Our Guarantee of Liberty

Pres. Coolidge has just written a foreword to a special edition of "The Constitution of the United States," by James M. Beck, Solicitor General, 10,000 copies of which have been ordered by Eldridge R. Johnson of Camden, N. J., for free distribution to public schools and libraries throughout the country.

Pres. Coolidge says: "It is of first importance that the study of the Constitution should be an essential part of the education of the American youth."

Mr. Beck has been recognized for years as an authority on our fundamental law. He is a lawyer of broad culture and wide learning. He has not only the acquaintance with the practical side of law from his long experience at the bar, but as a student, has a deep insight into the theory of our institutions. In private practice and as Solicitor General of the United States he has had that intimate contact with our laws which is the best foundation for a sound understanding of their spirit, their truth and their wisdom. He understands the practical application of the Constitution to actual affairs of life.

"While we cannot all be trained in the technicalities of law, we should all have some idea of our fundamental institutions. We need to know their relationship to our daily life, the reasons for their existence, the benefits we derived from them, and necessity to ourselves for their perpetuation. We must know that the Court is Our Court."

"The Constitution is not self-perpetuating. If it is to survive, it will be because it has public support. Such support is not a passive but an active operation. It means making adequate sacrifice to maintain what is of general benefit."

"The Constitution of the United States is the final refuge of every right that is enjoyed by any American citizen. So long as it is observed, those rights will be secure. Whenever it falls into disrespect or disrepute, the end of orderly government, as we have known it for more than 125 years, will be at hand. The Constitution represents a government of law. There is only one other authority and that is a government of force. Americans must make their choice between these two. One signifies justice and liberty; the other, tyranny and oppression. To live under the American Constitution is the greatest political privilege that was ever accorded to the human race." — The Manufacturer.

EXCAVATORS FIND ALTAR BURIED UNTOLD CENTURIES

Washington, March 14.—A brilliantly painted altar, supported by more than a score of handsomely which ancient priests of the Mayas sculptured human figures, upon once performed their mysterious rites has been unearthed in Yucatan by the staff conducting excavations in Chichen Itza of Washington.

The altar, which had lain buried for untold centuries in a pyramid temple in the heart of the destroyed city, the institution has been informed, represents the most important discovery made by the archaeologists since they resumed their excavations about the first of February and despite its age and the jungle that had grown over it, the altar was still in excellent state of preservation.

Mrs. I. P. Wetmore, mother of Mrs. H. B. Hamilton, died at her home in Roswell last night. Particulars next week.

Do You Know—

That Thomas Straley of Ancho, who filed his notice of intention to make proof on his homestead near his home town, will be the sixth member of his family to make proof on their homesteads and that the Straleys know that land is good in the region near Ancho—that Rolland's Drug Store has installed a new Knight Soda Fountain of the latest model—that the old one which is now confined to rest in the old Rolland building lasted fifteen years and served all classes of people from Kings, Princes and Potentates down to people in the commonest walks of life—that the El Paso Orchestra will give the big Spring Dance tomorrow night and what is more, you should attend and give the event your support—that "The Wild Rose" put everything in the shade that has ever been given in Carrizozo—that if it were not for the Woman's Club the old town would almost perish for want of entertainment—that we are in hope that the Carrizozo Entertainers will come to life again—that there are some wonderful things going on right now in the mining game that are not ready for publication—that the block on Alamogordo avenue in front of the Crystal Theatre would hardly furnish parking space for cars for those who attended "The Wild Rose"—that Hal Young was in from Nogal Tuesday and Judge Norton was here from Jicarilla—that everybody in Nogal is wondering who in the world is this "Bill O'Fare"—now to be honest, folks, who is he?—that Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Van Schoyck, Mr. and Mrs. John Townsend and many more of our neighbors were here from White Oaks Monday and Tuesday evenings to see the "Wild Rose", also many from Capitan, Nogal, Lincoln the other places and that they were well pleased with the entertainment and how could they have helped but be—that Mr. and Mrs. Doyle Rentfrow were here from their ranch across the Malpais Tuesday—that O. J. Snow was here from Lubbock, Texas and left Wednesday.—Doing fine, said O. J.—that Ben Sanchez at Ziegler Brothers is an expert in commercial sign card painting and you may see this demonstrated in his signs at the store—that the walls in the court house which have been newly painted make the place look so different that Judge Mechem will hardly know it when he comes to call the next term of court—that last, but by far from being least, we are proud of our local talent in the entertainment line—Ho hum! and many things more.

'Bill O'Fare,' 'a la Carte'

Ed Comrey has leased the old Tom Henley place at Nogal, and will plant quite a truck garden. The following will serve as a bit of encouragement to those interested in mining. E. N. Goodlett, well-known Colorado mining operator, says Pittsburgh steel men are putting substantial sums of money into western precious metal mines. Business conditions east are not yet as good as could be wished for, but Mr. Goodlett found a substantial desire among speculators for investments in western mining regions. This is a brief summary taken from the Denver Mining & Financial Record, and, as stated above, should be encouraging to those interested in mining. Lincoln County, and New Mexico as a whole, is well supplied with precious metal mines. Lincoln county is one of the oldest mining districts in the state and like all mining camps, must have its hard times; but like Leadville, it will come back!

The Vagrant

ON BEHALF of the Woman's Club, Mrs. E. M. Copeland and Mrs. A. Ziegler wish to thank the following persons for services which combined to make the Operetta a success: Mrs. Ivy Adams, for her assistance as Vocal Director; Mesdames Lemmon, Saulsbury and Burke, for their artistic Flowers and Designs; Mesdames Williams and McCammon and their helpers for the lovely scenery painted for us on such short notice. Their efforts and hard work, which had to be done almost at the last minute are highly appreciated by all. This scenery made the second act more realistic; Mesdames Haley, Harris, Burke, McCammon, and Williams for the hand paintings used on the walls in the first act; The following gentlemen for their untiring and willing assistance: E. M. Brickley, G. T. McQuillon, J. M. Beck, J. B. Fronch, F. J. Sager, and Ben Sanchez; also to those who contributed "the Light" in our direct need; The Outlook, the News and everyone who so kindly assisted us. The complete cast of "The Wild Rose" for their co-operation and for the lovely flowers presented to us, we sincerely thank you. Our friends and all the performers seemed to vie with each other in their efforts to do something lovely that would add to the success of the Operetta, and we thank you all.

Robbery at Oscura

As though the stroke of the hour of 8, p. m., was a signal for the attack, six masked men rode up to the store of Chas. Grey at Oscura Wednesday night and called for the proprietor. Edward Corn and sister, Ada, who were employed at the store, were in a rear room and Eddie answered the call by opening the door and informing them that he had gone to Carrizozo, whereupon one of the men opened fire, the ball passing through the fleshy portion of his hip. He hastened his sister to the rear end of the store and in her extreme excitement she ran for the depot where agent Burns immediately wired Sheriff Kelsey who with his deputies, hastened to the scene.

As soon as Miss Ada had gone, the bandits bailed Eddie and compelled him to open the safe in the postoffice, from which they secured about $200, according to the statement of Mr. Grey. Sheriff Kelsey wired here to stop all cars coming in this direction and shortly after 9 o'clock, Marshal Anton Vega and several others arrested a man by the name of Jose Campos, who is identified by Eddie Corn as one of the bandits. It has been said that Campos intended to tell his story to the Judge, but this morning he seems to be silent as a clam and up to the time news was obtainable, nothing has transpired. Sheriff Kelsey found where the bandits divided the money and also found where they had torn up some money orders and other valuable papers about two miles from Oscura in the direction of the Malpais. The shoes worn by Campos had been newly half-soled and tracks were found that corresponded exactly with the shoes he wore when arrested.

Nogal Items

By "Bill O'Fare" Our Legislature doesn't seem to be able to pass anything; wonder they don't try the hat. To those in Texas who have taken up Mah Jongg, we are going to suggest that they call it "Ma Jim." The 'Chaplin' up in our Legislature has been praying fervently for the Creator to lend that august body of law-makers into the paths of sane legislation. In his prayer he particularly denounced the "new divorce law," which was good and well directed, but we would very much like for this worthy person to also invoke this "Unseen Aid" to help that august body to enact some new banking laws. Billy Ferguson made a business trip to Hot Springs last week, returning home Sunday, and reports that section of the state pretty dry. (Billy meant the weather.) We want to throw a few bouquets at White Oaks, or "Heart's Desire" as Emerson Hough styled this beautiful valley. There are some of the richest coal deposits in the state, lying untouched and unexplored under those rugged hills. This coal deposit extends from White Oaks 22 miles south to Three Rivers and Ruidoso, and from Capitan 24 miles west to the E. P. & S. W. Railway. A complete record has never been kept of the development of this vast deposit. Here is a brief report of the actual tonnage mined. It is more of a history of dates and development than of tonnage data: 1835—Coal mines about three miles west of Capitan for use at Ft. Stanton. 1895—Wells and Parker mine about three miles southeast of White Oaks produced 3508 tons, valued at $16,000.

Fort Stanton News

The Base Ball team has arranged a game with the Roswell N. M. I. team for Saturday, March 28th and expect a return game at the Fort on some Saturday early in April. The Captain of our team is Floyd Mickey and the Manager is W. A. Wunsch. With few exceptions the line up is about the same as last year. The diamond and field are being graded and oiled and improved greatly with the location of home plate changed so that much better conditions are expected. The schedule for the season is practically open thus far and dates for games are sought.

On Tuesday evening among others from the Fort attending the delightful Operetta given by the Woman's Club were Mrs. Gensler, Mrs. Wilkinson and the Misses Rice and Gartman. The evening was most enjoyable and the commendation of the excellence of the entertainment unattained. It is hoped that there may be arrangements made to repeat it at the Fort for the benefit of the patients. Surely nothing could be devised to make them pass away the weary hours better than such a delightful entertainment.

The Odd Fellows came to the Fort on Tuesday and administered the last rites at the funeral of John Seaburg who has been at the Fort for so many years and has endeared himself to so many friends. It is expected that, on March 25th, Rev. E. T. Wilson of Roswell will hold services for his flock of the Seventh Day Adventist Church. Should he come, everyone will be welcome to the services which will be held in the Amusement Hall, probably in the evening.

So many of their friends are saddened by the planned departure from the Fort of Mr. and Mrs. Foelker who are moving to El Paso on Friday, and of Mr. and Mrs. Lonnie Cooper and Louise who are going to their farm, purchased recently at Lake Arthur, N. M., about thirty miles south of Roswell.

Miss Mary K. Palmer and Mrs. Wilkinson spent the week-end in El Paso and have returned greatly refreshed and bobbed.

1898—Old Abe mine opened Dec. 19 in the White Oaks District.

1899—Akers and Ayers mine 1 mile west of Capitan opened by New Mexico Fuel Co.

1901—Lincoln County ranked third in production in the Territory.

