

LOOT! ELMO SCOTT WATSON

Captain Worley's Short Career The career of Captain Worley as a pirate was a short but extremely busy one.

There they seized a shallop, plundered it and returned to their own small boat in which they sailed back down the river and took a sloop belonging to a mulatto named Black Robbin.

By this time the news of their exploits had spread all along the coast and the government was roused to action.

Upon seeing this the citizens of Jamestown thought that a fleet of three pirate ships had come to loot the town and they began hurried preparation to defend it.

Wednesday evening at the parsonage of the Methodist Church, Rev. Thos. V. Ludlow united in marriage, Edward Abeyta of Capitan and Mrs. Lucille Vega of Carrizozo.

The bride is an estimable lady and her friends in and around Carrizozo, are many. The groom is an employee of the Tittsworth Co., Inc., of Capitan, where beginning with the new year, the newlyweds will make their home.

Attend the Big Dance at Corona tomorrow night, Nov. 27. New Law Covering Cattle Shipments The Live Stock Sanitary Board of Texas has passed a regulation, that in addition to the customary health certificate now required, New Mexico cattle offered for shipment to Texas points must be accompanied by affidavits from owners setting forth that the cattle branded, (give brands) and offered for shipment to Texas, have not been Successful deer hunters among the railroad employes, were: Engineer Si Ramsdale, firemen Frank Abel, Bryan Cazier, Earl Harkey, Ira Greer, Billy Norman, stationery fireman Elbert Collier, as far as we have heard Others were lucky, but their names have not been turned in.

Conductor R. R. Sale was called to Chicago the latter part of last week by a message telling of the death of his father. Mr. Sale left on receipt of the sad news, to attend the funeral.

The apple and cabbage shipments from Capitan are about over. We had a large crop of both this year and hope to have a greater one next year. With the close of the perishable shipments, the shipment of cattle began. About 400 head were shipped this week, from Capitan and this point. Some went to Amarillo, while others went to Kansas City.

The new 63-hour Golden State Limited passenger between Los Angeles and Chicago is being operated successfully on the Southern Pacific. This new fast train affords a great benefit to the traveling public of the southwest and is due to the untiring efforts of the railroad and its employes.

At the Safety First meeting held in El Paso on Nov. 18, trainmaster B. H. Horton and conductor S. G. Allen attended from Carrizozo.

Brakeman R. Whitlock is relieving yardmaster Snyder, while the latter is on his vacation.

The "No ketch 'em" society of railroad deer hunters held a meeting after the season was over and after due deliberation, adopted as its password, "Prevarication."

Mrs. Jeanette Cazier, wife of fireman Bryan Cazier, made a donation of magazines at the Outlook office Wednesday, for the patients at the Fort Stanton Marine Hospital. On behalf of the patients, this office wishes to thank Mrs. Cazier for her donation.

Attention is called to the fact that it is Texas that requires the protection and that shipments to other states and to market, are not effected by this regulation, and, that if this regulation is not complied with, Texas may refuse the shipments and even refuse to accept any cattle from New Mexico.

This office gratefully acknowledges the receipt of choice venison from John Harkey, Si Ramsdale, Frank Abel and a choice roast of bear meat from T. G. James.

Governor-Elect R. C. Dillon and family

The above picture was taken at the home of Governor-Elect R. C. Dillon, at Encino, N. M., shortly after the election and this paper is using the same through the courtesy of the Albuquerque Journal. The picture, which speaks louder than words, portrays the home life of our coming Executive. He is in every sense, a home man believing as he does, that home life is the foundation of all good and pure society.

WOMAN'S CLUB NOTES

The November regular meeting of the Carrizozo Woman's Club was held at Fort Stanton, Nov. 20. The Glencoe Woman's Club was the guest of the Carrizozo club, making the total of seventy-five ladies present.

The regular business was attended to. The Community Christmas tree will be held at the Community Hall in the evening of December 17. The following committee was appointed to look after donations and arrangements: Mrs. Sam Kelsey, chairman, community service; Mesdames T. A. Spencer, S. H. Nickles, Zoe Glassmire and Ed Williams. Mrs. Albert Ziegler, music chairman, will have charge of the program.

A report of the rummage sale and dance given by the Americanization Department Chairman, Mrs. J. E. Farley, was as follows: Receipts of sale $50.00, Dance $70. Total $120. Donated to Community Hall $18, paid musicians $34. Balance in club treasury $67.50.

The club adjourned to the Amusement Hall where the following program was given under the Dramatic Art Department chairman, Miss Lois Snyder, which was enjoyed by members and visitors:

HOWE ABOUT--

By ED. HOWE

(Copyright by The Bell Syndicate, Inc.)

I know a smart man who won five thousand dollars at a racing meet. The women looked at me as though they were thinking: "Why aren't you smart and able to make money like that?" The next time I heard of the man, he had lost seven thousand dollars on horse racing; his success in the first instance led him to the disaster in the second. Every week day a man may make money on the board of trade, if he has sufficient judgment. But men are notoriously lacking in judgment, and the board of trade ruins more men now than John Barleycorn did before he went to jail. A good deal may be said for conservatism.

Every man pretends to sophistication; every woman to innocence. Floating Paragraph.

When old men write their memoirs I find I am much like them; but when young men talk, I find I am inferior.

Lies are such foolish, ineffective things I wonder men ever learned to tell them. If a traveler appears at your door on a dark, rainy night, and inquires the way to a town you are familiar with, why deceive him? He is tired and hungry; so are the horses he drives. Why should you send him west when the direction he should travel is east. Telling a lie in such a case does the liar no good, and another is harmed. Is there ever better excuse for telling a lie?

Women abuse men as unfairly as Communists abuse the rich. And the women and Communists are right in a way; they have grievances. And the men and the rich have a right to defend themselves; they, too, have grievances, and problems that must be adjusted. There can be no end to the quarreling that goes on, so make the best of it.

It is related in one of the papers that George Cohan regularly over-works helps 35 people who have been unfortunate. The help is in good advice, but in money. Mr. Cohan denies the story. Is there a man on the face of the earth who would do as commendable a thing as this, and deny it?

