TALKING TOO MUCH

WHEN he was ambassador to the court of St. James, the late Mr. Walter Hines Page, in a letter to Colonel House, tells the story of two colored citizens one of whom was doing his utmost to pick a quarrel with the other without apparent progress. The active member in the attempted altercation stormed and swore and went the limit of his lung-power and vocabulary without getting a rise out of his unresponsive listener. When he had reached the breaking point of his endurance, he blurted out, "Look here, you kinky-headed, fat-nosed, slab-footed nigger, I warn you, 'fore God, don't keep givin' me none of your d-d silence."

There are few things more disconcerting, more confusing, more difficult to meet or understand than silence. It is the one thing, perhaps, that gives death its chief terror, for excepting for a few insane and incoherent sentences, a few mysterious and meaningless physical manifestations not very convincingly attested by nervous, overwrought witnesses, nothing has ever come from the great beyond but silence—a silence that sometimes leaves us awestruck and uncertain.

You can't quarrel with a man who says nothing, you can't sell him anything, he disarms you and leaves you following a blind trail. He has a strength that cannot be overcome. Nothing can cover up ignorance so successfully as silence, accompanied by a look of intelligence, when silence is possible. Nothing is more impressive than silence, nothing so weak as talking too much.

A physician I knew years ago acquired a considerable reputation for his knowledge and his skill. He had a fine figure and so little art in putting his clothes on. There was a look of wisdom on his face, when he entered a sickroom. He exercised more than usual care and deliberation in questioning and examining his patients, but other than this he seldom said anything, made no predictions—no specific statements as to what ailed the patient or how soon he would be relieved. He never had anything, therefore, to take back, and he got credit for being tremendously wise. In point of fact he was probably below average. He simply had judgment to keep his mouth shut, and his silence brought him the reputation of having wisdom.

Most of us talk too much.

FORT STANTON NEWS

(Fort Stanton Correspondent)

Snow fell at the Fort on Tuesday night covering the ground with a thin film.

Mrs. Wunsch has gone on a short visit to Newton, Kansas, and Mr. Wunsch has been away as delegate of the Fort Stanton Trowel Club to the Grand Lodge meeting in Roswell.

Miss Mary Hale, daughter of Mr. Peter G. Hale, of Ruidoso, is visiting the Sellers at the Fort and attending the Capitan High School third year class.

It is reported that several members of the family of J. V. Tully of Ruidoso have been suffering with flu and pneumonia and that Mrs. Tully has been particularly ill. The sincerest sympathy of the Fort is extended.

Dr. and Mrs. Warner and family, with many others attended the basketball games between Alamogordo and Carrizozo.

A large number from the Fort attended the Dance at Carrizozo Saturday night.

In the House of Representatives February 4, 1926.

Mr. Morrow introduced the following bill; which was referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds and ordered to be printed.

To authorize certain proposed improvements at the United States Marine Hospital at Fort Stanton, New Mexico.

1 Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in 2 Congress assembled,

3 That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby,

Taxpayers' Associations

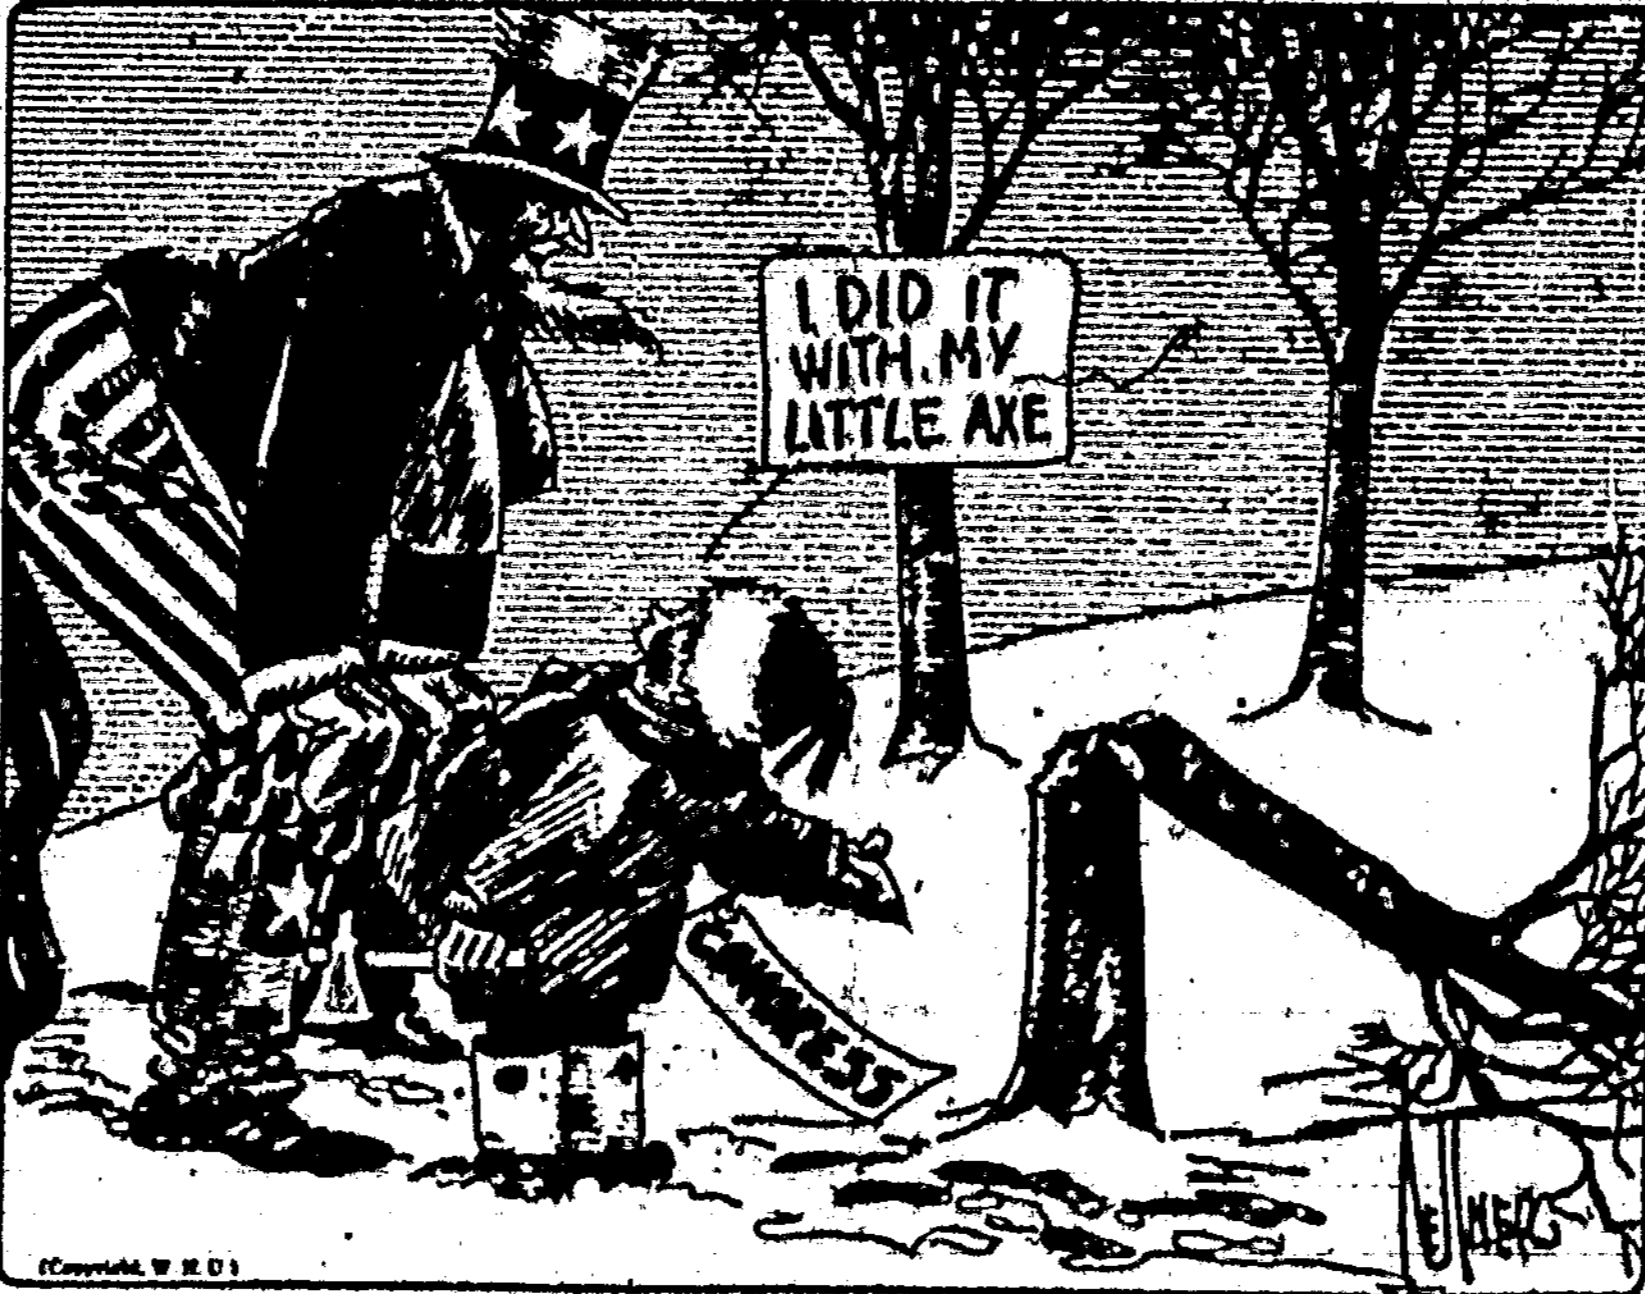

Since the Arizona and New Mexico taxpayers organized ten or eleven years ago, many similar associations have appeared in various states. The rapid increase in public expenditures, which the needs of an advancing civilization seem to demand, made necessary a greater degree of interest on the part of those who support governmental functions and activities, "Why not?" asks the Taxpayers' Association of New Mexico.

