Committee

Thus reads letters of invitation being sent out to Southern Pacific employees and it goes without saying that the affair will be one of the most successful and perfectly carried out, of any event of a Masonic nature held in many years.

G. S. (Sephus) Brown, blacksmith at the Tucumcari shops came up Sunday morning from El Paso, where he spent the week-end. He stayed over here Sunday to visit relatives and especially to see his mother, Mrs. Eliza Brown and sister, Mrs. Maggie Espey, who are to leave for California the latter part of the month. He enjoyed a wild turkey dinner prepared by his mother and left for his duties at Tucumcari on No. 2 Monday morning.

Fireman Henry Hoffman brought in a fine 8-point buck last Sunday and fireman Bryan Cazier came in last Saturday with a nice piece of turkey. The boys are saying some nice things about the boys' good luck.—Wonder why?

Conductor R. C. O'Connor was up on his run from El Paso Tuesday and spoke about having a letter from his sister in Pennsylvania which said that they were having cold and disagreeable weather there, which differs from our Sunshine, here in New Mexico.

J. B. Jergins, of the steam shovel crew who were working at Ancho, are now at Three Rivers. The crew has 2 steam ditchers and the work of surfacing will be done with greater speed and accuracy.

Mrs. Chas. Terrell, small daughter Elgiva, Mrs. G. B. Wells and son Vaughn came up from El Paso Wednesday, and will spend the week-end here visiting their mother, Mrs. Duggar, brother Bryce Duggar and wife at their ranch in Tortolita Canyon.

Jim Hale, who resigned as section foreman a short time ago to accept a position as border patrolman at El Paso, is making a good record. Last week, he captured a gang of smugglers who had placed a barricade in the path of the officers' car, but they crashed through the barricade and Jim jumped from the car and nabbed the leader. The balance of the gang left their car standing and made their escape.

Operator and Mrs. J. F. Laverty spent last Sunday with Mr. Laverty's parents at Tularosa, returning home on 12.

Mrs. Tappan, wife of Commander Tappan, was in Carrizozo Monday morning, accompanied by her mother, Mrs. Weil and grandmother Mrs. Steiner, who left on the morning train for their home in San Diego, Cal., after spending the summer at the Tappan home.

Miss Mary Jane Harris and Joe Gentry were in Carrizozo last Saturday and remained over for the dance at the Community Hall.

People at the Fort are preparing for the coming Yule - Tide. Many events are being looked forward to with much pleasure. The Seamen's Social Club and the Trowel Club are preparing for separate entertainments for the patients, and local entertainments of various kinds are being planned for Thanksgiving Day, Christmas and New Years.

Several deer have been brought home and also some wild turkey by those who were out hunting, and the same will be served on many tables on Thanksgiving. Those who were unlucky, will be invited, and the same will be served to some extent to relieve their 'soreness' at shooting too high or too low as the cases may have been.

Strange Fatality Overhangs Property in Alamogordo

A heart-rending accident occurred Sunday afternoon when the home of Mr. and Mrs. Antonio Chavez burned and with the house their 3 months old granddaughter, the baby of Mr. and Mrs. Gabriel Gutierrez. The mother had stepped across the street to the home of a relative a few moments before, leaving the child in its little buggy in the kitchen in care of Mrs. Chavez, an aged and partly blind woman. The cause of the fire is not positively known but it is presumed that the old lady lit a match to smoke a cigaret and probably threw the lighted match in the wood box with some paper or kindling. Flames must have almost exploded, for when she found the house was afire, a neighbor, Mrs. Longwell had discovered the flames which had gained such a headway that they could not reach the infant.

The fire alarm sounded about 2 p. m. and the fire truck and volunteers were on the ground promptly but the house, being a frame building and as dry as timber, was practically burned before the water was turned on. People gathered quickly from all parts of town and the scene was a sad one, made particularly so by the grief of the young mother. Many residents recall that in the southeast part of town a baby was burned under similar circumstances a few years ago. The News is informed that in 1911 the two year old child of Mr. and Mrs. Santos Alvarado was cremated in a fire on the same lot as the fire Sunday. Thus it seems that a strange fatality has hung over that property.—Alamogordo News.

If you want to see a picture of real college life and a great football game, visit the Crystal Theatre tonight (Friday) and see Red Grange in "One Minute to Play." Tomorrow night "The Chinese Parrot," a mystery story, will be shown. Good news all next week.

Highway Activity

Highway Advertising Must Go

Following other acts along progressive lines, the State Highway Commission has ordered all advertisements and signs, save those which the Department has erected to guide tourists over the state, to be removed. This is another step in the right direction, as many accidents on the road can be traced to motorists neglecting their driving in scanning the brightly-colored signs which have been sticking to posts and fences on highways.

Many of these signs have been made and placed there by people who claim that newspaper advertising doesn't pay — but their chief motive is the cheapness of road placarding.

These very people who are adverse to newspaper advertising, are the very ones who will be the first to read the sign on the elephant's back when the circus comes to town. Another thing: advertising in newspapers, no matter how carefully read, will never cause accidents and disasters of any kind. In this act, the Highway Department, unconsciously, has perhaps done at least to some extent, a favor to the newspapers, for not being able to use the road signs, they may contribute enough in a year to help the editors buy a few messes of frijoles.

Fatal Accident Wednesday Night at Newman

When second 230 coming east from El Paso, in charge of Conductor J. F. O'Rourke, arrived at Newman at 9:30 p. m. to take water, W. H. Whitman, messenger in charge of a banana car, was on top of the car and as the train pulled out, he, in some manner, lost his balance and fell between the cars, cutting off both legs near the knees. The train was stopped and all care given the unfortunate man by the train crew, until they could provide an auto and he was taken to Hotel Dieu at El Paso, where he died at 6:30 yesterday morning. Mr. Whitman's home was in Minnesota, where the remains will be sent for interment.

How-do-You do, Football!

Thanks to the new sporting blood in the Carrizozo and Capitan High Schools, the first game of football ever played in Lincoln county, was played last Saturday between Capitan and Carrizozo and much to the surprise of many people, the score was 6 to 6, which was something remarkable.

In the game were Messrs. Kogler of our neighboring town and Riddle and Burkett of our own town. With such men at the head of the game, many more events are expected to be pulled off in the future. Football is a real man's game. You are not attending a tea party or on the golf links when engaged in this game.—It is a real game and we hope that the principals will see that we have more of it.

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. French, Mr. and Mrs. S. Ramsdale and Charles Cree were guests at a Thanksgiving Day dinner at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Morgan Lovelace.

John Fooled 'em

The Harkey hunting party returned last Saturday, all having had the good luck of killing their deer except John Harkey, who has constantly insisted that the open season on deer was a week too early. The boys twitted John quite a bit over his unsuccessful efforts, but he said nothing. After the party had disbanded, John made a lone trip to the regions near White Oaks and inside of two hours after leaving his friends, he had one of the finest 8 point bucks that has been killed in this locality. Now, it appears, that John had at no time during the hunt, made any effort to kill his deer, but to show the boys how easy it was, when he had his mind made up, he went forth and "got him."

Mrs. S. C. Berry Dies

Last Sunday, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. T. G. Grafton at Angus, Mrs. S. C. Berry, aged 83 and one of the oldest residents of Lincoln county, passed away.

Mrs. Berry was married in Anderson county, Texas in the year of 1875 and came to New Mexico in 1884, locating on the Bonito, where she has since resided. To the union of the Berrys were added two children, Mrs. T. G. Grafton and Wm. Berry, the last named child dying 40 years ago. Mrs. Berry made her home with her daughter since the death of her husband, which occurred in 1913.

The funeral services were conducted by the Rev. J. H. Skinner Monday afternoon and the remains interred in the Angus cemetery. The funeral was attended by the many friends of the family from over the entire county, who extend their deepest sympathies to the Grafton family.

Yesterday afternoon at about 4:30, a big airplane with a large red nose, came in from the east, made several circuits over town and finally landed at the ball park. The plane came from Lincoln, Nebraska and stayed over night, leaving early this morning for California.

