

Chamber of Commerce

The Entertainment Committee of the Carrizozo Chamber of Commerce and those appointed to assist, met at the First National Bank and completed arrangements for the dance to be given March 26, for the benefit of the Chamber of Commerce. To this dance all Lincoln County is invited; the Carrizozo C. of C. has made its work County-wide and invites the entire county to meet on this night and have a general good time.

It was decided to give a combination old time and new dance. Prizes will be awarded to the most graceful old time dancers and to the best Charleston dancers, it being understood that in each case they must dance in couples. The admission for men who dance will be $1.00; for those who do not, 50 cents.

The Carrizozo Orchestra will play free of charge. The Woman's Club has agreed to donate the use of the piano.

Lunches will be served for a moderate charge. Checkers will be on hand to take care of coats, hats and wraps.

During the evening an informal reception will be given the Carrizozo Basketball Team and they will be publicly thanked by a member of the faculty, the Mayor and a member of the Board of Education for acquitting themselves like men at the Roswell Tournament. All members of the team will be admitted free of charge. Further announcements later.

Commissioners' Call

The Board of County Commissioners of Lincoln County would like to have a delegation of Lincoln County citizens, four for each precinct, to meet at the Courthouse in Carrizozo, N. M., Monday, April 4, 1927, for the purpose of laying before the Commission, road conditions and necessities throughout Lincoln County, and an official call is hereby issued for that expressed purpose. Road conditions in all precincts will be carefully considered, preparatory to a road program.

Board of Commissioners, R. E. P. Warden, Chairman.

Letter to Mr. Brickley

Picacho, N. M.
E. M. Brickley, Pres. Carrizozo Chamber of Commerce, Carrizozo, N. M.

My dear Mr. Brickley: I can answer (here) for Picacho with a check for $5.00 amount asked for as our share of the maintenance due the Carrizozo Chamber of Commerce.

We are always glad of a chance to ride on the "Bard Wagon" and trust being the tail end of Lincoln County will not deprive us of a front seat. Page Success—for Carrizozo Chamber of Commerce, in Big Business!

Thanking you,
Yours truly,
Mrs. B. D. Garner.

Road Superintendent Here

J. B. Dinwiddie, Supt. of road construction between Santa Rosa and Dawson, was here Wednesday, shaking hands with old Carrizozo friends. J. B. looks well and the family in general, sends best regards to their friends here, where they resided for many years, but are now residing at Tucumcari, where Mr. Dinwiddie has his headquarters.

Wild Animals Mingle With Ranch Cattle

Oliver Peaker was in from his ranch about nine miles above here last Saturday. Mr. Peaker has one of the finest ranch homes in this part of the country. He has a water tank that could well be called a lake, as the same is over one mile in length and it always contains an abundant supply of good water for his stock. The tank runs along the edge of the Malpais, or lava beds and among the cattle are oftentimes seen many deer, coyotes, mountain lions and other wild animals which come to the watering place without signs of fear; neither have they ever molested any of his stock. Mr. Peaker never bothers the wild visitors and it is due to this fact that they become so bold and express no fear at the sight of the owner of the big ranch. Young grass and weeds have already grown to a nice nipping size on the Peaker ranch.

We are in receipt of a letter from our old friend and former county clerk, Ralph M. Treat, who is now in El Paso, connected with a chain of retail grocery stores. The family sends best regards to friends in Carrizozo.

Basketball at Roswell

Many Carrizozo people attended the basketball tournament at Roswell last week. Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Kelley, daughter, Ruth and Miss Alene Thompson, Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Spencer, L. A. Jolly and others whose names we failed to get, were in attendance, aside from members of the basketball team, which did such noble work against odds and made such a wonderful showing. They were victorious in three games, Hagerman, Dexter and in the third game defeated Artesia. In the game with Roswell, they would have won had it not have been for rank decisions against our boys and favors shown to Roswell, even to the referee giving that aggregation a count after time was called in the finish. As far as the tactics used by the Roswellites are concerned, they would fit in well with those used in Russia among the Bolsheviks; all they need is the whisks. We are proud of the clean manner in which our boys played and the fine showing they made at the tournament.

The Brainless Wonder

(Vaughn News in substance)

One of the dirtiest cracks we have seen in some time was the paragraph last week in Ex-governor Hannett's column about the Encino highway school. The ex-gov. says it was established to train Republican politicians, intimates that it is wasting the taxpayers money, asks why the newspapers do not say anything about it, and tries to make out that it is some deep, dark plot of the present state administration to steal something. Hannett ought to know without asking. It was during his administration that the idea was hatched, the Encino property was purchased, and the plans made for the school. About all he left to Dillon's administration was to pay the bills, and make the school a success, which early indications seem to show. We believe Hannett sprung the proposition last fall hoping to offset the popularity of Mr. Dillon in his own community. As such it was a complete bust. Now he tries to hang it on his successor and make out that it is something awful. Every day now it becomes more and more evident that New Mexico voters did a splendid day's work last November when they retired the political accident to private life and replaced him with a governor. Were the election held now, after the brainless wonder has spouted off for a few months in print, even the yellow doggers would vote against him.

Fort Stanton Notes

The disbanding of the Fort Stanton orchestra the first of this month will be regretted by many a dance fan of the surrounding country. This orchestra freely gave of their time and talent for entertainment to the patients whenever called upon to do so, and will be greatly missed by all here. The orchestra consisted of McNeff, violinist and director, formerly of Chicago where he has played at the College Inn and other organizations, also played on the Keitt Circuit; Mrs. Louise H. Coe of Glencoe, at the piano; Bill Wettsteine, formerly of Florida, where he played with several orchestras at the winter resort, on the saxophone and clarinet; A. M. N. Turner, formerly of New York, where he played with King Balfar's and his joy-makers, on the banjo. Mr. Turner was also a tenor soloist; Carl Berggren, formerly with the Denver Municipal Band, sousaphone. Miss Rue Shulda, pianist with the "Zozians" of Carrizozo, relieved Mrs. Coe on several occasions. McNeff's orchestra has played in almost every city within a radius of a hundred miles of here and always has received thanks and appreciations for the good program.

W. Wunsch was in Carrizozo Thursday.

Miss Reuhmann was been sick for several days.

Dr. and Mrs. Johnson of Carrizozo were here last Friday.

Payne Sears of Carlsbad was here last Sunday.

W. Coe of Glencoe was here on business last Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Kincheloe attended the Eastern Star at Carrizozo last week.

Dr. Harrod and Mr. McNeff spent Saturday in Roswell.

Miss Helen Rice of Lincoln spent week-end here with friends.

Dr. Hooper, Rev. Swift and Mr. Hebert spent Monday in Roswell.

The regular meeting of the Trowel club was held on Mar 10. Patient Mickelson left Monday for Galveston, Texas.

Dr. Todd, Messrs. Wunsch and Hendren spent Sunday in Roswell.

Mr. Herting spent Tuesday in Capitan on business.

Bill Wettsteine left Saturday for Denver, where he will accept an offer as a saxophone player in the Symphony orchestra.

Miss Kane and Mrs. Gensler spent last Saturday in Roswell. Messrs. White and McKenny were new patients to arrive during the past week.

Distinguished Visitors

Lieut. Col. Behrens, Mrs. Behrens and brother, Roy, are here this week and are touring the surrounding country accompanied by Mrs. S. E. Barber of White Oaks and Mr. Chas. Cree of Carrizozo. Lieut. Col. Behrens has lately arrived from England, while his brother, Roy, is a resident of California. The visitors will remain in this country for the major portion of the coming summer to visit the different places of interest and return to England in the fall.

