BONUS BILL PASSES MAJORITY ENOUGH TO COVER VETO

Washington, D. C., April 23.—The senate, following in the footsteps of the house, passed the soldiers' bonus insurance bill today by a majority sufficient to carry it over the president's veto. The vote was 67 to 17.

Both senate and house bills provide cash payments to veterans whose adjusted compensations would not exceed $50; twenty-year endowment insurance policies based on adjusted service pay at the rate of $1 a day for domestic service and $1.25 a day for overseas service; provision is made in the insurance feature under which the veteran after a period of two years from date of issue of the certificate could obtain loans from banks up to 50 per cent of the current cash value of the certificate.

Corn planting has begun in earnest and gardening is in full blast.

Representatives of the Union Sunday Schools put in action affiliated schools at this place and Parsons Sunday. This is a step in the right direction—let the good work go on.

Henry Helms, lately a miner of Miami, Ariz., is again at home with the A. B. Helms family.

Bro. Kny of Carrizozo preached to a good audience here on Easter Sunday. Either he or Rev. McPherson will fill the pulpit next Sabbath in the afternoon.

Uncle Orin Davis is interested in external improvements. Just watch his little cottage shine with its many coats and colors.

Hal Young was summoned before the grand jury Monday. It is assumed he can throw some valuable light on many transgressors of the law, most potent of which is that related to recent bank failures.

Wm. MacDonald, our congenial neighbor, is engineering this time the construction of a road to his domicile to be up in the vicinity of the mining claim of which he and Billy Stephens are interested.

The following pupils are on the honor roll: Roy Hust, Albert, Arthur, and Alma Helms. All are eighth graders except Arthur and will receive promotion to high school this term.

A. B. Helms has just completed an irrigation well on his place which promises to furnish the necessary supply of water—eight feet now standing in it.

Earl McDaniel had his usual weekly caper, taking active part in many social functions Saturday and Sunday, returning to his duties as "wielder of the rod" at the Parsons school.

Chas. Le Baron, believing in the divine injunction, "Let your light so shine," etc. has installed an effective light to the filling station.

Earl and Desie McDaniel, A. B. Zumwalt, and L. M. Stone attended the Odd Fellow's social Thursday night at Carrizozo, enjoying it immensely.

San Patricio Locals

(C. Hightower)

Death stalked in our midst during the past two weeks, visiting the homes of four families from each of which it plucked a flower. Antonio Sanchez, Raymond Sanchez, Jacobo Salas and F. Flores each lost an infant girl, the last two on the same day. The triple funeral at the little church was quite impressive.

The irrigated valleys of the Hondo and Ruidoso at this time are like ribbons of delicate colors and fragrance—it is apple blossom time.

The slogan of "let the women do the work" applies to this section at the present time, most of the male population is either at court in Carrizozo or engaged in the lambing camps on sheep ranches.

Will Lapoint, the modest and unassuming editor of the Las Cruces Citizen has nominated Judge Holloman of Santa Fe for governor, but let's not perpetuate men in office but infuse a little new blood into the veins of the party. The Republicans of New Mexico have no lack of good and capable men for this office and as this is fine indoor sport and nominations are in order I arise to nominate Captain Jay Turley, formerly of San Juan county, but now a resident of Albuquerque.

Captain Turley is well known to the people of this state as one who has done much to develop irrigation projects, agricultural possibilities, is an expert translator and thoroughly proficient on Spanish and Mexican land titles and a few years ago was a principal in settling the boundary disputes between New Mexico, Texas and the republic of Mexico. He served overseas in the engineer's corps; and for some time past, has had charge of rehabilitation work for disabled veterans.

"Sonny"

Unfortunately for ambitious aspirants who believe screen fame can be won in a day, Richard Barthelmess now confesses that he haunted motion picture studios in the old days before he secured a job—as an extra. Now many of the companies that turned him down are offering him fabulous salaries; but he is sticking to independent productions, the latest of which is "Sonny" which will be shown at the Crystal Theatre, on Tuesday and Wednesday, Apr. 29 and 30.

Easter Cantata a Success

The Easter Cantata at the Crystal Theatre Sunday evening reflected great credit on all who took part in the program. Every number commended itself to the appreciation it so richly deserved and we would make special mention of each number, but space forbids. Mrs. Ziegler deserves much credit for the success of the undertaking.

Major and Mrs. Warner were over from Fort Stanton on Wednesday to attend the funeral services over the remains of the late Mrs. Mary Maxwell. During their girlhood days, Mrs. Warner and Mrs. Maxwell were colleagues in the University of West Virginia.

Callie and Frank McDaniel enjoyed a few square meals at home and returning Monday to take up bachelor life on the ranch.

Capitan News Notes

(By Supt. F. S. Copeland)

On Saturday evening, May 3, the sophomore class will present two one-act plays in the assembly room of the high school. They are "The Burglar," one of the funniest sketches ever written, and "Two Jay Detectives," a slap-stick farce. For specialties, Helene Titsworth will give a series of dances, Mrs. Sturri will sing, and Mrs. Copeland read.

The community chorus, composed of Mesdames Stuart, Garrod, Patterson, Osborn, Copeland, and Titsworth, and Messrs. Stuart, Robbins, Bates and Patterson gave three programs on Easter Sunday. At ten a. m. they sang at the Fort Stanton Amusement Hall. In the afternoon the program was given at Lincoln. In the evening the services were held in ward eleven. Large crowds attended all the services and the excellent music was much appreciated.

"The Hunchback of Notre Dame" was shown at Fort Stanton last Monday evening under auspices of the K. of C. A large crowd attended and certainly well paid by witnessing an excellent screen version of Victor Hugo's masterful creation, one of the world's best. The part of the hunchback, played by Lon Chaney, was a remarkable exhibition of an exceedingly difficult role. His make-up and manner was a triumph of modern stage technique. May the Fort bring to us many of such masterpieces.

Forest Protection Week will be fittingly observed by an appropriate program at the high school this Friday evening. A good program will be given free, after which refreshments will be served. Patrons are especially invited to attend. There will be given also an exhibit of grade handiwork, and home economics sewing. Several pupils are entering the essay contest.

The baccalaureate address will be given on Sunday evening, May 11, by Rev. Thompson. Special music will be provided. Services will be held at the building now being used as a church.

Educational News

(By Louise H. Coe)

We were pleased to have Mr. D. W. Rockey, State High School Inspector visit the Corona, Carrizozo, Capitan, Lincoln and Hondo High Schools this week. Mr. Rockey reports that the grade of work being done in our high schools is up to standard.

School budgets for the year 1924-25 will be made up on May 28. If you are not satisfied with the equipment in your school, the condition of the school grounds or building, please see the local directors, that they may report needed changes to the budget auditors before the above date. All equipment and repairs to your school building are paid for by a direct tax on your district.

Mr. Arthur, Supervisor of the Lincoln Forest, will award cash prizes for the best and second best essays written on the subject "What I know About the National Forest." Send essays direct to Mr. Arthur, Alamogordo.

The grand jury assembled on Monday morning and up to the present time no report has been made. Judge Mechem and his official associates disposed of a few minor cases and after the grand jury's report is turned in, business will begin in earnest.

A valuable article concerning the Easter happenings at Fort Stanton will appear next week. Shortage of space prevented its publication in detail.

"Some Time We'll Understand"

After a long and patiently endured period of suffering during which time every available means was brought to bear to relieve her pain, Mrs. Mary L. Maxwell of this place, passed away Tuesday afternoon at 2:20.

The funeral services were held at the Methodist Church Wednesday afternoon at 3:30, conducted by Rev. W. R. McPherson, pastor of the church; assisted by a choir composed of Mrs. R. E. Lemon, the Misses Hilary Cooper, Allis and Margie Branum; W. W. Stadtman, C. Branum, with Mrs. D. S. Donaldson at the piano. The soul-stirring selections of "Nearer My God to Thee," "No Matter What the Test," "Some Time We'll Understand," and a solo, "There's a Reaper," by Miss Cooper were sung with reverential effect.

The pastor read many and various promises from sacred scripture which gave assurances of eternal life; spoke in tender, loving, terms of the life of the deceased and offered words of sympathy and consolation to those left behind.

Mrs. Mary L. Warden was born at Wardensville, West Virginia, July 9, 1888. She received her education in the West Virginia University and came to New Mexico in the year of 1909. In 1912, she was united in marriage to Mr. Frank Maxwell and since coming west, continually resided in this locality. Her disposition was one which continually increased her list of friends and none knew her, but to love and admire her. The sad passing of this estimable lady is one of the many cases in which we find it a puzzling task to understand, but as the beautiful song sung by the choir reminded us and in which we found a fitting head for this article, "Some Time We'll Understand," we must be content with what the title suggests.

