Railroad Rumbblings

Mrs. Chas. Terrell came up from El Paso last Saturday and went up to the Duggar ranch in Tecolote canyon where her little daughter, Elgiva, is spending the summer with her grandmother, Mrs. A. R. Duggar. Mrs. Terrell returned to El Paso yesterday, but Elgiva will remain for another month.

Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Miller and two children and Clint Carey of Amarillo, who spent a week with the Chandler family, left Monday for home after a pleasant visit.

Mrs. Geo. Young, wife of operator Young of the local station, spent the 4th with relatives at Hereford, Texas, and returned accompanied by her little daughter, Avella, who had been visiting at that place for the past four weeks.

Mrs. W. R. Farmer and daughters, Betty Louise and Marjorie Belle of Los Angeles are here for a visit with Mrs. Farmer's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Carl and will remain for about four weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Grumbles of Riverside, Calif., came in this week and were added to other relatives of trainman Grumbles. They are being taken to the different resorts in the nearby mountains during their stay here.

Rev. J. H. Skinner made a trip last Saturday to Las Cruces to take over Mrs. Roy-Skinner and children, who are moving to that place to make it their future home. He returned Sunday evening. Roy, who is firing for the S.P. out of here, will remain here for the fall and winter season.

Mrs. J. F. Zimmerman and son, Dee, of Roswell came over for the 4th and accompanied by operator Geo. Young and son, Geo. Jr., they made a trip to the Ruidoso regions and the Mesquero Indian Reservation. Mrs. Zimmerman is a sister to Mr. Young.

The Alamogordo News says: A human interest story occurred a few days ago near Temporal, north of Tularosa, that attracted considerable interest. A bridge was ablaze all over when Mrs. Buster Rustin, wife of the foreman at Temporal discovered the flames. She knew that the bridge was dangerous and a freight train was coming south and would cross in several minutes. Mr. Rustin was at Three Rivers assisting the foreman there with some work. Mrs. Rustin grabbed a red dress and ran to the track and flagged the freight in time to stop before reaching the burning bridge. The train crew took up a subscription and presented to Mrs. Rustin. Several days later a hearing was held in Alamogordo over the origin of the fire and the board decided from evidence adduced that the fire was of incendiary origin. Mr. and Mrs. Rustin were present as witnesses and the latter received commendation for her presence of mind and action in flagging the engineer of the freight.

White Oaks Whispers

By Miss Willie Kelt:
Mr. and Mrs. L. Barto and family of Oklahoma City, Okla., are here for the summer months.

The Misses Minnie and Dorothy Shale are here from El Paso for a few weeks.

Quite a few people from here spent the 4th at different places.

Mrs. H. E. Kelt has been on the sick list for a few days, but is better at this writing.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Leslie are having their summer home repaired.

Mrs. Allen Lane and little daughter were Carrizozo visitors Wednesday.

Judge Hewitt spent several days in Carrizozo this week.

Highway Activity

Road foreman Chas. F. Grey reports that a new No. 30 Cletrac tractor and an Adams No. 6 Road Maintainer has been added to the service by the Highway Commission for use on Lincoln County Highways. The old cattle guards between here and Coyote are being removed and replaced with new 16 foot standard cattle guards. The old culverts have also been removed and replaced with new and more durable ones.

The work on the Carrizozo-Tularosa Highway is going forward in excellent manner. Foreman Ferguson has reached the Ferguson farm on this end and a good strong bridge has been put in on the road several miles this side of Tularosa. Mr. Tinnon, mechanical expert, is here overhauling machinery and repairing same where repairs are needed.

Busy Days Along This Rural Route

"El Puerto" Wins

The name decided upon by the Judges named by Mr. Le Baron of Nogal for the new Summer Playground in Nogal Canyon.

The Judges met Tuesday morning to canvass the votes, and found 117 votes cast, 78 of which were found in the Outlook box and 39 in the News box.

In the majority of cases, the names submitted did not apply to the location, and after culling out 115 names, 2 remained—and as first choice, the name "El Puerto" was chosen, with "Resthaven" as a second choice.

The first choice went to Conductor D. A. Mackenzie and the second choice to Mrs. R. T. Lucas of Kansas City, who suggested this name for the Carrizozo Girl Scouts.