Woman's Club Notes

The Fourth District Federation will be held in Alamogordo on April 8-9. These meetings are instructive and enjoyable. This is an opportunity which we may not have soon again. Remember the date and plan to attend.

Mrs. C. H. Stearns, Chairman of the Scholarship Loan Fund, has asked that the clubs of the state set aside one week in March as Scholarship Loan Fund Week. Please bring whatever you feel you can give to the next meeting and place it in the Loan Fund box. Several girls are being helped by this fund to further their education. Do your bit toward putting some girl in a position to be self-supporting.

Letters have been received from Senator Mrs. L. H. Coe, Representatives J. Hall and C. Hightower commending the club for their recommendations with reference to bills pending before the Legislature. Each promises to use his or her influence to secure passage of said bills.

The next pay entertainment for replenishing the club funds will be given by the Publicity, Membership and Legislation departments early in May. Program will appear later.

The next regular meeting of the Woman's club will be held at the home of Mrs. F. E. Kelley at 3 p. m., Friday, Mar. 18. Mrs. L. J. Adams is preparing the program and you can bet from past experiences that it will be a good one. In addition to the program prepared by Mrs. Adams we expect to have an art exhibit, "The Chas. Bien Water Colors." Come, the club needs you and you need the club.

Carrizozo Indian War Veteran Writes Letter To Winners of the West

In a letter to Winners of the West, a paper published at St. Joseph, Mo., in the interest of the National Indian War Veterans, Capt. J. J. Hoffman of Carrizozo, writes as follows:

Dear Comrade:
I am enclosing money order for subscription to Winners of the West and also am enclosing petition to Congress to pass the Leatherwood bill.

I have been like some more of the old comrades, puzzled to think why the old Indian War Veterans have been so discriminated against. I have always thought that our services to our country were as efficiently done, were as patriotically performed, were performed under conditions calling for the highest idea of bravery and sacrifice as any class of soldiers or fighting men that has ever seen service in the United States at any time in its history.

These are facts beyond successful controversy. Why then this seeming studied discrimination? Comrades, I am going to give you one, and I believe, the greatest of reasons. I am speaking more particularly of my own class, the Texas Rangers, but I am satisfied it applies to a great many men who served in the U. S. Army.

We gave the best part of our lives to this service freely, asking nothing, expecting nothing, but feeling as long as we were able to sit on a horse, or carry on our usual vocations, we were able and competent to take care

Railroad Rumbblings

Saving the life of a child playing on its tracks last week endangered a fireman's life, cost the railroad hundreds of dollars for damages and delayed three trains from 45 minutes to one hour each, according to R. J. Clancy, assistant to the general manager of the Southern Pacific.

Dorothy Terry, aged two and one-half years, while playing in the Tucson railroad yards, stepped directly in the path of a heavy freight train. Loss of life was prevented by prompt emergency application of brakes by the engineer and the heroic conduct of fireman James C. McGrew, who leaped from his locomotive and swept the child to safety.

Under the circumstances, delay and damages will be forgotten, said Clancy, but the incident carries a vital lesson to all parents. Playing in a railroad yard and climbing on and off freight trains is the most dangerous of sports. Appeals have been issued by this company, calling attention to the danger, but apparently, some parents still fail to realize the importance of warning their children. Railroads make every effort to keep children away from yards and tracks, which for the most part, are fenced, guarded by watchmen and warning signs.

of ourselves. Therefore, we have no one to plead our cause for the simple reason that so few know we have a cause to plead.

I did not realize this fact until I started around among my neighbors in my home town with a petition to increase our pensions. Few knew that I had ever heard of a Comanche Indian, much less, that I had chased them, or had been chased by them, as the case might have been.

Then it was brought home to me that the reason they knew so little was because I had never told them anything and they, like myself, had been so busy in trying to make a living, that they gave the matter no thought, but when it was brought to their attention, they not only signed, but were anxious to do so.

Now, comrades, we must plead our own cause. We are, all of us, over the divide and going further west toward our eternal sunset which is in sight for most of us. We will not be a burden very long; if this generation carries it the distance to the end of the trail. I feel that they owe us that much, as we have carried it as far as we can. We are asking for justice, not charity.

Teachers' Association

The Lincoln County Teachers' Association will meet at Capitan on April 1-2. It is to be hoped that all of our teachers will be present. The executive committee is preparing a most interesting program. Recreation as well as inspiration is being considered. Watch your county paper for a copy of the program. Make that a banner Association.

The Girl in the Mirror

By ELIZABETH JORDAN

What might happen to her? What might be happening even now? And what assurance had he that even if he again succeeded in entering the house, a very remote possibility, he could accomplish anything against Shaw and his companions? Oh, if only he had waited and brought Rodney with him! Together, he felt, the two of them could have met and overcome a regiment of men like Shaw and his secretary.

A wild impulse came to him to take Burke with him in his second effort, but an appraising look at that seely individual checked it. He was convinced that Burke could neither fight nor keep his mouth shut. Owing to his promise to Doris, police help, of course, was out of the question. No, he must go back alone. But this time there would be no semi-ignominious departure. He would either bring Doris away, or he would remain there with her. And if Shaw wanted trouble, he'd get it, and it would be the real thing.

That afternoon, on his first visit to The Cedars, his new instinct of caution had made him leave behind him the little revolver he had brought. He knew his own hot temperament too well to risk carrying it, and he had an arrogant faith in his own physical strength which, as a rule, had been justified. Now, however, he retrieved the weapon, and with a sudden tightening of the lips dropped it into his overcoat pocket.

When he was dressed he went out to look over his car. Burke, who was evidently fascinated by the slender racer, rose from an admiring inspection of the engine as its owner approached.

"She's ready any minute now," he reported. "She's had gas, oil and air, and I've put on the chains. Thought you'd want 'em, in this storm."

Laurie nodded and glanced out at the window. The storm had developed into a blizzard. His optimism, somewhat numbed in the past hour, reasserted itself to suggest that nature was helping him to meet the odds against him in the old house down the road. He glanced at his watch. It was not yet quite five, but certainly there was darkness enough for his purpose. He could safely take the car into the side wood road near The Cedars, and leave it there among the trees until he needed it. He handed Burke his final offering, the size of which wholly depended that philosopher's pessimistic forebodings. Jumping into his car, he backed it out into the storm.

"Hey, there! What about these clo'es?" demanded Burke, indicating with a thumb the abandoned heap of garments in the office.

"Eat 'em," briefly advised the occupant of the disappearing car. Burke shook his head. Garage men are used to hectic human types and strange happenings, but this particular type and incident were new to Burke. He was also interested in the discovery that the young fellow wasn't going to New York, now that his lark was played. He was going straight up the road, in the wrong direction, and driving like the devil. Well, anyway, Burke had made a tidy bit on that job, whatever it was. Gazing affectionately at the latest crisp bill, he thought of his wife and the seventh, and nobly decided to forgive them both.

Laurie, his hot head cooled by the storm that beat against him, raced through the gathering darkness. He had the road to himself. In weather like this no one was abroad who could stay at home. He turned off into the country road, already deep in snow drifts, and swept on through the little wood whose leafless birches now looked unfamiliar, even spectral. In the increasing gloom, save for the soft purr of his engine, his progress made no sound. He drove as far as he dared, then stopped the car off the road, in a clear space among the trees, and continued his way on foot. He must leave the car there, and take the chance of having it discovered. In the storm and darkness that chance seemed very remote.

