

ALONG LIFE'S TRAIL

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK, Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

THE OTHER SIDE OF THE MOUNTAIN

The bear went over the mountain and what do you think he saw? The other side of the mountain and that was what he saw.

WE WERE climbing to the Key Hole of Long Peak, had crossed the howler field, and were toiling over the great jagged rocks that must be scaled before one gets the indescribable view that stretches out interminably grand as one climbs through the narrow opening between the overhanging rocks.

It was the children who were shouting the rhythmical lines. They were after adventures, they were looking for new sensations, they were conquering a new world, it was the novelty of a new scene which lured them on. They were not satisfied with things as they are.

It is a common point of view to want to know what is on the other side of the mountain. It is this spirit of curiosity and adventure that has discovered new worlds, new inventions, new processes. It has brought men strange experiences, strange bed-fellows, wonderful adventures, and yet--

Benston was lucky, the neighbors said. His father had left him a sizable fortune, and he had made another himself before he was forty, and set off to see what was on the other side of the mountain. He visited nearly every country in Asia, he saw all the glories of Egypt, and wandered aimlessly through the cities of Europe--London, Vienna, Paris, Florence, Rome--he knew them all like a book.

And now, it was announced, he was coming home, coming home to the simple country village of his childhood, and coming home to die. He had seen the other side of the mountain and now with all the world before him, the things that drew him most were his old friends, the boys, grown old now, with whom he had associated in childhood, the quiet simple village life with which he was familiar when he went to school, the memory of his early struggles and triumphs.

Isn't it good to get home again, the children said, as tired and footsore they came to their own little cottage.

FORT STANTON NEWS

(Fort Stanton Correspondent)

At the Fort seventeen inches of snow fell from Thursday to Tuesday, in five days, with a minimum temperature of one below. This is believed to be almost a record for this time of the year and is certainly a blessing to cattlemen the farmers if the autoists have suffered with exposure and delay.

Blondie went down on Monday morning for Mrs. Kinchele and was able to make it in the tracks of the mail car with the greatest difficulty. Other cars in large numbers were seen along the road overturned and stalled in the mud and many turned back after futile attempts to take the trip.

On Saturday evening, Mesdames Gensler and Berry gave a party to the ladies of the Fort and vicinity in honor of our new bride, Mrs. Reed.

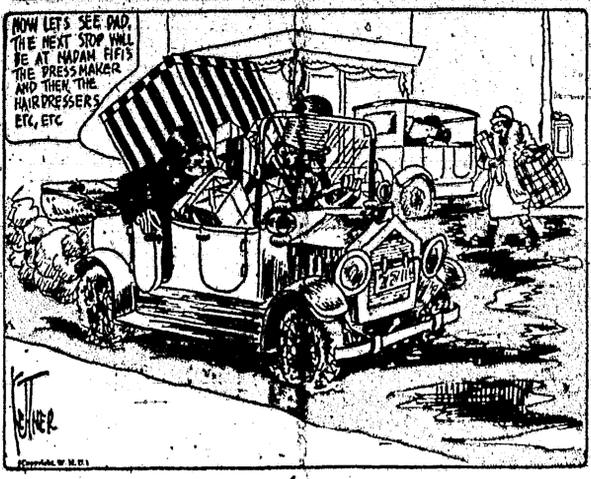

The new Government radio equipment has been received and installed. During the summer months all the ball games taking place at the Fort will be announced in the wards through the loud speakers with the assistance of the speech power amplifier.

The Pre-Easter Tour

FRED NEIGHBAUER SUFFERS LOSS

Uncle Fred Neighbauer, who resides on the Harry Dixon ranch south of here was a loser in the late snow storm to the amount of four hundred fifty Angora goats. They were out in the open when the storm broke so unexpectedly, and before Mr. Neighbauer could get the required amount of help necessary to get them to shelter, above named amount perished in the snow drifts.

Charles Grey of Oscura, had about four hundred goats on the open north of that place, but his presence of mind and with plenty of help, he drove his herd down to Oscura and as there are many vacant buildings there, he filled every vacant house in town with goats and thus saved the entire lot.

Citizen's Mass Meetings

Acting on the call from the local Mayor and Board of Trustees, as many as could get thru the big storm of Monday night, assembled at the Court House to nominate a ticket for the Town election to be held next Tuesday, April 6.

The meeting was called to order by Mayor G. T. McQuillen. E. M. Brickley was chosen chairman and S. W. Kelsey, secretary, after which the following ticket was placed in the field.

Meeting No. 2 was held Wednesday night at the court house and after selecting J. B. French as chairman and F. J. Sager as secretary, the following ticket was nominated; Mayor, G. T. McQuillen; Trustees, S. F. Miller, L. J. Adams, A. Ziegler, T. E. Kelley; Clerk, W. W. Stadman; Dr. P. M. Shaver, Treasurer.

NOGAL ITEMS

By "Bill O'Fare"

We had intended this to be "spring poet's" column, this week, but several things have happened which has caused us to reconsider the matter.

Second, this unexpected, but much needed snow storm has cut the spring poet crop short. We are in receipt of several poems, some are good, some worse, some pathetic that is the efforts, and some are bad.

Poetry, at best, is generally very poor reading matter, especially for the older and more serious ones. The young and frivolous may be excused for reading verses in the spring trials, but the older ones should refrain.

We once knew a shepherd who took to sitting on the hills and writing poems. He kept it up for several days and each day he grew worse.

Spring poets bud out like flowers with a few warm days, and thrive best in the early spring. As hot weather approaches they grow less ardent.

Now we could write on for several hours on this vital subject, but we're finding it very difficult to prevent what we have written about rhyming, so had better cut it short as we think quite a bit of our hind legs.

The remains were shipped to El Paso today, where they will be interred with befitting ceremonies by the Order of Eastern of which creed the deceased was a member.

II. Captain Kidd Turns Pirate

WHEN on one fine spring morning in the year 1696 Capt. William Kidd set sail for New York, bearing a commission from the king of England to suppress piracy in the East Indies, and wherever else such unlawful doings flourished, there was not a man of the 100 aboard the galley Adventure but that greeted with a cheer the prospect before him--the certainty of fame and fortune.

The Adventure touched at the Madeira Islands, crawled south along the east coast of Africa, rounded the Cape of Good Hope, ran up to Madagascar, where the captain watered and victualled his ship and then continued on towards India. In the meantime a plague had broken out aboard ship, and at the rate men were dying and being tumbled overboard, it began to look as though the Adventure would have not a fighting man left before ever a pirate ship was sighted.

Instead, he sailed aimlessly up and down the coast of India until there arose loud murmurs among his crew at his indecision and inactivity. Then the captain made his decision, but what force influenced him to it no one can tell.

One sweltering day Captain Kidd swung the bow of the Adventure around sharply. Indecision and inactivity was over. William Kidd had made his decision.