A form of government like ours in all phases naturally involves the active interest of the people and their intelligent participation in the administration of public affairs.

GO EASY ON BOND ISSUES

New Mexico is menaced by an avalanche of bond issues. Taxpayers are warned to give careful consideration to any petition presented to them. It may be a proposal for voting unnecessary bonds and adding to the already heavy burden of taxation, says the Taxpayers' Association of New Mexico. Bond issues are devices for securing something which is desired by the expedient of going in debt for it. Indications of better conditions have

Aftermath of the Big Community Meeting

Since the big community meeting held at the court house Monday night, the following committees have been appointed: Location, T. A. Spencer, Dr. Johnson, Mrs. J. B. French, Mrs. Louis Adams, Mrs. A. J. Rolland, and John Harley. Disposition and use, Attorneys A. H. Hudspeth, H. B. Hamilton and Geo. B. Barber; L. A. Jolly and Mrs. A. J. Rolland. Plans: E. M. Brickley, R. E. Lemon, Mesdames Albert Ziegler, F. E. Richard, S. G. Allen, Finance: Dr. Carl E. Freeman, H. J. Garrard, Mesdames Maggie Wetmore, Geo. Dingwall, Vera Cole.

The committee on construction has not as yet been named, but the same will be appointed and names will appear in the next issue of this paper. Chairmen of the various committees, together with S. W. Kelsey and Mrs. T. A. Spencer will constitute an executive committee to act on matters not under the province of the respective committees' duties.

As the finance committee has not as yet, waited on anyone, the following donations have been made as follows: T. A. Spencer, $100; M. U. Finley, $100; Dr. Johnson, $75; S. W. Kelsey, $50; J. M. Beck, $25, Peter Johnson, Jr., $12.50. Many more are making offers of liberal sums.

Albert Pinson and Hugh Cassidy of the forest service have reported conversations with Sydney, New South Wales, Australia, Alaska, Porto Rico, Toronto, and with a broadcaster 11,000 feet up in the Peruvian Andes, by means of a home-made instrument set up by Pinson, who said the outfit consisted of two 199 receiver tubes, one oscillator tube, one tube for hissing modification, one D. V. 3 tube, two dry cell batteries. Wave length of receiver, one to 12,000 meters, transmitter, one and seven-tenths to 200 meters.—Santa Fe New Mexican.

led to an optimism on the part of officials having authority to spend the peoples' money. In spite of the fact that the assessed valuation of the state is less than it was ten years ago, some communities are listening to the siren voices of the "boosters" and bond salesmen. We have just recovered from the effects of several hard years and yet, it is proposed to take more and more money out of the taxpayers' pockets to pay debt charges. What prospect is there for tax reduction unless the taxpayers protect themselves and register a vigorous "No!" Let's wait a year or two, until our farmers, livestock growers, business men and our banks are on a more firm and paying basis. "The best source of wealth," said Cicero, "is economy."

Eating House Notes

(By S. L. Northlane)

Isaac Barth, native of New Mexico, born at Cubero, active politician in the Democratic party from statehood until 1920, was a guest at the Eating House on Monday, being here on legal business. As an attorney, Mr. Barth does much legal business in the federal courts and has been in Washington, D. C., four times during the past year. During his activity in politics in this state, he served as state senator from the district composed of Bernalillo, Sandoval and San Juan counties. After 1920, he moved to Los Angeles. Being asked for a statement, he said: "I am pleased to see better conditions in the state and am also pleased with its political complexion."

E. A. Schreiber, representative of the Western Newspaper Union of Denver, Colo., was a hotel guest Monday and Tuesday, spending his business hours at the Outlook office. Mr. Schreiber is an asset to the institution which he represents. His natural, courteous disposition, which is never overdone, the straight-forwardness of his business propositions, intensifies faith in his corporation as well as to create a desire on the part of dealers to have him call again.

E. H. Sweet, proprietor of the Carrizozo Eating House, J. S. Mactavish of Magdalena and Geo. Miller of Socorro, left here last Sunday, arriving at Roswell Sunday evening and after a short stay, made a trip over to Vaughn and back to Roswell, attended the Masonic Grand Lodge meeting and returned to Carrizozo Wednesday.

Arrivals for the first part of the week were:

NOGAL ITEMS

By "Bill O'Fare"

Lazy Luke sez: "Them furren counts, dukes and kings haven't a durned thing on our Pullman cars for long winded names."

The Humane Society says Florida can have all the bull fights they like. This is the first we knew of them fighting the bull, we knew they had been throwing it pretty lively the past few months.

A warning says: "Watch your $100 bills." That's good, now just tell us where to get the bills.

Friday 13th: This year has only one Friday 13th. Last year had three, and I shall never forget the 2nd Friday, 13th. It was a cold windy day, just the kind of a day for Friday 13th. I got up in the morning with a headache and a case of the hives, just the kind of an affliction for Friday, 13th. I have a milk cow, a gentle and kind brute, but awfully playful, just like a calf. In the morning when I open the barn door she will rush out into the lot, kick up her heels and play until I put her feed in the box, then she comes back very serious like and submits to a good sound milking without a bit of remonstrance. Well, on this particular Friday, 13th, I was more concerned with my hives and headache than the durned old cow.

When I opened the barn door I forgot to step behind the door until the half-witted thing could have her morning's romp. She made a bolt through the door and struck me full in the stomach with her head, knocking me across the lot, spilled the bucket of bran and stepped in the milk pail. How she managed to do all this with one playful leap, through the barn door, I shall never know, but she done it just the same.

As I lay in a crumpled heap against the fence, the fool came rushing towards me again. I turned on my all fours to rise, and I'll be durned if she didn't strike me with her front feet and knocked me, head first, thru the fence. By this time I was almost insane with anger. Had I been near an ax I would have undoubtedly chopped her head off. I straightened myself out on the ground and groaned a bit, cursed and got to my feet with a firm determination to break'er of that trick of rushing out when I opened the door, or break her neck. I drove her in the barn, closed the door and waited a few moments, rubbing my bruises. Thinking that she had forgotten that I had opened the door once already, I opened it again, but first I armed myself with a club about three inches in diameter, stepped back to get a good swing, and waited. She must have been wise for she merely stood in the door and lowed for her feed. I picked up the bucket with what bran was left and went inside the barn. I poured the bran in the box and turned to get my milk pail, and if she didn't step on my left foot and stand there, the stupid fool! I had to fairly push her off for she had found her feed and was more interested in eating than she was in a mere man's foot.

When her blamed foot did eventually slide off, it slid my big toe nail with it. When I came to myself I held one leg of what once was a perfectly good

GOLF

For the Average Golfer. This series of articles is written in the hope that it will add somewhat to the knowledge and perhaps the golfing skill of the average player, and especially of the average beginner. This includes a good 95 per cent of all devotees of the good old game, the sport that was being legislated against when Columbus discovered America. It is understood that some of the subjects treated will be an old story to expert golfers and even to those students of the game whose knowledge of the golf swing outruns their ability to bring in low scores. The articles will have served their purpose if they can suggest methods which can be used by the average player for the improvement of his or her game; it being doubtful if the golfer ever lived who felt no ambition to raise the general level of his skill.

With the knowledge that this ambition is universal, it seems a real pity that the majority of average golfers, the majority of golfers, in fact, began playing and are continuing along lines that make improvement almost impossible. There is nothing in all sport so delicately adjusted nor so susceptible of getting out of gear as the golf swing. The youngster, especially the observant caddy, picks up a good swing by imitating skillful players and anchors the ability thus obtained by constant practice.

This power of imitation is almost completely lacking in the adult. He or she must learn verbally as well as visually. There are thousands of volunteer spreaders of misinformation to be found on golf courses, but getting instruction from them is on a par with handling a broken watch for repair to a blacksmith.

The professional golf instructor should, he consulted until such time as the golf student has an established swing and should continue to be consulted whenever the swing develops a fault. The average golfer, who has taken no lessons, or few of them, is more than apt to keep his handicap of a year's standing to the end of his playing days.

And this foreword to the average golfer is the suggestion that he or she begin again under competent instruction.

Bumper Meeting I. O. O. F.

