GOLF P. J. GAUDIN

Let the Club Do the Work. With the first lesson from your golf teacher, preferably, in the use of the mallet, should come careful consideration of the purpose of that lesson. It will not be necessary for the teacher to emphasize the difficulty of making the swing properly; the pupil will know that before the first lesson is given. It will be necessary, however, for the pupil, if he wishes to get much benefit from the lessons, to learn the means for the various elements of the swing and, most important of all, to learn the benefit of intelligent, thoughtful practice.

FORT STANTON NEWS (Fort Stanton Correspondent)

The entertainment of the Trowel Club was especially good on Washington's Birthday and was greatly appreciated by the patients and all whose other holiday engagements did not prevent attending. Mrs. (Senator) Coe gave several piano numbers, Professor C. F. Clowers sang and rendered delightful selections on the Harmonica. Mr. J. F. English sang and Fern Mickey danced. The Fort Stanton Orchestra was augmented by the addition of Mr. Berggren and his Saxophone.

Favors from Chicago were given out and the usual bountiful refreshments were served at the Ward and in the Social Club, by Mesdames Titaworth, Kincheloe and Spence, the Misses Harrison, Spence, Bulger and Rockwell.

At nurses' quarters, on the same evening a most delightful social and supper were given by Mrs. Taulbee and Miss Green, at which Miss Kinnan and Mr. Wunsch won the bridge prizes. On Wednesday evening the residents of No. 4 entertained their many friends and, on Friday evening the ladies are to give a farewell reception to Mrs. Taulbee who expects to leave us to go to the Chicago Marine Hospital early in March. Mrs. Taulbee has been at the Fort some years and has made many and strong friends both at the Fort and in the surrounding neighborhood.

Mr. and Mrs. Ben Coper, Mrs. Gardner, Eloise and John, motored to El Paso on Monday for medical attention to Mr. Coper's eye. While there they saw Mrs. Hobbs at Hotel Dieu who is recovering from her recent painful operation.

Mr. Lonnie G. Cooper has returned to work in the bakery after an absence of some months on his ranch at Lake Arthur, N. M.

Many at the Fort were greatly saddened recently by the sudden death of Martin Apodaca. It is expected William Fritz is to leave the Fort for work at the Ruidoso on the first.

Crystal Theatre Geo. A. Dowdle, Prop.

COLONIAL PARTY GRAND SUCCESS

One of the most novel and interesting entertainments of the season was given last Saturday night at Lutz Hall by the officers and department chairmen of the Carrizozo Woman's Club.

The costumes of the ladies many of which were identical with those worn in Colonial days, were a beautiful designed and with the powdered wigs, made the scene a dazzling re-production of "ye olden times."

The affair opened with the following patriotic program: Clarinet solo, J. C. Burkett; "A Colonial Party," by the children in Mrs. Hunt's room; Vocal trio, Mesdames Adams, Loughrey, and Miss Sessions; Saxophone solo, William Kahler; "Making of the American Flag," by the Eighth Grade, assisted by high school pupils. This number which was given with a medley of patriotic songs, was arranged by Mrs. M. L. Blaney and was one of the biggest features of the entertainment. After the program, the guests danced to the music of Kahler's "Zozians" until closing time.

Prizes were given to Mrs. Albert Ziegler for the most handsomely designed costume and to Mrs. Jane Gallacher, for the most realistic costume which was a dress the lady wore when she was sixteen years of age. It was a beautiful piece of handiwork and the proud owner had kept it well preserved for the past fifty-three years.

The large crowd which attended, filled the hall to overflowing good nature, strict order and supreme enjoyment prevailing throughout the evening, which goes to carry out our oft-repeated saying, that if the Woman's Club attempts anything, "what it proposes, that it performs." Refreshments were served during the evening and the proceeds of the affair will probably be turned over to the Community Hall project.

Local Officers Appointed

Under the provisions of the War Department as set forth in another article in this paper, Major Frank H. Johnson, Medical, and E. M. Brickley, Q. M. Res., have been appointed at Carrizozo, at the call of the senator for member thereof, for the purpose of examining such applicants for appointment in the officers' Reserve Corps as may be authorized by the Corps Area Commander to appear before the board. This includes officers of the Reserve Corps and also of the National Guard.

EATING HOUSE NOTES (By S. L. Northlane)

Miss Louise Sweet, who is attending the El Paso School for Girls, came home last Friday, spent three days with the home folks and returned to her studies Tuesday morning.

Incoming trainmen tell of a happening a few days ago at Newman which almost cost the track foreman his life. Hearing a noise in his chicken house shortly after dark, he went to investigate, when the chicken thief, as he proved to be, got content with that act, fired at the foreman, the ball striking him in the abdomen. The thief fled with his loot and the foreman is in the hospital at El Paso.

Mr. and Mrs. Tommy Carr of Tucumcari came up Saturday, attended the Colonial Party, visited old friends and returned home Sunday evening on 12.

F. T. Wright, R. J. Manguro and wives were here Saturday and Sunday, taking pictures of Watson Lake, views on the Bonito and Eagle Creek with which to make up illustrated articles for the Southern Pacific Bulletin. Mr. Wright is secretary to superintendent Murphy and Mr. Manguro is timekeeper in the superintendent's office.

Fred L. Braun, Exalted Ruler of the New Mexico Flex Club was a hotel guest Wednesday, and while here, a big meeting of the club was held and many applications for membership were taken under advisement. Reports showed the local branch to be in a flourishing condition.

Operator Sommermeyer, relieved operator Boughner the first of the week while that gentleman was moving his family to another part of town.

Arrivals for the first part of the week were: Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Bowder, T. A. Bodeen, E. L. Christensen, C. A. Rainwater, H. S. Manke, H. E. Stansbury, F. T. Wright and wife, W. R. Sommermeyer, B. J. Miller, R. J. Manguro and wife, C. M. Mackey and wife, F. G. Hawks, A. H. Dawson, A. D. Spillyard, H. Ralston, B. E. Wilkins and wife, George McElrod, John Buchanan, A. R. Jameson and wife, Mrs. Wm. Nix, R. S. Nelson, L. C. Boswell, J. LeVine, El Paso; Fred Malone, St. Louis; H. Hancock, Corona, F. Seights, Las Vegas; Alfred Hunter, Alamogordo; W. Johnson, A. Watson, Santa Fe; Verma Brown, New York; A. Cutting, Denver; F. Robertson, C. Davis, Dallas; Dan Trigg and wife, T. Clough, Tucumcari; Geo. Titaworth and wife, Captain.

NOGAL ITEMS By "Bill O'Fare"

Fishing is always considered a lazy man's pastime, but the thrifty are sometimes lured into taking a pole, hook and line and sit on the bank of some stream all day trying to get a nibble. Fishing covers several subjects; as for instance, a swindler fishing for suckers; the hungry boarder fishing for a piece of meat or a bean in the soup; or fishing for pork in a can of pork and beans. But the kind of fishing we are going to write about is fishing for fish.

First you set the alarm for five in the morning and when it goes off at that ungodly hour you find your enthusiasm of the night before has waned considerably. Nevertheless, you reluctantly rise and shoulder your rod and reel and steal the liver the wife bought for the cat, for bait. You will have some trouble starting the car and you will also forget your lunch. And every mile or so you will almost be tempted to turn back and give it up, but presently you arrive at the place where Ike told you he caught some large ones; park your car and prepare your line.

By this time you are growing quite enthusiastic again and are determined to show those doubting Thomases at the office that fish still run wild. You will cast your line a few times and fail to get even a nibble; then decide that liver is not the proper kind of bait for the kind of fish you are after. So you pick the pole in the mud and go in quest of worms or grasshoppers, and after half an hour you will return, very tired and hot, with a couple of sickly looking worms and a moth.

Satisfied that you will now have better luck you bait the hook with one of the worms, cast the line and eagerly wait. Presently the cork begins to bobble, you prick up your ears and watch attentively. The cork will continue to bobble up and down for some time, then it will settle down and grow very quiet. Your enthusiasm wanes. You draw out the line and the bait is gone. Next you try the moth and a different pool. After sitting for half an hour in the hot sun the cork begins to bobble and suddenly goes under and down stream. You cautiously wind in your reel and pull out a fish about two and one half inches long, a very poor excuse for a fish, but in spite of adverse conditions you grow a bit more encouraged. The last worm is placed on the hook and cast out to bring in a nine pounder. It is no more than cast, when the cork goes under with a sudden jerk. You feel weight tugging at the line and very slowly and eagerly you wind and reel. Oh! but he is a big one, easily weigh ten pounds, you meebly fifteen; gosh! watch that reel set back and fight.

Now what will those nit wits down at the office say? You will show them what a real fish is. The struggle continues and just as you give the last turn on the reel an insipid and much surprised looking mud turtle appears with your hook well imbedded in his throat.

