

Greet Grand Master

In response to the call made in this paper last week and also the cards sent out by secretary Wm. J. Langston, a good crowd of Oddfellows were present to greet Grand Master J. M. Doughty of Tucumcari on his first official visit to the local lodges. The meeting called for this expressed purpose, was presided over by John Harkey, Noble Grand of the local I. O. O. F. and after the Grand Master was introduced by S. W. Kelsey, D. G. M., he made an address in which after reviewing the good work of the order over the state and in the nation, he gave some good and wholesome advice to members which will serve well for future use not only in their work for the order, but in their every-day lives as well. He was greeted with the warmest of applause.

At 8:30, a goodly number of Rebekahs, who had been in waiting at the home of Mrs. R. W. Dozier for the Oddfellows to finish their work, came in a body to greet the Grand Master and were accompanied by a number of friends outside of the order, as the after-meeting contained nothing of a secret nature, consequently, the Grand Master talked to members and visitors as well. After his last address, the Oddfellows carried the long luncheon table from the dining room to the center of the lodge room, laden with refreshments and all partook of the same and a social hour followed. As this was St. Valentine's Day, the decorations which were the handiwork of the Rebekahs, were in keeping with the same. Large red hearts were a gentleman, cut into various parts and mixed up, so that the holder of a part, must find the holder of the part, a lady, who possessed the part which made the heart complete, and after the union of hearts, they coupled off for refreshments. The affair, on the whole, was a pleasant one for visitors as well as members and the Grand Master expressed himself in the highest terms of the reception given him by the local lodges. Out-of-town folks were, Mr. and Mrs. H. K. Hermanson, Mr. and Mrs. S. Hale, Mr. Bergman, Fort Stanton; visitors from our own city, were Mrs. Meda Haley, Mr. and Mrs. Pugh and Mr. Phipps.

Surprised on Wedding Anniversary

Monday night, as attorney and Mrs. H. B. Hamilton had settled down, preparatory to an hour's reading, a shrill alarm rent the night air, followed by ringing of bells, rattling of tin pans and every imaginable noise that usually accompanies the jollifications over late marriage ceremonies were heard in the yard of the Hamilton home.

On investigation, the queer noises were found to come from a host of enthusiastic friends who had invaded the residence for the purpose of celebrating the 25th wedding anniversary of the Hamiltons. The jolly crowd of joy-makers came supplied with refreshments galore, besides cards, etc. They took possession of the residence, saying that "possession is nine points in law." After the spread of delicious refreshments were partaken of, bridge was played until the usual retiring hour, after which, congratulations were repeated and the friendly crowd departed for their homes.

Neighborhood Row Ends With Losers' Appeal

Away out in the northeast part of the county, there is a broad stretch of country which runs for many miles without a town or hardly a sign post, so wild and woolly is the region. Only one place is on the map to save it from absolute desolation. This is a small store and filling station owned by the Johnston Brothers. Lonely and barren as it is, a fight can be raised, if nothing else can. Last Wednesday, Feb. 9, Sheriff Kelsey was notified that a big fight had been pulled off at that place and deputy Pete Johnson was sent there to get particulars and make arrests.

The particulars were as follows: M. J. Turner and Jack Conway, had gone to the store, broke the windows, tore up the store and filling station and engaged in a free-for-all fight with the proprietors. On receipt of this news, sheriff Kelsey hurried to the place and arrested the participants, Turner, Conway and Mrs. Johnston, who strange as it may seem, was one of the principals in the fight. The championship winners in the fight, were brought here and Friday morning, were arraigned before Justice A. H. Harvey, who imposed a fine of $50.00 and costs on Turner and Conway, while he released Mrs. Johnston. Turner and Conway were placed under $500.00 peace bonds and they took an appeal to the District Court through their attorney, H. B. Hamilton. J. Benson Newell conducted the prosecution.

Funeral of John Mack

The funeral services over the remains of the late John Mack who died last Thursday, were held at the Santa Rita Catholic Church Saturday afternoon, the same being conducted by the Sisters, in the absence of the priest, who detained at Tularosa. A large attendance of friends was present at the ceremonies and the assemblage followed the remains to the last resting place in the local cemetery to pay last respects to their departed friend. The ceremonies at both the church and at the cemetery were very impressive.

Basketball and Dance

The two basketball games to be played Saturday night at Community Hall, Carrizozo-Hondo girls' game and the Carrizozo-Lincoln boys' game will be fast ones. After the games, there will be dancing to the music of the "Zosians." There should be a good turn-out to see the games and enjoy the dance. Don't forget the date—Saturday, Feb. 19. Come, and bring a friend!

Nabs Two Burglars

On Wednesday, Feb. 9, two daring young thieves, Kennedy, aged 23 and Montgomery, 18, burglarized a store in Dexter, N. M., a short distance from Roswell, stole two horses and escaped. Although warned of the robbery, Roswell officials failed to apprehend the thieves as well as others along the line between here and there. Last Sunday morning, Sheriff Kelsey received a phone message from Roswell to keep-on-the-lookout-for-them. On receipt of the message, he remembered of having seen two suspicious characters on the night before, but after the notice, they could not be found. He was about to take steps to get their trail, when in passing near the old sheds formerly occupied by the Humphrey Brothers, he saw the men he had seen on the previous night and two horses which they were to all appearances, preparing to leave with.

Firmly believing they were the men he wanted, the sheriff took no chances and covering them with his automatic, demanded their surrender. Taken by surprise, they gave in, were taken to jail, where they confessed to the theft of the store and also to the fact that they had stolen two horses after the robbery and as fast as they became worn out, they were replaced with fresh stolen horses, until they had stolen eleven, in all, the last two being animals belonging to Fred Pfingsten of Lincoln. They also informed the sheriff, that they had agreed to never be taken without a fight and were prepared to defend themselves with two automatics which he found on their persons which they admitted were stolen among other things from the Dexter store and would have used, had they not been taken by surprise. After these findings, the sheriff phoned the Roswell officials, who came over Sunday night and returned with the prisoners.

Valentine Party at Carrizozo Eating House

Mrs. E. H. Sweet, Mrs. L. B. Crawford, Mrs. G. J. Dingwall and Miss Sweet, entertained most delightfully Monday afternoon with a beautiful Valentine-Bridge Party at the Carrizozo Eating House.

Promptly at 2:30, the ladies gathered and after a short interval of chat and visiting, were invited into the attractively decorated dining room. Soft shaded lights and daintily hung hearts, gave a picturesque setting for eight tables of bridge.

After five games had been enjoyed, daintily hand embroidered luncheon cloths were placed and a lovely two-course luncheon was served, valentine effects being carried out in observance of the day and occasion.

Mrs. S. A. Ramsdale won high score, a lovely hand decorated door stop. Mrs. H. B. Hamilton won second, a pot of blooming hyacinths; pink and white. Out-of-town guests were, Mrs. Geo. A. Titworth, Captain; Mrs. J. M. Penfield, Lincoln; Mrs. T. M. Carr, Alamogordo; Mrs. S. A. Ramsdale, El Paso.

Henry Lutz, Sr. left yesterday for Roswell, where he was called to accept a clerical position with the State Highway Department.

Fort Stanton Notes

New patients admitted to the hospital during the past week were, Messrs. Costana, Nilson, Macias, Garcia and McGregor.

Messrs. Savage and O'Donnell left last Friday for California.

Mr. Wunsch was in Carrizozo last Saturday.

Mrs. Gensler, who has been sick for the past several days is back on duty.

The Misses Green, Robinson and Reuhman, spent Saturday in Roswell.

Dr. and Mrs. Tappan spent Tuesday in Carrizozo.

Mr. and Mrs. Fagan called on friends in Lincoln Tuesday.

Mrs. Kincheloe gave a valentine-bridge party to the following guests: Dr. and Mrs. Tappan, Dr. and Mrs. Reed, Dr. and Mrs. Nesbit, Mesdames Kersey, Hebert, and Messrs. Wunsch and Shannon.

Mr. Gentry spent last Saturday in Roswell.

A. Korse, who has been sick for the past several months, shows a considerable improvement.

Mr. Turner spent last Saturday in Hondo.

Stranger Found Dead Near Red Lake

For the past week, a deep mystery has surrounded the finding of the body of a stranger near Red Lake last Friday morning by John Burch, who lives on a ranch north of the Malpais. When found, the body was clad only in underclothing, but in the absence of marks of violence, it was presumed that the man had died of exposure. Undertaker Kelley cared for the body, so that it might be preserved for a month or more, until some trace, if any could be had of the man's relatives, or others who would throw some light on his identity.

Nothing further was learned, aside from the fact that the man had been seen at the Coyote pumping station and at the homes of Tom Stewart and Tom Shields, at all places named he had asked for a drink of water and acted queerly. This, coupled with the condition the body was found in, increased the belief that the man was demented. On Tuesday of this week, John Burch and C. M. Lucky, found the man's pants containing several letters.

A blank check on a bank at Hurdland, Mo., an address of one Mame Hunter, presumably the man's wife or daughter, a certificate of deposit for $549.00 in the Hurdland bank, a letter from his son, who is in the Navy and a bill of sale of property he had purchased in Kansas City.

With this information, sheriff Kelsey wired the bank and Mame Hunter, receiving answers from both parties, Mame Hunter, El Reno, Okla., and the Bank at Hurdland, Mo., the bank giving instructions to wire his son at San Diego, and Mame Hunter asking that Hunter's wife at Hurdland, be consulted as to the disposition of the body. Letters found proved that Hunter was at El Reno on Feb. 5, and on the 7, he was first seen in this locality. To a certain extent, there is still a mystery surrounding the unfortunate case and further developments are awaited with much interest.