After the services, the remains were escorted to the local station by pallbearers C. E. Freeman, D. A. Saunders, F. A. English, B. L. Stimmel, F. E. Richard and A. L. Burke, where they were placed on No. 4 and accompanied by the sorrowing husband and two children, began the long journey to Wardensville, where they will rest in the family cemetery. To hearts saddened by this loss, the sympathy of the entire community is extended.

Phil Blanchard has made several trips to Carrizozo from the Gallo-Macho sheep ranch lately. He makes great claims for his locality and if conditions look as robust and healthy as he does, there should be a grand rush for the country near the Gallo-Macho.

Fort Stanton 9; Carrizozo 2

Now, folks, that's all wrong! At least, it seems wrong to us, but we are offering no alibi. The best team (at that time) won, but here's some good news for you:

There will be a return game next Sunday afternoon on the local grounds; be there, all of you and help us enjoy the revenge that will surely be ours. We need you and we need your moral support.—We need ROOTERS! Give us the necessary things and we will give you a winning ball club.

Respectfully yours,
One of them.

SAFETY FIRST MEETING HELD AT TUCUMCARI

Tucumcari American:

The regular quarterly meeting of the El Paso & Southwestern Safety First Committee was held in the office of Trainmaster Eifort last Saturday morning, with Chairman C. D. Beeth presiding and a full membership present. Complaint having been made that the Western Union gauges were leaving poles too close to the track at some points along the line, a committee was appointed to look after the matter and stated that the company had moved the poles to a safe distance.

Trainmen had made complaint at a previous meeting that the coal loading tipple used by the company loading coal at Polly was too close to the track for safety. At the meeting it was reported that the tipple had been moved to a proper distance.

A letter from Signal Engineer Geo. W. Crowherd, relative to block signal 1713 was read and the suggestions were referred to Trainmaster Nash and Signal Supervisor Herberger for investigation and recommendations.

Recommendation was made by the Eastern Division Safety Committee that the Motive Power Department be asked to make adjustment of pocket castings on the front end of couplers on locomotives so that the pilot would not interfere with the under-cut coupler on the cars.

The Chairman read to the committee, a circular from the American Railway Association Safety Section relative to a careful crossing campaign being inaugurated on the railroads of the country and requested members of the committee to keep in mind the suggestions outlined. Great efforts are being made to reduce to a minimum, accidents due to careless automobile driving on railroad crossings and it is the desire of the Eastern Division Safety First Committee to co-operate in every way possible to the end that the E. P. & S. W. will be at the head of the list of roads which have reduced crossing accidents to a minimum. All personal injuries which have occurred since last meeting were discussed.

Carrizozo Woman's Club

Regular meeting of the Woman's Club was held at the home of Miss Ella Brickley, Apr. 18. Hostesses, Mesdames Adams, Coldren and McDonald.

Mrs. Adams and Mrs. Hoffman had charge of the program which was delightfully given by a group of small children.

The next regular meeting will be at the home of Mrs. B. L. Stimmel, May 3.

Our Club had a large representation at the 3rd District Meeting at Tularosa. Great benefit was derived and many good suggestions offered for the improvement of the Club.

The offering at the Easter Cantata amounted to $22.06; expenses, $6.75; music, $4.00; lights, $2.75; net profit, $11.51.

We wish to thank the people for the splendid contribution and for the interest manifested by their presence.

IN LATE DISPATCHES

DOINGS AND HAPPENINGS THAT MARK THE PROGRESS OF THE AGE

Three members of Northern Pacific engine crews were injured near Winston, Mont., when one helper engine backed into another which had stopped to make repairs. The injured were Engineer Eugene La Bonte and Peter Lehne, and Fireman George Matson. They were brought to a Helena hospital. None was fatally injured, physicians stated.

In order that tramps on their post-winter exodus from California may not carry the foot-and-mouth disease into Utah, A. A. Hinkley, commissioner of agriculture, asked officials of the Union Pacific, Southern Pacific and Western Pacific railroads to have all trains stopped at the Nevada-California line so that the transients might be subjected to disinfection.

Six new infections of the foot and mouth disease were received in reports in one day by the State Department of Agriculture from the branch offices in the quarantined districts. Figures by the department show the total number of livestock destroyed to date in combating the epidemic is 40,001, consisting of 311 herds. The total is made up of 25,110 cattle, 9,548 hogs, 14,004 sheep and 230 goats.

The North Platte river, which last September 21 swallowed and retained the bodies of a dozen or more victims of the Cole creek disaster to Burlington passenger train No. 50, has given up the body of Charles Guenther, prominent resident of Douglas. Receding waters of the recent flood in the river left the body high and dry on a sandbar twenty miles below the scene of the wreck, where it was found by Robert Hints, section foreman for the Burlington.

There is not a single animal in the Denver Union stockyards infected with foot and mouth disease and there has been no trace of the disease there according to the report of state and federal inspectors which officially lifted the embargo against outgoing shipments of live stock from Denver. The lifting of the embargo came after a two weeks' ban on outgoing shipments of live stock in which time the inspectors conducted a number of tests and inspections and gave particular attention to a number of calves which were suspected for a time of having become infected with the disease.

WASHINGTON

Sumner Welles, American commissioner to the Dominican republic, has been instructed by President Coolidge to offer the friendly assistance of the United States for establishment of peace in Honduras.

Burplus electric power from the proposed Boulder Canon dam on the Colorado river would find a market in Los Angeles, T. A. Pantor, electrical engineer of the Los Angeles power and light bureau told the House irrigation committee. Pantor testified that the city, if its present growth continued, would require 1,000,000 horsepower by 1935 or 1940. He said that by 1930 California's available power resources would be developed to the limit.

The United States Senate by vote of 72 to 3 has voided the "gentlemen's agreement" between United States and Japan.

The Johnson immigration bill was passed by the House. The measure would practically bar Japanese, would fix quotas at 2 per cent, based on the 1930 census, and would provide for examination of immigrants overseas.

Appointment of Albert B. Fall as secretary of the interior was worth $300,000 to him, the late Jake Hanson told H. W. Ballard, Los Angeles oil man, Ballard testified before the Senate oil committee. "It was to be paid $150,000 down and the balance over a period of four years," Ballard said.

Grover Cleveland Bergdoll, millionaire draft dodger, voluntarily relinquished and forfeited his rights of citizenship when he fled the country after his conviction by a court-martial of avoiding the draft, according to a ruling made by Raymond F. Crist, commissioner of naturalization. "Bergdoll is forever incapable of holding any office of trust or profit under the United States or of exercising any rights of citizenship."

Some action designed to encourage participation by women in the coming election was predicted by leaders attending the thirty-third Continental Congress of the Daughters of the American Revolution. President Coolidge, addressing the convention, pointed out that for the first time in a national election the women of the United States have known for an advance that they would have a voice in the decision and urged that they make their right of suffrage to the fullest extent.

FOREIGN

More than 25,000 Japanese students are ready to migrate from Manchuria and enter in various numbers of ships according to instructions received by the Department of the Interior.

Categorical denial of existence of a Japanese-Russian defensive alliance and of a Franco-Japanese agreement on Pacific and China issues, as reported by the European press, was contained in a recent statement by the foreign office at Tokio.

Germany accepts the Dawes reparations report in principle, it was announced officially in Berlin. The chief condition is that an international loan is granted enabling Germany to meet her financial obligations. Announcement came after a meeting of the state premiers and the cabinet.

Russia will not be hurried into any agreement with England on the ground that the MacDonald government might fall during prolonged negotiations, declared M. Zinoviev, chairman of the executive committee of the Third International, speaking on behalf of that body to the Leningrad soviet in Moscow.

The reparations commission has officially approved in Paris the report submitted to it by the experts commission on the German reparations question. The recommendation of the commission is that the report be approved conditional upon the acceptance of it by Germany. The commission was unanimous in registering its approval.

Three rebel generals, three colonels, four lieutenant colonels and one major have been tried by drum-head court-martial and executed at Ciudad Victoria, state of Tamaulipas, according to information received in Mexico City from General Rafael Moreno, commander of the Ciudad Victoria garrison. The generals executed were Mario Rendón, Alfredo Saucedo and Bevero Reza.

Hugo Stinnes' fortune is left to his widow, Claire Stinnes, who is admonished to consult her sons and daughters in all things affecting the magnate's private and business affairs. The eldest son, Dr. Edmund Hugo Stinnes, will direct the properties in the Ruhr and Rhineland, while Hugo Hermann Stinnes will oversee the family's interests at the headquarters in Berlin and care for the shipping and foreign properties.