He plunked on toward the house, knee-deep, now, in the drifts that swept across the narrow road. Soon the building was visible in its ember setting, and he stared at its dim outlines his heart leaped. In the right-hand corner, on the second floor, a light showed faintly through drawn shades. The sight filled him with an overwhelming relief. Until he saw it, he had not realized how great his inner panic had been. He stopped, drew a deep breath, and stood staring up at it.

The rest of the house looked black and uninhabited, but somewhere within it, he was sure, Shaw and the blond secretary watched and waited. To the Italians he gave no thought. He was convinced that neither of them cared to come alone to close quarters with him; and this conviction was so strong that the prompt retreat of the fellow with the rope had not surprised him, either at the moment or in retrospect, though both men had fought well under Shaw's eyes. If the Italians were again on guard in the grounds, it would be his job to choke them off before they could warn Shaw of his presence. Warning Shaw, he hoped, was about all they were good for.

His plan, fully made, was very simple. He had no intention of risking another encounter if it could be avoided. His purpose was to get Doris out of that house, back to New York, and in Louise Ordway's care with the least possible difficulty and delay. That done, he could take up his little affair with Shaw. Even against the blond secretary he felt no personal rancor. The youth with the pursuing eyes and the chlorotum was merely a wretched pawn in Shaw's game.

In Shaw's game! The phrase struck, burning into his consciousness like the vitriol he believed the beast would use if he dared. What was Shaw's game? Why was he so smugly sure of it? And why, oh, why, why, was Doris seemingly numb to its danger, yet anxious for his help? For the first time he gave definite shape to a reflection that for hours had been trying to catch his attention, and from which he had restively turned. It was this:

When those four men, headed by Shaw, had entered that upper room, Doris had not been surprised. She had expected them. Moreover, she had not been really afraid. Instead, she had worn a look of flaming anger and of sudden resolution. She had stepped forward as if to speak. Her very lips had been parted for speech. Then, Shaw had looked at her, and slowly she had turned away and stood staring out of the window, her back to the room and its tableau. In short, with one glance of his veiled, protruding eyes, Shaw had conquered her, and Laurie himself had seen, what no one could have made him believe, her instantaneous and complete submission.

It was this revelation which had added the smoke barrage of doubt to the situation, clouding his faculties and temporarily stifling his faith. In the face of this, how could he still trust? Yet he had promised to trust, to believe, "whatever happened." Those had been his own words, and she had wept and told him he was "wonderful!"

The deep breath he had drawn ended in a sigh. He was fighting more than one storm, and in this instant he felt an indescribable weariness of soul and body. But not for a second did he hesitate in the course he had decided on. Later, when Doris was safe, perhaps things would clear up. For the moment there was one thing, and one alone, to be done.

The trees around the house made the approach under their cover a fairly easy one. However, he moved slowly, missing no precaution. He hardly believed the zeal of the Italians would keep them out in the storm, but they might have rigged up some sort of shelter, or, more probably, they might be doing sentry work at some of those dark windows.

"Gingling close to the trees, he skirted the house, then approached it from the rear, and slipped along the side of the building, hugging the wall. As he hesitantly moved he listened, but no sound came from inside. When he reached the front right wing he stopped, and, looking up, verified his swift impressions of the afternoon.

A wide veranda swung around the front and side of this wing, supported by substantial pillars, up any one of which he knew he could climb like a cat. The roof of the veranda opened on the low French front windows of the upstairs sitting room. There was no question that within a few moments he himself could enter that sitting room.

The real question, and again he carefully considered it, was how, open in the room, he could get the girl out of it. She could not climb railings and slide down pillars. There was a window on the rear end of the wing, above what plainly served in summer-time as a veranda dining room. This end of the veranda was gilded in and over it a trellis afforded a support for frozen vines that now shivered in the storm. If he could get Doris out at that window, he might be able to get her down to the ground with the help of the trellis. But from what room did the window open, and how much of the upper hall would they have to traverse before reaching it? Not much, he fancied.

Again he looked around, and listened. There was no sound or motion, save those caused by the storm. The next instant he was climbing the pillar toward the dimly lighted window. The ascent was not so easy as he had pictured it. To his chagrin, he made several unsuccessful efforts before he finally drew himself over the top of the veranda roof, and, lying flat in the snow, slowly recovered the breath exhausted by his efforts.

Lying thus, and stretching out an arm, he could almost touch the nearest window with his fingers, almost, but not quite. Still lying flat, he dragged himself a yard farther. His head was now in line with the window, but the close-drawn shade shut out all but the suggestion of the inner light. He hesitated a moment, then, very cautiously, tapped on the frosty pane.

There was no response. He tapped again, and then a third time, twice in succession and more compellingly. This time he thought he heard a movement in the room, but he was not sure.

He waited a moment, then softly signaled again. There was no question now about the movement in the room. He heard it distinctly, heard it approach the window, heard it cease, then saw the curtain slowly drawn. The face of Doris looked out, at first vaguely, as if she had fancied the noise some manifestation of the storm. But in the next instant she glanced down, saw him, and obviously checked an exclamation. In another moment she had opened the window, and without straightening up he had slipped across the sill.

Neither spoke. Laurie was looking about the room, fearfully empty, save for those two. He closed the window, drew the shade, and became conscious that she held his hand and was drawing him urgently toward the fire. At the same time she answered his unasked question.

"They're all down in the kitchen, I think. Listen!"

She opened the door leading to the hall, and, going out, leaned over the stair-rail.

"Yes, they're still there," she reported when she came back. "All but one of the Italians. They're eating now, and after that I think they're planning to leave."

"Where's the bag?"

"Waiting on them."

She spoke detachedly, almost dully. As in the morning, she was not surprised; but tonight there was in her manner a suggestion of repressed excitement which it had not held before.

"Have you a heavy coat?" he asked her.

"Yes."

"Get it and put it on, quick. Don't waste any time." He indicated the buckled house-shoes she still wore.

"And put on some real shoes, if you have them."

Without replying, she disappeared. He followed her into the bedroom in which, during the hours of his presence that afternoon, the bag had found uneasy asylum. He indicated a door.

"Where does that lead?"

"Into a bathroom."

"There's a back window over the veranda. What room does that mean?"

"The bathroom."

"That's all right now, I think," she said, with an immediate return to composure. It steadied her as no other attitude on his part could have done.

"Can you drive a Pierce Arrow?" he asked, as they plunged ahead through the snowdrifts.

"Yes."

"That's fine. That's great. I was afraid you couldn't." This was Laurie again. He went on urgently. "If we're stopped or separated, do exactly as I say. Don't lose an instant. Rush to my car. It's over there, among the trees. See?—over there at the right. It's turned toward the road." He indicated the spot. "Get in, go to the left at the first turn, drive full speed to a garage a quarter of a mile down the main road. No matter what happens, don't stop till you reach it. Go into the garage, and wait half an hour for me. If I'm not there then, drive on to New York and go to this address." He gave her a pencilled slip he had prepared. "Mrs. Ordway is a good friend of mine. She'll take you in and look after you. Will you do that?"

"Yes." The word was so low that he had to bend his head to catch it. His voice softened still more.

"Don't worry. It will be all right. Only, some way, I can't believe that Shaw is letting us off as easily as this."

She stumbled, but he caught her. For a moment he supported her, and in that moment, under the sense of her nearness and dearth and helplessness, the hardness of the past hour disappeared. He did not understand her. Perhaps he would never understand her. But whatever she was, she was all right.