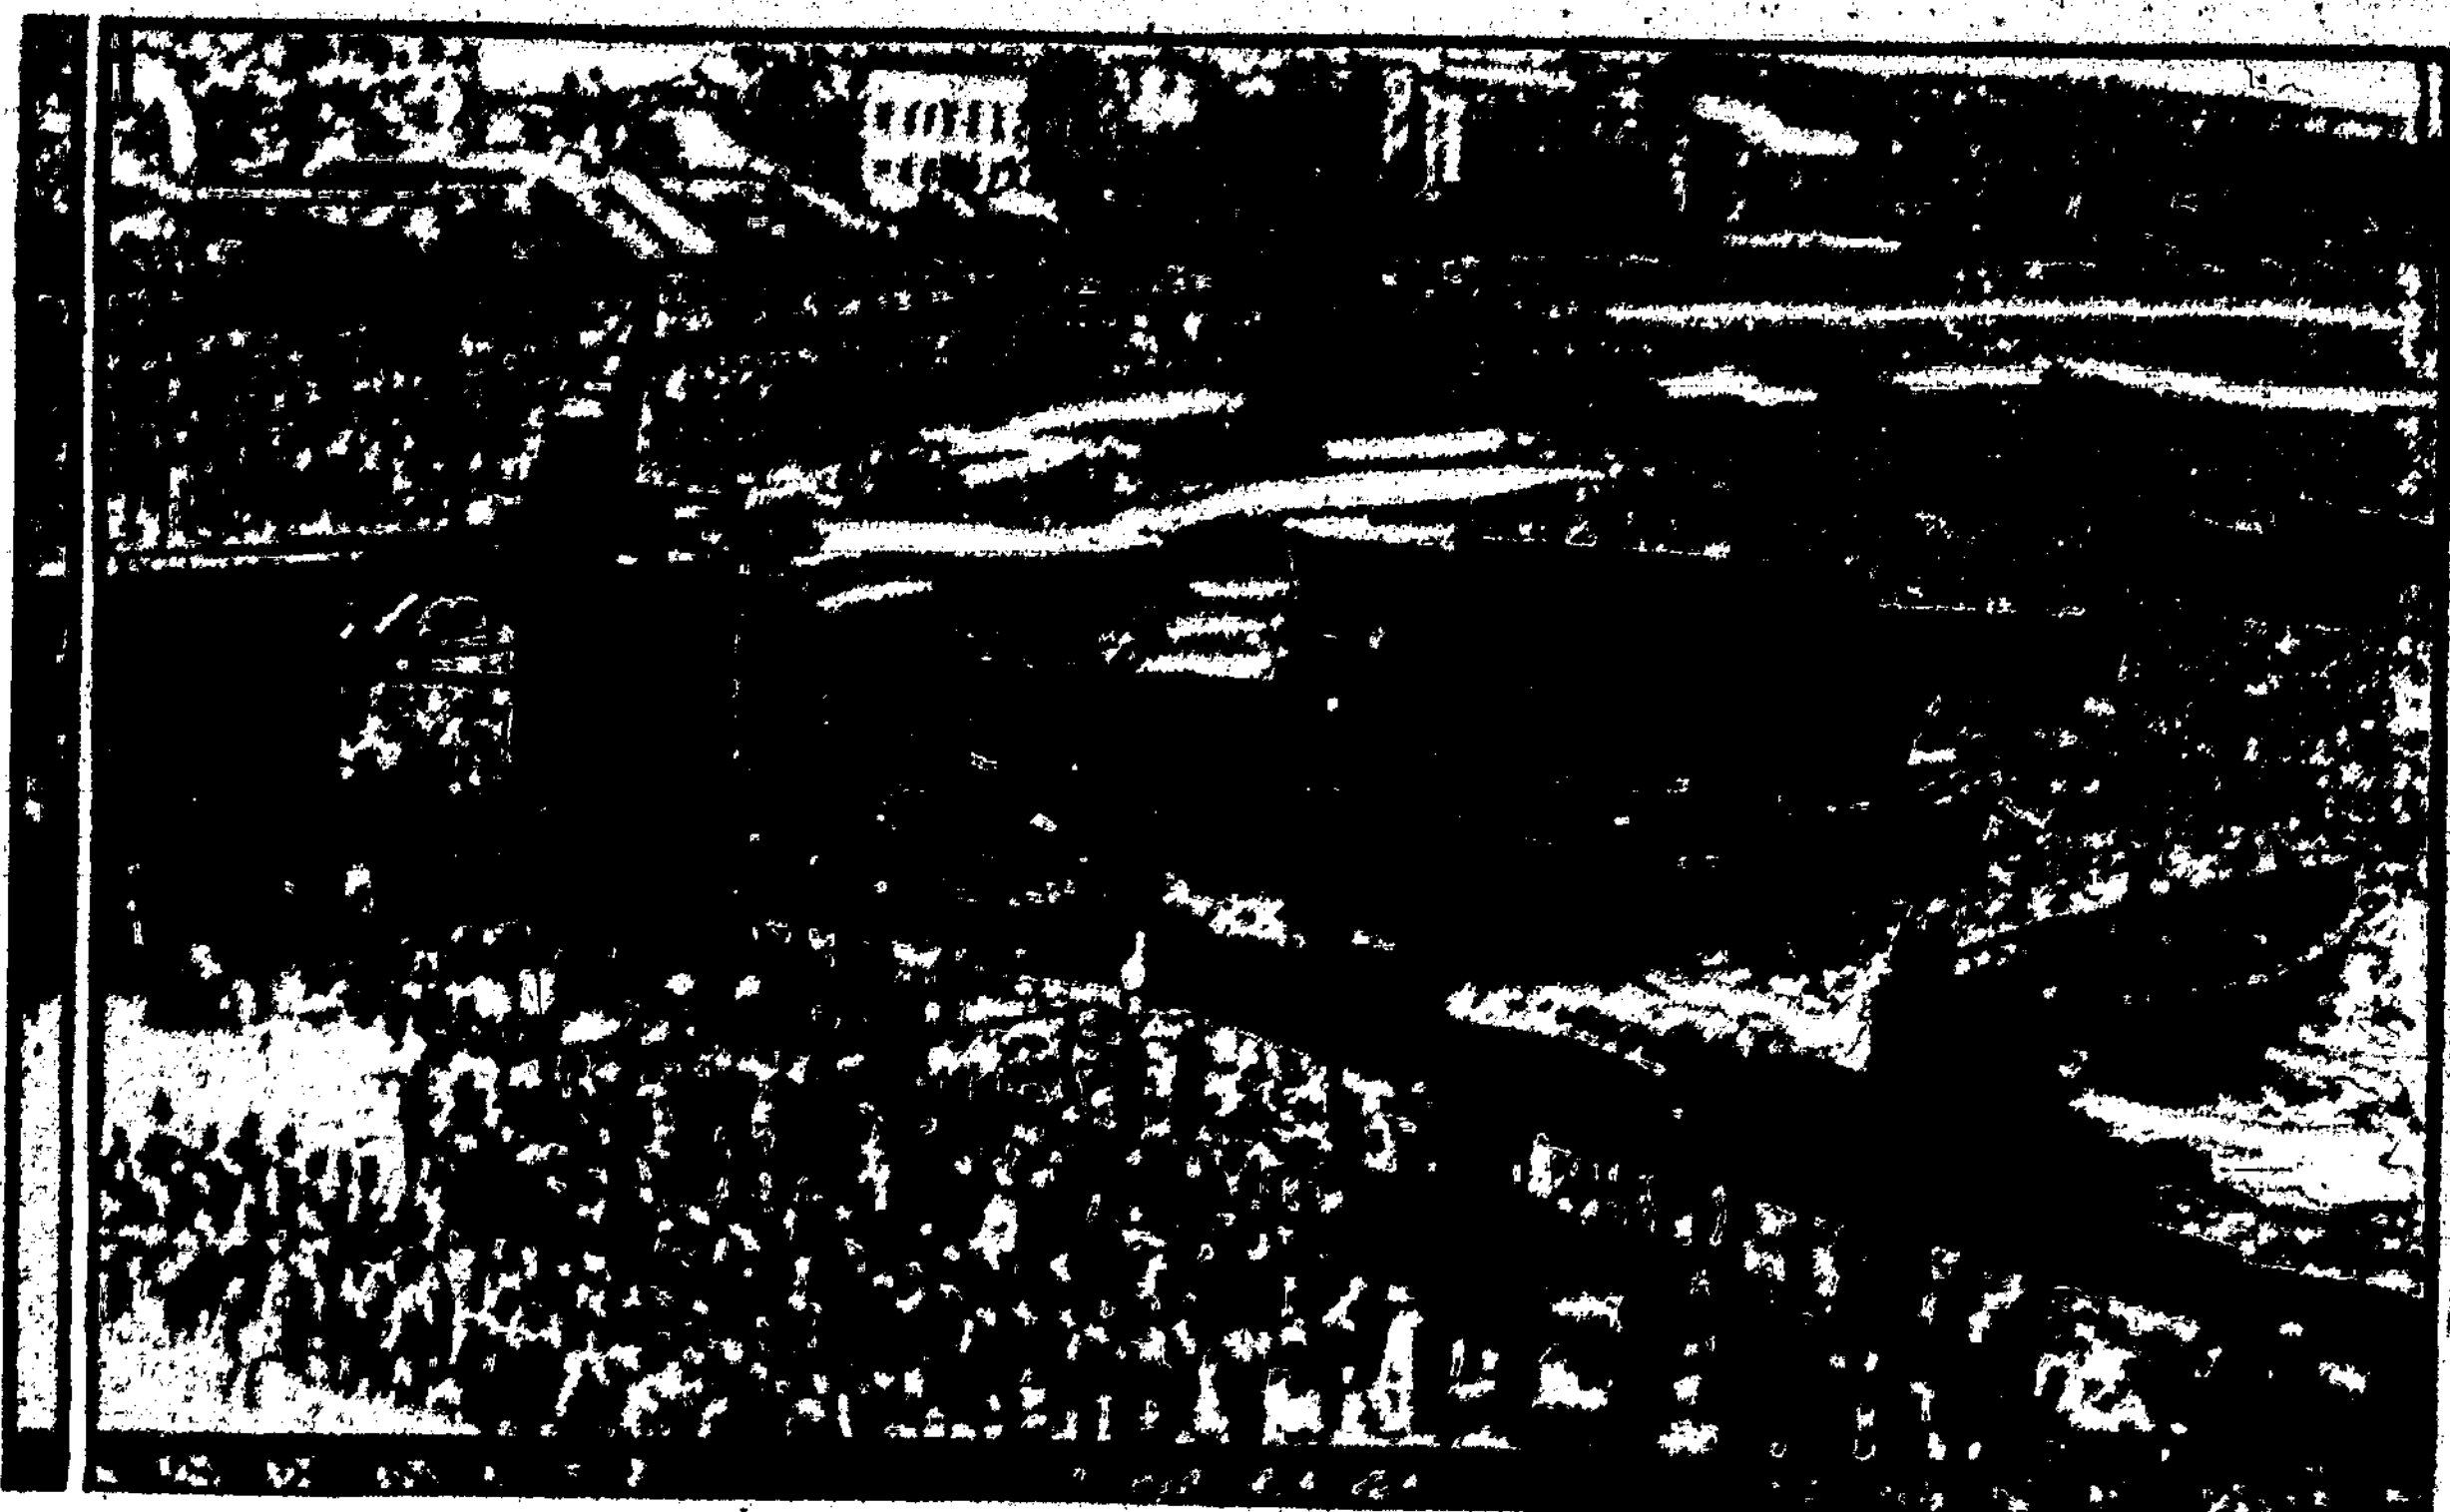

Tuesday night one of the largest meetings of the local Three-Linkers was held since the lodge assumed its new location. Cars were parked in most of the space surrounding the hall and the lodge room was well filled. After the meeting, team practice was held and degree master Kelt announced everything in readiness for work in the Initiatory degree for Tuesday night, Feb. 23, at which meeting, two candidates will receive the Initiatory degree and after initiation, an oyster supper will be served in the dining room. A good attendance is urgently requested.

milk stool, and the old cow was climbing the fence. Needless to say, we had no milk that day.

I made my way, limping and groaning, to the house and went back to bed. Friday 13th, comes this year in August and I have marked it on the calendar, so I don't intend to get out of bed at all on that day, and if I do get up, you can bet I don't intend to try to milk no durned fool cow. Yours for better milking machines, Bill O'Fare.

Landing of Italian Troops to Check Somali Trouble

It is largely in the hands of native chiefs. An uprising there necessitated the Italian government's sending troops to restore quiet.

STATE NEWS from All Parts of NEW MEXICO

Construction work on the new steel bridge which will span the San Francisco river near Alma has been started according to reports from Silver City. A three-day convention of electrical and telephone men, under the auspices of the New Mexico Electrical Association, was held in Albuquerque, February 15 to 17.

Approximately 5,000 acres of irrigated land on the Storrie project will be turned under in preparation for spring planting as soon as the cold abates sufficiently to enable the farmers to plow their fields.

For the year 1924, New Mexico had only sixty-three failures as reported by R. G. Dunn & Co., and they were for the most part able to pay a high percentage on the dollar. The assets were $981,000 and the liabilities $994,000—in round numbers. Hence, the total losses were only $13,000, according to these figures.

Gov. A. T. Hannett has approved the court-martial sentence of one day in jail against Private William M. Childers of headquarters cavalry troop at Albuquerque, who was convicted on the charge of 'constantly missing drills. A warrant for Childers' arrest was issued on action of District Attorney A. A. Sedillo.

A bond issue of $925,000, covering all kinds of city improvements in Albuquerque, was recommended to the city commission by a special citizens' committee. It calls for $100,000 for parks, park improvements and playgrounds; $50,000 for opening streets; $400,000 for sanitary sewers; $125,000 for storm sewers; $250,000 for water mains and extensions.

Mrs. H. Prevost, mother of Marie Prevost, the film star, was killed and Al Christie, screen comedy producer, and Vera Steadman, motion picture actress, were injured in an automobile accident, twenty-three miles east of Lordsburg, N. M. The accident occurred when the car, a heavy machine owned by Miss Steadman, overturned while travelling about thirty miles an hour, the message said.

That the Navajo Indian brought over $1,500,000 into New Mexico last year was declared by Reuben Perry superintendent of the Albuquerque U. S. Indian School, in a talk to the Kiwanis Club in Albuquerque. Through the sale of blankets last year the Navajos brought into the state $250,000; pigons shipped by them brought in $300,000; silver articles, $25,000; wool, $600,000; sheep and cattle, $500,000.

A temporary reorganization of the New Mexico State Farm Bureau, pending ratification of the proposed constitution by the county farm bureaus, was formed at State College in January by representatives of farm bureaus of Dona Ana, Hidalgo, San Miguel and Luna counties. Officers were chosen as follows: President, J. R. Poo, Las Cruces; vice president, J. A. Price, Bellview; treasurer, C. N. Moore, Dexter; executive committee, Mrs. C. E. Locke, Mesilla Park, and W. P. Thorpe, Las Cruces.

At a mass meeting held at the Gallup court house the new directors of the Inter-Tribal Indian Ceremonial Association were elected and the dates for this year's program set for August 25, 26 and 27. Arrangements have been completed for the employing of a full time secretary and the drive for funds will be started at once. The association is now out of debt and in good shape financially for the coming show. The directors for the present year are: Horace Moses, S. F. Stacher, Mike Kirk, F. S. Lawrence, W. H. Morris, T. H. Seymour and B. I. Staples.