Coal miners from the Ruhr carried the body of Hugo Stinnes, late German industrial leader, from his private villa in Grunwald, to the crematory to the accompaniment of melodies played by their own band, while a miners' chorus alternately chanted dirges and sang Westphalian folk songs. Two numbers played were the "Wedding March" from Lohengrin, and the Rhineland song, both of which were favorites with Herr Stinnes. Simplicity marked the funeral services.

GENERAL

Thomas Ruane, 17, died in St. Louis from gunshot wounds received from the gun of Deputy Constable John Cosmetos, after Ruane's car had run down and seriously injured Marie Walsh, 16. Cosmetos said he fired on Ruane when Ruane sped away from the scene of the accident.

Congressman John W. Langley of Kentucky pleaded not guilty in the United States District Court at Covington, Ky., to an indictment charging him with having conspired to defraud the government in the alleged removal of whiskey from a warehouse at Lawrenceburg, Ky., in 1921.

Charles Dismour, a farmer of Bridgeport, Conn., was arrested in Pittsburgh upon charges of arson and larceny. Dismour is accused of having locked 248 head of cattle in his barn near Bridgeport and of setting fire to the barn. The cattle were burned to death and $12,000 insurance was collected, according to the officer.

Over the protest of attorneys for the accused, that Gov. Cameron Morrison of North Carolina had cancelled extradition papers which he had issued, a detective of the Columbus, Ohio, police department, aided by Chief of Police George T. Featherstone of Chapel Hill, kidnaped Carl Wiegand, Chapel Hill, N. C. attorney, and spirited him out of town.

Another informal agreement between the United States and Canada has been added to the list of such "treaties" with the conclusion of a conference at Ely, Minn., between Forester William Darby of the Canadian Forest Service and Supervisor Calvin Dahlgren of the Superior National Forest, which is under the jurisdiction of the United States Forest Service.

Directors of the Agricultural Credit Corporation, at a conference in Minneapolis, voted $1,000,000 to promote diversified farming in the Northwest. Their action was taken at the request of President Coolidge, who is anxious that farmers of the spring wheat area obtain some of the aid provided in the Norbeck-Burkhead agricultural relief bill, which was killed in the Senate.

Charged with using the mails to defraud, Steven C. Clow, editor and treasurer, and A. S. Brown, advertising manager of the periodical Broadway Brevities, were arrested in New York city. The arrests were the first in what was said to be a government campaign against alleged sexual and blackmailing publications. The charges against Clow and Brown state that they used their periodical in an attempt to cause the Palmer School of Chiropractic at Davenport, Iowa, late advertising in the paper.

EXCLUSION BILL EXCITES JAPAN

JAPANESE "JINGO" NEWSPAPERS DEMANDS RESIGNATION OF MINISTRY

PRESS TALKS OF WAR

NEW UNITED STATES BILL IS CHALLENGE, SAYS TOKIO JOURNAL

Tokio.—The Yomiuri Choho, an afternoon newspaper representing the jingo, declared that the action of the American Congress in passing the exclusion legislation amounts to a challenge to Japan. "It says the nation must prepare for whatever may come, even war. The Kokuin demands the immediate resignation of the ministry. Numerous public bodies, including the Associated Chambers of Commerce of Japan, the American-Japan Society and the Japan Economic Society have called urgent meetings to discuss the immigration situation.

Officials do not deny the probabilities of unpleasant popular reactions, and it is fully expected that the opposition will make all possible political capital from the government's immigration defeat. The action of Congress comes as a blow in the heat of an election campaign throughout Japan.

Inflammatory campaign speeches, public indignation meetings, resolutions and bitter editorials are all expected as an aftermath of Washington's exclusion legislation. The government, however, is determined to take a vigorous stand against any policy of retaliation. It asserts it will do its utmost to curb popular indignation and maintain the fullest possible friendly relations with America.

The Yomiuri Shimbun, usually one of the mildest of Tokyo newspapers, says editorially: "Congress insulted the Japanese nation in the most public manner. Japan will not hesitate to respond to the challenge. She will remember the insult and take the first opportunity for retaliation."

Viscount Goto, former premier, said: "While many of our people are most resentful and indignant against America, now is the time for us Japanese to face this grave situation calmly and thoughtfully."

"It is contrary to Japan's ideals to meet insult with insult and violence with violence. Moreover, we cannot believe that the action of Congress actually represents the will of the American people. This action contradicts American ideals as we understand them. I believe Congress eventually will be compelled to reverse itself."

Veterans' Bureau Officials Indicted

Baltimore, Md.—Indictments charging conspiracy to defraud the government were returned by a federal grand jury here against Charles R. Forbes, former director of the veterans' bureau; Charles R. O'Leary, former assistant director of the bureau and chief of the supply division; and Nathan Thomson, president of the Thomson & Kelly Company of Boston.

Trunk Murder Suspect Released

Los Angeles, Calif.—Release from custody of Bert C. Webster, forest ranger, was ordered by the district attorney here on condition that he furnish $500 bail as a material witness in the case of Mrs. Margaret B. Willis, charged by a coroner's jury with the murder of Dr. Benjamin Baldwin, whose body was found in a trunk. Webster told the police he assisted Mrs. Willis in taking a trunk by automobile to a point on San Fernando road, where it was thrown down a ravine.

Sterling School Destroyed by Fire

Sterling, Colo.—In the eighth of a series of fires that have destroyed eight Colorado schools in the past year, the Sterling Junior High school was burned with a loss of $125,000. More than 500 pupils and teachers fled out of the building without accident after discovery of the fire, the origin of which is undetermined. A strong wind, blowing before it a mist of snow, prevented the local volunteer fire department together with students and townspeople, from stopping progress of the blaze.

Crash Delays World Flight

Anchorage, Alaska.—Continuation of the flight around the world by the United States army aviators will be delayed at least a week in order that a new engine may be installed in the cruiser Seattle, which was forced down near Cape Iyvak, according to a wireless message received here.

Big Area Open for Filing

Washington.—The opening of approximately 341,000 acres of public land in Arizona, Colorado, Idaho, Nevada and Wyoming to homestead and desert entry has been announced at the Interior Department. Through surveys and reconveys, portions of the public domain in those states will be opened to entry and official plats of the land surveyed are to be filed in local land offices, which will announce later the exact dates when the tract will be available for entry.

A track meet for all the high schools of the vicinity is being arranged by Teachers' College to be held in Silver City, Friday, May 2.

Rumors in Farmington are to the effect that the Midwest company is now making plans for a refinery in that city to take care of the crude oil from the surrounding fields.

A new ten-ton motor road roller arrived in Silver City last week and will be used in the highway work in Grant county. The new roller is the largest of the kind ever shipped into New Mexico.

Albert Millon, an employee of the White Pine Lumber Company at Bernalillo, N. M., was drowned while driving ties in the Rio De Las Bajas, fifty miles northwest of Bernalillo, in the heart of the mountains.

At the recent election held at the school house of Old Albuquerque, the $70,000 school bond issue carried by a vote of 381 to 8. The money will be used for the schools of Old Town, Santa Barbara and North Fourth street.

The eight miles of new highway between Santa Rita and San Lorenzo has been completed and is one of the finest stretches of road in the state. The road cost over $125,000 and opens up a large area of country which contains some of the finest scenery in the state.

"Navajo Pete," said to be the oldest Indian in the United States, passed away at his home on the San Juan river, at the age of 116 years. He has been an interesting figure around Farmington for years and enjoyed the confidence and respect of his white acquaintances.

A track team from the Montezuma College will enter the Great Plains intercollegiate track and field meet, which is to be held in Canyon City, Texas, April 20. Seven colleges are entered in the meet. The Montezuma team will include Pipkin, Brown, Woodruff and Maddox.

Reports just given out in Quay county, state that the total value of the cotton and broomcorn crop for the year of 1923 amounted to over $222,000. This is said to be a remarkable showing in view of the fact that it was a dry year and many of the crops of the county were almost total failures.

The first test well of the Tigner-Windsor Company was spudded on the Grant Keyes location east of Artesa across the Pecos river. Astmard rig is now on the ground and drilling will go on both day and night until the well is completed, which will probably be in about sixty days, barring trouble of any kind.

The big alum deposits twenty-five miles north of Silver City have been taken over by New York capitalists and steps toward extensive development are now being made. Thomas Donally, prominent mining engineer, was in Silver City last week and made a good inspection of what is known as Alum mountain, an area two miles square, of patented land, known to be rich in aluminous sulphate. The sulphate, once turned into chloride, would be readily salable at $200 a ton.