"We have sent you to look with your own eyes upon this robber of the trap-lines and defiler of the night; this dog whom Lafamme, the trader at Ogoke, sent to fill the hearts of your women and children with fear. At his great post on Lake Ogoke he would welcome you at the spring trade, but Black Baptiste, and Antoine and the others, would soon be among your tips offering the water that burns and fills your heads with fire, to your women and your young men. You would trade the pelts which you tolled for through the moons of the long snows for this stinging water which steals your senses. And when he had your fur, he would give you a little flour and tea, and some shells for your guns and send you away. But," and the voice of Michel rose in hoarse crescendo, "your women and children would weep through the freezing-moons for the trade goods and the flour which Lafamme cheated you out of with his magic water. This is why he sent Pierre, here, to drive you out of the country of your fathers."

"Atala! Atala! It is so! He speaks the truth!" shouted the infuriated circle of swart-faced hunters. "You ask why this white man," continued Michel, "comes to this country in the freezing moon and brings the dog with the great voice to hunt his Windigo, and the Troquois kicked the frozen shape at his feet, when he lives far in the South and will not suffer from what Lafamme does to the Ojibways. This is his answer: 'In the moon of the gathering of the wild rice, he, with David, here, journeying from Walling River to Nepligon House, stopped at the post of Lafamme. There was trouble and because they were friends of M'alen St. Onge and knew of the water of fire which the Fathers at Ottawa have forbidden the traders to give the Ojibways, Lafamme sent his men to murder them at the falls of the Jackfish. But these men you see here, who have trapped the Windigo of Lafamme, laugh at the white-water. They travel in a magic canoe, and because their shells were stolen by Lafamme, all except one, and their guns empty, they could not fight, but with that shell shot one of the dogs of the trader. Then they ran the great strong-water which the canoe of no Indian has ever passed."

An undertone of surprise and admiration followed the words of the speaker, for there were some in the audience who knew the Flying Pan on the Jackfish. "This is why they ask for ten of your best young men to join them in avenging the death of your kinsmen. They and I, Michel, whom you know, have sworn an oath that this Lafamme shall not see the snows fade nor the ice rot at Ogoke in the moon of the breaking of the snowshoes. We have given our word, each to each, that not again shall he steal the pelts of the Ojibways with his magic water. If you are men you will send us ten of your young hunters with their dogs, that they may trap these wolves in their den and the skies above Ogoke may redden with the flames of the post where the Indian is cheated and turned out to starve."

"Atala! Eh-eh! Yes, yes, we will do it!" shouted the aroused hunters, at the conclusion of the appeal for aid. Then the American addressed the Indians, while the man from Nepligon put his words into their native tongue. "You have heard the words of the head-man from Walling River. He is my friend and he speaks for me. My home is far in the country to the south, but I shall not return until this trader, Lafamme, who cheats the Ojibways with his whiskey, is driven from Ogoke. He may have sent others, to howl in the night and terrify your women. We must hunt them down. At Walling River lives an honest trader who gives you full value for your pelts in flour and trade-goods. He is the friend of the Ojibway. Send as yet about young men, who can shoot straight and do not fear the men of Lafamme, that we may rid the country of this wolverine, that you may trade without fear at the post at the rapids of the Walling."

Back to their winter camps went the Indians, with the tale of Lafamme's Windigo, Pierre, while the three friends waited for Little Jacques, and made their plans. In three days the Cree arrived, driving a plodding six-dog team loaded with provisions. He handed Steele two letters. The American thrilled as he saw on one his name written in a feminine hand, but he opened the other first and read aloud to his friends.

At St. Onge's married how Tete-Bone, Lafamme's spy, had lured him away from the post with the forged message from Michel, David raised his miffened fists in helpless rage. "By gar, an' I had heem een deeg hands—een deeg hands!" he cried, glaring at Steele. As he read of the fury of Lafamme, culminating in the wreck of the violin, Steele's hands shook with his wrath—then pity for her swept him. "Poor, poor girl!" he murmured. "She has lost everything—she is indeed alone."

"Well," he said to the others, "the debt grows larger, my friends. Remember the violin, David, when your time comes!" Then Steele opened the letter from Denise, which ran: "My dear Monsieur Steele: 'Our hearts are filled with happiness at your success. After the toll and the danger, you have won, and I thank you for your goodness to me and to my father—you, a stranger, who might have passed on, and forgotten. It was a house of despair that you found, and you brought hope. Already you may have guessed, Monsieur, that we have feared all along that the Windigo was the creature of Lafamme. But there was no proof. 'You are going to Ogoke, Monsieur Steele, on a desperate venture. It may be that we shall never meet again. For this reason you will understand when I say that you are a very gallant gentleman—that we—I, shall never forget. Bon chance! Denise St. Onge.'"

Steele again read the letter, seeking what was not there. At last he folded it and turned away to hide his disappointment from his curious friends. No, he mused, it is only too true. She has, as she says, forgotten nothing.

Shortly, each day was marked by the arrival of galloping dog teams from the east, south and west, driven by lean, wild-looking Ojibways, keen for the adventure—picked men, chosen by their people for their endurance on the winter trails, their proved nerve, and their "bush craft." When the last team had come in, Jacques was sent down river with a letter and orders to meet the party later on the Upper Walling, with a sledload of supplies. Steele then outlined his plan to the Indians.

Dividing into four parties they were to proceed up the Walling valley, by different routes to avoid betraying their purpose if seen by any of Lafamme's people. It was probable that the trader had sent more than one man to spread terror of the Windigo through the country, although there was small chance that he had at Ogoke another Indian with the marvelous imitative faculty of Pierre. Therefore on their way to the lake, the hunters were to visit the trapping camps to learn of the possible activity of other night howlers in the region, whom they were to hunt down. Soon, when their man failed to return, the people of Lafamme would taste their own medicine. Fear of the unknown fate which had overtaken Pierre and the rest would slowly chill their blood. And when their search parties did not come back, their hearts would soften as the ice rots under the April sun, and the Indian and half-breed followers of the trader would steal away in the night as men when the smallpox. Then it would be an easy matter to rush the post, take Lafamme, Big Antoine and Baptiste, and send them to the railroad for trial.

Including the Indians which David and Steele saw in October, they estimated that Lafamme had twelve or fifteen men at the post. As the success of the whole venture depended on secrecy, no Indian, sent with supplies to the Windigo down river, no member of a search party could be allowed to escape and bring the news to Lafamme. That would remove the element of mystery—spoil the plan, which had for its object, first, the stampeding of Lafamme's "bush" Indians through superstitious fear concerning the fate of their friends.

Much as his two awart lieutenants would have welcomed open war with Lafamme, they agreed that the siege of Ogoke must be one of secrecy and craft. Once the Indians deserted, it would be possible gradually to pick up any hunting parties by closing in and sending men to watch the trails near the post, until Lafamme was driven in self-defense to leave, or they took him. With the post deserted, the Ojibways of the upper valley would bring their fur to Walling River for the Christmas trade, and St. Onge's future was assured.