1905—Akers mine abandoned.

1913—Old Abe mine produced 125 tons; the Wild Cat mine produced 2,656 tons. The Gold deposit at White Oaks is one of the richest in the state, and, like the coal, is practically unexplored. White Oaks is called an old camp, but this is wrong—it is still in its infancy. It will, some time in the future, produce millions more. This is not a mere assertion, but the honest opinion of some of the best mining men in the country. I use the country, in its broadest sense, which means from the Klondike to Panama. This camp has produced over two millions in gold, and it is a safe bet that it will produce ten times this amount. Work on the Dolan property on the west side is progressing nicely, and makes a good showing of lead and copper.

"The Glory that was the Senate"

The Manufacturer: Vice-President Dawes, in his inaugural address, shattered a lot of senatorial precedents. It was an unusual event for an incoming public official to hold up for public gaze the shortcomings of one branch of our national law-making body that it brought a storm of protest from some political quarters.

Why shouldn't Vice-President Dawes endeavor to shake the Senate into a realization of its duty to the public? The Sixty-eighth Congress has ended, and at the close of its three-months session, the enactment of vital measures failed utterly.

The cold truth about the United States Senate will benefit that body, and the nation owes Gen. Dawes a vote of thanks for his effort to shake it into activity and awaken some of its members from the self-satisfied "holier than thou" attitude which they have adopted toward the public and industry during recent years.

Commenting on the Senate, the New York Times says, editorially: "Largely through its own fault, it is coming to be the thought of as the branch of Congress which is either unable or unwilling to transact the public business in an orderly manner; that has too many members ready to insist with mulish obstinacy that if they cannot have their own way, the Senate will not be permitted to have its way."

Needed Information

Many people have asked with regard to whether or not the schools will have funds to run on for the balance of the year. This with regard to schools of Carrizozo. We can only state that they will not unless the following incomes that are figured against the budget before the county-wide levy is laid, come through 100 per cent and at least 90 per cent of the taxes for this fiscal year have been collected.

Following are the chief incomes: State apportionment; Forest Fees; Poll Taxes; Merchandise Licenses; a 90 per cent collection of a .014289 mill levy applied over the county.

You can help by paying your poll tax—the law has been repealed but does not apply to the taxes for this school year, these taxes were figured as an income when the budget was figured, if they are not collected the school maintenance fund will be short. E. Lemon is collector of poll tax—they may also be paid at the First National Bank.

Delinquent tax collections will not help this fiscal year, there exist indebtedness behind this year on which they will have to be applied. In the case of this fiscal school year we have only the incomes mentioned and the levy for this year to depend upon. A frank discussion of the situation will appear in the local papers from time to time as we believe that only when folks are fully advised of the situation, can the matter be corrected and placed on a business basis.

Campos has Confessed

On the eve of going to press, we received information from Sheriff Kelsey to the effect that Jose Campos, who was arrested coming into town after the Oscura robbery, has confessed to being one of the men who robbed the Grey store and postoffice Wednesday night. He refused to disclose the identity of his partners in the crime, and declared that he was the one who shot Eddie Corn. His confession is considered very important to the Sheriff, as he hopes that before Campos has been sentenced, he will reveal the names of others associated with him in the robbery.

BE MERCIFUL!

SYNOPSIS—Living in the small English village of Darbury, old-fashioned and sedate place, Barbara Stockley, daughter of a widowed mother, is seen to celebrate her marriage to Hugh Rochdale, rich and well connected. Barbara is adventurous, and has planned, with an aunt, an airplane trip to Australia. Major Alan Croft, famous as an aviator, is to be the pilot. At her first meeting with Croft Barbara is attracted by his manner and conversation, different from the out-of-dried conventions of her small town. They set out. Barbara, her aunt, Croft, and a mechanic. Word in a few days comes to Darbury that the plane is missing and its occupants believed lost. Croft and Barbara, after the wreck of the airplane in a furious storm, reach an apparently uninhabited island in the Pacific ocean. The other two members of the party had perished. The two castaways build a shelter. In Croft's absence Barbara is attacked by a cannibal. Croft rescues her. Croft discovers a party of blacks, apparently reconnoitering. Croft fixes up an electrical guard which scares off an attacking party. Secure from immediate danger, Croft and Barbara settle down to make the best of things. Croft, who has traveled much among savages, makes friends with the blacks. Croft and Barbara fall in love. The man betrays his passion but restrains it. The girl desperately tries to remain loyal to Hugh.

IX

Near the blazing fire stood Croft. His hands hung loosely at his sides; his gaze was fixed upon the distant, heaving water. At the sound of the girl's hurrying steps, he turned quickly. "A ship!" he announced briefly. "Is it coming?"

"No." Silently they looked at each other; the man inscrutable as ever, the girl clapping and unclapping her hands, her lips a little tremulous. In the turmoil of her emotions, she sank upon the ground at last, and buried her head in her hands.

Croft looked at her, his own feelings as much the same chaotic state. The hope of once again playing the part among his fellow-men—dear to a man of action—of achieving the ambitions ruthlessly destroyed at the very moment of attainment, had been raised and dashed almost simultaneously. But in that same moment he faced the full knowledge of what all this Edenic existence meant to him—the immensity of his increasing hopes, bitterness to their uncertainty. And, as the flames ascended, he faced abruptly the probable termination of it all!

He controlled, but not without difficulty, the emotions rioting within his heart, when those ten or fifteen minutes, fraught with so much meaning—such crucial pages in the Book of Fate—relaxed. When the far off spiral of smoke faded into the clouds, on the distant vessel vanished, he leaped upon a bowlder and threw his arms wide. The gesture might have been a welcome to freedom, or an acquiescence in the inevitable; in either case it savored of "amen."

He turned suddenly toward her. "I am sorry," he said. "I feared it would upset you—today."

"Why today?" she asked curiously. A look of incredulity crept into his face.

"It is December twentieth. Wasn't that to be your wedding day?"

She sank back, staring at him blankly. Twice she opened her lips to speak, but no words came. At last, slowly, she turned her gaze seaward.

"It was!" she murmured. "I—had—forgotten." Again her head dropped onto her hands.

Low as the words were, he heard them. A wild joy flashed through him. Because he dared not trust himself by his voice, he left her—dashing, with scorching pulse, toward the palm grove, where there a stinging in the air around, as if every bird upon the island had mistaken coming night for the dawn, or was it the upward song of his heart?

For long Barbara sat where he had left her, without looking up, though knowing that she was alone. She faced her shrinking soul for the first time; the beacon burned bright out beside her; the sun sank lazily in a sky alone.

Until today she had taken for granted the supposition that, underneath the growing enchantment of this land, the craving for Hugh and rescue still predominated. Full of shame, she realized this supposition to have been but a bubble burst at this first test. She understood, with a sense of shock, the man's space now occupied by Hugh in her thoughts. Yet—she seemed, in memory, as dear as ever. Tears brimmed in her eyes; she realized, at last, how this very darkness proved the true separation from love.

alloyed joy she had supposed. Again her thoughts turned to Hugh, wondering what were his feelings today. . . . And her sensitive heart smote her, overwhelming her with renewed shame.

Hurriedly she set about laying supper, hoping vainly to still the awakened depths; then sought further occupation. Her glance fell upon her luggage. With sudden decision, probably induced by a hazy idea of recapturing the instincts of civilization to combat unruly emotions, she seized a box and opened it.

When presently Croft returned, he was met on the threshold by a wistful-eyed figure clothed in something soft and white, and altogether womanly, instead of the blouse and old skirt. He stopped abruptly; then with rather grim lips, smiled.

"So we returned to civilization in spirit, if not in fact?" His uncanny knack of reading her motives caused her to give him, as usual, the swift deep-sea glimpse which he sought.

"Alan, I want to tell you something."

"What is it?" he asked, breathing quickly at what he saw in her eyes.

"I saw a shark today, and," hurriedly, "—oh, Alan! I realized all you have done for me, all you have risked and spared me—"

"All my invisible halo, in fact?"

She ignored the flippancy. "And I feel simply full of—of—"

"Of—what, Barbara? What?"

"Gratitude—"

"Gratitude!" He turned away, with a short laugh.

"I can do so little in turn to make things tolerable for you here," she went on, in the warmth of her heart.

"Your life was so full—"

"He looked round again quickly. "No fuller than yours with the man you—"

"Ah!" she interrupted passionately. "Don't! I—know—"

Her voice went into silence. For a long time he sat watching the darkness creep swiftly over the water.

A fierce craving for advice, sympathy even disapproval, so long as she could unburden her agitated mind, mastered the girl. She took one of her old impulsive plunges.

"I am so troubled!" she exclaimed suddenly.

"Tell me just what is troubling you," he answered, his voice softening.

"Loneliness?"

The clasp of his fingers encouraged confidence.

"No, not this wild life, this lovely island, seem to creep up and up, engulfing me, so that I—dread the thought of the old restricted existence, Alan, it's terrible. It—it's intoxicating—it frightens me! I never crave for the world and a wider sphere, as I did in Darbury. I know I ought to be pining for rescue; to long for—these at home; to be unhappy. I've tried, honestly! But—"

Laughter interrupted her.

"Try! Have you really? Then—you are happy here?"

"That's the trouble; don't you see? I don't know why, but I am. I was once glad when the ship didn't come tonight! It's just as if there's some spirit in this island which—draws one up and up— Do you think me utterly heartless?"

He laughed again; and she wondered of the exultant ring of it.

"I think you're a goose—waking up! Have you only just realized the 'spirit'—on the island?" Then he became serious.

"How could your unhappiness help these in England? They have long ago given us up for dead. Besides, no forced emotions are worth anything."

"No, that's the chief point; they shouldn't need to be forced. Hugh—once-called me heartless—"

He drew her hands downward, pulling her up close behind him.

"It's going to talk quite straight, Barbara. I gather the real fact is—you are not fretting for—Hugh?"

She made no reply; but the fingers in his closed spasmodically. He went on, his voice low, and deeply earnest.

"Love can be forced least of all. If circumstances combine to prove that mistakes have been made, it is no good struggling against the knowledge! However painful, it is better than a lifetime of vain regret. One of the greatest tragedies in this funny old world is the case with which such mistakes can be made—unconsciously—all in good faith."

He turned his face upward and caught the glint of tears in her eyes.

"Ah my dear! Don't take it so much to heart."

She gave a strangled little sob. "He—cared—Hugh will ever be—faithful. He is the truest—"

"Yes I know; one of the very best. But marriage with him wouldn't have satisfied your nature. You know that."

"Oh!" she cried startled. "But I shall still marry him—if we get rescued. Please don't think me so deluged as all that!"

He smiled over this third unseasonable appeal for his good opinion.

"I've called it love, then, to carry out a compact when the very motive upon which it was founded has proved an illusion? You would be living a lie all your life—wouldn't you, both. Surely he wouldn't wish it?"