In order to protect the regular and volunteer firemen of Raton, the city council at the last meeting ordered a group policy to be written for the twelve men on the force. This insurance provides for the payment of $2,000 to the beneficiary in case of death while the fireman is on duty and $15 per week if disabled by injury. The cost of the group policy is about $15 per man.

The state publicity bureau created by the Seventh Legislature to advertise New Mexico's natural resources was appointed last week by Governor Hannett. Kyle S. Crichton of Albuquerque heads the bureau as publicity commissioner and T. S. Trebell has been selected as secretary. There are nine assistant commissioners, one from each judicial district: R. M. Jackson, Aztec; Miss Adela C. Holmquist, Albuquerque; N. C. Frenger, Las Cruces; M. E. Noble, East Las Vegas; C. P. Austin, Lordsburg; John Becker, Jr., Helen; Jake Lujan, Clayton; Fox Weatherford, Clovis. A $5,000 appropriation is available for the bureau for the current fiscal year, but only the secretary gets a salary.

George H. Cook who has been in the office of public relations of the district forestry service for the past four years, has left Albuquerque for Washington, D. C. where he will become an expert in exhibits in the office of exhibits with the department of agriculture.

The beet sugar factory project for San Juan county is receiving what may be termed enthusiastic support from scores of farmers, all merchants, bankers and professional men; in fact, every resident of the county is lending appreciable support.

FOOD FOR THE FAMILY

If the housewife would keep her family well, happy and enjoying their food it is needful that she study her meal, planning carefully. If by hook or crook children can be trained to like the sort of foods good for them, the mother may thank herself and bring down the blessing of all others who entertain them, upon her head. Did you ever entertain a man or woman at your table, who "can't eat this and we never eat that," or if they are not quite so crude about expressing it in words, yet refuse to eat what is good wholesome food, set before them? If not, then you have never felt like committing murder and should congratulate yourself upon what you have escaped.

Hearty Salad.—Take one and one-half cupsful of cooked tongue, stir into it lightly with a fork two hard-cooked eggs cut into eighths. Marinate with French dressing, adding one cupful of stringless cooked beans cut into inch pieces. Pile on a mound of crisp lettuce and cover with mayonnaise. Garnish with overlapping slices of ripe tomato.

Shad-roe Salad.—Cook in butter one medium-sized shad's roe cut into small pieces, with one sliced cucumber, two hard-cooked eggs, stirring lightly with a fork. Serve on a bed of watercress. Garnish the top with mayonnaise and on top of this long strips of cucumber overlapping each other.

Sardines and Tomato Salad.—Peel four small ripe tomatoes and scoop out the centers. Chill. Mix the tomato pulp with celery, green pepper sliced, olives and season with salt to taste. Fill the tomatoes with this mixture and place on lettuce leaves. Garnish the top with a spoonful of mayonnaise sprinkled with chopped chives. Lay the sardines over the top, two on each tomato. Anchovies may be used in place of the sardines if liked.

Casseroles of Eggs.—Wash one-fourth pound of mushrooms, remove the skins, slice and simmer twelve minutes in a saucepan containing two tablespoons of butter, three tablespoons of water, one-half teaspoonful of salt and a few dashes of cayenne. Turn this mixture when cooked into a casserole, add five beaten eggs, seasoned with salt and pepper, one-fourth cupful of milk, and one and one-half tablespoonsful of minced parsley. Sprinkle three tablespoonsful of buttered bread crumbs on top and bake in a pan of water for 35 minutes in a moderate oven.

A Symposium of Salads. We all crave green things, which means that our health demands them. What is more tempting than a succulent, well-chilled and attractive-looking salad? One thing is in favor of salads is we can prepare them with but little work from the common foods that are almost always at hand in any modern home.

A crisp head of lettuce, well washed, drained and chilled, will form the basis for hundreds of salads. When there is nothing to serve with it except the comely onion, it may be shredded very fine and sprinkled over the lettuce, then with a well-seasoned dressing one has a most tasty salad. French dressing is one of the most popular for green foods. Take one tablespoonful of vinegar or lemon juice to three of oil; salt, pepper, and other seasonings may vary. Beat until thick, chill well before serving. A bit of ice in the salad bowl will add greatly to the salad dressing.