CHAPTER IX—Continued

"Oh, no! I can't stand it! I'll tell you everything!" she cried, frenziedly. "He got to the foot of the staircase—Richard Fleming, I mean," she was facing the detective, now, "and he had the blue-print you've been talking about. I had told him Jack Bailey was here as the gardener and he said if I screamed he would tell that. I was desperate. I threatened him with the revolver but he took it from me. Then when I tore the blue-print from him—he was shot—from the stairs—"

"By Bailey!" interjected Beresford angrily.

"I didn't even know he was in the house!" Bailey's answer was as instant as it was hot. Meanwhile the doctor had entered the room, hardly noticed, in the middle of Dale's confession, and now stood watching the scene intently from a post by the door.

"What did you do with the blue-print?" The detective's voice beat at Dale like a whip.

"I put it first in the neck of my dress—"

"Then, when I found you were watching me, I hid it, somewhere else."

"Did you give it to Bailey?"

"No—I hid it—and then I told where it was—to the doctor—" Dale swung on her feet. All turned surprisedly toward the doctor. Miss Cornelia rose from her chair.

The doctor bore the battery of eyes unflinchingly.

"That's rather inaccurate," he said, with a tight little smile. "You told me where you had placed it, but when I went to look for it, it was gone."

"Are you quite sure of that?" queried Miss Cornelia acidly.

The doctor's voice gained strength. "Absolutely," he said. He ignored the rest of the party, addressing himself directly to Anderson.

"She said she had hidden it inside one of the rolls that were on the tray on the table," he continued, in tones of easy explanation, approaching the table as he did so, and tapping it with the box of sleeping powders he had brought for Miss Cornelia.

"She was in such distress that I finally went to look for it. It wasn't there."

"Do you realize the significance of this paper?" Anderson boomed, at once.

"Nothing, beyond the fact that Miss Ogden was afraid it linked her with the crime." The doctor's voice was very clear and firm.

Anderson pondered an instant. Then—

"I'd like to have a few minutes with the doctor alone," he said, solemnly.

The group about him dissolved at once. Miss Cornelia, her arm around her niece's waist, led the latter gently to the door. As the two lovers passed each other a glance flashed between them—a glance, pathetically brief, of longing and love. Dale's finger-tips brushed Bailey's hand, gently, in passing.

"Beresford," commanded the detective, "take Bailey to the library and see that he stays there."

Beresford tapped his pocket with a significant gesture and motioned Bailey to the door. They, too, left the room. The door closed. The doctor and the detective were alone.

The detective spoke at once—and surprisingly.

"Doctor, I'll have that blue-print!" he said sternly, his eyes the color of steel.

The doctor gave him a wary little glance.

"But I've just made the statement that I didn't find the blue-print," he reaffirmed flatly.

"I heard you!" Anderson's voice was very dry. "Now this situation is between you and me, Doctor Wells. His forefinger sought the doctor's chest. "It has nothing to do with that poor fool of a cashier. He hasn't got either those securities or the money from them, and you know it. It's in this house, and you know that, too! Tonight, when you claimed to be making a professional call, you were in this house—and I think you were on that staircase when Richard Fleming was killed!"

"No, Anderson, I'll swear I was not!" The doctor might be acting, but if he was, it was incomparable acting. The terror in his voice seemed too real to be feigned.

But Anderson was remorseless.

"I'll tell you this," he continued. "Miss Van Garder very cleverly got a thumb-print of yours tonight. Does that mean anything to you?"

His eyes bored into the doctor—the eyes of a poker-player, bluffing on a hidden card. But the doctor did not flinch.

"Nothing," he said, firmly. "I have not been upstairs in this house in three months."

The accent of truth in his voice seemed so unmistakable that even Anderson's shrewd brain was puzzled by it. But he persisted in his attempt to bring a confession from this man's breast.

"Before Courtleigh Fleming died—did he tell you anything about a hidden secret in this house?" he queried cannily. "You haven't been trying to frighten these women out of here with anonymous letters so you could get in?"

"No. Certainly not." But again the doctor's air had that odd mixture of truth and falsehood in it.

The detective paused for an instant.

"Let me see your key-ring!" he ordered. The doctor passed it over silently. The detective glanced at the keys—then, suddenly, his revolver glittered in his other hand.

The doctor watched him, anxiously. A puff of wind rattled the panes of the French windows. The storm, quieted for a while, was gathering its strength for a fresh unleashing of its dogs of thunder.

The detective stepped to the terrace door, opened it, and then quietly proceeded to try the doctor's keys in the lock. Thus located he was out of visual range, and Wells took advantage of it at once. He moved swiftly toward the fireplace, extracting the missing piece of blue-print from an inside pocket as he did so. The secret the blue-print guarded was already graven on his mind in indelible characters—now he would destroy all evidence that it had ever been in his possession and bluff through the rest of the situation as best he might.

He threw the paper toward the flames with a nervous gesture of relief. But for once his cunning failed—the throw was too hurried to be sure and the light scrap of paper wavered and settled to the floor just outside the fireplace. The doctor swore noiselessly and stooped to pick it up and make sure of its destruction. But he was not quick enough. Through the window the detective had seen the incident, and the next moment the doctor heard his voice bark behind him. He turned, and stared at the leveled muzzle of Anderson's revolver.

"Hands up and stand back!" he commanded.

As he did so Anderson picked up the paper, and a sardonic smile crossed his face as his eyes took in the significance of the print. He laid his revolver down on the table where he could snatch it up again at a moment's notice.

"Behind a fireplace, eh?" he muttered. "What fireplace? In what room?"

"I won't tell you!" The doctor's voice was sullen. He inched gingerly, cautiously, toward the other side of the table.

"All right—I'll find it, you know." The detective's eyes turned swiftly back to the blue-print. For a moment, as he bent over the paper again, he was off guard.

The doctor seized the moment with a savage promptitude and sprang. There followed a silent, furious struggle between the two. Under normal circumstances, Anderson would have been the stronger and quicker, but the doctor fought with an added strength of despair and his initial leap had pinioned the detective's arms behind him. Now the detective shook one hand free and snatched at the revolver—in vain, for the doctor, with a groan of desperation, struck at his hand as his fingers were about to close on the smooth butt and the revolver skidded from the table to the floor. With a sudden terrible movement he pinioned both the detective's arms behind him again and reached for the telephone. Its heavy base descended on the back of the detective's head with stunning force—and the next moment the battle was ended and the doctor, panting with exhaustion, held the limp form of an unconscious man in his arms.

He lowered the detective to the floor and bent swiftly over Anderson, listening to his heart. Good—the man still breathed—he had enough on his conscience without adding the murder of a detective to the black weight. Now he pocketed the revolver and the blue-print—gagged Anderson rapidly with a knotted handkerchief and proceeded to wrap his own muffer around the detective's head as an additional silencer. Anderson gave a faint sigh.

The doctor thought rapidly. Soon or late the detective would return to consciousness—with his hands free he could easily tear out the gag. He looked wildly about the room for a rope—a curtain—ah, he had it—the detective's own handkerchief! He snatched the cuffs on Anderson's wrists, then realized that, in his hurry, he had bound the detective's hands in front of him instead of behind him. Well—it would do, for the moment—he did not need much time to carry out his plans. He dragged the limp body, his head lolting, into the billiard room where he deposited it on the floor in the corner farthest from the door.

So far, so good—now to lock the door of the billiard room. Fortunately, the key was there, on the inside of the door. He quickly transferred it to the outside and peeked the key. Then he crossed cautiously into the alcove and started to pad up the stairs, his face white and strained with excitement and hope.

And it was then that there happened one of the most dramatic events of the night. It was preceded by a desperate hammering on the door of the terrace. It halted the doctor on his way upstairs, drew Beresford on a run into the living room, and even reached the bedrooms of the women up above.

"My God! What's that?" Beresford panted.

The doctor indicated the door. It was too late now. Already he could hear Miss Cornelia's voice above; it was only a question of a short time until Anderson in the billiard room revived and would try to make his plight known. And in the brief moment of that resume of his position, the knocking came again. But feebler, as though the suppliant outside had exhausted his strength.

As Beresford drew his revolver and moved to the door, Miss Cornelia came in, followed by Lizzie.