For two days the impatient men waited for a dog-team from the post, eighteen miles up the lake, to pass the outlet. Then Michel and David, taking Wagosh and two of the hunters, started through the forest to locate a camp near Ogoke, from which all trails taken by hunting parties to the back country could be watched, for Lafamme would need much meat to feed his people.

Days passed with no news from Michel. Steele was disturbed, but he had three men out hunting meat and could not leave the outlet. Then, one afternoon at dusk, David came in behind his dogs. Ahead of the team, breaking trail in the new snow, walked a sinister-faced half-breed and an Indian, shoulders and elbows thrust stiffly back, and Steele saw that their upper arms were bound together with rawhide.

"Where did you pick these up?" asked Steele.

"Deuy hunt een de beeg spruce bush near de post."

Then Steele learned, while David ate his supper, that with the aid of their skinning knives as threats, the latter and Michel had finally forced the half-breed to talk. The failure of Pierre, who had been away a month, to return to the post was worrying Lafamme. Two men, one following the other, had been sent downriver to learn what had become of the two Windigo. The first scout now was long overdue. Already some of the Indians had left in the night with their families. The others were ready to stampede. Something was the matter in the lower valley of the Walling.

An Michel desired to see his chief at once, Steele left in the morning with two men.

In the thick timber of a little valley five miles back of the post, Steele found the camp of Michel. A well-traveled trail to the country hunted by the post people ran within a mile, and was constantly watched. Here they had picked up the prisoners brought back by David, and, as the post depended for meat on the moose of the region beyond, here the crafty Michel knew he would get the searchers sent by Lafamme to find the missing men. And when, in time, the search party in turn disappeared into the mysterious maw of the wilderness, the Troquois was satisfied that a nameless dread would enter the hearts of the people of Ogoke. Already six men had gone out from the post, never to return, and when they had got this search party, he told Steele, he doubted if an Indian would dare remain. (TO BE CONTINUED.)

Love at First Hand

Great Thing in Life
First love comes before the age of knowledge. It is the only love entirely unencumbered with ideas and preconceptions. How little it has to do with words, with talk! It knows no terms. It is the thing itself from which terms and institutions have grown up. First lovers get love at first hand, instead of getting first the idea of romance into which to try to fit themselves and other people, Louise Townsend Nicol writes, in the Century. They seldom talk. They get acquainted in other ways—by being near each other, by looking at each other, by softly, subtly touching hands. They do things together—play games, ruin races. As watchful as small animals, they fear minutely each about the other. They do not talk. They give each other things, always in fair exchange, and wear them out with carrying about. When they must know facts to supplement their findings, they ask—short, blunt questions. Opinion and discussion have little play.

Made Millions Laugh

The real name of the famous circus clown, Dan Rice, was Daniel McLaren and he was nicknamed as a child for an old Irish clown. He began his professional career as an acrobat and clown with Seth B. Howe, circus owner, 1846. He was a partner in Spaulding's circus until the outbreak of the Civil war. After the Civil war he was financially unfortunate, but was engaged by Adam Forepaugh at a salary of $25,000 a year, afterward increased to $1,000 a week. He retired from the stage in 1882. He was exceedingly lavish with money for charity. On one occasion he gave President Lincoln $25,000 for the benefit of wounded soldiers and their dependents. He died in February, 1900.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

BY MARY GRAHAM BONNER

WHAT GORDON FOUND

The camping trip on which Gordon and Harry and Bobo had gone had been one of the best ones they had ever had. There had been no rain.

The nights had been clear, moonless but with bright blue stars filling the darker blue sky. After supper was over and before they had put out the fire they had sat around it and told stories—mostly stories, their fathers had told them of camping trips they had made into these same woods, of many a tenderfoot who had thought the idea so nice until darkness had come and every unknown rustle in the wood had been a fearsome one.

A tenderfoot never ceased to amuse them, though they could stand a tenderfoot who, though a little timid and alarmed at first, showed signs of improvement the second night out and was an enthusiast at the end of the trip, even though with little knowledge of the woods.

But a tenderfoot who talked a lot about outdoors and then was afraid of everything but the sunshine was of no use save as a joke-figure for anecdotes and stories.

They had been lucky with the trout they caught. Harry headed the list with thirty and Bobo with twenty-seven and Gordon with twenty-six. They could have caught more but they did not think their families or their friends could use up more than these. So many were going camping now, and fishing, and as they named over the list of those to whom they would give some of their fish they found the list, because of fishing members in the family, was small.

So the last day they had done very little but wander through the woods, finding odd stones and curiously formed rocks, discovering new trails and hidden lakes and tumbling waterfalls.

Gordon was making notes of much that he saw, going back to compare them with notes he had made on other trips. In fact when the others went to bed a little later that next night, because they could get home in plenty of time no matter if they did oversleep in the morning, the gentle, curious, beckoning sounds of early morning in the woods made him get up.

The woods always made him get up ahead of time, where with the others the faintly rustling quiet of the woods and the smell of spruce made them long to sleep overtime.

Practically everything was ready for breakfast, the packing up for the return trip took little time, the breaking up of camp was not a lengthy affair, and the fire was ready for lighting, while the first two pieces of bacon reposed already upon the forked stick.

Off into the woods Gordon went, silently abusing himself for the noise he made breaking the twigs as he went along, the lumbering steps he took. How quietly a moose, for all his great antlers could go through the woods. How slightly stirred the underbrush as a rabbit darted through it.

He, a boy, made as much noise as fifty animals.

And then he heard a noise above even his own clumsy racket. It was a whimpering sound, a sound that was a little like crying, a little like cooing, a little like loneliness. Gordon could not quite make it out.

He went in the direction from which the sound had come. There, evidently just waking up, was a bear cub, almost black in color.

Where was the mother? Where were the brothers and sisters, or at least one or two members of his family? Why was he here, alone, just waking up?

Gordon went over to the cub carefully. Even a cub could give nasty scratches if his disposition happened to be bad, and one of the first rules of the woods was not to be afraid, but at the same time not to be a fool.

But the cub was not cross. He was lonely and deserted and miserable. He had been looked after until the day before. Then something had happened to his mother. She had gone off to get food and had not returned. And there had only been himself left. His two brothers had lived so short a time he had quite forgotten them.

But none of this could he tell. Only he whimpered and whined and cried a little more plaintively than ever when he saw that some one was going to help him.

"You'll come back to breakfast with me!" Gordon said. Ang taking a cord out of his pocket led the little bear back to the camp where warmth and a welcome was given him.

Million Dollar Rain and Snow

THE big snow storm that started last Thursday night, broke the record for anything of the kind that has been known in these regions for the past twenty-five years. With apologies to "Bill O'Fare,"—"First it rained, then it Blew, Then it (Fritz) and Snow and Blew."

For the first time in many, many years, we had what we might call, "our fill of it," and it takes a good amount of moisture to please the people of this locality who have been victims of drouth and additional misfortunes for so long. But the ground is now soaked and just at the time when it should be to give life and strength to the grass that had begun to peep forth.