"You don't quite understand," she protested. "I am just as fond of him. It would still be the same."

"Barbara," he said softly, "the love of man and woman is not fondness."

She could not speak. Her heart seemed to rise in her throat and throbbled there; her limbs trembled. In sudden panic she tried to free her hands, her womanhood realizing his manhood as it had never consciously done before.

The instinct of the wild bird to flee and hide was hers. Her turmoil complicated itself to him, in that vibrant silence. He looked up into her face, seeing there what he had glimpsed on the night in the natives' hut.

"Barbara!" he whispered, shakily. "Barbara! Be true to yourself—"

With a little cry, she wrenched her hands free. As he sprang to his feet she turned, and, without a word, fled into the hut.

He stood still for a minute; then he drew a quick unsteady breath, and strode to the shore, to pace up and down up and down far into the night.

Barbara lay awake throughout long hours facing in terrible isolation the great question of sex. What she had dimly realized—and vaguely feared, since that revealing moment during their visit to the natives, now loomed up in its naked reality to alter the whole aspect of their life here together.

She faced the true position; realized clearly that she and this man were cut adrift from all the safety of other human companionship, all the restraints of civilization, with this terrible, eternal attraction now menacing them. Escape from it was impossible.

She understood now the nature of the abyss yawning below the precipice which had threatened her of late. This new knowledge illumined the past, even to the strange magnetic attraction, half-fear, in the early days of their acquaintance. It terrified her, shaking her confidence. Her one shield and protector in all they had faced now appeared in the light of the enemy against whom she had no ally!

When she remembered the close clasp of his hands, the pressure of his head upon her breast, her pulses throbbed and her face burned. It came back, she told herself repeatedly; this delightful, impossible tenderness between them must be stopped at once. She must resolutely hide her womanhood, showing nothing but the sexless comrade!

As soon as the soft light of dawn had entered the tiny room, she rose. Taking her scissors, she cut through hair, wasting no regrets upon the luxuriant tresses piling round her bare feet.

So far, so good! But it happened that Barbara's hair remained unshorn of its sex, with all its natural tendency to look well. When the hair was cut short to her neck, she hesitated; picked up the diminutive mirror; laid it down; picked up the scissors; hesitated again; then laid them down, and gave her head a vehement shake. The short waves and curls, free from all restraint, followed their own sweet will, waving playfully around her sweet head, clattering about her ears.

Alan stood in the outer doorway, watching a bird preening its bright plumage on a rock. He turned in surprise at her early appearance; but the words of greeting died upon his lips.

"What have you done?" he ejaculated.

She laughed self-consciously, giving her "bobbed" head a shake, cluding his eyes.

"Oh! I—just thought I would cut my hair," she replied, with elaborate circumspection.

"All your beautiful hair!" he murmured, his gaze never leaving her.

"Oh! she is out of place here!" she observed.

A woman's reflection, and he had looked at his own. "I am, however, sure, then, we are—two gay dogs together? What a good idea!"

His tone was cool enough to reassure a dozen nervous women. She was conscious of a great relief as she joined him in the doorway.

His tone was cool enough to reassure a dozen nervous women. She was conscious of a great relief as she joined him in the doorway.

X

The next few days were strangely happy. The faint chance of rescue caused their little hut to seem dearer, the wild free life more enchanting. The spirits of both had never been so high. Barbara, having conquered the sex problem with such sublime simplicity, cast it from her mind, surrendering herself wholly to the exuberant happiness of the moment.

[That her very subtlety, proving all it did, had been the death-knell to her object, never entered her head.

On Christmas eve they collected armfuls of greenery, the girl collecting with unconscious pathos to the old customs in which she had been reared.

"Ah!" she cried inconsequently. "Isn't it all—beautiful?"

"What?" he asked, yet knowing full well.

"Oh—everything! Christmas—herald Freedom from Mr. Horne!" She sprang upon a suitcase, trails of vines in her hands, and laughed down at him.

He came close to her, the same ecstasy twinkling in his own eyes.

"I wonder if you realize all you have implied?"

"What?" She looked startled.

She turned away, and fastened a vine tendril to the bamboo. He watched her silently, noticing the change wrought in her by these past months. The wild-rose air had vanished; in its stead the warm blood flowed red beneath a sunburned skin; her feet were brown and hardened. Yet, where the depths were concerned, remained the old timidity which was, paradoxically, her greatest lure and protection. One false step and she would, he knew, be "off on the wing," scared as a young partridge. But Alan's small store of patience had been drained to the last drop.

Finishing the decoration, she paused beside him, considering the effect. Ferns and palm leaves swayed in the corners; trailing greenery decorated walls and roof; flowers stood upon the cabin table.

"Cozy, isn't it?" she asked, looking up for his approval.

"Very cozy!" he replied, looking only at her. "What a little home-maker you are."

She flushed, and again turned hastily away.

"We'll hang this remaining vine over the entrance, outside. Will you bring the suitcases?"

He carried out the substitute for a ladder; and up she sprang. Doffing, with the art of experience, she caught the trailing foliage up here, letting it hang in clusters there.

"And that middle cluster?" asked Alan, beside her. "Is that for mistletoe?"

Her head rose quickly, as that of a young deer scenting danger. With a quick glance down at him, she stretched out her hand toward the bunch; but he put up a long arm to prevent its removal. And, in a flash, all the security of the past days fell to ruins. For, while she strove again to seize the vine leaves, the suitcases overbalanced, and she toppled down upon him.

He clasped her close to a thumping heart, and buried his face in her hair.

For a moment she lay inert; then she began to struggle, gasping, sobbing.

But his self-control was going. His grip became fierce; she felt his hot breath upon her neck.

"Alan!" she cried wildly. "For God's sake—"

The fear, as of one drowning, in the cry, stunted his reeling senses. Still clasping her in his arms, he sank down upon the rock. His darkened eyes remembered her own; the abyss yawned wide at her feet. . . . She was conscious only of being swept along, caught in some remorseless torrent, toward the edge of the precipice. . . . slipping, falling. . . . his lips were close to her own. . . .

"Alan!" with almost superhuman effort she managed to gasp his name again. "I can't bear it. Not! Not! Be merciful!"

Faintly, with parched mouth, the desperate petition seemed wrong from her very soul.

His arms relaxed abruptly, a subtle change coming into their grasp when he realized her trembling.

"Why are you afraid?" he murmured unsteadily.

She raised herself, her face very white under its sunburn.

"Don't you see? If you do—this, how can I go on living with you here?"

He smiled faintly, the mad tumult of his blood abating.

"Whose else would you live? With the natives for—chaperones?"

She drew a sobbing breath, looking around with a pathetic request of helplessness which touched his heart. The passion faded yet more from his face. He pressed her against him again, this time protectively.

"The way of a maid with a man" is one of the mysteries. What next?

One becomes used to the frank displays of married felicity, pre and post, that occur on the top of Fifth Avenue houses. Here is a slight variation. The young man had just visited the barber and was describing the details to his wife. Family words failed him—off came his hat and his shining head was placed under his wife's scrutiny that she might behold the smooth of the hair tonics to which he had accustomed.

CHOOSE JEWELRY TO SUIT WEARER

Personal Adornment Makes or Mar's Woman's Beauty, Artist Says

One must choose one's jewelry to harmonize or contrast with one's countenance according to its gaiety or somberness, but that is not enough, says a prominent artist in the Kansas City Star.

It is quite as essential to consider one's type, complexion, figure and all that. There are those who can wear the latest novelties, and not only look up to the latest in styles, but extremely well and very smart. Some can wear the old-fashioned things well, because, for example, which are coming into popularity once more, and there are others to whom the barbaric is becoming.

As in the case with rings, platinum jewelry of all sorts is best suited to the smartly dressed woman of delicate, aristocratic type, the woman with a fair skin and blue or gray eyes; while gold is the more becoming for the one with warmer coloring. It requires a rather oriental type of person to wear effectively what we call barbaric ornaments, and the American Indian jewelry is really suited only to a large person with a great deal of pigment in her skin.

Do you realize that you can alter the color of your eyes—in appearance, that is, by the jewelry you wear, whether the stones are gems or semi-precious? For instance, if your eyes are a light blue you can deepen their color by wearing a necklace, brooch, or other ornaments of dark blue stones. The sapphire, so popular now, is just the thing for the woman with pale blue eyes that she wishes were darker. Blue stones will make green eyes look blue, while yellow stones will intensify their greenness, as will green jade.

The woman with the hazel eyes can make them lighter by wearing light stones, such as the topaz, but if she would darken them let her wear lapis lazuli or green jade. With corals, for instance, the light pink variety is for the fair person, the blond, while the more brilliant dark red is for the brunette and the hazel-eyed. Almost anyone can wear emeralds, which have the pleasant power to clear the skin.

The question of the right jewelry for the right person is a most important one. It is perfectly natural for us to like to adorn our persons with precious stones and metals. The instinct for decoration is a heritage that has come down from the beginning of history, and persists, in spite of wars, earthquakes, revolutions, or any other sort of upheaval.

Jewelry is beautiful—as a rule, I mean, not every individual piece, unfortunately—and we cannot have too much beauty in our daily living. Wear the jewelry that is appropriate for the occasion, but let it be, first of all, suited to the type and complexion of the wearer, for that is the one and only way to bring out the true and complete beauty of the jewel, and also the one and only way in which the jewel can fulfill its mission of adorning the wearer.

Peter Pan headgear is reported to be the latest fad with the girls of the "movies," who reside in California. The actresses declare that it is just the thing for the early days of spring.

Sewing Basket Hints of Interest to Women

Those who embroider with a number of different colors on one piece frequently are annoyed by the way the silk skeins become tangled with each other, even when the utmost care is taken. An easy way to avoid this is to take a piece of cardboard about four inches wide and eight inches long if you are using seven different colors, nine inches long for eight colors, and so on. If you are using fewer colors, shorten accordingly. Cut notches on both sides of the cardboard an inch apart for the silks to fit into. As you wind on the different colors, mark on the cardboard beneath the silk the number that was on the label. When the skein is used, you easily can re-order by number to get the exact shade.

When using several different colors in embroidering, a saving in time is effected by having as many needles as colors are required. No unthreading and rethreading need add moments of time to the finished piece. Also when hoops are used with only one needle the delicate material is frequently badly strained by stretching the same area over the hoops several times as is necessary when only one color is worked up at a time.

Organdie is hard to cut straight, but learn another way. The house dressmaker who has been distressed by the puckering of organdie when sewed on the machine will find that by using mercerized thread her troubles with this fabric will be over. When stocked with mercerized thread, the organdie is as fresh as when in the store. And a better

How One Gown Can Be Made Do Much Service

With little trouble and extra expense one gown can be made into many. An unusual tunic arrangement is made of black or of dark silk. This is worn over an underslip of a light and contrasting color. Make a long narrow beaded band of the same color as the slip. Bead it with bright-colored beads. Line the band with the dark silk. Sew the lower parts of two snap fasteners to the under side of the band. Sew the other parts to the top of the tab of the tunic. Wear a string of beads to match the slip. Pass the beaded band up and over the beads. Finish the end of the band with a long silk tassel. You may have several slips with bands and beads to match. The same tunic with different slips will give the effect of many frocks. You might also have more than one tunic.