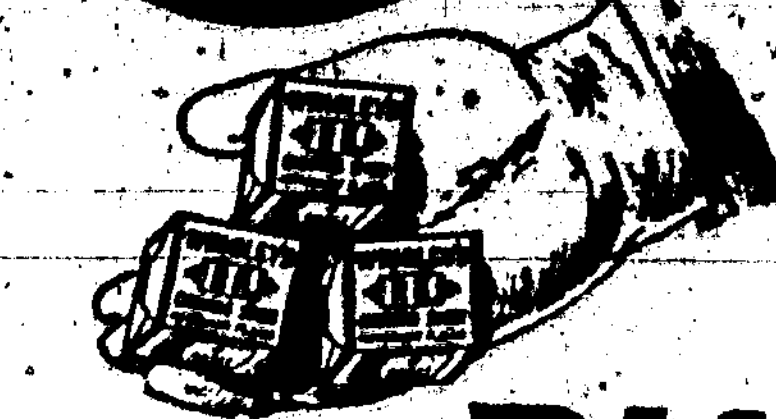

Asparagus and Egg Salad.—Cut one green pepper into narrow rings. Remove the yolks of two hard-cooked eggs and cut the whites into strips. Slip three asparagus tips through the pepper ring and place on crisp head lettuce. Sprinkle over this the egg whites. Place a spoonful of mayonnaise on either side of the pepper ring. Garnish with the grated egg yolk and a dash of paprika.

Vegetable Salad.—Make a border around a chop plate of cooked, finely chopped and seasoned spinach. Place two small heaps of chopped cooked beets at the ends, a half cupful of cooked lima beans between and two piles of green peas, cooked, one on either side. Garnish the top with grated egg yolks and narrow strips of egg whites. Sprinkle with the following dressing: Two-thirds of a cupful of olive oil, three tablespoonfuls of vinegar, one-fourth teaspoonful of salt, one-third of a cupful of tomato catsup and a few dashes of cayenne. Surround the spinach with a border of small curly lettuce leaves.

Macaroni or spaghetti with a little tomato for moisture may be used in the same way, adding roast of beef or chicken, tongue or minced veal instead of the ham.

Community Spirit

TO THOSE who thought the community spirit dead in Carrizozo, it only required attendance at the meeting held at the Court House Monday night to strongly convince them to the contrary, for one of the most representative crowds that have ever congregated in the interest of any project of a community nature, gathered at that place to consider the advisability of erecting and maintaining what will be known as a Community Hall.

The meeting was opened by Sheriff S.W. Kelsey, who stated the object of the same.

After the meeting was opened, in order to arrange matters in official form, Mr. Kelsey was elected as president of that organization, and Mrs. T. A. Spencer as secretary-treasurer.

After organization was effected, talks were made by several citizens who, after expressions of good-will toward the movement, backed up their talks by handsome donations. Committees were ordered appointed by the chair and the same will be done as rapidly as he can choose the proper parties to perform the duties.

A committee on a location for the Community Hall is now out and as this is the most important of all at the present time, a selection will be made shortly. As far as the donations for building the Hall are concerned, it is a foregone conclusion that the amount necessary will be raised without much effort, the proffered donations at the start being sufficient evidence of the successful outcome of the project.

In a short time, the committee will wait on the citizens at which time, all will have an opportunity to contribute as they feel themselves able to. No one will be asked to donate beyond what they feel they can consistently fulfill, but as this is one and we might say, the foremost of our local needs, the people will be ready with obligations sufficient to meet the want.

Cows Cooled by Breezy Electric Fans

Windy Billy would have a right to express astonishment, in his own peculiar language, if he were to return from the grave and witness the changes on the old Texas ranch where he swung his sixty-foot lariat some years gone by. He would see strange sights, resulting from the electrical age that has come since he has gone. He would see range cows comfortably sheltered in barns, the windows of which are screened, the floors covered, the interior lighted by electric lights, and the air cooled by electric fans.

Letters have been mailed from the State Comptroller to local gasoline dealers that according to the records of the department, they have overlooked applying for a retail gasoline dealer's license for 1926.

The law provides that the fee of $5.00 be paid by December first of each year for license for the next calendar year (in this case, January 1st to December 31st, 1926.) The law also fixes a penalty of 5 per cent and interest of 1 per cent per month until paid, to be added to the fee when the same is not paid on the above date.

200 YEARS of WASHINGTON

Calvin Coolidge

Commission to Arrange National Celebration in 1932 of His Birth

By JOHN DICKINSON SHERMAN.

GEORGE WASHINGTON, the "Father of His Country," the United States of America, the richest, most powerful and most prosperous nation of earth was born February 22, 1732. February 22, 1932, will therefore be the two hundredth anniversary of his birth. That year is to see a bi-centennial celebration of his birth the like of which history has never seen in honor of a human being. Congress has created the United States Commission for the Celebration of the Two Hundredth Anniversary of the Birth of George Washington. President Calvin Coolidge is ex-officio chairman of this commission and thus briefly outlines the purpose of the celebration and suggests its scope:

"The two hundredth anniversary of General Washington's birth will be an occasion of such significance, not only to our own country but to the entire world, that it is manifestly fitting that the American nation should appropriately observe it.

"But beyond this it is felt that as the life, the career and the achievements of Washington belong not to a single nation, but to all humanity, it is proper that the nation founded under his leadership should invite all other nations and peoples to join in the observance of this anniversary. The character and the efforts of Washington have made an impression upon the whole world, so profound as to have affected the very course of history and to have touched the lives of all who today live in this world.

"We cannot doubt that the influence of Washington's example, the leadership which he gave in behalf of liberal institutions and mankind's advancement have been among the great benefactions conferred upon the race. His ranks and will always rank among the foremost of those who were providentially designated to perform great and lasting services.

"Every consideration of national pride in him as an American, of gratitude for the distinctions which he brought to us as a people, and of satisfaction in the universal recognition which has been freely rendered to his name and memory, dictates that this nation should take the lead in such a proper acknowledgment as will make the approaching bi-centennial an occasion of universal inspiration.

"As it was the fortune of America to give such a character to the world, so it is the obligation of America to insure that all men shall be invited and encouraged to consider his noble example and to benefit increasingly through a better understanding of the ideals which animated his life.

"For the present, it is impossible more specifically to suggest the purposes and character of the commemoration which it is proposed to arrange. The commission will in due time take proper measures to enlist the interest of the nations in the observance of this inspiring anniversary."

The United States Commission for the Celebration of the Two Hundredth Anniversary of the Birth of George Washington was established by joint resolution of the Sixty-eighth congress (S. J. Res. 83) which provides for a membership of nineteen commissioners and for other things as follows:

The President of the United States; presiding officer of the senate and the speaker of the house of representatives, ex-officio; eight persons to be appointed by the President of the United States; four senators by the president pro tempore of the senate; and four representatives by the speaker of the house of representatives. The commissioners shall serve without compensation and shall select a chairman from among their number.

Section 3. That there is hereby authorized to be appropriated out of any money in the treasury not otherwise appropriated the sum of $10,000 to be expended by the commission in accordance with the provisions of this resolution.

Section 4. That it shall be the duty of the commission, after consulting with the American people an address relative to the reason of its creation and of its purpose, to prepare a plan or plans and a program for the observance of the event, to be submitted to the government and approved by the government and to be carried into effect by the government; and to take such steps as may be necessary in the coordination and correlation of plans prepared by state commissions, or by bodies created under appointment by the government of the respective states, and by representative civic bodies; and, if the participation of other nations in the commemoration be deemed advisable, to communicate with governments of such nations.

Section 5. That when the commission shall have approved a plan of celebration, then it shall submit for their consideration and approval such plans of celebration, in so far as it or they may relate to the fine arts, to the commission on fine arts, to Washington, for their approval; and in accordance with statutory requirements.

Section 6. That the commission, after selecting a chairman and a vice chairman from among their members, may employ a secretary and such other assistants as may be needed for clerical work connected with the duties of the commission; and may also engage the services of expert advisors; and may fix their respective compensations within the amount appropriated for such purpose.

Section 8. That the commission hereby created shall expire within two years after the expiration of the celebration, December 31, 1932.

President Coolidge heads the ex-officio commissioners and is chairman of the commission. Vice President Charles C. Dawes, as president of the senate, comes next. Third comes the speaker of the house, Nicholas Longworth. Former Senator Thomas Sterling of South Dakota is field secretary. William Tyler Page of Maryland, clerk of the house, is executive secretary and disbursing officer.

The eight members appointed by President Coolidge under the resolution were:

Mrs. Anthony Wayne Cook of Pennsylvania, president general of the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution;

Mrs. John Dickinson Sherman of Colorado, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs;

Henry Ford of Michigan;

Hanford MacNider of Iowa, former commander of the American Legion and now assistant secretary of war;

C. Bascom Slemm of Washington, D. C.;

A. Lawrence Lowell, president of Harvard university;

Edward B. Piper, Portland, Ore.;

Frank A. Munsey of New York city;

Mr. Munsey, the noted publisher, has recently died. In the current Congressional Directory the name of A. Lawrence Lowell is replaced by that of Prof. Albert Bushnell Hart of Harvard university.

The commissioners appointed by the president pro tempore of the senate were:

Senator Simeon D. Fess of Ohio (vice chairman);

Senator Selden F. Spencer of Missouri (deceased);

Senator Carter Glass of Virginia;

Senator Thomas F. Bayard of Delaware.

The commissioners appointed by the speaker of the house were:

Representative Willis C. Hawley of Oregon;

Representative John Q. Tilson of Connecticut;

Representative John N. Garner of Texas;

Representative Joseph W. Byrns of Tennessee;

Columns could be written on this commission. Its makeup presents a worth-while cross-section of Twentieth century American life and civilization. President Coolidge, who heads it, has an enviable reputation as a student of American history and his address on George Washington last year at Cambridge on the one hundred fiftieth anniversary of Washington's taking command of the Continental army is a classic. Moreover, the President is an eighth generation American. John Coolidge, his first American ancestor was at Watertown, Mass., in 1686 with the first of the Puritans.

