls were arraigned here for trial before Justice Hulbert and Alta was held for the shooting, but Sarah was released on her sister's testimony to the effect that it was she, (Alta) who did the shooting while the sister protested.

Big Picnic July 4th At Fort Stanton

A good time is in store for those who attend the big picnic at Fort Stanton July 4. Admission to the grounds for the entire day, will be only 50 cents and the reason for this charge is, that in former years, subscriptions were taken to defray the ground expenses, consequently no charge was made for entrance. This year, no subscriptions were taken, hence the entrance fee. This does not apply to children as they will be admitted free. The big fireworks just before the dance starts will alone be worth one's while in attending; the barbecue at noon is always a feature with the Fort folks. A bumper crowd is expected. Geo. Ferguson and Mickey McNeff will furnish the music with a full orchestra.

Fans who were fortunate enough to see the game last Sunday between Carrizozo and Vaughn base ball teams say that it was one of the fastest played in this region for many years. From the fact that it took twelve innings to decide the game, it must have been a good one. Our boys' scalps had hardly healed from the lifting the Indians gave them a week before and were short several of our best men. Be that as it may have been we gave Vaughn one of best runs for their money they have ever had on their own diamond. The score was 3 to 3 up the 12th, but Vaughn scored in that inning, making it 4 to 3. If we could induce Pat Dolan to play a while instead of working, it might help some. The boys will give a dance tomorrow night and it should be well patronized, as they are in need of the money. Good music and a good time is guaranteed.

Near the Cloud Line

Those in attendance at the big Masonic picnic on the Ruidoso last Sunday were: Mr. and Mrs. Henry Lutz and daughter, Belle; Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Pehrm and sons, Otto and Ernie; Mr. and Mrs. Frank English and children; Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Barnhart and daughter, Betty; Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Lemon and son, Morris; Mr. and Mrs. Roy Bogle and family; Mrs. Lota Miller, Miss Ethel Johnson.

Road Boosters Were Successful

A party composed of E. H. Sweet, T. E. Kelley, Sheriff Harris, Robert Taylor of Carrizozo; W. B. Payne, Jack Price, E. L. Rohde, Wm. Titworth, C. H. Patterson, Burl Sears, Perry Sears, Fred Pfingsten, L. C. Hulbert, and several more of the Capitan Commercial Club, took a trip to Socorro last Saturday to confer with county commissioners and business men of that place with a view of improving the highway between that place, Carrizozo, Capitan and on to Roswell. They presented their arguments which were successful, as the work will commence as soon as the Highway Commission can get a force of men to work on the job. This will turn a large amount of travel in this direction which has heretofore gone in other directions on account of the bad condition of the highway.

Here From Clovis

J. C. Johnson came in from Clovis on Monday to make final proof on his land between Coyote and Ancho. He obtained a few weeks' layoff from his work in the railroad shops in order to attend to business matters here.

George Barber, who has been in Bisbee for the past year, is here on his vacation, so as to be here with his sister, Mrs. Ben West, who is also visiting at the Barber home.

Carroll Johnson, who has for the past several years been with the Hatchet people at Three Rivers, has moved up to his ranch west of Jake Springs. Carroll is optimistic on stock and range conditions. He says his cattle are doing nicely, the range is fairly good and we will have good rains by the 4th of July.

R. L. Young of Stafford, Ariz., and Jones Tallaferrero of San Francisco, Calif., who were residents of this section in the early days, are here on a visit with Carrizozo and White Oaks friends.

Miss Grace Moss, clerk in the local postoffice returned from El Paso last Saturday, where she had been for a period of two weeks paying a visit to the Misses Katherine and Margaret Spence.

Mrs. G. C. Davis and children of El Reno, Okla., came in last Friday and after visiting for a few days with the S. O. Sproles family, left for California, accompanied by Mrs. L. E. Ayers, who went to Weed, Calif., to visit her son, William, who is a fireman on the S. P.

Mr. and Mrs. William Gallacher, were in from their ranch at the Indian Tank on Saturday.

White Oaks News

Mrs. Lize Starkey has returned from an extended visit in Southern Oklahoma. Her aunt, Mrs. Prince and two daughters accompanied her home and will be in White Oaks until the 2nd of July.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Gallacher entertained a number of their friends at their home Wednesday evening with a delightful dance and party.

48 Hours Without Food

Santa Fe, N. M., June 26.—After wandering without food for 48 hours in a tangle of canyons not ten miles from home, Miss Minnie Austin, maid employed at the Bishop's Lodge four miles from here, was found with her pony by searchers at 9 o'clock this morning near Catron's cabin in the Tesuque Canyon, safe and sound although weak from lack of food. She had apparently been going around in circles and was still hopelessly lost when Sheriff Delgado and his brother, Deputy Alfredo Delgado discovered her. The girl slept two nights under the trees with her horse tethered close by, and said that while the coyotes came unpleasantly close and bothered her with their barking, she slept soundly the first night and fairly well the second. She was never without water and having a blanket along did not suffer from the cold at night. The girl rode her own horse back to the lodge, where she received an ovation from the guests and was put to bed to head off the nervous reaction from her ordeal. Twenty-five or thirty National Guard troopers, sheriff's deputies and volunteers had been combing the hills for two days and nights and last night a bunch of Tesuque Indians were put on the trail.

New Mexico Singer Dies

Albuquerque, N. M., June 28.—Mrs. Claude Albright Roberts, daughter of Col. J. G. Albright, of Albuquerque, died Thursday night at her home at St. Helena, Calif. Death was believed due to heart trouble, as a recent attack of typhoid fever had left her with a weakened heart.

Mrs. Roberts, who was widely known as the "New Mexico nightingale," was leading lady of the Paris Opera company, for a year. She was selected by Henry Savage out of a field of forty-two competing singers for the part of Kundra in Parsifal. After a year in this role in the United States, she went to Germany to study German opera and was engaged by the Stadt theater at Bremen for a year. After this Mrs. Roberts traveled with the Royal Opera company in Europe and then came back to the United States.

"The Dust Flower"

Helene Chadwick, appearing in Basil King's new photoplay, made by Goldwyn, "The Dust Flower," coming to the Crystal Theatre on July 8, is noted for the most beautiful woman on the screen. She was born in Chadwick, N. Y., and studied music early in life expecting to go on the concert stage but afterwards she became a model, posing for a while for illustrated magazine covers. From this, she entered the motion picture industry and was engaged by Goldwyn for Rupert Hughes' first photoplay, "The Cup of Fury." She has appeared in many pictures here, principal among which was "The Old Nest," which pleased the people so well.

Cattle Doing Well

Ed Fitzpatrick was in from his ranch near Ancho on Tuesday. Ed says, his cattle are doing nicely and predicts a plentiful rainfall within the next ten days.

Wool Grades Effective July 1

Washington, July 25.—Official standards for grades of wool have been established by the Secretary of Agriculture, effective July 1, 1923. All wool in warehouses licensed under the warehouse act, must be graded in accordance with the official grades. While the adoption of these grades is not compulsory by the trade generally, except where state laws or ordinances make it so, it is expected that these grades will soon be quite generally adopted all over the United States, thus doing away with much of the confusion that has previously existed in wool grading.

The grades established are, fine, one-half blood, three-eighths blood, one-fourth blood, low quarter blood, common and braid. These are determined by length of fibre and spinning qualities. There are also three classes of wool determined by the length of fiber. These are strictly combing, French combing and clothing. Grade, class and shrink are the value-determining properties of wool. Since the official grades have now been definitely established and much of the confusion of grading eliminated, it is possible for the wool grower to become familiar with these things himself so as to be able to determine the value of his clip. Since there is nothing difficult connected with this matter, it is expected that wool growers in general will interest themselves in it.

Alamogordo News Items

(From Alamogordo News.)