Embroidered Shawl and Hat of Same Material

New fashions offer much that is of interest to those who desire to keep a bit ahead of the prevailing mode. One of the novelties whose vogue will be repeated later on at the summer resorts of the North is an ensemble consisting of a shawl of light-weight wool gaily embroidered with flower motifs in the most vivid colors, and a hat of the same material similarly decorated. A feature of the shawl is the deep knotted fringe of wool.

Gauntlet Glove

The gauntlet glove looms large in fashion's scheme of things and it appears in many different variations. Particularly smart are gloves of suede which have black velvet or silver brocade linings. They are worn with the gauntlet turned back so that the tag shows.

Patch Pockets

Very large pockets, sometimes bound with narrow silk bands, are very attractive on street frocks of tulle or kasha.

Need Home-Grown Seed for Success

Italian and Chilean Varieties Prove Unsatisfactory in Most Parts.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

More general use of home-grown clover seed, in the opinion of the United States Department of Agriculture, would do more than any other one thing toward solving the problem of red clover failure in this country. If methods can be found by which small acreages of domestic red-clover seed can be conveniently harvested and hulled for home use, more dependence could be put upon the supply of home-grown seed and less would need to be imported.

Clover Turned Under

It is known, says the department, that throughout the country, east of the Allegheny mountains at least, there are every year thousands of acres of good second-growth clover that is turned under instead of being harvested for seed, because in those neighborhoods no hullers are to be had and the farmer is not able to harvest and save the seed economically. If these farmers could save their own seed, the drain on the market stocks represented by their requirements would be materially decreased, and the seed produced in the states where it is grown commercially would be more nearly adequate to supply the demand.

For at least fifteen years the United States has been a heavy importer of red-clover seed. Most of this seed has come from Italy and France. Evidence is accumulating to show that the Italian seed is not satisfactory for use in America. Co-operative trials which the department has been conducting with experiment stations in the Middle West have shown that the plants from Italian seed are much more likely to winterkill than those from American seed, that they are more susceptible to certain diseases and that they often give a smaller crop even when the stand is otherwise apparently satisfactory.

Unsatisfactory Seed

As far as the investigations of the department have progressed it was found that Italian seed is practically everywhere unsatisfactory and that French and Chilean seed, while giving good yields in some parts, is unsatisfactory in Iowa, Minnesota and elsewhere where the winters are severe.

Means of harvesting and saving the seed from the numerous small acreages of red clover instead of importing seed would do much to bring the clover crop back into a dependable part of the rotation. Red clover is but excellent the vestigial crop for rotations in the corn belt, says the department, but continued failures of the crop have caused a steady decline in acreage. This decline in acreage over a long period of years has adversely affected the yields of all other crops involved in the rotation.

The importance of home-grown seed is especially great in the southern and southeastern part of the clover belt, where the anthracnose disease is common and often very destructive. Here plants that survive and produce seed are quite likely to have some degree of resistance to the disease.

Truck Crops Show Large Increase in Production

That the American diet is becoming more and more diversified is indicated by the enormous increase in the production of vegetables during the past three or four years. These crops, according to the United States Department of Agriculture, had a gross value of $319,000,000 in 1924—an increase of 34 per cent over 1921. Over 2,500,000 acres are now devoted to the growing of such crops as tomatoes, early Irish potatoes, strawberries, cantaloupes, green peas, onions, lettuce, celery, cabbage, asparagus, cucumbers, snap beans, watermelons, sweet corn, spinach, peppers, cauliflower, carrots, eggplant and a number of others.

The development of the canning industry and the improvement of cold storage, transportation and marketing facilities have made possible this improvement in the diet which is so important to the health of the people—especially of those who are forced to live in congested centers of population.

Truck crops, grown for sale, are a product of an intensive agriculture. They require much skilled labor, careful attention during the growing season and on most soils the use of rather heavy applications of commercial fertilizer. In fact it does not usually pay to put so much labor into these crops without using plenty of fertilizer to insure profitable yields.

When Mammoth Clover Is Wanted for Seed Only

When mammoth clover is wanted for seed it is well to either pasture the field until about the first of June or, clip it, leaving the clippings on the field to act as mulch. If short of pasture use this field of clover early in the season for that purpose. However, if the fertility of the soil is of most importance, let the clover grow, then in June roll or pole it down, going around the field in the same direction that the mower will go. The heads of the clover will straighten up and the seed crop can be harvested without handling so much straw. By this method a heavy growth of organic matter is left on the ground to be turned under when the ground is prepared for corn.

Prune Grape Vines for Best Results

Work Usually Done While Plants Are Dormant.

Bearing grape vines must be pruned every year if a profitable yield is to be secured.

This work is usually done while the vines are still dormant, advises J. E. Clark, instructor in fruit growing at the New Jersey State College of Agriculture. "A heavy pruning is necessary to stimulate vigorous wood growth, to keep the plant within bounds, and to leave only as many buds as can produce good-sized clusters."

"The amount of old wood left at pruning time should be no more than is necessary to act as a support to the producing canes. In the knifing system of training, which is recommended for New Jersey, a single trunk extends to the top wire of the two-wire trellis. Four vigorous, one-year-old canes, a little above the average in length and starting as near the trunk as possible, are selected to produce the crop. These should be so located that one cane can be tied in each direction along each wire. Each of these canes is cut back to eight or ten buds, depending on the vigor of the vine, making a total of 32 to 40 buds on the entire plant.

"This number of buds distributed over four canes will produce more fruit than the same number of buds on spurs, each bearing only two to four buds. Since the canes which bear fruit one year are removed the next, some provision must be made for renewal. This is provided for by selecting four other canes as close as possible to where renewal canes will be wanted a year later, and cutting them back to spurs of two buds each. All remaining canes are then removed entirely.

"These recommendations can easily be applied to other systems of training. The removal of as much old wood as possible and keeping 30 to 40 buds on four or five one-year-old canes to produce the crop are the essential points."

Farming Becoming More Difficult, Says Expert

According to Director Sidney B. Huskell of the Massachusetts experiment station, farming is becoming more difficult, due to higher market standards, soil fertility problems, insect pests, plant and animal diseases, and competition with the factory which has brought about a shorter working day. This increasing difficulty works to the advantage of the educated farmer.

The future of farming looks bright because of the increasing population, because there are no longer great areas of untilled soil in the West, and because the Middle West and South are now passing through the same era of industrialization which the East has already had.

Each section of the country must adapt itself more and more to that type of agriculture that best fits its market and transportation facilities, its soil and its climatic conditions, and in order to compete on the market at the price set by the large producing areas, farmers must reach certain standards of efficiency per acre, per dollar and per man.

More and more attention must be given to good seed, productive live stock, economical use of labor and to the application of proper fertilizers in sufficient quantity to give the greatest profit.

Pasturing Sweet Clover During Second Season

Sweet clover, the second season, should be pastured as soon as an animal is able to get a mouthful and should be grazed heavily, according to specialists of the Kansas State Agricultural college.

If a seed crop is desired, grazing should cease the last of June or the first of July and the crop should be allowed to make seed. Harvesting should be done September 1, or before. (Once grazing is not likely to hurt sweet clover. As a matter of fact, it benefits the following seed crop, where seed is desired, by forcing the plant to make a fine, bushy growth, instead of a coarse, upright growth.)

Farm Hints

- Select the best eggs for hatching.
- Top-dress small grain with nitrate of soda.
- Plow every day the ground is dry enough.
- Order any repair parts needed for farm implements.
- High quality in seeds is worth more than it costs.
- Clean up around edges of fields and other places where needed.
- A germination test on seed corn makes a pretty good insurance policy.
- As bad accounts bankrupt a business, so worthless cows will break a dairyman.
- That ounce of prevention—look up the latest control measures for insect pests, and plan for them beforehand.

Feel Achy After Every Cold?

ARE you lame and stiff; tired and nervous—constantly troubled with backache and twinges of pain? Have you given any attention to your kidneys? Grip, colds and chills, you know, are apt to be mighty hard on the kidneys. And if the overtaxed kidneys fail to properly filter the blood, impurities accumulate and throw the whole system out of tune. Then may follow daily backache, rheumatic pains, headaches, dizziness and annoying kidney irregularities.

In such conditions a good stimulant diuretic should help the kidneys flush the poisons out of your system. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have helped thousands. Are recommended by folks you know. Ask your neighbor!

75% of disease avoided through internal cleanliness

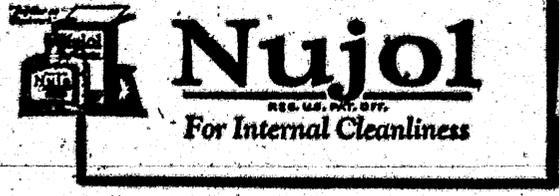

WHEN you are constipated, poisons are formed in the accumulated food waste, and reach all parts of the body. The first results, headaches, biliousness, a feeling of "heaviness", etc., serve as warnings of graver diseases to follow if this intestinal poisoning continues unchecked.

This is why intestinal specialists state that constipation is the primary cause of three-quarters of all illness, including the gravest diseases of life.

Physicians Advise Lubrication for Internal Cleanliness

Medical science has found at last in Lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste, and thus hastens its passage through and out of the body. Thus, Nujol brings internal cleanliness.

Nujol is not a medicine or laxative and cannot gripe. Like pure water, it is harmless. Take Nujol regularly and adopt this habit of internal cleanliness. For sale by all druggists.

The Woman's Club and "The Wild Rose"

IF YOU missed the above named important event given by the Carrizozo Woman's Club at the Crystal Theatre Monday and Tuesday nights of the passing week, you must have been the only one, judging from the patronage it received.

On Monday night, even standing room was at a premium, while on Tuesday night the theatre was comfortably filled.

Those who performed their respective parts are deserving of the highest praise and reflected credit on Mrs. Carrie Ziegler, manager and accompanist, Mrs. Ivy Adams, vocal director, Mrs. Ethel May Copeland, stage and dancing director, and E. M. Brickley, stage manager.

Mrs. Hilary Cooper, characterized the leading role of Rose McCloud, society belle, in graceful manner, as also did others associated with her in kindred characters and the ladies who danced the Minuet, brought those more advanced in years back to 'grandma's days,' so realistic was the scene.

Mrs. Ivy Adams as reporter for the Outlook and Mrs. Lena Loughroy for the News, took advantage of every opportunity to make news out of everything they could see or hear in true newspaper style. The dance, "Narcissus" by little Miss Jane Elizabeth Spencer, the "Glow Worm" by little Miss Helene Titsworth, the dance, "To a Wild Rose" by the little Misses Georgia Peckham, Helen Frances Huppertz, Florene and Helen Pittman, Ruth Brickley and Ruth Kelley, performed their dances in artistic style which won merited applause from the big audiences.