Woman's Club Notes

The February meeting of the Carrizozo Woman's Club will be held at the Wetmore Hall this afternoon at 3 o'clock. You are cordially invited.

The only way to know what the club is doing is to attend the meetings. It is not your club or my club—it is our club. A place where we may express our opinions on questions submitted to the club for consideration and when a decision has been made, whether it was according to your views or not, stand by the rule of the majority.

We must be very watchful lest destructive propaganda be spread in our midst for the sole purpose of disorganizing the club and robbing it of its purpose. Your club can be a success only by having your co-operation and support. Let us make our aim high and then by continued effort make the club a power for good in the community.

In the current issue of the New Mexico Federation Bulletin is found "A Collect For Club Women," written by Mary Stewart and is well worth the study of every club member. It follows:

Keep us, O God, from pettiness; let us be large in thought, in word, in deed. Let us be done with fault finding, and leave off self seeking. May we put away all pretense and meet each other face to face without self pity, and without prejudice. May we never be hasty in judgment and always generous. Teach us to put into action our better impulses straight-forward and unafraid. Let us take time for all things; make us grow calm, serene and gentle. Grant that we may realize it is the little things that create differences; that in the big things of life we are one. And may we strive to touch and to know the great common woman's heart of us all, and O Lord God, let us not forget to be kind.

It is not just what we get from the club meetings that counts but what we give.

State would Exchange Timbered for Open Lands

The Public Lands Committee's proposal to amend the state constitution in line with the Morrow bill recently passed by Congress, will, if ratified by the people of the state, eventually cause New Mexico to go out of the timber business.

The state's timber holdings, says the committee, are comparatively small, so much so, that it is considered impractical and unprofitable to maintain and operate a forest bureau for their administration. The cost of fire protection in the scattered areas is said to be another argument in favor of the exchange, if the same can be made acre for acre. The state now owns approximately 286,000 acres of timber lands, all but 30,000 of which are in Coila, Mora and Taos counties. Whether or not, the change would work to the best interests of the stockmen, will be seen later, should the measure be ratified.

During the past week, the following parties have made purchases of Chevrolet cars from the City Garage: Bert Province, Captain; Mrs. Walker White, Nogal; Cobb, of Cobb & Johnson, Ancho; Dr. F. H. Johnson and Ward Leslie of Carrizozo.

Grand Lodge Meets at Las Cruces

Beginning Monday, Feb. 21, the Masonic Grand Lodge of New Mexico will meet at Las Cruces and continue until Wednesday, after which the Order of Eastern Star will occupy until Saturday. The officials of Carrizozo Lodge No. 41, G. S. Hoover, A. L. Burke, W. A. Wunsch and S. F. Miller, will attend.

Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen Will Run a Big 'Special' March 19

Two days after St. Patrick's Day which will be March 19, the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen will give a big dance at the Community Hall, for the benefit of the fund which is used for the purpose of caring for the sick and disabled of its members.

This organization keeps constantly in touch with those of its number, who have suffered from misfortune and sees that they do not become objects of cruel so-called charity. To add to a fund for this commendable purpose, the entertainment is to be given. The Trainmen enjoy an enviable reputation as royal entertainers and those who attend will have the satisfaction of knowing that besides a 'run' for their 'fare,' they will be lending a helping hand to a worthy cause. An El Paso orchestra will furnish the music, Edwin McCarty and Maxine Hoffman, two former Carrizozo school students being among the number.

The Brotherhood never "backs up," "slows down," or "gets off the track," when it comes to entertaining, but, "With two sharp whistles And down the track, You can always see the smoke Come rolling back."

Southern Pacific Safety Record in 1926, Best Yet

"In the prevention of accidents, the Southern Pacific made the best record for safety in 1926, ever attained," according to K. J. Clancy, assistant to the general manager.

"For the seventh consecutive year, no fatality occurred to passengers in steam-train accident. During this seven-year period ending Dec. 31, 1926, over three million passengers were transported, a distance of more than eleven billion miles.

Casualties to employees in train service accidents in 1926, including casualties to employees in all branches of the service occurring in such accidents were, 9.98 per million locomotive miles compared with 16.98 per under federal control in 1918 and with 11.61 in 1925, a reduction in 1926 compared with 1918 of 41.2 per cent and compared with 1925 of over 14 per cent. In 1926 for each casualty resulting in train and train service accident, a train was run a distance equivalent to nearly three times around the world.

In 1926 industrial casualties per million man-hours including on the track and in the ships, were 11.75, compared with 16.54 in 1918 under federal control and with 14.89 in 1925, a reduction in 1926 compared with 1918 of nearly 29 per cent and compared with 1925 of over 21 per cent.

On the other hand, what could he do in broad daylight? If he were seen, as he almost certainly would be, Shaw, careless now, perhaps, in his fancied security, would take precautions which might make impossible the night's work of rescue. That, of course, assuming that Shaw was still at the house among the cedars.

Was he? Laurie pondered that problem. Undoubtedly he had personally taken Doris there, he and the secretary. But the chances seemed about even that, having done this, he would leave her, for the day at least, either in charge of the secretary or of some caretaker. In that case—in that case—

The young man sprang to his feet. He would waste no more time in speculation. He would know, and at once, who was in that house with Doris. He swung back to the garage with determination in his manner, and entered the place so unexpectedly that Burke, who had fancied him a while away, started at the sight of him. Then, with a contented smile, he stilled his nerves and kept his eyes on the bill the visitor held before him.

"See here," said the latter. "I want to do a tramp act."

"Sure you do!" Burke promptly acquiesced.

"Can you find me some ragged trousers and an old coat and cap? The worse they look, the better I'll like it. And while you're about it, get me some worn-out shoes or boots. How soon can you have them here?"

"I-I dunno," Burke was looking somewhat overwhelmed. "You're pretty big," he mentioned. "Nothin' o' mine'd fit you."

"Great Scott!" exploded the other. "I don't want 'em to fit! I'm not going to a pink tea in them."

"But you want to get 'em on, don't you?" Burke demanded, with some coldness.

"I do."

"Well, look at yourself, young fella, and then look at me."

Laurie obeyed the latter part of the injunction. The father of seven was at least five inches shorter than he, and his legs and shoulders were small in proportion. No coat or trousers he wore could possibly go on the young Hercules before him.

"Oh, well," urged the latter, impatiently, "get some, somewhere. Here. Take a run into town. Use my car if you like. Or go to some one you know who's about my size. Only, mum's the word."

Five-dollar bills were in the air, fluttering before the eyes of the garage owner like leaves in William Brock's breeze. He clutched them avidly.

"And hurry up," added his impatient patron. "Let's see you back here in five minutes."

"Who'll look after the garage? Not that any one's likely to stop," the proprietor gloomily admitted.

"I'll look after it. Come, get a move on!"

"Oh, all right! But I can't be back in no five minutes, nor in thirty minutes, neither. I gotta go over to Nick Swanson's. He's about your size."

"All right, all right! Got to it."

The impatient youth was fairly shoeing him out of his own garage, but with the sweet memory of those five-dollar bills to sustain him, Burke was patient, even good-humored. One thing he could say about these college lads: they was usually ready to pay well for their conscience. With a forgiving grin he hurried off.

Left alone, Laurie removed his coat and cap, searched the garage successfully for grease, oil, waste and shoe-black, and then, establishing himself in front of a broken mirror in Burke's alleged office, removed his collar and effected a startling transformation in the appearance of his head, face, hands, and shirt.

Beginning in his college days, and continuing throughout his more recent theatrical experiences, the art of make-up had increasingly interested him. The people in his plays owed something to his developing skill, and even one of the leading ladies had humbly taken suggestions from him. But taver in any stage dressing-room had young Mr. Devon secured a more extraordinary change than the one he produced now, with the simple aids at hand.

When Burke returned he found his garage in charge of an unwashed, unkempt, unprepossessing young ruffian whom he stared at for a full minute before he accepted him as the man he had left there. The ragged trousers, the spotted "reefer" buttoned high around the neck, the dirty cap pulled over the ears, and the wholly disreputable broken shoes Burke had brought with him completed the transformation of an immaculate young gentleman into a bear-eyed, follower of the open road.

Cad in these garments, Laurie took a few preliminary shuffles around the garage, while the owner, watching him, snipped his thigh in approval. No great was his interest in the "act," indeed; that when the impersonator left the garage and started off, Burke showed a strong desire to follow him and see the finish of the performance. A desire that recalled for a fleeting instant the determined personality of the young gentleman hidden under the tramp's disguise.

At the last moment before leaving, Laurie took from his pocket the tiny revolver he had brought with him, and holding it in his palm, studied it in silence. Should he take it, or shouldn't he? He "dropped it among the discarded heap of clothes, and picked up in its stead a small screw-driver, which he put into his ragged pocket. That particular tool looked as if it might be useful.

Lounging up the country road, with his cold, bare, dirty hands in the pockets of the borrowed reefer, he looked about with assurance. He believed that in this unexpected guise, he could meet even Shaw and get away with it; but he meant to be very careful and take no unnecessary chances.

He cut across half a dozen fields, climbed half a dozen fences, was fiercely barked at by a dozen dogs, more or less, and finally reaching the grounds-of-the-house-in-the-cedars, approached it from the rear in exactly the half-sneaking, half-cocky manner in which the average tramp would have drawn near a shuttered house from one of whose chimneys smoke was rising. It was a manner that nicely blended the hope of a hand-out with the fear of a rebuff. Once he fancied he saw something moving among the trees. He ducked back and remained quiet for some time. Then, reassured by the continued silence, he emerged, snuntered to the back entrance, and after a brief preliminary study of the shattered windows, unsealed the door with a pair of grimy knuckles.