One of the most spectacular fires for some months in Alamogordo occurred last Monday night about 8 o'clock at the home of Mayor L. N. Jones, on 16th St. The large barn filled with hay and his garage were a total loss. The damage by fire was at least $1200, and covered by only $400 insurance on the barn. There was a small loss on the house due to the blistering of the paint, which was covered by insurance.

Several of the fruit growers of Alamogordo, and also several from La Luz, went to Tularosa last Saturday night to meet with the growers over there relative to forming an association for the co-operative packing and shipping of fruit.

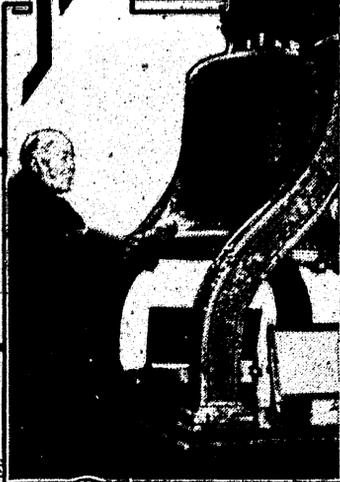

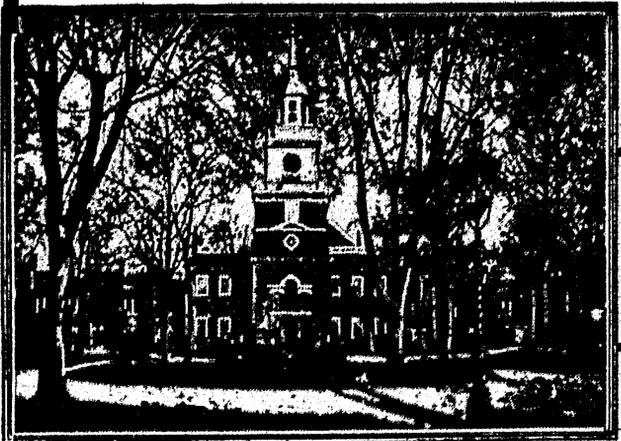

The general plan will be to have a sales manager who will also look after the packing of the fruit and to have a unit of the organization in each of the three localities. It is thought that other localities besides the three mentioned might come into the association later.

The proposition will have to be worked out in detail yet, but it is thought that it will be in working shape in a short time.

George Coe, one of the pioneers of Lincoln county, was brought in from his home at Glencoe, Wednesday in a touring car to the Rousseau hospital, suffering from a badly fractured thigh sustained the night before. Mr. Coe was kicked by a stallion.

He was given first aid at the Fort Stanton hospital and brought here the next day for later treatment. He was accompanied by his sons and Mrs. Coe. The children have returned to their home at Glencoe, but Mrs. Coe will remain with her husband.

Independence Day, 1923

This Republic needs today as it never did before, men and women of character, purity, vigor, and unselfish judgment. It needs men to stand in the hard places and fight the hard battles. It needs women to answer its questions and to solve its problems. Guy D. Go.

By JOHN DICKINSON GHERMAN

INDEPENDENCE day will be celebrated in every nook and cranny of the United States of America. How it will be celebrated is another story, since just now the observance of this American holiday is in a transition stage. The fashion of celebrating will depend upon the spirit of the celebrating community. Of course only works of necessity will be done. And, with pleasant weather, most of our citizens will celebrate in the open air.

Independence day will also be celebrated after a fashion all over the world. For America is a world power nowadays and its sons and daughters are many in most parts of the earth. And wherever they are, they will gather in honor of the Star Spangled Banner. For example, 500 Chicagoans visiting Copenhagen's tercentennial will give Sweden an object lesson in Fourth of July celebrations. Wherever Old Glory floats, there will be some sort of observance of the day the homeland celebrates.

Moreover, all the peoples of earth, with few exceptions, will be in sympathy with these celebrations, for it is coming more and more to be understood that American independence and liberty stand for a world wide idea.

There is one thing, however, that every good American should do on Independence day. Reflect on his view of patriotism. We have come up from a humble beginning through storm and stress to the first place among the nations of earth. We should make firm resolve on the Fourth of July that we will not lose that proud eminence through the enervating influence of wealth and luxury and neglect of patriotic duties. We should try to realize how fast history is making in these modern days and resolve to help in making it along lines of progress.

Frank W. Mondell of Wyoming, majority floor leader of the house, closed a continuous service of 13 terms at the end of the last congress. These words from his farewell address give us a hint of how fast history is making in America:

"At the close of this congress I shall have served my constituents as a member of the congress 13 terms, or 20 years, and 29 years shall have elapsed since I first visited this chamber as a member elect. Twenty-eight years is a brief period in the times of time, but it is a long period in the life of a nation when important history is in the making. My service here has been under six presidents—Cleveland, McKinley, Roosevelt, Taft, Wilson and Harding; and under five speakers—Reed, Henderson, Cannon, Clark and Gillett. During the period since my service began we have fought two foreign wars; we have extended our boundaries and our jurisdiction from the continent of America to the islands of the eastern and western seas and to the farthest Orient; we have united the two great oceans at Panama. We have during this period, through the force of our moral influence and without intent of purpose on our part, passed from the condition of an isolated and somewhat unimportant western power to a position of acknowledged supremacy in potential power and in high moral influence.

"At home, measuring our activities by expenditures we have progressed from an annual outlay of half a billion to the expenditure in a period of war and stress of thirty-three billions in a twelve-month, and to a present annual outlay of nearly four billions. In my first session of congress we discussed with apprehension of unjustifiable extravagance a naval expenditure of less than $30,000,000, the beginning of an effort to revive our navy from the moribund condition into which it fell following the Civil war. Today our naval policy contemplates a fleet equal to any afloat. In those days a river and harbor appropriation of $15,000,000 was considered a wild extravagance, as compared with the $30,500,000 of the present year.

"The present annual federal expenditure of seventy to eighty millions for public roads was undreamed of. Some years were to pass before we undertook the reclamation of our arid lands that had not even entered upon the period of academic discussion. Federal land banks were unthought of except in the minds of a few students of foreign agricultural credits. Women voted in general elections nowhere in the Union save in my State of Wyoming and the Eighteenth amendment had not been thought of."

Independence day this year will have a new feature in its celebration: the honoring of James Monroe, fifth president of the United States and author of the Monroe Doctrine. Senate joint resolution 274 in the last congress, to provide for the participation of the United States in the observance of the one hundredth anniversary of the enunciation of the Monroe Doctrine and of the ninety-second anniversary of the death of James Monroe, in substantially as follows:

Resolved, etc., That there is hereby established the Monroe Doctrine Centennial commission. There is hereby authorized to be appropriated the sum of $122,500, to be expended by the congressional commission. The sum of $67,500 may be expended in co-operation with the James Monroe Memorial Association and Foundation, for the purpose of contributing to the purchase and restoration of the former home of James Monroe in the city of New York, as a permanent memorial, and the creation of a memorial foundation, the income from which shall be used for purposes of furthering progress, amity, and good will among the peoples of the Pan-American republics. Fifty-five thousand dollars may be expended in co-operation with the National Committee of Celebration for the purpose of participating in a general program of public celebration of the one hundredth anniversary of the enunciation of the Monroe Doctrine to be held in New York and Washington, and in the places of the birth and of the burial of James Monroe; and participating in memorial services to be held in New York, on July 4, 1923, the ninety-second anniversary of his death. No expenditures shall be made until the James Monroe Memorial Association and Foundation has expended or contracted to expend at least the sum of $67,500 for the same purposes.