"It's the Bat," Lizzie announced mournfully. "Good-by, Miss Nelly."

Rouse Yourself, Man! He Said.

Good-by, everybody. I saw his hand, all covered with blood. He's had a good night for sure!"

But they ignored her. And Beresford lunged open the door.

But what they had expected, what sure of horror or of fear they waited for, no one can say. But there was no horror and no fear; only unutterable amazement as an unknown man, in torn and muddled garments, with a streak of dried blood seaming his forehead like a scar, fell through the open doorway into Beresford's arms.

"Good God!" muttered Beresford, dropping his revolver to catch the strange burden. For a moment the Unknown lay in his arms like a corpse. Then he straightened dizzily, staggered into the room, took a few steps toward the table and fell prostrate upon his face, at the end of his strength.

"Doctor!" gasped Miss Cornelia, dazedly—and the doctor, whatever guilt lay on his conscience, responded at once to the call of his profession.

He bent over the Unknown Man—the physician once more—and made a brief examination.

"He's fainted!" he said, rising. "Strike on the head, too."

"But who is he?" faltered Miss Cornelia.

"I never saw him before," said the doctor. "It was obvious that he spoke the truth. "Does anyone recognize him?"

All crowded about the Unknown, trying to read the riddle of his identity. Miss Cornelia rapidly revised her first impressions of the stranger. When he had first fallen through the doorway into Beresford's arms, she had not known what to think. Now, in the brighter light of the living room she saw that the still face, beneath its mask of dirt and dried blood, was strong and fairly youthful—if the man were a criminal, he belonged, like the Bat, to the upper fringes of the world of crime. She noted mechanically that his hands and feet had been tied—ends of frayed rope still dangled from his wrists and ankles. And that terrible injury on his head—she shuddered and closed her eyes.

"Does anyone recognize him?" repeated the doctor, but one by one the others shook their heads. Crook, casual tramp, or honest laborer unexpectedly caught in the sinister toils of the Cedarcrest affair—his identity seemed a mystery to one and all.

The Unknown stirred feebly—made an effort to sit up. Beresford and the doctor caught him under the arms and helped him to his feet. He stood there a while, a blank expression on his face.

"A chair!" said the doctor, quickly. "Ah—"

He helped the strange figure to sit down and bent over him again. "You're all right now, my friend," he said in his best tones of professional cheerfulness. "Daisy a bit, aren't you?"

The Unknown rubbed his wrists where his hands had not been. He made an effort to speak.

"Water!" he said in a low voice. The doctor gestured to Billy. "Get some water—or whisky—if there is any—that'd be better."

Beresford had been looking about for the detective, puzzled not to find him, as usual, in charge of affairs. Now, "Where's Anderson? This is a police matter!" he said, making a movement as if to go in search of him.

The doctor stopped him quickly.

"He was here a minute ago—he'll be back presently," he said, praying to whatever gods he served that Anderson, bound and gagged in the billiard room, had not yet returned to consciousness.

Unobserved by all except Miss Cornelia, the mention of the detective's name had caused a strange reaction in the Unknown. His eyes had opened—he had started—the haze in his mind had seemed to clear away for a moment. Then, for some reason, his shoulders had slumped again and the look of apathy came back to his face. But, stunned or not, it seemed possible that he was not quite as dazed as he appeared.

The doctor gave the slumped shoulders a little shake.

"Rouse yourself, man!" he said. "What has happened to you?"

"I'm dazed!" said the Unknown, thickly and slowly. "I can't remember." He passed a hand weakly over his forehead.

"What a night!" sighed Miss Cornelia, sinking into a chair. "Richard Fleming murdered in this house—and now—this!"

The Unknown shot her a stealthy glance from beneath lowered eyelids. But when she looked at him, his face was blank again.

"Why doesn't somebody ask his name?" queried Dale.

The doctor took Dale's suggestion. "What's your name?"

Silence from the Unknown—and that blank stare of stupefaction.

"Look at his papers." It was Miss Cornelia's voice.

The doctor and Bailey searched the torn trousers pockets, the pockets of the muddled shirt, while the Unknown submitted passively, not seeming to care what happened to him. But search him as they would—it was in vain.

"Not a paper on him," said Jack Bailey, at last, straightening up.

A crash of breaking glass from the head of the alcove stairs put a period to his sentence. All turned toward the stairs—or all except the Unknown, who, for a moment, half rose in his chair, his eyes gleaming, his face alert, the mask of bewildered apathy gone from his face.

As they watched, a rigid little figure of horror backed slowly down the alcove stairs and into the room—Billy, the Japanese, his oriental placidity disturbed at last, inappreciable terror written in every line of his face.

"Billy—what is it?"

The diminutive butler made a piteous attempt at his usual grin.

"It—nothing," he gasped. The Unknown relapsed in his chair—again the dazed stranger from nowhere.

Beresford took the Japanese by the shoulders.

"Now see here!" he said sharply. "You've seen something! What was it?"

Billy trembled like a leaf.

"Ghost! Ghost!" he muttered frantically, his face working.

"He's concealing something. Look at him!" Miss Cornelia stared at her servant. "Brooks, close the door!" pointing at the terrace door in the alcove, which still stood ajar after the entrance of the Unknown.

Bailey moved to obey. But just as he reached the alcove—the terrace door slammed shut in his face. At the same moment every light in Cedarcrest blinked and went out again.

Bailey fumbled for the door-knob in the sudden darkness.

"The door's locked!" he said, incredulously. "The key's gone, too. Where's your revolver, Beresford?"

"I dropped in it the alcove when I caught that man," called Beresford, cursing himself for his carelessness.

The illuminated dial of Bailey's wrist watch flickered in the darkness as he searched for the revolver—a round, glowing spot of phosphorescence.

Lizzie screamed. "The eye! The gleaming eye! I saw on the stairs!" she shrieked, pointing at it frenziedly.

"Quick—there's a candle on the table—light it somebody—never mind the revolver—I have one!" called Miss Cornelia.

"Right!" called Beresford, cheerily, in reply. He found the candle—lit it—

The party blinked at each other for a moment, still unable quite to co-ordinate their thoughts.

Bailey rattled the knob of the door into the hall.

"This door's locked, too!" he said, with increasing puzzlement. A gasp went over the group. They were locked in the room, while some devilment was going on in the rest of the house. But what it might be, what form it might take, they had not the remotest idea.

But it was not until Miss Cornelia took the candle and proceeded toward the hall door to examine it that the full horror of the situation burst upon them.

Neatly fastened to the white panel of the door, chest high and hurdly more than just dead, was the body of a bat.

Of what happened thereafter no one afterward remembered the details. To be shut in there, at the mercy of one who knew no mercy, was intolerable. It was left for Miss Cornelia to remember her own revolver, lying unnoticed on the table since the crime earlier in the evening, and to suggest its use in shattering the lock.

Just what they had expected when the door was finally opened they did not know. But the house was quiet and in order; no new horror faced them in the hall; their candle revealed no bloody figure, their ears heard no unearthly sound.

Slowly they began to search the house. Since no room was apparently immune from danger, the men made no pretence when the women insisted on accompanying them. And as time went on and chamber after chamber was discovered empty and undisturbed, gradually the courage of the party began to rise. Lizzie, still whimpering, stuck closely to Miss Cornelia's heels, but that spirit lady began to make small side excursions of her own.

Of the men, only Bailey, Beresford and the doctor could really be said to search at all. Billy had remained below, impassive of face but rolling of eye; the Unknown, after an attempt to depart with them, had sunk back weakly into his chair again, and the detective, Anderson, was still unaccountably missing.

As time went on and the silence and peace remained unbroken, the conviction grew on them that the Bat had in this manner achieved his object and departed. Had done his work, signed it after his usual fashion, and gone.

And thus were matters when Miss Cornelia, happening on the attic staircase with Lizzie at her heels, decided to look about her up there. And went up.

ISAIAH TEACHES TRUE WORSHIP

LESSON TEXT—Isa. 1:1-20.
GOLDEN TEXT—"O magnify the Lord with me and let us exalt his name together. I saw the Lord and he heard me and delivered me from all my fears."