It isn't the world that is going to the devil; it's the people. Probably, you never saw a man a hundred years old. The world has already existed millions of years, and hasn't reached middle age.

The ills in public affairs of which we complain are results of bad acts of these complaining.

It is mercy, not justice, you need

New Mexico Grand Lodge

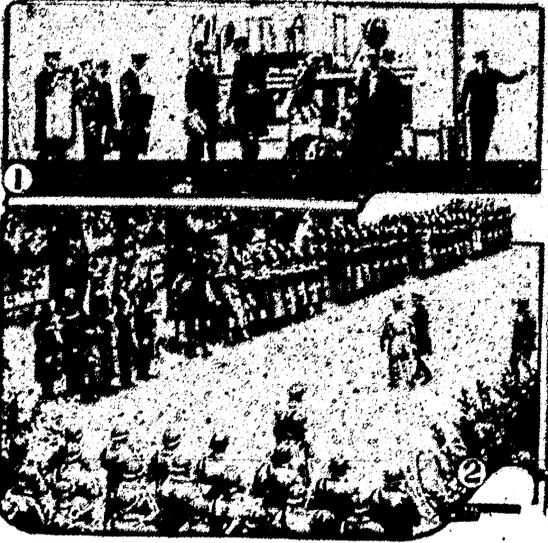

Lecturer Here

John J. Kelly, Grand Lecturer for the New Mexico Grand Lodge A. F. & A. M., came in last Saturday and remained over until Wednesday, being daily and nightly in attendance at Masonic Hall for the purpose of giving Masonic instruction to the craft of Carrizozo Lodge No. 41 A. F. & A. M.

Brother Kelly has made yearly visits to lodges over the state in his present position for the past 17 years, in keeping with Masonic custom and during his visits all members may avail themselves of the opportunity to become more proficient in Masonic lore under his teachings. He left Wednesday evening for Clovis, and from thence to Albuquerque. His visit here was a pleasure to the Master and profitable to the craft.

Knew their "Onions"

Mrs. Lon Atkinson, daughter, Mrs. Wm. Bagley, brother, Adolph Sultemeier and Mrs. Jesse Atkinson, were here from Corona Tuesday. On their return trip, Mrs. Jesse Atkinson drove a late model Chevrolet Coupe which she purchased at the City Garage. This is the second sale Mr. Reil has made this week, the other being a Roadster, purchased by Frank Maxwell.

Pure-Bred Sires Grade Up Herds

Increasing Interest Shown in Many Localities in Improving Stock.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.) An increasing sentiment toward the breeding of improved live stock is apparent from frequent reports and inquiries received by the United States Department of Agriculture. These deal particularly with methods by which some localities are introducing pure-bred sires and rapidly grading up their herds and flocks. The department, acting as a clearing house for such information, is furnishing local officials and stockmen with methods, posters, and educational material. Colorado county, Texas, is engaged in an energetic drive for better cattle. The Texas Hereford association and progressive cattlemen are co-operating in the work, the time being considered ripe for the introduction of more good pure-bred bulls on the range. Plans in North Carolina. Roman county, N. C., is planning rapid improvement of all its live stock and has as its first goal the enlistment of 100 or more live stock owners who will pledge themselves to use pure-bred sires exclusively. Union county, Ky., which has 100 per cent pure-bred bulls, is now directing its efforts toward the banishment of scrub and grade sires of other kinds. So far as known all boars, stallions, and jacks also are pure bred. A recent field day attended by a representative of the Department of Agriculture showed that public interest in improved domestic animals is already resulting in an improved high quality of young stock, especially beef calves. In Campbell county, Ky., more than ninety dairymen are using pure-bred bulls exclusively. Local bank deposits have been so satisfactory that bankers in the locality are actively supporting the better live-stock efforts. Improvement in Connecticut. New Haven county, Conn., is also rapidly improving its live stock, among which poultry are specially prominent. A total of 747 persons are using pure-bred sires for the larger animals and standard-bred roosters for improving their poultry flock. Numerous other localities are similarly interested. According to records of the Department of Agriculture, in the last few years 43 counties in the United States have attained the distinction of having 100 or more live stock owners that are using pure-bred sires exclusively and have adopted breeding methods leading to still further improvement.

Farmers Are Given Old Fertility Test

Pennsylvania Plots Show Results of Treatment.

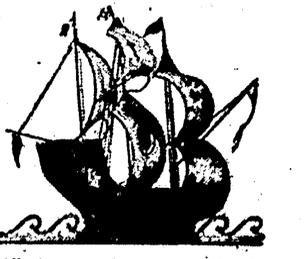

"The fertilizer experiments at the Pennsylvania State college were started in 1881 and have been in progress ever since," Prof. F. D. Gardner, head of the agronomy department, told the Crop Improvement association at the Maryland Farm Bureau Federation meeting held recently. "And it is now possible to draw some rather definite conclusions as to what may be expected from long-time fertilizer treatment. When applied at the rate of six tons per acre on these plots manure has been worth $3.85 per ton, but at the rate of 10 tons has been worth only $2.72 per ton, showing that the most profitable use of manure is to spread the limited amount over a larger acreage rather than applying it more heavily on a smaller acreage." In the light of more than 40 years' results from these oldest of all fertility experiments in the United States, Professor Gardner draws the conclusions that complete fertilizers have maintained crop yields approximately as well as manure and just as economically if cost of the manure is taken as $1.87 per ton. His recommendation to farmers is to use manure and commercial fertilizer, according to the soil needs, and practice a good rotation. He enumerates the definite practices that farmers of his state could profitably follow on the basis of the Pennsylvania experiments: For corn, six tons of manure supplemented with acid phosphate. For oats, on depleted soils, 200 pounds of acid phosphate. For wheat, complete fertilizer, 400 to 500 pounds per acre. For clover and timothy hay, nothing. For timothy, topdressing with nitrate of soda. Sulfuric lime in some form to grow good clover.