Half leading, half carrying her, he got her to the car and into it. He had actually raised one foot to follow her when something stirred in the shadows near them, and the familiar, squat figure of Shaw stepped forth.

Though in his sudden appearance he had followed the dramatic instinct that seemed so strong in him, he had wholly lost the effect of unleashed fury he had worn in the afternoon. He was even smiling with an affection of good-humored tolerance. He had the air of a man who, with the game in his hands, can afford to be patient and affable.

"Oh, come now," he said easily, "don't leave us quite so soon! Since you've come back for another visit, we've decided to keep you a while. You know, I warned you of that."

Laurie made a sign to Doris, which she instantly obeyed. Even before the indolent voice had finished speaking, she was at the wheel and the car had started. Shaw, springing forward with joggling eyes and dropped jaw, found his way blocked by a man as new to him as he had been to Doris, a Laurence Devon, who all in an instant had taken on the black rage he himself had dropped. In the hands of this stranger was a revolver which neatly covered Shaw's plump chest. Before this apparition, Shaw backed away precipitately.

Without replying, she disappeared. He followed her into the bedroom in which, during the hours of his presence that afternoon, the bag had found uneasy asylum. He indicated a door.

"Where does that lead?"

"Into a bathroom."

"There's a back window over the veranda. What room does that mean?"

"The bathroom."

"That's all right now, I think," she said, with an immediate return to composure. It steadied her as no other attitude on his part could have done.

"Can you drive a Pierce Arrow?" he asked, as they plunged ahead through the snowdrifts.

"Yes."

"That's fine. That's great. I was afraid you couldn't." This was Laurie again. He went on urgently. "If we're stopped or separated, do exactly as I say. Don't lose an instant. Rush to my car. It's over there, among the trees. See?—over there at the right. It's turned toward the road." He indicated the spot. "Get in, go to the left at the first turn, drive full speed to a garage a quarter of a mile down the main road. No matter what happens, don't stop till you reach it. Go into the garage, and wait half an hour for me. If I'm not there then, drive on to New York and go to this address." He gave her a pencilled slip he had prepared. "Mrs. Ordway is a good friend of mine. She'll take you in and look after you. Will you do that?"

"Yes." The word was so low that he had to bend his head to catch it. His voice softened still more.

"Don't worry. It will be all right. Only, some way, I can't believe that Shaw is letting us off as easily as this."

She stumbled, but he caught her. For a moment he supported her, and in that moment, under the sense of her nearness and dearth and helplessness, the hardness of the past hour disappeared. He did not understand her. Perhaps he would never understand her. But whatever she was, she was all right.

Half leading, half carrying her, he got her to the car and into it. He had actually raised one foot to follow her when something stirred in the shadows near them, and the familiar, squat figure of Shaw stepped forth.

Though in his sudden appearance he had followed the dramatic instinct that seemed so strong in him, he had wholly lost the effect of unleashed fury he had worn in the afternoon. He was even smiling with an affection of good-humored tolerance. He had the air of a man who, with the game in his hands, can afford to be patient and affable.

"Oh, come now," he said easily, "don't leave us quite so soon! Since you've come back for another visit, we've decided to keep you a while. You know, I warned you of that."

Laurie made a sign to Doris, which she instantly obeyed. Even before the indolent voice had finished speaking, she was at the wheel and the car had started. Shaw, springing forward with joggling eyes and dropped jaw, found his way blocked by a man as new to him as he had been to Doris, a Laurence Devon, who all in an instant had taken on the black rage he himself had dropped. In the hands of this stranger was a revolver which neatly covered Shaw's plump chest. Before this apparition, Shaw backed away precipitately.

Peace and Promise in Nature's Temple

It was a swamp of the kind I love, miles upon miles of it, seldom marked by the footprints of men; a primitive swamp, hoary with age, where life had grown upon life through centuries of time; fragrant with a breath of mystery, dilled with a vast contentment, a homo for the creatures of the wild. But its age was what grew upon me. I sat upon a fallen pine that had lived five hundred years, and then had lain a century where it had fallen, crumbling once more into dust of earth. Near me was a still mightier tree rearing its head to the sky. Under my feet was the soft and sweetly musty mold of prehistoric generations of God's greatest living things on earth—the trees. Age—age and life

Brought Back Old Times

Curiosity is certainly what makes the world go round and keeps people prying into things and learning something new all the time. The other day a little boy busily engaged in passing time by playing around the parking space was seen to put a box and a paper bag underneath one of the windows of one of the shops that face on the space. Several people saw him leave this little bundle and walk away. One after another until three had done it, some men walked up to it and pecked in. They closed it up and walked away. The fourth could stand it no longer. He also walked up and on examining the contents laughed loud and long. The bag and box contained bits of iron and nails and other mysterious treasures dear to the childish heart. The curiosity of these people had brought back to them memories of their own hoarding days.—Lawrence Telegram.

POULTRY

SUNSHINE AIDS IN EGG LAYING

Tests made at different experiment stations as well as the results of practical poultrymen have demonstrated that direct sunshine serves two useful purposes. It not only helps the hen to see, but it also enables her to make proper use of the minerals in her ration. This is especially true of the lime that is used in making egg shells. In young chickens the effect is noticed in the formation of bones. Chicks not getting sunshine develop leg weakness due to poor assimilation of minerals in the ration.

Hens kept in houses that are entirely closed with glass windows do not get the beneficial influence of the sunshine, because glass does not allow the ultra-violet rays to pass through and they are the rays that carry the power of helping in the assimilation of the minerals. It is a good plan, therefore, to provide the hens with outside scratching lots where they can get the sunshine. It is also a good plan to put some of the glass substitutes which allow the ultra-violet rays to pass through, in some of the windows, or to feed cod-liver oil in the ration. Cod-liver oil contains vitamins that act as a substitute for sunshine in helping to assimilate minerals.

Recent experiments show that the sunshine not only helps in the assimilation of minerals, but that it also helps hatchability. At the Kansas station hens that were allowed access to sunshine showed a hatching record of 78 per cent as compared to 62 per cent for hens that were kept in houses with glass windows.

Early Hatched Chicks Are Best Winter Layers

Late-hatched pullets rarely lay until the middle of the winter or early spring. Chickens should be hatched not later than the last of May if they are expected to lay eggs in the late fall or early winter. Often it is difficult to get fully matured pullets before winter sets in. This can be done, however, by early hatching and proper feeding of the pullets during the later summer and early fall. If the pullets do not receive their proper growth by November and show signs of laying, it is doubtful whether they will lay to any extent until the following spring. The cockerels should be separated from the pullets as soon as possible, thus giving pullets plenty of opportunity to develop size. If they are allowed to flock with the old hens and cockerels they may be stunted, as it is impossible for them to get their proper allowance of food. Keeping them out on the range separated from the rest of the flock is the best method of handling them.

Best Quality Eggs Are Produced in the Spring

Early spring is the fowl's natural breeding season and the best quality eggs are produced at this time. These high quality eggs produce strong chicks, the mortality being lower than when late hatching is practiced. The conditions for chicks are more favorable in the spring than at a later season. The incubator is better ventilated and the hens have less trouble with parasites than in hot weather. There is also an abundant green food supply which contains the necessary vitamins for proper growth. The early spring weather is much easier on the young chicks than are the hot days of June.

Good Test for Eggs

An egg may appear to be satisfactory, but when the contents are examined it may be found to be worthless for incubation. Some eggs may have cracked shells. These may be detected by the use of the tester or candler such as is used in testing eggs during incubation. Another method of detecting cracked shells is to tap two eggs gently together, and if there is a slightly ringing sound they may be considered all right. If there is a dull sound, one of the eggs is cracked and should be avoided.