PRIMARY TOPIC—Worshiping God.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Worship That Pleases God.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Worship That Pleases God.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Nature of True Worship.

Isaiah had a long mission, beginning in the days of Uzziah and extending through the reign of Jotham, Ahaz and Hezekiah. For a history of the nation in this time see II Kings, chapters 16 to 20. Isaiah's visions present the redemptive purpose of God through the consummation of Messiah's kingdom. Chapter 1 is the title to the whole book. It contains the great arraignment of the people for their sins.

- The Moral State of the People (vs. 2-4).
- Final ingratitude (v. 2).
- The universe is summoned to hear the Lord's complaint against Judah and Israel for their base ingratitude.
- Brutal stupidity (v. 3).
- The ox and the ass are proverbially stupid, but Israel's stupidity exceeded theirs. Israel would not recognize His right as sovereign, nor author of mercy.
- Habitual evil doers (v. 4).
- They were not sinners in act merely, but in nature and heart were laden with iniquity. By heredity they passed their vices from generation to generation.

11. Their Consequent Miseries (vs. 5-9).

- Their perplexity (v. 5).
- Chastisement only hardened them. Their afflictions were followed by deeper and more heinous sins.
- Their awful confusion (v. 6).
- The calamity which befell them extended to all classes. No one was able to minister to their comfort.
- Desolations in the country (vs. 7, 8).
- Revolts from within and invasions from without left their country desolate. Physical ruin always follows moral and spiritual decadence.
- A saved remnant assured (v. 9).
- God's purposes cannot fail. A remnant was saved in Israel—a remnant shall be saved in the church.

12. Formal Worship Rebuked (vs. 10-15).

Their awful calamities were not due to the neglect of religious rites and ceremonies. They punctiliously observed the forms of religion while indulging in iniquitous practices.

- God does not need sacrifices (v. 11).
- Worship and service are not for God's benefit, but for that of the worshipers themselves.
- God's attitude toward formal worship (vs. 12-14).
- The very rites and ceremonies which God ordained for the purpose of helping men to approach Him become disgusting and irksome to Him.
- God's refusal (v. 15).
- Every act of worship while the heart and life are steeped with iniquity only incites the anger of the Holy One.

13. An Amended Life God's Requirement (vs. 16-20).

Though the nation had so grievously sinned, their case was not hopeless. In order to enjoy that mercy there must be:

- A cleansing.
- "Wash you, make you clean." The washing by water symbolized the cleansing by the blood of the Son of God.
- "Put away the evil of your doings." There could be no cleansing while continuing in sin.
- "Cease to do evil."
- "Learn to do well" (v. 17).
- One can only cease to do evil by learning to do well.
- "Seek judgment."
- One must not only be upright himself but should protest against the wrongdoing of others. Burdens should be removed from the oppressed. Justice should be done to the fatherless and the widows should be befriended.
- Encouragement to come to God (v. 18).
- Though their guilt was great and the judgment which befell them was awful, God's pardoning and cleansing grace were sufficient.
- Conditional promise (v. 19).
- This means that they could only enjoy good on God's terms.
- Solemn warning (v. 20).
- Rebellion against God brings ruin.

Religion

Trusting God with a sincere and open heart, ready to obey what He suggests, asking His guidance, and ready to take it, believing in Him and simply trusting life to Him—that is religion.—James Reid.

Cost of Discipleship

Christ tells us to count the cost of discipleship, but He never asks us to count the gain. He knew we could not; there is no arithmetic to compute that.—W. L. Walkwood.

Horn Heralded Coming of Early Locomotive

The earliest locomotives had nothing more in the nature of a warning of the engine's approach than a tin horn blown by the engineer at more or less frequent intervals, but under some circumstances this proved inadequate. The resulting volume of sound depended largely upon the lung power of the engineer and the direction and force of wind.

On a spring morning of the year 1833 a farmer was driving to market with a load of butter and eggs and, being unfamiliar with locomotives, he lapsed on the track too long and failed to hear the warning signal from the tin horn, whereupon the whole outfit was scattered over the landscape.

The bill which the company had to pay was regarded as staggering and Ashland Baxter, who was director of the company concerned, paid a visit to George Stephenson at Alton Grange to confer with the great inventor to ascertain if something in the nature of an adequate warning could not be invented to keep people off the track. The result was that Stephenson made the steam whistle which was immediately adopted for all locomotives then in use and has continued as a permanent feature of all locomotives built in the mean time.

Fighting the Mississippi

The levees on the Mississippi river have been in existence from the eighteenth century. Formerly under the slave system each planter along the river had dikes erected for himself. The towns then took action, finally the counties, and the states building levees. Then congress in 1879 appointed the Mississippi river commission, but made no provision for the actual building of levees or protection of the lands from overflow. In 1881 congress made the first appropriation for the improvement of the Mississippi river. From 1879, under the commission, the federal government has expended more than $50,000,000 in the improvement of the Mississippi river and the protection of lands from overflow.

Centipede House Fly Enemy

The centipede is found pretty much all over the world. The species common in the United States, Centigeres Forceps, was reported over 20 years ago as devoting the nights to killing house flies. Later an observer detected one in the act of capturing a butterfly much larger than itself. The insect remains concealed during the day.

New England Is Devastated by Floods

This air view of Montpelier, Vt., gives an indication of the condition throughout much of New England during the floods that have destroyed so many lives and such vast amounts of property. The state capitol is seen at the right and a wrecked railway bridge at the left.

Governor of Colorado Meets Striking Miners

Governor Adams of Colorado refused to deal with the L. W. W. leaders in regard to the coal mine strike, but did receive a delegation from the strikers, headed by Karl Clemmons, whose hand he is seen shaking in this photo.

Approaches Perpetual Motion

Inventor Henry W. Lavigne of Worcester, Mass., with his motor which builds up a mere spark into horse power to do work and will run indefinitely. It is claimed. The electricity gives off no heat and will not shock, it is said. Experts state that the motor may revolutionize the automobile and airplane industries, and it will be tested on a trip of an automobile equipped with the engine, headed toward the Pacific coast.

Best of the Sheepshearers

Musical Hog-Calling

Experienced hog-callers listened with astonishment at Edwardsville, Ill., as Mrs. Amy Eaton uttered the first coloratura swine call on record in America. A former teacher of vocal music, but now an expert raiser of hogs, Mrs. Eaton calmly surveyed the audience of 3,000 and took a deep breath. "Soney-soy Peeg," she intoned on the lower reaches of the hog-caller's register. She intoned both feet firmly and a high soprano tone smote the ears of the assembled farmers. "Whoo-oo-oo-hoo-ye!"—holding a shrill note and performing the acrobatics of a Galli-Curci—"Whoo-ye!" The judges rose to a man, telling her she had won the prize—a carload of fertilizer.—Indianapolis News.

A woman is the champion "bee king" of South Dakota. She is Mrs. Charles H. Blackwell of Rapid City, who ships 50,000 pounds of honey from her bee farm annually. As a child Mrs. Blackwell was mortally afraid of bees. Seeking a business career after her mother died, however, she invested $75 in her first bees. She now has 875 colonies. Some swarms contain as many as 75,000 bees.

A Benefactor

A physician who reaches out to benefit humanity leaves a record behind him that is worth while. Such a man was Dr. R. V. Pierce.

His study along medical lines, and his knowledge of the remedial qualities of herbs and plants led to the discovery of his wonderful herbal remedy, Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It is just the tonic required if a woman is borne down by pain and sufferings at regular or irregular intervals, by nervousness or dizzy spells, headache or backache. Favorite Prescription can be had in tablet form as well as liquid at your neighborhood store.

Engineering Achievements

Mr. J. H. Dyer, General Manager of the Southern Pacific Company, gives us some facts concerning his great transportation system.

The construction of the S. P. has been a series of engineering achievements. The most difficult mountain passes in North America have been crossed, and no matter what route the traveler takes, he is sure to cross at least two noted achievements of Southern Pacific Engineers.