The meaning of the Spanish word "El Puerto" is: a narrow pass; leading to a port; a haven. "Resthaven" (in Old English) speaks for itself. The names bear a close relationship in meaning.

Mr. Mackenzie was notified of the action of the Judges Wednesday morning, after the votes had been mailed to Nogal.

Now that the matter is settled and the name chosen, the lots should begin to sell in good fashion. The spot is beautiful; there are plenty of trees and water; and the location is only a 12-mile drive from Carrizozo—Let the good work go on!

Met Death in Mine

Ira Boydston of Coyote received word from Mrs. Edna C. Burnett of Jerome, Ariz., to the effect that her youngest son, Ludwell Burnett, was killed in a mine at that place on June 29.

Mrs. Burnett will be remembered by many people over the county, as she taught school at Ancho, Coyote, Jicarilla and other places during the many years of her residence here.

Birthday Party at Nogal

Miss Marion Skinner of Malaga, N. M., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Skinner, is visiting at the home of her aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Zumwalt of Nogal. Marion and her cousin, Irene Zumwalt, are nearing the same age, that of 15 years and as Irene's falls on this date, Mrs. Zumwalt will give a birthday party this evening in honor of the event. There will be a musical program, attended by refreshments.

George Washington may not have been able to tell a lie, but his biographers are not afflicted with the same complaint.

Funeral of F. F. Mudge

The funeral of F. F. Mudge was held Saturday afternoon with the officers of Carrizozo Lodge No. 30 I. O. O. F. conducting the same. Relatives of the deceased and the many friends of the family, assembled at Odd Fellows Hall at 2:30 and after prayer by Rev. Ludlow and singing by a ladies' choir composed of Mesdames Loughrey, Lemon, Clouse and Ludlow, with Mrs. T. E. Kelley at the piano, the Odd Fellows performed the ritualistic ceremonies for the dead.

The funeral was well attended, the hall being crowded to its seating capacity while many were standing, in order to pay their last respects to their departed friend and brother. At the grave, the last sad rites of the order were performed and the remains lowered to their last resting place.

Letter of Appreciation

Nogal, N.M., July 5, '27
Mr. A. L. Burke,
Editor Outlook,
Carrizozo, N.M.
Dear Mr. Burke—

Mrs. LeBaron and I wish to thank you for the splendid publicity given the Contest for the naming of the "Summer Playground" in Nogal Canyon through the Outlook—the three Judges, Mr. McQuillen, Mrs. Blaney and yourself.

The selection must have been difficult, owing to the many appropriate names submitted. The Judges' selection, we hope, will meet with the approval of those who make "El Puerto" their "haven of rest."

To our thinking, a more appropriate name could not have been given; it surely is a "wooded glen" and a "haven of rest."

Again thanking the Outlook, the Judges, and all those who submitted names.

Charles LeBaron.

Stimmel Sells Three Car Loads of Cattle

B. L. Stimmel, stock commission man sold three car loads of cattle this week to buyer Johnson of Clinton, Iowa. One car load came from the Peaker ranch, one from Geo. Jeffreys and one from Perkins and Townsend.

Fort Stanton Notes

A very exciting ball game was played last Sunday between Jack McDonald's Red Mill team of El Paso and Fort Stanton.

—Score—

El Paso 0 0 1 0 1 0 0 2 0 4 6 2
Fort 0 0 1 0 0 2 0 0 3 7 5

Batteries—El Paso, Smith and Garland; Stanton, Flores and Cavanaugh.

In the second game the Stanton boys came back strong in the 4th and won the game.

—Score—

El Paso 0 0 1 0 3 0 4 0 3 11 17 14
Fort 7 8 5 0 4 1 5 1 x 26 21 7

Batteries—El Paso, Briggs, Smith, Gorman, Florence and Garland; Stanton, Mickey, Flores, Cox and Cavanaugh.

The El Paso boys started a football game in several attempts, but they didn't get very far, although, we are sorry to report that Mickey received a broken wrist joint in getting a man out at the home plate in the 7th inning. Also Cavanaugh sustained an injury to his knee, but at this writing, both are getting along satisfactorily.

The Trowel club's display of fireworks on the 4th was enjoyed by all present.

Miss Brown returned Tuesday from a month's vacation at San Diego, Calif.

Mrs. Hill returned Wednesday after spending several days in El Paso.

Miss Dora Watkins left Wednesday to spend a month at Memphis, Tenn. and New Orleans, La.