New language suitable for the occasion will not be printed in this column. But if you will listen to a wile skinner trying to coax a balky mule to tighten a trace, you will no doubt catch our meaning. By this time it is

III. Captain Kidd's Fatal Mistake

THE die had been cast and Capt. William Kidd, whom King William had sent out to catch pirates, had decided to be a pirate himself and had announced his intention of "ballasting his ship with gold and silver from the Mocha fleet." So to the port of Bahia Key where the Mocha fleet was loading its cargo, Captain Kidd's ship, the Adventure, sailed. And then the Mocha fleet one night stole out of the harbor, outwitted the would-be pirate and got clean away! But Captain Kidd was soon in hot pursuit and, catching up with it, this daredevil English seaman pushed his little galley into the midst of the big merchantmen and opened the battle. But alas for the crew's dream of rich loot! The Adventure was roundly peppered by the merchantmen's guns and forced to fall back while the feet continued on to India.

Captain Kidd tried in vain to recoup his fortunes. But the few captures which he made after the escape of the Mocha fleet were unimportant. The climax came in a battle with the Portuguese ship, the Loyal Captain. For five hours the two ships banged at each other, then the Portuguese sailed away and all the pirates had to show for their work was ten badly wounded men. The grumbling among the crew increased.

It came to a head in the person of Gunner Moore, who made so bold as to say that he could have shown Captain Kidd a way to have taken the Loyal Captain and that "without any risk." There was a sting in those three words with their implication of cowardice on the captain's part.

"Which way could you have put me in a way to take that ship without risk?" he demanded. The gunner sought refuge in a lie. "Sir," he protested, "I never spoke such a word nor ever thought such a thing." "You lousy dog!" roared the captain. "If I am a lousy dog, you are a madman so," cried Moore desperately. "You have brought me to ruin and misery more—this is a subtle appeal for the support of his mates. 'Bare I then ruined you, you dog!' cried the infuriated pirate. 'Then take that!'"

Captain Kidd seized a heavy wooden basket bound with iron hoops and struck the gunner a crushing blow upon the head. Gunner Moore died. His words and actions had been impudent mutiny and as such the captain was justified by the harsh rule of the sea in punishing it thus. But that one blow proved to be Captain Kidd's fatal mistake. For it he paid in Execution dock.

Don't Forget—Coming Soon—Mary Pickford in "Little Annie Rooney." Harold Bell Wright's Novel, "Son of His Father." Gene S. Porter's Novel, "The Keeper of the Bees." Lon Chaney in "Phantom of the Opera." Bill Hart in "The Tumbleweed."

Don't miss these great pictures. You'll regret it if you do. Huh?

growing late and you must hurry home so that you can go by the fish market. Then all the next day you lie; you lie to every one, even the little wife is deceived; you lie to your boss, you lie to your pastor and doctor; you lie to that fresh bunch at the office, and in a few days that little two and a half inch fish begins to grow. until, in a few weeks he is stretched out to measure fifteen inches and will weigh nine pounds.

Fish has made more liars than any other one thing. They are no doubt, evil angels of the devil placed here to beguile and pollute the truthful nature of mankind. It is even reputed that George Washington would willingly lie about the length of the fish he caught. All down thru the ages fish have figured in the complex of great liars, and have caused no end of trouble. Yours for bigger and better fish, Bill O'Fare.

Funeral of Mrs. George Spence at Alamogordo

The funeral of Mrs. George Spence, who passed this life in the city of Albuquerque last Sunday morning at 11:30, was held in Alamogordo Tuesday afternoon with Comet Chapter No. 29, O. E. S. of Carrizozo conducting the services. Those attending from here were:

Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Lemon, Mr. and Mrs. Frank English, Mr. and Mrs. Carl E. Freeman, Mesdames Paul Mayer, B. L. Stimmel, E. O. Pfehrs, C. P. Huppertz, O. S. Starks, Ed Williams, J. E. Green, W. G. Morehart, J. L. Bogie.

The Alamogordo Stars, headed by their Grand Matron Mrs. Dowdle, met the local members, assisted them with many acts of courtesy and made their short stay as pleasant as possible under the circumstances.

Mrs. Spence, who was for many years a resident of this place before the family moved to Albuquerque, was much loved by all who knew her. For several years she had been an invalid, during which time, she maintained that grace and levity which goes to make up the true type of Christian womanhood. She will be missed by her many friends in Lincoln County. She leaves a husband, daughter, Mrs. Grace Cochran, and son, George Spence, Jr., all of whom have the sympathy of our community.

Reports of petroleum explorations for the United States give New Mexico the highest average of producing wells for the number drilled. New Mexico made the best showing of any state in the Union on percentage of producers from oil well completions during the past year, according to these reports. Of the 58 tests drilled in the state 35 were listed as producers, one as a gasser and two as failures.

The Industrial Employment Survey report issued from the office of the U. S. Employment Service of the U. S. Department of Labor at Denver states that industrial and employment conditions in New Mexico showed a slight improvement during January. Increased activity and employment at the metal making camps was noted, particularly in the district near Santa Fe. While common metal mine labor is adequate, experienced metal miners are in demand. Coal mining continues active; labor in connection steadily employed and ample. Oil drilling and developments increasingly active, particularly in the districts surrounding Roswell, labor in connection with oil activities, sufficient. Lumbering, especially in the Bernalillo district, continues active, woodsmen steadily employed and ample. Industrial plants, except those seasonal, are running normally. Cotton oil plants continue running overtime. Building, other than residential construction, continues quite active in many parts of the state. Building-trades men of all classes ample. Railways shop employment curtailed during winter period.

A Walk to Halfway

By H. LOUIS RAYBOLD

(Copyright)

THERE is something more depressing than inspiring about returning to the dead old Alma Mater for one's fifteenth reunion. At least that was the thought in Drake Elliott's mind as he lifted his voice mightily in "Hall, hall, the gang's all here—"

True, the gang was, very largely, all there. Coming, some of them from such far-off points as San Diego and even Buenos Ayres, in order once more to "tread the sacred corridors."

Drake himself had run up from Philadelphia and had been pleasantly stirred at meeting old classmates on the train and in the station, shaking their hands or slapping them on their backs. Drake, who possessed neither wife nor child, came in for a lot of chaffing and speculation as to how he had escaped the wiles of women.

Then, somehow, somewhere, he had lost his glad careless rapture. Perhaps it had vanished in the pressure of events which crowded and even overlapped one another.

For example, a "get-together" sing was scheduled for the evening, but for any who cared to go there was a dance held by the alumnae of the neighboring woman's college three miles away.

Drake himself intended to look in. The place held many associations. He recalled Patty Ahrens and the stately Kathrine and, yes, his senior ball girl, Olive Swale. He had frequently wondered just why he had not proposed to Olive that final class night. There had been a certain fear lest she reject him in favor of Dwight Seyville. Also a certain resolution not to saddle himself with responsibility until he had made good. Well, that was a long time ago!

Yet now, coming upon her suddenly at one end of the festive gym hall, Drake was surprised to find how little the years had changed Olive—had merely accentuated her charms and made of the lovely girl an even lovelier woman.

"Drake Elliott!" There was genuine pleasure in her voice. "Dwight told me you were here—"

"Ah, so it had been Dwight! Olive, you've—well, you've changed so little—"

She laughed. "The correct reunion remark!" She eyed him appraisingly. "You yourself are a bit more nervous than I remember you. Otherwise—"

They danced together but said little. For the first time since his return Drake could imagine that fifteen years had not rolled by since last he swung down the old gym floor with Olive in his arms.

Two dances they had, then someone claimed her and during the final fox trot Drake watched her dancing and chatting with Seyville.

But back in his quarters at the College Inn, he remembered a last remark that Olive had flung back as she turned away. "It doesn't seem like old times without a walk to Halfway just at sunset, does it?"

He wished now he had probed that speech at the time. Had Olive meant—could it be that she was hinting—

Late afternoon of the following day saw Drake strolling along the worn trail which led to a group of rocks on a hilltop known as Halfway because it was equidistant from the two colleges and formed an immemorial trysting place. From the ledge one had a glorious view of green slopes, meandering river, and blue smudges that were distant hills against a western sky.

Drake felt his heart quicken absurdly, as he glimpsed a woman's figure alighted against the heavens. Then he smiled. A rendezvous with another man's wife!

Olive made room for him beside her. "This is like old times!" She smiled, then sighed. "And so much of it isn't, however one pretends!"

Drake looked up quickly. "You've felt that, too?"

"Of course," she nodded. "I think it is because only the young and the old can really make-believe. The rest of us are too busy—or too restless." "Yes," he agreed thoughtfully. "Perhaps that is it. I've noticed that it is the oldest, those back for their thirtieth or fortieth reunions, are the ones whose surrender to it all seems most real. We others return with so many illusions shattered and aspirations dimmed and have not yet learned to be satisfied with compromises."

There was a moment of comradely silence. Then, "But you are one of the successes," said Olive.

"Perhaps!" Drake shrugged his shoulders. "My life is empty. I have never married."

"These, then," mused Olive, "might be called 'The Reveries of a Bachelor and an Old Maid!'"

"What's that?" Drake had risen.

"Why, no," said Olive. "I haven't married either."

"But I thought—Dwight—"

"Dwight married Patty Ahrens. Don't you read your alumni notices?" Drake shook his head. "Never."