Again — From Thursday, March 25, to this writing, Tuesday, March 30, there has been a continual, you might say, downfall of either rain or snow and this visitation has been a true blessing to the stock interests of our region. This morning, after the big storm of last night, the "New Mexico Sunshine," of which we so truthfully boast, is again with us. The snow is melting gradually and soaking deeper and deeper into the ground. There has been some loss of stock due to lack of shelter, but the gain which the moisture will bring our stock interests will greatly overcome all loss.

Educational Notes

Despite the snow storm, a very successful meeting of the Lincoln County Teachers' Association was held in Carrizozo, March 26-27. Much credit is due Mrs. M. L. Blaney, president of the association, for the success of this meeting. Addresses of great value and interest were given by Dr. A. O. Bowden, Pres. H. L. Kent, S. P. Nanninga, D. W. Rockey, E. M. Brickley and Rev. H. K. Stanley.

M. E. Missionary Society

Dr. and Mrs. Carl Freeman opened their home to the Women's Missionary Society last Tuesday, Mar. 23. A large attendance was present at the meeting. The following program was carried out: Song, "Sunshine be my Love;" Lord's Prayer Song, "The Old Rugged Cross;" Scripture Lesson 1 Corinthians 12 chapter 4-24 verses. This is showing the diversities of opinion in belief, yet all believing in God—and illustrates this by showing the eye, ear, hand and foot, each as members of the body, each different, yet of the body.

The president used the church as an illustration and showed how the Sunday School, the church services, the League and Society were each different members yet of the church. This was followed by a song, "Sweet Hour of Prayer." A short sketch of the life and work of the late Miss Bell Bennett, one of the Methodist's foremost workers, was read by Mrs. S. W. Wells. Report of the Secretary, Report of Treasurer, Short business meeting, Prayer.

Besides the missionary society a large crowd of children and several men enjoyed the hospitality of Dr. and Mrs. Freeman. Several new members were enrolled. Next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Bob Dozier, April 6th.

The Hub of The Problem

Costs are placed in a new light by the whole project of farm electrification. Why is it, many farmers have asked, that it costs more to supply electric service to rural districts than to city homes?

Here is the answer, as summed up by Prof. E. A. Stewart, of the University of Minnesota, project director of the Red Wing experimental line:

- 1. In rural districts the customer thus far has used materially less electricity per month than has the city customer.
2. In the country the average is three customers to the mile, whereas in the city there are from 30 to 200 to the mile.
3. The cost of distributing electricity is everywhere greater than the cost of generating it, in city and country both.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Germany's Election to the League of Nations Is Postponed.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

THE League of Nations assembly on March 17 voted to adjourn the question of Germany's election to the league until the September session. The vote came after announcement by Afranio Melo Franco, Brazilian representative, that the decision of his country not to vote a permanent council sent for Germany unless Brazil was given one at the same time, was irrevocable. Then Sir Austen Chamberlain gave notice that it would be impossible for him to propose the admission of Germany into the league at this time. He concluded a long speech by expressing the conviction that the September assembly would see "that great nation, Germany, assume her rightful place within the League of Nations."

As a result of this action there is profound disappointment among well-wishers for the League of Nations throughout Europe over the breakdown of the session of the league called to elect Germany to membership. In some countries the hope of an agreement at Geneva tending toward general peace and security is regarded as indefinitely deferred, and fears are expressed that there will arise political recriminations in their domestic politics which may add to the difficulties.

Such recriminations already have been strongly manifested in England, where the anti-government press is making every effort to bring about the political downfall of Sir Austen Chamberlain, the foreign secretary, who, with Premier Briand of France, is declared to be the author of the Geneva collapse. Chamberlain's mission will be discussed next week in the house of commons, and a vote of censure may be moved against him. In such a case the present indications are that he would be saved by the big conservative majority. There are some reports, apparently based on speculation, that he will forestall an attack by resigning.

It remains to be seen whether Premier Briand can inject his optimism regarding the future of the league into his countrymen. Dispatches from France reflect the disappointment over the failure at Geneva as are expressed elsewhere. Briand must resume his difficult task of restoring the financial situation of his country to normal. With the failure of the league to elect Germany to membership, his "security" ambition failed of accomplishment, as the Locarno pact cannot become effective until Germany is a league member.

Chancellor Luther and Foreign Minister Stresemann of Germany must face parliamentary fire, particularly on the part of the Communists and Nationalists, who will endeavor to unseat them.

THE Prince of Wales and Stanley Baldwin, the prime minister, figured in a "bombing" scare on St. Patrick's day which still is a matter of mystery. While the prince was attending the St. Patrick's day banquet of the Irish club in London someone in a passing talk threw into the entrance of the restaurant where the dinner was held a cardboard box from which acetylene fumes were escaping. An examination showed the contents included among other things molten calcium carbide and a piece of tarred rope. No damage was done.

A similar "bomb" which blazed fiercely and emitted clouds of smoke was hung from the gallery of the Hotel Cecil where Mr. Baldwin was attending a St. Patrick's day banquet. It fell on the table not far from Mr. Baldwin, rolled on the floor, and set fire to the carpet. Consternation was caused among the guests. A woman at a table near Mr. Baldwin fainted and was carried out. The prime minister, however, remained calm and the fireworks and burning carpet were soon extinguished.

There was nothing to show whether the incident was a malicious prank.

or the manifestation of anger by persons with grievances or a political protest of some Irish irreconcilables against their countrymen's hobnobbing with British royalty and British ministers.

SENATOR SMITH BROOKHART (Rep., Iowa) will lose his seat in the upper house in favor of his Democratic opponent, Daniel F. Steck, if the senate elections committee upholds the report submitted by a subcommittee which holds that Steck was elected by a majority of 1,420 votes. The subcommittee report was presented by Senator Caraway (Dem., Ark.). It was unanimous, the other members being Senator Ernst (Rep., Ky.), who is chairman of the full elections committee and the subcommittee; Senator Watson (Rep., Ind.), and Senator George (Dem., Ga.).

In holding that Steck is entitled to the seat the subcommittee took the position that the intent of the voters in the November, 1924, election should be recognized. Iowa election authorities threw out hundreds of ballots which were marked by arrows which were designed to make it clear that the voters desired to vote for President Coolidge and at the same time vote for the Democratic senatorial nominee. Arrows of this sort had appeared in newspaper ballots, and many voters, not being aware that such action might invalidate their votes, copied the marked ballots, arrows and all.

Senator Brookhart is one of the four members of the La Follette group read out of the party by action of the Republican senate caucus. If he is unseated he will be free to enter the primaries as a candidate against Senator Cummins (Rep., Iowa) and it is regarded as certain that he will make the race.