Jade Trees Flourish

From old and cultured China came the little "jade tree" which is so much admired everywhere. It has been imitated in many ways and has quaint, stiff flowers, fashionable for decorative purposes. These are made in several ways: some of translucent shells, tinted in colors, others of ordinary fabric flowers dipped in clear shellac, and others of crepe paper, heavily painted with sealing wax paint, as in the tree pictured. Thread wire is used to support the edges of the petals and leaves and heavier wire wound with strips of paper for the stems. A pot or jardiniere holds the tree, which makes a lovely gift.

Everybody Wants One

All at once and everywhere the fancies of men and women are captivated by little replicas of gallant ships that sailed the seas some centuries ago. They find themselves, made in many different ways, proudly displayed in living rooms, libraries and halls. Here is a "radio ship" bearing an electric light in its semitransparent hull, but needs not even this cargo to make it a treasured Christmas gift. These ships are being made of handkerchief linen stretched over wire frames (like a lamp shade).

Two Gift Suggestions

Think not that canny ladies with bobbed hair forego the wearing of pretty bandeau and breakfast caps. Therefore the picture discloses two suggestions for Christmas gifts that will please—one a cap of net, lace, ribbon and flowers, and the other a bandeau of the same.

Meant to Be Useful

There are a number of things that this pretty lady can do besides merely being pretty, and therefore she presents herself as a pleasing Christmas gift for other dainty ladies. A little doll torso, mounted on a wire frame, is dressed up in panned skirt and supple bodice, like a colonial belle. Her dress may be of crisp silk or of fine crepe paper and she wears a cluster of little flowers on her corsage, and a band of ribbon about her hair. Sometimes she shades an electric light, and sometimes conceals a telephone, or she may cover a bottle of toilet water.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Coolidge Address in Kansas City Chief Event of Armistice Day.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD. FACING the east and standing in silence, all America paid tribute at 11 o'clock on Armistice day, to the memory of our World war dead the 77,000 young men who gave up their lives in France or in the camps in this country. Eleven thousand posts of the American Legion participated in fitting ceremonies, and the American people generally joined in the solemn observation of the occasion. The remainder of the day was marked by celebrations patriotic and joyful. Chief feature of the Armistice day doings was the dedication of the state Liberty Memorial in Kansas City, chief because the speaker of the day there was President Coolidge. Five years before he was there, as vice president, to lay the cornerstone. Last week he returned, accompanied by Mrs. Coolidge, Everett Sanders his secretary, and Secretary of War Dwight F. Davis, who, as the Missouri member of the cabinet, did the honors for his state at the exercises. The valedictory in Kansas City Thursday morning and after the dedication of the memorial the President and his party left in the afternoon for the return trip to Washington. In the course of his address the President took occasion to discuss the matter of American entry into the World war, and he served notice on the other nations that he would not ask the senate to modify its reservations. To those who pretend to despise Americans as a nation of dollar-chasers, newly rich and without regard, he retorted that, even if this were true, there would be "more hope for the progress of true ideals in the modern world even from a nation newly rich than there is from a nation of chronically poor. Honest poverty is one thing, but lack of industry and character is quite another." Mr. Coolidge asserted that as a nation we not only did not profit from the war, but we suffered immense losses. He spoke for adequate preparation for the sake of protection without entering into competition with others in the maintenance of armed forces; and he reiterated his belief that wealth and all other material resources should be conscripted in time of war.

QUEEN MAINE of Rumants spent the weekend in Chicago, where she was fittingly entertained by both the city officials and society, and where there was the usual American exhibition of social pushing and of that inverted snobbery that advertises its disrespect for royalty and all that pertains to it. On the way east from the Pacific coast the squabbles among those who accompanied the queen continued, with the result that Lolo Puller, Samuel Hill and some others quit the party, leaving Col. J. H. Carroll, manager of the tour, and Maj. Stanley Washburn, the queen's personal aide, seemingly in supreme control. Marie took no sides in the controversies but intimated that there must be peace and harmony on the rest of the tour. It was announced that while the queen was resting in Washington for four days after the conclusion of the trip, Prince Nicolas and Princess Ileana would travel back to Chicago on a special train to witness the Army-Navy football game on November 27.

NOT the least interesting news of the week was the announcement that Princeton university had severed athletic relations with Harvard, thus breaking up the "Big Three" combination that has existed, with some interruptions, for many years. Princeton's board of athletic control decided unanimously that "it is at present impossible to expect in athletic competition with Harvard that spirit of cordial good will between the undergraduates of the two universities which should characterize college sports." Harvard Lampton has been making nasty attacks on Princeton, for which President Lowell of Harvard apologized to President Hibben of Princeton, and the Harvard Critic aggravated the ill-feeling by its editorials. But the real reason for Princeton's action was the announcement of Harvard's proposed new policy in football matters, under which Harvard would have only one fixed game on its schedule each year—the contest with Yale. It would play Princeton some years, but not others, and Princeton resented this casual treatment. Princetonians have the satisfaction of having licked Harvard in the last game. Outside of Harvard men, Princeton will have the backing of the country generally in the controversy.

SUPPLEMENTING a statement from the White House, Secretary of the Treasury Mellon made an official announcement of the administration's plan for income tax reductions, showing it is not proposed to compute the flat percentage cut on 1926 tax payments on last year's income. As made known by Mr. Mellon, the program is to propose legislation authorizing a flat reduction amounting to probably 12 1/2 per cent on individual and corporation income taxes to be reported in March, 1927, on 1926 earnings. The taxpayer will compute his tax at the rates provided by the present law. He then will be permitted to reduce his actual payment by the percentage agreed upon. If he pays his entire tax at the time of filing the return, he will deduct 12 1/2 per cent from the total. If he pays in four installments, he will deduct 25 per cent from his March payment and also 25 per cent from his June payment. His September and December payments will not be subject to any cut. The proposed 12 1/2 per cent cut, it was estimated by Secretary Mellon, would mean a loss of approximately $250,000,000, all of which would be drawn from the prospective surplus of the fiscal year 1927, which ends on July 1, next.