When Clemenceau was here he put in his tin-carrying "moust" things: To place a wreath at Lincoln's tomb and to touch the Liberty Bell. He did both. And in this connection, Representative F. B. Gerner of Pennsylvania was moved in the last congress to retell the story of the famous journey of the Liberty Bell to Allentown, Pa., during the Revolution. He said in part:

"It was after the battle of Brandywine, Sept. 11, 1777, that General Washington ordered the transfer of all military stores to Bethlehem, Pa. Even before that critical hour had arrived, the Pennsylvania assembly awoke to the gravity of the situation and passed a resolution on the sixteenth day of June authorizing the removal of all bells, as well as all the copper and brass, in the city of Philadelphia to some place of safety; the Liberty Bell was not taken from Independence Hall until after General Washington's order had been given. It constituted a part of the military train of 700 wagons, which carried the whole of the heavy baggage of the army, which was escorted by 300 Virginia and North Carolina soldiers under the command of Col. William Polk of North Carolina. That famous caravan proceeded along the banks of the Delaware river to Trenton, and from there traveled through a d and rugged country to Bethlehem, arriving there on the twenty-fourth day of September, 1777. After the military train had reached Bethlehem the wagon upon which the Liberty Bell was loaded broke down in the street.

The next day the bell was placed on the wagon of Frederick Lessor, who, together with John Jacob Mickle, escorted by a small guard of soldiers, brought it and the chains of Christ church, still in number, to Allentown, where they were placed in the basement of the German Home Reformed church, where it was kept in hiding until the following spring, when the British army evacuated Philadelphia. It was then returned to Independence Hall, where it was rehung in the belfry on June 27, 1778. This same church was converted into a hospital for the sick and wounded of the Revolutionary army during the entire time that its membership kept their silent watch over the hidden treasure. Allentown was then a thrifty little town of 300 inhabitants, located six miles north of Bethlehem on the banks of the Lehigh river. Its people were intensely loyal to the cause of the Revolution, for 27 members of the congregation in whose church the Liberty Bell was secreted served as members of the Continental army. What a responsibility the consistency of that church assumed, but John Griseamer, Nicholas Fox, Michael Kolb, John Miller and Peter Rhoads were patriotic and God-fearing men who earnestly and courageously assumed this sacred task."

Philadelphia is busy getting ready for its sesquicentennial celebration in 1926 by an international exhibition. The old city hall or Supreme court building, a group of structures centered by Independence Hall and facing on Independence square, was rededicated with appropriate ceremonies in May. The restoration of this building to its original form has just been completed as part of the work of restoring the entire group undertaken by the city of Philadelphia to perpetuate the shrine of American independence.

The rededication of this building constitutes the beginning of a series of historic celebrations, culminating in the celebration of the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence through the sesquicentennial exhibition in Philadelphia in 1926 in illustration of the world progress in science, art and industry since the centennial celebration of 1876.

The Supreme court building, sometimes called the old city hall, was constructed much later than Independence Hall, being begun in 1783 and finished in 1791. It corresponds with the other buildings and appears as a wing extending to the Fifth street corner of "the row." It was intended to be occupied by the municipal offices of the city of Philadelphia, but, as the moment of completion coincided with the transfer of the seat of federal government from New York to Philadelphia, the use of it was accorded to the Supreme court of the United States, which held its sessions there continuously until 1800, when it removed to Washington.

Philadelphia promises something new in the way of international expositions. Its purpose is threefold:

"To mark the 150th anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence; to portray the progress of the world particularly in the 50 years since the Centennial exhibition held in Philadelphia in 1876; to create a closer understanding and foster the good-will of the peoples of the world."

The dominant aim will be "to interpret the spirit of the Twentieth Century and to reflect it in beauty and happiness. New methods and original features will be developed, departing entirely from previous expositions, except for their practical lessons."

Two features at least will be new in international expositions: A vast Automobile Hall, designed to portray the progress of the automotive industry and to present the greatest collection of the most highly-perfected motor vehicles from every part of the world; a great Airplane Building with an air-drome for exhibition purposes, demonstrating world achievement in the navigation of the air.

This also is promised: "The motion picture will be here upon a scale never before attempted, and also the actual filming of scenarios, in which the most noted motion-picture stars appear."

"With Philadelphia's hallowed historic buildings in the background, each day's presentation of a great motion picture will be prefaced by a film portraying the signing of the Declaration of Independence and the great events of the republic that will stamp the lessons of American history indelibly upon the minds of millions of people."

TRUE TO MASTER

Dog's Fidelity Greater Than Desire for Life.

No Temptation Could Lure Him From Guardianship of Body of Man He Loved.

"Dog!" used as an epithet applied to a human is a "fighting word." But after having read in a California daily a news item of Bob, I feel that the term should no longer bear insult.

Bob was a common Alredale terrier, but his story abounds numerous pages of human history. His is not an ordinary tale of fidelity unto death; it is different.

Bob's master and a companion went for a hunt along the edge of the Mojave desert. Days passed, yet they did not return home. When a searching party came to the end of the trail in their little camp both hunters were dead. There had been a tragedy. Only Bob knows what happened, but circumstances seem to lead to the belief that his master had accidentally shot his companion in the back, then, in a moment of anguish, put the rifle to his own head.

Bob was left alone with the dead. Although he was an expert hunter, he could not leave his silent master even to catch one of the numerous rabbits scurrying through the brush. Soaring lazily in the blue above watched a vulture. He knew that Death had passed. Already on the ridge above the camp two coyotes licked their chops in anticipation.

Five days and five nights Bob kept the complaining birds and beasts from their feast.

When the searchers came up, a dozen vultures swished out of the brush and the coyotes slipped over the ridge. Bob was whining near his master's ear; he had grown too weak to stand.

Yes, Bob's story was different: he was faithful after death.

Only fifty miles from the scene of this tragedy history records one greater. Less than fourscore years ago a party of men, women and children, crossing the mountains, stayed hunger with the flesh of their fallen comrades. Had Bob done likewise the rescuers would undoubtedly have shot him ignominiously. But he had not imitated man.

Since Bob was only a dog, why did he not satisfy his hunger as have numerous explorers and shipwrecked sailors? Or, why did he not abandon his silent companion to chase the taunting desert rabbit which he could have outdistanced with ease?

Since Bob cannot make known his thoughts to man, no one will ever know just why he suffered hunger while there was abundant food in sight.

"Dog!" A term meaning fidelity even after death.—George Ballard Bowers in Our Dumb Animals.

Mother-in-Law Says:

"I thought for a while yesterday that Harold was going to get out to the golf course alone, but just as he was leaving, Minnie's new trousers were delivered."

"Lamech and I lived happily together many years, but he never played a game of any kind after we were married except one. We went to the Volunteer Firemen's picnic and he played baseball for two or three minutes. He was laid up four days."

"Minnie's husband works harder at his play than he does at his job. Lamech used to watch the weather signs to keep from losing his crops. Many of the time his rheumatic knee has given him warning to get the hay in off the south forty. In the spring and summer Harold reads the forecasts to see if the weather is likely to be bad enough to make him go to the office."

"Of course, Minnie makes him take his recreations seriously. I've noticed a woman who can wear sport clothes usually advocates golf for her husband. But if Minnie isn't any better swinging a club than she is a broom it is a waste of good all-wool cloth to put her on the links."—From Life.

He Gave Her a Look.

While taking dictation the other afternoon I was busily jotting down little chicken tracks (as stenographers' shorthand notes are often called) and in some way my right foot became tangled in the rung of my chair. I turned and turned, but I was caught fast. My foot refused to respond to my efforts to release it. I finally got desperate and removed my shoe, while my employer had his back turned, but did not accomplish his feat in time to escape his eagle eye.

Mr. Employer gave me one look and asked, "What's the idea?" —Such a performance, naturally, required an explanation and, of course, afforded my employer a good laugh, to my embarrassment.—Exchange.

Proper Way to Blow Nose.

He didn't know how to blow his nose. This is the reason given for the death of the Parisian actor, D'Aragon, a few days ago. Furthermore, it is asserted nine persons out of ten are just as ignorant. The explanation is that D'Aragon when blowing his nose placed both nostrils, thereby blocking air passages and forcing the germs of grippe, from which he suffered, into the vessels leading to the brain. Meningitis resulted. The French press now warns the public to pinch only one nostril at a time and thus leave the other open for the escape of air and germs.

