

NOTICE

The State Comptroller has granted a further extension of time for the payment of motor vehicle tax from Jan. 15 to 31, on account of unfavorable weather conditions in certain parts of the state which have made it difficult for owners of motor vehicles to comply with the law and because of other conditions over which said owners have had no control, the Comptroller has kindly extended the time above mentioned, but it should be remembered that in case of applications received on or after February 1, '26, by mail or otherwise a penalty of 25 per cent of the annual registration fee as required by law will be charged, or unless the record shows that the application and remittance were in actual transit before February 1, or unless the record properly verified, shows that the motor vehicle for which registration is sought was not operated prior to date of application.

Funeral of R. D. Armstrong

The funeral of R. D. Armstrong, who died suddenly at Ancho last Friday, was held at the Baptist Church Sunday afternoon under the auspices of Carrizozo Lodge No. 20 I. O. O. F., and Rev. J. H. Skinner, also a member of the order, preached the funeral sermon. The remains were escorted from Kelley's undertaking rooms where the speaker, who had known the deceased for over forty years, paid a fitting tribute to his life and character as a citizen, friend and neighbor, saying among other things that during all the years of their acquaintance, the character of the deceased was far above reproach. A choir sang "Nearer My God to Thee" and "Blest be the Tie that Binds" after which the remains were interred in the local cemetery.

At the grave, the Odd Fellows performed the ritualistic ceremonies with S. W. Kelsey, Noble Grand of the lodge, conducting the same, assisted by A. L. Burke as Chaplain, and after the singing of "Jesus Lover of My Soul" the remains were confined to their last resting place.

R. D. Armstrong was in every sense, an ideal Odd Fellow, in which order he had been lately awarded a badge of honor for being a member in good standing for forty years. He will be missed by his lodge and also by many friends over the county who have known him for many years.

Woman's Club Notes

By Mrs. L. A. McCall:

The Carrizozo Woman's Club met at the home of Mrs. J. B. French last Friday afternoon, the principal feature of the meeting being the election of officers which resulted as follows:

President, Mrs. Maude L. Blaney; first vice-president, Mrs. W. W. Stadtman; second vice-president, Miss Mary Fritzy; secretary, Mrs. C. N. Lemmon; treasurer, Mrs. C. N. McCammon; parliamentarian, Mrs. J. B. French.

Miss Brickley conducted a short but interesting program on Thrift. Mrs. Hunt gave a most interesting account of Public School Banking which was freely discussed, after which refreshments were served, consisting of delicious home made cookies, coffee and cocoa, by Mesdames French, Greer, Kelsey and Wetmore.

It was decided to give a Colonial Party Feb. 20, at Lutz Hall, the principal features of which will be a contest for honors in dancing the Minuet and observing ancient customs of the days of our forefathers. More particulars will appear next week; in the meantime, keep the event in mind.

The State, County, Railroad Company and the Oscura Road

In making a trip from here to Oscura the first of this week, we had the opportunity of seeing the new road which Road Foreman Wm. Ferguson has completed with the exception of a strip of something over four miles, but herein lies the tale.

It will be remembered, that before the railroad company built the new track, the highway ran on the west side of the track, but instead of a new road being built on the west of the new track, an underground crossing was built which makes crossing safe at that point, but it causes the road to go on the east side of the track and over a crossing before connecting with Ferguson's new road.

Now, from the underground crossing, to the point where the road crosses the track, is the distance mentioned above which is under advisement and the State and County have asked the railroad company to pay the sum of $1200, toward the cost, which the company no doubt will do, as with the road entirely on the west side of the track, crossing dangers will be entirely eliminated.

The road, as far as Oscura is now in good condition much to the credit of foreman Ferguson. The jolts, bouncings and shimmyings motorists have undergone in that direction will be absent and now with the four and one half miles put in on the west side, dangerous crossings will be eliminated and people may go from Carrizozo to Tularosa without crossing railroad tracks.

Mrs. A. C. Corson and daughter, Mrs. Ben B. Wetmore, who were here on the sad mission of attending the funeral of Mr. Wetmore Wednesday, left for Santa Fe yesterday morning, where Mrs. Wetmore will reside with her mother pending other arrangements which will be made later.

C. B. Wins, traveling Representative for the American Railway Express was a visitor the latter part of last week.

Balmy Breezes

Funeral of Ben B. Wetmore

The remains of Ben B. Wetmore, aged 85, who died at the William Beaumont Hospital Monday night arrived here Wednesday morning on No. 2, accompanied by the sorrowing wife, her mother, Mrs. A. C. Corson, Attorney and Mrs. H. B. Hamilton and Mrs. Maggie Wetmore. The remains were taken in charge by the American Legion and the funeral services were conducted by the Rev. J. H. Skinner, who read the ritualistic rites of the Episcopal Church in the absence of Rev. H. K. Stanley, who was ill at Fort Stanton. The services were held at the Wetmore Building at 3 p. m. and interment was local.

Mr. Wetmore had been ailing for some time until it was deemed best to have an operation performed, but his weakened condition could not withstand its effects and following same, he passed on. During his illness, those who were nearest to him marveled at his composure and lack of complaint which was characteristic of him at all times under the trying circumstances.

When the World War came on, he enlisted at Washington, D. C., and after a short period of three months, he was promoted to the rank of Second Lieutenant and although failing to undergo service overseas, his record in military circles at home was one to be proud of. After the war, he became a member of the American Legion, which organization paid its last respects as stated above.

The funeral was attended by relatives of the deceased and the many friends of the Wetmore family both here and from other places where they have resided. Mr. Wetmore was a pleasant gentleman to meet, always courteous, kind and considerate for the happiness of others, particularly of his faithful wife, whose loyalty and self sacrifices softened his pillow in his direst need. He leaves a wife, a father, I. P. Wetmore of Roswell, and two two sisters, Mrs. Ida Miles of Hollywood, Calif., and Mrs. H. B. Hamilton of Carrizozo, to all of whom the sympathy of our community is extended.

Boydston—Wilson

On Monday, Jan. 18, with the Rev. J. J. Golden performing the ceremony, W. R. Boydston and Miss Ray Belle Wilson, both of Duran, were united in marriage. Mr. Boydston is in charge of the highway between Corona and Vaughn, and the bride is a popular young lady of Duran, where the happy couple will make their future home.

Fort Stanton News

Snow is falling in the day time as this is on the typewriter. It is hoped that it may continue to some depth for the sake of the crops.

Fort Stanton is enjoying indoor sports in the form of radio during the season when automobiling is difficult. Miss Illingsworth has had her installed. Mr. Wunsch has a new Fried Eiseman and Mr. Star has, recently, received one as a donation from former employers. These, in addition to the several sets already at the Fort, make contact with outside interests most complete.

On the sick list, Mrs. Sellers and Mrs. Anderson have been very ill but are reported as better. Mr. Ben Casper, though still in El Paso, is reported about ready to return home. Mrs. Casper and Miss Gardner spent a few days with him in El Paso. Jean Berry has been confined to her bed for a few days and Mr. Art Howard has just come out again from an operation on his tonsils. Mr. Fagan is taking a short leave and Mr. McNeff is acting Chief Clerk in his absence.

At the home of Mrs. Warner the Bridge Club met this week. The Fine Arts Club is rehearsing for another play to be given, it is hoped, early in March. The energy and skill shown by this Club is heartily to be commended and it is hoped that many from Carrizozo and neighboring towns may enjoy the play when presented.

The purchase of a Berkshire pig which has won the ribbon in five State Fairs, is reported from the Farm Department.

Safety First Meeting

The Safety First meeting was held at the S. P. Club House, Wednesday afternoon, with Superintendent J. W. Murphy acting as chairman and accompanied by his official family. A good attendance of train and engine men was had, and many good suggestions were offered and all referred to the different committees for advisement. A full report of the work accomplished could not be obtained before going to press, but full particulars will appear next week.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Rely who were to have left yesterday morning for Arizona, were detained by the snow storm and will not make the start until the latter part of the week. Mrs. Rely will accompany her husband on his route in the government work.