He had expected a long delay, possibly no response at all. But the door opened as promptly as if some one had been standing there awaiting his signal, and on its threshold a forbidding-looking woman, haglike as to hair and features but cleanly dressed, stood regarding him with strong disapproval. In the kitchen range back of her a coal fire was burning. A teakettle bubbled domestically on its top, and check by jowl with this a big-bellied coffee-pot exhaled a delicious aroma.

The entire tableau was so different from anything Laurie had expected that for an instant he stared at the woman, speechless and almost open-mouthed. Then the smell of the coffee gave him his cue. He suddenly remembered that he had eaten nothing that day, and the fact gave a thrill of sincerity to the professional whine in which he made his request.

"Say, lady," he begged urgently, "I'm down an' out. Gimme a cup o' coffee, will yah?"

Her impulse, he saw clearly, had been to close the door in his face. Already her hand was automatically responding to it. But he whipped off his dirty cap and, shivering on the doorstep, looked at her with Laurie's eyes, whose beauty no amount of disguise could wholly conceal. There was real appeal in them now. Much, indeed almost everything, depended on what this creature would do in the next minute. She hesitated.

"I ain't had a mouthful since yesterday," croaked the visitor, pleadingly and truthfully.

"Well, wait there a minute. I'll bring you a cup o' coffee."

She turned from the door and started to close it, evidently expecting him to remain outside, but he promptly followed her in, and her face, hardening into quick anger, softened a little as she saw him cowering over the big hot stove and warming his dirty hands. In silence she filled a cup with coffee, cut a thick slice from a loaf of bread, buttered it, and set the collocation on the kitchen table.

"Hurry up and eat that," she muttered, "and then clear out. If any one saw you here, I'd get into trouble."

Laurie granted acquiescence and wolfed the food. It had not sat down, and now, as he ate, his black eyes swept the room while he planned his next move. Drying on a stout cord back of the stove were several dish-towels. They gave him his first suggestion. His second came when he observed that his hostess, evidently reassured by his haste, had turned her back to him, and, bending a little, was examining the oven. Notelessly setting down the cup and the bread, he crept behind her, and, seizing her in one powerful arm, covered her mouth with his free hand. He could not wholly stifle the smothered shriek she gave.

For the next moment he had his hands full. Despite her wrinkles and her gray hair, she was a strong woman, and she fought with a violence and a false strength due to overwhelming fury and terror. It was so difficult to control her without hurting her that all his strength was taxed. But at last he brought her slowly down into a chair under the row of dish-towels, and seizing two of these useful articles, as well as the cord that held them, securely bound and gagged her. As he did so he dropped his role and looked soberly into her furious eyes.

"Look here," he told her. "I'm not going to hurt you; be sure of that.

But I've got something to say, and I want you to stop struggling and listen to it."

Under his quiet tones some of the frenzy died out of the eyes staring up at him.

"I'm here to get Miss Mayo," he went on. "She's in the house, isn't she? If she is, nod." There was a long moment of hesitation. At last the head nodded. "Is there any one else in the house?" The head shook negatively. "Is there no one here but you and Miss Mayo?" Laurie could hardly take in this good luck, but again the head shook negatively.

"Where is she? Upstairs?"

The head nodded. He stepped back from the bound figure.

"All right," he said cheerfully. "Now I'm going to unbind you and let you take me up to her. As a precaution, I shall leave the bandage on your mouth and hands. But, being a sensible woman, of course you realize that you have absolutely nothing to fear, unless you give us trouble. If you try to do that I shall have to lock you into a closet for a few hours."

As he spoke he was unfastening the cord.

"Lead on," he invited, buoyantly.

There was an instant when he thought the struggle with her would begin all over. He saw her draw herself together as if to spring. But she was evidently exhausted by her previous contest. She was also subdued. She rose heavily, and, taking her time to it, slowly led the way out of the kitchen and along a hall to the front of the house.

"No tricks, remember," warned Laurie, keeping close behind her. "Play fair, and I'll give you a year's salary when I take Miss Mayo out of this."

She turned now and looked at him, and there was venom in the glance. Violently and negatively, she shook her head.

"Don't you want the money?" he interrupted, deeply interested in this phenomenon. "I'm glad to have met you," he politely added. "You're an unexpected and a brand-new type to me." She was walking forward again, with no sign now that she heard his voice. Reaching a wide colonial staircase that led to the second floor, she started the ascent, but so slowly that the young man behind her uttered another warning.

"No tricks, remember," he repeated, cheerfully. "I'm afraid you're planning to start something. I believe you're capable of falling backward, and bowling me over like a ten-pin.

Religious Beliefs of Indians Queer Mixture

At Yalets, in southwest Texas, are the survivors of a tribe of Indians, perhaps the oldest tribe in the Southwest, whose religion is said to be a mixture of pagan rites and the formalism of the Roman church. Miscellaneous have been unable to eliminate the paganism and some of it has been left to continue as the only survival of really primitive worship on the Rio Grande, says the Baltimore Sun.

A curious story, also of southwest Texas, was published a short time ago about the Basileio negroes who live near Brackettville and who have a strange religion. For the Seminoles, Christmas, instead of Easter, is the end of Lent. The Seminoles have religious feasts at which pork is the only forbidden meat and their sacramental drink is tea. The religion is a strange blend of teachings from many sources with traces that go back to Africa and the earliest red men on this continent.

From Personal Observation

One of the questions put to a class of rural adults was: "In the sentence, 'The bird flew over the house,' is 'flew' a regular or an irregular verb?" This proved a sticker for the class, but finally one man ventured an answer. Said he, "If the bird that flew over the house was a wild goose, it went in a straight, regular line, so the verb is regular; but if it was a woodpecker, then it went in a crooked, zigzag line, and so the verb is irregular."

All but the grammar-bound examiner was satisfied with this rational explanation.

Smallpox in New Mexico dropped 78 per cent, in 1925, below the average of 120 cases a year for five preceding years. There were twenty-six cases in 1925.

The Jones Senate bill, providing a Colorado river committee of seven to arbitrate tri-state differences over the proposed Boulder canon dam, was passed by the Arizona Legislature.

Clyde Williams, instructor in general science, has resigned from the faculty of the Horace Mann Junior High school at Elsbess, Ariz., to take a position as mathematics instructor in the Douglas High school.

Flagstaff, Arizona, will have a chapter of the national society of the Daughters of the American Revolution, to be called the Coconino chapter, as soon as the report of the organization, completed last week, is approved by Washington.

The total number of sheep in New Mexico on October 1, last, was 1,893,147, as compared with 1,151,380 on October 1 a year previous, according to a statement prepared by Joseph DeFratton, secretary of the sheep sanitary board of the state.

The construction contract for the new dormitory and kindergarten at the New Mexico State School for Blind was awarded in Albuquerque to Marr & O'Brien of El Paso, Texas, who named the low bid of $40,035. Thirteen contractors competed.

The new United Verde hospital at Jerome, one of the most completely equipped hospital buildings in Arizona, was thrown open last week. The building is of concrete construction and was secured for Jerome through the efforts of D. A. Carlson, chief surgeon of the United Verde Copper Company.

The first step toward the construction of an electric power line from Douglas into the Sulphur Springs valley was made last week when members of the Douglas and Blasco Chambers of Commerce appointed a joint committee to meet with ranchers in the valley and organize a power district.

Automobile registrations in Arizona during 1925 exceeded registrations of 1924 by 6,603, while receipts collected advanced $20,066.75 during the period. James H. Kerby, secretary of state, announced last week in Phoenix. Total automobile registrations for 1925 were 73,652 and total receipts $422,490.50.

Walter Williams, Charles Elmer Walton and Rita Dolores, alleged bandit trio that escaped from a sheriff's posse after shooting Sheriff A. A. Maxwell of Apache county, Arizona, through the cheek, were in custody in Holbrook, Arizona, after one of the most sensational manhunts in northern Arizona history.

There will be no immediate change in the personnel of either the faculty or business staff of the New Mexico State Normal University, according to the announcement of Gen. A. Fleming, newly-elected president of the board of regents of the institution, which have just been appointed by Governor R. C. Dillon.

Louise McKelligan, charged jointly with her husband, E. T. McKelligan, with the murder of former City Manager John H. Robinson last August 29, pleaded guilty to a charge of manslaughter in the Yavapai County Superior Court at Prescott, and was sentenced to serve not less than four nor more than seven years in the state penitentiary.

Changes in subdivision No. 1 of the United States border patrol, as effected through the main office at Tucson, include the abandonment of the patrol stations at Patagonia and Bowie, and the establishment of three new stations at Casa Grande, Indian Oasis and Ashfork. It was announced in Tucson by Sam F. Gray, chief patrol inspector of the border patrol in Tucson.

The Earle, publication of the agricultural department of the Santa Fe railroad, says: Sugar beet production is gaining in favor in New Mexico. The state produced the largest tonnage in its history in 1925, and growers are well pleased. The state has no beet sugar factory and the crop is shipped to Colorado factories for slicing, about 160 cars having been shipped the past year.

The largest gathering of public utility representatives in the history of New Mexico, will occur in Albuquerque February 14, 15 and 16, when the New Mexico Utilities Association will hold its annual convention. Utility men and women from five western states, representing more than 150 electric, telephone, gas and street railway organizations, will attend. It is announced by Frank Schramm of Roswell, president of the association.