J. C. Floersheim, editor of the Springer Times, was the successful candidate for mayor of Springer at the recent election held last week, his opponent being J. M. Alldredge. Mr. Floersheim was the only candidate on the Citizens' ticket to have any opposition, but won out by a good majority. Only about one-half of the normal vote of the city was polled. Other officers elected were as follows: Miss Fannie McCall, city clerk; Dr. L. A. Thompson, Theodore Lopez, Ralph Calley and Julian Arclano, trustees.

At an enthusiastic meeting of the Roosevelt Chamber of Commerce, plans were discussed for the building of a big swimming pool for Roosevelt in the city park just north of Springer river. If the present plans are carried out the pool will be one of the finest in the entire state and when completed will cost over $8,000.

The value of the estate left by the late Angelica, Constance Howden, wife of the Rt. Rev. F. B. Howden, Episcopal bishop of New Mexico, was reported by the Albuquerque Probate Court to be about $70,000. Judge W. W. McClellan issued an order in the court fixing $17,000 as the amount subject to inheritance tax.

Ten boys, all residents of Hope, ranging in age from 10 to 15 years, were arrested last week charged with stealing merchandise from two stores. All being too young to go to trial in the District Court, the cases were heard before Judge Brice, who acted as juvenile judge. Most of the boys pleaded guilty to the charges against them and were given suspended sentences by the judge.

Las Cruces was selected as the convocation city for the New Mexico Democratic assembly on June 2 by the state central committee in session in Santa Fe. Las Vegas contested Las Cruces for the convention, but later withdrew in favor of the southern New Mexico city.

Alfredo Apodaca was killed at Albuquerque, his throat being cut with a sharp instrument, probably a razor. His jaguar tail and whiskers were severed. His stepson, Manuel Vigil, was arrested in connection with the slaying.

AFTER THE BATTLE

Franklin's Vegetable Compound

Rockester, Minnesota.—"I had a very serious operation and it seemed as if I could not get my health back after it. I suffered with pain almost constantly. My sister came to help take care of me, and she was taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for nervousness and a run-down condition. She had me try some of it, and in a very few days I began to feel better. In two weeks I hardly knew myself and after taking a couple of bottles more I was up and helping around, and now I am strong and healthy again and am still taking it. It is a pleasure for me to write this to you, and I hope that many other women who are suffering like I was will find out about your medicine. I will give any information I possibly can." — Mrs. JAMES WILSON, 508 E. Center Street, Rockester, Minn.

Remember, the Vegetable Compound has a record of fifty years of service and thousands of women praise its merit, as does Mrs. Wilson.

BOSCHEE'S SYRUP

Alleviates irritation, soothes and keeps throat and lung inflammation. The constant irritation of a cough keeps the delicate mucous membrane of the throat and lungs in a congested condition, which BOSCHEE'S SYRUP gently and quickly relieves. For this reason it has been a favorite household remedy for colds, coughs, bronchitis and especially for lung troubles in children of tender age. It never fails to relieve the most stubborn cough, soothes the inflamed throat, and gives a good night's rest. Has been made by one of our countrymen in the mountains. You can buy BOSCHEE'S SYRUP wherever medicines are sold.

Vitamin Discovery Aid to Scientists

See Possibility of Producing Nutritive Food.

New York.—Unusual interest has been aroused in medical circles by the announcement of Dr. Walter H. Eddy, professor of physiological chemistry in teachers' college, Columbia university, of the first isolation of any of the five known vitamins. Dr. Eddy and his associates believe that isolation of vitamin D or, as Dr. Eddy prefers, "bloa" opens up the possibility of producing synthetic foods of a high nutritive value, though he warns patent medicine vendors in this respect.

Dr. Eddy told a distinguished body of scientists and physicians at the one hundred and thirty-eighth meeting of the Society for Experimental Biology and Medicine at Bellevue Hospital Medical College recently that he succeeded in isolating crystalline substance, which he believed to be chemically pure "bloa." This substance was first described by Professor Wilder in 1900.

Produce Four Specimens.
Dr. Eddy acknowledged the assistance in the series of extensive experiments he has been making at Columbia that he has received from Dr. R. B. Williams, in charge of the chemical laboratories of the Western Electric company, and Dr. Ralph Kerr, an expert in organic chemistry at Columbia.

At Bellevue Hospital Medical College Dr. Eddy produced four specimens of the isolated vitamin in test tubes before the eyes of his audience. He announced at the same time that in four experiments 70 milligrams were produced from moist autolyzed yeast. So far only a partial analysis has been made. The known composition of the substance is 43 per cent carbon, 25 per cent nitrogen, and 8 per cent hydrogen. Further experiments will be made at Columbia to determine the composition of the remaining 24 per cent.

In a supplementary statement Dr. Eddy remarks:
"Interest in the subject was revived in 1916 by Dr. Williams, who suggested that bloa was actually vitamin B."
"Extracts of substances known to be rich in B were shown by him to have the power of stimulating yeast growth, and Dr. Williams devised a test based on the use of yeast stimulation as a means of measuring the vitamin B content of substances. When this test was submitted to further study discordant results developed.

Cure for Hart-Barl.
"The final outcome was that while most substances rich in vitamin B do stimulate yeast growth, the stimulation may be due not to the presence of vitamin B, but to some other factor accidentally associated with it. In

Great Diamond Rush Now on in Transvaal

Paris.—More than 10,000 prospectors are feverishly fighting to stake claims in the diamond fields in the Stompers region, in Transvaal, following recent discoveries of huge gems, rivaling the finds in the Kimberly field, according to advices reaching Paris.

The diamond rush, recalling the Yukon gold stampede, started when a Rhodesian farmer found a dozen large diamonds in the soil of his apparently worthless land. One of the diamonds weighed 30 carats.

1922 Dr. Casimir Funk was able to show that when an extract rich in B was shaken with fuller's earth, the earth would remove all of the power of the extract to cure beriberi (a property exclusively related to B), but did not remove the yeast growth stimulating factor. Funk interpreted his results to indicate that such extracts contained two vitamins, one the

High-Quality by Club Markets

High-Grade Produce Bring More Money Than the Inferior Grades.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
For several years past South Carolina has had occasion to feel proud of its club markets for rural women, maintained with the help of extension workers. Reports received by the United States Department of Agriculture from the various county home demonstration agents indicate that a large volume of business is done by some of these markets. Some of them are open continuously during the growing season, others two and three days a week, and some on Saturdays only, bringing in an acceptable cash income in return for the activities of the ambitious and hard-working farm women.

Big Drive of Hogs
Washington.—A double file of hogs around the world at the equator and a single unbroken line from the North pole to the southern end of South America is the graphic picture presented by the Department of Agriculture of America's slaughter of porkers last year.

The department's statisticians calculate the 81,532,000 hogs killed for consumption would reach 61,770 miles if placed end on end, allowing four feet for each hog. The same number, they add, if placed 21 abreast, would form a brilliant lane from New York to San Francisco.

Improving Quality by Club Markets

High-Grade Produce Bring More Money Than the Inferior Grades.

For several years past South Carolina has had occasion to feel proud of its club markets for rural women, maintained with the help of extension workers. Reports received by the United States Department of Agriculture from the various county home demonstration agents indicate that a large volume of business is done by some of these markets. Some of them are open continuously during the growing season, others two and three days a week, and some on Saturdays only, bringing in an acceptable cash income in return for the activities of the ambitious and hard-working farm women.

Increased Sales.
To give a few instances: In the Square Deal market at Spartansburg the market sales amounted to $20,315.04, an increase of $3,515.04 over last year's sales. One woman baked and sold 3,120 pounds of cake in nine and one-half months. Many kinds of flowers had a good sale, and those who made sausage meat reported excellent success. The Marlboro Club market doubled its business during 1922, sales amounting to $4,735.55. One member sold $100 worth of cake in one month. The market house has been enlarged to twice its original size.

The home demonstration agent for Greenwood county reports that the club market was revived this year after a lapse of two years. In Darlington county $4,500 worth of produce was sold on commission, and the agent believes that other produce worth at least $1,500, of which there was no record, was also disposed of at the market. In Marion county 15 producers made $1,470.64 through their club market, which has been considered so successful that the chamber of commerce is taking steps to erect a permanent market house for next year. Newberry community market had sales totaling $9,015.03 and additional orders amounting to $2,500.

Improved Quality.
One conspicuous result of these various markets is the continued improvement in the quality of what is offered for sale. It is found that a high-grade butter brings better returns than that of poor quality and that keeping purebred poultry means increased profits in the long run.

Wool Production Shows Big Increase Over 1922

Wool production last year totaled 223,610,000 pounds, the United States Department of Agriculture estimates. This was an increase of 1,050,000 pounds over 1922 production, due partly to a larger number of sheep and to an increase of three-tenths of a pound in the average fleece weight, which reached 7.3 pounds.