Goslings With Weak Legs

Goslings that are weak in the legs and very thin sometimes are infested with worms. One remedy is to mix one-fourth pound sulphur, one-fourth pound epsom salts and two ounces powdered copperas in twenty-five pounds of the mash. The mash containing the medicine is used once each day. Goslings sometimes have congestion of the brain often due to fright, digestive disorders or worms. Two teaspoonfuls of castor oil to each gosling is sometimes a useful remedy.

Spread of Diseases

One of the common causes of the spread of infectious diseases among chicks is allowing soft feed to get mixed with the litter. If flat boards are used for feeding, have them wide enough so that the feed will not be scratched or carried off. It is better still to nail strips around the boards making them tray shaped, thus to prevent any chance of trouble from this cause. Feed that gets into the litter or on the ground should be removed promptly and never fed to the chicks.

Check Diseases by Fertilizing

Phosphate, Limestone and Manure Benefit Corn Quality and Yield.

One of the outstanding results of the corn disease studies being made by the college of agriculture, University of Illinois, is the favorable effect of manure, limestone and phosphate upon the yield and quality of disease-infected corn. It is reported by E. E. DeFurk, chief in soil technology at the college.

As an average of 21 comparisons covering a period of four seasons at Urbana and Bloomington, the above treatment increased the yield of corn from good seed from 66.2 bushels to 77.7 bushels an acre, or 11.5 bushels; while with diseased seed the increase amounted to 14.3 bushels, the yield being raised from 52.4 to 66.7 bushels.

Obtain Yield of Sound Corn.

While some of the damage of corn rot diseases can be greatly reduced by soil treatment, other injury cannot be so reduced. The yield finally obtained in any case is the result of many factors, some working for and some against the corn, some for and some against the parasitic fungi. Whenever a set of conditions is established which are favorable for the growth of corn, but which affect the disease-producing organism unfavorably, or not at all, a good yield of sound corn will be obtained. On the other hand, if the particular disease organism involved responds favorably to the same influences which favor the corn, the corn produced may be even poorer in yield or quality than if the treatments had been omitted.

Thus, in one case the total yield of corn from good seed was increased 2.4 bushels, while from fusarium-infected seed the increase was 12 bushels for treatment with rock phosphate in addition to organic manure. The increases in sound corn alone were 4.3 bushels and 18.4 bushels for good and fusarium-infected seed, respectively. In this case conditions favoring the corn plant did not likewise favor the growth of the disease-producing organism.

With diploia-infected seed, a different situation exists. On early-planted corn, rock phosphate had a smaller favorable effect in raising the yield of sound corn. The increase from good seed was 2.6 bushels and from diploia seed was 13 bushels. However, when the corn was planted late in the season, the rock phosphate had no effect upon the yield from good seed, but decreased the yield from diploia seed by 4.5 bushels. In this case the disease-producing organism, instead of the corn, was being fertilized.

Discover New Possibility.

An important outcome of these investigations has been the discovery of a new possibility in combining corn breeding with fertilization for larger and more economical yields. It has been found possible, for instance, to develop, by selection and breeding, strains of corn which have more than the usual capacity for absorbing and utilizing phosphate from the soil and particularly from added phosphates. These developments may ultimately come to mean much to the corn grower.

Attacking corn diseases from many angles has taught the lesson that these important diseases cannot be eliminated or controlled by any one method. Some gains have been made through fertilizer treatment and much more by seed selection and breeding, but neither of these nor even both together can be expected to furnish the complete solution of the problem.

Find Impure Seeds Are Large Tax on Farmers

Clean seed and clean land will help the farmers to save hundreds of thousands of dollars this year, according to a statement just issued by the extension division, Department of Agriculture of the University of Minnesota.

The statement referred to prints figures obtained from C. P. Bull, weed commissioner of the state department of agriculture, to the effect that more than $675,000 was paid by farmers for threshing the dockage of wheat in Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota and Montana, in a single year, and that more than $800,000 was paid for shipping the same stuff to market.

It is further estimated that on the basis of the average acreage of wheat in Minnesota for the last five years, the total loss imposed by unclean seed and unclean land runs to $1,900,000.

Losses of great amount in the growing of other crops occur in the same way.

Specialists at the Minnesota experiment station advise the planting of clean seed in clean land.

Planting Grapevines

The most popular distances for planting grape vines are 8 by 8 feet or 9 feet between the rows and 10 feet between the plants in the row for vigorous varieties such as Worden and LaCelle. Grape vines should be planted in early spring and on thoroughly prepared ground. The hole should be about 16 inches across and about the same depth. The plants should be set so the upper end of the old cutting, used in propagation of the vine, shall be an inch or more below the surface of the leveled ground. Prune back to two strong buds at planting time.

"Sheep Acres" Is of Much Interest

Extra Feeding of Ewes at Breeding Time Helps.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Comprising a tract of approximately 100 acres of tillable land in the animal husbandry experiment farm at Beltsville, Md., "Sheep Acres" is yielding many results of interest to stock owners of the United States. The name is gradually coming to mean the proving ground for problems of sheep production under intensive conditions typical of farm sheep raising. A practical system of forage-crop pastures, experiments already have shown, enables sheep to be pastured longer and moved from field to field, thereby controlling parasites more fully than when maintained under the usual permanent-pasture method. This practice makes it possible also to keep a farm flock on less cured feed, thereby saving expense and labor.

Another important result of experimental work at "Sheep Acres" concerns the effect of extra feeding of ewes at breeding time on the percentage of twins in the lamb crop. An advantage of 16 lambs per 100 ewes has resulted from keeping ewes in a highly nourished condition during that season.

Other experiments deal with growth of lambs, both in weight and size, fixing of type in purebred sheep by selective breeding, and rate of wool growth. The flock at "Sheep Acres" consists of approximately 200 sheep, including rams, ewes and lambs, representing the Southdown, Shropshire, Hampshire and Corriedale breeds.

D. A. Spencer is in charge of the investigations conducted at "Sheep Acres," and B. F. Brandon is superintendent of the farm of which "Sheep Acres" is a part.

Farm Machine Hospital Saves Time and Money

During cold winter and early spring days the farm shop is a very busy place for the successful farmer. He may profitably utilize his spare time there and make repairs of all sorts, according to John W. Sjogren, associate professor of agronomy, Colorado Agricultural college.

"Among the more important farm repairs to be made are: Replacing broken hammer and fork handles, overhauling farm machinery and equipment, and the repairing and oiling of work harness. On many farms the tractor and automobile are also part of the farm equipment. Where a farm machinery hospital is available, these machines are readily repaired and adjusted during the winter months.

"The farm shop need not be an expensive building or contain a large assortment of expensive tools. The tools that are very desirable to have in any repair shop, are: Work bench, vice, hammer, hand saw, hack saw, wrenches, cold chisels, punches, planes, drills, square, level, hatchet, screw-driver, drawing knife, yoke shave, forge, anvil, blacksmith hammer, tongs, grindstone, emery wheel, drill, and harness repair tools.

Garden Is Best Paying Patch on Average Farm

Garden time comes when the farmer is so busy with other necessary work that he thinks he cannot spare the time to put in the garden. Many say they can't fiddle around with a little old garden. The result is that the wife assumes the responsibility as well as all the work for the farm garden.