The 1927 New Mexico state convention of the American Legion will be held at Las Vegas, it was announced in Santa Fe by the state executive committee of the legion. The dates will be August 4, 5 and 6.

The Albuquerque Advertising Club has launched a movement to change the name of the state of New Mexico to Cooldige. After a discussion in a recent meeting of the club, a resolution was unanimously adopted, endorsing a bill that had been prepared and will be presented to the Legislature.

Housing and Child Health

The larger and more comfortable the family house, all other things being equal, the better chance babies have to live, according to a recently published yearly report on child welfare in England. In one-room dwellings, in Newcastle-on-Tyne, the death rate was 108; in two-room dwellings 100; in three-rooms, 89; while in those over three rooms, it dropped to 70.

Pretty Things that are Made at Home

ARE you an embroidery enthusiast, the sort that improves "each shining moment" by having a bit of "pick-up" needlework at hand? If so here's something new to interest you—peasant tea aprons. They are just too picturesque for words in their wide-belted full-skirted quaintness. The border and belt is a bright blue or yellow or some typical mid-European peasant shade, and of course the embroidery, usually cross-stitch, must approach of spring, and all of them are of the clinging close-fitting type. It is remarked that most of these snug types have taken to following the line of the eyebrows. That is, they have fitted forehead bands of wide ribbon which cling to the head, after the manner here pictured.

These handsome silk types are either quite colorful or smartly all black, the latter invariably enlivened with a handsome pin, buckle or ornament. Modes such as are grouped in this picture are particularly likable for the matron. The toque to the left at the top is styled of wide belting, all black. It claims distinction in its cap-like fit about the forehead.

The use of narrow grosgrain ribbon is exploited in the toque topping this aprons in this picture ought to inspire the desire to give a tea-party, just as an excuse to wear one of these adorable embroidered affairs, don't you think so?

Speaking of peasant embroidery in general, what a craze there is for it this season! "They say" the recent visit of Queen Marie of Rumania to our "ain countries" accounts for this manifest interest in the handwork of the Balkan women. At any rate the fashion program for spring and summer emphasizes the importance of peasant frocks, smocked profusely at neckline, waistline and wrist, with full sleeves done in gay native embroidery designs.

So now's the time to begin to "study up" on the art of smocking. A white voile frock done in bolt-fast cotton is a treasurable possession and it is worth beginning now to embroider it so as to have it completed ready for wear during the warm summer days to come.

group. Its three rows are surmounted by a topaz-jeweled buckle.

Gold cord animates the third hat, which upholds the theory that grosgrain and other silk cap-like shapes with a touch of metal for the trimming answer to the call of the mid-season mode.

Crowns of ruffled narrow grosgrain ribbon find their way into many a toque for spring, such as the model to the left.

Color combinations are outstanding in the latest hat arrivals, and blues in their entire range are especially cited. The last handsome model in this picture employs alternating sections of navy and popelin fallie silk. Sometimes as many as six or seven colors are combined or contrasted in one hat. Marika Callot creates a charming hat for midseason wear, by joining horizontal strips of belting, using four shades of red.

POULTRY

POULTRY SUFFER FROM DISEASES

Poultry suffer from colds and associated troubles in winter just as do human beings, but a little care and doctoring will help to keep down the heavy annual toll that these diseases exact from poultrymen. According to Dr. E. F. Kaupp, head of the poultry department at the North Carolina State college, the birds suffer most from diseases of the respiratory tract in cold weather.

Common colds result from the birds becoming wet or chilled because of poor housing, quick changes in weather or cracks in the house permitting a draft to blow on the birds. One of the signs of this disease is a discharge from the nose. Any bird so affected should be immediately removed from the flock, states Doctor Kaupp, because the discharge will contaminate the drinking water and give the disease to the other birds. In the case of colds, the nose should be cleared out by syringing with a 10 per cent solution of argyrol or a purple solution of permanganate of potash. In the case of roup where there is a stinking discharge, pure iodine should be used in the syringe and the bird treated morning and night until cured.

Weak pullets come from crowding in the summer and they must have proper feed and care in the laying pens. Most of them will develop sore head even in a new house. These pimples should be greased with carbolic grease.

Sore eyes is another familiar winter-time trouble. The eyes need to be swabbed out, states Doctor Kaupp, and a drop of a 10 per cent solution of argyrol or a 1 per cent solution of sulphate of zinc placed in the eyes twice each day.

Canker or diphtheritis is a winter disease which attacks the mouth. It forms a spot where the sore is covered with a cheesy material. Scrape this off, states Doctor Kaupp, and use on it a canker pencil, pure iodine or powdered chlorate of potash. Repeat once each day until the sore has been cured.

Early Hatched Pullets

Produce Eggs in Winter

The results of laying tests at the Massachusetts experiment station show that early-hatched chicks of the heavier breeds make the best winter layers. Rhode Island Red pullets which were hatched in March gave a winter egg production of 42.65 eggs. April-hatched pullets gave a winter production of 35.40 eggs and May pullets gave a production of 22.50 eggs.

The profit in producing eggs comes largely from producing them at a season of the year when they are highest in price. This means that we must plan to produce eggs during the winter months. The Massachusetts experiment shows that, with the general-purpose breeds, the early-hatched chicks are the ones which mature in time to start laying in the latter part of October and continue throughout the winter.

Poultry Hints

Call out the hen that is persistently broody.

Isn't it funny? Almost everybody's hens start to lay like fun when the price drops.

The incubator should be located, preferably in a cellar, having good ventilation. If no such location can be had, a room facing the north is the next best place.

Goslings dress easier in warm weather than they do in cold, as the feathers do not set so tightly, and in picking them the flesh is not so likely to be torn.

Many of the old, unfit poultry houses now found on farms could be remodeled at little expense and trouble in such a way that they would provide a comfortable home for the flock.

Plan to get chicks out on the ground in the sunlight as soon as possible, or for a short while each day.

It will soon be the season for gape worms, and all yards not sown to green feed should be spaded or plowed up. If the worms are thick, scatter lime about the yard before plowing.

Brood coops for the crop of growing young fowls need strong wooden floors and the openings in front should be closed tight each night to keep down the losses from rats and weasels.

When the eggs begin to hatch, the hen should be confined and not disturbed until the hatching is complete.

Hens in the breeding flock should be allowed out of doors in direct sunlight during the winter and encouraged to take plenty of exercise.

The little chicks are not one bit better off when you insist on feeding them before they are 48 hours old. In fact, their chances for developing into useful birds are much enhanced by such delay.

THE NAME OF WASHINGTON

Some of the youth and the truth of a nation,
Ye that are not to remember the man Whose valor gave birth to a people's salvation,
Honor him now, set his name in the van,
A nobleness to try for,
A name to live and die for—
The name Washington!

Calmly his face shall look down through the ages—
Sweet yet severe with a spirit of warning;
Charged with the wisdom of saints and
of ages:

Quick with the light of a life-giving morning—
A majesty to try for,
A name to live and die for—
The name of Washington!

Though factions may rock us, or party
divide us,
And bitterness break the gold links
of our story,
Our father and leader is ever beside us,
Live and forgive! But forget not the glory

Of him whose height we try for,
A name to live and die for—
The name of Washington!

Still in his eyes shall be mirrored our fading
Days with the image of days long ended;
Still shall those eyes give, immortally, greeting
Unto the souls from his spirit descending.

His grandeur we shall try for,
His name we'll live and die for—
The name of Washington!
—George Parsons Lathrop.

Washington From Human Viewpoint

Mr. Charles Moore of Washington, on the occasion of the recent unveiling of a Washington statue, admonished the assembled spectators not to keep Washington on a pedestal, but to bring him down among them, for he was one of them, human, as they were human.

All the heroes of history had their weaknesses, their human limitations. Their greatness is only greatness when considered from this human point of view.

On the other hand it is neither desirable nor necessary to dwell unduly upon their faults when there is such inspiration in their virtues. There can be no just quarrel with Mr. Rupert Hughes, who is doing merely what others have done in reminding us that Washington had a high temper, that he swore on occasions, that he played cards along with other gentlemen of his time, that he partook of liquor, also in keeping with the custom of the day, or that he was not unflinching in his attendance at church. Washington was a gentleman, but as a soldier he had, in his earlier days, experienced some of the roughest going of frontier life. He knew the profane vocabulary of the time, and while there is no record that he was gratuitously profane, "cussing" merely for the sake of being emphatic, it is a matter of record that he could go into a rage and draw on that vocabulary. Perhaps the most noted of the tongue-lashings that have gone into history was that which Washington gave Gen. Charles Lee for the latter's incompetence and ignominious failure at the battle of Monmouth, for which he was court-martialed and dismissed from the army.

No higher tribute ever was paid Washington than by his intimate associate, Thomas Jefferson. In that tribute Jefferson says: "His temper was naturally irritable and high-toned, but reflection and resolution had obtained a firm and habitual ascendancy over it. If, however, it broke bonds, he was most tremendous in wrath. . . . On the whole his character was, in its mass, perfect, in nothing bad, in a few points indifferent; and it may truly be said that never did nature and fortune combine more perfectly to make a man great, and to place him in the same constellation with whatever worthies have merited from man an everlasting remembrance."

There's good authority for the statement that George Washington owned America's first male. The male was a present to Washington from the king of Spain, and was named Royal Gift.