In the comic characters, Mrs. C. A. McCammon and Miss Jean Kelly performed their parts in such complete style that the Operetta would have been lacking in mirth without them. Mrs. E. A. Gumm, assumed the role of Lady Grey with dignified manner, true to her part in the cast. The debutantes, the maids and others in the big cast which we must mention collectively, are deserving of equal amount of praise. Local talent was in evidence everywhere; even the stage scenery, pictures on the walls, decorations which abounded on every hand were all the handiwork of local talent.

Carrizozo should be proud of its Woman's Club which at all times neither slumbers, sleeps, nor ceases in its efforts to boost the town. In conclusion, the Outlook pauses to drop a feeble word of praise, best wishes for the future in which it offers its assistance and with its memory refreshed with pleasant remembrance of the above event, offers its congratulations.

TALES OF THE OLD FRONTIER

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON (© 1925, Western Newspaper Union.)

"THE SUDDEN CHANGE OF '36" IT WAS in December, 1836. For days the weather had been mild, but the early settlers in the Mississippi valley shook their heads doubtfully. "It's a strange brood," they said ominously. "It was like this in December, 1850. The winter of the deep snow. Look out for a change!"

Then the change came. First a light snow fell, then it turned to rain and the ground became ankle-deep in slush. Suddenly a cold wind began blowing from the west. Almost instantly the temperature dropped from 40 degrees above zero to 20 below, a change of 60 degrees in a little more than that many seconds.

The whole face of the country was changed from water to ice and in some places the strong wind blew the water in a series of ripples which froze, making a stretch of ridges on the ice. In one settlement a group of boys, going home from school, came to a pond about fifty yards wide. The larger boys started to wade across and reached the opposite side only with difficulty for the water was freezing ahead of them. One little fellow held back for a few minutes and by the time he had started the ice was thick enough to support his weight the whole distance.

The "sudden change" wrought terrible havoc over a wide stretch of country. Deer, elk and other wild animals perished in their tracks. The settlers' live stock seemed to be driven crazy by the sudden cold. Chickens curled up on their roosts and fell to the ground, frozen solid. Thousands of horses, cattle and hogs died before they could be brought into shelter.

A young boy who was riding home from a neighbor's cabin was thrown from his horse, which ran away. His boots were filled with water and by the time he had reached home, only a short distance away, both boots were frozen fast to his feet. One man, riding across the prairie, realized that he would not be able to reach the nearest settlement alive if he tried to push on. So he dismounted, killed his horse, disassembled it and crawled inside the warm body to escape the frigid wind. Weeks later passersby found his frozen body inside its icy tomb.

Later investigations of the "sudden change" showed that the icy blast had struck the Mississippi river settlements about ten o'clock in the morning. By three o'clock that afternoon it had reached central Illinois and by eleven o'clock Indianapolis was in its grip.

Owners of livestock who have their stock contracted for sale to be delivered on or before the last day of April, will be furnished with schedules for the return of livestock later.

Read instructions printed on back of schedule and make return to this office on or before the First of February.

A failure on your part to make return within the time stated above, requires me to add 25 per cent to the valuation of your property. Be sure to sign your return.

I will be pleased to assist any person in making their returns who will call at my office in Carrizozo. Please make your return promptly and avoid the penalty.

R. A. DURAN, Assessor, 1-9-31

Choir Boys Sometimes Need Restraining Hand

The restless choir boy is often the best singer, as the inhumanly well-behaved youngster is often devoid of initiative, musical, or otherwise, a writer in the Montreal Family Herald comments. The writer well remembers the choir master of his own chorister days who, to his sorrow, sat immediately behind him in the choir stalls. This gentleman had a difficulty of speech, which prevented him from pronouncing the word "ears" as it deserves. This must have been a sore trial to him, for the word was constantly on his lips. At frequent intervals during the services, at all events, the boy sitting in front of him would hear a loud stage whisper, angrily tuned, saying: "I'll box your ears with a book." It became a famous phrase among the boys—and sometimes it was translated, painfully for them, into action. But even this, surely, was a less embarrassing punishment for a choir boy than that devised by a clergyman who, in the course of his sermon, stepped from the pulpit, drew forth from the choir an offending youth, took him into the pulpit and stood him in the face of the congregation through the remainder of the sermon. That was indeed a penalty!

Fish Associate Sound With Time of Feeding

In Argyleshire, Scotland, there is a cottage standing on the bank of a fairly large river. It is the custom of the occupants to carry out domestic operations on the edge of the stream. It is there that fish, rabbits and fowls are cleaned and garbage disposed of generally. The result is that eels, attracted by the faint In the water, have been in the habit of coming out from the middle of the river to gorge themselves on this refuse. So accustomed have they become to feed at this spot that they have learned to associate certain sounds with food, and the clattering of pots and pans on the stones, even before anything has been thrown out, will bring them up out of the depths in considerable numbers and cause them to go cruising toward the shore. To call up the eel is a recognized item in the entertainment of visitors at the cottage.

Rich in Roman Relics

Folkstone, on the Kentish coast, was a Roman station when England was young, says the London Times. There are still evidences of Roman occupation and it has been proposed to reconstruct the ancient village. Judging from the relics discovered round about, in Roman times it was a royal manor called "Folcanstan." William I granted it to Nigel de Mandeville, one of his followers. As a "port" it became attached to the Cinque Port of Dover, but as late as Queen Elizabeth's day it was still but a fishing hamlet of 100 houses. The present thirteenth century church occupies the site of the Saxon convent of St. Eanswyth, 653, and behind is the hall, or bullium, where stood the Saxon castle of King Eadwald.

Whence Comes Term "Bit"

The visitor at the west coast of Canada is likely to be puzzled by a merchant asking two, four or six "bits" for an article. Its history is connected in the old "Chinook" or trading language, but the origin of the term "bit" goes back even farther than that. A "five-penny bit" (five-penny bit) was really the 13 1/2 cent unit derived from the old Spanish real or one-eighth of a dollar, long used for computation and pricing in New Orleans, California and most western towns. The United States never had a 13 1/2-cent coin of its own, but to this day a quarter or 25-cent piece is commonly spoken of as "two bits." The name "five-penny bit" or five-penny bit obviously was derived from a reference to the British and American colonial penny, which was worth a fraction more than two cents of Canadian money.

Too Much Inspiration

A poet at a window, a brunette came along. The poet liked her looks, began to pen a song. In just another moment a blond came into view. She was so very pretty she got a line or two. And then there was a red-haired girl, and she was not so worse. She gave a lot of color to the ensuing verse. The poet couldn't sell his song; could not a nickel get. It served him right—he should have been true to the brunette.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Milk Made From Tree Sap

In the West Indies a tree known to the natives as "nyhya" has a sap so rich that when the bark and pits are crushed they yield a milk-like fluid that is richer than cow's milk. The Chigales also have a milk tree, known as the "kirkhaman," while in the forests of Para there is a tree, known as the "nanenodendron," which provides a milk that does not turn sour. It will keep indefinitely.

Merely Preparatory

"I have been told," said the football player to his fiancée, "that you have been engaged before; that I am not the first." The sincerity of his position made her shudder, but she quickly recovered herself. "And in what way," she demanded, "before playing a match game to try a few practice games with each team?"—Boston Transcript.

The discovery that benzol is admirably adapted for the destruction of the larvae in wounds has been a distinct forward step. The use of this larvicide is now being adopted by many stock raisers with better effects on the animal tissues, and uniformly high killing power against the maggots, and at a cost far below chloroform or other larvicides. Satisfactory progress has been made in the study of repellents for application to animals. The pine-tar oil-sulfur mixture is meeting the J. T. Jolly of Corona, visited his son, L. A. Daniel Morales, one of the principals in a death duel fought at Lincoln, Calif., in which Casarías Martínez was killed and Morales seriously but not fatally injured, will be charged with murder, according to an announcement made by District Attorney Orin J. Lowell of Auburn, Calif.

The United States government has filed suit in the Federal Court at Los Angeles for $904,551.52, alleged to be income taxes due for 1910 from T. L. Doherty, oil magnate; his son, his wife, two of the directors of his companies and two of his concerns, the Doherty Petroleum Company and the Petroleum Securities Company.

In his opening address in the Teapot Dome hearing at Cheyenne, Senator Pomerooy said that the government would attempt to prove two main contentions: First, that the lease for Teapot Dome was made without authority of law, and entered into without advertising for bids; second, that the whole scheme of leasing was the result of a conspiracy on the part of Fall and Sinclair.

A design for a New Mexico state flag, evolved from ancient symbolism of the Pueblo Indians, using the flaming orange and red of the Spanish national colors in the time of Ferdinand and Isabella, sponsored by the Daughters of the American Revolution, and approved by the state executive committee of the American Legion has been formally adopted by the New Mexico House.

A wage increase agreement averting the threatened strike of engineers on the Santa Fe coast lines was signed in Los Angeles by company officials and representatives of the railroad brotherhoods. The agreement grants the men their demand for a 5 per cent pay increase and will result in an additional annual payment of approximately $200,000 to engineers, firemen, hostlers and hostler helpers on Santa Fe lines west of Albuquerque.

Secretary Wilbur placed the task of reconditioning the historic frigate Constitution in the hands of Rear Admiral De Steiguer at the Boston navy yard and at the same time suggested that contributions on the basis of 2 1/2 cents each on behalf of the school children of the country would rebuild the vessel. Congress has authorized the restoration of the Constitution. The first donation of $1 came from Daniel Jennings of Boston, who signed himself a "boy civil war veteran, boy."

Corn on farms was about 101,000,000 bushels, or 220 per cent of the 1924 crop, compared with March 1, 1924, stocks of 1,153,847,000 bushels, or 7.3 per cent of the 1923 crop, the Department of Agriculture announced a few days ago. About 600 per cent of the 1924 crop is merchantable compared with 60.8 per cent of the 1923 crop. Wheat on farms was about 112,023,000 bushels, or 12.1 per cent of the 1924 crop, compared with March 1, 1924, stocks of 137,717,000 bushels.

Although an appropriation of $123,000, approved by the budget bureau for use by the Commerce Department in attempting to eliminate radio interference, was killed in the final legislative jam in Congress, Secretary Hoover said the request for it would be renewed before the next Congress.

Chairman Cotten recently declared in the Senate that because he had "persisted in endeavoring to eliminate references in government departments," treasury officials have attempted to "discipline" him by withholding his 1910 income taxes and assessing against him an additional $10,000,000 to $11,000,000 of taxes.