VINCENT MASSEY has been appointed Canada's first minister to Washington by an order in council passed by the dominion cabinet. Mr. Massey is in England with Premier MacKenzie King attending the imperial conference. The question now naturally arises whether the United States shall appoint a minister to Ottawa. Some of the leading Canadian newspapers think no other course is open for Washington, and it is favored by some journals in states along the border. It may be the matter will be solved by the enlarging of the powers of the United States consul general in Ottawa.

ONE more the United States protests to Mexico against the oil and land laws of that country. The latest in a long succession of notes on this subject was handed to the Mexican foreign office by Charge d'Affaires Schoenfeld, and again was stressed the necessity for fundamental modifications in these two laws to eliminate from them all possibility of their retroactive application in violation of agreements entered into between the two governments in 1923. Late reports indicate that General Obregon is not having an easy time carrying out his plan to destroy the Yaqui Indians as a people and scatter them through the country. The Yaquis are fighting with all their old-time desperation, have gathered strong forces and at last advice are threatening the towns of Mazatlan and Las Pastras, both of which have considerable American interests. The Cuzcuh Indians, who have been peaceful for years, are showing signs of going on the warpath with the Yaquis.

FORMER Secretary of the Interior Albert B. Fall and Edward L. Doherty, oil magnate, appeared before the District of Columbia Supreme court and pleaded not guilty to charges of conspiracy to defraud the government in the naval oil reserve leases. The trial was set for November 22 and counsel for the defendants said they will be ready to proceed with the case at that time. Both Fall and Doherty are named with E. L. Doherty, Jr., in another indictment which charges bribery in connection with young Doherty's delivery of $100,000 in "black satchel" to Fall during the execution of the Elk Hills reserve leases.

AT THE bidding of Premier Mussolini, the Italian chamber of deputies expelled 120 members of the so-called Aventine opposition on the ground that they had absented themselves ever since the protest "strike" resulting from the murder of Matteotti. Socialist deputy. The ousted members lost their parliamentary immunity and some of them were arrested, but most of them had taken the precaution of leaving Rome. The chamber also passed the law providing the death penalty for attempts on the life of Mussolini or the royal family. The dare took to himself another cabinet job—that of the minister of the interior—and issued orders for a systematic application of all laws for the protection of public order. The premier has apologized amply to France for the attacks on French consulates, and it seems likely he also will be able to calm the indignation of the French brought on by the operations of Ricciotti Garibaldi as a Fascist agent in France. The Paris police are still trying to find out just what was Garibaldi's connection with the Catalan uprising which was quipped by the Perpignan arrests.

GENERAL held its elections last week and the Republicans were victorious, winning about 65 per cent of the votes and 160 of the 280 seats in parliament. Premier Condylis and his government resigned and President Condouriotis called on Kafandaris to form a new cabinet. It was hoped that former Premier Venizelos would return and accept the ministry of foreign affairs.

WITH the simple declaration that light travels at the rate of 299,796 kilometers per second, made before the National Academy of Science in Philadelphia, Dr. Albert A. Michelson of the University of Chicago announced the practical completion of the research that has occupied most of his time for forty years. The old rate of light travel, as used in close scientific research and given in all the textbooks, had been established at 299,800 kilometers per second, or 64 kilometers more than that determined by Doctor Michelson. Astronomers and physicists will now have to overhaul and reshape their calculations. The Chicago scientist's latest results were worked out in California by flashing a beam of light from Mount Wilson to Mount San Antonio and back again, a distance of 44 miles. This work was carried on all summer.

HUNDREDS of natives were drowned and great property damage was done by a typhoon that swept over a section of the island of Luzon in the Philippines. Many villages were wiped out and the inhabitants blown into the sea to perish. It was estimated that the storm destroyed 5 per cent of the world's coconut crop. The town of La Plata, Md., was struck by a tornado that wrecked a schoolhouse and some houses and killed about a score of persons, fourteen of whom were school children.

AMONG the deaths recorded during the week was that of James K. Hackett, one of America's best actors, in Paris. He had spent much of his time of late in France and was exceedingly popular in that country. C. G. Sholes, who as a youth was Sherman's personal telegraph operator on the march to the sea, passed away in Chicago. Rev. D. D. Forsyth, secretary of the Methodist board of missions, died in a Chicago hospital.

FOLLOWING the example of the governments of Italy and Russia, Marshal Pilsudski, dictator of Poland, caused to be issued a decree which threatens with fines and prison sentences ranging from three days to three months whoever spreads wrong information about government action or government members or military movements. If reports are spread by the newspapers, they will be suppressed and the owners, as well as the men responsible for the news, will be fined or jailed. The important point is that the Polish government reserves unto itself the right to interpret this law as it pleases, therefore everybody in Poland is living in the uncertainty of the days of despotism.

Farm Hint

- Before painting a floor fill the cracks with putty.
Plan your garden this fall. It will save time next spring.
Fall plowing calls for plenty of power—don't overlook your horses or tractor.
Corn ears selected for seed should be properly dried out without loss of time.
Scrubby trees in the woodlot might well be cut for fuel, thus at the same time making room for the young, valuable timber.
Broken and split heads of cabbage won't keep well in storage. Better turn them into sauerkraut and add vitamins to many a meal.

Origin of Federal Aid for Road Construction

Federal aid for highways originated in wartime, though not a war measure primarily, being established nine years ago. The road bureau of the Department of Agriculture reports in these nine years over 52,000 miles of state highway completed with federal aid. That the construction of surfaced roads by federal and state co-operation is going strong, says the Topeka Capital, appears from the fact that 10,623 miles were completed in the last year, as compared with an average of but 6,000 since federal aid became a policy. Last year's completed mileage, to June 30, 1926, cost $226,000,000 in round figures, or at the rate of $21,310 a mile on the average. A little over $100,000,000 of this sum came from the federal treasury, the remainder from the states. It is rather surprising to note that the South was well up in this work, Texas leading and Alabama not far behind. The largest mileage completed during the year, after Texas, was in South Dakota. This has nothing to do with new projects, but refers to contracts completed during the year.