Then he drew a deep breath. Gosh, it was good to get back to one's Alma Mater! He looked down at the woman who might, but for his stupidity, have compromised his last 20 lonely years. She had come, it seemed, just way across the hills, across the years—

"Olive," he said quickly. "Don't you suppose—why, this was predestined, my dear?" He held out hungry arms and the two of them together found that the old glad customer response had come back.

"You allowed constipation to become chronic—until finally it resulted in organic disease."

"People don't realize how insidious constipation is. Its first effects are hardly more than annoyances—headaches, loss of appetite, sleeplessness and the like. But in time, as the body is subjected to continued intestinal poisoning, it may lead to high blood pressure, rheumatism, diabetes or even Bright's disease."

"Stop constipation if you wish to live long. Take a little Nujol every day—that will keep you regular."

Nujol relieves constipation in Nature's way

Constitution is dangerous for any body. Nujol is safe for everybody. It does not affect the stomach and is not absorbed by the body. Medical authorities approve Nujol because it is safe, gentle and natural in its action.

Nujol makes up for a deficiency—temporary or chronic—in the supply of natural lubricant in the intestines. It softens the waste matter and thus permits thorough and regular elimination without overtaxing the intestinal muscles.

Nujol can be taken for any length of time without ill effects. To insure intestinal cleanliness, it should be taken regularly in accordance with the directions on each bottle. Unlike laxatives, it does not form a habit and can be discontinued at any time. Ask your druggist for Nujol today and begin to enjoy the perfect health that is possible only when elimination is normal and regular.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

DR. FREDERICK R. GREEN Editor of "HEALTH"

BED-MAKING FOR INVALIDS

EVERYONE, whether sick or well, should have a comfortable bed. But invalids, especially those who have to pass any long period in bed, should have their beds made so that they will not only be comfortable and restful for the invalid, but also so that the comfort and convenience of the attendant may be increased.

The bed itself should be about 24 inches above the floor. Either too high or too low a bed makes proper care of the invalid difficult and unnecessarily tiring.

Single or three-quarter beds are best for the sick.

The bed should be firm and steady and should not sag, wobble or creak. The bed slats and springs should be well fitted and firm, so that there is no danger of the mattress falling down.

If possible the bed should be so placed in the room that the nurse has room to get around both sides and the foot. A bed shoved into a corner is not only harder for the nurse but also generally prevents a good circulation of air for the patient.

Metal bedsteads are better than wooden bedsteads, especially old ones that have cracks and open spaces in which bed bugs are apt to breed. An iron bed can be more easily washed and cleaned. A coat of fresh paint occasionally will keep it fresh and clean.

Spring should be firm, so that they will not sag in the middle. The mattress should be firm, smooth and thick. A thin mattress is uncomfortable, soon mats and wears through and often lets much cold air come through, which keeps the patient uncomfortable. Hair mattresses are good, but some of the present-day felt mattresses are just as good and much less expensive.

In making a bed for an invalid, put a good pad over the mattress, large enough to cover it and to tuck in smooth and tight. This may be a quilt or comfort. Over this spread a waterproof sheet which should cover at least the middle of the bed. Rubber sheeting, oilcloth or several layers of newspapers can be used. Spread this perfectly smooth, so wrinkles and ridges are apt to be very irritating to the patient.

The under sheet should be stretched tight and tucked in on all four sides. The upper sheet should be tucked in at the foot but left free at the sides so that the nurse can have easy access to the patient. Bed clothes should be as warm as is necessary to protect the patient, but not so heavy that the weight is burdensome.

A number of pillows of different sizes are a great comfort to the patient. Soft ones for the head, firm ones to support the shoulders and to support the body will help to keep the invalid comfortable and hasten his recovery.

HOW OYSTERS GROW

THE oyster scare of last winter, according to the Fish and Oyster Reporter, cost the oyster industry of this country $30,000,000. So completely was the bottom knocked out of the business that some of the older men said the oyster industry would not recover in ten years. But, as often happens, the excitement and discussion that resulted was a blessing in disguise and the oyster business today is in a healthier and more promising condition than it ever has been.

For one thing, the widespread investigation of the methods heretofore used in handling oysters, stimulated interest in the old problem of the artificial propagation of oysters. At a recent dinner of the National Association of Fisheries Commissioners held at Washington, artificially grown oysters were served for the first time at a banquet.

In 1879, Professor Brooks of Johns Hopkins tried to raise oysters artificially, but was never able to keep the eggs alive for more than five days. Others have had the same experience. Mr. Wells has been working on this problem for five years and has at last succeeded in growing food oysters under purely artificial conditions.

Oysters, says Mr. Wells, are suffering from the encroachment of civilization. In early days, they were found in quantities all along the Atlantic coast. Pollution of the sea water from towns along the coast and the increased demand for them has so reduced the supply that the beds are now in some places exhausted. If Dr. Wells can work out methods by which they can be grown in large quantities, we can have not only better oysters but cheaper oysters.

The possibilities for growing oysters are unlimited. In the warm summer months the lady oyster lays from six to ten million eggs, but, alas, most of them are eaten by fishes or other mollusks or die through failure to find something to cling to. Others are smothered by seaweeds or killed by frosts from the rivers or by sea storms. Those which survive cling together in clusters, develop a shell and must grow for four years before they are fit for food.

Artificial methods by which the oyster can be protected from its many enemies will greatly increase the supply of this delicious food.

Cover Crops Lower Temperature Some

Tests Show Frost Hazard Is Increased Slightly.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The weather bureau of the United States Department of Agriculture has conducted several experiments in different growing sections of California to determine what influence a cover crop has on the temperature of the orchard atmosphere on a frosty night. Purple vetch, a heavy volunteer crop of Broad Windsor horse beans, and many high weeds were included in the cover crop in these experiments.

The conclusions reached were that while the cover crop increased the frost hazard very slightly, the difference made in the temperature was not such as to damage the fruit seriously. At a height of five feet above the ground, the air temperature was depressed by the presence of the cover crop only 0.1 degree Fahrenheit, and 1 degree Fahrenheit at a height of 10 inches. Since there is usually but little fruit near the ground these slight differences should have little effect on the damage to fruit.

In many cases increased damage is probably due to the fact that the ground is on lower ground, where the temperature is naturally lower. Differences in the amount of damage between clean cultivated groves and those in cover crops may also be attributed to some other influence than temperature, such as decreased vigor of the trees, due to competition from the cover crop, a less dormant condition of the trees caused by more frequent irrigations, or increased deposit of moisture on the fruit or foliage from dew or frost. The cover crop also acts as a windbreak, allowing the cold air to accumulate near the ground, and preventing it from mixing with the warmer air above.

Make Plans for Gardens Before Planting Time

"Plan the farm garden before planting," advises J. G. Moore, of the University of Wisconsin horticulture department.

"Just as the carpenter cannot build a satisfactory house without a plan prepared in advance, so should a farmer not attempt to plant the garden bed before planning for it," declares this authority. "That the garden is to be small is not a good excuse for neglecting to make a plan, it being all the more important to secure maximum returns in such cases. Therefore," Moore points out, "the wise gardener will plan his garden on paper well in advance of planting time."

According to Moore, the plan should show the location of each row, and the crop to be planted—the distance of each row from one end of the garden—and the height for the different plantings, when more than one planting is to be made.

"The soil is a prime factor in a successful garden," he says. "One of the first essentials is that the garden plot have good drainage, for vegetables cannot thrive in water-logged soil. If the land is low and marshy, he advises gardening on raised beds.

Texture of the soil is also very important, Moore believes. He defines the ideal garden soil texture as "fine and loose," and to attain these qualities in soils of the lumpy, heavy type, he recommends adding organic material, or lime, and in some cases, applying sand or using coal ashes, where the soil is extremely heavy.

Milking Three Times a Day Produces More Milk

Recent studies completed by the United States Department of Agriculture on the comparative yield of cows milked twice a day and those milked three times a day will no doubt be viewed by the farm boy and the hired man with the feeling that some one is always taking the joy out of life. The department's milkers have found that milking three times a day produces more milk than twice-a-day milking. In fact, over a short period the increase in production is 12.5 per cent, while over a long period it appears that this increase is even greater. It was noted that cows milked three times a day held up better near the end of the lactation period than cows milked twice a day. The economy of three-times-a-day milking has not yet been accurately estimated, but it will depend upon several factors, chief of which are quantity of production, cost of labor, and value of product.

Seed Grain Planted in 1926 Needs Treatment

Every farmer should treat his seed grain in 1926 in order to prevent smut, says Dr. E. C. Stakman, a plant disease authority of the University of Minnesota. Besides smut in oats, of which there is always a great deal, Doctor Stakman says there was an unusually large amount of smutting smut of wheat in 1925. In one county elevator 15 per cent of the wheat which was brought in was badly smutted.

Methods of treating seed wheat differ from those of treating oats and barley. Forder No. 15, entitled "Treatments for Seed Grain," explains the use of vapor carbendazim dust and formaldehyde and can be obtained without cost on application to the agricultural extension service, University farm, St. Paul. Information as to the spraying plan for treating oats and barley can be obtained by writing the plant disease department, University farm, St. Paul.