Representative Tucker, Democrat, Virginia, has refused to accept the $2,500 increase to his congressional salary on the ground that members of the last Congress who were re-elected were chosen to positions carrying only $7,000 a year. Tucker's grandfather, Henry St. George Tucker, a representative in the Fourteenth Congress, refused an increase for the same reason and the money has remained to his credit in the treasury for 103 years.

Contents involving the seats of Senators Brockhart, Republican, Iowa; Schall, Republican, Minnesota, and Bratton, Democrat, New Mexico, have been formally filed in the Senate and referred to the elections committee for investigation.

Fearing a shortage of seed corn for planting this year's crop, the Department of Agriculture has taken steps to provide farmers an adequate supply and has assured President Coolidge that there is no likelihood of a repetition of conditions which existed in the spring of 1918.

FOREIGN

Former Premier Briand, who is representing France at the meeting of the League of Nations council at Geneva, stands for application of the security protocol adopted by the league assembly in September.

The prince of Wales, acting in the place of King George, presided for the first time at a "levee," one of the medieval pageants of swords and silk, gold braid and gleaming epaulettes, staged by British royalty in accordance with long-standing custom.

Another act in the notorious Sir Hari Singh scandal was concluded in London when the trial of William Cooper Hogg, a law clerk, charged with fraudulently obtaining money from the East Indian prince, ended in a verdict of guilty. Hogg was sentenced by Judge Avey to two years' imprisonment at hard labor.

Harvard University excavators have discovered the tomb of another Egyptian ruler it was announced in Cairo a few days ago. It is believed to be the tomb of a Cheops or Khufu, who ruled approximately 3,700 years before the birth of Christ. The discovery was made by Alan Rowe, assistant director of the Harvard expedition, while excavating in the pyramids.

France has replied to the British note asking payment of the French debt, it was learned in London. The foreign office refused to discuss the reply, but it is learned that France wants a debt moratorium and wants later debt payments dependent upon the amount received from Germany under the Dawes plan. The French view is contrary to the British stand expressed in the original note.

The importance of the brotherhoods of the various republics of north and South America in promoting world peace was stressed in Havana by Gen. John J. Pershing in an address at the unveiling of the monument erected by the Cuban government in honor of the 200 Americans who lost their lives when the battleship Maine was sunk by an explosion in Havana harbor the night of Feb. 15, 1898.

The German Socialists' designation of Otto Braun as presidential candidate, while causing some chagrin among the Clericals and Democrats, who hoped for a joint Republican candidate in the first election, March 29, is considered by the Socialists as a tactical move for getting 800 more votes on the second election, April 26. This, they assume, is inevitable, as they do not expect an absolute majority for any candidate at the first election.

GENERAL

"Stovo Balough, 21, and Helen Balough, 18, cousins, Johnstown, Pa.," read a marriage license issued in the Cumberland, Md., bureau, but, according to a telegram to authorities, the couple are brother and sister. They were married by the Rev. P. E. Blakney, pastor of the Second United Brethren church.

Banished from organized baseball for alleged participation in the World's Series scandal of 1910, Hal Chase, erstwhile first baseman of the Cincinnati National League Baseball Club, now proprietor of a luxurious cafe in Agua Prieta, Mexico, across the border from Douglas, Ariz., is about to organize a national baseball league in Mexico on the invitation of the Mexico City government, he said recently.

A. D. Lefcourt, garment manufacturer, realty operator and builder of New York, has announced the gift to his 12-year-old son of $10,000,000 in the form of a deed to a thirty-story building he intends to erect. Little more than thirty years ago, was shifting shoes and selling papers on the East side streets, said his purpose was to inculcate in his son, Allen, a sense of thrift and responsibility, and "the necessity of observing the future of this wonderful city."

Col. Robert W. Stewart, chairman of the board of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana, wanted as a witness in the Teapot Dome trial in Cheyenne, Wyo., is away on an inspection and business trip, it was said at his office in Chicago. His associates said they did not know his exact whereabouts, but believed he was in the Southwest.

Dr. Charles H. Mayo of Rochester, Minn., one of the country's leading surgeons, told the Philadelphia forum in a recent address that he believed cancer would be "under control" within a few years. By this, Dr. Mayo said he did not mean that cancer would be cured nor that it would be preventable, but that it would be more amenable to treatment.

Dr. Henry F. Vaughan, president of the American Public Health Association, issued a protest against the reported elimination of paper drinking cups and the reduction of towel supplies in the White House and other federal buildings in Washington as a measure of economy. He asserted that the dangers to public health would more than outweigh the benefits of economy.

Ann Reynolds, reputed priestess of a cult in Toronto known as "The Faith of the Holy Light," is in custody, charged with having presided over a weirdly exotic midnight ceremonial at Bluevale, Ont., in which ten hogs were sacrificed as "an offering to devilish spirits."

Tobacco authorities have just permitted the publication of information concerning widespread attempts at bombing outrages, which were frustrated last summer, and the arrest of five alleged ring leaders after a long investigation.

HALF MILLION LOSS IN STORM

SEVERAL PERSONS INJURED AND SCORES OF HOMES DEMOLISHED

EAST SWEEP BY GALE

INDIANA AND SOUTHEASTERN ILLINOIS SWEEP BY STORM

Indianapolis, Ind.—Indiana and southern Illinois are taking stock of the damage done by the severe wind, hail and rain storm which swept over these states, causing property damage estimated at more than $500,000.

Several persons were injured, none of them seriously. The storm apparently struck in Edgar county, Illinois, and then moved eastward in the general direction of Terre Haute, Ind., unroofing houses, blowing down trees and barns. Telephone and telegraph and rail services was impaired.

In Edgar county, where the damage was estimated at $75,000, about a dozen homes and the Methodist church were leveled. Ten houses were destroyed near Paris, Ill.

At Terre Haute, Ind., the storm blew down several houses and unroofed several buildings at St. Mary of the Wood Academy, causing damage estimated at more than $50,000. At Rochester, Ind., where the storm assumed proportions bordering on a tornado, numerous barns were razed and the ground at the county fair ground demolished, causing damage of about $75,000. Claypool, Ind., reported houses and barns demolished and many trees uprooted. Many other towns reported houses and barns unroofed.

Explorers Killed by Rhinoceros London.—A dispatch to the Daily Mail from Nairobi in the Kenya colony of British East Africa, reports that a Mrs. Green, a noted Irish explorer from Dublin, and a British captain have been killed by a rhinoceros. Mrs. Green had crossed Africa from the Belgian Congo to Nairobi and was about to climb Kenya, when she encountered the rhinoceros at Naulyki. The woman fired with a small bore rifle and wounded the animal, which charged upon and fatally injured her. The British officer, Captain Atkins, accompanied by his wife, arrived later in a motor car at the scene. He was not aware of Mrs. Green's death and they elighted from the car. The rhinoceros then charged upon them. The captain shouted a warning to his wife and tried to blind the animal by throwing his coat over its head. The rhinoceros, however, knocked the captain down and trampled him to death.

Dying Woman Accuses Man Kansas City.—Mrs. Dora Gago, Atchison, Kan., died here after telling the police that Roy M. Turner, Atchison real estate dealer, had given her a poison drink to obtain insurance she had made out to him. Turner was arrested in a hotel room to which Mrs. Gago's screams had attracted attention. He is held for questioning. Two maids, who forced an entrance to the room, found Mrs. Gago lying on the floor suffering acutely. Beside her, the maids said, stood Turner, adjusting his necktie before a mirror. "He is killing me," the woman quoted Mrs. Gago as saying. "He wants my life insurance. He made me drink poison. He just threw the bottle out of the window."

Mrs. Stokes Takes Witness Stand Chicago.—Mrs. Helen Ellwood Stokes got her opportunity to take the witness stand at the trial of her 70-year-old husband, W. E. D. Stokes, millionaire apartment hotel owner of New York, and formally deny that she over was an inmate of a Chicago underworld resort, and the testimony of two sleeping car conductors that she twice traveled overnight with young men. Shortly after she left the stand, the state rested its case against the aged man and his co-defendant, Robert F. Lee, Chicago negro, charged with conspiring to defame Mrs. Stokes.

Cow Chews Up Airplane Tucson.—Because cows ate several of the more tender parts of his airplane, Charles Mayse, commercial pilot, who has been flying from the Tucson municipal field, was forced to spend two days in Safford, Ariz. Mayse flew to Safford to visit his mother and parked his plane in a pasture near the home. When he started to return he found that the cows had eaten the flippers in the tail group of his ship.

Society Girls Married to Convict New York.—The Joy of Mrs. A. B. Woodson, Washington, D. C., society woman, at the discovery that her 17-year-old daughter, Mary, missing for two years, was married and living in Brooklyn, was disrupted by the arrest of her new-found son-in-law, John Spargo, an ex-convict, on the charge that he was an ex-convict who had violated parole. According to the police, the young man's true name is Morris Feldowitz, and not John Spargo, as he was known in Brooklyn.

New Mexico State Items

Cornelio Rivera, aged 27 years, was killed in a cave-in at the Kinney mine near Socorro last week.

The New Mexico cavalry regiment, National Guard, just recently adopted the Indian "Avanyu" good luck symbol in the Spanish colors as its regimental insignia.

The United States Supreme Court refused to modify its recent decision in the boundary dispute between New Mexico and Colorado, as requested by New Mexico.

Dr. D. H. Galloway of Roswell was elected president of the Rotary Club for the coming year at the meeting held recently. Tom Hall will be the new vice president.

The big oil refinery which is under construction in Farmington is nearing completion and it looks now as if the fires under the boilers would be started the last of the month.

An exhibit outlining rodent and predatory animal control activities in New Mexico has been arranged for the annual meeting of the American National Live Stock Association, Jan. 14, 15 and 16, at Albuquerque.

Bids will be asked for soon on the new highway between Las Cruces and El Paso, which will be much shorter than the present road. The survey from Las Cruces to the Luna county line has already been completed.

The U. S. Indian school at Albuquerque, with 800 pupils, gets a government appropriation of $180,000 this year, with $23,000 extra for improvements, a new building and sleeping porches for boys.

The Federal Aid highway which is being built out of Roswell to connect with the Clovis road, is nearly completed and will soon be open to traffic. Owing to the dry weather it has been almost impossible to bind the surface together by rolling.

At the closing session of the Masonic Grand Lodge which was recently held in Silver City, the question of erecting a Masonic Home and School, some place in the state was discussed. It is the plans of the officers of the order to make the home and school similar to the one now in operation at Fort Worth, Texas, and a committee has been authorized to select a site.

Work of laying the fourteen-mile pipe line from the Santa Fe company's Battlemake wells to the connection with the Midwest line has been completed. The big pressure pump has been installed and oil should be flowing through the pipes in the next two weeks. As soon as the refinery at Farmington is ready to begin work it is believed that the pipe line will handle more than 500 barrels of oil per day.