No matter how low the prices of farm crops fall, the farmer can always be sure of a good garden and enough to eat. If the wife has to look after the garden in addition to her household duties, the garden will necessarily be small. If the farmer himself spends more time in his garden, he will find that the garden pays better than any field crop he can grow. For the amount of land it occupies and the amount of labor required.—Thomas H. Summers, Extension Service, Colorado Agricultural College.

FARM FACTS

Guilts steal soil fertility. A brush dam will stop them.

Good preparation of the seedbed usually means that less cultivation will be needed later.

Only the farmer who feels a real dignity in his calling has the right attitude towards farming.

Money for legume seed and labor used in soil improvement is a profitable investment, not an expense.

To grow careless in watching out for the various pests may mean a serious crop loss. The spray should not be idle long.

Clover following wheat is especially favored by phosphatic fertilization. The effect of this fertilization can frequently be observed for several years.

With the high price of potatoes, one wants to get new potatoes real quickly. Place them in trays in a warm room in the sunlight, while the ground is being prepared. The sprouting will advance their growth by weeks.

COATS OF NOVELTY WORSTEDS; SPRING HATS FEATURE CROWNS

THE black and white vogue is "carrying on" at a fast and furious rate for spring. Especially is this true in the realm of sports coats, where startling black and white plaids are considered one of the smartest items for the coming season.

Choose a model such as the one in this picture and you will be credited as being clothed most fashionably. The basket weave plaided worsted which contrasts black with white, selected as the medium for this swagger coat emphasizes the trend toward as these tall crowns do perform—they turn, they twist, they double over, and when all is said and done, they come forth in handsome form. extreme novelty and startling effect. Most of the spring sports coats are fur-collared. Natural lynx collars this one.

The latest coats are noted for their unusual pockets. In the instance of the smart spring mode here pictured, the looping of a wide strap of the fabric from beneath a large button centered in the pocket imparts to it an unmistakable style touch.

Black and white plaids with stripings of brilliant red, green and yellow rayon are the "last word" in cloakings for sportswear.

Dresser coats also register black and white combinations, but in a different manner from sports models. That is, they achieve the contrast of black and white in the trimming rather than in the weaves itself. Of such are the patrician looking slim black suede models which are colored with white calfskin. Satin, moire and flat crepe are strongly advocated for the black facts which are so eminently suited to the matron. As the French milliners see it, the style is all in the felt itself and its manipulation. It needs little or no trimming—a modish touch of grosgrain ribbon, a sparkling ornament to distinguish it, or that which is latest of all, a novel flat feather motif.

There is also an inclination manifest to give a springlike aspect to the felt hat with a cluster of flowers cunningly posed either low on the left brim or conspicuously high on the crown. The vogue is especially for violets, either white or purple. Sometimes there is a violet-colored scarf to match.

From the standpoint of draped crowns which spell extreme chic, the hats herewith pictured are fraught with interest.

An outstanding feature of the first model in this group is that the milliner makes part of the hat of felt coat for spring; for the style message from across seas places especial stress on the silk coat for the coming months. These are variously detailed with white ermine or baby fox and the combining of monkey fur with ermine is an effective new touch.

Black cloth or silk coats with white embroidery are attracting much interest. These are timely for immediate wear. Later the white coat quilted or hand embroidered in black will make its appearance.

To the crowns of our chapeaux do we pay homage these days, for apparently they are "doing the honors" in conveying the spring millinery style message. Especially do crowns have everything to do with the smartness of the new felts. Such acrobatic feats pieces, using a felt hood for the muchly bedraped crown. The brim of the hat of imposing crown, shown at the top to the right, rolls up at one side, which is a most stylish thing for it to do. The fact that it is veiled, and that the tall tabs are stitched row-and-row adds to its "Frenchness." The crown of the center hat expresses the "last word" of the mode. In the hat pictured below to the left we see a happy combination of style details, such as the beret suggestion for the crown, its multitudinous creases and especially its ribbon trim. The last model in the group is noteworthy in that it reveals the trend toward the cloche silhouette.

Democratic Theory Would Send Every Farmer to Poor House

If we are to adopt the Democratic doctrine of limiting production to those sections of the globe where it can be carried on the most cheaply, then nothing faces the American farmer but stark ruin. He would not have the slightest chance of survival under such a system.

The Argentine country can produce cattle, ready for the market, at 75c per hundred pounds—one-fifth the cost in this country.

In Argentina and Canada they produce wheat at 45c to 55c a bushel less than the American farmer.

The Argentine, Australia, New Zealand and South Africa stockmen can produce raw wool at a fraction of the cost to the American wool grower.

China can produce rice at a ridiculously small figure, which would drive the American rice industry out of business.

China also produces eggs at a price which it is hopeless for the American poultryman to attempt to meet.

Canada produces potatoes at a lower price than they can be raised in Maine or Michigan.

Manchuria produces beans and peas with the aid of Chinese coolie labor, on land that has practically no value on the market.

New Zealand, Australia, Canada and Denmark produce butter at from 18c to 28c a pound less than it can be produced by the American dairy interests.

If the Democratic tariff doctrine were to be put into effect, what would be left for the American farmer to do but go to the poorhouse?

Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen Will Run a Big 'Special' March 19

Two days after St. Patrick's Day which will be March 19, the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen will give a big dance at the Community Hall, for the benefit of the fund which is used for the purpose of caring for the sick and disabled of its members.

This organization keeps constantly in touch with those of its number, who have suffered from misfortune and sees that they do not become objects of cruel so-called charity. To add to a fund for this commendable purpose, the entertainment is to be given. The Trainmen enjoy an enviable reputation as royal entertainers and those who attend will have the satisfaction of knowing that besides a "run" for their "fare," they will be lending a helping hand to a worthy cause. An El Paso orchestra will furnish the music, Edwin McCarty and Maxine Hoffman, two former Carrizozo school students being among the number.

The Brotherhood never "backs up," "slows down," or "gets off the track," when it comes to entertaining, but "With two sharp whistles

Modern smokers enjoy the mellow fragrance of Camel

THE smokers of this modern age appreciate the smooth, mellow fragrance of Camels—that taste and goodness that come from the choicest tobaccos grown. Camel's steadily growing popularity with modern smokers has given it the greatest preference any cigarette ever had. In quality and in fame Camel is supreme.

Meet the cigarette that has won the modern world. There is not another like it—regardless of the price. Always mellow, always mild—the smoothest smoke ever made. "Have a Camel!"

And down the track, You can always see the smoke Come rolling back."

It's too Bad, isn't it Carl?

It seems almost like cruelty of animals, to see the Republican and Democratic lawmakers agreeing in sweet harmony on amendments to a perfectly good and praiseworthy election law, thus pulling the teeth of a couple of our best known journalistic howlers, crape-hangers and dynamiters.—New Mexican.