Ornamental Boots Are in Limelight

Decorated Footwear Is Indorsed by Women of Paris Stage.

The Paris bootiers are already launching their spring and summer campaign, and it is evident that there will be a strong effort to popularize the ornamental shoe. Simple shoes, writes a fashion correspondent in the New York Herald-Tribune, which have been most synonymous with short skirts, have basked long enough in the spotlight, according to the French bootmakers, and a trend toward unique and unusual footwear is already under way.

For Riviera sojourners Hellstern is making evening footwear in black satin, trimmed with pink, in gold and silver floral brocades; often combined with colored kid, and in satin of various shades of brown arranged so as to grade from light to dark—a novelty into the making of which blond kid also enters. Perugia favors orchid and silver brocade, pastel shades in kid and hand-painted satin. Juliette, the woman shoemaker, places her faith in ruby red satin with plaits running the length of the shoe, as well as in coral, cinnamon and light sandstone brocade with a cubist design, combined with plain sandstone colored satin and ornamented with translucent sandstones—amber in color and flecked with gold, these latter forming a button.

The stage provides another fertile background for ornate footwear and leading French actresses are exploiting the most novel types of shoes. Quite a sensation was created recently when one of the most charming actresses of the Ambigu theater appeared in a pair of the new enamelled shoes which are being made by Hellstern. The process of enamelling is said to be a secret one. The lady's footwear was enamelled gold and white, entirely on kid with the exception of the straps of black patent, on which was an enamelling of golden flowers. The angles of the black cubic heels were emphasized with lines of gold.

Some very striking new shoes are to be seen at the Theatre de Paris, and one prominent actress as a young sportswoman wears oxfords of red box calf with lizard toe caps and two narrow bands of lizard skin within a centimeter of the collar.

Some telling combinations of colors are being featured by another actress at the Theatre Francaise. In one act she appears in gray kid with a very large tab attached by three blue enamelled buttons. Over the instep is an edging of blue, white blue lines ornament the gray heels. Her evening shoes in another act are partly blond kid, partly chestnut doekin, with a blond tortoise shell buckle on the vamp.

Belts Are Decorative; Trimmed With Ornaments

Belts are smartly decorative this season, as may be seen by the one above. Many are hand-out and trimmed with appropriate metal ornaments.

Rose Colors Promised Favorites for Spring

The piquant contrast the fashions of this particular season afford makes it one of the most interesting periods of the year. Side by side with the water modes that have survived are resort fashions that have the charm of novelty and a certain appeal that is due as much as anything else to their clear, fresh colorings.

The early prediction that spring would be a season of light shades is borne out in the models introduced for the South. Fashion apparently will look upon the world through rose-colored glasses, for the shades of rose, both in the beige tones and pink are much in evidence throughout the entire spring collection.

For street wear the varied tones of bold red rose are spotlighted both in costumes fashioned of silk and those developed in the new light woollens. These last are unusually handsome and are chosen for smart travel coats whose straight lines are a contrast to the flared effects which held sway during the winter.

Velveteen and Jersey

Velveteen and Jersey are combined very delightfully in sport clothes. Usually the velvet is darker in tone than the Jersey.

Dress of Black Satin Has Suspender Straps

Above is a chic black satin dress with suspender straps, of the same material. There also is an interesting sten collar, and the dress is made more attractive by the use of metal buttons.

Georgette Is Popular for Evening Apparel

For evening wear, georgette, because of its variety of color in so many subtle shades, is the choice of many. It may be embroidered in beaded designs, plaited, founced with lace or trimmed with any of the new metallic ribbons as well as with flowers and feathers, now so much in vogue for the evening gown.

Sports wear includes many materials, among them tussah and shantung weaves. Plaids after the style of Scotch gingham in all-over effects or as border are shown. A washable sports silk strongly resembles covert cloth, with its white flecks and horizontal weaves. This silk comes only in the light colors and is guaranteed sun fast. Another good feature about it is that it may be washed with any kind of soap.

For coats there are three classes, those of the light kaasha weaves for general wear, the heavy crocheted or hand-tooled effects in plaid designs for sport wear and the heavy fallite silks with satin backs for dressy wear. This new ribbed silk includes all the light spring shades as well as black and navy.

Tapstry Overnight Bag Is Practical and Smart

Wool and cotton tapstry overnight bags are a recent innovation among the smart woman's accessories. Naturally enough, the fashion for carrying these bags had its genesis along the Riviera, where several smart Parisiennes were seen carrying bags of this sort, and some of them have already worked their way over to these shores. The typical tapstry overnight bag, which is an outgrowth of the old-fashioned carpetbag, measures about twelve inches square. The tapstry, which comes in such mixtures as brown, rose and green, tan and blue, and tan and brown, as well as red with tan and blue, is mounted on a covered frame whose corners are rounded just a trifle. The handle and bottom of the bag are of leather, in either a matching or a contrasting shade. It is lined throughout with a practical shade of tan rubberized silk, which makes the bag a practical and smart affair for beach wear. It is also most convenient for shopping and when motoring, because it is very soft and flexible.

Plaited Skirts Are in Spring Fashion Pictures

The skirts of two-piece frocks show a decided trend toward plaited treatments. There is seemingly no limit to the style or arrangement of these plaitings.

The simplest form is certainly the all-around plaited skirt which if stylish is smart as well. These clever effects are good, groups of tiny plaits alternating with plain spaces. Some of these are wide enough to have the look of panels. One plaited skirt of a jumper frock goes so far as to have plaited separate panels posed over a plaited under skirt.

There is a decided movement toward fancy or novelty plaitings, tiny box plaits set in between side plaits, and pressed-over effects that give a sort of pattern to a plaited section or panel. There is not a great deal of fullness involved in these treatments, but they do provide some extra width at a hem, and with their straight fullness tend decidedly away from the circular flare.

A Spring Shade

Fashion has a habit of rushing the seasons. Therefore it is not a surprise to learn from recently returned travelers that mauve is the favorite color of the moment in Paris. Many dresses or tunics of that color in satin are being worn with velvet hats of the same shade.

Belts are smartly decorative this season, as may be seen by the one above. Many are hand-out and trimmed with appropriate metal ornaments.

Beloved Presidents

THIS month contains the birthday anniversaries of two of the greatest Presidents of the United States that ever honored the office of Chief Executive at the nation's capital - Washington and Lincoln!

That these distinguished and beloved Presidents should both be commemorated during the same month is coincidental - but no more so than their respective lives or the measure of their loyal devotion and noteworthy accomplishments.

Washington, the noble and gallant Virginian, and Lincoln, the rugged and kindly Kentuckian, furnish two excellent and convincing types of Southern manhood at its best. Both of these distinguished men suffered with their country. Both felt the keen sense of national affliction. Both experienced the poignancy of bitter trials and tribulations that beset our nation on every side. But it is gratifying to know that they were courageous enough to rise above the seeming disappointments and alarming complexities of national affairs, steering the course of the ship of state away from the rocks and shoals that would destroy liberty and unity, and safely guiding it into the deep waters of national security.

It is not the purpose of this comment to attempt to enumerate the personal attributes of those beloved Presidents, as every school student is familiar with the correlative details that made up the generous account of stewardship which Washington and Lincoln rendered their country. It would be presumptuous to call attention to their many virtues, as historians, lecturers and educators have adequately covered the subject and every American is thoroughly acquainted with these facts. But it is important and necessary to hold in vision the fundamental precepts given to this nation by those two great Americans. It is well to seek to emulate their honesty of purpose and exalted fearlessness in the cause of right, as God gave them the vision to determine the right.

In commemorating the anniversaries of their births America should be devoutly grateful for the honor of calling Washington and Lincoln her own. The Southland may indeed be proud of her distinguished sons, who combined in their remarkable personalities all of those high attributes of character that are or should be, inculcated in American manhood. It is for the rising generation to justify the faith of Washington and Lincoln in this nation and to repay, in a degree at least, the full measure of devotion that was willingly and unselfishly given by these noble characters. - Scottish Rite News Bureau.

Will Train at Nogales

The 410th Infantry, U.S. Army, New Mexico's regiment of Organized Reserves, will receive fifteen days active duty training with the 25th Infantry, Regular Army, at Camp Stephen D. Little, Nogales, Arizona, beginning July 4, 1928, according to a report from the regimental executive officer, at Roswell. This report will doubtless meet with approval among the Reserve officers of the regiment, as many of them have had the opportunity to serve with the 25th Infantry in the past, and are aware of the splendid training afforded at Nogales. Many Reserve officers of this vicinity are affected by the report, as it pertains to Infantry Reserve officers of the entire state.

While undergoing active duty training, Reserve officers are given the same pay and allowances as officers of the same grade and length of service in the Regular Army, including travel pay at the rate of four cents per mile to and from the place of training. Quarters and bedding are supplied, and excellent food is furnished at a reasonable price.

Since the number of officers who can be sent to Nogales is limited, those concerned should make their plans early, so as to be included in the assignment order. Full particulars may be obtained by writing to the Executive Officer, 410th Infantry, Room 335, Federal Building, Roswell, N. M.