According to a report just issued it is estimated that the crops for the year of 1924 under the Elephant Dutton project averaged over 100 per cent. The project last year produced from crops valued at $10,822,616, as compared with a total of $9,281,661 in 1923, an increase of approximately 15 per cent. The area in cultivation in 1924 was 112,070 acres, as compared with 93,472 acres in 1923, a gain of approximately 20 per cent. The totals do not include the values of live stock, honey or dairy and poultry products, which would bring the value of all farm products well above $100 an acre.

New Mexico has asked the United States Supreme Court to modify its recent decision making the Darling survey the boundary line between New Mexico and Colorado. Contending the Darling survey was never run between the sixth and seventh astronomical meridians, New Mexico would have the court adopt as a correct boundary for that distance a line run by William C. Perkins in 1917 under direction of the commissioner of the general land office.

At the close of the annual meeting of the Masonic Grand Lodge and the Grand Lodge of the O. E. S., held in Silver City, the new officers for both organizations were elected. Those who will head the orders for the coming year are as follows: Jaffa Miller, Roswell, grand master of Masons of New Mexico; Franklin E. Kilburn, Clayton, grand high priest; Huben Perry, Albuquerque, grand commander Knights Templar; Mrs. Anna Chase, Lordsburg, grand matron of Eastern Star; A. B. Tillman, Las Vegas, grand patron of Eastern Star. The next annual meeting is to be held in Roswell during the third week in February, 1925.

The Santa Fe freight depot and storage building, three cars containing unloaded merchandise, and all of the office equipment and records of the Las Vegas freight office were reduced to ashes within an hour by a fire, fanned by a thirty-mile-an-hour wind, only two chimneys protruding from the debris to mark the site of the first passenger depot in Las Vegas, which was erected in 1861. The damage to railroad property is estimated at $18,000, which is exclusive of the freight destroyed in the fire and the three freight cars destroyed.

MRS. WM. BUTTS WAS VERY SICK

Gives Full Credit to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for Remarkable Recovery

Wallston, O.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to make me strong. I was troubled with my back and sides hurting me till I could not do my work, and whenever I caught cold it made me irregular. Since I have taken the Vegetable Compound my side and back don't bother me and I can do my housework and care for my children now, where before I did not feel like doing anything or going around. After my first child was born about four years ago I saw an advertisement in the paper about the Vegetable Compound. I knew it would help me, but I was afraid to try it because people said it would help you to have children and I knew I was having children fast enough. But I thought if it would help me it would be better to have a whole house full of children and have good health. I became stronger from taking it and my husband says I look like a live woman instead of a dead one. When Spring comes I am going to take your Vegetable Compound as I am very thin. I will answer letters from any woman who wishes to ask about your medicine." Mrs. WILLIAM BUTTS, Wallston, Ohio.

Slick "That there nephew o' yours is getting to be a tollable smooth worker, hain't he?" asked old man Sockerly. "Eh-yah!" responded Gap Johnson of Rumpus Ridge. "He can split in your ear and make you think he's telling you political secrets, as slick as anybody."—Kansas City Star.

Year's Oil Output

Preliminary estimates indicate that the total world production of crude oil in 1924 may have equaled the 1923 output. While the two leading producers—the United States and Mexico—appear to have registered a decline, this has been largely counterbalanced by increased output in some other countries, as Russia, Persia, Rumania and South America—notably Venezuela.

Invention of Great Value

A chemical product resembling glass and useful for many of the same purposes recently was perfected by Fritz Pollak, a German inventor, says Popular Science Monthly. It can be rolled, bored, polished or cut, without the tendency to splinter that glass has. Because of this quality it is useful especially for automobile windows, optical instruments, ornaments and toilet articles. The inventor arrived at this product by condensing carbamide and theocarbamide with formaldehyde.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

THE SPRING

"The spring, the spring, the beautiful spring," called the birds as they went North for the summer.

They traveled so easily without having to carry any boxes or bags. They didn't even have to carry toothbrushes, for they never needed such things—having no teeth!

When they got North they built their nests and didn't have to bother about moving all their possessions, as they went into their new homes in trees and bushes.

They were delighted when people put sugar on their trees and bread-crumbs and water about, for that helped them when the marketing supplies were low the first of the season.

Before long the robins would be looking after their little ones, feeding them, watching them grow. How they did love their little ones!

This was one of the lovely parts of the springtime.

The children in the little green cottage would sell lilacs to people passing by in automobiles and would earn money for the Fourth of July and summer picnics and all sorts of little things they wanted.

That was something they could do on springtime afternoons and on Saturdays.

Later the buttercups would come out and would chat with the long green reed grass.

The wild honey-suckle would whisper sweet secrets to the woods. The wild strawberry blossoms would promise delicious treats to come when the strawberries came in place of the blossoms.

The iris flowers in the gardens would open, the sweet ferns of the hills, the sun shine, all a part of the springtime and the early summer.

The rain would come down in clean, glistening, beautiful showers.

It would spatter on the dog and the cat who lived in the old gray-brick house. The dog did not like other cats, and the cat did not like other dogs but these two were the best of friends, eating out of the same saucer. They would lie out of doors until the rain drove them in.

The ferns would lift up their little, young heads and drink of the soft, warm rain. All this was a part of the springtime.

The children would have supper on the back piazza and they would use the pretty old-fashioned table cover with the birds embroidered in the corners.

The days would become warmer and the Persian lilacs would come out a little after the other lilac trees, and the whole air would be perfumed with their sweetness.

Then the little birds would sing as though their throats would burst with the joy of the springtime.

Golden, white, brown, purple butterflies would soon appear.

Dolly who had once had a golden butterfly come and sit in her lap would be watching all the springtime glory.

Her favorite time of the year was the springtime.

Allie would be gazing at the Persian lilacs—her favorite. To her they were like long, heavy blossom plumes, and she loved the exquisite lemon-colored tulips, too, so aristocratic and grand in their shape, and the red ones—old friends of hers—so very bright.

Cows would come out of their barns and would enjoy the air and the streams and the grass.

But they would not pay much attention to special bushes and scenes such as the children would do.

The children would speak of their favorite hills and fields by name. But they would all enjoy the warmth and the sunshine. The roosters would crow their spring-time delight and the hens would cackle and soon there would be running around little yellow chicks, all soft and new and pretty.

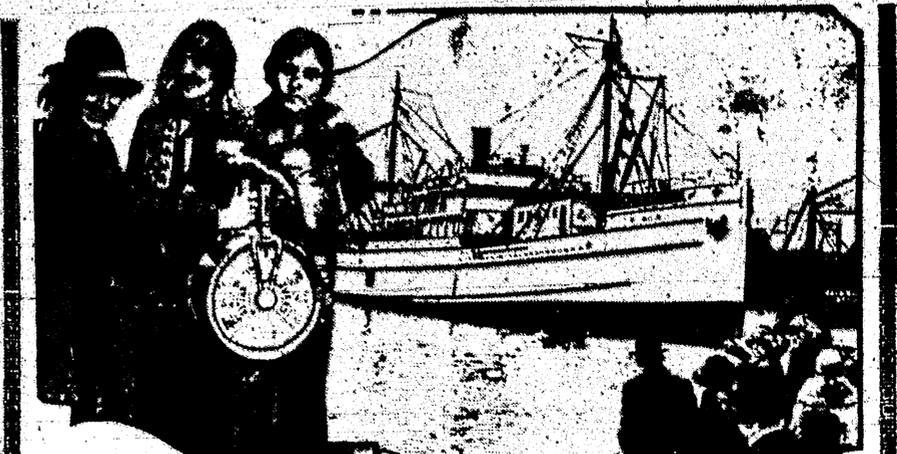

Everything would be perfect. Even the showers would be lovely. It would all be a part of the spring and everyone felt the beauty of the loveliness of springtime.

It was wonderful to be alive, to breathe the sweet, sweet air; to see the soft, soft colors; to hear the songs of birds; to speak of the new flowers daily appearing; the new birds daily arriving.

Yes, it was very wonderful. It was all a part of the wonder, and the glory and the beauty of the spring.

All Wasted
"Come, come," said a kind old gentleman to a little boy who was crying. "What is the matter?"
"I've been playing truant, and just remembered it's Saturday."

Off for Exploration of the Sargasso Sea

The steamship Arcturus, a floating laboratory, about to sail from the Toba yacht basin, Brooklyn, N. Y., with a party of scientists in search of the Sargasso sea under the guidance of Dr. William Beebe, noted naturalist. At the left are three women members of the party, Betty Trotter, representative of the Rockefeller Institute; Elizabeth Cooper, painter of fishes, and Ruth Rose, historian of the trip. The expedition will be away six months, collecting deep sea fishes and plants.

Places That Are Nouns and Verbs

Number of Common Words That Had Origin in Place Names Surprising.

The National Geographic Society, suggesting that the English language is full of geographical inquires whether you can connect these words with cities or places:

Lima beans, leonic, limbrick, china, coffee, canaries, bauxite, saavy, gasconade, troy weight, sial, cologne, bologna sausage, tangerine, derby, castile soap and astrakhan.

Geography classes are doing this variation of "cross word puzzle" by giving the approximate latitude and longitude of places to be named.

Washington.—Can you name a seven-letter fabric from Cambrai?

Or a five-letter surgical dressing that took its name from a town in Palestine?

Or a popular seven-letter color named for a famous battle in Italy?

The number of common words that had their origin in place names is surprising, says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic Society.

"Calleo traces its ancestry to Callicut, madras to Madras, and cashmere to Kashmir.

Textiles have the habit of appropriating town names for trade marks and the very history of the art of making cloth can be followed along its westward march by putting capitals to familiar terms and slightly changing the spelling. Silk takes its label from old China—both terms having a common origin in Sere, the early name for the people of China. Damask rightly reminds us of Damascus, although honor for the cloth's creation goes to China. Europe called it damask because Damascus was the easternmost city which they knew as its source. In justice to Damascus it must be said her own looms later made the weave as perfectly as her steel-workers made damascene blades.

"Mullin still is woven in the cool, damp cellars of Mosul from long staple silky cotton of southern Mesopotamia. Fustian is a heritage of Rome in Egypt. The "fossatum," or walls, protecting an imperial legion on the Nile became the nucleus of Cairo and in the Fustat, or Old Cairo quarter, Arabian weavers created fustian. Names bear living testimony to France's contribution to the textile art; cambrie is the child of Cambrai, not long since a local point of the West front. Tulle, in capital France made possible the gauzy cloud

Cows and Cloth of Jersey.

"Worsted barely manages to squeeze on the maps of Norfolk county, England, today, so little connection has it with the production of thousands of yards of worsted. The Channel Island of Jersey is well advertised by its cows, but who connects it with the jersey cloth that it originally made for stockings? Axminster in Devon admits it has made no rugs for more than one hundred years.