Miss Dinna returned Wednesday after spending a month at Downers Grove, Ill.

Mr. Coolidge of Topeka, Kans., who arrived last week for an extended visit with his sister, Mrs. Wunsch, had a surprise for her in bringing a bride with him. Congratulations are extended to both of them by numerous friends at the post.

William Clark spent the weekend in El Paso.

Burl Sears of Carlsbad was at the Fort Monday.

Dr. and Mrs. Sterling of Bowling Green, Ohio, will arrive this week to spend several days with Dr. Nesbit and family.

Geo. Roduskey returned here from Cleveland, Ohio, for further treatment.

Many people from here are attending the Indian dances at the Mesquero Reservation.

Carl Berggren spent last Monday at Tularosa.

Several from here attended the Eastern Star meeting in Carrizozo Thursday.

Dr. and Mrs. Tappan, son Bobby, Mrs. Faget and small daughter Elsie were Carrizozo visitors Thursday of this week.

On June 23, '27, Rev. Harold King Stanley and Miss Laura Gladys, both of Raton, N. M., were married at Denver, Colorado. The bride is one of the leading ladies in Raton church circles and the Reverend gentleman, was for several years at Fort Stanton as Rector of the Episcopal Church and included Carrizozo, Tularosa and Alamogordo in his work in the ministry. The happy couple returned to Raton, after a bridal trip and were at home to their friends on July 5. The Fort extends congratulations.

The Wool Situation

Wool still continues to come in from all parts of the county and warerooms over town are being packed to their capacity. The line-up to date of those having clips stored here, is as follows: Frank Maxwell, Red Canyon Sheep Co., Marshall Atkinson, T. M. DuBois, Melton & Sons, Bert Stroope, C. E. Freeman, holding large amounts, besides several others possessing small clips.

The talk of making Carrizozo a centralization point for wool storing is fast gaining ground and the present storing of the clips so that buyers may come here, make their selections and settle with the wool growers without having to travel all over the county to make transactions, seems to meet with the hearty approval of all growers we have talked with, so far. If the project is carried out and no doubt it will be, a warehouse large enough to store all the wool in the county and some from beyond our limits, will be erected alongside the railroad track for convenience in shipping. The clips will each have a place for storage, the buyers can inspect the same and all business be done without going outside of Carrizozo to pull the deals. Won't that be nice and would it not be just the reasonable thing to do?—Let's go, then.

Girl Scouts

The Girl Scouts met Wednesday afternoon at the home of the Misses Elma and Ellen Ludlow with an attendance of 15. In view of the fact that it was voted at the last meeting to make some useful gifts for little Gerald Hixon, the same was made into the form of a shower for the little recipient, and in a thoughtful manner, the Scouts called on Mrs. T. E. Kelley and requested that she bring the baby to the place of meeting, which was gladly done. When they arrived at the Ludlow home, the shower of presents was performed with becoming dignity, after which refreshments were served. We then adjourned to meet at the home of Miss Glen-neth English July 13.

The Girl Scouts wish to thank all those who submitted names for the lot in the summer play ground for us.—Reporter.

It is the forces of sound thinking, sound government and sound economics which hold the only hope for real progress, real freedom and real prosperity for the masses of the people.—President Coolidge.

CHAPTER XII—Continued

Pushing the ill-smelling lantern closer to the fireplace, he picked up one of the half-burned mesquite roots, raked together Pardaloe's scattered embers, and after patient effort, got a tiny blaze flickering. Having done this, he sat down on the blanket near the hearth, put out the lantern, and advised Tracy to go to sleep.

"What'll you be doing?" asked the drowsy Tracy.

"I'll sit here for a while. Give me your cards, Bill."

Pardaloe had brought in an extra blanket for Selwood, who was coughing. As he reached into his capacious hip pocket for the cards, he framed an apology. "They're gummed up some, John."

"No matter," returned Selwood curtly. "Give me the cards."

Pardaloe handed the chilly gambler the greasy cards and withdrew. Tracy's talk gradually subsided; he was soon asleep. In the uneven play of light from the hearth, Selwood, the blanket spread before him, mechanically shuffled Pardaloe's cards.

Absorbed and silent, he held the pack in his left hand, impassively slipped the cards one by one to his right and faced them slowly on the blanket—pausing at intervals to mark their sequence and to read in it the answer to the question he kept asking.