Monument Is Nation's Tribute to Greatest Son

The idea of a monument to the memory of George Washington originated in the house of representatives. It was the ultimate outcome of a resolution introduced by John Marshall in 1790 "that a marble monument be erected by the United States in the capital, at the city of Washington, and that the family of General Washington be requested to permit his body to be deposited under it; and that the monument be so designed as to commemorate the great events of his military and political life." Before this, however, the Continental congress, in 1783, had adopted the resolution "that an equestrian statue of General Washington be erected at the place where the residence of congress shall be established."

In considering these two resolutions congress amended the former so as to provide that a "mausoleum of American granite and marble, in pyramidal form, 100 feet at the base and of proportionate height shall be erected in the city of Washington." Meanwhile, the equestrian statue mentioned in the resolution of the Continental congress culminated in the statue by Greenough, which was placed in the rotunda of the Capitol in 1841. But it was later moved to the east front of the Capitol; and more recently to the Smithsonian museum.

No definite steps were taken toward the erection of the monument until 1833. During that year the Washington National Monument society was organized, with the idea of erecting a monument by popular subscription. In 1836 the society invited American artists to submit designs for a monument. The only requirement was that any plans submitted should "harmoniously blend durability, simplicity and grandeur." The cost of the proposed structure was to be not less than $1,000,000.

Proposed Memorial.

Many designs were submitted. The one selected was that submitted by Robert Mills, a prominent architect of his time. This design, known as the original design of the Washington National monument, is reproduced in the accompanying illustration. The plan, as shown, was a circular colonnaded building, 250 feet in diameter and 100 feet high, from which was to spring an obelisk shaft 70 feet square at the base and 500 feet high.

But funds for the monument accumulated slowly because contributions had been limited to one dollar a person. Thus, it was 1847 before enough money to justify beginning the building of the monument was accumulated.

In 1848 congress adopted another resolution authorizing the society to erect a monument upon a site to be selected by the President of the United States and the board of managers of the society. That site on the public reservation near the Potomac river, where the monument now stands, was selected. The corner stone of the monument was laid on July 4, of that year. This stone was a block of marble weighing 24,500 pounds, and was quarried and presented to the society by Thomas Symington of Baltimore. The stone selected for the foundation was the blue rock of the Potomac valley, in blocks weighing from six to eight tons.

Design Changed.

When the actual work was begun Mills' plan of a circular colonnaded building at the base was abandoned and only the obelisk shaft, which was changed as to proportions, was retained. On this plan the monument was finally erected to a height of 150 feet, by 1860. Then the Civil war halted work on it. But at the end of the war further appeals were made to the public for contributions, and to congress for co-operation. It was in 1870 that the resolution was offered to that body for the completion of the monument. This act, as passed, carried with it an appropriation of $200,000. It provided for the transfer to the government of all property of the Washington National Monument society, and that the construction of the monument be placed under the joint supervision of the President of the United States, the supervising architect of the Treasury department, the architect of the Capitol, the chief engineers of the army and the first vice president of the society.

The first work on the resumption of the construction of the monument was the strengthening and enlarging of its foundation. This was because the original foundation was found to be inadequate to bear the proposed shaft.

Stands on Original Site.

The completed monument, which stands 555 feet high, was dedicated in February, 1885. The total cost was nearly $1,200,000. Thousands of pilgrims visit it every year, many of them traveling to its summit to view the marvelous panorama of their national capital.

Contrary to a rumor at one time, the Washington monument has never been moved. From the very beginning of its construction it has remained on the present site. However, in one sense, the monument moves daily with the sun, turning upon an arc under the influence of the rays of heat. Likewise it moves under pressure of the wind. But despite these daily and occasional movements there never has been the slightest disturbance of poise.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Chairman Williams of the Corporation and the Lamy Rates

The State Corporation Commission and the Santa Fe railroad company have been in the arena for the past several weeks in a contest over the rates and service on the Lamy Spur running from Lamy to Santa Fe and the end is not yet.

In the first place, the Commission demanded better rail service with No. 8 at Lamy. In return, the railroad company agreed to put in a bus service, but in so doing, made connections by bus with all other trains and discontinued the branch train without authority from the Commission. After taking up the matter with the Santa Fe company and asking why it discontinued train service and substituted bus service with increased rates, the Commission received no reply.

It seems, according to Chairman Williams, that the railroad company files its tariffs with the Commission on request the same as other common carriers, but the Commission has no jurisdiction over bus lines, until the legislature establishes supervision over the same. In view of this fact and also that in discontinuing train service and establishing bus service, the Commission cannot deal with the railroad company on the bus proposition. In the change, the company has increased rates by charging 50 cents on baggage, where in the train service, passengers were allowed 150 pounds of baggage free. In other words, the train fare with baggage from Lamy to Santa Fe, was 60 cents, whereas the bus line charges for the same service, are $1.40.

The Corporation now demands a return to the train service with a through sleeper to Santa Fe instead of passengers having to leave the train at 3 o'clock in the morning to catch a bus and pay an additional fee of 50 cents for the privilege of being waked up, running out in the cold and catching a bus on the fly. From a technical standpoint, the raise in rates is of straight issue between the company and the commission, but in the absence of legislative action to govern bus service, nothing can be done at present.

Chairman Williams admits to the fact that bus service is preferable to what he terms, "old jerkwater service," but insists that the company should institute better train service and give Santa Fe what other places have, namely: good up-to-date trains with sleeping car accommodations. High seldom makes a false step and we believe that in this matter as well as in other matters of public interest in which we have supported him, he is decidedly right.

Ford may have refused a billion dollars for his automobile factory but we know a fellow who has a new pair of boy twins and wouldn't take a billion dollars for them.

LOOT!

BY ELMO SCOTT WATSON

"Piracy Without Tears"

IN ALL history of piracy there is no more amazing figure than that of Captain Misson, the founder of "piracy without tears." Instead of a black flag, he sailed under a white flag; he pillaged with an apology; he founded a practical Utopia which failed through no fault of his and finally he died as had many an honest sailorman, lost at sea in a storm.

Misson came of an ancient French family in Provence and was well educated. Reading books of travel gave him a desire to see the far corners of the earth and during a visit in Rome he made an acquaintance which changed his whole career. This was Signor Caracelli, a Dominican, who had given up the priesthood for a gospel of atheism and communism. Misson became a convert to Caracelli's views and they became comrades on a French privateer. When the captain of this vessel was killed in a battle with an English ship, the Italian, who was something of a soap box orator, stepped forward with an eloquent address and a proposal that Misson should become captain. Misson replied with a speech that was even more lurid and under this flood of oratory, the volatile French sailors broke forth into cries of "Vive le Capitaine Misson et son Lieutenant le Scavant Caracelli!" and endorsed the election.

The first question that the new officers were called upon to decide was a choice of the flag under which they were to sail. One sailor was so foolish as to propose the dread emblem of piracy, the black flag. This brought forth another flood of oratory from the new lieutenant, filled with references to "Peoples Rights and Liberties," the "Yoke of Tyranny" and "Oppression and Poverty." Their lives, he declared, unlike the life of a pirate were to be brave and just and innocent and their cause of the Liberty. He suggested a white ensign with the motto "For God and Liberty" on it.

Again the sailors were swept away by the eloquence and with cries of "Liberty! Liberty! We are free men!" and a plentiful supply of "vives" for both men, they ratified the decision. In fact speechmaking and "viving" seem to have been the principal occupation on this strange pirate craft at first and they kept it up as they set out to spread their gospel of sweetness and light and extend their doctrines of freedom to making free with other people's property.

Unprecedented Chevrolet Sales

Responding to a winter demand for cars unprecedented in the history of the company, the Chevrolet Motor Company in January again shattered all production records for that month by building 73,676 units, almost 30,000 cars more than were made in January of 1926. The January, 1926 production in its turn almost tripled the production of January, 1925.

Under the tentative production schedule for February the company will be prepared to make a total of 84,000 units, which would establish a new monthly production record in the history of the company, exceeding even the record monthly output in September, 1926, of 81,158 cars.

The heavy winter production is the result of demand for "the most beautiful car in Chevrolet history" which Chevrolet buyers have made upon the company's dealers since the announcement of lower prices and numerous refinements in the entire Chevrolet line.

In 1926 the Chevrolet Motor Company led all manufacturers of gear shift cars by building 732,145 cars, an increase of more than 40 per cent over the previous year. Under a $10,000,000 expansion program initiated in 1926 the Chevrolet Motor Company is equipped for even greater production during 1927.

The new machinery making this enlarged production possible is completely installed in the various plants of the company throughout the country and all necessary changes of dies and tools have been made to insure uninterrupted manufacturing schedules during this year.

Twelve Years OF DEPENDABILITY

It was Dodge Brothers distinction, twelve years ago, to create a more dependable car in its price class than previously had been known.

This enviable leadership Dodge Brothers have rigidly maintained.

Wherever difficult conditions try the souls of men and the stamina of motor cars, you will find Dodge Brothers product foremost in favor.

You will find also that six, eight and even ten years of service are not exceptional for the car; that frequently it delivers mileage running well into six figures; and that maintenance cost is remarkably low throughout its long and useful life.

These facts powerfully witness Dodge Brothers success in constantly bettering a product that was exceptional even at the start.

Faith and Firm Purpose Create Women's Club Home

A new era has dawned for the woman who visits Los Angeles. Once she had to go to a hotel. Now she can go to her hotel. For by skill, energy and perseverance a group of Los Angeles women alone have put up a new million and a quarter dollar structure devoted to women and to their families—including men.

It is more like a giant hospitable club than a hotel. The women have a plunge and a gymnasium at their disposal. If they wish to play golf the hotel will give them courtesy cards to their choice among the many famous Los Angeles all grass golf courses.