Notice of Suit

State of New Mexico to Joseph L. Riddle:

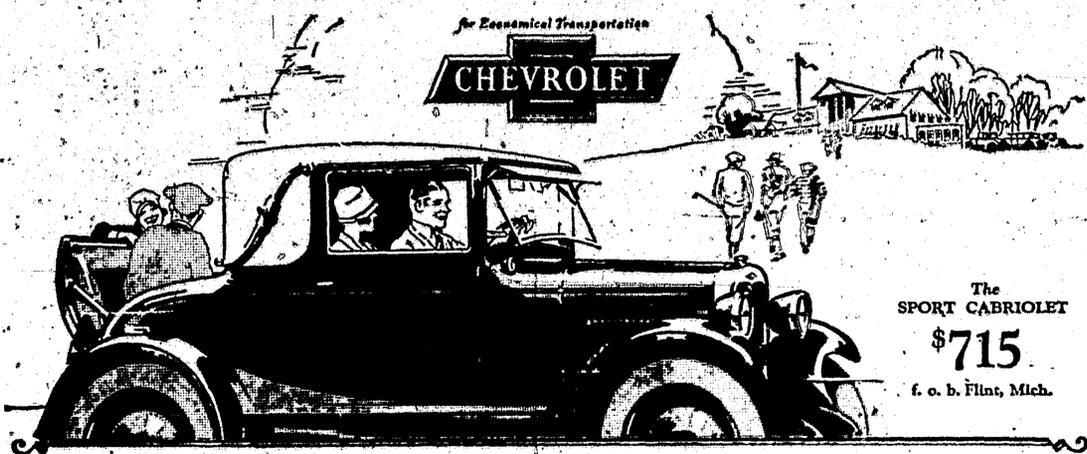

You are hereby notified that there has been filed on the civil docket of the Third Judicial District Court of the State of New Mexico, in and for the County of Lincoln, and numbered 3545, a suit wherein Fred Bailey is plaintiff, and you, Joseph L. Riddle, are defendant; that said plaintiff alleged that you were indebted to him in the sum of $528.94 and interest on account of goods sold and delivered; that your property described as lot two, in block two, Hotel Site, in the NW 1/4 of SW 1/4 of section 30, township 11 south of range 14 east, N. M. P. M., Lincoln County, New Mexico, and the personal property in and about the filling station thereon, has been attached to satisfy said claim of plaintiff; and you are further notified that John A. Friedenbloom has filed his petition of intervention in said cause, claiming to be the owner in fee simple of the above described real estate; and you are further notified that the Pecos Valley Lumber Company, a corporation, has filed its petition of intervention herein, asking judgment against you, the defendant, Joseph L. Riddle, for the sum of $219.39, with interest thereon from August 11, 1925 and for $5.00, expenses in connection therewith; and $75.00 attorney's fees and for the closure of a mechanic's and material man's lien on the above described real estate, filed in the office of the County Clerk of Lincoln County, on the 13th day of August, 1925, and recorded in Book "D" of Liens, at page 135, for building materials furnished you, the said defendant, Joseph L. Riddle, for the erection of a filling station upon said above described premises.

You will further take notice that the court has ordered publication of notice of said action against you, notifying you that your property has been attached, and that the petitions of the said intervenors praying judgment against you are pending, and that unless you appear or cause to be entered your appearance herein, on or before the 2nd day of April, 1927, judgment will be rendered against you, and your property sold to satisfy the same.

You are further notified that the name of plaintiff's attorney is H. B. Hamilton, whose post office address is Carrizozo, New Mexico, and that the attorney of intervenor John A. Friedenbloom is W. C. Whatley, whose post office address is Las Cruces, New Mexico, and that the attorney of the Pecos Valley Lumber Company, intervenor, is A. H. Hudspeth, whose post office address is Carrizozo, New Mexico.

WITNESS the Hon. Numa C. Frenger, Judge of said Court, and the seal thereof, this 17th day of February, 1927.

CHOCOLATE RABBITS

Daddy was certainly right on time this evening for his story for Nick and Nancy, and he had a story he wanted to tell right away.

"You know," said he, "some bunny rabbits and molly cottontails and Jack rabbits were almost bursting their sides laughing in the woods today."

"Now, you'll admit," old Grandpa Jack Rabbit was saying, "that that is the best joke you ever did hear."

"Yes, we think so," said the molly cottontails. "The rest of the bunnies were laughing so hard they could not answer."

"Really, people are so very silly, and they have such a funny idea as to what we look like."

"But imagine making bunnies out of chocolates!" "And then they burst out laughing again."

"If you could have seen them," continued old Grandpa Jack Rabbit, "you'd have certainly thought they were funny."

"You see, it was this way: 'It was very early in the morning, and I wanted to go through the village, as I had heard that grocer had in a fresh supply of fine lettuce."

"What should I see?" "candy shop, and then in the window, besides, were just countless rabbits made out of chocolate."

"Imagine! Did you ever hear of anything so foolish?" "And chickens made out of chocolate, too!"

"Chocolate eggs, too, but they're not quite so ridiculous."

"I really think it is quite an insult to us. And they looked so absurd!" "If they had done us justice, then I wouldn't have thought so much about it."

"But they didn't make us look nearly so handsome and good looking as they should have done."

"Now you take chickens. They are queer-looking anyway."

"But a rabbit is different. There is something so grand looking about a rabbit!"

"Old Grandpa Jack Rabbit was really getting quite, quite angry. 'He had forgotten about the joke of it and only thought of the insult to his family.'"

"So the rest of the rabbits said: 'Well, after all, it's a pretty good joke.'"

"And then Grandpa Jack Rabbit began to laugh again. 'But Grandpa,' piped up one of the little bunnies, 'you've told us all about the chocolate bunnies that children eat, and you haven't told the little bunnies if you found what you had gone to find—lettuce leaves.'"

"Dear, dear," said Grandpa, 'the fresh green lettuce.' 'After all, I didn't forget about our luncheon, for, even though I was pretty mad about all those chocolate bunnies which didn't do us justice, I remembered to reach the grocer's in time to get some lettuce.'"

"So we'll have our fine luncheon now!" "And they all did."

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

President Coolidge Vetoes the Farm Relief Bill—Crisis at Shanghai.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE on Friday vetoed the McNary-Haugen farm relief bill, and all hope for governmental relief for the agriculturists was abandoned until the next congress shall meet.

Whatever may be the opinion of the soundness of Mr. Coolidge's reasons for vetoing the bill or of his political wisdom in this respect, there is no question of his consistency and his courage in the matter.

MATTERS in China moved rapidly toward a crisis last week. Following his crushing defeat at Hangchow by the Nationalists, Marshal Sun Chuan-fang, hitherto ruler of Kiangsu province, gave up Hangchow, Kashiing and Ningpo, second largest port in Chekiang province, and retired on Shanghai.

Japan, on the other hand, has accepted the Coolidge proposal and says its delegates at Geneva will have full power to negotiate an agreement extending the limitation to all classes of fighting ships.

SOVIET Russia has been twisting the British lion's tail too persistently, and last week it received from the British government a blunt warning that all relations between the two nations would be broken off unless it mended its ways at once.

WITH only a few days remaining before the end of the session, congressmen made an effort to rush through this was hampered by the filibuster carried on for the purpose of defeating the bill to dam the Colorado river in Boulder canyon.

BY A vote of 206 to 172 the house accepted the senate amendment to the navy appropriation bill providing money for beginning the three light cruisers whose construction the President has insisted should be delayed.

The house reduced the amount from $1,200,000 to $450,000, and the senate acquiesced—in this change.

IN ORDER to provide a place of refuge for British subjects imperiled by the civil warfare in Nicaragua, the British government decided to send a cruiser to the Central American republic. This plan was adopted after the British charge d'affaires at Managua had notified the government that President Diaz and the American minister, Mr. Eberhardt, had stated they could not guarantee to protect British lives and property in case of renewed street fighting.

Seemingly determined to put an end to the Sacaca rebellion, the American government sent more marines to Nicaragua and Admiral Latimer created new neutral zones for the purpose of keeping the railway in operation and of protecting the cities.

ITALY'S formal reply to President Coolidge's naval disarmament proposal was transmitted to Washington. It was a politely worded but flat rejection, and was drafted by Premier Mussolini himself.