You Should Not Be Sick

Have you ever stopped to reason why it is that so many people that are not naturally so-called, all at once drop out of sight and are soon forgotten? The reason is plain—the article did not fulfill the promise of the manufacturer. This applies more particularly to a medicine. A medicinal preparation that has curative value almost sells itself, as like an endless chain system the remedy is recommended by those who have been benefited to those who are in need of it. A prominent druggist says, "Take for example Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a preparation I have sold for many years and never hesitate to recommend, for in almost every case it shows excellent results, as many of my customers testify. No other kidney remedy has so large a sale."

According to sworn statements and verified testimony of thousands who have used the preparation, the success of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is due to the fact, so many people claim, that it fulfills almost every wish in overcoming kidney, liver and bladder ailments, corrects urinary troubles and neutralizes the uric acid which causes rheumatism. You may receive a sample bottle of Swamp-Root by parcel post. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and enclose ten cents; also mention this paper. Large and medium size bottles for sale at all drug stores.—Advertisement.

Caught Herself in Time.

Adele had a habit of asking for cookies at my neighbors. One day I left her with a neighbor while I went to see a dentist. Before leaving I told her not to ask for anything to eat. When I returned my neighbor was laughing. She said Adele had seen some cookies on the table and said: "Oh, I wanted a—." Then she said: "Oh I'm so tired."

Dairy Products' Use Increases

American Consumption Is Steadily Growing, Says Head of Dairy Congress.

Washington.—Only the healthy and growing condition of the American dairy industry has enabled it to withstand the drop in exports which came with the world readjustment. This also has been aided by a growing taste of the American people for dairy products, says Dr. H. E. Van Norman, president of the World's Dairy Congress association, which is preparing for its international meeting here in October.

"The United States has reached a point where the production and consumption of dairy products are almost equal," Dr. Van Norman said, "as is indicated by the fact that its exports and imports of dairy products nearly balance."

"The fact is that our dairy industry is in a healthy condition and it is kept so by our people's growing appreciation of dairy products. The fact that our consumption of dairy products today almost equals our production indicates a tremendously rapid growth in appreciation."

Foreign Market Active.
"While our foreign business in butter and cheese does not reach a great volume, our domestic markets are constantly influenced by the conditions that obtain in the world markets. The foreign business which we do carry on in dairy products also frequently has an importance out of all proportion to its size in the stabilizing of our domestic conditions. A few weeks ago, when our cheese market was particularly slow, an opening for cheese occurred in England. Our owners of stored cheese immediately 'unloaded' as much as they could on the English market. The deficit was caused by the failure of New Zealand, where the creameries are equipped to manufacture either butter or cheese, to pay the usual attention to cheese."

"That the American merchants grasped the opportunity just in the nick of time is evidenced by a cablegram from the American agricultural trade commissioner, stationed at London, recently received by our Department of Agriculture, stating that the American cheese now on storage in England amounts to 14,000 boxes, against about 51,000 boxes a year ago, and that the Australian cheese on storage amounted to 31,000 crates, against a trifle more than 73,000 crates a year ago; but that Australia had 122,000 crates of cheese on hand and bound for England, about 11,000 crates more than she had on the water at this time last year. If we had needed to unload butter on the English market we would not have had the same fortune, for the cablegram states that England has in storage 423,000 boxes of Australian butter, an increase of 33,000 for the year."

"It is noteworthy that, in spite of increased production, the United States is shipping less butter today proportionately than it did in the five-year period before the war."

Biggest Market is at Home.
"While the American dairyman is finding a tremendously important market at home, a new group of dairy nations is rising to grasp the international markets. Equipped with a large proportion of American machinery and to a very great extent directed by graduates of American agricultural colleges, New Zealand, Australia, Argentine republic and Canada—all countries with small populations of milk consumers and large populations of dairy cattle—are proving themselves mighty competitors of the historic dairy countries of Europe. While these countries are in their youth, with unestimated possibilities ahead, the older dairy countries have reached very nearly the line of their productivity."

Told of Crucifixion, Nails Baby to Floor.
Erie, Pa.—The story of the Crucifixion told five-year-old Harold Munger is believed to have so impressed the lad that he nailed the hand of his two-year-old playmate, Billy Silemon, to the floor of the porch of the Silemon home.

Cries of little Billy brought his mother, Mrs. Michael Silemon, quickly to the child's side.

A physician found the nail embedded in the fleshy part of one of the child's fingers, the head being almost lost to view, and no instrument could be used to pull out the nail without crushing the child's finger. He was forced to tear the finger from the veranda.

Miss Sweetheart Jones of Houston, Tex., winner of first prize for the most elaborate costume at the annual bathing girl revue recently held at Galveston. Miss Jones has the enviable record of having won this coveted prize, for which the beauties of the Southwest compete, twice in succession. She will likely represent the Southwest in the annual bathing girl revue at Atlantic City in July.

They are quite harmless and will do no one any harm, but they have been shot at a great deal for no special reason except that some people like to shoot for the sake of shooting, which seems a pretty wretched reason.

"Mrs. Eagle laid two dull white eggs in February, for she said to Mr. Eagle, 'I do not like to let the children leave the nest until they are several months old. And I am laying the eggs in good season, so that the birdlings will be several months old and strong enough when July comes.'

"You know July is the month of the year in which the day of the Fourth comes. Other months have a fourth in them, or however one would speak of it, but the Fourth of July is particularly important. It's an American holiday, you see, and so it would be nice to leave the little darlings ready for the great day. I wouldn't want them to leave the nest until they were able to fly and be quite safe."

"And Mr. Eagle agreed with Mrs. Eagle.

"When the young Eagles were hatched they were covered with a whitish down. Mrs. Eagle thought that was very adorable.

"Of course," she said, "I cannot let them go out of the nest that way, for they would be made fun of, and called 'Mother Eagle's Baby Downs,' and I know they wouldn't like that. They are like little boys who want to have their curls cut so people won't tease them, and the mothers hate to see their babies are growing up. They love to have them grow up, but they always hate to see them leave their babyhood behind."

"So I will let the little darlings go forth without the down. Then they will have brownish-blackish feathers. They will spread out their wings. Ah, yes, and they will leave the deep home nest and see the world."

"We will teach them to make the Fish Hawk drop his prey if we want it, so we can catch it."

"I'll tell them Eagle stories—of how Eagles are to be found in Mexico, too; of how there are Eagles in the zoo, but no baby Eagles."

"Ah, yes, we will teach them all of this."

"So in July the babies left the nest—and flew about for a little over the country."

"You're chosen as the birds of the country over when you are flying," said Mother Eagle proudly, and she taught them Eagle History. Then the young Eagles spread their wings and said, "Freedom, Mother Eagle, is a beautiful thing!"

"And Mother Eagle said, 'You know your Eagle History and you love it. Mother Eagle is very proud of you.'"

Bees Big Business.
A novel form of harvest excursion to Manitoba is being investigated by the Agricultural college of that province. The proposition is to bring bees from the southern states and have them collect Manitoba honey all summer and let them die in the fall. No half-fare returns. Manitoba produced one pound of honey last year for every five pounds of butter. One Manitoba beehive last summer brought in 13½ pounds of honey in one day in June.

EAGLE WAYS

"I want to tell you," said Daddy, "more about the Bald Eagles. They are the ones chosen as the American Birds of Freedom and, as you know, they do not get their white heads and tall feathers until they are three years of age."

"Now, Mrs. Eagle had her nest near the top of a very high tree. It was a very, very large nest, for she did not care to have any other kind of a home. She didn't like small nests, and neither did Mr. Eagle, and as they were the ones to be suited they had a big nest."

"I don't like these little bits of cottage nests," Mrs. Eagle said, and Mr. Eagle answered, "My love, I agree with you!"