Nogal Items

What our country needs right now worse than anything else, is more Moodys and Mitchells.

Looks like Hatch-N. M., is going to hatch something after all; that building boom is pipping right nicely.

The other day we were driving along the road and enjoying immensely the cool, refreshing air and this glorious sunshine of the great southwest, when, who should we meet but Garibaldi Sylvester de Punk from back east somewhere! Never heard of him until we met him the other day, and when we made this fact known to his honor, his countenance fell almost to his waist line, and he put on a grim smile of sorrow for an ignorant person as had never heard of Garibaldi Sylvester de Punk.

Well, anyhow, Sylvester wanted to know how far it was to the next town, and we informed his majesty that it was only thirteen miles. Did you ever see a mad dog have his last fit at a pool of water? No? Well, Sylvester cut up very similar to a mad dog; slobbered a little at the mouth and did everything but turn a couple of somersaults. When he could get his breath sufficiently to talk, or rather chatter, he commenced cursing this blank-ety-blank country. Said he had not seen a thing in all his travels of the great southwest but sagebrush and rattlesnakes.

Up to this time we did nothing but listen to this slanderous chatter, being hurled at our native state. So we decided to find out what was ailing this primaval throw-back besides rattlesnakes and sage-brush. We began very modestly to question him concerning his travels and what he had seen in the southwest worth wasting his precious time over. "Nothing worth looking at," was his silly retort. Well, had he ever seen Santa Fe? "What, that pile of old mud houses?" he scoffed. "Yes, and didn't want to see it many more."

We then grew a bit hot under the collar and proceeded to tell Garibaldi that if he couldn't spend a whole week in Santa Fe and see something different and very interesting every day, God had evidently neglected the imagination in his make-up. His chin dropped slightly. Had he been to the Carlsbad Caves? No? "Where the diuce were they?" We were painstakingly describing the Caves and their unexplored depths and told him, without prevarication, that they excelled, in grandeur and size, the great Mammoth Cave of Kentucky. And the next few minutes we outlined very clearly all our natural resources, developed and undeveloped. Told him of our billions and billions of tons of coal, yet undeveloped; vast mineral deposits, countless thousands of feet of standing timber, thousands of acres of grazing land, thousands of acres of irrigated farming land—three producing oil fields—and geological indications are favorable for many more—gold, silver, zinc, iron ore, and many other minerals too numerous to mention—

The Hurt Murder Case

Alamogordo News:

The State of New Mexico, vs. Hunt Hobbs, Tom Simer and Will, Titsworth, charged with the murder of Robert Hurt at Capitan on Jan. 24, 1923, was brought to trial in the District Court here on Monday. District Attorney Benson Newell said that the state would introduce witnesses to show that the defendants were in the immediate vicinity at the time of the shooting and that two of said defendants had made threats to take Hurt's life.

Testimony which was given at the trial here, with which our people are familiar, was repeated, after which, with the exception of the testimony of ex-sheriff Ed Harris, who, according to the News, seems to be the star witness for the state, as he told of finding empty shells, three in number, near Hurt's body and following tracks from the scene of the killing, to the home of Tom Simer. Tracks and knee-prints behind the ambush, from where he believes Hurt was shot. He said that a rifle seized at Simer's home was of the same calibre as that from which the shells were fired.

Other testimony which figured largely to the state's side, was introduced. The case will be lengthy.

His majesty's chin dropped a notch lower, and he began to look a bit more intelligent. After fifteen minutes' of extolling the many virtues of our great southwest, Sylvester de Punk sat down on the running board of his car and began to ask questions.

We soon became friendly and just about this time the sun was sinking behind the San Andreas mountains. A more wonderful and exquisite picture could never be painted. We have seen it many, many times! Had Rembrandt lived and saw this sunset he would have wept with joy. A few minutes later when we came to, Garibaldi and I were standing with an arm around each other's shoulders, Garibaldi confided to us then and there, that he was going to settle down in the southwest, and live his life all over again. And listen, he is a Republican politically, so you Democrats had better run in one from Texas to off-set Garibaldi's vote.

Fight on Waste Saves Millions

Simplification and Standardization Accomplishes Much.

Washington—Hundreds of millions of dollars have been saved for American manufacturers, distributors and consumers as a result of the campaign for waste elimination, simplification and standardization inaugurated five years ago by the Department of Commerce. The actual saving cannot even be approximated and Secretary Hoover, in his annual report, says that what the country as a whole has accomplished in increased national efficiency in these directions is impossible of measurement, although it represents one of the most astonishing transformations in economic history.

While the government has been aiding actively in the campaign in many specific directions the whole program has been one fundamentally to stimulate action among industries, trades and consumers themselves.

"It is obviously not the function of government to manage business," says Mr. Hoover, "but to investigate economic questions, to survey economic phenomena and point out the remedy for economic failure or the road to progress, to inspire and assist co-operative action and to stimulate forces to these ends—surely all these are well within the proper field of public service."

229 Committees at Work. Since this work was undertaken some 900 group conferences have been held under government auspices, practically all at the request of the industries themselves, and 229 committees are now at work on various phases of the program.

Discussing the fundamental purposes of the campaign for waste elimination—Secretary Hoover says the philosophy underlying it has but one purpose—that is, to maintain American standards of living for both workers and farmers and to place production on a more stable footing. The high standards of living enjoyed by the American people are the result of steadily mounting per capita productivity, he says.

"Just as 50 years ago we undertook nation-wide conservation of our natural resources," continues Secretary Hoover, "so we must today even more vigorously sustain this campaign of better nation-wide utilization of our industrial resources and effort. More especially is this the case in view of the many complex forces which have arisen from the war, and particularly the difficulty of maintaining our situation as against the competition of a world of lower standards overseas."

What Has Been Attempted. The major directions of this effort which the commerce secretary has been leading for half a decade include:

The elimination of waste in railway transportation by the provision of adequate facilities and better methods; the vigorous improvement of our inland waterways; the enlarged electrification of the country for the saving in fuel and labor; the reduction of the periodic waves of unemployment; an improved statistical service for industry; the reduction of seasonal employment in construction and other industries and of intermittent employment in such industries as bituminous coal mining; the development of co-operative marketing and better terminal facilities in agricultural products in order to reduce the waste in agriculture distribution; the stimulation of commercial arbitration in order to eliminate the wastes of litigation and the reduction of the waste arising from industrial strife between employers and employees.

The reduction of waste in manufacture and distribution is to be brought about through the establishment of grades, standards of quality, dimensions and performance in nonstyle articles of commerce, through the simplification in dimensions of many articles of manufacture and the reduction of unnecessary varieties, and through more uniform business documents such as specifications, bills of lading and warehouse receipts.

Since the co-operative service was inaugurated, more than fifty simplifications have been achieved by the industries and trades concerned, resulting in an average reduction in varieties of 78 per cent. Among these simplifications of varieties, thirty-one apply to products of iron, steel and other metals; eight to lumber, paper and other products derived from wood; seventeen to clay, cement, glass and other products of a mineral nature, and four to textiles.

The annual value of manufactured goods affected by these simplifications runs well over $2,000,000,000, it is declared.

A striking illustration of the need of this work is found in the case of one product, single bit axes. Formerly these axes were produced and marketed in thirty-four models, four grades, thirty-five brands, eleven finishes and nineteen sizes, and the total varieties of the thirty-four types actually purchasable were 6,118. Simplification and standardization have not been completed, but the results will be comparable to those in other lines.

For instance, where there were 4,450 sizes or varieties of shovels, spades and scoops in use, only 384 are now retained, a reduction of 92 per cent. Wovenwire fence packages have been reduced from 2,072 to 183, or 91 per cent; metal lath from 125 to 24, or 81 per cent; files and rasps from 1,261 to 490, or 61 per cent; forged tools from 665 to 351, or 47 per cent; range boilers from 180 to 13, or 93 per cent; tacks and nails from 423 to 151, or 65 per cent; and packing weights of tacks and nails from 423 to 121, or 71 per cent.