Cropping Has Effect on Wheat Protein Content

In these days when wheat with high protein content is selling at a premium on the markets farmers will strive to produce such wheat. A study of the effect of cropping systems on quality of wheat at the Kansas Agricultural college showed that certain crop rotations produced wheat of very high protein content. Experiments in crop rotation covering a period of ten years were made in a rotation plan of four years of alfalfa, one year corn and two years wheat, alternating the corn and wheat as to the one or two year period, produced an average protein content of 13.3 per cent from the period 1916 to 1924. A rotation plan carried on at the same time and under the same conditions, but substituting bromegrass for alfalfa, produced wheat of only 12.1 per cent protein. A plot planted to wheat continuously resulted in a relatively high protein content, 14.2 average for the period. This is accounted for by the fact that land plowed early has sufficient time for nitrate accumulation.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

THE SQUIRREL'S RESCUE

It was half snowing and half raining...

One of the Fairies. Then the fairies would come from all around...

The Queen of the Fairies would pretend that she was to have the castle taken for her...

And she would begin her reign with no prisoners.

So all the fairies who were her followers helped her to destroy all the turrets and towers of iceles.

Then the castle could come down and the prisoners get away without being seen.

Well, they got plenty of snowballs ready first and hit at the iceles with the snowballs.

The biggest and strongest iceles which wouldn't come down with just the snowballs they would pull down.

And, oh, such fun and laughing as they always do have over this game!

The day I'm telling you about it did freeze, and they did commence their game of pulling down the castle.

The playground they chose was in a quarry where there were plenty of iceles attached to the rocks.

But behind an icele what do you suppose they found?

A little gray squirrel had jumped to a rock cliff where he had seen some nuts stowed away.

After eating some of the nuts he had evidently felt so tired and sleepy that he had fallen asleep...

So when the icele was hit by a snowball and still did not fall down one of the fairies went up and pulled it down.

You know that fairies have a great deal of strength...

He was so grateful to the fairies for saving his life that he invited them to the squirrel's next nut party.

What is Wrong With CARRIZOZO? (By S. H. N.)

We, all of us, have at some time attempted to answer this question: What has been our answer? Everybody agrees that Carrizozo is dead, absolutely dead; but is it? Personally, I think it is ourselves who are dead and not Carrizozo.

What we need is a good waking up. Show me a locality more bountifully supplied with natural resources anywhere if you can. Frankly, I don't believe you can do so.

You ask: "What in the name of heaven do we have besides wind, sand-storms, tumbleweeds and taxes?" I say we have everything that is necessary to make this one, one of the most thriving little communities in the southwest, and it is up to us to get busy, wake up and bring about this condition.

Here is what we have; let us enumerate everything: We have coal, lots of it; Lincoln County is rich in coal. Whether this coal will coke or not, I am not in a position to state, but we have the coal, and plenty of it, which means power. Power to run machinery of all kinds. We also have iron, and we have all the facilities for working it right here. Coal, electric power and man power.

New Mexico has some fine copper mines, and it is but a short haul from these mines to Carrizozo. Then, we ship lots of wool that could be manufactured right here at home into cloth, yarn, and other articles too numerous to mention. Native wool, coal and everything; in fact we have it all but the manufacturing machinery.

Next we have plenty of water for irrigation. There is a canyon in the nearby mountains that does not run with water at some time of the year. What we need is to conserve this water and use it instead of letting it go to waste. Our best bet along that line is Nogal Canyon. Of course there is Venado Gap, Indian Canyon, Tortolita Canyon and many others, but Nogal Canyon is the largest and carries the most water yearly. The waters from Tortolita and Indian canyons could very easily be ditched into Nogal canyon. A dam could be built just below the town of Nogal that would convert the entire town of Nogal into an immense lake. Or it could be dammed higher up. There is a natural dam site both below Nogal and in the canyon above.

The Southern Pacific Railroad Company might help us along that line, and it would be very much to their interest in a business way to do so.

They own the waters of both branches of the Rio Bonito; also Eagle Creek, and by putting in a larger pipe-line, or cement-lined ditches in addition to their present pipe-line, carry all the these streams to the lake on the Mesa, and turn all the overflow into Nogal Canyon. This would give us water, and plenty of it to irrigate the greater part of the Carrizozo Flats.

C. D. MAYER

Here is another chance for some cheap power. As the water is dumped into the dam it could be run through a turbine or over a water wheel and this would give power to run a dynamo and furnish us with electricity at no cost whatever.

Lots of irrigation can be done from wells also, as is being done right now at both Deming and Portales. There is water and plenty of it under all but most of this land in these flats. The depth of course varies, but water can be found under most all of it in sufficient quantities to make irrigation in that way practicable.

That takes us back to our coal and electric problem again. We have the electric plant and coal mines right together at White Oaks. The coal does not have to be hauled anywhere, but is mined right at the power plant. This means cheap power, and cheap power makes it possible to pump all of our water for irrigation purposes with electric motors. This is much cheaper and better in every way than having to use gasoline engines, as is the case both at Portales and Deming, yet the farmers at both of these places are making money—so why can't we? We have cheaper power by using electricity—plenty of water under us and in the mountains—and good soil.

If you will but go and look at the garden of E. M. Brickley in Carrizozo you may see what can be done with water, plus intelligent farming methods. Then go down to L. A. McCall's ranch, or farm if you like, and see the watermelons, tomatoes, corn, peanuts, etc., he has raised by windmill irrigation. Then take a trip out to the ranch owned by Dr. Carl E. Freeman and see what they have done. Dr. Freeman raised the finest peaches this year that can be seen anywhere, and they always have a real nice garden. When people raise fruit and gardens like these by just working at it at odd times, what could a person do who actually made it a business?

As it is, it takes from ten to thirty acres of land to 'carry' a cow for a year. Pardon us; we mean some years—for she generally starves to death, and if she doesn't starve to death, her unfortunate owner goes broke buying feed for her—so why not try something else? Some folks say "this is a cow country!"

We say, is it? We are certainly glad to know it! We might add that we have failed so far to find any of the wealthy cattle-men that such a country would naturally produce. Of course, we may find one yet—we have been looking for them sixteen years.