THE United States and other powers delivered an ultimatum to Chinese factions demanding that blockade of the port of Tientsin be ended and all impediments to harbor and river traffic be removed. The ultimatum, signed by signatories of the protocol of 1901, was handed to the commanders of the forts at Taku and Chinese vessels outside of Tientsin. The United States, Great Britain, Japan and Italy have a dozen or more naval craft in these waters. The protocol of 1901 made stipulation concerning the disarmament of forts at the mouth of the Pei river, on which Tientsin is located, and also guaranteed an open way to the sea.

The blockade has been preventing access to Peking from the sea and recently resulted in Chinese troops firing upon two Japanese destroyers.

EVIDENCE that the law has not yet caught up with the radio is shown by a peculiar case of "radio slander" that has occurred in Chicago. State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe was sitting at home the other night, listening to a radio program broadcast from a downtown cabaret. He was startled to hear the station's announcer tell the world that Mr. Crowe and some of his friends at that moment were seated at a conspicuous table at the cabaret, enjoying the entertainment.

Mr. Crowe ordered the arrest of the announcer, who was held in jail for twelve hours before he was formally charged with disorderly conduct. Mr. Crowe's assistants spent much of the intervening time trying to find some more serious charge to place against the prisoner, but there were none. The law has not yet caught up with radio. Mr. Crowe can sue the announcer for damages, but presumably cannot indict him. If, instead of telling thousands of listeners that Mr. Crowe was having a night out, the announcer had published a handbill to the same effect, he could have been charged with the crime of libel. The law makes that distinction between the spoken and the printed word. To defame a man by word of mouth is slander and no crime; to defame him by means of the printed word may be criminal libel.

Prosecution of the case against the defendant has been set for April 24 and the decision of the court may set an important precedent in defining the laws of slander and libel up to date in this radio age.

ANOTHER important event in the radio world was the passage in the house of representatives by a vote of 218 to 134 of the White bill designed to create a federal radio commission of five members to co-operate with Secretary Hoover in keeping order in the air, where broadcasting and other forms of wireless in the past have operated in some instances with great confusion. The bill provides for the issuance of station and operators' licenses by the secretary of commerce. Opposition to it centered about the contentions of some members that no machinery was provided that would insure against radio monopoly and that it gave the secretary too much power.

Only one major amendment was added to the committee draft of the bill. This change, proposed by Representative Davis (Dem., Tenn.), struck out a provision to give the Commerce department the power to remit fines imposed for infraction of radio regulations. The five members of the radio commission would be appointed from five zones to be established. Operators who were refused licenses would have the right to appeal to the District of Columbia Court of Appeals. It was stipulated that the President should have power to close any station during war "or other emergency."

UNDER a suspension of the rules, hotly contested by a minority group, the house of representatives passed the Porter bill, authorizing the appropriation of $10,000,000 for the purchase or construction of adequate embassy and consular buildings in foreign capitals.

Under the terms of the bill, which was approved by the President, the budget bureau and the State department, expenditure of the money will be limited to $2,000,000 a year for five years, under the direction of a building commission, which will include three members of the house and representatives of the State department. The bill is designed to permit the concentration in one building of all government activities in a particular foreign capital.

MANUFACTURERS in the Middle West were rallying for a final fight against passage of the Gooding bill, pending in congress. If enacted, the bill would have the practical effect of preventing permanently the interstate commerce commission from rescinding its ruling against establishment of cheaper rail rates on certain commodities from Middle West points to Pacific coast cities.

Mid-West shippers take the position that without the cheaper "long haul" rates they cannot hope to compete with their rivals on the Atlantic seaboard on account of low rate water transportation via the Panama canal. Manufacturers say important industries are likely to desert Chicago for more favorable locations adjacent to water routes. Refusal of the commission to grant the request of industrial leaders of this section and of the transcontinental railroads, that the through rates be lowered, spurred to a greater activity opponents of the Gooding bill. Many believe the commission's ruling may weaken opposition to the bill in congress.

SECOND LIEUT. JOHN S. THOMPSON of the United States army was hanged for the murder of his seventeen-year-old fiancée, whom he said he could not live without or marry because of his insufficient salary. He was the first American officer to be executed in peace time.

Thompson killed Miss Audrey Burleigh at Manila in the early morning of April 5, 1925. She was the step-daughter of Capt. Hamilton P. Calne, medical corps, and they were engaged to be married.

THE annual circus season this year will lack one of its greatest thrills for the children, according to word coming from headquarters of the big circuses at Pasa, Ind.

The circus parade, it has been decided by showmen there, is to be abandoned. The high-priced performers, especially the Europeans, will not parade. The big circuses now visit only the larger cities, it is explained, and secondary traffic problems and the growing distance of the circus lot from the railroad make the parade physically impossible.

Ten years ago there were 20 circuses with trains of ten or more rail-road cars. Now there are only a dozen, but these have expanded until the largest circus in the country travels with 1,200 persons, and the smaller ones carry about 500.

Corsets Supplied for Every Figure

Combination Brassiere and Girdle Makes Its Bid for Approval

Corset styles are largely influenced by the demands of fashion, and since fashion is insisting upon curves in opposition to the straight silhouette of the last few years, corsetry is now of vital interest to every woman. The curved lines of necessity need more attention, observes a fashion authority in the New York Times, for this type of figure requires greater control than the straight silhouette. To meet this problem, and in fact to solve it, the combination brassiere and girdle has been introduced in new variations. There are also garter belts, little bandeaux, all-flexible step-ins lightly boned and boneless, as well as the closed back and clasp-front girdles and the new type of laced-back corset with self-reducing lines. Materials include knitted or woven silks and rayons, poplins and, for the large figure, broadcloths.

For the slim girl who prefers the separate brassiere there is a step-in girdle with a panel-back and front of brocaded material and wide elastic side sections. Double garters are the only other feature. Then there is the "Charleston" girdle made along the same lines and of the same material, but having the front panel equipped with an extra section which has two elastic straps that fasten to the lower edge of the girdle in back. This model is made without garters.

Another combination for the slender figure is made entirely of knitted rayon. It has very long lines and is reinforced with silk elastic gores at the sides. A narrow elastic strap across the back holds the brassiere in place. A long basque brassiere model has a hip confiner, and is made of knitted silk and heavy satin. The satin is used in the girdle part, and the rayon for the brassiere top. The elastic side gores, two short bones in front, and an unusually long girdle help mold the figure along youthful lines.

Chubby figures have a style of combination all their own. Knitted or woven silks, and meshes are used for these models, with, of course, the usual elastic gores at the hips. The girdle in these models is of the step-in variety, but the brassiere part hooks either in the back or at the sides, thereby assuring perfect fit. Elastic shoulder straps give greater resiliency to the figure.

For the medium-sized woman, or what is technically known as the "full average figure," there is a combination with the brassiere hooking at the side. Three short bones in front insure the flat appearance that is so desired across the abdomen. These combinations usually come in the heavier materials, which give greater control throughout.

Large-size figures have combinations in the step-in variety, too, and, in addition, an extra band underneath the girdle section to hold the diaphragm firmly in place and to confine the hips.