On the whole, builders' hardware has been reduced from 34,800 varieties and sizes to 10,648.

Car Shortages Disappear. For the transportation industry it is reported that the elimination of waste has done much toward the provision of adequate transportation. The periodic car shortages of many years past have practically disappeared, although the tonnage load has increased more than 25 per cent since 1921. Average weekly car loadings in that period have increased from 608,533 to 936,475; the number of miles per day from 22.4 to 25.9, and the average trainload from 656 to 781 tons.

For the building, 37 varieties of smooth-face brick, 55 of rough-face brick and 44 of common brick have been reduced to one variety of each; hollow building tile have been reduced from 36 to 10, roofing slate from 95 to 45, concrete building units from 115 to 24, and so on.

Secretary Hoover also calls attention to figures from the Department of Labor showing that whereas in 1920 the wage rate was 90 per cent above the prewar level and the wholesale price level, 126 per cent above prewar, in 1924, the wage rate had risen to 218 above prewar, while the wholesale price level had dropped to 80 per cent above prewar.

Comparable figures show that the British wage rate in 1920 was 130 per cent above prewar, and the wholesale price level 158 per cent above prewar, while in 1924 wage rates and wholesale prices had dropped to 70 and 74 per cent, respectively, above prewar.

"While wages are higher in the United States than in 1920, wholesale prices are lower," says the secretary. "We thus have the highest real wage in our history and we have had three years of remarkable price stability."

NEW MEXICO STATE NEWS

Benigno Zamora, acting postmaster at Bernalillo, N. M., who was held under $2,500 bond for the federal grand jury on a charge of embezzlement of postal funds, was re-arrested several hours later on the charge of the theft of a registered package containing a payroll of $2,500 in currency.

E. M. Powell of Orier reports having threshed 2,190 bushels of maize from eighty-five acres. This is an exceptional yield, considering the dry year. A country that will raise a crop sufficient to pay for the price of the land in one of the driest years that section has ever known, is worth boosting.

John P. Looney of Rock Island, Ill., has entered the new prison at Joliet, Ill., to serve a sentence of fourteen years for the murder of William Gabel, a sentence which observers believe will be a death sentence. Broken in health, the former editor and vice lord declared he was a victim of "persecution" rather than prosecution. Looney was prominent in New Mexico.

Federal aid and approval of the construction of the highway between Clovis and Fort Sumner has been announced by the State Highway Department, and work is to be started early in the spring. The total distance is forty-five miles and the road will be hard surfaced with caliche. The new highway will be the connecting link between two of the finest farming sections in the eastern part of the state.

Gun fights for range and water holes typical of the old west, feature three murder trials at the present term of District Court at Alamogordo. Sam Lewis and his son, Frank, charged jointly with murder in connection with the shooting of Dee Wilburn, neighboring rancher, have just been freed. It was another case of the interests of cattlemen and sheepmen conflicting, the evidence showed. The trial of Dempson Lewis of Orange, N. M., charged with murder in connection with the slaying of Lem Tanner at the Tanner water tanks, follows. Lewis claims that Tanner attacked him with an ax. Lewis' brother and Tanner's small daughter were witnesses.

The industrial employment survey report, just issued from the office of the U. S. Employment Service of the U. S. Department of Labor at Denver, states that existing industrial and employment conditions in New Mexico are regarded as normal for this season of the year. Increased employment was noted during December in metal and coal mining and lumbering activities, while employment slackened in agricultural and railroad activities. The usual small surplus of principally unskilled labor exists. Building under way or to commence soon in connection with metal mining, includes a large cyanide ore mill at Red River, a lead-zinc treating plant at Golden and the remodeling of buildings, cleaning out of old mines and construction of electric transmission lines at Las Cruces. Skilled metal miners in strong demand; common metal mine labor supply ample. Practically all of the coal mines report increased forces; coal mine labor supply barely adequate. Industrial plants are running steadily; cotton gin and lumber mills exceptionally active. Only a small amount of buying is under way with plenty of this class of skilled labor available. Considerable oil prospecting continues in the Roswell and Farmington districts. Highway construction is affording a large number of workers with steady employment. Railroad shop employment has slackened somewhat, as is usual at this period of the year.

Presumably slain by predatory Indian ranchers, George Delkins, prominent New Mexican ranchman, and member of the War Finance Corporation, was found shot to death in an isolated canyon in Mexico, fifty miles south of Columbus, N. M., officers of that city reported. The story was confirmed by W. E. McCallough of Columbus.

Safe crackers attempted to rob the postoffice at Elida, but were frightened away by the entrance of the postmaster in the lobby. A charge of nitroglycerin had been placed in the safe, but had not been set off, all the tools being left on the floor. The men made their get-away out of the rear of the building and no trace of them has been found.

New Mexico College of A. & M. at State College, has developed a new state champion Jersey. In Paaty Teresa N. M. A. C. This cow got owned and was bred and tested by this institution and in 365 days she produced 361.87 pounds of butter fat and 7,821 pounds of milk. Her milk averaged 3.14 per cent fat and she carried calf for 264 of the 265 days of her term.

Indictments against Edward J. McWente, former cashier of the First National bank of East Las Vegas, were dismissed in Federal Court at Albuquerque on motion of the United States district attorney. Nine counts alleged false entry and misapplication of funds.

A carload of six has arrived at Santa Rita to be released in the national forest as an experiment. The elk are from northern Montana, and if they thrive and multiply in their new environment more will be obtained.

DADDY'S EVENING FAIRY TALE

Mary Graham Bonner

PACIFIC BULL SNAKE

"It's a fact," said the Pacific Bull Snake, as he coiled up in a corner. "What's a fact?" hissed the other snakes.

"That I'm a Pacific Bull Snake." "Well, did any of us say that you weren't?" asked the snakes, wriggling about in their zoo homes.

"No, none of you said that I wasn't, but none of you said anything about it," said the Pacific Bull Snake, "so in order to make certain that you would know it I thought I would tell you."

"Oh, thanks," hissed the snakes. "You can see," said the Pacific Bull Snake, "that I am handsome with my yellowish skin and my brown-red spots."

"If you're clever you will know that I am named a Pacific Bull Snake because my home is near the Pacific Ocean."

"We thought so," said the other snakes. "Then you are quite bright, quite bright."

"I'm not so cross as some of my relations," continued the Pacific Bull Snake. "It is enough for me that I sleep and eat and hiss if any one disturbs me or annoys me."

"I spoke of my home as being near the Pacific Ocean. Well, I mean that that was my home."

"I've moved now. I have changed my home. I have come to the zoo to live."

"You mean," said the other snakes, "that you were brought to the zoo to live?"

"Say it as you please," said the Pacific Bull Snake, "for it means no difference to me."

"But moving was no bother to me, I've heard people speak of the great trouble of moving, of pulling things out and packing them up, and then unpacking them again, and having to be at home when the moving man came."

"I've heard how they found so many odds and ends when they came to move that they had forgotten they had—and though they had forgotten them and had not missed them, still when they came to move and found them again they did not want to throw them away!"

"Oh yes, moving for people is a great job. They get tired and sometimes they get cross."

"Yes, snakes, sometimes they get cross. Yet when an animal gets cross people will say, without any understanding or sympathy:

"That's an ugly animal with a habit of acting quite mean at times."

"Yet, we don't judge people by the way they act at times."

"We know there are moments in the lives of snakes and people and animals (though we'd better not tell people we sandwiched them in between snakes and animals) when things are apt to make them feel irritable."

"No," said the other snakes, "people would not like to be sandwiched in reality between snakes and animals, but as long as you only did it in conversation it won't do any harm."

"You seem to be feeling very cheerful and pleasant for a bull snake," some of the others added.

"Ah, but I am one of the most cheerful members of my family, and so that is the reason," said the Pacific Bull Snake.

"And," he continued, "if I am kept warm enough and dry enough I will get along all right in the zoo."

"The keeper knows I must be kept warm and dry for I heard him telling the people so. Therefore I will be all right in my own home."