So far, our experience has been that if a man will only fool with stock long enough he will go broke.

People who buy land for farming purposes in irrigated sections, pay anywhere from $150 to $500 per acre. Then they will have to pay from $75 to $100 to get it in shape to irrigate, then so much per year for water—and so much for keeping up ditches. Last, but not by any means least, they have a continued fight with Johnson grass in addition to their other troubles.

If a person will spend, about half that money and work on each acre of these flats, fixing wells and pump outfits, he can raise just as good crops here as anywhere.

We can raise alfalfa, melons, truck gardens, fruit, poultry, dairy products, honey, and other things too numerous to mention. All this soil needs is intelligent cultivation.

One man cannot handle 320 acres of land or even 160 acres, but he can handle a few acres and do well with such amount. This, of course, would call for co-operative marketing of everything that is raised.

Look at the Carrizozo Flats as they now are; then picture it in your mind's eye as it would look covered with alfalfa, truck gardens, poultry and dairy farms, orchards, etc., then to realize that all of this is actually possible; it can be done easily.

We need a leader to start the ball rolling.—WHO IS HE? Let us locate him, then let our Chamber of Commerce and all of us, get behind him, go the limit; and then come.—Let's go!

The Girl in the Mirror

STORY FROM THE START

Laurie Devon, successful playwright, but somewhat inclined to wildness, attends the wedding of his sister, Barbara, to whom he has been left the great Devon fortune. Laurie had been a gay young chap, but for the last year he has been losing the mark, through the efforts of Barbara. Laurie, who is wealthy, refuses to settle down to work, announcing his intention of resting and seeking adventure. From his window in New York he observes the reflection of a beautiful girl in a mirror in the residence opposite.

As they looked, she suddenly stirred and moved backward, as if occultly warned of their survey. They saw her close the window, and, drawing a chair close to it, sit down and stare out through the pane, still with that intent, impersonal expression. Bangs strolled back to the dressing case and resumed his interrupted toilet. Laurie, fumbling vaguely with his brushes, kept his eyes on the girl in the mirror. "She's a wonder. Prettiest girl I've ever seen, I think," he reflected aloud. Bangs snorted. "She's probably a peroxide," he said. "Even if she isn't, she can't hold a candle to your sister."

"Oh, Barbara—" Laurie considered the question of Barbara's beauty as if it were new to him. "Bangs is good-looking," he handsomely conceded. "But there's something about this girl that's unusual. Perhaps it's her expression. She doesn't look happy."

"If you want to study some one that isn't happy, look at me," he invited warmly. "If that play of mine isn't out of me pretty soon, I'll have to have an operation."

Laurie made no reply to this pathetic prediction, and Bangs sadly shook his head and concluded his toilet, meditating gloomily the while on the unpleasant idiosyncrasies of every one he knew. To see Devon turn suddenly into a loafer upset all his theories as well as his plans.

Laurie for some reason, dawdled more than usual that morning. It was after eleven before he went to breakfast. An hour earlier Bangs departed alone for their pet restaurant.

The girl in the mirror remained at her window for a long time, and Laurie watched her in growing fascination. It was not until she rose and disappeared that he felt moved to consider so sordid a question as that of food.

He joined Bangs just as that youth was finishing his after-breakfast cigar. Even under his soothing influence, he was in the mood of combated exasperation and depression with which his friends were becoming familiar.

"If we had begun work as soon as we got back to town after your sister's wedding," he told Laurie, "we'd have had two acts ready by now, in the rough."

"No reason why you shouldn't have four acts ready, so far as I can see," murmured Laurie, cheerfully attacking his grape fruit. "All you've got to do is to write 'em."

Bangs' lips set. "Not till I've talked 'em over with you and got your ideas," he declared, positively. "If you'd just let me give you an outline."

Laurie set down his cup. "Do I get my breakfast in peace, or don't I?" he demanded, coldly. "You do, confound you!"

The curtains of his French window were drawn apart, and in the mirror he saw the reflection of the girl as she stood in profile near her own uncurtained window and slowly dressed her hair.

It was wonderful hair, much more wonderful down than up. Laurie stared with pleasure at the red-gold mass that fell down over the girl's white garment. Then, with a little shock, he realized that the white garment was a night-dress. It was evident that the girl thought herself safe from observation and was quietly making her toilet for the morning.

"Well, she should be safe. With a quick jerk, Laurie drew together the heavy curtains that hung at the sides of the long window. Then, smiling a little, he slowly dressed. His thoughts dwelt on the girl. It was odd that she should be literally projected into his life in that unusual fashion. He had never had any such experience before, nor had he heard of one just like it. It was unique and pleasant. It was especially pleasant to have her so young and so charming to look at. He wished he knew her name and something more about her. His thoughts were full of her.

Before he left the room he parted the curtains again to open the window wide, following his usual program. As he did so he glanced into his mirror. He saw her open window, but it was lifeless. Only his own disappointed face confronted him.

CHAPTER III

Laurie Meets Miss Mayo

Laurie thought much that day about the girl in the mirror, and he was again home at eleven that night, to the wonder of Mr. Bangs, who freely expressed his surprise.

"Something pleasant been coming your way?" he tactfully asked. Laurie evaded the question, but he felt that something definitely pleasant had come his way. This something was a new interest, and he had needed a new interest very much. He hoped he would dream of the girl that night. But as he and Bangs unwelcomely consumed a Welsh rabbit before they went to bed, he dreamed instead of something highly unpleasant, and was glad to be awakened by the clear sunlight of a brilliant January day.

After breakfast he strolled across the square into the somber hall of the studio building on its southwest corner. The hall was empty, but he found and rang a bell at the entrance of a dingy elevator shaft. The elevator descended without haste. When it had reached the floor, the colored youth in charge of it inhospitably filled its doorway and regarded the visitor with indifference. This young man was easy to look at, but he was no one he knew.

Laurie handed him a dollar and the youth's expression changed, first to one of surprise, then to the tolerance of a man who is wise and is willing to share his wisdom. The visitor went at once to the point of his visit.