Pardaloe came in with a handful of wood ripped from a window shutter and fed it, silently and skillfully, to Selwood's fire. When the blaze suited him, he turned on his hip to read the story the cards were telling.

He kept silence till Selwood had finished. "Dead man on 'em tonight—oh, John!" he said in an undertone.

"A dead man," responded Selwood composedly, and added: "This last time there's something new, Bill."

"What's that?"

"A dead woman."

Pardaloe, wramping his grizzly neck at the surprising words, bent his beady eyes close down on the fate-bearing sequence. He stared for a moment. Then without words he drew back his head; the dead woman was there.

Tracy slept only a little while longer. Pardaloe had gone to the wagon, and Selwood felt presently that his partner was awake—and that very probably he lay watching him; but Selwood himself had no desire to break the silence. Tracy did not let the quiet long.

"What you doing there, John?" he asked at length—with something of a growl. "It looks to me as if one of us, anyway, ought to be in Sleepy Cat a night like this. Everything we've got up there in the world is at stake."

"Everything I've got up there, Dave," answered Selwood. "You're a mine-owner now—I'm just plain gambler; remember that—will you?" He spoke the last two words with a touch of acid sharpness that did not often creep into his tone. Tracy recognized in it an invitation to quit. "I've been back up there tonight, since I brought you down," volunteered Selwood, to break the browbeatenness of his partner's tone.

"The Vigilantes are holding our part of the town, and they changed their minds, somehow, about burning us. Abe Cole told me we were safe. Of course, the other fellows might try it—but I just imagine they'll have most of the bunch on the telegraph poles by morning—if they've got enough poles. Dave?"

Selwood asked the question in his accustomed kindly fashion—"you've played the cards a good while, haven't you?"

"Ever since I was big enough to set up 'n' play euchre with my dad. Gosh, nigh on forty year," grumbled the old man, appeared in turn by the firelighter tone of his protégé.

"Do you believe in 'em, Dave?"

"I believe in the cards," answered Tracy meditatively, "all the time. I believe in dogs most of the time; not many men I believe in any time."

"Do you believe in dead men, Dave?" asked Selwood.

"Don't talk foolishness," retorted Tracy. "And," he added with deeper pessimism, "I don't believe in no woman none of the time."

Pardaloe stuck his head in through the shack door just in time to hear Tracy's words. "Right for once, partner," he half-bellowed. "Dead right—every word right."

Selwood showed impatience. "Wake 'em up," he said to Pardaloe shortly. "Hit 'em up the horses. We'll be pulling out of here pretty quick."

"Which way you headin'?" asked Tracy as Pardaloe disappeared. His tone was irritating, and the question found Selwood irritable. "I don't know and don't care much," he answered indifferently.

"Well, I'll tell you," remarked Tracy. "If you'll take me back to Sleepy Cat you'll like me. Oughtn't to've sneaked me out of there. Then you headin' away from there, say to talk to that cat, I don't like it."

Selwood tried to pass it off. He spoke with half a laugh and in the manner of his partner. "Didn't think you'd take it that hard, Dave. I did what I thought was right—"

"Yes, but—"

"Sorry I bothered you. It won't happen again. I hope I shan't be bothering anybody very long."

Tracy threw a sharp question at him. "What'd you mean by that foolishness?"

"Is there any particular objection to my meaning exactly what I say?" The retort was too keen to pass unnoticed. Tracy was silent for a moment. When he spoke he made a gruff complaint. "Whenever you get a chance, you like to take me hard—don't you? Anything I say—"

Selwood suppressed a smile. "I wasn't thinking about you, Dave. Don't you know, a man can feel that his game's about played? Mine begins to look that way to me tonight."

"Shucks! you got a cough started again, that's all the matter with you."

Selwood released a hard little laugh. "Coughs don't bother me. I've been acquainted with 'em too long. I asked you a while ago whether you believed in dead men. Last night I dreamed I saw Frank Sanger."

"I thought I was walking down River street in Sleepy Cat. It seemed as if it was dusk—evening, or early morning—daybreak. I looked across the street. There was Frank Sanger walking on the other side, looking straight over at me. Looked the same as he did that night we—"

"At that time Selwood was heavier. He had on a mustache that was heavier. He had on a queer-looking hat."