The S. P. offers 4 routes across North America. One of the most important of these is the Golden State route, which starts with the C. R. I. & P. at Chicago, connecting with the Southern Pacific at Tucumcari and thence to California. The other routes are the Sunset, through Texas and Louisiana to New Orleans, thence by steamship to New York, the Overland route from San Francisco east through Nevada and Utah, and the Shasta route along the Pacific coast from San Francisco to Portland, Oregon.

The S. P. has its own hospital, with doctors, nurses, etc.; its own insurance plan which employees receive a maximum amount of insurance for a minimum cost, and also has a very fine pension system for its old employees.

It has always been a sound financial organization since its inception and its stock is one of the leading sound market stocks of today.

At the close of the year 1926, the S. P. had 58,680 stockholders and it has in its employ more than 94,000 people, which, if located at one place, would form a city almost the size of El Paso.

This railroad company has in San Francisco, a 10-story office building which is the largest building in the world devoted entirely to transportation.

It forms one of the world's largest transportation systems, as, in the year 1926, it operated and controlled 16,662 miles of rail lines in the United States and Mexico, and about 3825 miles of water lines, and in this same year it owned 79,170 freight cars, 2927 passenger cars, 2440 locomotives, 23 ocean steamships, 23 ferry and car transportation ferry boats, 4 river steamers, besides other improvements in rail and floating equipment. It also had a half ownership in 33,346 refrigerator cars.

In keeping with its policy of progress, the Southern Pacific lines, during the year 1926, spent for road extensions, rolling stock, floating equipment and other additions and betterments, the sum of about 59 million dollars, and to provide for increased requirements and to replace vacated equipment, the company will add to its equipment during 1927, 18 locomotives, 81 passenger cars, 2800 freight cars, and 21 company service cars, at an estimated cost of $9,400,000.

During the month of December, 1927, there will be placed in service by the Southern Pacific

The Covered Wagon

WINDING ITS WAY across the untilled plains, through treacherous mountain passes, over burning deserts, the covered wagon journeyed westward.

After weary months the pioneers reached the west and built their homes.

Today! A minute—and from the site of that early homestead the son of the frontiersman is talking to Denver, to Chicago, to New York—or to London!

The covered wagon is a romantic memory. The long distance telephone, throbbing symbol of modern life, has made the East and West one.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Election Day Results in New York, Detroit and Elsewhere.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

GOV. AL SMITH'S stock as a Presidential nominee possibility, already pretty high, took quite a jump as a result of the elections in New York state. The Democratic organizations elected nearly all their candidates in the metropolitan district, but the party's biggest victory was in the vote on the nine proposed constitutional amendments. The governor opposed the sixth of these, to lengthen the term of the governor to four years and hold the state elections in Presidential years, and this was defeated by a huge majority. The other eight proposed amendments, all supported by Smith, went over by big votes. One of them raises the debt limit of New York city so that additional bonds for $30,000,000 may be issued for new subway construction. The adoption of this was considered a personal victory for Mayor Walker.

Detroit's exciting majority election resulted in the defeat of Mayor John W. Smith, an avowed enemy of prohibition, by John C. Lodge, the candidate of the Anti-Saloon league and other reform organizations on a bono dry program. However, the glow of the dry was somewhat tempered when Mr. Lodge, who had maintained silence during the campaign, asserted that he was absolutely free from obligations and pledges, and continued:

"This wet and dry matter was dragged into the campaign. It was never an issue. We can have orderly law enforcement without asking the aid or advice of the professional drys, with the emphasis on 'professional.' There will be positively no 'mooing'."

In Ohio the Anti-Saloon league met with defeat when the voters rejected the Marshall bill which would place justices of the peace on a fee salary basis and thereby give them authority to hear and decide cases involving infractions of the prohibition laws.

Lovers of horse racing and those who like to bet on the ponies rejoiced in the victory of Judge Flem D. Sampson, Republican, over J. C. W. Beckham, Democrat, for governor of Kentucky. The winner made his campaign as a friend of racing, and the loser was opposed to it and to pari-mutuel betting, and the Kentucky Jockey club took a most active part in the fight.

Senator-elect William S. Vare of Pennsylvania scored in Philadelphia, where his campaign manager, Harry A. Mackey, was elected mayor, defeating J. Hampton Moore, Citizens' party candidate. But this may involve Mr. Vare in a new slush fund scandal, for the Citizens' party council asserts that the Vare forces expended "approximately $1,000,000" and crowded the polls with watchers and workers, "some of whom not only intimidated voters but doled out copious allowances of $10 notes and dispensed liquid refreshments lavishly." Wherefore the council may seek to invalidate the election.

At this writing it appears certain that James Rolph, Jr., was re-elected mayor of San Francisco, defeating James E. Power.

Indianapolis has a new mayor, who will serve until 1930, when the city manager system goes into effect. He is L. Frit Slack, former United States district attorney, and he was elected by the city council to fill the unexpired term of John Duvall, who resigned after conviction of embezzlement. Slack at times has served as an attorney for the Klan and for the Anti-Saloon league. He is personally a dry. His friends point out he is not a Klansman, and that his sole income has always been his legal fees.

It is being splattered all over the place down in Washington, where the grand jury is investigating the alleged attempts to fix the Fall-Sinclair jury or to subject the jurors to improper surveillance. William J. Burns, head of the detective agency whose operatives were employed by persons acting for the defense, sought to justify the actions of his men, asserting that the defense had the same right to shadow and observe jurors as the prosecution has. An apparent attempt to start a back-fire was the charge made by Burns' men that a young assistant attorney general had had improper contact with one of the jurors, but this fell through. A. Mason Day and Sheldon Clark, Sinclair company officials who were charged with directing the operations of the detectives and receiving their reports, refused to testify before the grand jury as to who actually hired and paid the investigators and what relationship existed between them and Harry Sinclair. Both Day and Clark were arrested and held under bonds. Every Burns operative who was sent to Washington for the Teapot Dome job was quizzed by the government prosecutors in the effort to establish the identity of two strangers who approached Jurors J. J. Costinette and G. P. Grenfall, as related by those two men to the grand jury.

SEVERAL thousand residents of the Mississippi valley, with Mayor Thompson of Chicago and a big delegation of his admirers at their head, went to Washington and presented to the house committee their demands for comprehensive flood control legislation. Mr. Thompson, Governor Small of Illinois, Mayor O'Keefe of New Orleans and a number of others addressed the committee, and while no specific legislative program was proposed there was agreement among the speakers that the federal government must assume complete responsibility for the adoption of a program to avert future flood disasters on the Mississippi. Willingness was expressed for the most part to support whatever program might be recommended by the army engineers. There was insistence that other legislative projects, which might be attached to a Mississippi flood control bill, be kept separate.

While in the national capital Mayor Thompson reached an agreement with General Jadwin, army chief of engineers, in Chicago's water meter dispute with the government.

NEW ENGLAND'S floods, which spread death and disaster throughout several states, are subsiding, but the conditions in the stricken regions are so serious that President Coolidge and the Red Cross were asked to go to the rescue. Bitterly cold weather, impassable roads, shortage of food supplies and threatened outbreaks of pestilence combined to render the situation of the people desperate. About 150 lives were lost in the floods, and the damage to property probably will run far into the millions. Farmers lost great quantities of live stock and in many cases all their buildings were swept away. In cities and towns along the rivers the losses of both lives and property were heavy.

CONTRACTS calling for the construction of eight Atlantic cargo airplanes, similar to the one piloted across the Pacific to Hawaii by Lieutenants Mallard and Hegenberger, have been let by the War department. The planes will cost approximately $35,000 apiece. They are trimotored monoplane, with a capacity of ten persons to each plane.

FROM native sources comes the story of the heroic fight and tragic death of Lieut. E. A. Thomas and Sergt. Frank Dowdell, American marine aviators who were killed by Nicaraguan rebels several weeks ago. When their plane crashed they escaped unhurt and made their way toward Jilgao, capturing two prisoners whom they met. One of these men suddenly attacked one of the marines with a machete, severely wounding him. The other marine shot the rebel dead, but the other prisoner fled and carried word of the happening to Sandino. The outlaw leader sent a force that trapped the marines in a cave. In the desperate fight that followed the Americans killed a number of the guerrillas before they were themselves shot to death.