This affects several officers in this community.

ROOSEVELT MEMORIAL AT CAPITAL

Huge Fountain Feature of Plan Proposed to Congress

By JOHN DICKINSON SHERMAN

THEODORE ROOSEVELT'S memory will be visually kept fresh in the minds of future generations by the most imposing fountain on earth at the National Capital, if the plans of the Roosevelt Memorial association are carried out. These plans have been submitted to the sixty-ninth congress, which will pass upon the question of site, upon the plans and upon the whole proposition. What follows concerning the proposed Roosevelt Memorial is in no sense whatever argumentative or controversial. The writer carries no brief for or against the Roosevelt Memorial of for or against the proposed site in Washington. The purpose of this article is wholly informative.

Washington was laid out by President George Washington and Major L'Enfant. Their street plan made the Capitol its center. The city is divided into four sections—N. E., S. E., S. W. and N. W.—by three streets (North Capitol, East Capitol and South Capitol) and The Mall. The Mall is a long park that extends west from the Capitol to the Lincoln Memorial on the bank of the Potomac.

The White House stands just north of The Mall. Its corner stone was laid in 1792 by Washington. It was the first public building to be erected. John Adams was the first President to live in it, taking possession in 1800.

A popular movement to erect a memorial to George Washington began before his death and he was requested to pick out the site. He chose the best—a spot in the center of The Mall opposite the White House grounds, about two-thirds of the distance between the Capitol and the site of the Lincoln Memorial. This Washington Memorial was originally intended to be an equestrian statue. It ended up as the Washington Monument, completed in 1834.

The Lincoln Memorial, of recent construction, is at the west end of The Mall, on the east bank of the Potomac river. It is on a slight eminence, is surrounded by an open area, and is of impressive size and beauty. Here will begin the $10,000,000 Memorial Bridge across the Potomac which will carry a magnificent highway extending from the Capitol to Arlington National Cemetery and its Amphitheater and tomb of the "Unknown Soldier."

Looking at the picture given herewith to aid the reader to visualize the scene, it will be seen that George Washington displayed all his traditional efficiency in picking out the site of the Washington Monument.

Today, looking from the windows of the pyramidion of the obelisk, 517 feet above the ground, here is in brief what the observer sees in the foreground of a twenty-mile circle:

Facing north, he sees close at hand, beginning where The Mall leaves off, the grounds of the executive mansion and the White House itself.

Facing east, he looks along The Mall for a mile and a half to the Capitol—a view which gives the correct understanding of the size and proportions of that truly magnificent structure.

Facing west, he looks along The Mall to the Lincoln Memorial, nearly a mile away on the Potomac.

Facing south, the observer sees a group of government buildings a little to the right. His gaze goes past them to the Tidal Basin in Potomac Park, the Potomac and the Virginia shore beyond.

Now, the bird's-eye view from the Washington Monument of its immediate surroundings immediately makes evident the discriminating observer two things of unusual importance in connection with the tentative selection of the Tidal Basin as the site for the proposed Roosevelt Memorial:

One is that the one remaining site for an important imposing memorial is in the Tidal Basin or its immediate vicinity.

The other is that such important and imposing memorial erected in the Tidal Basin will—if for no other reason than its location—take rank with the Washington Monument and the Lincoln Memorial.

The discriminating observer will therefore draw the conclusion that should the Roosevelt Memorial be erected in the Tidal Basin future generations of observers will naturally assume that the "Great Three" of American history are Washington, Lincoln and Roosevelt.

The Tidal Basin has been selected by the Roosevelt Memorial association as the site of its proposed Roosevelt Memorial. The Sixty-ninth congress gave permission to the association to use this site as the basis of a competition among leading American architects, sculptors and landscape engineers. A jury passed upon seven designs and made selection in October of 1925 of a design by John Russell Pope which has now been submitted to congress.

James H. Garfield, president of the Roosevelt Memorial association, gives out the following description of the proposed memorial and the reason for selecting the Tidal Basin as its site:

At the center of an island of white granite, set in a circular body of water, flanked by majestic colonnades, a living shaft of water rises with prodigious power two hundred feet. From the base of the fountain symbolic shafts carry the message of Roosevelt's life to the four points of the compass.

This island from which the fountain rises is 325 feet in diameter, the basin, 525 feet from the center of one colonnade to the center of the other is 500 feet; the colonnades themselves are each 470 feet long and 40 feet high. The column of water is forced upward by a modern automatic electrical power pump, and is entirely independent of the Washington water supply. The water is from the Potomac river entering the Tidal Basin on the west, passing through the ponds to east and west of the central feature of the plan and cleaning the Washington channel through tidal gates.

The style of architecture and sculpture used in the design is classical, the style recommended in the Park Commission plan as best harmonizing with the general architectural scheme of Washington.

In selecting this site, after close examination of numerous other sites and frequent consultations with members of the National Commission of the Fine Arts, the Roosevelt Memorial association was influenced by the knowledge of President Roosevelt's part in the creation of the Park Commission plan of 1881, by his unwavering support of it, and by his insistence that each new element of beauty or utility introduced into the city should be in harmony with it. In selecting the architects and sculptors of the country, with the consent of congress, to use this site as the basis of their design, it was the purpose of the association that the creation of the memorial to the statesman who revitalized and re-established the L'Enfant plan, should result in the development of one of its hitherto undeveloped but major portions.

Just what congress is to be asked to do in the way of an appropriation for the Roosevelt Memorial is not clear in official Washington. The impression seems to be, however, that if congress grants the site in the Tidal Basin it will be asked to provide funds for the construction of the granite island in that basin. It is also the impression that the Roosevelt Memorial association will provide funds for the construction of the fountain and colonnades.

As to the significance of the location of the site and of the selection of the great fountain as the central feature of the memorial, Mr. Garfield has this to say:

Roosevelt was a son of the South as well as the North; and his memorial has been designed to be, in a sense, a gateway between the two sections. The curving colonnade, set to east and west, after an oblique line to the east and southward from the White House into Virginia. The memorial, therefore, commemorates not Roosevelt only, but also that final closing of the breach between the sections, when the son of a Northern father and a Southern mother became a President of a "more perfect union."

That living columns rising out of Potomac water has a wider and more profound significance. Roosevelt's spirit sprang out of the deep sources of his nation's history and sank back into them only to rise anew, extending the air and inspiring his countrymen with his power, his march, his strength, his essential beauty. The fountain, symbolizing in its rising and falling, new life in the sunlight, new activity visible in a steady flow, is always the presence; even as Roosevelt, legislator, soldier, governor, President, speaker of civic righteousness and the square deal, of national defense and national unity and the helping hand across the sea, is always—America.

A son of the North and the South, of the East by birth, of the West by adoption, knowing no barriers of race or creed or class, at home in every state, among friends and all manner of men—through the confusing details of a multifarious life risen clearly and powerfully the living, radiating spirit of his Americanism.

It is in Roosevelt the American, a symbol of patriotic devotion, that this design is dedicated; not to exalt an individual but to recall the basic American principles which that individual upheld and defended.

Apparently there is considerable difference of opinion in Washington and elsewhere regarding the Roosevelt Memorial. There is no opposition, of course, to the erection in the Capital of a memorial to Roosevelt. The difference of opinion is in regard to the site and the plan proposed by the Roosevelt Memorial association.

The New York Times, for example, in telling of the submission of these plans to congress, says they will "bring to an issue the controversy between the friends of the dead President and the Roosevelt Memorial association." That newspaper goes on to say:

"The Art commission, many members of congress and President Coolidge feel that the memorial should be placed near Rock Creek Park, at the gateway to Washington, and serve to accentuate Roosevelt's life in outdoor life and his activity in developing Rock Creek Park. Now that the design has been submitted to congress the location will be decided."

The arrangement by which the Army-Navy football game of 1928 is to be played in Chicago moves the Washington Star to say editorially:

A great stadium is required, and the Capital lacks such an equipment. It has been proposed that the national memorial to Theodore Roosevelt, to be located in this city, should take the form of a great stadium, located in Potomac park. . . . Now an opportunity is offered to supply this desideratum by the erection of a memorial stadium, which will meet two requirements, to commemorate the services of Theodore Roosevelt suitably and to give Washington a place for large public gatherings and important competitions, a truly national athletic field. Those who are promoting the Roosevelt Memorial might well consider this plan as more appropriate to Roosevelt's character and more expressive of his services to the nation than a merely ornamental architectural creation of no utility and, as now contemplated, destructive of one of the beauty spots of the Capital.

The New York World says editorially, in part:

It is most unfortunate that there should be any possibility of controversy over the erection of a memorial to President Roosevelt. There would be none but for the proposal of the Roosevelt Memorial association that the monument be placed in the one spot of all spots in the United States where it cannot and should not be placed. It has been suggested that the memorial be placed in Rock Creek Park. That is a good suggestion. It has been suggested that the site opposite the White House be used not as a memorial to one man but as a memorial to many men. That also is a good suggestion. It has been proposed that the site be used to build a home for the Eugene O'Neill fund. That also is a good suggestion. The only suggestion is to use this last remaining site as a memorial to one President whose place in history is still uncertain.