Texas leads the states as a wool producer with 10,700,000 pounds, Wyoming was next with 13,800,000 pounds, Montana 17,775,000 pounds, and Utah 17,210,000 pounds. Idaho produced 15,455,000 pounds; Ohio, 14,312,000 pounds; California, 14,181,000 pounds, and Oregon, 13,200,000 pounds. In the leading producing states, wool is mostly a range product, except in Ohio where it is a product of the farm without the range.

The department's first estimate of the mohair clip is 8,651,000 pounds for 1923, as compared with 6,622,000 pounds in the census year 1919. Most of the mohair clip of 1923 was in Texas, for which state the estimate is 7,100,000 pounds.

Eliminate Unprofitable Lines by Farm Records

Of 17 farmers in Knox and Lincoln counties, Missouri, who kept farm account books last year under the direction of their county extension agent, nine have changed their methods of farming to eliminate unprofitable lines, according to reports to the United States Department of Agriculture. These farmers are all keeping accounts again this year and have influenced a number of their neighbors to begin keeping them. They found it required only a few minutes' time each day to keep the accounts. This, they state, is time well spent, for the records are proving valuable as an inventory, for reference, and as a guide in planning for better and more profitable effort the next season.

Boys' and Girls' Club Members Learn of Pigs

The pigs of sows and litters belonging to the boys' and girls' 4-H club members in West Virginia, which cost about $5,000 when purchased, are now estimated worth over $12,000, according to reports to the United States Department of Agriculture. This includes the holdings of the club members who are feeding one or more pigs by the best known methods, and those of other boys and girls who are learning the latest methods of management of sows and litters, in addition to feeding practices, under the direction of their agricultural extension agents.

Crowding of Chickens Is Bad in Brooding

Usually Canned by Little Fallowers Getting Chilled.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
One of the most disastrous conditions, according to the officials of the United States Department of Agriculture, that can occur in the brooding of chicks is to allow them to crowd together. Crowding is caused either through the chicks becoming overheated or chilled, usually the latter. Crowding may not only cause loss through death of many chicks, but many others may suffer to such an extent as never to regain normal health. Crowding is an indication of improper methods of brooding, and the normal development of the chicks is interrupted.

In order to prevent chicks from crowding employ the following suggestions given by the department:
Be sure to have good ventilation in the brooder, but avoid drafts. If there is danger from overheating, bank the fire in the coal brooder stoves or burn a lower flame in the oil-burning brooder. Open the windows slightly, but be very sure to avoid a draft over the chicks or they will catch cold. On the other hand, if the chicks are chilled they are bound to crowd. When they are first put in the brooders the temperature should be about 95 degrees F., and it should be maintained fairly constantly for a week or so, depending upon weather conditions. As the chicks get older the temperature should be lowered gradually; the cooler the weather the less the temperature is lowered. If the chicks start to crowd, it is fairly certain that they are too cool and more heat should be supplied. Watch the brooder room carefully and try to keep the chicks comfortable.

Grower of Spring Wheat Can Overcome Big Loss

How the spring-wheat grower can overcome losses from dockage by eliminating wild oats, pigeon grass, cockle, smut and other foreign matter at the threshing, is told in a new United States Department of Agriculture motion picture, "Wheat or Weeds."

This new film is a contribution from the grain investigations division of the bureau of agricultural economics. It tells the story of the average spring-wheat grower losing heavily on every bushel of wheat he sells because of dockage, and it prescribes the remedy—clean wheat!

Soches include the actual operation of the aspirator and disk cleaners at the threshing, showing the separation of wild oats and small weed seeds from the grain. Animated drawings visualize minutely the actual workings of the disk cleaner.

"Wheat or Weeds" will be circulated through the educational film service of the department and the co-operating state institutions. Copies may be borrowed for short periods or may be purchased at the laboratory charge.

Select Clean Potatoes for Planting in Spring

In picking out the potatoes for seed, it is important to select not only good clean "spuds," but to make sure that the seed does not carry any diseases. Stem rot and rot is a common potato trouble maker, and was widely distributed last year. Those who are familiar with the disease say that it can be readily detected at the stem end of the potato by either a dark brown ring beneath the skin or in more severe cases by a dry rot affecting a part or all of the tuber. All potatoes affected with the rot should be discarded.

Black scurf, a disease which forms dark brown specks on the surface of the potato, is another disease which is said to be common, especially on northern grown seed. This disease causes a reduced stand, weakens the plants and causes small potatoes.

Common scab, another important disease, is very destructive, often reducing the yield and making the potatoes unsalable.

Police to Get Greater Powers to Handle Traffic.

London.—With the total number of street accidents reaching the record of 68,513 for 1922 London is now beginning to approximate New York in unavoidable prevalence in traffic casualties. The figures compiled by the "Safety First" council in London include accidents involving persons or property.
Private automobiles lead the field as causing accidents, with motor trucks second. Buses, a great number of which were added to the city's total during the year, were responsible for fewer casualties than were bicycles.

Woman Gets $3,000 as "Extra Rib" Plea Fails

Philadelphia.—After a brief discussion, a jury before Judge Anderson in the personal damage suit of Lacie

Wessels against Barthold Rosenberger, returned a verdict of $3,000 for the plaintiff.
As to whether she possessed the proverbial extra rib of women, or had one of the regular number split into two sections by the accident in which she was hurt, was an interesting and unusual topic of the testimony. She was knocked down by the defendant's automobile. The rib condition was the bone of contention in the medical testimony.
Counsel for the defense sought to prove by the doctor who had examined the injured woman that the so-called fracture or divided rib was in reality the much-discussed extra rib of women. The physician replied in the negative.
Judge Anderson restricted the controversy over the extra rib, remarking dryly: "Most of us know a rib was taken from Adam to make Eve."

The Real Root of The Oil Scandal

National Republican:

It is unfortunately true that out of all the orgy of investigation on Capitol hill, the fundamental facts about oil leasing scandals have been ignored, if not suppressed. The biggest of these is the general leasing act of Feb. 25, 1920 of which Senator Walsh boasts he was one of the authors. It was this act, together with the rider of June, 1920, which opened the door to abuses of which the Doheny and Sinclair transactions were among the least. Under this act, millions of acres of the public domain were taken up under the loose provisions of the law without regard to the public interest. Fake claims by the hundreds were filed through dummy settlers and squatters. The law of 1920 authorized the Secretary of the Interior to validate doubtful titles at his own discretion.

An investigation of what happened under that law would not only reveal a host of hundreds of scandals. Many millions of dollars impounded from the proceeds of oil operations under questionable titles were released to companies which but for this law would have had to turn this money over to the government. This is the big oil scandal that has had no attention from the politicians most conspicuous in magnifying the Teapot Dome and Elk Hill transactions and at the same time keeping the people off the real, and underlying wrongs which call for inquiry, remedial legislation and administration. There is no indication so long as the public mind can be kept befuddled by the sort of stuff that has been palmed off as a substitute for honest, thorough and effective investigation by politicians who have had much to do with legislation that has resulted in wholesale sacrifice of the interests of the American public.

John Barton Payne, Secretary of the Interior, in the last months of the Wilson administration, leased lands right and left under this law. Many presidential leases, signed by Mr. Wilson, were given. Secretary Payne granted leases on 14,000 acres of land in the Salt Creek field adjoining Teapot Dome, and draining it. One great company secured nine-tenths of the leases in this rich field. The Commissioner of the General Land Office under the Wilson administration retired at the end of said administration to accept $85,000 a year with this company. He still holds it.

When Secretary Payne came into the office he found Teapot Dome surrounded by privately leased oil lands, draining the naval reserve, and the California reserve not only surrounded but honeycombed with such leases. Payne and Daniels had made seven leases on the California reserve itself. The work of draining off the government's oil was going along merrily. There is no excuse for Fall's loans from Sinclair and Doheny, but there was not only an excuse but an imperative reason for trying to save the government some oil which belonged to it, and which was being diverted to tanks of the companies Payne and Daniels had permitted to enter upon the work of draining the government's land.

Radio Beacon Guides Aviator on Hundred-Mile Flight

Guided only by signals spoken over a radio beacon, an aviator recently flew from Dayton, Ohio, to a point one hundred miles distant, arriving there without any mishap, and without losing his course at any point. As he flew along the correct course, he heard the letters A and T (---) repeated over and over in his receiver, both letters equally loud, but the moment he got off the course from one side or other, one letter being noticeably louder than the other, and showed him which way to turn to get back.

"TESS of the Storm Country"

Side Lights on "Tess of the Storm Country" TEN REELS

United Artists Production. Auspices of the Carrizozo Entertainers, May 6-7. The crowning achievement of the career of Mary Pickford, recast and filmed. The picture gave her the title of "The Sweetheart of the Nation." It is stated that she has made more money than any other woman in the world.