"A young lady lives here," he began. "She is very pretty, and she has reddish hair and brown eyes. She has a studio in one of the upper floors, at the front of the house. What's her name?"

The boy's face showed that he had instantly recognized the description, but he pondered dramatically. "Dat young lady?" he then said. "Dat young lady nuz de Miss Mayo. In Twenty-nine, on de top flo'. She jes' moved in here las' Tuesday."

"Where does she come from, and what does she do?"

"The boy hesitated. What did all this mean? And was he giving up too much for a dollar? Laurie grinned at him understandingly.

"I don't know her," he admitted, "and I don't expect to. I'd like to know something about her—that's all."

The youth nodded. He had the air of accepting an apology. "I reckon she come tum some fur'n place. But I dunno what she do," he reluctantly admitted. "Mebbe she ain't doin' nothin' yit. She's home mos' de time. She don't go out hardly 'tall. Seems like she don't know many folks."

There was a chance that the boy might be all wrong in his inferences, although this chance, Laurie manfully admitted, was slight. He knew the shrewdness of this youth's type, the precocious knowledge of human nature that often accompanies such training and environment as he had had. Probably he suspected even more than he had revealed. Something must be done.

Laurie drew a bill from his pocket. "How soon can you leave the elevator?" he asked.

"'Bout one o'clock."

"All right. Now, here's what I want you to do. Take this money, go over to the Clarence restaurant, and buy a good lunch for that lady. Get some hot chicken or chops, buttered rolls, vegetables, and a bottle of milk. Have them packed nicely in a box. Have them put in some fresh eggs and extra rolls and butter for her breakfast. Deliver the box at her door as if it came from some one outside. Do that and keep the change. Understand?"

"Yah, sah!" The boy's eyes and teeth were shining.

"All right. Go to it. I'll drop in later this afternoon for your report."

Laurie turned and walked away. Even yet the experience did not seem real. It was probably all based on some foolish notion of the youth's; and yet he dared not assume that it was a foolish notion. He had the dramatic's distance for drama anywhere except in its legitimate place, on the stage; but he admitted that sometimes it did occur in life. This might be one of those rare occasions.

Whatever it was, it haunted him. He lunched with Bangs that day, and was so silent that Bangs was moved to comment.

"If you were any one else," he remarked, "I'd almost think you were thinking."

Laurie disclaimed the charge, but his abstraction did not lift. By this time his imagination was hard at work. He pictured the girl in the mirror as stretched on her virginal cot in the final exhaustion of starvation; and the successful effort to keep away from the studio building till four o'clock called for all his will power. Suppose the boy blundered, or wasn't in time. Suppose the girl really had not eaten anything since last Tuesday! These thoughts, and similar ones, obsessed him.

At four he strolled into the studio hall, wearing what he hoped was a detached and casual air. When the elevator appeared, he entered it with the others who were waiting. He looked slowly past the elevator boy as he did so, and that young person showed himself equal to the situation by presenting to this newcomer a stolid ebony profile. But when the lift had reached the top floor and discharged its passengers, the two conspirators lent themselves to the drama of their roles.

"Well?" asked Laurie eagerly. "Did you get it?"

"Yah, sah."

"What happened?"

The boy stopped his descending car midway between two floors. He had no intention of having his scene spoiled. He bulged visibly under the news he had to impart. "I got de stuff you said, and I let it at dat young lady's do'." he began impressively.

got brown eyes dat look right thee you," he interpolated briskly. "Dem she say, 'Sam, who done let dat basket at my do?' I say, 'I done it, miss. It was let in de hall, an' de ca'd got yo' name on it. Ain't you order it?' I say."

"No," she say, 'dis yere basket ain't fo' me. Take it, an' if you can't find out who belong to it, eat dis yere lunch yo'self.' He paused. "I et it," he ended, solemnly.

Laurie's lips twitched under conflicting emotions, but he closed the interview with a fair imitation of indifference.

"Oh, well," he said carelessly, "you must have been mistaken about the whole thing. Evidently Miss Mayo, if that's her name, wasn't as hungry as you were."

The boy nodded and started the car on its downward journey. As his passenger got off on the ground floor, he gave him a new thought to carry away with him.

"She'd bin cryin' dough," he muttered. "Her eyes was all red."

Laurie stopped and regarded him resentfully.

"Confound you!" he said, "what did you tell me that for? I can't do anything about it!"

The boy agreed, hurriedly. "No, sah," he assured him. "You can't. I can't, neither. None of us can't," he added as an afterthought.

Laurie slowly walked away. His thoughts scampered around and around, like squirrels in a cage. The return of the basket, of course, might mean either of two conditions—that the girl was too proud to accept help, or that she was really in no need of it. Laurie had met a few art students. He knew that hungry or not, almost any one of them would cheerfully have taken in that basket and consumed its contents. He had built on that knowledge in providing it. If the girl had taken it in, the fact would have proved nothing. Her refusal to touch it was suspicious. It swung the weight of evidence toward the elevator boy's starvation theory.

Laurie's thoughts returned to that imaginative youth. He saw him consuming the girl's luncheon, and a new suspicion crossed his mind. Perhaps the whole business was a bit of graft. But his intelligence rejected that suggestion. If this had been the explanation, the boy would not have concluded the episode as he had. He had got the strange young man whom he might have "kept him going" for days and made a good income in the process. As it was, there seemed nothing more to do. And yet—and yet—how the deuce could one let the thing drop like that? If the girl was really in straits—

Thus the subconscious argument went on and on. It worried Laurie. He was not used to such violent mental exercise. He dined alone that night and it was well he did so. His lack of appetite would certainly have attracted the attention of Bangs or any other fellow diner, and Bangs would as certainly have commented upon it. Also, he passed a restless night, troubled by vaguely depressing dreams. The girl was in them, but everything was as hopelessly confused as his daytime mental processes had been.

The next morning he deliberately kept away from the mirror until he was fully dressed, but he dressed with a feeling of tenseness and urgency he would have found it difficult to explain. He only knew that today he meant to do something definite, something that would settle once for all the question that filled his mind. But what could he do? That little point was still unsettled. Knock at the girl's door, pretend that it was a blunder, and trust to inspiration to discover in the brief encounter if anything was wrong? Or put money in an envelope and push it under her door? If he did that, she would probably give the money to Sam, as she had given him the food.