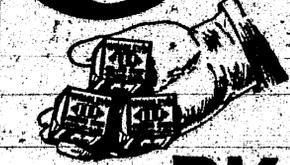

"But, snake chums," he said, "I cannot talk any more now, for I am very sleepy, and I would rather sleep than talk to any of you."

Note of the snakes stated it when he said this, for they all agreed that sleep was one of the nicest of things, so they all hissed:

"Good nap," and coiled up for a sleep.

"I Am Very Sleepy."

Acting Matter of Head, Never Heart

Acting is an art, not a spasms. The actress who makes her hearers weep is not one who weeps herself, but the one who seems to weep. The secret of fine acting, the secret of all art, is the suggestion, the infaming of the spectator's imagination; and the secret of suggestion is studied repression.

The acrobat or the dancer may leave the stage exhausted, but an actress who knows her business no more swoons at the finish of her big scene than Whistler had to be revived with smelling salts on completing an etching. The poor actress puts her heart into the role, the trained actress puts her head into it.

George Arliss has said it perfectly in one short sentence: "The art of the actor is to learn how not to be real on the stage without being found out by the audience."—DeWolf Hopper in the Saturday Evening Post.

Washington. — "Phosphorescence bright enough to make newspaper headlines readable, which was recently encountered by the navy aircraft tender Patoka in the Gulf of Mexico, is a fairly common phenomenon in many parts of the world," says a bulletin from the Washington (D. C.) headquarters of the National Geographic Society. "The ghostly, eerie fire of the waves, however, has nothing to do with the substance that goes into the manufacture of matches, despite a remarkable resemblance and an obvious derivation of name.

"For, although sea water contains salts of phosphorus, called phosphates, it has no free, uncombined quantities of the element. Luminescence, the name preferred by recent scientists, is a more appropriate term, as the light is largely the result of the oxidizing, or burning, of minute particles of dead animal and vegetable matter, the oxygen being derived from small amounts dissolved in sea water.

In addition there is a phosphorescence of living organisms. Several varieties of protophyta, tiny single-cell plants that float on the surface of the water, diffuse the dull glow called 'milky sea' in the Far East, or 'white water' of the Gulf of Aden. Certain forms of bacteria are also phosphorescent, and are often visible on sand and on fish cast up by the sea. This glow is not due to decay, for when decay sets in, the luminescence ceases.

"Some forms of sea fire are highly incandescent, giving off an intense, almost white, light. Sometimes it is difficult to believe that sea would not have sea's fingers burned by touching it. Others are golden yellow, blue, and even red and green, giving weird, uncanny effects on dark nights. It may have been from some such inspiration that Coleridge drew the 'mophosph' for 'The Ancient Mariner'.

"Norwegian fishermen distinguish between two kinds of the phenomenon: 'dead phosphorescence' and 'fish phosphorescence.' The former resembles stars in a clear sky, myriads of tiny, nearly invisible, points emitting a scintillating light; now increased, now decreasing, in intensity. 'Fish phosphorescence' consists of great bubbles of light caused by fish rushing through the water. The fish which minute phosphorescent organisms, which have up suddenly in response to the irritation produced.

"It is the latter variety that so delights the visitor to strange lands and waters. It is their phosphorescence that gives the midnight waves tops their brilliant sparkle as they break in the shoals, or within the sea in a heady glow as it rushes the surface, or leaves the comely track of the steers dropped into the water."

The Valley of Voices

"Is this the same one we heard at Walling River?"

"Mebbe, mebbe 'noder one. Jib-way say plenty of dem een valley of de Walling."

"But what do you think, Michel?" demanded Steele hotly. "Here I am, with David, giving up my time to help you run this thing down and, if possible, save the post for St. Onge; and you don't trust me. Why don't you open your heart to me?"

Michel straightened and, going to the small fire David had built on the beach, calmly examined his tattered shirt and trousers, as he dried out. "You are good man, M'sieu Steele. Daveded tell me, but I have de eye to see. W'en you come back on de snow, I tell you someth'ing."

That was all, and Steele understood. It was evident that Michel had bound himself to secrecy. But why had he told David?

"In the morning we must hunt for a trail," Steele said, philosophically bowing to the inevitable. Now we'll have to do what we can to quiet those poor squaws."

As the canoe landed on the beach below the silent tipi, one by one, dark shapes of Indian dogs slunk from the adjacent scrub, tails between legs, to whimper at the feet of the men.

"Scared stiff," said Steele. "And from the sound the squaws are worse. Go and talk to them, Michel. Tell them it was a mad wolverine or lynx and we've hunted it out of the country. I'll get a fire going while David brings some tea from the island. It will cheer them up—the tea."

But both his patience, and his knowledge of the woods Indian's belief in the supernatural, were taxed to the uttermost before Michel succeeded in convincing the women that the Windigo they had heard on the ridge was not now turning them to their doom with the assumed voice of the headman of Walling River.

In the end, they crept from the tipi to the friendly light of the fire, horror in their shivering eyes, gray-faced children clutching their skirts. There, comforted by the tea, and heartened by the presence of the three men, who kept a huge fire going, the circle of stricken women passed the night.

In the opinion of Steele, who kept vigil with his pipe, beside the snoring David and Michel, rolled in their blankets, the coming of the beast to Big Feather before the freeze-up, was the gravest menace which the fortunes of Walling River post, and the girl who had given him until spring to accomplish the impossible, had yet encountered. For, as a forest fire runs in dry timber, so rumors of the howling of the Windigo at Big Feather would travel from hunter to hunter through the upper valley of the Walling. The tale would spread, gathering horror as it went as a snowslide gathers momentum, until in time the whole region learned that a Windigo was loose in the valley of the Walling—a fiend fierce beyond belief and hungry for the flesh of the Ojibway. Then would follow, unless the beast were killed and the terror ended, swift exodus from the valley of the families still trading at the post, the return and revival of the ghastly traditions surrounding the rapids and the river below—the end of the St. Onge and the post at Walling River.

Steele's teeth bit savagely into the stem of his pipe. This might happen before the freeze-up, and until the snow made it possible to follow a trail, there was small chance of solving the mystery of the night howling.

Now, Steele mused, when the men returned from their hunt to hear of the voice in the night from the circle of half-demented women cowering there around the fire, the tale would straightway travel to the four winds, and hardly indeed would be the hunter who would drive his dog team this Christmas down the white valley of the Walling to trade at the ill-fated post. With no Christmas, and with the prospect of a spring trade, unless the mystery were solved by the running down of this beast with the miraculous vocal cords, Walling River was doomed. Even if Denise married Lascelles in the spring, the post could not be continued under a taboo.

True, St. Onge had sworn that she should never make the sacrifice, but the factor was at his rope's end, and she would override him. She would not see him disgraced. Her pride would drive her to it—that fierce pride of race. She was a thoroughbred and would go to her spiritual death with a high head, in the spring.

In the morning Michel would go in search of the caribou hunters, for after that night the women would not remain alone at Big Feather. David would cross to Portage lake to learn if the Windigo had been heard on the Little Current. He, himself, would cover the country back of the ridge for a trail which he had little hope of picking up, and endeavor to lead the women at their camp until their men returned. On the return of David they would at once start for Nepligon, leaving Michel to meet the canoe, St. Onge, was to read.

With Michel would go two letters, explaining his change of plans. The sole hope of holding the Indiana now was in scotching the Windigo terror early in the winter by tracking down the beast on the first snow; and so, strongly as his heart drew him toward the post, he made his decision.

CHAPTER IX

For three days Steele searched the ridge and back country for tracks, but without success. David returned from Portage lake with the good news that the fishing camps were taking large catches of pike and whitefish, and there was no Windigo gossip. So, in spite of the shrill protests and indignant reprobation of their squaws, Steele, corroborated by his men, assured the Ojibways that what the women had heard on the burnt ridge was the caterwauling of a lynx, and at once started with David for Ogoke lake and the Nepligon.