Senator King of Utah had this World editorial read in the senate, endorsed it and said, among other things:

"No one will object to a suitable monument erected to the memory of Theodore Roosevelt; indeed, there will be general approval of a plan to erect at some suitable place in the District of Columbia a monument or memorial to a man who has twice been President of the United States. There will be, however, and properly so, objections to erecting a monument or memorial at such a place as will indicate a purpose to perpetuate the name of Roosevelt and declare to the world that the Roosevelt Memorial is our history and Washington, Lincoln, and Roosevelt."

The KITCHEN CABINET

It means of health and triumphant achievement are brought into consciousness, we at the same time experience a state of energy, a feeling of courage and capability and joy and stimulation of all the bodily processes.—Warren Hill-ton.

FINE CAKES

As soon as eggs are reasonably plentiful we will enjoy a sponge cake occasionally.

Golden Sponge Cake.—Beat seven eggs yolks with a Dover-egg beater until very light. Add one cupful of sugar a little at a time, still continuing to beat (use a wire beater), add one-half cupful of boiling water alternately with one cupful of pastry flour.

sifted with two teaspoonfuls of baking powder and one-fourth teaspoonful of salt—sift three times. Add one teaspoonful of vanilla, pour into a greased and floured tube pan. Bake for fifty minutes in a slow oven.

Maple Nut Cake.—Cream one-half cupful of butter, add one-half cupful of sugar gradually, then add two egg yolks well beaten, and one cupful of maple syrup. Add the dry ingredients which have been sifted together twice, two and one-half cupfuls of pastry flour, one-fourth of a teaspoonful of cinnamon, two and one-half teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one teaspoonful of salt and one-fourth teaspoonful of grated nutmeg, all sifted twice. Beat thoroughly and fold in the stiffly beaten egg whites. Pour into a well-greased and floured tube pan and bake for forty-five minutes. Cover the cake with maple icing and decorate with halves of walnut or pecan meats over the top and sides.

Pecan Cake.—Cream three-fourths of a cupful, add one cupful of sugar gradually; beat three egg yolks and add to the creamed sugar and butter, then add one-fourth cupful of molasses. Sift two cupfuls of pastry flour with two teaspoonfuls of baking powder and one teaspoonful of nutmeg and one-half teaspoonful of salt; add to the above mixture alternately with one-half cupful of grapejuice. Fold in the stiffly beaten egg whites. Chop slightly one pound each of seed-cake raisins and pecans, add one-half cupful of candied orange peel cut fine. Do not beat, pour into a tube pan lined with greased paper and bake for three hours in a slow oven.

Sour Cream Pie.—Beat two eggs, add one cupful of sugar and beat again, then add one cupful of sour cream; stir in one cupful of flour and one-fourth teaspoonful of cloves, with a little salt; add one cupful of raisins which have been finely cut. Stir the mixture well and bake as a covered pie.

A Few Good Sandwiches.—For an occasion when hearts are an appropriate decoration try:

Heart Sandwiches.—Drain one pimento from a can, rinse in cold water, dry between folds of a towel and then mash through a sieve. Mash one cream cheese, add gradually the pulp of the pimento, stirring until well blended; add an equal measure of finely chopped stuffed olives, moisten with mayonnaise. With a heart-shaped cutter cut small hearts from thin slices of white bread. Spread half of them with mayonnaise and the other half with the cheese mixture. Put together in pairs, press the edges together and garnish each sandwich with a tiny heart cut from the drained pimentos—use a small vegetable cutter for this purpose.

Chicken and Ham Sandwiches.—Cream one-third of a cupful of butter, add gradually one-half cupful each of chicken and lean cold boiled ham finely chopped. Season with salt, paprika and cayenne to taste. Spread thin slices of entire wheat or graham bread with mayonnaise and an equal number of slices with the meat mixture; put together in pairs, trim off crusts and cut into triangular pieces. Serve with tea or cocoa.

Brown Bread Sandwiches.—Steam brown bread in one-half pound baking powder cans. Cut into slices one-fourth inch thick; spread with butter. Chop, fine one-half cupful of walnut meats, mix with one cupful of American cheese and moisten with salad dressing. Cheese should be grated. Use as filling on buttered bread and garnish each sandwich with a perfect half of a nut meat. Serve with coffee.

Swiss Cheese Sandwiches.—Spread thin slices of rye bread with prepared mustard, cover with thin slices of Swiss cheese. Spread as many slices of bread with mayonnaise, cover with very thin slices of southern onion, spread the onion lightly with the mayonnaise, put together in pairs, trim and serve with coffee.

Spanish Sandwiches.—Grate one-half pound of American cheese. Remove the seeds from two green peppers, drain two cooked pimientos, rinse with cold water and put through a meat chopper and add to the cheese, mix well, moisten with salad dressing. Use as a filling for rye or graham bread sandwiches.

"By gar! You not drown een e Fryng Pan, Daveed? We not you dead man. By dam! I glad to see you, Daveed, and you, m'sieu, all right, bot you two, beeg an' strong jes de same?"

"You mean she is held there against her will?" broke in St. Onge. "Absolutely! But Lafamme, from what she told me, fears she would tell what she knows—inform the authorities."

"What was that?" David doubled with laughter at the surprise of the Iroquois. Again, to the bewilderment of the Frenchman and his head-man, the bloodhound, outside, raised a deep-throated protest at the cold and his empty stomach, which initiated a tedium of howls from the luskies.

"He's been useful as a hunter, and I'm so short-handed. But I am interested to hear how you left Ogoke, monsieur, and why you were so reckless as to attempt to run the Fryng Pan."

"Why, that's Windigo; he's hungry!" laughed Steele. "You'd better look after them, David, before the home dogs start to fight."

"When I returned to the shack where we had left our bags, I found David repacking some of the stuff. Lafamme had had our baggage searched."

"The face of the older man sobered. 'She has not been well,' he said, pointedly, 'since the news came from Ogoke.'"

"The following morning the council of war met in the shack of Michel where, as the Iroquois was unmarried, there would be no interruption."

"I will go to her at once," said St. Onge. "The shock would be too great—and the joy," he added, "if you will follow shortly, you will find your old room, such as it is, ready."

"By gar! Bear trap!" exclaimed the Iroquois, black eyes glittering. "Beauties, aren't they? God help the brute they close on!"

"It is a happy night for Walling River, monsieur," broke in St. Onge, as Steele turned to the factor to permit his daughter to regain her self-control.

"There are the strongest wolf-traps made, and I doubt if any Windigo could get out of one, unless he gnawed his leg off."

"A happier one for me, colonel!" replied the man who yearned to take the girl, who had walked to the end of the room, in his arms and comfort her—promise her that all should be right in the end.

"Now, Michel, before making any plans, I am ready to hear what you promised to tell me when I returned—what you told David and feared to have me know."

"Before I begin, tell me if Lafamme has shown his hand?"

"That was right, m'sieu. You keep de word an' cum back to fight wid us, Leesten!"

"No, we have heard nothing. One of his Indians on the way to Albany with a letter told Michel you had been drowned. That is all."

"Yes," said St. Onge, "I also saw that on the center of the birthday table that was all ready for her there was a bunch of trailing arbutus flowers—the first of the season."

"And I saw the windows of a house being washed and they looked so clear and clean that I almost could have believed there were no windows there at all."

"I can admire bushes and flowers and clean windows too," ended Peter Gnome.

"The next time you bake—give it just one honest and fair trial. One test in your own kitchen will prove to you that there is a big difference between Calumet and any other brand—that for uniform and wholesome baking it has no equal."

"I can admire bushes and flowers and clean windows too," ended Peter Gnome.

had happened he couldn't afford to have us leave the bush. You see, notwithstanding my two bags of Indian stuff, he suspected me of spying on his place—and probably chose the Fryng Pan as a safe means of getting rid of us.

"He wouldn't anticipate our running them voluntarily, but evidently had ordered his Indians to capture and throw us in. Then, if our bodies or canoe were ever found, it would appear like a straight case of drowning. But David's shot stamped the survivor into hiding at us."

"And you went through that white-water they say has never been run?" "Yes, somehow we got through, with a foot of water in her and a few leaks where we scraped some sharp ones."

"They had left the supper table and were in the living room, and as Steele finished he realized that Denise, who sat with eyes on the rug at her feet, had been listening. Was it the old depression, he wondered, or—

"And without shells for your guns, you traveled clear to the Nepligon on short rations?" broke in St. Onge. "Worse than that. We got but few fish and before we reached Nepligon House, we were down to one meal a day."

"Denise looked up. 'I am very tired, monsieur. You will pardon me? Good night!' And she left the room."

"That day Steele had traveled forty miles to avoid camping another night on the snow before seeing Denise St. Onge. He was tired from the hard day on the river, and disturbed and mystified by the mood of the factor's daughter."