"I tried to reach for my gun; I couldn't move a finger. All of a sudden, he started across the street toward me. His eyes were as big as teacups. And all the time I knew he was dead! I tried to cry out—I must have made some kind of a noise, for something woke me up. I grabbed my gun out from under my pillow. I was sure he was somewhere in the room. And there I lay in a cold sweat."

"Dead men don't walk the streets," growled Tracy. "Sit up that fire. What you sittin' there in the dark for? There's nothin' to a dream, man!"

Selwood made no move. "It's in the cards, too, Dave. I've tried 'em—three times. It always comes the same way—there's death in this deck for somebody. I guess it's full time for me to cash in, anyway. And remember, everything between you and me is fixed. You own the mine; I own the hall."

"Light the lantern, Dave!" burst out Tracy, with a deepening growl. "Dreams don't mean anything! If there's anything wrong with the cards it's because they're hanging men in Sleepy Cat."

Without a word Selwood rose, felt for a match, and, striking it, looked for the lantern. Tracy kept up a nervous running-fire of talk, punctuated at times by abrupt pauses, but persistent. Selwood, holding the lantern in his hand, slipped the globe down over the lighted stick; then he packed and, as he stood, listened. Doubtful at first of his sense of hearing, the faint, regular sound of hoof beats soon fell unmistakably on his ears.

Selwood, extinguishing, by a short drop, the flame of the lantern, and bidding Tracy to sit still, picked up the box and set it over the fire, stepped through the half-open door and stood for a moment just outside. He had not been mistaken; a horseman was nearing the cluster of evil huts known as Calabassas.

Standing expectant in the full light of a late-rising moon, Selwood was joined by the silent Indian, who, waiting only to get his orders, stole forward under cover toward the main road.

He reached a point of vantage at the moment the horseman slackened his pace. Scott allowed him to advance and turn and rein about in indecision only long enough to make him out. Pardaloe, in the interval, had joined Selwood and had moved with him from the door, which they left hanging awry on its one hinge, into the shadow. There they stood when, reining about, after speaking low to Scott, who had halted him, the rider spurred again down the draw and halted before Tracy's shack. "For God's sake," he muttered, swinging from his saddle, "where is everybody?"

Selwood recognized the voice and the figure at the same instant, and, stepping out into the moonlight, spoke to McAlpin.

The stout-hearted little barn boss staggered stiffly into the shack after Selwood, the two other men crowding in behind him. Pardaloe lighted the lantern. Scott lifted the box that Selwood had crunched, bottom up, over the smoking fire, and Selwood pointed to the stool.

Neither he nor Scott made any effort to hurry the foreman. It was enough for them to study his blood-shot eyes until he should be ready to explain what was responsible for his peculiar mental condition and his unexpected appearance at Calabassas. He sat on the box, breathing in and breathing with the hot, smoldering fire.

him stood Pardaloe and Scott, who had risen from the hearth, while Selwood stood with his back to the fire, studying McAlpin by its light, and the light of the lantern on the table, wondering whether McAlpin could be wounded, and how badly, or whether he was running a huge bluff.

"John," exclaimed the barn boss, darting his bloodshot glance at Selwood, "ha' y' got any cartridges?"

Selwood answered only after a pause and then impassively. "A few, Jim—why?"

McAlpin, holding his left forearm and hand pretty well up, spoke to Scott. "Bob," he said, "take your knife and slit that sleeve up a bit. I'm nicked in the arm, John, but it's naught; Carpy bound it for me. John, there's plenty down in Sleepy Cat."

"Have they hung anybody?" snapped Tracy fiercely.

"Hanged anybody?" echoed McAlpin, turning toward Tracy on the cot. "I want t' tell y', Dave, the biter's bit,

"Oughtn't to've sneaked me out of there."

the night in Sleepy Cat. If anybody's banged there the night, it'll be Vigilantes!"

Selwood alone made no exclamation. He stood quiet, with his eyes fixed on the wounded carrier.

"What do you mean, Jim?" ventured Scott patiently.

"I mean," explained McAlpin, "the gamblers are on top! They've turned the tables. They've raffled hell-bent, drove the Vigilantes to cover up town—crowding 'em to the river close to the new railroad station—I clean John Cole is wounded, Abe Cole is wounded, Chris Kitchens is dead, Doc Carpy is wounded, and Starbuck is boss of Sleepy Cat—that's part of it, and only part of it. How many cartridges y' got, John?"