The note declares that so far as the European continent is concerned, there is an inalienable interdependence of all categories of armaments of every single power and that it is impossible to adopt the measure for only the five great naval powers.

Japan, on the other hand, has accepted the Coolidge proposal and says its delegates at Geneva will have full power to negotiate an agreement extending the limitation to all classes of fighting ships.

WHEN Samuel Insull of Chicago appeared before the Reed committee in Washington he answered most of the questions concerning his contributions to the Illinois primary campaign funds, but flatly refused to tell to whom he gave $40,000 for local political campaigns.

SENATOR LA FOLLETTE of Wisconsin took the occasion of Washington's birthday to introduce in the senate this resolution:

"Resolved, That it is the sense of the senate that the precedent established by Washington and other Presidents of the United States in retiring from Presidential office after their second term, has become, by universal concurrence, a part of our republican system of government, and that any departure from this time-honored custom would be unwise, unpatriotic and fraught with peril to our free institutions."

In the house Representative Fairchild of New York introduced a resolution for amending the federal Constitution so that "no person shall be eligible to the office of President who has previously served two terms, whether by election or by succession due to the removal, death, resignation or inability of the President where the term of succession shall have continued for a period of two years or more."

Under the terms of the La Follette resolution, Mr. Coolidge would be ineligible for re-election next year. Under the Fairchild plan, he would be eligible.

COMMANDER FRANCESCO DI PINEDO of Italy, for the glory of Fascism, flew across the Atlantic ocean last week. He started from the Cape Verde islands, off the coast of Africa, and flew direct to Fernando Noronha island, Brazil.

FOR two days and nights the North Atlantic seaboard was swept by furious winds and tremendous seas, and before the storm subsided it had taken nearly two score lives.

COAL operators and miners in conference at Miami failed to agree on a wage scale for the bituminous field. The workers consistently refused to consider a reduction of wages.

SCHOOL DAYS

Mother's Cook Book

To be as good as our fathers we must be better. Imitation is discipleship.

DEVILED DISHES

FOODS highly seasoned with condiments are called deviled. Such dishes are popular for an appetizer.

Deviled Chicken Legs

Take the second joints and drumsticks of a roasting or spring chicken, reserving the breast for salad.

Deviled Bones

Rub the paste well into the meat left on the ribs of beef, brush with butter and broil. Serve not too well done.

Deviled Ham

Cut a moderately thick slice of cold boiled ham, make incisions on both sides of it, rub into these the deviled paste, then with butter, and broil long enough to become thoroughly hot.

Deviled Tripe

Take well-cooked tripe that is cold, rub it liberally with the deviled paste, brush it with sweet fat and broil to a delicate brown.

Deviled Veal Chops

Take thick chops and into several gauges made with a sharp knife, press as much of the paste as is needed to season each chop. Dredge with crumbs and broil as usual, or saute in a little fat.

Deviled crabs, oysters or various fresh fish may be seasoned with the paste and cooked in hot fat, making most tasty dishes.

WHO ARE THE RICH?

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

COUNT your treasure, and I'll count mine, And we shall see who the rich man is.

You begin with a dollar-sign, And I'll begin with a baby's kiss. You put in all a house can hold, All the splendor and all the gold, I'll put in just a roof of thatch, A bed, a table, a chair to match.

Count your treasure, and I'll count ours, You the mansion upon the crags; We have little but birds and flowers And bread and butter, but mostly rags.

Neither of us, I am sure of that, For who is rich who has naught of love? And poor the lover who ever sat In calm content with a leak above.

Go best together, I'm sure of it, To gather either be not too loth— The rich are those with a bit of both.

At 21: Walter E. Frew, the Banker, Was Earning $33 a Month.

AT TWENTY-ONE I was with the Wall Street brokerage firm of Shepherd, Knapp & Company, making $33 a month.

"When I was sixteen my father saw that I would not be able to attend college; he was not well; he did not feel that he could see me through. So he got me the brokerage position.

"After working five years my salary of $33 a month was far from satisfactory, but I had the principal drawback of most young men—no ambition.

Balked at Spelling of New Husband's Name

An employee of the gas company tells me of a foreign bride who approached her the other day to have the gas in the new love nest turned on.

"I just got married—please turn on the gas," was the way she put it. "You want it in your husband's name?" the young woman behind the counter asked.

"Mike," the bride returned. "Mike Blankovitch— an unspellable name—say, how do you spell that name, missus?"

The puzzled young woman behind the counter smiled. "I'm sure I don't know," she said. "I should think you'd know, if you married him."

"Well," said the blushing bride, at length, "I go home and ask him how to spell that name, then I come back"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Drink Water to Help Wash Out Kidney Poison

If Your Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers You, Begin Taking Salts

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract.

Drink lots of good water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, which everyone should take now and then to help keep their kidneys clean and active.

Noted Sportsman Scores Again

L. B. Simmons, winner of many fishing and shooting trophies, wins fight for health. At 68 he stages comeback with aid of Tanlac

From behind the counter of his fishing tackle shop at 1434 1/2 Larimer St., Denver, Colo., surrounded by the trophies of 45 years with rod and gun, the famous sportsman smiled genially as he told of his latest victory.

"Being outdoors so much kept me in robust health for years," said Mr. Simmons. "But about three years ago the first signs of serious trouble came. I lost my appetite and suffered from gas. At night a gnawing pain in my stomach kept me tossing and turning so that I had no restful sleep to speak of. That wore me down. Gradually I became so weak and listless that I had to drag myself about, losing all my old-time interest in life around me."

"I want to go on record as to what Tanlac did for me. It put me on my feet again and made me a new man. There is no doubt or question in my mind about that. I am glad, indeed, to tell how it helped me and to recommend it to all who suffered as I did. I really thought I was through with life until I saw what Tanlac could do for me. Now, with its aid, I'm back on the job again, eating, sleeping and feeling fine. I'm now as keenly interested in sports and life as ever I was, and I can't tell you how much that means to me."

Capitan School Notes

The Basketball tournament of the Southeast District has passed into history. Carlbad and Roswell teams were chosen to represent the district in the state meet. We are sure that these teams will take care of our interest in that meet. Roswell and Carlbad were the best teams in the meet, as Roswell only won by one point in the last half of the last minute, which in my estimation was purely an accident. Lake Arthur was undoubtedly the next best team, with Carrizozo fourth. The teams that showed unsportsmanship were abused by the crowd.

One thing the tournament showed was that teams that have no court to play or practice on, have no show with teams that have them. For example: The Hope team defeated every team in the valley last fall, and their coach told me that due to the climate he only practised his team four times since Christmas, and the Hope team did not win anything. The Capitan five were as good men physically as any other five men that played, but they could not receive their training on account of the weather.

I think it is useless for teams that do not have courts to contend with teams that have one, and the tournament should be divided on these lines. I want to say another thing in regard to the athletics of Lincoln County.

We are as far back as the ox wagon in not putting athletics in the schools, instead of playing on Saturday and Sundays. These games should be played on schooldays under the management like other states and all of New Mexico, except Lincoln County. I would as soon as my teachers play on Sunday as on Saturday. The old New Englander found out years ago that it was best for the home life to let the parent have the child two days of the week.

Our state course of study and the other state course is made out for the average child, and at the same time to let the child participate in athletics and other extra curricular activities, and if your teachers cannot do this, they are no good. It seems to me that somebody is interfering with our schools and athletics and never has investigated them.

Mr. Lambert took the boys team to Roswell not expecting to win, but all had a good time.

The school was left in charge of Miss Nichols while Prof. Lambert was away and everything went along smoothly.