Once he knew beyond all peradventure that this harassed girl cared for him; bound though she was, once she unreservedly placed her future in his hands and rent the veil of her former reticence—her strange aloofness, then the fight for the fortunes of Walling River would be a battle of joy; and at last, when they met, it seemed that his dream had come true—that he had won. But her air of incredulity, the irony of her comment on his story of that night at Ogoke, sent him to his bed mortified, troubled, stung with the injustice of her attitude. Was it jealousy? He had held Denise St. Onge too high a plane for such a descent. Had she been merely facetious, or had she, without benefit of the doubt, drawn a sinister inference from the coming to the shack of Rose, and their surprise by Lafamme? But he had frankly told the full details, he argued. That, of itself, was proof enough of the single-mindedness of his actions at Ogoke. It seemed so foreign to his conception of the character of Denise St. Onge, that when his tired body finally drew him into the oblivion of sleep, he had attributed her manner and her silence to the strain of overtaxed nerves.

"Did you accuse him of it?" "I never had the opportunity. Rose Lafamme came to the shack and offered to tell all she knew about Lafamme's activities if I would take her that night to the railroad," Steele boldly answered, ignoring the inferences which might be drawn from the statement.

"Lafamme had had our Luggage Searched."

"And you refused, monsieur, to aid a beautiful woman in distress? Ah, that was not gallant." Although the smile was facetious, the eyes of Denise St. Onge were grave. Steele felt that he had been put on the defensive.

"I told her that we needed flour—would starve if we left that night. At that moment David knocked a man down outside, who proved to be Lafamme. What he had come for I do not know."

"Was it not clear to you what he came for, monsieur? Learning she was not in the house, he went to the shack of the gallant American, to find it guarded by his faithful Indian?" The girl smiled disconcertingly. Steele was puzzled at her mood.

"Denise!" protested her father. "Will you permit Monsieur Steele to tell his story? You are not fair!" "Could it be possible that she did not believe him, Steele asked himself. But the seeming composure of Denise St. Onge disarmed him and he went on.

"David had choked Lafamme into unconsciousness, and of course we had to leave without our flour. We paddled all night, pushed up the Houge and over to the Jackfish. We also discovered that they had taken all our rifle shells. I was sure we had obtained pursuit but at the Fryng Pan two Indians who had traveled overland were waiting for us. Thinking we were helpless and would come ashore, they didn't fire on us until they saw we intended to run the rapids. Then one raised his rifle, but was shot by David, who had found a cartridge which Lafamme's men had overlooked."

PETER GNOME'S JOURNEY

"I've just had such a nice journey," said Peter Gnome to the other Gnomes.

"I was so happy. None of my little friends were ill—and every thing seemed quite de lightful."

"I started when it was early morning and wearing my invisible robe, I saw many of the children getting up."

"How different they did awake. 'Some appeared half-dressed, and others seemed to be awake right away.'"

"They all had different ways of awaking and seemed to have awakened from different dream worlds."

"Well, I saw many of the children going to school and I heard one little girl say that she was going to take her umbrella along with her."

"It may rain," she said, "and an umbrella will come in handy if it does."

"I thought she would have said at first that the umbrella would come in handy—for it would get wet, or that it would save her from getting wet and so would come in handy for her!"

"But she didn't mean it to have anything to do with her hands, except that the expression, evidently came from having things near at hand and ready when they should be needed."

"Then I saw on the first, the very first day of spring, in one place through which I was passing, the very first buds appearing and I heard some one say,

"Those are the very first buds to appear this year, and right on the very first day of spring."

"Isn't that interesting?" "I thought so too, but of course I didn't join in the conversation."

"Then I saw a fine little boy, quite a young boy, pulling a blue cart and blue horse."

"You may wonder about the blue horse, but you see both the horse and cart were made of wood and both were joined together."

"The cart could not help following the horse and the horse could not help following the boy as they were both pulled by him upon a thick cord."

When you start to waste away to a shadow, when the color leaves your cheeks and your poor, tired legs will hardly hold up your weakened body it's high time you started taking a fine tonic and builder like Tanlac.

Tanic will build you up and make you feel that life's worth living. Made from roots, herbs and bark gathered from the four corners of the earth and compounded under the exclusive Tanlac formula, Tanlac is just what the poor, starved body needs.

First of all it cleanses the blood stream and puts the digestive organs in order. You find, after a few days' treatment, that you want to eat. Pretty soon the welcome color steals back into your cheeks and the scales tell you that you're gaining weight. From then on it's only a short time until you're feeling fit as a fiddle.

Millions of men and women have taken Tanlac with great benefit. More than one hundred thousand people have written us glowing tributes to this wonderful tonic.

When you know it has worked wonders for so many folks it's folly not to take advantage of Tanlac's help yourself. Don't put it off another day. Get a bottle at your druggist's, now and start the good work right away. Take Tanlac Vegetable Pills for constipation.

Second Bottle of Tanlac Brought Big Improvement. "I had a sound night's sleep in two days. Nervousness, headache and lack of energy were chronic symptoms. Several bottles of Tanlac restored normal sleep and appetite. Now in sound health and thank Tanlac!"

CHAPTER XII

The following morning the council of war met in the shack of Michel where, as the Iroquois was unmarried, there would be no interruption.

"Now, Michel," said Steele, "I've kept my word and come back on the first snow and I've brought a hound that will help us if we have the luck to hear that Windigo again. I've also brought these."

The speaker stripped the lashings from a canvas-covered bundle, which David had carried in from the sled the night previous, to reveal to the curious eyes of Michel two massive engines of torture, their steel jaws bristling with teeth.

"By gar! Bear trap!" exclaimed the Iroquois, black eyes glittering. "Beauties, aren't they? God help the brute they close on!"

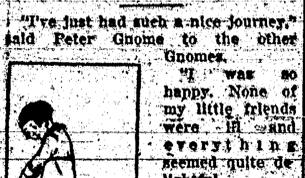

Then Steele lifted six smaller but no less wicked-looking devices, designed to snap on and hold in viselike grip the paw of the unwary prowler which stepped in them.

"There are the strongest wolf-traps made, and I doubt if any Windigo could get out of one, unless he gnawed his leg off."

"Now, Michel, before making any plans, I am ready to hear what you promised to tell me when I returned—what you told David and feared to have me know."

"That was right, m'sieu. You keep de word an' cum back to fight wid us, Leesten!"

"Yes," said St. Onge, "I also saw that on the center of the birthday table that was all ready for her there was a bunch of trailing arbutus flowers—the first of the season."

"I was so happy. None of my little friends were ill—and every thing seemed quite de lightful."

"I started when it was early morning and wearing my invisible robe, I saw many of the children getting up."

"How different they did awake. 'Some appeared half-dressed, and others seemed to be awake right away.'"

"They all had different ways of awaking and seemed to have awakened from different dream worlds."

"Well, I saw many of the children going to school and I heard one little girl say that she was going to take her umbrella along with her."

"It may rain," she said, "and an umbrella will come in handy if it does."

"I thought she would have said at first that the umbrella would come in handy—for it would get wet, or that it would save her from getting wet and so would come in handy for her!"

"But she didn't mean it to have anything to do with her hands, except that the expression, evidently came from having things near at hand and ready when they should be needed."

"Then I saw on the first, the very first day of spring, in one place through which I was passing, the very first buds appearing and I heard some one say,

"Those are the very first buds to appear this year, and right on the very first day of spring."

"Isn't that interesting?" "I thought so too, but of course I didn't join in the conversation."

"Then I saw a fine little boy, quite a young boy, pulling a blue cart and blue horse."

"You may wonder about the blue horse, but you see both the horse and cart were made of wood and both were joined together."

"The cart could not help following the horse and the horse could not help following the boy as they were both pulled by him upon a thick cord."

Prof. E. M. Borchard of Yale recently opened a lecture course at the Berlin university. He said in his opinion his chief task consisted of re-establishing international scientific relations and preparing the way for the resumption of German-American exchange of professorships such as existed before the war.

Expected Gifts Listed

In China, a betrothal takes the form of a bridal contract, and a category of expected wedding presents is solemnly inserted in the contract that binds the engagement; but the Chinese would very much resent having this stipulation considered a "price." In Japan, it is the custom for the bride to give gifts to the bridegroom's family—and there are many other interesting forms of intra-marital exchange of presents.

PERSONALS

Mesdames Gumm, Wetmore and Cohen, took a trip to the Mescalero Indian Agency last Sunday and dined with the Andrew Prude family, returning in the evening. Postal Clerk (Dink) Kahler was at the wheel during the trip.

Ladies — Before buying compare our prices with our competitors. C. D. Mayer.

Ell Goodreau, the genial assistant cashier of the First National Bank, spent a few days the first of the week visiting relatives and friends in Tucumcari.

Mrs. Albert Ziegler left Wednesday morning for El Paso, to meet Mr. Ziegler, who after being on a purchasing trip in the east, visited his daughter, Mrs. Chas. Coplin, at Seattle, Wash., and was on his return trip. They came up from the border city Saturday.

Geo. A. Dowdle, proprietor of the Crystal Theatre, left Saturday for Alamogordo to join Mrs. Dowdle, who had been at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Cochran for the major portion of the week. They returned home on Monday.