More than a score of years ago some women in Los Angeles were given a modest piece of land on Figueroa Street. It was then as far out in the country that orange orchards were very close to it. It was then that women with high faith and firm purpose resolved to convert that land into a treasure. They held to it. They guarded it against unwise building. They woke up almost literally one morning to find that their dream of a hotel was within reach. The growth of the city had surrounded the land with large buildings. Its value leaped skyward. It went so far skyward that the value of the land plus the value of the intended building permitted the women to sell bonds in the sum of three-quarters of a million dollars. With this and other money accumulated they put up a twelve story class A building and adorned it with a delicacy of taste that has made it generally admired.

Mrs. Chester C. Ashley, shown in full face in the picture is the moving spirit of the Hotel. She is chairman of the Building Committee. Mrs. Maudie N. Boudin, shown in profile, is managing director.

The profits of the Figueroa Hotel are to be used in the creation of a new building fund. When it is of sufficient size it will be employed in the erection of a new hotel for employed women.

Milk Gives Most Food Value At Least Cost

Milk gives more food value for less cost than any other food known to man, according to Herbert C. Hooks, secretary of the Evaporated Milk Association. "Dietitians are unanimous in advocating the use of milk by men, women and children," said Mr. Hooks. "Milk and evaporated milk supply some of all the materials necessary for the growth and maintenance of the body; they furnish energy for work, play and warmth. Milk helps repair the wear and tear of the body. It is just as necessary for adults to keep their bones in good condition. One quart of milk, or one pint of evaporated milk, furnishes as much calcium as ten large oranges, thirty-two eggs or twenty pounds of beef. Milk also is a valuable source of phosphorus and supplies a certain amount of iron. "By some authorities milk is said to be an aid in longevity. Dr. Herman Bundeasen, health commissioner for Chicago, gives his prescription for long life as follows: Drink one quart of milk a day and mix with one hour of sunshine. Repeat ad infinitum.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

British Troop Movements Check Negotiations With Chinese.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

GREAT BRITAIN, Japan, France and the United States are all desirous of negotiating new treaties with China that will do away with foreign domination and the inequalities of which the Chinese complain. Both the Canton and the Peking governments demand such treaties, but neither will concede that the other is the one with which negotiations should be carried on. Furthermore, the southern government, through Foreign Minister Chen, announced last week that nothing in that way could be done until Great Britain altered its policy of concentrating troops in Shanghai. So for the present there is a deadlock, although the British government decided to divert many of the troops to Hongkong, which is British territory and whence they could be transported speedily to Shanghai should the necessity arise. As for surrendering the British concessions to the Chinese, London more than intimates this can be easily arranged; but that does not include the foreign part of Shanghai, which is an international quarter though mainly ruled by the British.

Offers of the British foreign office, made to both the southern and the northern Chinese governments, are really very generous and probably will be accepted ultimately. They include recognition of the validity of the modern Chinese law courts for cases brought by British plaintiffs or complaints, and of a reasonable Chinese nationality law; also the acceptance of modern Chinese civil and commercial codes as far as practicable in British courts in China.

The government is prepared to enter arrangements for a modification of the municipal administrations of the British concessions, so as to bring them in line with the administrations of the special Chinese administrations of the former concessions or for their amalgamation with the former concessions now under Chinese control or for transfer of police control of the concession areas to the Chinese authorities. It is conceded that British missionaries should no longer claim the right to purchase land in the interior, and Chinese converts should look to the Chinese law for protection. Missionary, educational, and medical institutions should conform to the Chinese laws.

Delay in the Cantonese-British negotiations concerning administration of the concessions in Hankow and Kiukiang caused a recrudescence of the anti-British demonstrations in the former city with threats of mob violence. It seemed likely all the British subjects there would be compelled to leave, and there was renewed danger for foreigners further up the Yangtze river.

Removal of Americans from the interior continued, and our government dispatched more transports and marines for purposes of protection. Among the American refugees arriving in Shanghai last week was a large party from the mission stations in Hunan province.

The expected battles between the Cantonese and the northern Chinese armies had not begun but the troops of Marshal Chang Tso-lin and his allies were reported to be gathering in great numbers in Hunan province, and there was some fighting in Chekiang province, where the Canton troops were strongly placed near Chuchow.

LIBERAL rebels in Nicaragua were decisively defeated by troops of the Diaz government at Rivas and Masafra on the west coast, and the victory was made more complete by the capture of Gen. Christiano Zapata, one of the most troublesome of the revolutionists. That the cause of Dr. Juan B. Sacasa, chief of the liberals, is hopeless, is the opinion of Colonel Mosser, his military adviser, who was a German staff officer in the World war. The colonel asked and obtained from President Diaz a passport to Mexico. Rear Admiral Latimer has informed Sacasa that Washington will never recognize him or his government and advised him to accept the Diaz peace terms. More American marines have arrived at Managua to serve as a permanent guard for the legation.

DISPATCHES from Tampa, Mexico, say an anti-government plot has been discovered in that region and frustrated. Details are withheld but it is stated that several priests and members of the Knights of Columbus are among those arrested. The government has ordered that all unregistered priests must cease religious services.

The war department announced that all rebels who submitted unconditionally before February 10 would be granted amnesty, and as a result many of them are surrendering, especially in the state of Jalisco. Elsewhere, however, there are reports of increased activity on the part of the rebels, with varying results. The conquest of the Yaqui Indians seems not to have been complete, but government forces now control all the northern part of the Bacates mountains and the Indians are in flight and without food.

ON FEBRUARY 1 the interallied military commission, which for seven years controlled German disarmament, turned the job over to the inquiry committee of the League of Nations and went out of existence. At its final session the eastern frontier question was discussed and Germany promised to demolish twenty-two fortified places around three fortresses, the Reichswehr to select seventeen and the allies five. The commission decided that the disarmament clauses of the Versailles treaty had been completely executed by Germany, and the Berlin government at once drafted a note to the allied powers asking immediate evacuation of the occupied territory of the Rhineland. It was presumed this demand would be discussed in March when the foreign ministers meet in Geneva in the League of Nations council, and that Great Britain and Belgium will persuade France to agree to the withdrawal.

President von Hindenburg didn't like the presence of Herr Graf von Helldorf, as minister of justice in the cabinet, selected by Doctor Marx, and appointed Doctor Herfert to that post and Dr. Walter von Wendell as minister of the interior. The Nationalists agreed to get along with three men in the cabinet.

DISREGARDING the budget recommendation and the opposition of the President, the senate, before passing the navy appropriation bill, amended it to provide $1,200,000 for immediate work on the three light cruisers authorized by the act of 1924. The vote on the amendment was 49 to 27. Of the affirmative votes, 24 were cast by Republicans and 25 by Democrats. The negative votes included that of 13 Republicans, 8 Democrats, and 1 Farmer-Labor member.

As passed by the senate, the bill also included an amendment providing increased appropriations to carry into effect the first part of the navy's five-year aircraft program. This program calls for a minimum of 313 new planes each year, and the house bill provided for only 155 next year. The measure went to conference, with fair prospects that it would be sent to the President with the cruiser clause included.

ODDEN MILLS of New York was nominated by President Coolidge to be undersecretary of the treasury to succeed Garrard Wilentz, resigned, and the selection was approved by the senate.

The State department is preparing for the appointment of American ministers to Canada and the Irish Free State, and is consulting with the British government. Secretary Kellogg has been considering Frederick A. Steiwing for the Irish post. Mr. Steiwing, who is now counselor of the American embassy in London, is fifty years of age and was born in St. Louis, Mo. William Phillips, new ambassador to Belgium, will be the plac-later to Canada, according to Washington advices.

IN THE course of the hearing of the $31,000,000 Ford tax suit before the board of tax appeals John W. Prentiss, partner in the New York firm of Hornblower and Weeks, testified that Henry and Edsel Ford had thrice refused an offer of one billion dollars for their stock in the Ford company. The offers were made by Hornblower and Weeks in 1924, 1925 and in January of this year. Prentiss said the Ford company was worth $250,000,000 in 1913 and that his company would have been glad to purchase it for $750,000,000 in 1919, when the minority stockholders sold their interests to the Ford family on the basis of a total valuation of $250,000,000. He added that Ford had laughed at an offer of $500,000,000 for the Ford Motor company stock in 1916.

GREAT interest was aroused in England, and almost equally in this country, by the testimony in the libel suit brought by Capt. Peter Wright against Viscount Gladstone. The case really amounted to an effort by the viscount to clear the reputation of his father, William E. Gladstone, from the charges of loose living, made by Wright in one of his books, against the great commoner. Lord Gladstone has denounced the author as a foul-minded liar and coward, and forced his expulsion from a club. Wright testified that various persons had told him of intimacy between Gladstone and Lillie Langtry, Olga Novikoff of Russia and other women. He asserted he still believed what he had written but was now sorry he had put the stories in print. Lillie Langtry, now Lady de Bathe, wired a denial from Monte Carlo, and T. P. O'Connor and Lord Malmesbury, contradicted Wright's testimony. It did not appear that the author had much to substantiate his charges against the dead prime minister, and the jury returned a verdict for Viscount Gladstone.

AFTER hearing the claims of Frank L. Smith of Illinois to a seat in the senate, the senate privileges and elections committee found itself virtually deadlocked on the question whether it should make an immediate report recommending the administering of the oath, as requested by Smith's counsel, or proceed with a further investigation of the contributions to the Smith primary campaign fund by public utilities operators. Several members of the committee took the position that it would be useless to make a partial report since the vote of the senate refusing Smith the oath in advance of an inquiry indicated clearly that it would not accept such a report. Then Smith's lawyer asked that the matter be postponed until February 9, which was done.