Hat of Brown Straw Is Liked by Young Matron

This smart hat for the young matron is of brown straw with a facing of satin. The fancy pompadour on the side is of red gold. It is regarded as a chic chapeau for spring.

New Names for Colors for Spring Wearables

The same old pastel colors continue to dominate the field of fashion for spring, but most of them have new names. Among the red may be found tinforet, azalea, grape and cerise, but they are all allied with rose red. In the blue scale are renaisance, lavender, anemone and jangle. The greens include turquoise, meadow, catalin, alligator and citreous. The yellow-orange range comprises champagne, apricot and melonade. Pay your money and take your choice.

Platinum Gray New Shade

Gold and silver have had their day and now are being forced to share fashion popularity with the other metals. One of the most popular shades for coats and dresses today is platinum gray, since green, black, stockings and hat of a matching shade may be worn with it. The traditional copper tone are being exploited for coats in fawn and copper dyed furs. Browns is being taken up in slender fashion.

Ensemble Returns With Coming of New Season

This charming street frock is fashioned of two shades of green crepe de chine. The one-piece dress is a straight-line frock, trimmed only by a row of hamstitching about a foot from the bottom of the frock. The long coat is bound by a broad band of darker green crepe de chine and the same material forms the collar.

Good Season to Shop for Small Accessories

This is the season of the year when the clever woman goes shopping for small accessories; though she has purchased a new spring gown or hat, there will be many days when her winter clothes or the ones she purchased in the late fall must still be worn. And yet these clothes will begin to look shabby if she does not give attention to dainty new things which give life and color and smartness to her general appearance.

It is surprising what a new handbag, a chic scarf, a bright handkerchief, new sports stockings or a silk flower for her coat will do for that touch of midseason freshness that the wardrobe demands.

The newest thing in handbags is of fine calf leather. They are medium sized and vary in their attractive details of design. They may be as colorful as a woman's whims dictate or in the more subdued shades. Most of these bags have metal or covered leather frames. They are most reasonable and will set off a fur coat or a cloth and fur combination to great advantage.

Attractive Trimmings for Spring Millinery

Interesting models from different milliners illustrate in various ways the hat that is ornamented with needlework, with motifs applique and with hand painting. Conventionalized flowers are made of fancy braid or of ribbon or one cut out of some material and applied singly or in clusters. One sees, too, flowers formed of the new ribbon, shaded, metal bordered, fluted, striped or in dainty flower patterns; feather flowers with jeweled edges and centers, and rosettes and bows. Lacquered flowers, glazed and gilded ornaments, large and showy, and jeweled pins in countless designs continue to be worn, though these belong more properly to close hats and stiffer shapes. Hand painting is being much shown and is done most successfully on horsehair and closely woven braids.

Larger Flowers Used for Dress Garniture

Flowers for dress garniture are larger than ever and the boutonniere is mammoth. The latest novelty is the flower, made of smooth feathers to resemble single roses, lilies, passion flowers, and others in which the lines are not too intricate. The flowers, of course, are exaggerated in size and somewhat conventionalized in form, but the feathers are dyed in the natural colors and the centers are formed of metal threads. Some are tipped with jewels. Among these novelties are wired flowers of silk tissue and velvet, with petals outlined with small rhinestones. These are very effective on evening gowns.

Sports Clothes Waterproofed

The open weaves of the blackest coat, woolen stockings and woollen gloves are conspicuously absent from the costumes for winter sports now shown in the smart shops. The materials are usually of light, close-weave material which is thoroughly waterproofed. The jackets are closely buttoned to the throat and belted. The miter portion of the costume consists of long trousers gathered closely about the ankles so no snow can enter.

Vogue for Good Hairdressing

The vogue for good hairdressing is the fancy wrought styles inspired by Miriam's gilt and Oriental crinoids is reflected in the quantity of articles being worn being shown. Wide bandeaux, chapeaux, neckpieces, robes and pendants are among the picturesque things. Most of them are chased in delicate patterns or in open filigree.

MOTHER OF SEVEN CHILDREN

Helped in Caring for them by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Glasgow, Ky.—"I am the mother of seven children, the eldest being only 14 years, and I feel that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has helped to pull me through the roughest places of my married life. At one time I was so downhearted that life was a misery. A friend in Indianapolis, Indiana, told me of the Vegetable Compound, and after taking a few bottles of it I became myself again and it was a pleasure to do my housework and gardening. Since then I always use your medicine when I feel weak from overwork and it straightens me out."

—Mrs. Melissa Hansen, Route 2, care of O. E. Stoenberg, Glasgow, Ky., New Orleans, La.—"I could not do a thing after my first boy was born. I was so weak, I had no appetite, lost weight and was not able to do my work. I was this way for seven weeks, then I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and got wonderful results from it."—Mrs. C. FAVRE, 4014 Dauphine St., New Orleans, La.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been growing in popularity among women for over fifty years.

Long Preserved in Ice

Imbedded in ice a party of Russian explorers discovered the remains of an extinct animal believed to have died 50,000 years before the birth of Christ. The skin was so perfect that it was easily removed. Some of the hairs measured thirty inches. An analysis of the stomach contents revealed grass and flowers of the same types which grow in northeastern Siberia.

SEASONABLE DISHES

When using canned fruit there will be small amounts of different kinds left over; use these in desserts as follows:

Fruit Dessert.—Take a package of strawberry-flavored gelatin—there are various kinds on the market—add one cupful of boiling water and one cupful of any canned fruit juice; cool, put into a large mold and when it begins to thicken slightly add one and one-half cupfuls of fruit cut into pieces—peaches, pears, prunes, apricots or any combination that is at hand. Chill until firm. Individual molds may be used and the fruit added in designs.

Hot Potato Salad.—Take one quart of diced potatoes that have been boiled, one minced onion, a tablespoonful of minced parsley and the same of green pepper. Dice and fry until brown two slices of bacon. Remove the bacon and use for a garnish on top of the salad. To the fat add a tablespoonful of flour, and when well blended a half cupful each of water and vinegar, one teaspoonful of salt, a teaspoonful of sugar and a dash of cayenne; pour boiling hot over the potato. Serve hot.

Spareribs With Potatoes and Apples.—Place seasoned spareribs in a baking dish and cook one hour. Place quartered potatoes under the ribs and quartered apples on top. Bake until the potatoes are well done and brown. Season with salt and pepper while cooking. The apples will brown and have a better flavor if sprinkled very lightly with sugar. Many good cooks add a very little sugar to all meats and meat sauces.

Paranip Fritters.—Take cooked paranips left over from a former meal. Press through a ricer, add to a cupful of the paranip one-fourth teaspoonful each of salt and pepper, a beaten egg and a dash of cayenne. Mix thoroughly and fry in small cakes in a hot well-buttered pan. Brown on both sides.

Add a dash of salt to most fruits; it saves sugar and brings out the flavor.