It was on a windless day in the heart of the northern Indian summer that the canoe bound south for the Nepligon approached the islands guarding the east end of Ogoke. Like silhouettes of anchored battle fleets they rode the sleeping lake, their fighting tops and stacks, of black spruce, their armored hulls, of age-worn rocks.

"Where is the post, David?" asked Steele.

"Four—five hour paddle, yet. Eet lie on long spruce point. You see eet today ver' far off."

"You realize that you can't start anything at Lafamme's place now, don't you?"

Repeatedly, David's square shoulders leaned to the stroke, as his arms swept the blade through, before he turned his black head to his chief.

"David has waited ten year, he can wait leetle tam longer. We got plenty troubles does long snow on de Walling. Daveded weel wait; you not worry for beem."

"It Looks as if the Whole Outfit is Out to Meet Us."

"I knew you wouldn't do anything when we have this work down river ahead of us; but I realize that it will be hard, if we stay a day or two, for you to keep your hands off of him. His gang would get you anyway if you did square it with Lafamme, and that would put me in a hole as well."

The reticent David had never divulged even to Steele the cause of the ancient grudge—he bore the free-trader. He had said simply that he wished to meet him—had twice journeyed, far for that purpose; once missing him, the second time finding him camped with his fur canoes. As David had no quarrel with Lafamme's men, who would have come promptly to the aid of their chief, he had bided his time. In some way, years before, Lafamme had injured the Ojibway. That was the extent of Steele's knowledge.

Gradually, as they approached, the clearing opened up and the buildings of the fur post took shape. So keen was his curiosity that Steele ceased paddling to examine them through his binoculars. Here lived the man who was waiting until the snow flew for St. Onge's answer to his offer of a partnership in the trade for the price of Denise, the man who was luring the Ojibways for hundreds of miles with his whisky.

Although the freeze-up was little more than a fortnight away, hips squatted, here and there, on the post clearing. This, of itself, meant but one thing to the man who held the glasses—whisky. For, throughout the wide north, September finds the hunters on their winter trapping grounds, preparing for the coming of the long snows.

"Wal, w'at you tink ov dat place?" asked David, as Steele put his glasses in their case.

"He must have a lot of people there—big buildings, too."

"Yes, eet see beeg place." As they approached the long point, Steele was surprised at the number of people moving about the buildings. On the beach the post dogs already awaited the strange craft, while a group of post people formed behind them. The canoe was close in shore when two men left the massive tradehouse and drifted to the log landing stage, off which a York boat rode at its mooring.

"It looks as if the whole outfit is out to meet us."

David turned a grim face to his chief. "Some'ing strange here!"

"They may think we're a police canoe," suggested Steele.

"Ah-hah!" "Is that Lafamme talking to the big fellow on the landing?"

"Ah-hah! He don't talk lak' dead man." So low were the sinister words spoken that Steele, in doubt, asked:

"What's that?" The Ojibway turned to his chief a face twisted with hate.

"He don't know—he eeg—dead man!"

"Some day you can settle with him—but not now, not now! We have a job on the Walling—you and Michel and I," hastily objected Steele, fearing this meeting with the man he hated had jarred David off his mental balance.

The set features of the Ojibway relaxed. His narrow eyes glowed as he reassured the man who trusted him. "Daveded promise to meet Michel on de November snow. We have de beeg job—you an' Michel an' Daveded; I mak' no trouble here, boss."

Under the inspection of many pairs of curdus eyes, the canoe slid into the beach. Leaving David to keep the dogs off the canoe, Steele walked through the silent huskies who instinctively drew back from his approach and closed in behind him, walking on stiff legs barely out of reach of the paddle he carried, awed yet threatening. The bulky half-breed, whose sinister face wore the red rash of a scar from chin to ear, Steele dismissed with a glance, but nothing, from the heavily bearded moccasins of smoke-tanned moosehide, to the wide-brimmed stetson of the free-trader, escaped his appraising eye. To his surprise, also, the dark features which met him with a look both surly and questioning, were undeniably handsome.

"Good day, gentlemen!" said Steele, affably, ignoring the coolness of his reception.

"Good day!" returned Lafamme, coldly, probing the smiling face of the stranger with a sharp look in which doubt and concern patently mingled.

"I am headed for Nepligon, from Fort Albany, and need some supplies," went on Steele. "Can you sell me some stuff?"

With a curl of the lip Lafamme replied: "That depends on what your business is on this lake."

The tawny-haired American laughed in the face of the speaker.

"Business on this lake? Are you joking? You seem to have all the business here. My business is to get back to New York before I'm frozen in, and report to the American Museum of Natural History. I've spent the last five months on the Albany, collecting. Now, I'm bound for Nepligon and the railroad."

The half-breed and his chief exchanged looks. Steele realized that he was suspected of being a government agent in disguise, so, as he needed supplies and wished to study Lafamme while David circulated among the post people, he desired to relieve the mind of the free-trader at once.

"You say you're from the States—doing collecting among the Indians? I should be glad to see some of your stuff."

Lafamme was taking no chances, and Steele welcomed the opportunity to establish his identity.

"Yes, I've two packs in the canoe. My name is Steele. I've been on the Albany two years—left a thousand pounds this year, at Fort Albany, to go out by boat." Then he hazarded: "You know Lascelles, the Revillon man there?"

Lafamme's reaction to the remark was instantaneous. His face darkened with anger.

Tragedy of Razor Blades

Those who are puzzled to know what to do with used safety razor blades may find a hint in the following, says the London Mail. A young and pretty girl approached Battersea bridge. She held something tightly in her left hand. When she reached the middle of the bridge she stopped and looked around.

Only one man was anywhere near, and he, apparently, was not paying any attention to her doings. In a flash she raised her hand and flung something into the river below. It glittered and shone as it fell, and the man, gazing over the bridge in curiosity, saw that it was a small glass phial of the sort in which powdered bath salts are sold, twelve in a box. His curiosity overcame him, and he overtook the girl.

"Do tell me what you threw into the river," he begged. "My husband's razor blades," was the astonishing answer.

World Court, a Child of the League of Nations

STANDING FIRM on the corner stone of American Government, the rights of the people and time-honored principles of the Republican party, Senator William E. Borah of Idaho, in a speech delivered on the floor of the Senate, has stripped off the mask of the so-called World Court. He has proven it to be a creature of the League of Nations—a thing which has been repudiated twice within the last five years by millions of American voters. He proved that it is not a Court of International Justice, such as was originated by the late President William McKinley and Theodore Roosevelt, nor was it the thought or idea of that eminent Secretary of State, the late John Hay. Borah conclusively proved that the thing now before the Senate was but a court of international politics, set up and dominated by scheming and intriguing European international politicians, and organized and controlled through the League of Nations.

Acting for the League of Nations in this country, according to Senator Borah, are the international bankers and so-called "intellectuals" who have spent hundreds of thousands of dollars in the most gigantic lobby the country has ever known—a lobby that is endeavoring to lull American people to sleep by leading them to believe that the World Court is harmless, when in reality it is a dangerous breeder of war.

Borah's speech has aroused the country. Protests by the hundreds are pouring into Washington. These are being sent to the Nation's lawmakers by patriotic citizens of every class—ministers, editors, farmers, business men, working men and women and others who do not want this country to be involved in anything that will result in our participation in another war unless it be for the defense of our country. The people remember the white crosses that mark the resting places of our nation's dead, both overseas and at home. World Courts and wars go hand in hand.—National Press Association.

Important Notice

State Tax Commission
Santa Fe, N. M.
January 6, 1926

To all County Assessors:

As you are about to begin the work of assessing the properties situate within your county for the current year, it has occurred to us that a suggestion as to ex-service men's exemptions might, with propriety, be brought to your attention. We desire to render you every assistance possible and to that end would suggest one plan as outlined below. This, if carried out, will assist you and we believe, be of great benefit to this class of taxpayers and also would relieve the courts of a great deal of annoyance and work.

An ex-service man, who is entitled to an exemption of two thousand dollars and he has property, regardless of the amount and regardless of whether the property is real or personal, should, during the month of January, render to the assessor, a complete description and list of his property. At the same time, those who are entitled to exemptions should request the allowance of exemptions and make such showings to the assessor as the assessor may require. These requests and showings should be made in writing and should accompany the returns. By all means, this should be done during the present month.