UNITED MINE WORKERS OF AMERICA, in session in Indianapolis, decided that in making a new scale for the bituminous miners of Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and western Pennsylvania there should be no question of reduction of the wages now in effect in those fields. The Jacksonville agreement expires March 31, and the operators and miners will meet in Miami February 14 to discuss a new contract.

The mine workers in their convention proceedings contended their policy of suppressing the "reds" and even voted that communists should be excluded from membership hereafter.

PHILIPPINE constabulary stormed I and captured the fort of the rebellious Moros on Jolo island, killing or capturing most of the garrison. But before the final attack, Princess Tarhata Kiram, former University of Illinois student, and her husband, chief of the rebels, had slipped away to safety. Six Moro women were among those slain.

AMONG those who died last week was Simon E. Baldwin, twice governor of Connecticut and an eminent authority on international law. He was one of the founders of the American Bar association. Dr. O. B. Gordon, noted archeologist and director of the University of Pennsylvania's museum, died in Philadelphia.

Feed Beef for Spring Market

Plan Is Favored Because of Low Price of Cottonseed Meal and Hulls.

Because of the low price of cottonseed meal and hulls this winter, winter feeding of beef cattle for the spring market might be a good venture for farmers who are favorably located for the work.

Favorable Fattening Dates.
"The most favorable dates for fattening beef cattle are between November 1 and March 1," says Prof. R. S. Curtis, animal husbandman at the North Carolina State college. "Cattle do better in this winter months and there is not so much danger in feeding the meal. Those who wish to begin this work should do so at once, otherwise the finishing period may extend over into the warm months. Conditions then are less favorable for feeding cottonseed meal, farmers are busy in spring and the manure must be hauled out at an unfavorable time."

Professor Curtis states that when one starts to feed beef cattle with the meal, each animal should be given one pound daily and the amount be gradually increased so that a full ration be given at the end of 30 days. A safe rule to follow for the full ration is one pound of meal to each 100 pounds live weight of animal, using 2 1/2 to 3 pounds of hulls for each pound of cottonseed meal used. Where farm roughages are available the hulls should be decreased. It requires from 90 to 120 days to put a decent finish on beef cattle. Rations should be given them twice daily and water and salt kept before them at all times.

Gain of Beef Animal.
A beef animal should gain from 160 to 200 pounds during a feeding period of 120 days and under average conditions there should be a margin of two cents per pound between the buying and selling price. Most feeders figure that if they can break even and have the manure clear with 80 to 85 per cent of the fertilizing constituents of the meal in it, they have done a good piece of work. The finished animals are usually marketed during the early spring.

Calf Feeds Necessary to Make Rapid Growth

If a calf eight weeks old is to make rapid growth it will be necessary to feed it some milk with grain and hay. If it is impossible to feed it milk it will make a fairly good growth on the following mixture: Shelled corn, 30 pounds; oats, 30 pounds; wheat bran, 30 pounds; and linseed meal, 30 pounds. Mix and let the calf have all it will clean up without waste. The oats and corn may also be ground if desired. The calf should have all the bright clover hay it will eat and also all the water it will drink. Alfalfa hay can be fed instead of the clover hay, but it is not so good for young calves as is clover hay, since it is much richer in protein, which in some cases, does not agree with the calf. The calf should have a clean box stall and have plenty of sunlight.

Feed Adult Geese for Eggs Along in February

Adult geese should be fed for eggs about February 1, or so that the goslings will be hatched by the time there is good grass pasture. In feeding for eggs give a mash of equal parts by weight of corn meal, bran, and middlings or low-grade flour with 10 per cent of beef scrap, in the morning, and a feed of corn at night. A constant supply of drinking water should be provided. If geese need grain when not laying, the beef scrap should be left out and the corn meal increased in this ration to three parts.

Cull Out Poor Sows

It will not pay to carry sows through the winter if they are not satisfactory pig raisers. Sows that for any reason are not raising good litters should be fattened and sent to market. Old sows that are past the age of greatest usefulness should be replaced in the breeding herd by good gilt. Blindness, bad udders and sluggish disposition are frequently found with old sows. A sluggish, lazy sow is more apt to injure or kill her pigs.

FARM NOTES

One way to save labor is to put it on the best land.

To keep the loiter hens from eating up the profits why not eat up the loiter hens?

The term unit as applied to fertilizers means 1 per cent of 20 pounds in a ton.

A farm inventory is the first step in keeping farm accounts. On the average farm it requires about one-half a day to take it.

Many dairymen consider buckwheat middlings equal to gluten feed for milk production. They have about the same total feed value as wheat bran.

The comparatively high prices that have been paid for summer milk for the past few years have had a tendency to make a shortage of winter milk now.

Little Potatoes Good for Planting

Avoid Tubers That Are Badly Sprouted.

Plant the small ones and save expense, is the advice of E. A. Krantz of the division of horticulture, University of Minnesota, to potato growers who are beginning to think in terms of seed for next spring.

Mr. Krantz says that whole small potatoes are even better to plant than seed pieces from large tubers, provided they come from vigorous, healthy plants. If planted when weather conditions are unfavorable there is less likelihood of the whole small potato rotting in the ground than there is of the seed pieces cut from large potatoes.

"Growers who have kept up seed plots will be perfectly safe in planting their small, unmarketable stock," says Mr. Krantz. "The small seed potato should be firm in substance, with the first sprouts just beginning to appear, and should be of a minimum weight of two ounces. Badly sprouted small potatoes should not be planted. In a time of high prices like the present growers can make a saving by using their smallest tubers, if properly grown, for this year's seed. But do not increase the acreage."

Fencing Aids Different Fields on Stock Farms

Any farmer who raises stock knows that fencing and subdividing his pasture so he can rotate the pasture gives 25 per cent more feed value to his stock because it eliminates the big percentage of feed that is trampled down. This soon pays for the price of the fence.

There is another gain, however, realized by the farmer who keeps books. The farmer who has all his fields fenced off not only pastures, but corn, oats and wheat lands is able to turn his stock in these fields during the fall and winter. The stock not only benefits from the food value of the roughage but is at the same time scattering fertilizer on the fields.

One farmer who kept track of his expenses closely said that the saving of labor cost in distributing fertilizer, as well as the smaller amount of commercial fertilizer that he had to buy, more than paid for his fence without counting the other benefits.

This farmer said: "Every farmer pays for a fence whether or not he has it, the only difference being that the farmer who has good fences gets a big return on his investment."

Imported Varieties of Clover Not Recommended

Tests of clover seed on experimental plots at Ontario Parish, in Knox county, Illinois, showed severe winter killing among all imported varieties of clover. Of the Chilean, Rumanian, Hungarian and English clovers more than 75 per cent were dead. The French seed, which is supposed to be fairly hardy in Illinois had less than a 10 per cent stand, and of the Italian there was hardly a plant remaining. The most successful stands were from seed from Ohio, Michigan, Canada and Idaho, in the order named.

Under present national regulations all of these foreign clovers are stained red so that the purchaser may recognize them immediately and be warned that they are not satisfactory for planting in this country.

Tender and Palatable Meat Is Most Desirable

If a farmer will fatten his heifers and kill and dress them properly he will have very tender and palatable meat. A quick finish is desirable because it is economical, but beef that is fattened slowly may be very good too.

Care should be taken not to excite the animal before killing, as this adversely affects the quality of the meat. The carcass should hang for at least a week of ten days before using, in order to get the best flavor.

Some people think that the best flavored beef is from mature beasts, but meat from yearlings properly fattened, killed, dressed, ripened and properly cooked is very good.

Satisfactory Ration

A simple mixture comprised of 40 parts corn and cob meal, 35 parts ground oats and approximately 25 parts of oil meal makes a very satisfactory ration where the cows have good legume roughage. If the cows are getting silage many people prefer to feed cotton seed meal instead of the linseed meal, as the silage and legume hay are both somewhat laxative and therefore the laxative qualities of the linseed meal are not so badly needed. Whichever combination is used, however, will be found an ideal feed for dairy cattle.

When Sheep Eat Wool

Did you ever find that your sheep eat wool? Not very long ago a farmer found that a number of his sheep died. So he examined one of them and found wool in its digestive organs. The sheep ate its wool because the rations fed were lacking in certain elements. A mixture, made as follows, solved the problem: Mix 10 pounds of common salt, 2 1/2 pounds of steamed bone meal, 1 1/2 pounds of air-slaked lime and 1/2 pound of iron sulphate. Keep this mixture before the sheep in boxes.

Clean Kidneys By Drinking Lots of Water

Take Salts to Flush Kidneys if Bladder Bothers or Back Hurts

Eating too much rich food may produce kidney trouble in some form, says a well-known authority, because the acids created excite the kidneys. Then they become overworked, get sluggish, clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region, rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, begin drinking lots of good water and also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days, and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity; also to neutralize the acids in the system so that they no longer irritate, thus often relieving bladder disorders.

Jad Salts can not injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to help keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus often avoiding serious kidney disorders.

Mother's Cook Book

There is a general agreement, except perhaps on the part of a few wayward ascetics, not only that health is a blessing; but that to the want of it may safely be ascribed no inconsiderable part of our present ethical and social problems.—James Harvey Robinson.

GOOD THINGS WE ENJOY

TO THE few minced pieces of left-over chicken add a little veal with a bone or two, stew and when well cooked drop in the following dumplings:

Dumplings.
Take one cupful of fresh butter milk, sift one cupful of flour with two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, add one beaten egg, some salt, mix well and drop from a teaspoon into the stew. Cook tightly covered for eight minutes, then serve at once.