SOVIET RUSIA celebrated the tenth anniversary of the Bolshevik revolution with great demonstrations in Moscow and other cities. In the capital a wild, cheering throng of a million men, women and children marched through the streets, passing before the tomb of Lenin, on which stood President Kollin of the soviet union. Thirty thousand troops under General Voroshiloff took part in the parade. In Shanghai, China, and Harbin, Manchuria, the White Russians staged counter demonstrations and there were bloody encounters between the two factions, which were finally ended by the consular guards.

SEYMOUR PARKER GILBERT, the American agent general for reparations payments, scolded the German federal states recently for their lax administration of finances, and part of the German press and public was greatly offended by what was considered dictatorial interference. Especially was Bavaria angered, and that state and Wurttemberg threatened to separate from the German republic and join Austria. It developed later that Mr. Gilbert issued his warning at the instigation of the government in Berlin to open the way to administrative reform and financial economies. Chancellor Marx planned a trip to Munich to calm down the Bavarians.

FRANCE has arranged for the disposal of $75,000,000 in government 5 per cent bonds to the Swedish Match company and thus will be enabled to retire the balance of the 8 per cent Morgan loan of 1920. Financiers in Paris believe—the Swedish concern expects sooner or later to get the very lucrative French match monopoly. From the start the Swedes will win important commercial advantages by the deal. The French agree to buy millions of francs worth of match-making machinery, which the Swedes alone manufacture, in the hope of trying to make a good thing out of the monopoly, the potential value of which is evident from the fact that everybody in the world wants to exploit it.

GEN. ARNULFO GOMEZ, Presidential candidate in Mexico, and chief of the late insurrection, was captured with a number of his supporters in the mountain region of the state of Vera Cruz by Gen. Gonzalo Escobar. Gomez and his nephew, Francisco Viqueira, were summarily tried by court-martial and executed. Later several of the military officers who had followed his fortunes were condemned and shot.

Generals Matias and Espinosa, leaders of the Yaqui Indians lately in rebellion against the Mexican government, have surrendered and with 600 of the Indians were taken to Mexico City. The Yaquis were lodged in barracks to await forced enlistment in various sections of the army. The entire tribe will be dispersed in accordance with the plans laid by General Obregon some time ago.

COLORADO'S coal-mine strike seems to be fizzling out, for the men have lost nearly all their leaders. Thirty of them were arrested by the state police in a concerted drive designed to put an end to illegal picketing, and though new leaders sprang up, the men appeared to have lost heart and were reported returning to work in considerable numbers. On the other hand there were stories of plots to storm the falls at Walsenburg and Pueblo and release the imprisoned agitators, and at the former place a mob of 400 strikers attacked a squad of state policemen and severely beat six National Guard officers.

MILICENT ROGERS, daughter of M. Henry H. Rogers of New York, who recently divorced Count Salm von Hoegstraeten, was married last week to Arturo Peralta Ramos of Argentina. It was reported the bride received $500,000 from her father as a wedding gift. The couple sailed for the groom's home in South America.

ANOTHER wedding, of more interest in Europe, was that of Princess Anne of France, daughter of the Duke of Guise, pretender to the throne of France, and Prince Amadeo Umberto, Duke of Apulia and cousin of the king of Italy. The ceremony was performed in Naples and was witnessed by a brilliant gathering that included the king of Italy and Spain and many members of the nobility.

Howe About

By ED HOWE

I lately met a rather noted character who was actually an old bum. He did not realize the importance of being a gentleman. His ideas were those of an old bum; he regarded eccentricity as genius, and as sufficient excuse for his wasted life.

I do not like old bums in literature, politics, or anywhere else.

I expect men to realize their responsibilities, and meet them with some success.

The undoubted literary ability of Oscar Wilde did not excuse him for his disgusting habits.

When a man dies, people should at least be able to forget him, and not recall his immoral atrocities.

Collection of alimony has become a business, as has the collection of funds for welfare work. . . . And the collection of alimony has ruined many a useful business concern; as has welfare work. I know half a dozen business concerns that have been crippled by welfare work; by members of the firm engaging in it, in addition to giving too much, at the instigation of professionals. A business man who engages in welfare work not only causes his neighbors to hate him, and trade elsewhere, but he neglects his business.

We cannot possibly accomplish every reform recommended. Of the dozens we are told are necessary to save civilization, what are most important? I should say that as important as any is convincing yourself, and others when possible, that there is nothing in the old preaching that pleasure is found only in the broad road that leads to ruin. That is the most mischievous, untruthful doctrine that can be taught. The greatest pleasures are found in amounting to something; in the esteem of friends, neighbors. The unsuccessful, unrollable know little joy or content. There can be no pleasure in being chased by collectors, policemen, or lectured by charity workers.

A certain expert travels about to doctor sick business houses; he tells me the trouble almost invariably is bad management of sons and sons-in-law, and the clamor of widows for incomes.

The country is full of business houses founded by hard-working and capable men. Now their concerns are in charge of sons and sons-in-law who have had little training except in college, golf, tennis or society, and widows demanding dividends.

When you're having a good time, you are not accomplishing anything else, unless it is accumulating a bank ledge for next day.

I often hear that the young of the present generation have more problems to meet than I had.

There are no new problems; there has not been a new one in a hundred years.

Whether one eats from silver or pewter, he must not eat too much. Whether a man rides in airplane, automobile or buggy, he must watch out.

I remember that in the old-horse-and-buggy days, the horse occasionally got the lines under his tail, and ran away.

I was lately talking with a cattle man in Texas, and he told me that seven-tenths of men of his calling became bankrupt in the hard times following the war. I asked him what per cent of bankers went broke as a result of standing by the cattle men. He thought awhile, and expressed the opinion it was about seven-tenths, also. Are bankers as much devoted to the interests of their communities as they should be, and sometimes a little more?

We hear of degrees in a college, some of greater importance than others. Likewise in life there are studies of more practical use and importance than others. First of all is industry. Theodore Roosevelt had a habit of saying good things; one of his best was that in all history no idler is mentioned as worthily distinguished. After industry comes fairness, politeness, the accumulation of useful knowledge, good reputation, and a willingness to assist in such charity and progress as ordinary men find profitable and possible.

A strong impression in my late years is I have never known anyone to take care of himself as well as he might have done; there are always holes in every man's locker he has not used in his fight with life. He will usually assist in efforts to save the world, by means of religion or politics, and neglect himself. A man's big problem is himself, and it is usually the problem he neglects most.

Old Alerius, the Roman, said the best way to convince a man is to present the facts in a simple, logical way; the best way to convince a woman, to lie to her.

The habits of a good man are easier and pleasanter than those of a bad man. Illness is smothered in a greater man than productive and good work.

What to Give at Christmas Time

Dainty New Flower Aprons

If the Christmas program is to be carried out according to tradition there will be the usual exchange of gift aprons. Happy the recipient of one of the new flower aprons! They are made of organdie in realistic flower colorings and patterns. You buy them stamped ready to embroider. The one in the picture has green organdie for its foundation, also for the huge leaves which form the bib. The apron is cut in the form of a pansy using purple and orchid organdie. The two center petals serve as pockets. There is narrow lace edging here and there. Wild rose designs done in pink and green are lovely.

Holds a Ball of Cord

It would seem as if most everybody would appreciate as a Christmas gift a Handy Andy who would hold guard over a ball of cord, keeping it ever ready for use, like the little paste-board-faced elf in this picture is doing. No, the spiral neck and spinning legs of this little sprite aren't just for "looks"; they form the axis on which the ball of cord revolves. The flower petal skirt? Oh, just a way of "dolling up" the trinket so that it is "ornamental as well as useful." The figure stands on a box which holds rubber bands, tugs, thumb tacks and other needed articles.

An Attractive Sewing Box

The mission of this little lady and more of her kind is to enter many a household on or about December 25 bearing a message of "Merry Christmas" from someone to someone. Lift her bouffant skirts made of decorative crepe paper and you will find that she is a very dainty bisque doll wired to a handy box just large enough to hold wee scissors, needles, thread, a thimble and such—a pretty gift, inexpensive and easy to make.