Story from the novel by Grace Miller White. Possibly one of the greatest, if not the greatest screen productions of all time. The Carrizozo Entertainers have bought the musical score composed by the United Artists Corporation, it will be played by Mrs. M. E. Burns of Oscura and will be the best time that a regular musical programme has ever been played for a picture at the Carrizozo Theatre - 61 annual selections.

May 6th and 7th at the Crystal Theatre

Three Hundred Minerals in One

Three hundred different minerals mined from a single square mile of ground is the unique distinction of the Langban mines in Sweden, which contain by far the world's most varied assortment of metals, says the Detroit News. Two hundred of the Langban minerals are still mysteries to the scientific world. Of the 80 or more minerals which already have been analyzed a large number are found only in Sweden.

For more than four centuries these mines have been worked, the principal yields being iron ore, specular iron and magnetite. During all those years the miners have been bringing home to their families queer lumps of mineral to be cherished as keepsakes. There is, for example, rodonite which is rosette in hue, and inessite, which crystallizes in rosette formation. Then there is the strange pyrochroite, which in the mine is sky blue and transparent, but when brought to the surface turns dark brown and opaque. Another similar metal changes in the same way from a beautiful green to black. Another when heated turns into thin sheets, that resemble gold leaf.

The Corn Stalk

Willie—Ma, I asked Aunt Belle what made her stalk along so funny, and she said, "Corns growing on my feet."

Mother—Well? Willie—But I didn't see any corns growing on her feet.

HEAVEN ON THE PHONE

A man went into a telephone booth and started what appeared to be a protracted conversation. He had left the door ajar. A line composed of men waiting their turn formed outside. Now and then they could hear the chap in the booth murmur, "Yes, my angel."

A drummer joined the line just in time to hear an emphatic, "Yes, my angel." "Hello," said the drummer, "central's given somebody heaven."

HAVE A CARE!

Mrs. O'Brian—Well, at last O've made up me mind to lave that good-for-nothin' husband of mine; he's that quarrelsome and mean I won't live wid him any longer. Mrs. Hooligan—Right yer is, Mrs. O'Brian, he's one av the trifinest spalpeens I iver met. Mrs. O'Brian—Now, look here, Mrs. Hooligan, you'd better moind what y're sayin' about me husband.

ALL IN THE VIEW

Two women went for a walk and presently climbed to a cemetery which overlooks one of the most beautiful valleys in Yorkshire. "I think," said one of them to her friend, after they had admired the view, "that I should like to be buried here. It's such a healthy spot."

UP OR DOWN?

Brown (showing a friend his car)—I don't say she's much to look at, but you should see the way she takes a hill. Friend (callously)—Up or down? —Literary Digest.

THE OUTCOME

"What happens when an irresistible woman meets an immovable man?" "She goes through his pocket-book."—Princeton Tiger.

THE TRAGIC URN

Visitor—(at studio)—How did you get that actress to do such wonderful grief in the new picture? Director—I told her I was going to cut down her salary.

YOUNG FELLOWSHIP

Buy—How much are these eggs? Shopkeeper—Two pesos; cooked ones a penny. Buy—Right. Overt me a dozen.

DINING ROOM

QUEEN'S BED ROOM

THE QUEEN'S DOLL HOUSE

QUEEN'S GARDEN

By JOHN DICKINSON GHERMAN

WHEN Marcellus's well-known and justly famous "travels from New Zealand" shall, in the midst of a solitude, take his stand upon a broken arch of London Bridge to sketch the ruins of St. Paul's, he'll doubtless be curious to know how the high-class Londoner of A. D. 1924 lived and had his being. That being the case, he should hunt up what is left of the British Museum and keep digging until he finds the "Queen's Doll House."

For the "Queen" is Mary, consort of George V, king of Great Britain and Ireland and of the British Dominions beyond the Seas and Emperor of India. The "Doll House" is a reproduction in miniature of the typical city home of a rich Briton of the present day. This house is two feet by eight feet six inches and five feet high. The scale is one inch to a foot. The execution is so perfect that from photographs it is not possible to realize that the rooms and their furnishings are not full-size—as the photographs herewith reproduced demonstrate. The outside walls can be raised so that every room of the two-story establishment can be seen. The garden folds up and slides into the basement at one end, as does the garage at the other.

The "Queen's Doll House" is the gift to Queen Mary from hundreds of her artistic subjects who have been engaged on the work for the last two years. Queen Mary will exhibit it in the Palace of Arts at the British Empire exhibition at Wembley, now just beginning. The proceeds will go to charity and it is the idea that eventually the house is to go into the British Museum for the benefit of posterity. It is a fair guess that the "Queen's Doll House" will not be the least interesting exhibit of the exposition.

For the "Queen's Doll House" is a real marvel. The best that British genius can do has been lavished upon it, regardless of time and pains and expense. Here are a few facts that give a hint as to the way the work has been done:

Scores of contrivances have arisen and been sought out to the bitter end over such details as the thirty-second of an inch in the width of a picture frame, the binding of a book not as large as a sovereign and the tints in a rug a few inches square.

Sir David Murray, president of the Royal Institute of Painters, was responsible for the decoration. He thought some of the frescoes and mural paintings out of harmony with their surroundings and kept at his fellow artists until they did their work all over.

There is a golf bag and complete set of clubs, given by Lady Maud Warrander. It is accompanied by a book on golf, written by her after months of research among the records of the British Museum on the "royal ancient games." And maybe the controversy over the proper clubs and balls to go in that bag were not hot and long drawn out.

What the little world would have cost the govices of those who took part been paid for at the market price can only be guessed. Anyway, a tiny volume written for the library by Rudyard Kipling was insured for 500 pounds sterling, when taken out for reproduction.

Sir Edwin Lutyens, who helped plan the new Indian capital at Delhi and designed the cenotaph in Whitehall, planned the house and has supervised the work. Queen Mary herself has also had a hand in the supervision and has made contributions. Here are some of the features of the establishment:

Mechanically the house is a marvel. There is an electric lift (elevator) with external control. The four bath rooms and kitchen have running hot and cold water. There is a complete electric lighting installation.

There are all sorts of rooms from a box (storage) room to a strong room for the crowns and scepters (set with real jewels). The store room contains pots of jam and marmalade. The wine cellar has bottles of real wines and liquors, labeled, binned and cobwebbed. The garage contains two automobiles by noted British makers. The bedrooms are completely furnished, even to toothbrushes. The nursery, decorated by Edward Dulac with fairy stories, has every toy that a child could wish—including a toy train, a model theater and lead soldiers.

The center of the main front is taken up by the great staircase hall, thirty-one inches broad, in marble with lapis lazuli inlays. The mural decorations are by William Nicholson. The subject is "The Expulsion from Eden," with all the animals looking on.

The "Queen's Bedroom," of which a photograph is here reproduced, is a miracle of completeness. The ceiling is by Glyn Phillipot, A. R. S., in black, red and yellow. The furniture is black walnut. The bed hangings are gray silk. The toilet set is in blue enamel. There is even a framed photograph of King George on the wall.

Another miracle of completeness is the dining room, also pictured herewith. This room is forty-two and one-half inches long, twenty inches wide and fifteen inches high. The dining table is two and one-half inches high and is set with linen, glass and plate, even to saltcellars. The chairs are works of art. Note the completeness and beauty of the sideboard. The ceiling is by Gerald Moore, R. W. S. On the walls are portraits by famous artists. These include King Edward III and King James V of Scotland, by Sir William Llewellyn, R. A. R. I. Others are Queen Victoria and the Prince Consort.

Looking across the table in the dining room one may see a portrait of the Prince of Wales in hunting costume, by A. J. Munnings, A. R. S. This picture is actually about half the size of a postage stamp. In view of the recent experience of the Prince of Wales, the fact that the painting pictures him on foot in front of his horse seems a little odd. Just the same, it was the Prince of Wales who moved the exposition from London. At one stage of the enterprise, when $200,000 had been spent and more money looked for, the specialized postage stamps and pipes and

Doubtless American ideas on this British Empire exhibition will vary as widely as the viewpoints. It is intended to show the whole of the British Empire in miniature—in 241 acres on the outskirts of London. Its main purpose is to advertise the resources of the empire, to stimulate British trade, to restore power and activity and prosperity. Britain will tell you that it was the great industrial fair given in Hyde Park in the middle of the last century that gave England industrial supremacy. To restore that supremacy is the first purpose of this fair. Richmond Temple, one of the directors, said recently in New York:

"This exhibition is a gigantic effort on the part of our industrialists to pay our war debt and to re-establish the prosperity enjoyed prior to the war. All parties are behind it. The whole business community of England, Scotland and Wales has for two years given its first attention to the details. England must sell her goods, and must sell them to other countries besides the United States, in order to pay the $157,000,000 in gold which each year has to be sent to this country. We, therefore, decided that in order to attract the buying public of the world to our goods we would have the biggest shop window ever built, where the goods of the biggest empire in the world might be displayed. In it the needs of the most exacting shopper in the most remote corner of the earth can be satisfied."