Blackstone Dressing.
Mix four tablespoonfuls each of mayonnaise dressing and whipped cream, two tablespoonfuls of chili sauce, two of tomato catsup and two of vinegar. Roquefort cheese may be added if desired.

Marshmallow Salad.
Cut three slices of pineapple in dice, add a dozen quartered marshmallows, one-half cupful of chopped nuts, a cupful of seeded white grapes, the pulp of two oranges. Serve when well mixed with mayonnaise, on lettuce.

Spanish Pepper Salad.
Dissolve half a box of gelatin in half a cupful of cold water, add one-half cupful of vinegar, one-half cupful of sugar, the juice of a lemon and a tablespoonful of salt, with a cupful of boiling water. Mix six canned pimentos with two cupfuls of finely cut celery, one cupful of cut pecan meats. Serve on lettuce with mayonnaise dressing.

Friendship Village Muffins.
Beat two eggs, add four tablespoonfuls of sugar, two of shortening and one cupful of milk with flour to make a thin batter; add one teaspoonful of baking powder and beat well. Bake in muffin pans.

Western Salad.
Chop four hard-cooked eggs, four tablespoonfuls of onion also chopped, four tablespoonfuls of watermelon pickle and cheese chopped. Save out the yolks of two eggs and put through a ricer to garnish the top.

CAUTION AND COWARDS

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

WHO are the cowards? No, not those who test the bridge before they cross,
Who ask the traveler who knows,
Consult the skies when billows toss,
And watch the path they have to tread
For dangers that may lie ahead.

Who are the cowards? Fools who fear
The idle words of other fools—
Who warning signals will not hear,
Nor look for signs, nor seek for rules,
For fear some other fool may call
Precaution weakness after all.

Who are the cowards? They who race
To cross the railroad, when to pause
May bring a sneer to someone's face,
A face inclined to sneer at laws
And judgment and the common sense
Of wisdom and experience.

Who are the cowards? Fools rush in,
You know, where angels fear to tread—
Yes, fearing censure, deeply sin
And leave their monuments of dead
To prove that cowards men may be
Who think themselves all bravery.

These are the cowards. But the brave
Are those who fear not folly's sneer.
They are the ones who lives will save
And live their own with conscience clear.

Oh, this we need in every trade:
Men brave enough to be afraid.

THE WHY OF SUPERSTITIONS

By H. IRVING KING

HUSBANDS AND FIRES

IF A woman has good success in building fires she will get a good husband; if poor success she will get a lazy one.

This superstition is prevalent in Canada and some of the Western states and is found, also, in some parts of New England. It is a modern form of the age-old superstition with regard to the sacrificial fire. If the fire refused to burn brightly upon the altar it was supposed to be a sign that the sacrifice was not acceptable to the gods, whereas a bright and lively flame was taken as an omen of divine approval. The Greeks were very sensitive about the burning of their sacrificial fires and if one seemed to be reluctant to burn they resorted to the expedient of the modern domestic and poured oil upon it, thereby forcing destiny as it were. Thus we get the idea of good luck and bad luck as told by the action of the fire.

It is certainly bad luck for a woman to have a lazy husband. But the restriction of the modern superstition to women with regard to marriage comes through the application of the idea to the torch of Hymen, the Greek god of marriage who was represented as a taller and more serious youth than Eros, the god of love, but like Eros carrying a flaming torch. In the Greek marriage processions lighted torches in imitation of the torch of Hymen were carried by the bride's mother and it was accounted a presage of bad luck to have one of them refuse to burn readily or go out.

How It Started

By JEAN NEWTON

"HULLABALOO"

THIS term, meaning a great deal of noise, a sort of bedlam of sound created usually by many voices, is a good example of the wealth of color and history that is concealed in some of our commonest words.

"Hullabaloo" comes to us from the Coranach, the funeral dirge formerly in use among the Irish and Scottish Celts. This consisted of several verses detailing the life of the deceased and proclaiming in loud and mournful accents the loss of those left behind. The cries were called by the Irish "Hulagahue" and "hululu," and it is from the latter that we have the still popular "hullabaloo."
The Coranach has long ago fallen into disuse. It was superseded until the latter half of the Eighteenth century, when this also began to wane, by the beggling funeral lament of the Highlanders. In Scotch literature, however, and in references to Scotland in English literature we find many references to the older custom of the Coranach, which gave us the word "hullabaloo."

Town Behind the Times

Within 14 miles of London, the town of Downe is unique in that it has no electricity, no gas, no sewage system, no motion pictures and no doctor. It has a seven-hundred-year-old church, however, of which it is extremely proud. The houses are lighted with oil lamps and the church with candles. Only two houses have been built since 1914.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

HALF-SENTENCES

It was one of the funniest places you could imagine. In the first place the whole air was filled with half-sentences which looked as though they had just been put anywhere.

Some were shoved into crevices and some were hanging onto billboards. Some were put on houses, and some were evidently attached to trees. Some were on telegraph poles and others were on fences. Some were on garages and some were on old barns and some were on shrubs and some were attached to tall garden vases and benches.

You could see them almost anywhere and everywhere.

It was really, as you can quite imagine by this time, one of the funniest places in the whole world. It was called the Half-Sentence Town.

All of the half-sentences went there after they had been left over.

You know how people will begin a sentence and never finish it?

They will say something and then stop, or they will begin to explain something that they never do explain in the end.

Well, all these sentences go to the Half-Sentence Town.

They wait around a little while to see if they are going to be finished.

They want to be quite fair to those who have started them. They know that often people will think of the right words later on.

They would hate to feel that the people thought of the right words after they had left.

So they give them every chance to finish. They wait around and wait around and other sentences come and yet the Half-Sentences wait until they are sure they will never be finished.

Sometimes people will go back to an unfinished sentence. That is what the Half-Sentences wait for when they stay around even after they have been forgotten about.

But when they are quite sure that they will not be thought of again they go back to the place where all the Half-Sentences live.

You should see the Half-Sentences about the place. They have just put themselves anywhere, because they have always been rather carelessly treated and so they have become careless in their habits.

They wouldn't think of going in a front door after ringing a bell the way many would.

And, of course, as they are Half-Sentences they are made up of words rather than of legs which would lead them through front doors.

The Half-Sentences are like this:

"Oh, did you know—"
"I must tell you about—"
"Do you suppose—"
"What do you think of—"
"Will you be able to—"
"Do you want—"

and all such half-sentences as these.

So when you do not finish a sentence you will know that the Half-Sentence will go to the Half-Sentence Town where the Half-Sentences live.

The houses do not hold people. Nor do the garages hold motor cars.

They're all there, just like any town, but the Half-Sentences live in the odd way of which I have told you.

And they are quite happy and quite contented to be this way.

They do not object in the least!

Tells Baby's Age

A little girl entered a dry goods store and asked for a shirt for her little brother.

"What size shirt do you want?" asked the clerk. "How old is your brother?"

"Oh, I don't know," she replied, "not very old. He just takes two steps and then falls."

Fishing for Something

"What are you fishing for, little boy?"

"Whales."

"But there are no whales in this pond."

"No, nor anything else, so I might just as well fish for whales."

African Sheep Noted for Fighting Strain

Six Barbary sheep, whose parents were brought from the mountains of northern Africa, have been born at the Zoological gardens, London.

They are veritable "little bouncers," for within an hour of birth they had scaled the rocks of their home on the Mappin terraces and were to be seen surveying the world in which they found themselves, from the topmost pinnacles.

Barbary sheep are a bellicose lot, and when the males are not fighting the females are. Each mother protects her youngsters so zealously that she will not allow another to approach too near.

"If the females keep fighting too long a male comes along and stops them," said the keeper; "but, as a rule, the one who is beaten gives a squeak, as much as to say, 'Enough,' when she is allowed to depart in peace. The males squeak, too, when vanquished."

"Legal Tender"

Neither a personal check nor a Liberty bond is legal tender. Legal tender is a quality given a circulating medium by congress, and possessing this quality it becomes lawful money. All forms of money do not possess full legal-tender qualities, yet each kind has such attributes as to give it currency, and all forms are convertible into standard money.

Odd Shingle Substitute

Oscar Lundahl, Seattle, Wash., did not want to buy shingles for his summer cottage, so collected several pieces of auto license plates at garages—2,300 all told—and now has a water-tight roof on his cabin. He laid them about five inches to the weather in nailing them down, then applied a thick coat of roofing paint.

In the basketball game last Saturday night, the score was 49 to 16 in the girls' game and 42 to 8 in the boys' game, all in Carrizozo's favor. While the figures in the score are far apart, the games were highly exciting at times. Many who saw the boys work, said if the game had been with any other team in this part of the state, our boys would have won. This was Alamogordo's first defeat at the hands of Carrizozo in boys' games.

Love Pirates of Hawaii Held at Lincoln

The Operetta given last Friday night by the High School pupils was well attended and a nice sum was cleared above expenses—the money going to the School Athletic Fund.

The performance was very creditably given—the scenery, floral decorations and Hawaiian costumes making an especially attractive setting. Contrasted with the beautiful Hawaiian maidens, the realistic pirates with their knives and tattered clothes gave the audience added chills and thrills.

The cast was asked to repeat the Operetta at Fort Stanton next Tuesday night, Feb. 22.

The Parent-Teachers' Association of Lincoln is preparing a play to be put on about the middle of March. This will be a unique entertainment, so it is being advertised early.