Flower Basket Book Ends

If you are losing sleep nights trying to "think up" the daintiest and loveliest of Christmas gifts for some winsome debutante or bride, here it is—flower basket book ends. They are all that aesthetic femininity might wish for. Combed of gold lace, stretched over colorful satin-covered basket forms, they are as substantial and practical as if of heavy bronze. These pretty peacocks which spill over the top are hand-made of gay silk and net's and tinsel—very "franky"

The BABY

No mother in this enlightened age would give her baby something she did not know was perfectly harmless, especially when a few drops of plain Castoria will right a baby's stomach and end almost any little ill. Fretfulness and fever, too; it seems no time until everything is serene.

That's the beauty of Castoria; its gentle influence seems just what is needed. It does all that castor oil might accomplish, without shock to the system. Without the evil taste, it's delicious! Being purely vegetable, you can give it as often as there's a sign of colic; constipation; diarrhea; or need to aid sound, natural sleep.

Just one warning: it is genuine Fletcher's Castoria that physicians recommend. Other preparations may be just as free from all doubtful drugs, but no child of this writer's is going to test them! Besides, the book on care and feeding of babies that comes with Fletcher's Castoria is worth its weight in gold.

Children's Bedtime Story

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

Alice wanted so much to hear a story about icicle castles, and surely everyone can understand this for nothing is any more beautiful than an icicle castle.

It had been cold that day, and Alice had come indoors early in the afternoon.

She had had some lessons to learn and the fire in the stove seemed so lovely and warm.

When she went to bed that night she saw all the wonderful paintings made on her window by the icicle artists.

Such beautiful designs and pictures. She could make out, too, just where there was a castle.

It did seem very fine to have a castle on her very own window!

Not much after this she was in bed with the big red comfortable tucked around her shoulders and under her chin.

She was as warm as could be. She could hear the crackling noise the snow and ice made outside.

It was a very still night, but very cold. Every sound could be heard so clearly.

The crackling noise seemed to be louder and louder after a little while and the creaking sounds she had heard in the hard snow seemed to come more often.

"Hello, Alice," said a voice. She lifted the red comfortable down a little, and half sat up in bed.

"Hello," said Alice, politely.

"I've come to take you for a little trip," the voice continued.

"I can't see you," said Alice.

"Well, well, well. I must come closer," said the voice. "You don't want to take a trip with any stranger of course but when you see who I am I feel sure you will want to come with me."

The creature came closer. He was dressed in an icicle costume and he looked like a big, fat, beautiful icicle himself.

"Who are you, do tell me," urged Alice. "To me you look exactly like an icicle."

"Then I look like myself," chuckled the creature, and as he chuckled a little cool wave of air swept over Alice.

"Are you an icicle?" asked Alice.

"Indeed I am," said the creature.

"Indeed I am," said the creature. "And what is your name?" asked Alice.

"My name is Icy Icicle, and I live at Icicle Headquarters."

"Where are they?" asked Alice.

"They're the headquarters for the icicle family. Of course we all travel around and visit rocks and houses and trees and hillsides, but we have a very huge and magnificent icicle castle which we call Headquarters."

"There live the big icicles and the little icicles and the old icicles and the new icicles.

"When icicles are weary they come there for rest, when they aren't quite strong enough to go out they stay there, and when the icicles drop down because it is too warm or because they have fallen, they're picked up by little icicle workers and brought back to Headquarters so that they will get well.

"I've come to ask you if you'd like to pay Headquarters a visit."

"Oh, oh," said Alice, "I would love to more than anything."

So Icy Icicle and Alice went straight over to the window, right through the castle that had been painted upon the window.

On and on they went through groves and valleys and paths lined with icicle hangings.

At last they reached the Headquarters. Oh, such a castle as there was! It had turrets and towers and mounds and great huge ballrooms and dining rooms and reception rooms and great halls in which hung pictures of famous icicle leaders.

Never had Alice seen such gorgeous icicles. They seemed to wear many jewels, too. And she was given a banquet of lead delicacies in the great icicle-banquet-hall.

And just before dawn began to creep over Headquarters Icy brought her back home, and tucked her in her own bed—and the strangest thing was that not once had she been cold!

Keep Three Feet Away
Wasps and bees can see nothing more than two feet distant.

It Is Not Economy to Let Shoes Run Down at the Heel

These Shoes Seemed Beyond Repair, but Were Made to Look Almost Like New.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Good care of shoes includes prompt repair. It is never true economy to wear down-at-the-heel, dilapidated shoes. Such shoes neither protect the feet nor properly support the body. What might be saved in leather may be paid eventually to foot specialists and doctors. The minute a seam begins to rip, the upper cracks through, a heel twists out of shape or runs down, or a hole wears through the outsole, the shoe needs mending. If the necessary bit of repairing is put off the sole may be so badly worn that it is no longer worth mending, and from $2 to $5 will be lost by neglect. This is particularly true if the welt is worn away or the insole is worn through.

Keep Heels Squared.
Heels should always be kept "squared up." When they begin to run down on one side both the shoe and the body are put under a strain. The shoes are soon permanently twisted out of their normal position and shape, and the feet, ankles, and legs may be twisted also. Unless the leather or rubber lift on wooden heels is promptly replaced when it wears away, the covering of the wooden part is cut through and may have to be replaced, sometimes an expensive job because of the difficulty in matching the material in the rest of the shoe.

Handy Repair Kit.
Ripped seams in the uppers can frequently be stitched at home. A handy person, with the aid of a repair kit, can put on new heel lifts, rubber heels, half soles, and metal heel or sole plates without much difficulty. The equipment necessary for repairing shoes includes a last holder, three or four iron lasts of different sizes, a shoemaker's hammer, a pair of pliers, one or two leather knives, a leather rasp or file, awls, nails for soles and heels, wax shoe thread, brushes, and wax. These articles or made-up repair kits are sold by dealers in hardware or shoe findings and by some mail-order houses.

STORING BUTTER FOR WINTER

If the summer supply of butter in the farm home is larger than is used by the family and the winter supply is less than is desirable, it is sometimes convenient to store the summer surplus for use in winter. To insure good keeping qualities in butter the United States Department of Agriculture has found it best to use pasteurized sweet cream. The cream should be churned at a low temperature and the butter washed so that it will be firm and waxy.

JELLIED FRUIT PEEL IS NICE FOR GIFTS

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
Within two or three weeks of Christmas plan to make some jellied peel for gifts. Grapefruit peel will yield the largest and most attractive pieces, but orange and lemon peel may also be used. Each has, of course, its characteristic flavor, and after using the peel you have the pulp left to be served as breakfast food, according to the bureau of home economics. Strip the peel from the fruit in even sections, including just as much of the white part as you can. Cut the peel into strips about a fourth or a half inch wide. Weigh it and allow two quarts of cold water for each ten ounces. Parboil the peel three times, half an hour each time, in this amount of water, to make it tender. Discard the water after each cooking. Handle the strips very gently at the last or you will break them.

Making Jellied Grapefruit Peel.