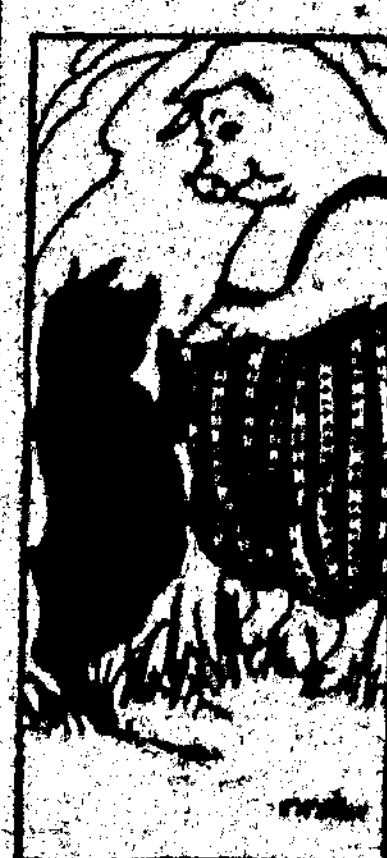

That it will be an interesting exhibition is an evident fact that it is intended to cut into American trade with the British dominions. For the British line is far-a-long and the sun never sets on the British flag. Five minutes will suffice to take the visitor from Newfoundland to Australia, from South Africa to Malta. One-fourth of the world will be shown at Wembley—in its native dress in its everyday life.

The United States will be represented only in the International rodeo, open to the world, which takes place the last two weeks of June. Three hundred cowboys and rough-riders will go from America.

To an English-speaking people like the Americans, with many roots in the British Isles, the exhibition makes a certain sentimental appeal. For the Briton, though he is land-grabber, is a good colonizer. And as a land-grabber he is built on a heroic scale. Britain's seas, ever since the time of Raleigh, have been busy carrying the British flag over the seven seas to the uttermost ends of the earth. They created the "White Man's burden" and shouldered it cheerfully, usually to the benefit of the burden. They grubbed, dug, cleared, planted and built—and created a new empire and a new civilization. And this exhibition will show the fruits of that empire-building. The success of the enterprise is depending with the trophies of that pioneering.

LITTLE BLACK SQUEALER

"Equal, equal," said Little Black Squealer, "I have a namesake."

"Is it good to eat, grunt, grunt?" asked Sammy Sausage.

"No, no, no; you don't understand," squealed Little Black Squealer.

"A namesake," said Little Black Squealer, "is someone named after you."

"You Don't Understand."

"Named after me?" grunted Sammy Sausage.

"Named after me?" squealed Miss Ham.

"Named after me, I suppose?" grunted Grandfather Porky Pig.

"Named after me, equal, equal!" said Brother Bacon.

"Named after me, 'grunt, grunt!'" asked Mrs. Pink Pig.

"Named after me, equal, equal!" asked Mrs. Pinky Pig, and Pinky Pig's mother said:

"Named after me?"

"Named after me, I'm sure," said Master Pink Pig, and Pinky Pig himself said:

"I'm sure you're wrong."

"Named after me?" asked Sir Percival Pork.

"Or me?" asked Sir Benjamin Bacon.

"No, no," said Little Black Squealer. "When I said a namesake was some one named after you I meant some one named after some one else—I didn't mean after any of you."

"I am the one who has had another named after me. Yes, I have heard that little girl named Sally named a dear little black pig of hers, Little Black Squealer, after me."

"Now, pig, that is a great honor. Ah, yes, now I have a namesake."

"It would have been more of an honor if she had sent you a piece of pigweed as a present," said Grandfather Porky, "and then your dear and worthy grandfather would have had a share in the honor."

"I don't know whether she could have done that," said Little Black Squealer.

"I've noticed," he said, "that parcel post packages were delivered at the farmer's house, but I have never noticed any coming here to the pen."

"In fact, I don't believe parcel post goes this far—it will go just so far, and no farther, and this is a little beyond the house."

"For I am sure," Little Black Squealer said, "that the one who named my namesake must think a great deal of me to pay me this great compliment."

"When that little pig grows up he can boast that he is named after a Little Black Squealer his mistress admired from afar."

"Best way to admire you," said Porky Pig.

But Little Black Squealer did not pay any attention to such a speech.

He could not think of anything smart to say for one thing, and for another he was all excited over his namesake, and wondering if by any possible chance the farmer might give him an extra helping of dinner, because of the honor shown to his pig.

Less Said the Better

"Now, children," said the teacher, "write down all you have learned about King Alfred, but don't say anything about the burning of the cakes; I want to find out what else you know."

Half an hour later wee Jeanie handed in her effort:

"King Alfred visited a lady in a cottage, but the lass said about it the better."

Forgot to Take in Moon

One afternoon little Tommy happened to look up and see the moon, and as he had never before seen it in the daytime he ran into the house and exclaimed, "Oh, mamma, I've got a joke on God!"

"Why, what do you mean, dear?" asked the astonished mother.

"He forgot to take the moon in this morning," explained Tommy.

Not New, Just Washed

The traveler had returned to his native village after being absent for twenty years. He stopped at the house of a little boy with a small baby coming down the road. "Ah! a new born, I see!" "No, it isn't, sir," replied the boy, looking at the baby. "It's just been washed, that's all!"—Western Christian Advocate.

Transley resolves to marry Zen.

"Perhaps you will excuse us now," said the rancher's wife. "You will wish to talk over business. Y.D. will show you upstairs, and we will expect you to be with us for breakfast."

With a bow she left the room, followed by her daughter. Linder had a sense of being uninvited; it was as though a ravishing meal had been placed before a hungry man, and only its aroma had reached his senses when it had been taken away. Well, it provoked the appetite.

The rancher refilled the glasses, but Transley left his untouched, and Linder did the same. There were business matters to discuss, and it was no fair pretext to discuss business in the course of a drinking bout with an old stager like Y.D.

"I got to have another thousand tons," the rancher was saying. "Can't take chances on any less, and I want you boys to put it up for me."

"Suits me," said Transley. "If you'll show me where to get the hay."

"You know the South Y.D.?"
"Never been on it."
"Well, it's a branch of the Y.D. which runs southeast from the Forks. Guess I got its name from me, because I built my first cabin at the Forks. That was about the time you was on a milk diet, Transley, and us old-timers had all outdoors to play with. You see, the Y.D. is a cantankerous stream, like its godfather. At the Forks you'd naturally suppose it where two branches joined, and forged on hencethrough in double harness. Well, that ain't it at all. This creek has modern ideas, and at the Forks it divides itself into two, and she hikes for the Gulf of Mexico an' him for Hudson's bay. As I was sayin', I built my first cabin at the Forks—a sort of peek-a-boo cabin it was, where the wolves usta come an' look in at nights. Well, I usta look out through the same holes. I had the advantage of usin' language, an' I reckon we was about equal scored. There was no wife or kid in those days."

The rancher paused, took a long draw on his pipe, and his eyes glowed with the light of old recollections.

"Well, as I was sayin'," he continued presently, "folks got to callin' the stream the Y.D., after me. That's what you get for bein' first on the ground—a monument for ever an' ever. This bel'n' the main stream got the name proper, an' the other branch bel'n' smallest an' runnin' kind of south naturally got called the South Y.D. I run stock in both valleys when I was at the Forks, but not much since I came down here. Well, there's maybe a thousand tons of hay over in the

"Perhaps You Will Excuse Us Now?" Said the Rancher's Wife.

South Y.D., an' you boys better trail over there tomorrow an' pitch into it—that is, if you're satisfied with the price I'm payin' you."
"The price is all right," said Transley, "and well hit the trail at sun-up. There'll be no trouble—no conflict of interests, I mean?"
"Whose interests?" demanded the rancher, belligerently. "Ain't I the father of the Y.D.? Ain't the whole valley named for me? When it comes to interests—"

"Of course," Transley agreed, "but I just wanted to know how things stood in case we ran up against something."

"Quite proper," said Y.D., "quite proper. An' now the matter's under discussion, I'll show you my hand. There's a fellow named Linder down the valley of the South Y.D. that's been flirtin' with that hay meadow for years, but he ain't got no claim to it. I was first on the ground an' I cut it whenever I feel like it an' I'm goin' to go on cuttin' it. If anybody comes out raisin' trouble, you just shoo 'em off, an' go on cuttin' that hay, spite of h— I an' high water. Y.D.'ll stand behind you."