"These towns and places proudly boast their inventions but the way of inventors is hard—they often fail to get the credit. There is a noble bird in America which graces our fashions annually, but because some one thought it was a native of the Near East we call it turkey. The guinea pig ought to be a Guiana pig and about all panama hats see of Panama is the canal. And finally there is Brussels carpet—it is almost painful to explode the myth, but Brussels makes no brussels carpets. They were made in Wilton, England, another rug "trade-mark," and took the title brussels carpet because the designs imitated the famous Brussels tapestries.

"A man achieves fame's pinnacle, it has been said, when his name is incorporated into the language as a verb. The verb "pasteurize" is a splendid wreath on Pasteur's grave. Few cities or countries give us verbs, although they have given heaps of nouns and adjectives. Sixty miles south of Smyrna, a river empties into the Mediterranean after twisting a 200-mile tortuous course. Modern maps call it the Meander, but once it was known as the Meander, memorialized in the verb "to meander." In 1500 when the classics of Greece and Rome were being saved to the world by the first master printer, Aldus Manutius of Venice brought out an edition of Vergil, dedicating it to the states of Italy. For this volume he created a new font of type, stimulating script. When we italicize today we use that font. A Chinese port serves to label a practice in the verb "shanghai."

"Make a better mousetrap, it is said, and the world will wear a path to your door. Names of towns and countries in our language are trademarks of famous "mouse-traps." Venice early adopted the sentiment "when better mousetraps are made, Venice will make them," and this city has given its name probably to more things than any other. There is tribute to its craftsmen in the terms venetian glass, venetian sauce, venetian red, venetian ball, venetian blind, venetian carpet, venetian chaise, venetian (a textile), venetian dentil, venetian door, venetian embroidery, venetian flat point, venetian mallow, venetian pearl, venetian raised point, venetian soap, venetian smac, venetian swell for organs, venetian white, venetian window, and a venetian, meaning a domino for masquerades.

"Sardine" and "sardonic."
"Sardine" and "sardonic" have little in common but they had the same mother, Sardinia. The first arose from the native practice of preparing small fish and the last from the fact the ancients got there an herb that puckered up the mouth. The Phoenicians got salt at a little port in southern Spain and so they called it "malac," meaning to salt; but when we use its revised form, malaga, we mean a luscious grape. "Vandal" and "frank" are the opinions of dying Rome concerning certain Germanic tribes.

"Long ago a bloody battle was fought near Magenta, Italy. Quite unconscious of the gory allusion, women often wear magenta named for this reddened field. In 1639 a fancy-dressed troop of Croats from Austria wore in France and the consummate glory of their costume the busy business man perpetuates today as his only vanity—the tie, or a cravat, from "Croat."

"Patricians of Rome liked to summer at a pleasant, sheltered seacoast resort they called Baia. Rome's Miami has given its name to thousands of indentations on hundreds of seacoasts and in some tongues it still is "baie."

Deserves Another Name.
"Champagne should be called perignon, and thereby hangs a tale. Certainly the man who may have invented the use of corks to stop bottles as well as a wine deserves a place in the language. Dom Perignon was a monk in charge of the cellars of the Haut Villers abbey in Champagne back in the Eighteenth century. It had been the custom to stop bottles with pads of hemp or cloth steeped in oil, but the monk conceived the use of corks instead. The firmly stoppered wine, he discovered, cut up all sorts of antics, that soon became famous. The Evl One helped in its manufacture, so rumor spread, but finally Dom Perignon's secret leaked out. The world goes elsewhere than to Champagne for the connoisseur today, though it is called champagne, forgetting Perignon.

"The English language is full of geography. But how many of us connect these terms with cities or places: lima beans, leonic, limbrick, china, coffee, canaries, bauxite, saavy, gasconade, troy weight, sial, cologne, bologna sausage, tangerine, derby, castile soap and astrakhan?"

Climbs Into Jail

Walla Walla, Wash.—Jack O'Neal succeeded in breaking into the county jail but found he had only a one-way ticket. Detected climbing to the second story, where he hoped to enter a window, he explained that he wanted to visit a friend who was serving time. A bottle of denatured alcohol was found in his possession, and he was conducted to a cell.

BEGGARS' GAIN LARGE INCOMES IN LEIPZIG

Blind woman said to gather in $250 a Week—$15 to $25 a Day is Common.

Leipzig—It seemingly pays to beg in Leipzig. The municipal welfare office of this city has unearthed facts as to the profits of the begging profession that would seem fanciful were they not borne out by first-hand testimony.

One blind woman, for instance, manages to scrape together 1000 marks, about $250 a week. Daily earnings of $15 or $25 a day are not at all unusual with men and women beggars of experience.

Two brothers who were offered jobs declined them, saying they were making much more money with their "concerts." These "concerts" consisted in singing before the houses of the middle class and following the performance with a sad story ending in a plea for alms. One of the brothers, it developed, spent his Sundays driving a motorcycle with his fiancée.

In another instance a beggar offered the owner of a certain clever dog $100 for the loan of the animal during begging hours, because, he said, the animal would help his business. Another beggar engaged two cripples to beg for him. He paid them a regular salary, but claimed the entire earnings. In still another case a beggar who pretended he was a disabled war veteran paid two watchmen 25 cents an hour each to warn him whenever a policeman appeared.

Investigation further developed that one of the most lucrative forms of begging was that of exhibiting children by way of winning public sympathy. It was discovered that there exists a school in Leipzig, at which children are taught by experienced beggars what to say and what sort of doleful face to put up. Children thus trained are then hired out to professional beggars, who in return hand over a share of the proceeds to the director of the school.

American Broadcasting Stations Most Efficient

London.—American radio broadcasting stations as a general rule have a greater radius of transmission than British stations of the same power.

During the last year he has made six voyages to the Mediterranean from the United States and has consistently listened in on each voyage on his home-made four-tube set. He was able to pick up KDKA, Pittsburgh; WBZ, Springfield, Mass.; and WGY, New York, the whole way across the Atlantic to Gibraltar, and on one occasion got KDKA on three tubes while in port on the west coast of Spain.

Other American stations were picked up on two tubes at distances as great as 2,500 miles with good results, but when using four tubes the correspondant was seldom able to pick up British stations at distances of 1,000 miles.

Feel Kindly Toward Carrizozo People

As we reported last week, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. G. Dalley and Clarence Lantis, Robert's friend and chum, who was with him in his misfortune, left last Friday with the remains of young Dalley for their home in Bluffton, Indiana, arriving there Sunday afternoon at 1:30. The remains were interred in the home cemetery, attended by a large number of friends, besides different societies such as the Wells County Bar Association, the Rotarians and other organizations of a fraternal and religious nature. In a letter to Mrs. G. C. Bigelow of Alamogordo avenue where the boys first stopped after Robert was taken ill, Mrs. Dalley appreciates the kindness of Carrizozo people as a whole and wishes to extend the thanks of herself and Mr. Dalley for extended courtesies and acts of kindness while here. To the bereaved parents, the sympathy of our community is extended and we are sorry that their short stay under such painful and regretful circumstances prevented us from becoming better acquainted with them.

FOREST ROAD WARNOCK MINE SOUTH (Alamogordo News)

Mr. B. L. Hughes, Road Engineer of the District Forester's Office at Albuquerque, and L. E. Cottam, who has been in charge of Forest Road construction on the Carson National Forest, for the past year, will arrive in Alamogordo on March 20. They will make a survey of the proposed road from the junction of the Glendcroft and present Dry Canyon road up the canyon and across to the Warnock ranch. As soon as this survey is completed a road camp will be established and construction work of the road will be started; this work will be under the supervision of Mr. Cottam.

The portion of this road to be constructed at this time will be from a point near the Warnock mine to the Warnock ranch. This will give access by auto trucks to an area of high fire hazard, which heretofore has been inaccessible. It is proposed to improve and extend this road as the funds become available.

Assistant Forest Ranger R. V. Galt reports that Joe Garcia of Carrizozo was fined $10 and costs in the court of Justice of the Peace at Carrizozo on March 9, for the violation of Chapter 23 of the laws of the State of New Mexico. These laws have to deal with the illegal cutting and taking of wood.

AMERICAN WAR VETERAN OF THE SOUTHWEST, DIES OUT IN CALIFORNIA

Sergeant Dreben, referred to by Gen. Pershing as "the Finest Soldier I Ever Met," Dies at Hollywood.

Hollywood, Calif., March 16.—Sergeant Sam Dreben, 47, soldier of fortune and American war hero; picturesque figure of Mexican and Central American revolutions and friend of Gen. Pershing, died here today.

Dreben fought on scores of battlefields, sometimes as an American soldier, sometimes as a free lance. Perhaps his greatest exploit was his World War feat that won him the Distinguished Service Cross. It was in October, 1918, in the last great offensive of the war. Dreben had been cut out at the head of a small detachment of volunteers to dislodge a force of Germans blocking the American advance at St. Etienne. Before he led his men back from the encounter they had killed 85 Germans, captured four machine guns and taken two prisoners. Of his own men, not one was wounded.

JAPANESE POPULATION IN UNITED STATES

Increased from 72,000 in 1910 to 111,000 in 1920.

Santa Fe New Mexican: In view of the efforts to import an army of Japanese farmers into New Mexico, it will be interesting no doubt, to study the population statistics of the little brown men in the United States.

In 1910, there were 72,157, the official census states, but in 1920, that figure had increased to 111,010. While the Japs increased in number the Chinese decreased. There were 71,531 Chinese in this country in 1910, and only 61,639 in 1920.

Other "brown people" show only small figures. For instance, there were in 1920: Filipinos 6,633. (Only 189 in 1910.) Hindus, 2,607. Koreans, 1,224; (Only 442 in 1910.) Samoans, Hawaiian, Malays, Maoris and Samoans, 154, (Only 8 in 1910.)

Where are the Japs?

Where are the Japs? The usual answer is "in California." But California had 71,922 in 1920 and only 41,256 in 1910. Next to California, Washington state comes with 17,337. And then Oregon is third with 4,151. Idaho had 1,649 and Montana 1,974. New York had 2,436, and Utah 2,936, while Wyoming had 1,194.

Few Japs in New Mexico. As is pretty well known New Mexico has few Japanese. There were 251 in 1920 and 257 in 1910. The state lost seven in ten years.

There are states in the union where the Japanese can be counted on one hand. New Hampshire shows no great attraction for Japs—there is only one. Georgia has four and so has Delaware while Mississippi has but two, the same number as North Carolina.

The Japanese may be regarded as belonging to the great Mongolian family, although ethnologists recognize more than one element in the population. They are a frugal, skillful persevering, courageous race as is proved by the astonishing strides they have made in the past half to three quarters of a century.

The Japanese in foreign lands have been regarded with suspicion because it is said they do not intend to settle down for life, but are merely gathering information, money and power, to transfer and then to the Flower Kingdom. They are intensely patriotic, also active in getting information to aid their home country. The Japanese have learned much from the United States; they know from any progress and they are always learning and doing. Their critics say they are always scheming as well as dreaming.