"Meaning they need 'em?"

"Meaning, the minute Starbuck took hold of the night he double-headed the Vigilantes up like a jack-knife—stole a march on theackers behind their backs, got into John Cole's store, where was all their ammunition, stole it and beat the store—that's another part of it."

"Are the barns gone?" asked Selwood harshly.

"Not yet. Lefever and the wagon boys are holdin' both the barns, but if the wind comes up, they won't save 'em. There ain't enough left of your big hall on the hill to roast a chestnut, John."

Tracy sprang from the cot. He poured a torrent of wrath on the Vigilantes and the gamblers, with incidental shots at the fate that had kidnapped him away from where he could stand in defense against any and all comers of his own.

Selwood waited, without an interjection, for the fury of the storm to abate. Old David stopped only when physically exhausted. "Now," he panted, looking malevolently at Selwood, "I hope you're satisfied. You've played your game, ain't you? Sent everything we've got on the hill up in smoke. And I can turn out, when I get up, with a pack of cards and start all over again. I ain't but sixty years old! Why don't you say something?" he demanded violently.

Selwood, turning toward his partner, rested his elbow on the rock ledge above the fireplace, took from his lips the cigar he had lighted, and spoke deliberately. "I'll have a lot to say, I'm afraid, Dave—more than I want to say to a man half sick—but it's got to be said, whether I like it or you like it or not."

"I want you to remember, Dave, first of all—the hell is, or was, mine—my mine. I took over your interest yesterday afternoon in Sleepy Cat, and turned over to you my interest in the Toler River mine. It was a trade fair to you and fair to me; you said I was giving half a dozen times what I was getting—I wasn't; but I was giving you a square deal, and you said it was a square deal, and I know it was."

Tracy tried to interrupt; Selwood patiently but firmly protested. "I gave you your say, Dave. I waited for all your cards; I want a chance to face mine now—and," he added, with a touch that Tracy had rarely heard in his voice, "I'm going to have it."

"You've tried hard to make a good gambler out of me, Dave—and the only reason you couldn't do it is because it never was in me. When my own blood kicked me out, you took the place of my father—"

"But, Dave, I wasn't out to travel the lines you laid for me. You said it tonight—I knew it yesterday. So yesterday I closed my game, Dave. I'm done. Yesterday I traded you out of the place on the hill. I gave you a half interest in the best quartz vein along Thief River. Ben Wentworth, a man as square as you are, is your partner. You'll never know need while the pay ore lasts, and there's enough in sight to keep you twenty-five years. Besides, I'm able to work while myself yet. So I don't see why you should wear yourself out, raving about the place on the hill being burnt. I owned the place, Dave; it's gone up in smoke and it's my fault, for, Dave, I'm telling you now—and telling the boys here, I smashed the big lump on the door tonight and fired the hall myself."

Selwood was perhaps better prepared for what followed than his companions, who listened stupefied. It was a moment before Tracy could frame words; then he launched at Selwood a further torrent of abuse. "Perhaps I played you a low trick, as you say, Dave; perhaps I didn't. Anyway, I meant to cut that string, and that was my way of cutting it. I've done you no wrong—if anybody is a loser, I am."

"You say you're done with me for good and all. That's pretty hard to take from you, Dave—it's hard because I owe you so much and you owe me just next to nothing. But whatever you say or whatever you feel, I can't ever honestly say I'm done with you; you're the only partner I ever had and you can't ever change my feelings toward you. You've said a few things tonight I wish you hadn't said—but most of what you've said was coming to me, and I wouldn't ask you to take a thing back."

Before Tracy could reply, Scott started to leave the room; Pardaloe would have pushed his huge bulk after him, but Selwood stepped between them and the door. McAlpin tried to shut Tracy off. Selwood silenced him. "There's nothing to be said here that you all ought not to hear," he insisted. "I want you to hear it."