Bird's Nest Pudding.—Slice good-flavored apples into a deep pie dish and cover with a rather rich baking powder biscuit batter. Bake in a moderate oven and when ready to serve turn upside down on to a serving plate. Butter generously while hot, cover with the slight amount of sugar and add either grated nutmeg or cinnamon. Cut into pie-shaped pieces and serve piping hot.

Dishes for Dinner.

The potato, the commonest and most often served food of any, is in most homes limited to a half dozen ways of serving.

Potatoes Cooked in Broth.—Cut the potatoes into balls, or they may be cut into cubes; the waste bits may be used in creamed or mashed potatoes. Cook the potato balls in boiling salted water for five minutes, then drain and finish cooking in well-seasoned broth. When tender, drain and sprinkle with salt and finely minced parsley. This is a good dish to serve for those who cannot eat meat.

Hamburg Steak With Brussels Sprouts.—Chop one pound of steak from the top of the round, add one-half cupful of cold water and a teaspoonful of salt. Mix thoroughly and shape into small cakes. Grease a hot frying pan lightly with a bit of suet and lay in the cakes, turn to cook on both sides. Have ready a smooth brown sauce to which has been added a few tablespoonfuls of chopped mushrooms and a little chopped ham. Have the brussels sprouts cooked until tender, drain, season well with salt, pepper and butter, shake over the fire until the sprouts have absorbed all the seasonings. Place the sprouts in the center of a hot platter and arrange the steak around them, pour the sauce around the steak.

Escalloped Cabbage.—Shred and cook cabbage as for hot slaw. Prepare a white sauce. Butter a baking dish and put in a layer of hotted cabbage, then a layer of white sauce, sprinkle with grated cheese and continue until all the cabbage and sauce are used. Season each layer with salt and pepper and bake twenty minutes.

Hot Apple Dessert.—Peel, quarter and slice six apples. Put these into a serving dish suitable for the oven. In layers with seeded raisins and a cupful of sugar; cover and bake until the apples are soft. Remove the cover and set marshmallows over the top of the apples, return the dish to the oven for browning and serve hot, with or without cream.

Spoon Corn Bread.—Take one cupful of corn meal scalded, add one pint of sweet milk, one-half cupful of flour, two tablespoonfuls each of melted butter and sugar, two well-beaten eggs, one teaspoonful of baking powder, one-half teaspoonful of salt. Bake one-half hour.

READING MATTER

Philippa—I'm going to take a course in mind reading.
Annt Lucy—Don't do it, dear. Most modern minds are unfit for a young girl to read.

Art and Reality

There comes a sorrow, truth to tell,
Which must impress us sadly.
When people who can act so well
Sometimes behave so badly!

Quite So

It seems there were two Irishmen, Pat and Mike. They met one day on the street and the following conversation took place:

"Pat, you owe me $10."
"Degorra, Molke, this is the first time that two Irishmen named Pat and Mike ever met and there was no joke."
—Cornell Widow.

Needed It

"My word, I'm badly overworked."
"What are you doing?"
"Oh, this and that."
"When?"
"Now and then."
"Where?"
"Here or there."
"Well, you must need a holiday."

Hopeful

First Knut—Is it true that you proposed to Freda and she rejected you?
Second Ditto—Not exactly rejected. She said that when she felt like making a fool of herself she'd let me know.

Modern Version

Ritter—Let's see, how does that quotation run: "Who steals my purse—"
Friend—I suppose it goes on to say that he gets ahead of the landlord and the tax collector.

SOME MOVE AHEAD

"Do you believe all men are born equal?"
"Of course I do—but they don't all stay that way."

Wise Guy

At trying to meet expenses he was never known to shirk.
He looked until he found a job—
Then sent his wife to work.

Even

Girl (slipping on new engagement ring)—You've hit on my favorite stone, old thing, which is more than the others did.
Man—It's the same kind I usually buy.

Rare Days Nowadays

"A dull day," remarked mild Mr. Good Citizen.
"Oh!"
"Nobody has asked me to contribute money for anything."

A Surprise

Suitor—I hope my proposal for the hand of your daughter hasn't taken you by surprise, sir.
Father—Well, to tell the truth, it has. You've been so jolly slow in getting around to it that I thought it wasn't coming at all.

Good Advice

"What kind of a husband would you advise me to get?"
"You get a single man and let the husbands alone."

Backache Wearing You Out?

Every day find you miserable with backache? Suffer sharp, stabbing pains? Feel stiff and sore? Always tired, nervous and dispirited? Then look to your kidneys! Your kidneys are the blood filters. Perhaps they have failed to properly rid the blood of body poisons. Naturally, then, you suffer the injurious effects of this slow poisoning. Don't risk another day of kidney trouble! Get Doan's Pills. No other kidney diuretic is so well recommended nor so successful. Ask your neighbor!

PERSONALS

Mrs. Henrietta Helknap and Mrs. J. M. Frame were visitors here yesterday from Ancho.

Harold Abbott and Miss Mary Searcy of Alamogordo, were week-end guests of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. A. Dowdle, leaving for home Sunday evening.

Episcopal Church services were held last Sunday night at the Wetmore Building. Rev. H. K. Stanley preached to an audience mainly of men. The discourse touched briefly on the lives of great men in biblical history and the speaker handled his subject in a manner that showed a thorough knowledge of what he wished to communicate to his hearers and was very interesting and helpful.

The big storm of Monday night put the light system out of commission, but repairs were made and everything was in good running order Tuesday.

M. U. Finley was a business visitor in El Paso this week.

Carrizozo Lodge No. 41, A. F. & A. M., held an interesting communication at Masonic Hall last Saturday night.

BORN—To Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Heck, on March 29, at the Johnson Hospital, a girl. The little new-comer arrived on the wings of the big snow storm and blizzard and also on Dr. Johnson's birthday. Mother and daughter are doing nicely.

Stockman George Jeffreys had his second sad trip to take within the past month to his old home in Talpa, Tex. On Feb. 27, his father died and after attending the funeral, he returned home, only to be called again by the death of his mother, which occurred Mar. 31. It would seem that some have more than their share of trouble in this world.

Sheriff Kelsey had several "guests" at the county jail and he has been giving them good, fresh air and exercise. They performed much skillful (?) work on the new tennis court, opened the ditches and did such toll as the sheriff could furnish them. One of the darkeys said to the sheriff, "Gimme plenty o' grub, Missa Sheriff, an' I will sho throw the dirt."

Carrizozo Lodge No. 30, I. O. O. F., held its regular weekly meeting Tuesday night with a good attendance.

M. U. Finley shipped two car loads of fine two-year-old steers yesterday from Turquoise, thirty miles south of Alamogordo, to his ranch in the Painted Rocks.

NOTICE

We have made a change in our business methods, and hereafter, while new accounts will be welcomed, old accounts must be settled before new ones can be contracted.

City Market,
W. L. Burnett, Prop.

The regular Episcopal Easter services will be held at the Wetmore Building Sunday evening, Rev. H. King Stanley conducting the same. The services will begin at 7:30 and the public is cordially invited.