"Now the Eagles like to keep the same home, too, for many years. They don't want to change their nests. And the same pair of Eagles will keep the same nest for years and years, if undisturbed."

FIRE FIGHTER GAINS 30 POUNDS

"Tanlac Can't Be Beat" Declares This Albuquerque Citizen.

"Three years ago Tanlac rid me of a nervous, run-down condition, built me up from a hundred and twenty-five pounds to a hundred and fifty-five, and I have felt fine ever since," declared Henry C. DeBach, popular member of Company No. 1 of the Albuquerque, N. M., fire department, residing at 313 E. Cromwell St.

"I got so weak and run down that my work was an awful strain and I thought I would have to quit. My nerves were so frayed and shattered I would roll and toss all night without getting any sleep, and get up mornings feeling as worn out as when I went to bed. What I ate never seemed to give me much nourishment, and the result was I fell off from my usual weight of a hundred and fifty pounds to a hundred and twenty-five."

"Well, sir, I started getting better on my first bottle of Tanlac, and I stuck to it till I finished the full course of six bottles, and by that time was feeling like a new man. That's what Tanlac did for me, and I never miss a chance to say a good word for it."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitute. Over 87 million bottles sold.

Freezing Eyeglasses.
Since optical glasses cannot be cut unless they are fixed in an immovable position, it has been the practice to glue them to iron frames of various sizes and shapes. Until a few years ago the plates of glass, when finished, were knocked off the frame by means of a light mallet, the blow being delivered cautiously upon the edges of the plates. Naturally enough, this was a delicate and dangerous bit of work, and unless performed by the most expert of workmen resulted, of course, in the injury of the lens.

But the discovery was made that the blocks of crystal separated more readily when they had been exposed to a certain degree of cold. The result has been what might be called a revolution in the making of special glasses.

American Tires in Barbados.
Practically all automobile tires used in Barbados are of American make. The total number of passenger cars is about 1,000; in addition there are about 50 trucks and 60 motorcycles. Nearly all of the automotive equipment also is of American make. Each motor vehicle requires four tires per year on the average. Three repair shops do vulcanizing and retreading, for which American equipment is used. Consul John J. C. Watson reports.

Silver Purchase Halted by Government

Washington.—Director Scobey of the mint has closed the treasury books to all offers of silver for purchase by the government, and, it was officially stated, no further tenders are likely to be accepted for two or three years. Actual treasury purchases of silver ended June 1, when offers estimated at two hundred million ounces had been received under the Pittman act. Since the offers all were on the basis of estimates, Mr. Scobey had no way of ascertaining definitely whether the amount required by the law would be entirely filled. Consequently he has continued to receive and file offers. The two hundred million ounces purchased is to replace that loaned by the treasury to Great Britain for use in India during the war. When that bullion is again in its vaults, the government will be out of the silver market. Officials believe the treasury will have no further need for additional stocks for several years.

This booklet—Department Bulletin 1112—has just been printed and is now available for free distribution by the Department of Agriculture as long as the supply lasts after which it may be secured from the Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office, Washington, D. C., for 15 cents per copy.

Rodeo Participants Warned

Washington.—Participants in an old-fashioned western "rodeo" which is shown in Washington during the Shrine convention were admonished by Police Judge Hardison not to transgress the laws of humane treatment in their exhibitions of "steer wrestling." A case brought to the humane society against one of the employees of the show was dismissed for want of evidence, but the judge told the prisoner and his employers that as he had seen "steer wrestling" demonstrated in other instances, he regarded it as "cruel and painful treatment" of dumb animals, punishable under the law. He indicated that he would act if proper evidence of such treatment were laid before him.

BLINDED IN THE WAR, HE'S BACK IN COLLEGE

U. of P. Students Extend Ovation and Honors to Hero.

Philadelphia.—Hundreds of enthusiastic University of Pennsylvania students gave a thundering ovation to Lieut. Frank Schoble, blinded war hero, who returned to the university after a lapse of 18 years to complete his college course and who was named a member of the Friars' Senior society, one of the most coveted honors on the campus.

The ovation came during the annual Hey day exercises in Weightman hall, when the classes of the university officially "move up." The applause lasted for three minutes when Schoble's name was read and he was led to a seat near the platform with the other honored students. Membership in the Friars' society is awarded to only the most successful members of the student body.

Lieut. Schoble left the university in 1909 in his junior year to enter business. When the war came he went to an officers' training camp, received a commission and was sent overseas. Five days before the armistice a shrapnel fragment struck him just in front of the temple as he was leading his men into action. The bit of shell tore out the back of both eyes.

After his return to this country he resolved to re-enter college to complete his course. He immediately started to learn the Braille system of reading for the blind and picked it up so rapidly that he is now able to take lecture notes with the ease of a student who can see. His record in the university is excellent. In many of the courses he has received the mark of "distinguished."

In addition to his scholastic work Schoble is a member of the university's debating team. He participated

Tariff Progress in the South

(Southern Tariff Advocate)

The policy of protection for products for the farm and ranch has been vindicated by one of the largest delegations that ever went to the national capitol from the South, during a Republican administration. There were a number of state officials, all of them Democrats, in the delegation and it was headed by the governor-elect of Georgia.

It can truly be said that history has been made the last few weeks in this respect and it can now be claimed for a certainty that an entering wedge has been driven into the old free trade log which has long been in the path of the South's progress and prosperity. When Hon. Clifford M. Walker, governor-elect of Georgia, asked the President not to disturb the existing tariff duties on agriculture, he lifted the question out of politics and put it upon a broad national plane of economic reasoning. We have consistently fought to strengthen this position among the Democrats of the South. It embraces the ideas of founders of the party and reflects the very essence of business wisdom, as history plainly points out that America has developed to her magnificent proportions principally while this policy was in effect.

The governor of South Carolina also joined in the protest against disturbing schedules and with him the commissioners of agriculture from five Southern states. This has indeed opened the way for Democratic Congressmen and Senators to consistently vote in favor of protecting the productive industries of their part of the country.

Men will no longer have the right to accuse those in the national law-making body who vote for tariff duties, with being traitors to their party. The Democracy of the Georgia governor-elect and those who went to Washington with him, cannot be questioned. The Advocate feels justified in saying that headway is being made in a cause which promises to permanently strengthen the economic condition of the South, by placing the tariff question above sectional or party issues.

Provided, this re-recording of marks and brands shall not be required after than once in five (5) years.

HOW OUR REPRESENTATIVES MAKE THE NATION'S LAWS

What happens to the thousands of bills introduced in Congress, and how do those that are finally passed succeed in seeing the light of day?

In our latest booklet of the series on Our Government we tell the story of just how Congress goes about its work, together with some interesting sidelights on the customs which have an important bearing on our legislation.

This booklet is the last of the stories of Our Government. We are contemplating a new series of articles that will be equally interesting and instructive. We shall be glad to put on our list the names of all those in this community who wish to receive them.

We Can't Understand

"America, says George Tchitcherin, the Russian foreign minister, which but yesterday took possession of a gigantic virgin forest continent, turning it by miracle into a country of perfect technique, production and culture, can, better than any one else, understand the similar aspirations and hopes of the people of Russia."
But America cannot understand the Russian idea. Whatever miracle has been wrought in the transformation of the virgin continent has been the miracle of an entire people devoted to hard work, frugality and individual initiative. As our Secretary of Commerce has aptly phrased it:
"Government has a definite relation to industry; not as an agency for production and distribution of commodities, nor as an economic dictator, but as the greatest contributor in the determination of fact and co-operation with industry and commerce in the solution of its problems. Our economic and social system is fundamentally right."
The Russian system has robbed its people of the fruits of their toil; preached communism and the complete abolition of private property while it burdens the people with a huge army which the official caste built up under the Lenin regime and which has sponged the agricultural and working classes to a state of destitution. While Russia is probably the richest country in the world, it is the most helpless and miserable.