"No!" burst out McAlpin, stepping hurriedly over to where Tracy lay, and talking angrily at him. "I won't hear a word of it—not another word," he shouted in profane excitement. "I'm here on life and death—away with your jarring and listen to me. If the place wasn't burnt by you, John, it'd been burnt a dozen times since. The gamblers is after you, John—after you and after this fool man—Tracy. And he wants to go back to Sleepy Cat! They'll burn him with his bed under him. They don't want no dead men in Sleepy Cat!" he shouted at Tracy. "John!" McAlpin, wild with anxious haste, whistled on Selwood. "Carpy told me to ride the desert till I'd find you. Tell him," he said, "I've driven 'em—"

They'll shoot or burn up every man-jack of us if we don't get help—and no more said. If you find John," says Carpy, "he'll understand."

McAlpin stopped, out of breath. A stillness broken by the wailing scream of distant coyotes followed his words.

In the silence Selwood stood, his eyes on McAlpin, pondering his words. Of all men in Sleepy Cat that might have sent such a message to Selwood, Carpy was the one whose call he could not ignore. Who had taken care of him when he lay sick? When money could not buy skilled nursing—when the ignorance of even well-meaning friends might have been fatal to him? Who but Carpy? Carpy was calling him. With the tables turned on the blundering Vigilantes, this never-failing friend—always giving himself unstintingly, recklessly, to the service of others, the man who never asked whether one needing help was worthy or unworthy—who never said pay, or asked for a fee—the man who was his own worst enemy—needed help. Selwood to those about him was grimly silent; but in his heart he said: "He shall have it!"

And one more question was gnawing like remorse at his heart. Where was Christie Fyler in all this deadly clash?

He shot a question at McAlpin. "Where is Fyler? Where is his daughter?"

"I don't know, John—nobody knows. Carpy's been tryin' all night to get track of 'em—if anybody knows where Christie is, it's Cliff Starbuck."

The name cut Selwood like a knife. "Starbuck!" he echoed, biting off the word, in rage. "Starbuck!" he repeated, as if to feed his wrath. "And Carpy gave me his word no harm should come to her."

McAlpin put up a hand. "Don't blame him—not for what he couldn't do, 'n' night. I'm hit myself—McAlpin held up his forearm—but nobody here seems to care a rap about that—where I got hit or how I got hit. But Carpy is a wounded man and his back's to the wall!"

Selwood seemed hardly to heed the interruption. "Starbuck!" he repeated, in lower but not less deadly tone. The fingers of the hand resting on his hip insensibly drew together. He seemed as he stood to shrink for a moment within himself. Then he started from his lethargy and, looking up, turned his eyes slowly from one to the other of his companions and back to McAlpin. "I can't pass up a call from Carpy," he said, speaking to all. "I wouldn't if I could; and I couldn't if I would. And it looks now," he added, "as if Starbuck and I have a score to settle. I hope not; but if it's got to be settled, the sooner the better."

Selwood made his arrangements with Geelson. Taking what ammunition he could scrape together, he would ride, he said, to Sleepy Cat. McAlpin was to ride with him to reconnoiter the situation when they had reached town. Pardaloe, opened and chatting under his mask of quiet, listened intently but without approval. Selwood was talking to Tracy; when he turned from the cot, Pardaloe was waiting for him.

"John," he said, taking Selwood aside and speaking in an undertone, "if you was askin' me to head for Thief River same time 'x' you're headin' for Sleepy Cat, then don't ask me."

Time Lost in Effort to Capture Happiness

For many years now I have been watching the pursuit of happiness. What a beating of bushes! What a scurrying hither I have seen! It would appear that most people regard happiness as a kind of wild rabbit which they must hunt and capture. They pursue it with horses and hounds and ships and high-powered motor cars. They stop at no expense. Yet I have not known a pursuer to capture happiness. They return to their homes disappointed. Often they have found the Angel of Happiness, after searching the world for her, waiting for them on their own door steps and she has welcomed them and for a day or two they have been filled with the light of her countenance.

"At last," they say, "we have captured her!"

Then, suddenly, she is gone.

"What we need is more money and a bigger house," says some of them and they are gone.

And this has been a too common plea: "If I had another husband or another wife—some one who really loved me and my great happiness—then I should be able to find happiness and I am sure that she would stay with me."

All these incidents of the chase I have witnessed and the tragic failures which have followed them. I have come to think that no one who pursues happiness can ever hope to catch her. And here I am in accord with good authority. Mr. Herbert Spencer has said that life consists in being in correspondence with conditions.

Beneficial Rabbit Plague

Tularemia, a recurrent disease which kills off rabbits in great numbers, has been the subject of extended investigation by government biologists. The disease is carried by jack rabbits, snowshoe rabbits, cottontails and certain species of ground squirrels.