Vice President Dawes enjoys world wide fame. In the World War he won his spurs by his efficiency in handling A. E. F. affairs in France. This was followed by the successful working of the Dawes plan of reparation under which Germany is now working out her economic rehabilitation. At home his persistent campaign to reform the United States senate rates by cutting off unlimited debate keeps him in the political limelight. And he, too, is of old-time American ancestry. As to Mrs. Anthony Wayne Cook and the Daughters of the American Revolution—why, every good American knows of the "Fighting Daughters."

The General Federation of Women's Clubs is undoubtedly the most powerful organization in the United States, with the exception of the two major political parties. It is non-political, non-sectarian and patriotic. Its charter is by act of congress and its membership is about 3,000,000. Mrs. John Dickinson Sherman, its president, is an eighth-generation American. Her first American ancestor, John Whitney, was at Watertown, Mass., with John Coolidge and with Rev. John Sherman, her husband's first American ancestor.

Henry Ford may have said that "history is bunk," but he probably did not mean American history, inasmuch as he is restoring the Wayside Inn at Sudbury, Mass., and trying to bring back the old-time American dances. And his own history reads like a fairy tale.

Senator Fess has been professor of history and college president. Senator Bayard's father, his grandfather, his great-grandfather and his great-uncle have all been U. S. senators from Delaware. Speaker Longworth is the son-in-law of Theodore Roosevelt and one of the most efficient and popular men in the house. Representative Tilson is majority leader of the house and a Spanish-American war veteran. Representatives Garner, Hawley and Byrns are "native sons" of their respective states. Edgar B. Piper is the Portland Oregonian editor. And so on.

The group photograph was taken at the White House on the occasion of the first meeting of the commission. The figures, left to right, front row: Senator Selden F. Spencer (deceased), Mrs. Anthony Wayne Cook, President Coolidge, Mrs. John Dickinson Sherman, Senator Simeon D. Fess (vice chairman), second row, Frederick H. Gillett (then speaker of the house and now senator from Massachusetts), Representative John Q. Tilson, Representative Willis C. Hawley; top row, Frank Munsey (deceased), Representative Joseph W. Byrns, Senator Thomas F. Bayard, Senator Carter Glass and Hanford MacNider.

The parchment commission received by the members of the commission is a document that should be handed down with pride to future generations. It bears the signatures of President Calvin Coolidge and Secretary of State Charles E. Hughes and the Seal of the United States and runs as follows:

CALVIN COOLIDGE
President of the United States of America
To all who shall see these Presents, Greeting:
KNOW YE, That reposing special trust and confidence in the integrity and ability of..... I do appoint..... a Member of the United States Commission for the Celebration of the Two Hundredth Anniversary of the Birth of George Washington and do authorize and empower..... to execute and fulfill the duties of this commission with all the powers and privileges thereto of right appertaining during the pleasure of the President of the United States for the time being.

IN TESTIMONY WHEREOF, I have caused the Seal of the United States to be hereunto affixed.
DONE at the City of Washington, this Thirty-first day of January, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and twenty-five, and of the Independence of the United States of America the one hundred and forty-ninth.
CALVIN COOLIDGE

By the President:
CHARLES E. HUGHES
Secretary of State

The commission is at work and already many suggestions have been received from various sources. It seems practically settled already that there will be assembled a really comprehensive collection of historical data concerning Washington and his times.

Seed Potatoes Need Treating

Farmers Agree That Is Thing to Do, Even With "Certified Spuds."

What is going to be done about treating seed potatoes for the coming season? There is no doubt as to the advisability of using "certified seed." Practically every farmer who has used such seed in the past will agree that it is the thing to do in the future. However we have too many farmers who buy "certified seed" and do not treat them before planting. Regardless of what kind of seed you buy or where the tubers come from it is well worth the time and money expended to treat before planting. Although the seed are certified, it is still possible that scab, Sclerotium wilt, and powdery scab can come in unnoticed. Seed treatment will control these troubles, says Dr. W. D. Moore, extension plant pathologist at Clemson college, who adds that the control of a small amount of disease now may prevent a large amount of loss in subsequent years.

Corrosive Sublimite.

Use corrosive sublimite for treating your seed. It can be had at any drug store in tablet form, or can be bought in the crystalline form. Make up a 1 to 1,000 (one part corrosive sublimite to 1,000 parts of water) solution, which is equivalent to four ounces of corrosive sublimite to 30 gallons of water. Use wooden barrels or cement tanks for this work. This material is deadly poison, so keep children and all animals away from the solution.

Method Used.—Treat each batch of potatoes for one and one-half hours. The potatoes may be treated in bags or crates. After treating a batch of four bushels, add enough water to the barrel to make up the original volume and then add one-half ounce of corrosive sublimite to keep up the strength. This can be repeated about four times, each time after treating a batch of seed. Because of the dirt that gets into the solution a new barrel should be made up after this. After treatment the potatoes may be dried and stored or else planted immediately.

Ventilating the Potato Cellar During Winter

A warning is sounded by specialists in plant pathology at the Kansas State Agricultural college against the common practice of opening the potato cellar and ventilating it on warm winter days. This is a poor practice and will increase rather than get rid of the moisture in the cellar and on the potatoes, he says. The potatoes sweat and make conditions favorable for rot and decay to set in. Ventilate only when the outside air is near the temperature of the air in the cellar, Stockdyk advises.

Mr. Stockdyk recalls the action of the ice-water pitcher in the summer time. The cold water pitcher condenses the moisture in the warm air and the pitcher "sweats." This, he says, is exactly what happens when the cold potatoes in the cellar come in contact with the warm air being brought in from outside.

Young Unbroken Horses Should Have Training

Young unbroken horses that will be expected to take a full share of farm work next spring should have some training during the winter. At this season of the year there is spare time that can well be used in getting the green young horse accustomed to what is expected of him when he takes a place in the team. It takes time and patience to train a horse to do his job with ease and willingness. Time spent in properly breaking a young horse means time saved later when farm work is pressing. Furthermore, the young horse that does a little work during the winter will be much better able to work hard next spring because his shoulders and muscles are hardened.

FARM NOTES

Don't scrimp the ewes this winter on account of the shortage of roughage.

Do not let the work horses lose weight during idle time in winter, but avoid feeding too heavily.

Animal products are high in protein and must be fed to supplement the grains in an egg producing ration.

If combs are frozen thaw them out with snow or cold water, then apply petroleum grease once a day for several days.

Feed a ration that is adequate as to both nutrient and mineral content, and free from contamination with disease-producing germs.

Molasses mash is a good tonic feed for the pullets. Add just enough water to make it crumbly, and feed all they will clean up. Feed it in the morning or at noon.

Every possible effort should be made to prevent birds from eating gold. Stomachs of the birds is usually a forerunner to swollen crop, respiratory condition, conjunctivitis and diptheria.

HUNTING CALLED INDUSTRY

Denver.—Colorado—a sportman's paradise.

This is the aim of the Colorado Fish and Game Protective Association, with main offices in Denver, which has grown more than two-fold in the last year, and which is carrying on an intensive campaign to secure the united support of citizens of the state for the movement.

The association desires a return to conditions which used to exist here when the state was the mecca for big game hunters, and when such famous hunters as Theodore Roosevelt came here every summer to hunt bear, deer, mountain lions and mountain sheep.

During the last year the association has more than doubled its scope and membership, according to Frank H. Bailey, secretary and treasurer. In that time the organizations affiliated with it have increased from thirteen to twenty-eight, and the membership has grown to 4,000 from 2,000.

Towns visited by Mr. Bailey last spring included Alamosa, Monte Vista, Creede, Del Norte and Center, while last summer he visited Colbran, Montrose, Telluride, Rico, Dolores, Mancos, Cortez, Durango and Pagosa Springs, Boulder, Longmont, Fort Collins, Byers, Deer Trail, Golden.

"This is an industry," Mr. Bailey said yesterday, in telling of plans of the association. "It means that people who come here to fish and hunt will spend their money here. Last year tourists to the state spent $2,500,000, according to estimates. This coming year they should spend $200,000,000 at least. The work we are doing in the state is educational. We are telling the people just how important fish and game are as resources and how they should be sustained."

"Hunting and fishing are not just fads; they represent a business enterprise, an industry."

MINING BOOM IN COLORADO

Denver.—The world's consumption of lead and zinc is exceeding the mining output; demands for all metals are greater than ever before and prices have been sent skyrocketing. Every mining community in Colorado produces the metals most in demand and as a result the state is well established in one of the greatest eras of mining activity it has ever known. This was the declaration of John T. Joyce, commissioner of mines of Colorado, in an address before the mining bureau of the Chamber of Commerce here.

At the same time it was announced that mining in Colorado will receive still more prestige when members of three national mining organizations convene in Denver for their conventions simultaneously on September 20. The selection of Denver is said to be a result of Colorado's new position as a leader in the metal producing states of the country. Many leaders of the mining world will attend and internationally known authorities will address the members at the various sessions.

The three organizations are the American Institute of Mining and Metallurgical Engineers, which will convene for its regional meeting; the American Mining Congress, and the American Silver Producers' Association. It is planned to hold joint sessions of the three organizations.

Insects Star as Movie Artists

Films of Plant Pests Rival Screen Thrillers Made by Humans.