If the above suggestions are carried out, the ex-service men will receive their exemptions in the tax roll and it will not be necessary for them to apply to the courts next fall, requesting that the tax which the assessor has levied be stricken in order to grant proper exemption. It will relieve the Court of the necessity of issuing orders granting these exemptions. It will also relieve the tax roll of a great deal of property upon which taxes have been regularly levied and upon which budgets are based, but from which, no return will be received. Now is the time for the ex-service men to attend to this matter, rendering their property and requesting their exemptions.

I trust that you will give this letter, or such portions of it as you see fit, due publicity in your county, so that all ex-service men will be advised as to their rights and duties.

Respectfully submitted,
State Tax Commission,
By J. E. Owen,
Chief Tax Commissioner.

Missionary Society

The Woman's Missionary Society had a called meeting last Monday evening at the home of Mrs. Wells, to attend to some business such as paying off debts, etc.

The ladies realized $41.85 from the chili supper served Saturday, Jan. 16, and wish to thank the people for their help and patronage.

The Society will meet next Tuesday afternoon, Jan. 26, at the home of Mrs. R. W. Dozier, at 2:30 p. m., with Mrs. E. T. Collier as hostess. All members are urged to attend. Others who are interested are cordially invited.

NOTICE OF FORECLOSURE OF MORTGAGE AND SALE OF REAL ESTATE

Notice is hereby given that on Oct. 28, 1922, Sofia T. Chavez, a widow, executed her certain promissory note in the sum of $1,000.00 payable to the order of Mrs. Oney Ramond, at the Citizens National Bank of Roswell, N. M., and due three months after date, bearing interest at the rate of 10 per cent per annum from date until paid with 10 per cent additional on the full amount due for attorneys fees if placed in the hands of an attorney for collection; and that on said October 28, 1922 and to secure the payment of said note said Sofia T. Chavez, made, executed, acknowledged and delivered her certain mortgage deed conveying unto the said Mrs. Oney Ramond the following described real estate situated in the County of Lincoln, State of New Mexico, to-wit:

A certain tract of land containing twelve (12) acres more or less, in sections 3 and 10, in township 11, south of Range 17-East, N. M. P. M. better described as follows: Beginning one chain north of the southwest corner of the northwest quarter of the northwest quarter, section ten, said township and range; thence in a northerly direction twelve and one-half chains to the boundary line of Estolano Sanchez land, thence north by east 11.50 chains to the south boundary line of Transilio Chavez land; thence east by south five chains thirty-five and one-half link to the west boundary line of Florindo Chavez land; thence south by west twenty-seven chains and ninety links to place of beginning, together with a water right of twenty hours each week in the Chavez ditch.

Also about thirty acres in sections three and ten, township 11 S. range 17 E. N. M. P. M. beginning at a point from which the southeast corner to the northeast quarter of the southwest quarter of Section 3, Twp. 11 S. Range 17 E. bears east 99 degrees 0.04 chains 16, links to the land of Cornelia F. De Sanchez to the northwest corner of tract from which corner post of fence bears east 40 degrees N. 18 links to the southwest corner of tract; which is also the northwest corner of land of C. D. Chavez; thence 48 degrees east 10 chains 71 links to the west boundary of land of C. J. Jackson, which is the southeast corner of this tract, and is also the northeast corner of land of Florinda C. De Blas; thence west 48 degrees north to place of beginning. Together with other description not needed in this abstract.

That at that time said mortgage lien herein referred to was the first lien upon said premises; that said mortgage deed was recorded on or about the 31st day of October 1922, in Book A-9, page 321 of the Records of Mortgage Deeds of said Lincoln County and the said Mrs. Oney Ramond is now the owner and holder of said note and mortgage deed. That default has been made in the payment of said note and interest according to the terms and conditions of said note and mortgage deed and the terms and conditions of said mortgage have been wholly breached, and that said note has been placed in the hands of an attorney for collection and there is now due on account of said note and mortgage in the principal sum of $1,000.00, $322.37 interest, $102.93, attorneys fees, being a total of $1,425.36; and the said mortgagee as the legal owner and holder of said mortgage and under the authority of the power of sale contained in said mortgage deed, does hereby give notice that in accordance with the terms of said mortgage deed and power of sale therein contained, the undersigned mortgagee as aforesaid, will on the 23rd day of February, 1926, at the front door of the County Court House of said Lincoln County, at the hour of 10 o'clock A. M. offer for sale and sell at public auction to the highest bidder for cash the real estate in this notice above described, and under the power in said mortgage will execute to the purchaser thereof a deed to said premises and with the proceeds of said sale will pay and satisfy the indebtedness secured by said mortgage deed so far as said proceeds will pay and satisfy the same. That in addition to said sum of $1,425.36, there will be added the costs of this sale and accrued interest which will be approximately $40.00 and if there be any residue after paying all of said indebtedness and sale, the same will be paid to said mortgagor.

WITNESSETH MY HAND this the 18th day of January, 1926.
(Signed) Mrs. Oney Ramond,
Mortgagee and Seller.

Improved!

A Revelation in Low Priced Transportation

A type of performance never before approached in any low priced car—a new smoothness of operation—new flexibility—new swiftness of acceleration—new beauty—new comfort—these have been added to its already world-famous power and economy to make the Improved Chevrolet a revelation in low-priced transportation.

Just take one ride in this remarkable car—and you will be amazed to find that qualities heretofore the chief advantages of owning costlier cars are now obtainable in a car of very low price.

The introduction of the Improved Chevrolet marks an outstanding achievement in the automobile industry.

Chicago Honors Famous Explorers

BY JOHN DICKINSON SHERMAN

TRAFFIC police halt traffic across the Michigan boulevard bridge at the mouth of the Chicago river in the second city of the United States and the fourth of the world. It is 2:30 in the afternoon. The solid lines of automobiles, three abreast, come to an unwilling halt, with much protesting clamor of horns from the overgrowing rear ranks. Two American flags are flying at the north end of the bridge, and between them gathers a little group of men and women.

"In the name of the Illinois Society of the Colonial Dames of America," says Mrs. Holmes Forsyth. The rest is lost in the tumult of city noise. A man, heroically baring his head to the driving snow, says something in reply. He is Maj. A. A. Sprague and he speaks for the City of Chicago. Then a sheet is drawn aside and there is revealed a bronze tablet, thus inscribed:

"In honor of Louis Joliet and Pere Jacques Marquette, the first white men to pass through the Chicago river, in September, 1673."

At the south end of the bridge, after the same short and formal ceremony, is unveiled another bronze tablet. This one is "in memory of Rene Robert Caveller, Sieur de La Salle, and Henri de Tonti."

The traffic police signal, the impatient motorists swarm upon the bridge and the unheeding city traffic hurries by. In the more sympathetic atmosphere of the Chicago Historical society an interesting program is carried out. For example, Mrs. Joseph Tucker Linnar of Atlanta, head of the National Society of the Colonial Dames, speaks on the value to great Americans of acquaintance with such important incidents of our early history. Prof. Andrew McLoughlin of the University of Chicago reviews the careers of these four famous explorers.

Joliet and Marquette were in truth on the Chicago river, 1673. When La Salle first saw the river has been a subject of sharp controversy for generations. It has been claimed that he reached the Mississippi by way of the Chicago Portage in 1670. It was in 1681 that he crossed the Chicago Portage on his way to the Gulf to take possession in the name of France.

As to whether Joliet and Marquette were the first white men to see the Chicago river that's another question. History does not record any previous visit by white men, but there had been white men in that region for a long time. And the Chicago Portage—along with the Calumet River Portage—was the common highway for all who traveled. If a traveler coming up the Mississippi wished to go to Green Bay or Mackinac he used the Wisconsin Fox Portage. If he wished to travel east via the St. Joseph river, he used the Calumet rather than the Chicago river.