"Thanks," said Transley. "That's what I wanted to know."

CHAPTER II

Transley and Linder were so early about next morning after their conversation with Y.D. that there was no opportunity of another meeting with the rancher's wife or daughter. They were slipping quietly out of the house to take breakfast with the men when Y.D. intercepted them.

"Breakfast is waitin', boys," he said, and led them back into the room where they had had supper the previous evening. Y.D. ate with them, but the meal was served by the Chinese boy.

In the yard all was jingling excitement. The men of the Y.D. were fraternally assisting Transley's gang in hitching up and getting away, and there was much bustling activity to an accompaniment of friendly profanity. It was not yet six o'clock, but the sun was well up over the eastern ridges that fringed the valley, and to the west the snow-capped summits of the mountains shone like polished ivory. The exhilaration in the air was almost intoxicating.

Linder quickly converted the apparent chaos of horses, wagons and implements into order; Transley had a last word with Y.D., and the rancher, shouting "Good luck, boys! Make it a thousand tons or more," waved them away.

Linder glanced back at the house. The bright sunbines had not awakened it; it lay dreaming in its grove of cool, green trees.

The trail lay, not up the valley, but across the wedge of foothills which divided the South Y.D. from the parent stream. The ascent was therefore much more rapid than the trails which followed the general course of the stream. Huge hills, shouldering together, left at times only wagon-track room between; at other places they skirted dangerous cutbanks worn by spring freshets, and again trekked for long distances over gently curving uplands. In an hour the horses were showing the strain of it, and Linder halted them for a momentary rest.

It was at that moment that Draxk rode up, his face a study in obvious annoyance.

"Danged if I ain't left that Pete-horse's blanket down at the Y.D.," he exclaimed.

"Oh, well, you can easily ride back for it and catch up on us this afternoon," said Linder, who was not in the least dejected.

"Thanks, Lin," said Draxk. "I'll beat it down an' catch up on you this afternoon, sure," and he was off down the trail as fast as "that Pete-horse" could carry him.

At the Y.D. George conducted the search for his horse blanket in the strangest places. It took him mainly about the yard of the house, and even to the kitchen door, where he interviewed the Chinese boy.

"You catches horse blanket around here?" he inquired, with appropriate gesticulations.

"You losses horse blanket?"
"Yep."
"What kind horse blanket?"
"Just a brown blanket for that Pete-horse."

"Whose horse?"
"Mine," proudly.
"Where you catches?"
"Haised him."
"Good horse?"
"You betcha."
"Huh!"
"You no catches horse blanket, hey?"

"No!" said the Chinaman, whose manner instantly changed. In this brief conversation he had classified Draxk, and classified him correctly. "You catches him, though—some h— I, too—you stickey round here. Beat it," and Draxk found the kitchen door closed in his face.

Draxk wandered slowly around the side of the house, and was not above a surreptitious glance through the windows. They revealed nothing. He followed a path out by a little gate. His nose had proven a blind trail, and there was nothing to do but go down to the stables, take the horse blanket from the peg where he had hung it, and set out again for the South Y.D.

As he turned a corner of the fence the sight of a young woman burst upon him. She was hatless and facing the sun. Draxk, for all his admiration of the sex, had little eyes for detail. "A sort of chestnut, about sixteen hands high, and with the look of a thoroughbred," he afterwards described her to Linder.

She turned at the sound of his footsteps, and Draxk instantly recognized a smile which set his homely face beaming with good humor.

turned on him eyes which set Draxk's pulses strangely a-tingle, and subjected him to a deliberate but not unfriendly inspection.

"No, I don't believe he did," she said at length.

Draxk cautiously approached, as though wondering how near he could come without frightening her away. He reached the fence and leaned his elbows on it. She showed no disposition to move. He cautiously raised one foot and rested it on the lower rail.

"It's a fine morning, ma'am," he ventured.

"Rather," she replied. "Why aren't you with Mr. Transley's gang?"

The question gave George an opening. "Well, you see," he said, "it's all on account of that Pete-horse. That's him down there. I rode away this morning and plumb forgot his blanket. So when Mr. Transley seen it he says, 'Draxk, take the day off an' go back for your blanket,' he says. 'There's no hurry,' he says. 'Linder an' me'll manage,' he says."

"Oh!"

"So here I am." He glanced at her again. She was showing no disposition to run away. She was about two yards from him, along the fence. Draxk wondered how long it would take him to bridge that distance. Even as he looked she leaned her elbows on the fence and rested one of her feet on the lower rail. Draxk fancied he saw the muscles about her mouth pulling her face into little, laughing curves, but she was gazing soberly into the distance.

"He's some horse, that Pete-horse," he said, taking up the subject which lay most ready to his tongue. "He's sure some horse."

"I have no doubt."
"Yep," Draxk continued. "Him an' me has seen some times. Whew! Things I couldn't tell you about, at all!"

"Well, aren't you going to?"
Draxk glanced at her curiously. This girl showed signs of leading him out of his depth. But it was a very delightful sensation to feel one's self being led out of his depth by such a girl. Her face was motionless; her eyes fixed dreamily upon the brown prairie that swept up the flanks of the foothills to the south. Far and away on their curving crests the dark snake-line of Transley's outfit could be seen apparently motionless on the rim of the horizon.

Draxk changed his foot on the rail and the motion brought him six inches nearer her.

"Well, for instance," he said, spurring his imagination into action, "there was the fellow I run down an' shot in the Cypress Hills."

"Shot?" she exclaimed, and the note of admiration in her voice stirred him to further flights.

"Yep," he continued, proudly. "Shr— he" buried him there, right by the road where he fell. Only me an' that Pete-horse knows the spot."

George sighed sentimentally. "It's awful sad, havin' to kill a man," he went on, "an' it makes you feel strange an' creepy, specially at nights. That is, the first one affects you that way, but you soon get used to it. You see, he's insured—"

"The first one? Have you killed more than one?"
"Oh yes, lots of them. A man like me, what knocks around all over with all sorts of people, has to do it."

"Then there's the police. After you kill a few men naturally the police begins to worry you. I always hate to kill a policeman."

"It must be an interesting life."
"It is, but it's a hard one," he said, after a pause during which he had changed feet again and taken up another six inches of the distance which separated them. He was almost afraid to continue the conversation. He was finding progress so much easier than he had expected. It was evident that he had made a tremendous hit with Y.D.'s daughter. What a story to tell Linder! What would Transley say? He was shaking with excitement.

"It's an awful hard life," he went on, "an' there comes a time, mize, when a man wants to quit it. There comes a time when every decent man wants to settle down. I been thinkin' about that a lot lately."

"What do you think about it?" Draxk had gone white. He felt that he actually had proposed to her.

"Might be a good idee," she replied, demurely.

He changed feet again. He had gone too far to stop. He must strike the iron when it was hot. Of course he had no desire to stop, but it was all so wonderful. He could speak to her now in a whisper.

"How about you, mize? How about you an' me jus' settlin' down?"
She did not answer for a moment. Then, in a low voice:

"It wouldn't be fair to accept you like this, Mr. Draxk. You don't know anything about me."

"An' I don't want to—I mean, I don't care what about you."
"But it wouldn't be fair until you know," she continued. "There are things I'd have to tell you, and I don't like it."

She was looking downward now, and he traced her rosy lips the color rising about her cheeks and her frame trembling. He turned toward her and extended his arms. "Tell me—tell your own George," he cooed.

Suppose Transley starts in to cut hay and is warned off by Linder, who is already at work. What do you imagine will happen?

"You're playin' with me," he cried. "You're makin' a fool of me!"
"Oh, George dear, how could I?" she protested. "Now perhaps you better run along to that Pete-horse. He looks lonely."

"All right," he said, striding away angrily. As he walked his rage deepened, and he turned and shook his fist at her, shouting, "All right, but I'll get you yet, see? You think you're smart, and Transley thinks he's smart, but George Draxk is smarter than both of you, and he'll get you yet!"

She waved her hand complacently, but her composure had already maddened him. He jerked his horse underfully and making little marks with her fingernails in the pole on which they were leaning. "I never told anyone before, and nobody in the world knows it except he and me, and he doesn't know it now either, because I killed him. . . . I had to do it."

"Of course you did, dear," he murmured. "It was wonderful to receive a woman's confidence like this."

"Yes, I had to kill him," she repeated. "You see, he— he proposed to me without being introduced!"

It was some seconds before Draxk felt the blow. It came to him gradually, like returning consciousness to a man who has been stunned. Then anger swept him.

"You're playin' with me," he cried. "You're makin' a fool of me!"