Thoughts of Pilsnoll did not bother Sandy's head. The "old man" of the Three Star—bearing the woman's inevitable title for the head of the management, whether young or old, male or female—carried out his long-cherished plans for additional water-supply, for alfalfa planting, for registered bulls and high-grade cows. He studied hard, he got in touch with the state experimental developments, he subscribed for magazines that told of cattle breeding, he sent soils for analysis, and young Ed, coming home from his first term, found, somewhat to his chagrin, that Sandy was far ahead of him in both the theory and practice of ranching.

The days multiplied into weeks and the weeks into months. Sandy received one letter from Brandon that seemed to presage another visit across the line. It was terse, characteristic of the man.

"My Dear Bourke:

"We are still losing three and four-year-olds, and the evidence points to their drifting over toward Pilsnoll. We have traced up some of the links leading from this end. To be quite frank, the authorities of your own county do not seem over-disposed to bother in the matter, and we are talking things in our own hands. We have set a trap for Jim Pilsnoll and have hopes he will walk into it if he is the guilty party.

"The favor I want of you is to tip me off if Pilsnoll appears about to leave the country. We have a tip that he expects to do so before long. If you get wind of this a wire would be much appreciated by me.

"Sincerely yours,

"W. J. BRANDON."

With the founding of the Three Star ranch the lives of the partners had changed a good deal. They held responsibilities, they owned a home and they lived there. None of them, since they were children, had ever known the close companionship of a young girl. Mormon's matrimonial adventures had been foredoomed shipwrecks on the sands of time, his wives marital pirates preying on his good nature and earnings. Molly had leavened their existences in a way that two of them hardly suspected, and the yeast of affection was still working. Each hung to the hope that she might return to the ranch again to stay and each felt that hope was a faint one.

When, at last, there came the news, from Molly herself and from Mrs. Keith, that Keith was coming out to make inspection of his Casey Town properties, that he was traveling in a private car with his son, with Molly and her governess-companion, Miss Nicholson, and that the two latter would get off at Hereford for a visit to the Three Star, Sandy went about with a whistle, Sam breathed sanguine melodies through the harmonica and Mormon beamed all over. The illumination was apparent. Sam told him he looked "all lit up, like a Chinese lantern" and Mormon beamed the more.

Molly's letter was primed with delight. Mrs. Keith's contained regrets that her physicians did not think the journey would be best for her to undertake in the present state of her health, which meant that she feared possible discomforts en route and imagined the ranch as a place where one was fed only on beans, sourdough bread, bull meat and indifferent coffee.

CHAPTER XVI

East and West.

When Miranda Bailey heard the news she announced her determination of coming over to the Three Star to prepare for the visitors.

"I reckon my reputation'll stand it," she said, "seem' I'm older than two of you an' the third is still a married man. Pedro's cookin' is enough to give any easterner dyspepsy. The whole house wants red-din' up; it ain't been swept proper for a year."

Abashed, the partners gave her full away. The ranch-house was scoured from top to bottom. Miranda's car brought over curtains for the windows, flowers for the window-sills, odds and ends that made the place look homely, cheerful, inviting. Pedro was given lessons at the stove that he at first took sulkily, but, being praised and his wages raised, took pride in it.

"He'll do," vouchsafed Miranda at last, this evening before the arrival. "He's so hand at cookies or doughnuts an' never will be, but I'll bring them over from time to time. He can make a pie an' blacuit an' he can broil meat. I've taught him to mash his potatoes with milk 'stead of water an' to put butter in his hot cakes. I'm stayin' over till supper tomorrow to see everything has a good staht. There's room for five—supposed to be six in my car. An' there's four of us an' six to come back. The other car's in use. How we gona' manage it?"

Sandy. "I'm goin' over early on Pronto an' take the white blazed bay along that Molly rode over the Goats' pass."

"Ride in? She won't be dressed for it, travelin' on the train," said Miranda.

"I've got a hunch she will," Sandy answered simply. "They got their own private car. If she ain't, why, Sam can ride the bay back. But me an' Pronto, the bay an' Grit are goin' thataway."

There were certain tones of Sandy's voice that gave absolute finality to his statements. He used them on this occasion. The argument dropped. In a way Sandy was making the matter a test of Molly. If she was as anxious as she wrote to "fork a broncho," if she understood Sandy and he her, she would feel that he would be waiting with her mount for her to return to the ranch western fashion. If not, it meant that she was out of the chrysalis and had become, not the busy bee that belongs to the mesquite and the sage, but a gaudier, less responsible flutterer among eastern flower-beds.

Miranda's caravan started an hour after Sandy left, she driving, Mormon and Sam in the back, each dressed in his best, minus chapeajos and spurs, but otherwise most typically the cowboy and therefore out of place—and feeling it—as they sat stiffly in the leatherette-lined tonneau. Miranda was in starched linen, destitute of all ornament, a dark red ribbon at her throat the only touch of color, looking extremely efficient and, as Sam whispered to Mormon, "a bit stand-offish."

The train rolled in majestically, the private car gleaming with varnish and polished glass and brass, with a white-coated darky flashing white teeth on the platform as the fussy local engine took the detached luxury to the side-track designated for its Hereford location. The flyover was parked and Miranda, Mormon and Sam made one group a little ahead of the others, recognized by the crowd as privileged.

If Wilson Keith, clad in tweeds tailored on Fifth avenue, a little portly, square-faced, confident, a trifle condescending, typified the East, Sandy was the West. A good horse is the incarnation of symmetry, grace and power. Sandy, erect in the saddle, lean and keen, matched all of Pronto's fitness. Man and mount both eminently belonged to the land, shimmering with sage, far-stretching to the mountains, a land that demanded and bred such a combination.

Keith stood by the railing of his platform, the darky ready with the dismounting stool. He surveyed the crowd affably, with the poise of a successful candidate assured of welcome, waving his hand in demi-salute to Sandy, Sam and Mormon, lifting his hat graciously to Miranda Bailey. The man and the car emanated prosperity. Yet, for all the booming of Casey Town, the finding of pay-ore, the sale of shares, Keith's present financial status was not all that he trusted it might be within a short time. It was part of the technique of his profession to assume a mask and manner of financial success, and of late he had worn these until at times they faded him, but they were well designed, well worn, and no one doubted but that Wilson Keith was a man of ready millions.

Keith had dallied with oil, had speculated, plunged, been persuaded to invest heavily. He was beginning to have a vague fear of not being so certain as he would have wished as to which end of the line he had taken, that of the baited hook, or the end that was attached to the reel that automatically plays the fish.

He sold gold and he was buying oil. Others, partners with him in new enterprises in the petroleum field, were making sudden fortunes. His turn had not come yet, but they assured him that his ventures promised even more than those that had enriched them. Faster than gold came out of Casey Town, Keith used it in Oklahoma and Texas.

The engine uncoupled and panted off, leaving the car at rest on the spur-track. The fox-faced secretary came out, held the door open. Someone followed Molly Casey. Sandy surmised it must be Donald Keith, but he had sight for nothing except the slender figure whose radiant face, between a Panama hat and a dustcoat of pongee silk, shone straight at him. It was Molly, but a glorified Molly, woman, not girl. The freckles had gone, the snub nose had become defined, the eyes of Irish blue seemed to have deepened in hue back of their smudgy lashes. The wide mouth was the same, scarlet and soft as cactus blossoms, smiling, opening in a glad cry.

"Sandy!" Her arms went out toward him in greeting over the brass railing. Then Grit, catapulting from ground to platform, with frantic yaps of welcome, fairly bowled over the darky with his mounting block, and bounded up into Molly's embrace. There was confusion on the platform for a moment, with Grit as the nucleus. Another person had come out, evidently Miss Nicholson. She had the general appearance of a white rabbit and the manners of a maternally intentioned but none too efficient hen.

Keith descended first, Molly darted by his extended hand and ran straight to Sandy, who had dismounted.