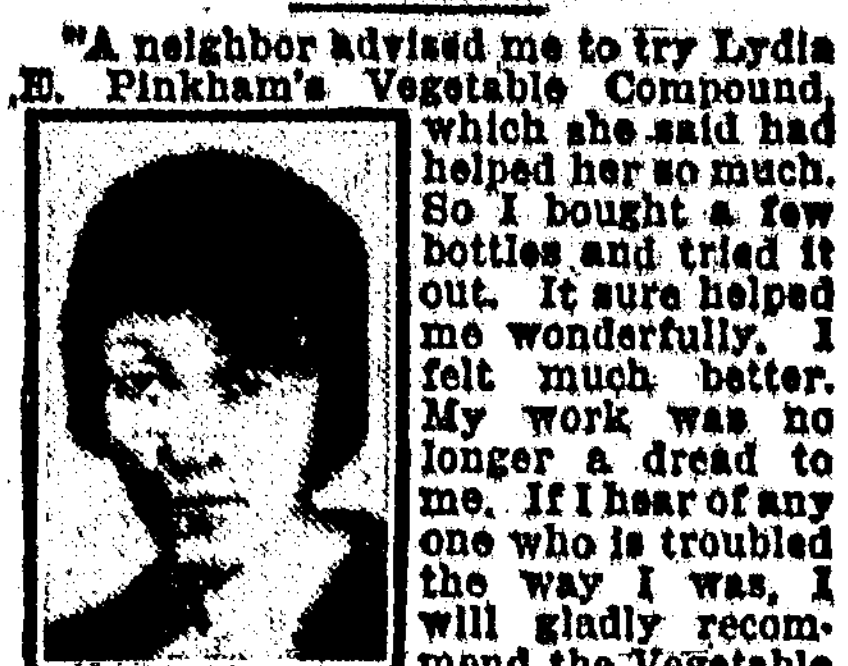

fruit or in salad. With a pound or two of sugar and the use of the cook-stove for an afternoon you can make any of these into a delicious confection. Keep a little on hand to use in place of citrus in cakes, and to serve at holiday parties.
The method is the same with all three kinds of peel. Thick, soft, unblemished peel from smooth fruit is best, according to the bureau of home economics. Strip the peel from the fruit in even sections, including just as much of the white part as you can. Cut the peel into strips about a fourth or a half inch wide. Weigh it and allow two quarts of cold water for each ten ounces. Parboil the peel three times, half an hour each time, in this amount of water, to make it tender. Discard the water after each cooking. Handle the strips very gently at the last or you will break them.

The next step in the process consists of boiling the peel in a sirup until it is practically all absorbed. If you have ten ounces of peel, select a saucepan about eight inches in diameter, and put into it two cupsful or fourteen ounces of granulated sugar, 1 1/3 cupsful of water, and one-half teaspoonful of salt. Bring this to a boil, and when the sugar is dissolved lay the strips parallel to each other in the saucepan, so they can be turned easily. Boil them rapidly for twenty minutes, then reduce the heat. Toward the end of the cooking the strips must be carefully turned from time to time, so that the sirup penetrates each piece equally. Cook until the sirup is all absorbed, from forty to sixty minutes or longer. Watch the pan constantly to prevent scorching.

If Kidneys Act Bad Take Salts

Says Backache Often Means You Have Not Been Drinking Enough Water

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it may mean you have been eating foods which create acids, says a well-known authority. An excess of such acids overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood and they become sort of paralyzed and leggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels, removing all the body's urinous waste, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells; your stomach sour, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, channels often get sore, water seals and you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids in the system, so they no longer irritate, thus often relieving bladder weakness.
Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure and makes a delightful, effervescent lithia-water drink. Drink lots of soft water.

FAVORITE RECIPES

By NELLIE MAXWELL

If you are short of jelly try making some of rhubarb. This is the time of year when the pectin is well developed in it and the jelly will thicken.

To every pound of rhubarb add one-half cupful of water and let it stew in a granite dish until it is all in shreds. Let drip or strain through a cloth and allow measure for measure of sugar and juice. Cook until it thickens when tried on a cold plate. Remove the scum carefully and seal with paraffin as usual. This is especially good with meats in winter.
Spiced Grape Marmalade.—Remove the skins from a basket of grapes. Cook the pulp in three cupsful of vinegar (mild), four sticks of cinnamon, one pound of cloves and two blades of mace tied in a cloth. Pass as much as possible through a sieve, keeping back the seeds. Add the skins which have been simmering slowly until tender, four pounds of sugar and cook until thick. Seal in glasses. This is especially good with venison.

Preserved Citron Melon.—Cut the melon into halves and then into sections to remove the seeds. Peel and cut into very small cubes—the more even and regular the prettier the preserve will be. This will take time but it is worth it for a jar of this preserve will be a joy all winter to garnish and flavor puddings and sauces. Weigh the fruit and allow a slightly less weight of sugar. Cook the citron in clear water to which a little salt is added, using the harder portions first, adding the rest, until all is perfectly tender. Now add the sugar and let stand off the stove, stirring until the sugar is all dissolved, then put over the heat and cook slowly until the fruit is heated through. Remove the fruit to jars, boil up the sirup until thick, then pour boiling hot over the citron. Some add thinly sliced lemon to the citron or the juice of a lemon with the grated rind. Others like crystallized ginger.

Chicken Salad.—Take a pint of diced cooked chicken, preferably the breast meat, add one cupful of finely sliced tender celery, a cupful of tender white cabbage finely shredded and a handful of blanched and shredded almonds. Mix with a highly seasoned salad dressing and serve on head lettuce.

Banana Marmalade.—Use two pounds of bananas, two pounds of sugar and the juice of one lemon. Peel and slice the fruit, add the sugar and lemon juice and let stand in a crockery dish for an hour. Turn into a granite pan and cook gently until the mixture becomes thick, stirring constantly. Test by dropping a little on a cold plate. If it sets, remove from the heat and put into jars. Use this as filling for the marquette cake.

Oysters Valuable as Source of Minerals

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

You know, doubtless, that oysters are extremely valuable as a source of various minerals needed by the body. Like other fish they supply iodine, so should be eaten when possible if other sea foods are hard to get. Fresh oysters are now shipped in refrigerator cars all over the country, and canned oysters are also sold practically everywhere.

The secret of perfect fried oysters with an unbroken outer coating, says the bureau of home economics, is to let the oysters stand a while after dipping them in egg and bread crumbs, so that the coating will harden. Select large oysters for single fry. Drain them and look them over carefully for small pieces of shell. Have finely sifted stale bread crumbs seasoned with salt and pepper spread out on a platter. Dip the oysters first into a well-beaten egg to which one tablespoonful of cold water has been added, and roll them in the seasoned crumbs. Place the oysters on a pan or board and allow them to stand until the egg and bread coating has set.

Heat in an iron kettle any desired fat until hot enough to brown a bread crumb in 30 seconds. Then carefully place the oysters in a wire basket, lower them into the fat slowly, and cook until golden brown. As the oysters are removed, put them on a paper to absorb the excess fat, and keep warm until all are prepared.

AND now! Well, for one thing dazzling beautiful "real millinery" the sort that fulfills the promise of the mode for dressier headwear for the winter season.
So here they come, dinner and dance hats, hats for the matinee costume, queenly head-dresses for the opera, hats to add a brilliant touch to winter furs, or to top the velvet ensemble.
"It's very true, for street and sports wear, hats are still definitely simple. Many a felt hat, molded to the head, is proud in the distinction of being not trimmed. Its intricate construction achieving almost chic.
When it comes to the hat for festive and "dress-up" occasions—suppose, for want of adjectives equal to describing them, we let this illustration tell its own story? Perhaps the most important hat in this collection is the little gold embroidered and spangled metal cloth shawlcap

Saturday's Football Game

The Carrizozo football team went to Capitan last Saturday for the purpose of playing the first football game ever played in Lincoln County.

Carrizozo's Line-up

M. Lemon Right End
Branum Right Tackle
Burkett Right Guard
Bigelow Center
Dow Left Guard
D. Lemmon Left End
Gallegos Quarterback
Cook Right Half
Riddle Fullback

Carrizozo kicked off. Capitan received the ball and returned to the 45-yard line. In the first 2 downs they made five yards, but fumbled on the third play. Dow recovered the ball for Carrizozo on the 35-yard line. Lopez carried the ball 10 yards on the first play. Coach Riddle then took the ball and ran 65 yards for a touchdown, this being one of the fastest, best plays of the game.

Carrizozo made the most yardage in the game. The goal was missed which caused the score to be 6 to 0 in favor of Carrizozo. Capitan scored on off tackle play in 4th quarter after Carrizozo had fumbled. They missed the goal and the score was tied.

There were frequent fumbles throughout the game, but no more than in the average football game. All played a wonderful game. This proves that there is good material in Carrizozo for a football team. The outstanding players were Cook, Burkett and Gallegos.

School will be dismissed Thursday and Friday of this week for the Thanksgiving holidays.

Many of the teachers will be away for the vacation. Profs. Burkett and Riddle will go to Abilene, Texas to see the homecoming game between Simmons University and Howard Payne.

There will be no basketball practice this week on account of final examinations for the month and the fact that no game will be played here.

The physical examinations for the students were completed this week and some remedy will be sought for the defects found.