Washington.—When Uncle Sam wants to stage an agricultural movie thriller, he selects a nasty insect for a villain and puts the pest through rehearsal. Some of the pests are natural movie actors; others are as temperamental as any Hollywood star. The primary reason for this, Department of Agriculture officials explain, is that certain insects shun light, whereas others exult in the glare of the studio Kliegels.

Consider the case of the common clothes moth. The department desired to make a picture showing the destructive habits of this pest, but the insects refused to work under the bright studio lights. Moths placed on an article of clothing flew so rapidly into a seam of goods that the close-ups were a failure. The camera man then hit upon the novel idea of chloroforming the insects to retard their speed, and the picture was a success.

Cotton boll weevils, on the other hand, perform best under the intense lights. They are regarded as star actors, only close-ups seeming to satisfy the vanity of the pest. Not content with flying close to the lens, the boll weevil fly into the machine so that it is necessary every now and then to stop cranking in order to clean out the camera.

Bees Are Hard Subjects.

Honey bees are catalogued as bad actors. In the midst of a picture one day last summer the bees descended en masse upon the unprotected camera man, who fled and hid in a cellar. The picture could be completed only by erecting a canvas shelter over the camera so as to make shade. Bees will not fly into shady places.

More than 20 motion pictures featuring insects in star roles have been made by the Department of Agriculture. They include pictures of pests such as the pink boll worm, which destroys cotton, the Mexican bean beetle, the European corn borer, stable fly, bedbug, poultry louse, cockroach, grasshopper and others. The pictures are distributed free to agricultural colleges, county agents, and other agricultural agencies, some of the reels being exhibited all over the world.

Recently the department camera men made a special trip to Grasshopper glacier in Montana to photograph some of the frozen prehistoric grasshoppers. This glacier is famous. It is believed that these pests were swept up the canyon through the ages by strong winds, which dashed them against the precipitous walls, the grasshoppers then falling into the glacier and becoming frozen in the ice.

Grasshoppers hundreds of years old, but not unlike the grasshoppers of the present day, have been found there, perfectly preserved. The melted ice at the end of the glacier deposits the grasshoppers on both banks, tons of the insects having been piled up in this way. The department camera men made an ascent of 12,000 feet to take their pictures.

Live grasshoppers are difficult to photograph. The lady grasshoppers, in particular, are camera shy. Recently in making some movies of a female laying eggs it was necessary for the camera man to crawl along a roadside trench on his stomach and "shoot" close range, catching the insect unaware.

Working Far Afield.

Federal quarantines on pests, such as the European corn borer and the Japanese beetle, are strict and the department camera men are prohibited from bringing them into the District of Columbia so as to work on them in the studio. This results in considerable expense, in that the movie force must sometimes go far afield to take pictures of the insects in their natural environment.

The expense is, however, justified, say the department movie men, who point out that it is much better to take authentic pictures than to "fake" insects in the laboratory. Faked insects are used occasionally, but only in animated cartoons. An amusing incident in this connection was the construction of a mechanical reproduction of a Mexican bean beetle, so life-like that it fooled even the department entomologists, who thought it real.

The occasion for this deception was the building of an outline map on which it was desired to show graphically the spread of the pest since its introduction into the United States. The habits of the beetle were studied carefully by the movie men, and an imitation was made that bore a life-like resemblance to the original. It was made to crawl around the map at will, and the entomologists wanted to know how the photographers had contrived so perfectly to train the insect.

Bedbugs, like the clothes moth, refuse to act under the glare of the studio lights, or even in ordinary daylight. In order to make them perform it was necessary to build a miniature bed in which a ferret wearing a nightgown was placed. The ferret had to be chloroformed to insure its remaining stationary, and the bugs, scenting easy prey, readily came out for a feast, despite the bright lights.

Making Up the Rat.

Outside the insect family, but among the pests that destroy millions of dollars' worth of property annually, is the common house rat. The department wanted some pictures of the natural habits of the rodent, but the rat also shuns light. Some trained white rats were procured. Their coats were dyed brown, and they were then sprinkled with theatrical powder to give them the precise hue of the house rats. The pink noses were also dabbed with dark powder. But the rats disliked the taste of the powder and licked it off as fast as it was applied. Only by frequently stopping the camera and powdering the rats' noses was it possible to finish the picture.

The "Ox-Warble" — A $50,000,000 Tune is the title of a picture recently made by the department. Great difficulty was experienced in photographing the ox-warble, inasmuch as it had first to be squeezed from its refuge in a cow's back to be "shot." The ox-warble is a small fly that lays eggs in the hoots of cows. The eggs hatch a grub, which works through the cow's body and comes out upon the back, injuring the hide and seriously curtailing milk production.

The department's movie laboratory, located in Washington, D. C., has been in existence for over ten years. Recently a new studio was built and equipped with thoroughly modern movie apparatus, such as slow motion camera, a large glass-enclosed studio, rapid developer tanks and drying racks, and apparatus for making art titles and animated pictures. George R. Goergens, the originator of slow motion camera attachments, which have been perfected since then to depict muscular movements in sports, is chief cinematographer of the laboratory.

A device recently developed by one of the department camera men is a so-called "time lapse" motion picture camera, which automatically photographs the development of growing plants, from seed to final growth. The machine may be set to make single exposures from ten seconds to one minute apart and, thus set, produces an accurate pictorial record of the growth of plants. The hatching of insects may also be recorded pictorially through all stages of development.

The department's educational films, officials say, have proved a valuable medium through which to teach improved agricultural production and marketing. Confronted, however, with competition from commercial films, the camera men must make their pictures interesting as well as informative—a combination that is accomplished by weaving the educational material into an orthodox movie plot.

The department's success in doing this has been such that many of the big city circuits of exhibitors show the films on their programs and thus get the department's message over to a large urban public as well as to rural people. Over 200 pictures have been made by the department.

A few of the titles of the films will readily indicate the imagination of those competing with the commercial thriller. They are: "Clean Herd—And Hearts," "Out of the Shadows," "The Golden Fleece," "The Charge of the Tuck Brigade," "She's Wild," "Cloud-Busting," "There's Magic in It," "Weighed in the Balance." The films have been held by leading critics to be the best type of educational pictures ever produced.—New York Times.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

by Mary Graham Bonner

WINTER

Old Man Winter was very busy. Before long he would be taking his departure, but before Mistress Spring came around he wanted to be as active as possible.

Christine's Birds Came.

And when Old Man Winter wants to be as active as possible, he is being very active.

He is so energetic. Oh, Old Man Winter is so very energetic.

He went to the country places and gave them a fresh snowstorm at night, so when they awoke the next morning the trees, bushes and fences were covered with a soft white snow and little icicles on the top shingling in the sun like diamonds.

He made it look like Fairyland—it was a wondrous sight to great everyone as they gazed upon it when morning came.

He spread great blankets of snow over the fields and said: "Still time for another sleep." He kept on sending snow to them so that the blanket became thicker all the time.

Then he sent a milder day to other places so that the snow melted and everyone went out to shovel their roofs so the snow would not melt too quickly and leak down into the rooms.

But in other spots he made the snow so high that it reached the window ledges of the down-stairs rooms. He sent such heavy falls of snow in some sections that the people were snowbound and the train could not run.

On all sides was snow. The snow in people's front yards was as high and tall as a man is tall.

Little Christine, who always looks after the birds through the cold winter, brushed off a covered porch where she put the bread crumbs for her little friends.

Snow, or no snow, Christine's birds came to visit her. They knew she would have breakfast for them, no matter how bad a storm it had been.

For she always had a cleared space for her birds, even when the snow banked up high in the yards.

How the hungry little creatures did appreciate what Christine did for them!

They were loyal to her, as she was loyal to them. The snow was too deep and too soft for them to alight on it, but Christine always found a way!

Then in yet other places Old Man Winter just kept on sending snow, so that there were piles and piles of snow. You really hardly ever saw anything to equal it.

People took pictures of the great piles of snow and sent them to their friends who lived where the flowers were blooming to show them how different the weather could be when Old Man Winter really paid a good visit.

He covered up the roofs and made the houses seem taller with their added snow height.

People made narrow paths so they could walk along the streets of the villages.

Halley, who was also a great lover of birds, shoveled little clear spaces for his small friends and saw that they did not starve.

They found out so quickly where he had breakfast ready for them.

At his party were five sparrows, two woodpeckers, two chickadees, one starling and a nuthatch.

But others had winter-time appetites, too. Little Maggie who likes meals pretty well herself, invited a friend named Dorothy for afternoon chocolate, and Dorothy ate five pieces of bread and butter and six patty cakes and drank three cups of chocolate!

Old Man Winter said he certainly could give people appetites.

He visited the cities, too, but he let Old Grimy go along right afterward so that the snow became dirty and horrid looking in a very short time.

Old Grimy had a nifty children, and they were dirty, too, and as they played in the city snow, it all became so dirty—every snow bank was almost black instead of white.

And then Old Man Winter decided he would not be so energetic, much longer. The snow began to disappear. It was strange how it melted away, and, from having been so high that one couldn't believe it would ever go, there was less and less.

For the snow could disappear when it started to feel like it, and no one could see just how or where it went!

Report Discovery of Vast Marble Riches

Members of a Chilean hydrographic commission, roving among the islands off Cape Horn, have discovered vast quantities of marble, said to equal in quality that of Carrara. The marble was found in a group of lonely islands to the north of Punta Arenas, near the Straits of Magellan. According to the report of scientists attached to the commission, small islands in the vicinity are made up entirely of pure marble. Resembling marble palaces in appearance, the islands have indented harbors that permit the entrance of ocean liners. Several of the larger islands are said to be made up of pure white marble, their peaks nearly half a mile high, glistening in the sun so clearly that sailors miles away have mistaken them for snow-capped peaks. The islands lie about thirty miles off the regular ship routes through the straits. It is claimed that enough of the highest quality of marble exists to supply the demands of South America for centuries, and it can be cut at a very low cost.