"I'm going to hug you, and Mormon and Sam, as soon as we get home to the ranch," she cried. "Home! I'm so glad to be here. Pronto, you beauty, and my own bay, Blaze! Do you remember the trip over the mesa, Blaze? How did you know I wanted to ride to Three Star instead of driver?"

"Took a chance," said Sandy. "Do you?" The old woman-shyness had come over him, fighting with his knowledge of the child who had changed into a woman. And the pongee duster deceived him.

"Do I? Didn't I write you I was aching to fork a saddle? Look!"

She unbuttoned the duster with swift fingers and stripped it off, standing revealed in riding togs of smallest black and white checks, coat flaring out from the trim waist, slim, straight legs in breeches and riding boots, a white stock about the slender, rounded neck. She gave one hand to Mormon, the other to Sam, gazing at her in admiration that was radiant and goggle-eyed. Sandy, looking down at her, saw her eyes crinkle at the corners in the old way. Keith and his son joined them, coming from the car, Miss Nicholson hovering behind ingratiatingly.

"Glad to see you, Bourke," he said. "And you, Manning. You, too, Peters. Meet my son, Donald."

The three partners shook hands gravely with the boy, appraising him without his guessing it.

"Glad to see you out west," said Mormon. "We'd sure admire to have you visit us fo' a spell."

"I was hoping for a bid," said young Keith. "Thanks. The car is here, or will be within an hour or two. Father shipped it ahead. Sims wired us it was at the junction. He will drive it over for us to go on to Casey Town as soon as he overhauls it. Then I'll run in from the mines, as soon as Dad can spare me.

"Donald has to get acquainted with a real mining property," said Keith affably. "Molly was certain you would have a horse for her, Bourke. Don't wait round for us. We have to get some supplies and we'll wait in my car till the machine comes. Er—" he looked around, and Miss Nicholson fluttered up—"this is Molly's companion, Miss Nicholson. She goes with you to the ranch. How?"

Sandy indicated the flyover and introduced Miranda Bailey, who had been directing the stowage of the grips and the proper subordination of the porter, who had not seemed appreciative of the flyover.

Molly held out a gloved hand for the reins of the fretful Blaze. Young Keith advanced with the proffer of a palm for her mounting. She shook her head at him.

"Blaze wouldn't know what you were trying to do, Don," she said, she turned the stirrup, set in her foot, grasped mane and horn and raised herself lightly, holding her body close to the bay's withers for a second as he whirled, then lifting to the saddle, firm-seated, with a laugh for Blaze's plungings.

"I see they didn't unteach you ridin' back east," said Mormon admiringly. Miss Nicholson clambered into the flyover beside Miranda Bailey. Sam, Mormon and the grips packed the tonneau, and Keith and his son were left standing by the private car.

Keith was soon surrounded with a crowd, making himself popular, flattering them, until they finally went away convinced that they had all constituted a first-class reception committee to meet the illustrious, the energetic, good-fellow-well-met promoter and engineer of other people's fortunes.

There was not much spoken between Molly and Sandy on the way back to the ranch. She seemed content to breathe in deep the herb-scented air and gaze at the mountains.

Sandy, riding a little to one side, a little back of her, so that he could see her better without appearing to stare, echoed, for the time, her happiness. This was Molly, the girl who had sworn when she told them of her father's death. He could recall the tone of the words at will.

"The d—d road jest slid out from under. He didn't have a h—l-chance!" Molly, who had put arms about his neck and kissed him good-by when she went to school—how long ago that seemed—and said, "Sandy, I don't want to go, but I'll be game."

This was his Molly! The knowledge swept over Sandy and left him tingling. Love came to him, the first, clean white flame of first love, burning like a lamp in the heart of a man. It was for this, he knew, that he had been woman-shy, that he had cherished his own thought of womanhood as something so rare a thought might tarnish it. First love, shorn of boy fallacies, strong, irresistible, protective, passionate.

Game and dainty, tender, true, a girl-woman, partner—what a partner she would make, western-bred . . .

He checked himself there. She was western born, but what had the transplanting done? Would she ever now be satisfied with western ways? She would come to him, Sandy knew that. Whatever he asked her she would not refuse. But would that be fair to her? And he did not want her to come to him out of gratitude. He wanted her nature to fuse with his.

It seemed no time since he had taken her from her saddle and carried her, a tired, heartsore child, in his arms. She must have a fair chance to see if the East, with all it could offer her of amusement and interest, would not outbid the claims of the West. He must wait and watch and hold himself in hand though his love and his knowledge of it thrilled through him, charging him as if with an electric current that strove to close all gaps between him and Molly, struggling over, in mind and body, to complete the circle.

They got to the ranch ahead of the flyover by a scant margin. Miranda Bailey inducted Molly and her chaperon governess into the quarters she had helped prepare for them, Molly giving little cries of delight at the improvements she saw downstairs. Miranda came down first and joined the partners.

"Molly is certainly sweet," she said. "She's grown into a woman an' she's grown away from the old Molly. Can't say as how she's affected none an' her speech an' manners is sure fine. That gel's natchurally got a grand disposition."

"The Nicholson person—her first name is Clarice—is well-meanin' enough. She ain't shifless, but she ain't what you'd call practical. I reckon she does fine in teachin' Molly some things, but she'd be plumb wasted out west. I'll say she never washed out anything bigger than a hankychief or cooked a thing larger'n an egg. An' she c'dn't boss a sick lizard. But she's easy to git along with, I suppose."

"That Donald is a good-lookin' lad," it went on Miranda. "It must take him an awful waste of time to fix his clothes every time he puts 'em on. I don't know how smart he is inside, but he's got some of them movin' picture heroes beat on appearance. I'm wonderin' what Molly thinks about him. As for his father, he's smart enough inside an' out. But he talks too much like a politician to suit me. I'm mighty glad we got cash for our claims. Keith's too slick an' smooth an' smilin' to suit me."

It was a lengthy diatribe from Miranda Bailey, accustomed as they were to hear her state opinions freely. The trio at Three Star had universally come to respect her decisions and also her intuitions, and none of them had felt especially cordial toward Keith as a man, though they considered him good in his profession.

"The writer, Kiplin," said Sandy, "wrote a poem about East an' West, sayin' that never the two c'd meet. Ef Keith tries to fangligger Molly out of anything that's comin' to her by rights, why, I reckon that's one time the West an' East is goin' to meet—an' mebbe lap over a bit. So fur, he's put money in our pockets. Here's Molly."

"I'm goin' home," said Miranda, as the girl entered the room. "I've got you started an' I'll run over once in a while to see how Pedro is makin' out."

Certified Seed Increases Yield

Favorable Results Obtained by Potato Growers Should Encourage General Use.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

While there has been an increasing tendency on the part of potato producers to use certified seed during the last few years, the favorable results that have been obtained from the use of such seeds should encourage a much more general use of certified seed, says the United States Department of Agriculture. A number of states are now producing certified seed and have records showing the comparative yield from certified fields with the average yield of the state. In New York state yields for ordinary fields averaged 103 bushels an acre, while the certified fields yielded 223 bushels an acre. In Minnesota the yield in favor of the certified seed, over that of the ordinary fields, was 60 bushels an acre, and in Pennsylvania certified fields yielded 303 bushels while the ordinary fields produced only 100 bushels an acre. Reports from other states show similar increase in yield from the certified fields in comparison to the average of the state.

Decided Improvement. Certified seed sent from Michigan to several corn belt states for experimental and demonstrational tests in 1921 showed a decided improvement in yield over the local seed. In Iowa the increase in yield secured from this Michigan certified seed was 61.2 bushels, in Indiana 21 fields showed an increase of 63 bushels, in Illinois 61 fields yielded 44 bushels increase, while in Ohio, where the great part of the acreage of the state is planted with certified seed, the increase due to the Michigan seed was only 2.6 bushels. In two tests conducted in Delaware the Michigan certified seed averaged 68½ bushels more, an acre than home-grown seed.