Rev. John N. Ranier will conduct services at the Methodist Church next Sunday morning and evening. Special music will be furnished by a local orchestra and a program of songs and musical numbers will be given.

The dance given by the Golf Club was well attended considering the weather. Kahler's "Zodiac" furnished the music and a splendid time was experienced by the patrons.

A surprise party was given to Wm. Gallacher last night at the Indian Tank ranch, the affair being in honor of Billy's—7—7—birthday. Those present from here were: Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Spence, Dr. Johnson and Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Lucky; Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Bogle, Mr. and Mrs. Orville Bogle, Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Bullard of Bogle; Of the immediate family were: Mr. and Mrs. John Gallacher and mother, Mrs. Jané Gallacher, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Cleghorn, and others of the neighborhood whose names we failed to obtain. Dancing to Radio music and refreshments was the order of the evening.

You can get a first-class funeral in Spain for $20 and a fourth class one for $15, according to M. U. Finley. It is doubtful whether you can get a first class living in Spain at any price, but it sounds like a good place to finish up.

Frank Maxwell came in from his ranch Wednesday and said that the big storm, while as bad at his ranches 50 miles north of here was as heavy as at other places, he experienced no less of sheep whatever. He was in good spirits and said the coming season would be one of the best for years.

M. U. Finley held an all-night court about five miles south of here Tuesday night. His car became mired and caused him to put in a lone vigil until daylight. He read all papers on hand, sang songs, smoked, whistled and made merry with himself in order to keep up his courage until a friendly car arrived and pulled him out.

Hiram Garrard, in listening to the rejoicing of our stockmen, said, "Well folks, its this way, nothin' good will come out of it; the cattle are all wet, threatened with foot-rot, the sheep are out of sorts, and the dry land farms are all warped. What's this part of the country gonna come to?"

Teachers' Association

The following resolutions were adopted by the Lincoln County Teachers' Convention, at Carrizozo, N. M., March 27, 1925.

Resolved: That we, the teachers of Lincoln County, are exceedingly grateful to those good people who so willingly offered their homes to the convention, although not needed.

That we desire to express our thanks to the Carrizozo School Board for the use of the High School building, and the M. E. Church Board for the use of the Church.

That we wish to thank Mrs. Maude L. Blaney, our president, for the excellent manner in which she has conducted this Convention.

Be it further resolved: That we express our sincere thanks for the excellent musical numbers.

That we take this opportunity to show our appreciation of the worthy addresses given by Dr. Bowden, Mr. Nannings, Pres. Kent, Mr. Rockey, Rev. Stanley and other speakers.

Resolved: That we wish to take this means of thanking the Carrizozo Outlook for the liberal announcements of our program.

That regardless of the snow and small attendance, the meeting was a great success in quality, if not in quantity.

That a copy of these Resolutions be printed in the Carrizozo Outlook and the New Mexico Journal of Education.

Resolutions Committee, Signed, Neda May Igo, Myrtle Dakin, Mrs. S. H. Nickles.

FARM MOTORS IN ACTUAL FARM USE

Tests by General Electric Engineers Reveal Interesting Benefits From Electricity.

In order to obtain data in regard to the flexibility of motors in respect to their adaptability for operating farm tools already in use on the farm and now driven by tractors or small gas engines, General Electric engineers at Schenectady, in conjunction with representatives of the Adirondack Light and Power Company, made arrangements last year with several farmers near Schenectady, in New York state, to drive various farm machines with motors. Following is a brief summary of what was done last summer and fall.

The first test on grinding feed was made on the farm of Godfrey Laneker, near Ft. Plain, N. Y. A five horse power portable farm motor was belted to a Stover mill used for grinding oats. This test, and another conducted later, demonstrated that the portable motor is ideal for feed grinding, which is usually an intermittent operation on the farm, only a few minutes being required to connect the drive.

At the George Nellis farm, St. Johnsville, N. Y., tests were made of hatching hay, using a three horsepower motor employed on the farm for driving the vacuum pump of the milking machine. This motor was belted through a jack shaft to a Farrell hoist. With the motor drive a two horse load of hay weighing one and one-half tons was unloaded in six minutes, and there was the added advantage that all operations were controlled by the man on the load.

On a farm near Charlton, N. Y., where wood, a saw and electric service were all available, the five horsepower portable farm motor was connected to the saw. The test indicated that to give the best results a circular saw should have a small flywheel to assist when the saw is cutting stacks of very hard wood and tough knots.

At the Barowick Dairy Farm, about two miles from Schenectady, a fifteen horsepower portable farm motor was used for driving a threshing machine for threshing oats. The motor proved to be superior to the gasoline tractor which was usually employed for this drive, in that the speed did not fall off when the bundles of oats were first thrown into the machine. The machine would, therefore, be fed faster, and because of the steadier speed the blower carried away the straw to the stack and did not clog, whereas clogging sometimes occurs with gasoline engine drive when the speed falls off. The constant speed also increased the number of bushels that could be threshed per day at a ratio of about 1,400 bushels per ten hour day, motor drive, to 300 bushels per ten hour day, gasoline engine drive.

The fifteen horsepower portable farm motor was used at the same farm for hatching the silo and was connected to a Missouri chaffage cutter. In one day cutting the superiority of motor drive was further proved by the fact that speed was kept up to normal when heavy overloads, caused by the bundles of corn when they first entered the machine, came on, and freedom from clogging in the pipe through which the chaffage was delivered to the silo.

In mowing the fifteen horsepower portable motor from the threshing machine to the chaffage cutter over the uneven hilly road way considerable oil was spilled out of the compressor, and for this reason an automatic compressor, which requires no oil, was substituted.

During the year a number of five horsepower portable farm motors have been built and changes designed to improve the unit have been made. The principal change was the substitution of a chain drive from the motor to the pulley shaft for the belt and belt attachment on the motor, thus eliminating the labor. This effected a saving in no load losses. The part with which this motor may be altered from one location to another and its adaptability to driving many farm machines which are used for only a short time each year should make it a most useful and popular unit to the farmer.

Glencoe Woman's Club

The Glencoe Woman's Club met at the home of Mrs. D. N. Bonnell Saturday, March 20th. A program on food conservation was given, followed by a lunch shower for Mrs. Ralph Bonnell, Glencoe's most recent bride. Refreshments were served by the hostess, assisted by her daughter, little Miss Mary Bonnell.

Remember the date—April 17. Remember the picture, "The Keeper of the Bee."

Remember the program given by Lincoln county's best talent, which is worth the price.

Remember the picture is good for both young and old.

Remember to come and bring the family.

Prices 25 and 50 cents. Given under the auspices of the Carrizozo Women's Club.

"How's politics this year?" Inquired a traveling man from Art Holland. "Dull as black water," came the answer. "A good paying job like Constable or City Police Inspector seems to be a-heap."

The dance at Fort Stanton will be held tomorrow night regardless of rumors to the contrary. Lump's "Night Owl." Oh, Day!