The girl in the mirror acts—and speaks.

WEEKLY South-West NEWS ITEMS

Prominent churchmen from all parts of the Southwest attended the annual state convention of the New Mexico Baptist church at Las Cruces.

Emilio D. Tafaya, town marshal of Magdalena, was wounded three times by his wife, from whom he had been separated for a week. Tafaya, in a hospital in Albuquerque, is expected to recover.

A complaint, signed by Regino Gonzalez has been filed in the office of the district attorney at Las Vegas, charging Frederic Jacoby with the murder of Valentin Gonzalez near midnight on Nov. 1 in San Augustin.

Total crop products in the state of New Mexico for the past year totalled $31,527,000 according to estimates released by R. F. Hare, agricultural statistician of the state of New Mexico. Mr. Hare estimated the value of the year's cotton crop at $5,286,680; wheat at $6,155,320; corn at $4,839,200; hay at $4,860,000; beans at a little more than two and a half millions, and oats, barley, rye, apples, peaches, pears, grapes, potatoes and other crops at under $1,000,000 each. The statistician's valuation of live stock sold during the past year placed 375,000 head of cattle at $9,850,000; 300,000 sheep at $3,600,000, and wool and mohair, poultry and eggs and milk products at various figures ranging from two to seven millions. The total was placed at $28,166,000.

According to the latest industrial survey for Arizona released from the office of Quince Record, director of the U. S. Employment Service of the U. S. Department of Labor at Denver, the labor supply and demand are quite well balanced in all lines, except for some shortage of cotton pickers, experienced metal miners and for a small number of competent farm workers and woodsmen. Harvesting of the cotton crop is under way in the Tucson, Yuma and Salt River Valley districts. Harvesting and shipping of the citrus fruit crop in the above named districts are providing employment for several hundred male and female workers. Metal mining continues to show a gradual expansion, particularly of new construction and development work. Work is progressing on the new $750,000 concentration mill at Jerome, where a slight surplus of unskilled metal labor exists due to a heavy influx of miners from northern camps. A scarcity of both skilled and unskilled metal mine labor is noted in the Ajo metal-mining district. Building and general construction continues active in many of the cities and towns. Excepting a slight surplus of carpenters, building and construction labor of all classes reported quite steadily employed. Many industrial plants, particularly those manufacturing construction equipment, are increasingly active. Cotton gins are operating overtime. Manufacturing labor well employed and ample. Lumbering is increasingly active, especially in the Flagstaff and McNary districts; a night shift was recently added at the McNary sawmills. Increased employment noted on highway construction with sufficient labor available in the vicinities of the work. Railroad train service and maintenance employment slightly increased. Sufficient railroad labor reported available to supply immediate demands in all departments. For New Mexico the report states that while seasonal fall harvesting (excepting cotton) is practically finished, released labor is finding employment in general agricultural work, including cotton picking. Hundreds of additional cotton pickers are needed in the cotton districts in southeastern section of state. Industrial plants are reported operating steadily; cotton gins working overtime. Metal mining is gradually expanding. Supply of experienced metal miners is inadequate to meet requirements. Coal mines are increasing operating time and forces. A slight shortage of coal miners is reported. Oil field activities show some increase particularly noted in northwestern and southeastern sections of the state; labor in connection sufficient. Lumbering is increasing in the woods, particularly in the Bernalillo district, where a moderate shortage of woodmen exists. General construction continues quite active in many of the cities and towns. A large sawmill and a large electric light and power plant are under way at Alamogordo. A gas and electric plant is being installed at Bernalillo. Building labor of all classes is reported steadily employed and ample. Highway construction is affording employment to several hundred men. New highway projects soon to commence, include approximately thirty-five miles of surfacing, eight miles of paving, five steel and eight wooden bridges. Railroad train service forces were slightly increased during October.

Proteins, vitamins, and calories without stint were fed members of the Pecos Valley Medical Association at their gathering in Carlsbad, when they were guests of the Carlsbad Chamber of Commerce.

A total of $115,300 will be required to rebuild bridges in Cochise county, Ariz., which were damaged or destroyed during the heavy rainstorms last month.

The forty-second annual convention of the New Mexico Educational Association was held in Santa Fe.

Americans Eat Less Bread

If Americans ate as much bread as they did 25 years ago, more than 25,000,000 additional barrels of flour would be consumed annually, says Capper's Weekly. A food survey indicates more than one-fifth of the flour formerly consumed has been replaced by sugar and other more expensive foods, like milk, meat, fruits, oils, fresh fruits and fresh vegetables. Another reason may be that the finely bolted and bleached flour of the present time does not make near as palatable or as wholesome bread as did the old grist mill's product.

Egyptian's Sleeping Jar
In some of the remote parts of Egypt, there are to be seen small communities where just outside of each house or hut is a huge earthen jar shaped somewhat like a teacup with large outstanding ribs at regular intervals on the outside. Notwithstanding the temperature, the entire family crawls into this jar at night to sleep. It is thought to be necessary to do this to protect themselves from the lizards, snakes and other pests of the kind which would make sleep impossible under the usual conditions. The ribs on the outside of the jar prevent the night crawlers from finding their way into the interior of the jar.

New 'AMERICAN' MODEL TROMBONE
(The Product of painstaking Hand Work.)

For years the Holton Slide Trombone has furnished one of the principal voices of military and concert bands, as well as the great symphony orchestras. The Slide Trombone was the first instrument to find its way into the ballroom orchestra; in fact, "jazz" was invented on the Trombone. For home, church, lodge and school, it fills every requirement.

The range of expression possible with a Slide Trombone is not equalled in any other single instrument. It has the blaring note of the trumpet, the mellow voice of the saxophone, or the Ponderous Tone of the Euphonium, the moaning of the violincello, as the player so desires. Martial Airs or Plaintive Love Songs can be played with equal effectiveness on this unique instrument.