Good Season for Both. Last season was a good one for both producers and buyers of certified seed. The large production of certified seed has brought the price so low that although reports show that a premium of 50 to 100 per cent is being paid for certified stock the grower is at least getting a little profit out of his work, while the buyer is able to buy this seed at a reasonable cost.

Little to Be Gained by Cultivation of Alfalfa

So long as the stand is satisfactory and the plants are making good growth there is little to be gained by cultivating alfalfa, says the United States Department of Agriculture. A slight increase in yield is sometimes obtained by such treatment, but experiments have shown that it is not ordinarily enough to pay the additional cost, and the life of the stand is prolonged but little, if any.

Under certain conditions, however, cultivation of this crop may be worth while. Where irrigation waters leave a crust of silt on the fields the use of the harrow to break it up seems advisable. Also where irrigated alfalfa is pastured it is sometimes a good practice to use a harrow to loosen up the soil, especially if it is heavy-textured. When weeds and grass threaten to choke out the alfalfa the life of the stand may be profitably prolonged for a year or two by harrowing.

The best implement for this purpose is the alfalfa harrow, which is a modification of the spring-tooth harrow. The spito-tooth harrow may be used on the lighter soils, but is of little use on the heavy soils. The disk harrow is very liable to prove injurious.

Orchard Intercropping Secondarily Proposition

From the year that an orchard is first set out, intercropping is a secondary proposition and should be treated as such—the trees come first. It has usually been considered desirable to make use of the land between the trees for the first few years from the standpoint of increased profit. Furthermore, a cultivated crop insures cultivation of the trees.

Legume Is Satisfactory Crop for Poultry Flock

One of the most satisfactory crops to grow on the ground where poultry ranges is the legume. Clover or alfalfa are ideal crops for this purpose. A half acre of ground seeded to either one of these legumes will furnish enough green feed for a hundred or more chickens.

Deep Corn Cultivation Will Cut Many of Roots

When the stalks of corn are 18 inches high, the roots have met across a three-and-one-half-foot row. Deep cultivation at this time will cut many of the roots and check the growth of the plants. A good rule to follow is to cultivate deep early in the season and shallow later when the plants are larger.

Ear Tag System Is Practical for Flocks

Especially Used for Identifying Each Individual.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

An ingenious and simple method of marking farm breeding animals has been used successfully with sheep for eight years by Cooper Curtice of the United States Department of Agriculture at the farm of the bureau of animal industry near Vienna, Va. The system is especially adapted for identifying quickly the extent of pure blood of individuals in herds and flocks being improved with purebred sires. Each animal is labeled with an aluminum tag bearing a number. Females are labeled on the right ear; males on the left. The young are given the dam's number preceded by 1 (or by 10 if the dam's number is a digital number) if it is the first young born; preceded by 2 if the second born, and so on.

This system is quite practical for farm flocks of sheep of less than 100 head, and for cattle. If a purebred sire is being used to grade up a herd or flock of nondescript females, the system affords a very good ever-present record of the grade of animals obtained. For example: The first-born young of female No. 25 will be marked 125. Animal No. 125 is one-half grade. The young of 125 will become 1125, and will be a three-quarters grade. No. 11125 will be seven-eighths, and No. 111125, fifteen-sixteenths. To illustrate further: No. 3125 is the third young of the first young of 25 and a three-quarters grade.

When there is no longer space for additional figures on the label, the sixth or seventh generation may be marked with letters following the number of the original dam. Applied to female No. 25, the young of the sixth generation may be marked 25A; next generation, 25B, and so on. If desired, the sire number may be placed on the reverse side of the label.

This method of identifying animals may be used in conjunction with an ear-notching system, which further identifies them. A good ear-notching plan enables the owner to replace, with assurance as to correct identity, any ear tags that may be lost.

Eradicate Weed Plants by Preventing Growth

There is only one way to eradicate noxious perennial plants such as wild morning glories or pea vine growths, or whatever kind they may be; and that is to prevent them from making any leaf growth during the last half of summer, or after about July 1. Whatever method you find most convenient for doing this will be the most practical method for you to apply.

Some such plants can be eradicated by pasturing the last half of summer; other methods are to keep the land cultivated the last half of summer, or to keep them cut down with a hoe when in some cultivated crop, such as corn; another method is to smother with straw or by growing some rank growing crop; another is to keep the land mowed close to the ground frequently.

Lack of Cleanliness Is Cause of Calf Disorders

Nearly all disorders or diseases of calves, says the United States Department of Agriculture, are caused either directly or indirectly by lack of cleanliness. Filth, whether it is in feed, pens, bedding, or stalls and utensils, is dangerous to the health of the calf. To be on the safe side use nothing but clean milk (sweet or sour), scald the pails or sterilize them with steam, remove old feed from the boxes and clean them daily. Filth and dirt are the natural breeding places of many bacteria that will cause disturbances in the young animal's stomach. Freedom from filth usually means freedom from disease.

Best to Dehorn Calves When but Few Days Old

Dehorning young calves is best done when the calf is a few days old. Clip the hair with a pair of shears where the horn will appear. Rub the button with caustic potash until the dead layer of the skin comes off and it is about ready to bleed. The end of the stick of caustic potash that you apply to the horn should first be moistened and the stick held with a cloth so as not to burn the hand.

If for any reason the operation has been delayed for several weeks the button can be cut off with a sharp knife and the caustic potash applied to kill it. This will kill the horn, but it is better to do it before the calf is a few weeks old.

Pigs Are Benefited by Allowance of Charcoal

Pigs are always benefited by having frequent access to charcoal. The following method of preparing charcoal is very satisfactory: A mass of cobs are raked together and set on fire. When the cobs are burning briskly oats are poured over the fire until it is all but smothered. In a short time the oats will be well blackened. The fire should then be put out by scattering the burning cobs. The cobs may continue burning but the fire in the oats will quickly die out. When cold, the pigs should be allowed free access to the burned oats. They will greedily search out every particle.

Diamond Figures in History.
Thomas Pitt, the grandfather of the great English statesman who finally drove Napoleon the Great from power, made the fortune of his house, however, by the sale of the Regent diamond to the regent of France early in the eighteenth century, the price of Orleans paying more than half a million dollars for it. The stone also made the fortune of Napoleon, as the directory pledged it to the Dutch government in 1800 for 6,000,000 francs, thereby raising the money with which Napoleon conducted the great campaign which won him the battle of Marengo.

How Ground Affects Wind.
A curious instance of the effect of the shape of the ground upon the wind blowing over it was noted by a Frenchman experimenting with kites in France. When a north wind floated the kite the latter kept its balance easily, but when the wind came from the south or southeast the kite pitched and bobbed in a very irregular manner. The explanation was furnished by the character of the surface over which the wind had passed. Coming from the north, it had a plain country to blow over, but coming from the south and southeast it passed over broken hills, which set it into irregular puffs and undulations.—Washington Star.

Origin of Navajo Blankets.
The origin of the famous Navajo blanket is picturesque. At the time of the Spanish conquest, the Navajo tribe of Indians was too insignificant to be mentioned. It grew, however, rather rapidly, and in raids upon the Pueblos took many of the latter prisoners. From these (the Pueblos had long been weavers of native cotton) they picked up the textile art; and then stealing sheep from the Spaniards, they inaugurated the weaving of the woolen blanket. Only the women of the tribe were weavers, and in the early days did it largely as an artistic recreation, just as the women of civilization do embroidery or tatting.

Original Funeral Floral Pieces.
Mario Lloyd, a favorite English comedian, was stricken dead while on the stage in the midst of her number. The crowd attending the funeral was so great that traffic was seriously interfered with. There were more than 500 floral offerings, many of them unique. For instance, one represented a panel of white flowers in which the music of her closing notes were worked out in violets. One of her favorite songs was "The Empty Cage," and one of the floral pieces represented the empty cage with the door open and the bird flown.