Challapin, the famous Russian basso, told a story against himself on his last visit to New York. "Once on the Riviera," he said, "I went into a bank to get a draft cashed, and none of the papers I produced would satisfy the bank clerk about my identity. Finally he said: 'If you are M. Challapin I'm afraid you'll have to prove it by singing something.' 'So I sang an aria while all the young bank clerks stood around me and listened in a circle. When I finished they clapped and cheered and the identity clerk said: 'Thanks, M. Challapin. Of course I knew you all along, but this seemed too good a chance to miss.'"

FINDS BIGGEST VOLCANO WAS ACTIVE IN VIRGINIA

Dr. W. A. Nelson, State Geologist, Discovers Ash Which Was Deposited Millions of Years Ago.

Charlottesville, Va.—Discovery of a layer of volcanic ash ten feet deep in Rockbridge county, four miles south of Lexington, has just been announced by the finder, Dr. Wilbur A. Nelson, state geologist and head of the school of geology of the University of Virginia.

This layer, says Doctor Nelson, was probably ejected by one of the oldest known volcanoes in America. Its presence coincides with similar deposits of ash discovered by Doctor Nelson several years ago in Kentucky, Alabama and Tennessee.

Virginia's ash deposit is the thickest so far found, says the state geologist. It shows that in early geological times, millions of years ago, the mountains east to the west of Virginia, now buried under the Cumberland plateau, were a region of great volcanic activity.

From the measurement of the area over which the ash fell and was deposited in the ancient sea around this island volcano, it has been estimated that more than 80 cubic miles of ash was ejected. In addition to thick deposits in the southern states, several inches have been found as far northwest as Minnesota and as far north as Pennsylvania. This would indicate that this volcano, located probably in eastern Kentucky, near the West Virginia line, was one of the greatest of which knowledge exists.

Volcanic eruptions considered enormous during modern times, such as Krakatoa and Katmai, only ejected five or ten cubic miles of material, which scattered over 1,000 miles, Doctor Nelson added. These recent eruptions are considered of great magnitude, but they dwarf into insignificance when compared with this event which occurred during the Ordovician period.

Frenchman, in Flood, Saves Mattress First

Paris.—The recent floods have produced abundant illustration of the fact that the first household article which the Frenchman rescues when his home is threatened with inundation is the mattress. Strangely enough, the bicycle comes second.

Hardly an exception to this order was noted by a correspondent who watched boatmen moving the inhabitants from one of the Paris suburbs. The women were dry eyed and stern as they were taken from their flooded homes, but obviously were laboring under great emotional stress.

"This is getting monotonous," said one woman who was forced to move to escape the floods in 1910, 1920 and 1924. "This sort of thing might be bearable once in fifty years, but four times in fifteen years is a little too much."

Slaves at Command

Albuquerque, Feb. 16—Every New Mexico citizen with a telephone and electric service has the equivalent of 30 slaves at his or her command. The errand-running leg labor performed by the telephone and the countless time-saving tasks done by the average citizen with electric service would require the efforts of fully 30 slaves or servants, according to public utility officials who addressed the opening sessions of the New Mexico Electrical Association, whose annual three-day convention was convened here Monday.

Almost 100 public utility company officials and their wives, from all parts of New Mexico, Colorado, Texas and Wyoming, registered for the conference. The Colorado-Wyoming delegation, numbering 35, arrived in a special car. With characteristic vim, the delegates plunged into the work of solving the numerous problems confronting them. Everything from radio interference to "oil circuit breakers" came in for attention. It was noted, though, that every technical discussion was colored with public relations—that is, how to best maintain friendly contact and understanding between the utilities and their customers.

New Mexico utility operators on the program include: K. W. Kissick, Deming; Frank Schram, Roswell; Arthur Prager, Albuquerque; E. A. Bradner, Las Vegas; J. B. Ledlie, Las Cruces; M. P. Walker, Lordsburg; E. A. Roberts, Carlsbad; D. E. Bent, Tucumcari.

George E. Lewis of Denver, manager of the Rocky Mountain Committee on Public Utility Information with which most New Mexico companies are affiliated, declared that the utilities make more "sales" than any other business in the world. "Every telephone call is a 'sale' and every time a customer turns on the light or starts up some electrical appliance a 'sale' is made," said Lewis. And yet the margin of profit is smaller than any other business, as proven by the fact that utility rates are practically what they were twelve years ago, though the cost of everything else has doubled and trebled.

A program of entertainment, including a trip to Jemez springs, sponsored by the Albuquerque chamber of commerce, provided diversion for the visiting public service men.

CARELESS NIGHT DRIVERS IS REAL ROAD OBSTACLE

THE congested condition of most highways these days is at times accentuated by failure of the motorist to use care in selecting his parking place. This is especially true at night. It is a disconcerting experience to make a sharp turn around a blind corner and find yourself bearing down on the tail-light of a parked automobile. Still more confusing is it to have a pair of bright headlights suddenly burst upon you as you round a corner, and, because of the fact that the car is not moving, you find it difficult to decide quickly what to do.

Whenever a car is parked, parking lights should be turned on. Occasionally roadside mishaps make a stop necessary at a point which is certain to cause inconvenience to other motorists, and many collisions have been caused by the blinding headlight glare from a parked car.

in the absence of proper lighting facilities, careless motorists sometimes make tire repairs with their headlights as the source of illumination. This is a most dangerous thing to do, as the moving figures before the driver are apt to be confused. A more satisfactory and convenient light for roadside repairs, which causes no confusion to the drivers of passing cars, is a flashlight. This enables you to have the light where you want it and where you need it. It makes it unnecessary to wheel the fire to the front of the car and back again for inspection. Nor do you have to fumble with the jack and hunt for rim nuts in the dark.

Some flashlight cases are equipped with clips, so that they can be attached to the belt. This leaves both hands free, with plenty of illumination for repair work. The flashlight also comes in handy when backing across a narrow road so as to avoid the ditch, and in leaving the darkened garage after the car is put up for the night.

Game Survey Will be Made

Santa Fe New Mexican: J. Stokely Ligon, game and predatory animal expert of the U. S. Biological survey, will make a comprehensive survey of the game and fish resources of New Mexico beginning the work the first of March.

The announcement was made today by the New Mexico Game Commission, which for some months past has been endeavoring to secure the services of a qualified expert to do the job. U. S. Senator Sam G. Bratton wired that the director of the biological survey bureau had given Ligon six months leave of absence for that purpose. He had been assigned to work in Illinois and it required some hard work to get the plans changed.

Miss Lillian Marchant has returned from Alamogordo, where she had been relieving the manager of the local office of the Western Union at that place. During her absence, Miss Ethel Bryan was in charge of the local office.

LOOT!

"Bad Luck" Burgess' Career JUST why Capt. Samuel South Burges should have "gone on account" is difficult to understand. A native of New York, he was a man of education, social position and some wealth. But in the school of legalized privateering in the West Indies he first learned his lesson of violence which sent him eventually out under the Jolly Roger. Then, too, his employer, a New York shipbuilder and owner, hired him to trade with the pirates of Madagascar, and in that occupation it was easy enough for him to do some freebooting on his own account.

He disposed of several prize ships in the West Indies and then returned to New York to give an accounting to his employer. At Sandy Hook he purposely wrecked his vessel and landed as an honest shipwrecked sailor. His employer, Phillips by name, evidently still held him in high regard for Burgess settled down for awhile, married a relative of Phillips, and a short time later was sent out on two more voyages which he conducted honestly enough and profitably by them both. A later voyage came near proving his undoing. He had been trading with the pirates in Madagascar and was returning home with several of them as passengers when his ship was captured by an East Indianman off the Cape of Good Hope and taken to Madras. The captain and his companions were put in irons and sent to England for trial. Burgess, however, was freed, but instead of leaving the country lingered, around London. There he fell in with an old pirate comrade who betrayed him and again he was put on trial. He was condemned to death, but at the last moment was pardoned by the queen.

Then he shipped as mate of a Scotch vessel, the Neptune, and soon afterwards was a ringleader in a mutiny. The mutineers refitted the Neptune and embarked upon a career of plundering which proved very successful. Finally Burgess decided to retire from piracy and settled in Madagascar.

But he took to the sea again and bad fortune persistently followed him until "Burgess' Bad Luck" became almost proverbial. While serving under one pirate captain, he was accused of betraying some of his comrades, and all of his savings taken away from him. On another voyage he was captured by Dutch pirates who in turn were captured by some French corsairs who marooned Burgess and his mates on the east coast of Africa. At Youngool Burgess shipped as third mate on a vessel bound for the West Indies. Then came the climax of his unfortunate career. He was sent as ambassador to a local king whom he had once offended. So the monarch gave him some poisoned liquor and the gallows was cheated again. (Copyright, Western Hemisphere—Trade)

Carrizozo School Notes
(By Mary Catherine Chandler)

The games played last Saturday with Alamo were both very interesting ones. Although our boys put up a good fight they lost by a score of 19 to 21. The game was very fast and both teams played very hard.

Our girls won by a score of 47 to 6. The game was not as hard fought as it was expected to be. The girls are planning on beating El Paso again, when that team comes here to play.

Quite a few pupils are absent on account of illness. It is hoped that they will be back in school soon.

We are greatly pleased with the movement for a Community Hall and express our best wishes for its successful outcome.