Elvin Harkey was up from Oscura on Monday. Elvin is in charge of the Oscura station as operator and ticket seller, having taken the place of B. S. Burns, who is now at Three Rivers.

Helen Shulda was up from El Paso Saturday, spending Sunday and Monday with her father, engineer E. J. Shulda and sister, Rue. She returned to the border Tuesday morning on No. 11.

Mr. and Mrs. Ira Johnson and children of Three Rivers, spent the early portion of the week here with relatives.

Miss Nadine Thompson was in from the Neighbauer ranch Tuesday, returning in the evening.

Prices Guaranteed to be the Lowest in Town. Come in and investigate, to be sure of this fact.—C. D. Mayer.

Road Foreman Wm. Ferguson has his force of men employed on the Nogal road, dragging, filling and making repairs wherever needed. If this force could be left on that stretch of road as long as possible without being shifted to other work, Ferguson would have the same in prime condition, but necessity from other quarters sometimes interferes, but let us hope that he may be allowed to remain there until the road is in best of shape.

A goodly number of local people are confined to their homes with bad colds, but none of the cases are of a serious nature, except the one of little Jack Greer, who is very ill with pneumonia.—Let us have hope.

Judge McDaniel with a party of oil prospectors, motored up to head of the Malpais last Saturday and were making observations which resulted in a keen interest taken by the visitors, who are looking for some place to invest their money. This community will awaken some fine morning to realize that more than one company is organized here to drill test wells for oil.—Mark what we are telling you!

The F. L. Boughner family have moved to the W. P. Loughrey residence in the western portion of town. The change took place on Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Kelley and daughter Ruth have returned from Alvarado, Tex., to which place they motored on account of Mrs. Kelley's father, as reported in our last issue. Mr. Thompson has recovered sufficiently to warrant their return.

Mrs. Maggie Wetmore left yesterday for El Paso, where she will spend the week, and with her twin sister, Mrs. H. R. Allison. On Monday, Mar. 1, the twins will celebrate their 77th birthday. Mrs. Wetmore will return about the middle of next week.

Mrs. J. H. Fulmer, who has been ill for the past week, is reported to be improving.

Harris & Cole, the enterprising proprietors of the Service Station, are building a camp ground which will be ready for occupancy about March 10. It consists of adobe walls, three rooms and four open sheds.

C. D. Mayer of the Mayer store, is confined to his room with a severe cold.

Mrs. J. E. Farley, who has been absent for the past six weeks, dividing her time between with her daughters' families, Mrs. Frazer Charles at Dallas, Tex., and Mrs. L. D. Baker at Tucumcari, has returned home.

Illness in the families in both places demanded her attention. At Tucumcari, her grandson, little Jack Baker, was very ill for several weeks, during which time, he was in a critical condition, but is now on the road to recovery.

F. J. Sager, the accommodating U. S. Land Commissioner is again back at his desk, after a serious illness with the "flu."

S. H. Nickles is rapidly recovering from the "flu" after having been confined to his bed for about a week.

The J. S. Hale and Perry Garrett families of Oscura, spent Sunday and Monday here with the S. W. Hale family.

R. A. Walker, proprietor of the Star Cafe, is confined to his home with the "flu."

Billy Ferguson, wife, son Don and daughter Mora were here from the Nogal-Mesa Saturday, Mora and Don attending the big Colonial Party at Lutz Hall.

Mrs. J. H. Farris and two daughters came up from El Paso Saturday on No. 12, attended the big Colonial Party Saturday night, and returned home Monday morning on No. 11. While here, they were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Abel.

In a letter received from Jim Greer, who lately moved from the San Andreas goat ranch to Malaga, N. M., he tells us that he is preparing to raise cotton at that place in connection with his farming.

Mrs. T. E. Armstrong and daughter Ethel of Tucumcari spent Saturday and Sunday here as guests of Mrs. M. B. Paden.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Gallacher, mother, Mrs. Jane Gallacher, Mr. and Mrs. John Gallacher, were in from their ranches north of town Saturday.

The Enchilada and Hot Tamales Supper given at Navarro Hall Saturday night was well patronized. The supper began at 5 o'clock and lasted until nearly nine, in order to give the people from the west side a chance to patronize the cause, which was for the benefit of the Sisters' School. Over $50 was realized from the undertaking.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Maxwell were in from their ranches near the Gran Quivira yesterday. Frank says that the range is in good condition and the sheep are doing well, with a good assurance of a bumper lamb and wool crop this year.

Little Bill Allen, who has just recovered from a spell of illness, was remembered by his grandpa, Wm. Reilly, on his return from his trip this week, with a neat little Navajo rug, 18x24 inches. With this gift he received a little red wagon. The rug was made by a little Indian boy, 6 years old. This will be a much treasured keepsake for Bill through the years to come.

Mrs. Wm. Reilly returned home yesterday from a six weeks' trip over the state and also over a large portion of Arizona. At Houck, Mrs. Reilly visited for several weeks with the Charles Williamson family, while Mr. Reilly attended to his official duties for the government. They had a nice trip, with no motor trouble to speak of and returned much benefitted by their extended trip.

Sheriff S. W. Kelsey is ill with a bad cold, but nothing serious. He will be out in a short time.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Callahan, daughter, Attorney Geo. Spence, came up from Alamogordo Wednesday after the funeral of Mrs. Spence which occurred as will be seen in another article in this paper. They will stay over for the week-end, after which they will return to Albuquerque.

H. E. Shinn of Mattoon, Ill., Mrs. Shinn and daughter Elizabeth, left Carrizozo the latter part of last week for Denver, where, after a short stay, they will return to their home in Illinois. Mr. Shinn, who is a brother to Mrs. R. C. Sowder, formerly of this place, but now residing in El Paso, came here with his family for a visit and in order to have them see what our section of New Mexico looked like, Mr. and Mrs. Sowder motored them over to the Sowder ranch, the Bar X, Sunset, and many others, after which they went to the Ruidoso region, the Mescalero Indian Reservation, Eagle Creek, returning here so that the folks might take a train for Denver. They were well pleased with our country and said our roads from here to El Paso, also that to Roswell, were better than in most places they had been during the trip.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Spence attended the funeral of Mrs. Geo. Spence at Alamogordo Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed Long came up Saturday from El Paso and remained over until Wednesday, making the round trip by motor.

The Community Hall is a certainty; make it doubly sure.

Spring and the long haired post will soon be with us.

Progress on the Community Hall

The various Committees appointed to build a Community Hall in Carrizozo are busy with respective duties. The Committee on finance, Mr. McQuillen as Chairman, have appointed their work among the different members and are meeting those interested in the project. It is suggested that the people get their donations in before the first of the month. The Committee has made arrangements to receive payments in four installments if so desired.

The Committee on Disposition and Use met and outlined a few general plans. First, that the Hall, when completed, will be deeded to the Town of Carrizozo in trust; Second, that it will be used as a Community Center; Third, that School activities will have the use of the building free of charge; Fourth, that civic bodies will be assessed a minimum amount for the use of the building, and all others charged a reasonable amount; Fifth, that dancing or any form of entertainment contrary to the law will not be permitted on the first day of the week.

Committee on plans has decided on a building with a concrete foundation, adobe walls, maple floor, stage and dressing room 18x47 feet at rear of building and underneath this, a room with cement floor, to be used as a kitchen and dining room, a substantial roof of mineral finishing or metal shingle.

This building will cost about $3400.00 without furnishings. Detailed specifications will be submitted at an early date. The Committee on Location have not reported but have negotiations under way for the purchase of a desirable location.

Let every spirited citizen in Carrizozo consider himself as a member of a Committee to boost work and put it over big.

Carrizozo School Notes
(By Mary Catherine Chandler)

The playground equipment at the little school is complete. Slides, swings and merry-go-rounds are up for the children to play on.

Mrs. Blanchard is here to take Miss Snyder's room while the latter is away. Mrs. Geo. Dowdle taught the pupils of that room two days this week.

The Socratic society will render a program Friday. It will be as follows: Piano solo, Otto Prehm; Play, "Sham," Nellie Shaver, Stacy Rustin, Frank James, Raymond Lackland; Vocal Quartet, Stacy Rustin, Helen Rolland, Jeanne Reilly, Maurine Collier.

The tennis court which is being planned on the courthouse yard, is not for the school only but also for all town people who wish to join the club. Those wishing to join, please give the initial fee of one dollar to Miller French or Mr. Samuel Kelsey.

Our girls and boys will play Hondo Saturday at 2 o'clock. Come out and see the games. Miss Igo expects to run the girls' second team part of the game.

The Colonial Tea given by the Woman's Club last Friday at the Wetmore building was a most enjoyable affair and well attended by members and their friends. The rooms were attractively decorated in Colonial style.

On March 13, A. S. Roberts, Deputy Collector, will be here at the First National Bank for the purpose of assisting taxpayers in preparing and filing their income tax returns for 1925.

Mrs. Chas. Fisher, niece, Mrs. J. H. Hale and children were visitors from Capitan Tuesday. Mrs. Fisher, of the Fisher Lumber Co., of that place says that business in that industry is