Here in brief is the way and wherefore of the presence of Joliet and Marquette on the Chicago river:

In 1672 Louis de Buade, Count de Frontenac, was appointed governor and lieutenant general of New France. He was greatly interested in the exploration of the region of the Great Lakes and selected Joliet to search for the Great River believed to flow southward into the Gulf of California. Joliet was born in Canada, the son of a wagon maker. He had been a promising scholar in the Jesuits' school at Quebec, but had become a wilderness rover and Indian trader. He was a young man, but had already made a reputation.

Joliet reached Mackinac in December of 1672. He was delayed there by ice till May. There he met Marquette, a Jesuit priest of good family, eight years his senior. He joined Joliet for the southern trip. He had no official connection with the expedition. They traveled in two canoes with five voyageurs. They went up the Fox from Green Bay and down the Wisconsin and then the Mississippi to the mouth of the Arkansas. Here, convinced that the Mississippi flowed into the Gulf of Mexico, they turned back and reached Lake Michigan by way of the Illinois, Desplaines and Chicago rivers. Marquette went to his mission on Green Bay. Joliet disappeared for a year and did not report to Frontenac till August of 1674.

Marquette's subsequent history is briefly this: He had promised the Illinois Indians near Peoria that he would return and found a mission. In the fall of 1674 he started for the Illinois village. Had weather or illness or both stopped his progress across the Chicago Portage, and he spent the winter on the river bank about six miles from its mouth. With the spring he reached the Indians and taught them. His health and strength giving out, he started for Mackinac. He traveled around the head of Lake Michigan, working his way up the east shore. He died on the way. The next year his bones were taken up and carried to Mackinac.

"He always entreated God," writes Father Claude Dablon in his journal, that he might end his life in these laborious missions, and that, like his dear St. Xavier, he might die in the midst of the woods bereft of everything."

Marquette's unfinished journal can be found in "The Jesuit Relations." Here are some of the things the priest has to say about his winter experiences on the bank of the Chicago river:

"We started with a favoring wind and reached the river of the portage, which was frozen to the depth of half a foot. There was more snow there than elsewhere, as well as more tracks of animals and turkeys."

"The land bordering the lake is of no value, except on the prairie. Deer hunting is very good. Having encamped near the portage, two leagues up the river, we resolved to winter there, as it was impossible to go farther, since we were too much hindered and my ailment did not permit me to give myself much fatigue."

"Several Illinois passed yesterday on their way to carry furs to Nacawshingwo. I do not think I have ever seen savages more eager for French tobacco than they."

"They came and threw beaver skins at our feet to get some pieces of it. They traded us three deer robes of ox skins for a cubit of tobacco; these were very useful to us during the winter."

"We had had opportunity to observe the ice coming in from the lake, which rises and falls several times a day, and although there seems to be no shelter in the lake, we have seen the ice rolling against the wind. The deer are so lean that we had to abandon several which we had killed. We killed several partridges."

"The blessed Virgin immaculate has taken care of us during our wintering; that we have not lacked provisions and have still remaining a large sack of corn with some meat and fat."

Frontenac wrote this letter to the French government upon the return of Joliet:

"Sieur Joliet . . . found some very fine country and a navigation so easy through the beautiful rivers, that a person can go from Lake Ontario and Fort Frontenac in a bark to the Gulf of Mexico, there being only one carrying place, half a league in length, where Lake Ontario communicates with Lake Erie. A settlement could be made at this port, and another bark be built on Lake Erie."

He has been within ten days' journey of the Gulf of Mexico, and believes that water communication could be found leading to the Vermillion and California Seas, by means of the river that flows from the west, with the Grand River that he discovered, which rises from north to south, and is as large as the St. Lawrence opposite Quebec."

"I send you, by my secretary, the map he has made of it, and the observations he has been able to collect, as he lost all his minutes and journals in the wreck he suffered within sight of Montreal, where, after having completed a voyage of twenty hundred leagues, he was near being drowned, and lost all his papers, and a little Indian whom he brought from those countries."

It is interesting to note in these days of agitation over a Great Lakes half waterway, that in this letter Frontenac says in effect that the Chicago Portage is navigable and that Niagara Falls is the only obstacle to continuous water-travel. All the early explorers had the same idea about the Chicago Portage. If they had actually to carry canoees because they incidentally remarked that a few shovels would change all that, Asa's matter of fact, conflicting statements as to the Chicago Portage were due to seasonal conditions. In times of high water canoees and even loaded boats went through easily. Of course these early travelers knew nothing of the millen of underlying rock close to the surface along the Desplaines river.

Joliet's canoe was upset actually within sight of home, "after avoiding perils from savages and passing 42 rapids." Nevertheless, he proceeded to draw a number of maps from memory. The one reproduced in part calls the region "La Colbertie," after Colbert, minister of Louis XIV. The "Bays des Puans" (Green Bay) he names after an Indian tribe. The "Mission de St. Fr. Xavier" on Green Bay was Marquette's chapel. "Mississippi" is of course, the Wisconsin. The Mississippi is marked, "River that discharges into the Gulf of Mexico." "Riviers de la Divine" is the Illinois. Joliet named it after two reigning French belles: Frontenac's wife, who had been Anne de la Grange-Trancon, and her bosom friend, Mlle. d'Outreaise. These two ladies were called "Les Delynes." At the bottom of the map is the Ohio, marked, "Route of Sieur La Salle to Mexico." It was apparently added to the map by a later hand.

Here is a resume of the career of Robert Caveller, Sieur de La Salle (1643-87), as generally accepted by the historians after many years of controversy as to certain points:

He was born in Rouen, France, and arrived in New France in 1666. He is credited with the discovery of the Ohio river, and probably followed it as far as the falls at Louisville. In 1673 he began preparations to descend the Mississippi to the Gulf. He built Fort Crevecoeur on the Illinois river (Peoria) and organized an Indian league to fight the Iroquois Confederacy of New York, the overlords of all the tribes from the Atlantic to the Mississippi. In 1682 he arrived at the Gulf, by way of the Chicago Portage and the Illinois, and took possession of the region, which he named Louisiana, in the name of Louis XIV. He returned to Canada and then went to France. Here under authority of Louis he organized an expedition to the Gulf, with the purpose of founding a colony at the mouth of the Mississippi. He sailed from France in 1684, missed the Mississippi and built a fort on what is now the Lavaca river in Texas. He was assassinated by one of his men March 18, 1687, near the Trinity river in Texas.

"The Murder of Monseur de La Salle," is reproduced from a copper plate by Van der Gucht in the London (1864) edition of Hennepin's "New Discovery." The portrait of La Salle may or may not have some basis of authenticity; it follows a design in Gravier, which is said to be based on an engraving in the Bibliotheque de Rosen and is the only portrait worth consideration.

Henri de Tonti (1680-1704) was an Italian soldier of fortune. He entered La Salle's service in 1678. It was he who built Fort St. Louis on Starved Rock in 1681. He searched long for La Salle after his disappearance in Texas. After living with the Illinois Indians as a trader he joined Iberville at New Orleans in 1702.

Of these four men Joliet was the efficient voyager, with the advantage of an education; Pere Marquette was the devoted priest, whose passion was to convert the Indians; Tonti was the soldier, the loyal and devoted lieutenant of La Salle; La Salle was the man of vision who saw a French empire in the Mississippi valley.

To the student of history the development of the Mississippi valley since the day of these four explorers is a marvel of marvellous. Untold millions have already been expended upon the waterways over which they actually traveled by canoe and the expenditure is not beginning. The next five years will probably see the completion of the connection by waterways of Chicago, New Orleans, Pittsburg and Kansas City at a cost of $100,000,000. As for the Chicago Portage—the Chicago river now flows backward into the Illinois; the "New shovels" have already cost over $100,000,000. Chicago, then, substituted, has now a population of over 2,000,000 and is tentatively planning a second world's fair in 1927 in celebration of the centennial of its beginning as a city.

The KITCHEN CABINET

But words are things, and a small drop of ink, falling like dew upon a thought, produces that which makes thousands, perhaps millions, think.—Byron.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

It is not necessary that one should be a graduate of household economics, to understand the planning and serving of a well-balanced ration of palatable food, but it is essential that study and thought should be put upon the care and selection of foods, for a small amount of food rightly combined will give more energy than a large amount improperly combined.

Someone has said that the selection and organization of food in the diet is as important as the organization of an army. A properly disciplined force of soldiers is much more effective than an untrained mob, as we all know.

The essential things to remember are the different groups of foods and their office in the diet. This is not difficult; the farmer finds it most important in the feeding of stock.

1. Foods that furnish protein which builds muscle: In this class we find milk, eggs, meat, fish, dried peas, and beans.

2. Foods which furnish us energy, as starch and sugar: These are cereals, starchy macaroni, potatoes and such starchy foods. The sugar we get in various forms—in fruit, honey, cane sugar, molasses, cakes, desserts and preserves.

3. Foods which furnish fats for heat are supplied by butter, cream, olive oil, bacon, corn oil, suet and pork, as well as the fat of other meats.

4. Foods which supply mineral salts, vegetable acids and vitamins, the body regulating substances, we find in apples, oranges, pears, melons and citrus fruits; green vegetables, cress, lettuce, spinach and cabbage.

The next in importance to food is water—plenty of it, pure and free from all injurious substances. Water dissolves food and liquefies it so that it may be easily absorbed by the tissues of the body. Two or three quarts a day is necessary for good health in an adult.

Children's digestive organs are very active and they are hungry often between meals. The habit of lunching is bad, but a lunch between meals occasionally may be found necessary.

An inexpensive and easy-to-prepare dessert is the most popular with the busy housewife who has but one pair of hands to serve her.

Chocolate Pudding—Beat one egg, add one-half cupful of sugar, one cupful of flour, three teaspoonfuls of baking powder, mix well and add two squares of melted chocolate. Steam one and one-half hours and serve with foamy sauce.

Jam Pudding—Take one cupful of flour, one-half cupful of sugar, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one-half teaspoonful each of cinnamon and salt, one egg, one-half cupful of jam and three tablespoonfuls of molasses. Mix the dry ingredients, then add all together and beat well. Bake in a moderate oven. Place the following topping over the pudding while hot. Cover with a meringue and brown in the oven:

Waked Indian Pudding—Scald one quart of milk and add one cupful of corn meal, one cupful of raisins, one and one-fourth cupfuls of brown sugar, two eggs; add another quart of milk and put into the oven. Bake three hours, stirring the first hour or two occasionally. Cook the corn meal in the boiling milk a few minutes to be sure that it is well blended. It is wise to mix the meal with a little cold milk before adding, to avoid lumps. After it is ready for the oven, dredge flour over the top. This will, with the suet, make a rich brown crust over the pudding when it is baked.

Knockout Pudding—To the yolks of two well-beaten eggs add one-half cupful of pulverized sugar, one and one-half tablespoonfuls of cold water, one teaspoonful of lemon juice, one-half cupful of flour, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, and one-half teaspoonful of salt. Mix and beat well and, lastly, fold in the stiffly beaten egg whites. Steam in buttered cups one-half full for twenty minutes. Roll in powdered sugar and serve.

Dates Pudding—Beat two eggs, add one cupful of sugar, one cupful of walnut meats, one cupful of dates, one teaspoonful of baking powder, three tablespoonfuls of flour, three tablespoonfuls of milk and one teaspoonful of vanilla. Bake in a stew sauce forty minutes. Serve with foamy sauce or whipped cream.

Topping—Cook one thick, three-fourths of a cupful of sugar, four tablespoonfuls of flour, one-half teaspoonful of salt; when well-blended add one cupful of water, two egg yolks and one teaspoonful each of vanilla and oil. Cook until smooth and thick. Use the egg whites for the meringue.

War and the Profiteer

Mrs. Rose Pastor Phelps-Stokes said at a tea in New York: "War is hideous, and the world realizes it at last. The only man who sees beauty in war nowadays is the profiteer."

"It's like the chap that stood on the promenade deck and gazed with tear-dimmed eyes at a school of spouting whales."

"Ah," he said, "ain't that beautiful, though?"

"Curious, perhaps," said a Bostonian. "Hardly beautiful."

"It's beautiful to me," sobbed the other man, "for I'm a plumber, I am, and these spots remind me irresistibly of a magnificent line of busted water pipes."

Discovered by American

Now that Dindard, the famous resort on the coast of Brittany, has become so fashionable among tourists, students of its early history have discovered the fact that it was first discovered by an American. Mr. Copinger happened to be in St. Malo in 1800 in search of good fishing and crossed the bay to the then unknown fishing village, in the sheltered cove beyond. He returned the following year and settled there, and the steady growth of the village can be dated from the year of his residence.

Local business circles experienced a thrill Monday morning, when two big trucks stopped over here for several hours, one of which was loaded with a complete equipment which we understand could be put to work at Santa Rosa. While we have not as yet assumed the drilling habit, nevertheless, we are thankful for small favors and will not forget the courtesy we have been shown by the friendly visitation of the drilling outfit, at least.

Mrs. J. B. Adams came in last Friday from Tulsa, Okla., after receipt of the news of the illness of her daughter, Mrs. Erva Claunch, whose condition, we are glad to say, was much improved by the time her mother arrived. Mrs. Adams will remain for an indefinite period or in other words, until her daughter has improved sufficient to warrant her return to Tulsa.

W. B. Johns, manager of the Tinnie Mercantile Company of Tinnie, was a business visitor to the County Seat on Monday. Mr. Johns is optimistic concerning our future and said that while business was not just what it should be at the present time, old Lincoln County is gradually coming back and the day is not far distant when she will be herself again.

The Odd Fellows' Ball was given last Saturday night at Lutz Hall and the attendance was heavy. It was more than an ordinary dance; it was a happy community gathering where, in there was no strife, contention, or anything beyond a gathering of neighbors whose aim was to spend an evening of social enjoyment, which they certainly did. The Rebekahs served refreshments of sandwiches, pie, cake and coffee. The receipts for the Odd Fellows were a little over $100.00, while the Rebekahs realized the sum of $23 from the cloak room and refreshments. Everybody had a jolly good time.

Bautista Gavi and John George were in from their homes at Walnut last Saturday. These men are pioneers of Lincoln county, but still when you speak of "Sonny Italy," they smile.

C. and family from our community, but while we then regret their departure, we hope that they may prosper far beyond their expectations. In bidding us good bye, Mr. Skinner wished the Outlook to visit him at his new home as that the family might keep in touch with affairs in old Lincoln County.

White Oaks Resident Goes to Her Reward

Mrs. J. C. Lacey, one of the pioneers of Lincoln County, died at the home of her son, E. P. Lacey in Alamogordo, Monday, Jan. 18. Funeral services were held at that place and the remains were interred in the cemetery at White Oaks.

Until about a year ago, Mrs. Lacey had lived in what old residents call "Texas Park" since the early rush of the gold fever. She was well known throughout the county for her loving Christian character and kindness to all whom she would meet. Many old residents of the early days in White Oaks will recall the motherly Mrs. Lacey and her acts of human kindness.

Card of Thanks

We wish to convey our thanks to the many friends who, with expressions of sympathy and acts of kindness, contributed to our comfort and consolation during our recent bereavement in the loss of our husband, son and brother, Ben B. Wetmore; also for the floral offerings of love and esteem at the last sad rites.

Mrs. Ben B. Wetmore and mother, Mrs. Corson; Ira P. Wetmore, Mrs. Ida H. Miles, Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Hamilton and family, Mrs. Maggie Wetmore.

Mrs. Geo. Dowdle of the Crystal Theatre is spending the week with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Cochran at Alamogordo.

T. A. Spencer and family, the Brantum family, Geo. Dowdle and members of the basketball team left today for Alamogordo. Our teams play there tonight.

William Spence, wife and son arrived here from Deming, last Sunday, and are spending the week with Mrs. Clarence Spence and children. Billsays that range and stock conditions near Deming were never better than the present time.