The disease occurs more or less periodically and serves as a natural means of reducing the numbers of these rodents and affords a measure of relief from the damage they do to orchards, vineyards, farm crops and pasturage.

Swiss Religious Founder

The Memorialists take their name from that of their founder, Madame Simoes, a Swiss religious enthusiast of the sixteenth century, and they maintain, according to the Encyclopedia Britannica, "a form of Christianity which, discarding the sacerdotal idea, owns no authority outside the Bible and the enlightened conscience, trusts happiness to the believer, and lays stress on these precepts which vindicate the sanctity of human life and a man's word."

What then is happiness but a full correspondence with a good environment? How may one achieve it if his environment is forever changing?—From "Opinions of a Cheerful Yankee," by Irving Bacheller.

VELVET TRIM FOR STRAW HATS; LACE CAPE BECOMING POPULAR

OBSCURE is the idea that velvet is solely a fall and winter item. According to advance thinking velvet is an all-the-year-round material. To really sense the importance of velvet in the world of fashion, go to Paris! There at teatime hour at the Ritz observe the smart Parisiennes wearing a black velvet cape over a white georgette dress, or a brown velvet wrap with a frock of beige. And the velvet shawls with long fringe—take note of them for they are the next number on the American woman's style program. Then there are

Lace is contributing a fascinating chapter to the story of modern fashion. So alluring a subject as lace challenges the French stylists to flights of genius, which means for the modish world a revelation of beautiful apparel. At the moment it is the lace wrap, especially capes of lace, which is the

the new velvet hand bags which are considered the proper thing for summer, with gay chiton print frocks. But what has this preamble regarding velvet to do with the subject of millinery? Just this, velvet is an important factor in the realm of hats as it is in its connection with dress. There's Rose Descat, for instance, sending over a somewhat wide-of-brim navy blue pleat straw cloche with band, over-crown strap and brim facing of matching velvet. A toque from Agnes is composed of white velvet covered with white violets. With this charming bit of headgear comes a bououtstanding enthusiasm in Paris. Of lace dyed to match the frock, or of black chantilly or cre all-over lace, these capes, are an arresting summer theme. Not always is the wrap entirely of lace. Often tulle or georgette enters into partnership with lace after the manner described by the left in the picture. The advent of the lace cape in the realm of fashion opens up a new style of capes of lace to accompany the simple georgette dress, which is monotonous in color. The transparent frock being void of trimming, depending quet of the same flowers to be worn at the waist. As to the French hats in this picture, they are velvet trimmed. The first hat in the group comes from the atelier of Lucie Hamar. It is a genuine bakou straw showing a treatment of velvet which confirms the opinion that detail of workmanship is more important in the season's styling than any applied trimming which disturbs the contour of the hat. only on drapes and panels and other "tricky" fabric manipulations, contrasts the all-over patterned lace most artfully. It goes without saying that the cape should be an exact color-match to the dress, if the ensemble ideal be attained. The lace wrap in the picture is champagne color. Wide satin ribbon is rose-plaited for the collar and there is a bow and streamers at its fastening. Not alone capes, but wraps of many types are being made of lace, or of lace with fabric used for the dress. These often take the form of long loose-fitting coats. ### Forestry Plan for Farm Woods

New York Community First to Launch Program for Using Idle Lands.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.) Chautauque county, New York, is the first county in the country to embark upon a forestry program for farm woods and idle lands with a special forest officer in charge, it is announced by the forest service, United States Department of Agriculture. James E. Davis, assistant county agricultural agent, a graduate of the department of forestry at Cornell university, has been selected by the local board of supervisors to serve as county forester and to promote effective forestry throughout Chautauque county. This will include the ultimate reforestation of approximately 150,000 acres of idle land and the effective management of about 120,000 acres of woodland in farms.

Many Trees Planted. Since 1909 individuals and groups in this county have planted 684,000 trees furnished from the nurseries of the New York state conservation commission. Last year 250,000 trees were planted and the county board of supervisors started a county forest. "There are two major reasons why this county should recognize the need of forest development," says the forest service. "In the first place, within the county and immediately adjoining it are unusual markets for forest products. At Jamestown is a large furniture industry which pays good prices for high-grade hardwoods, while a short distance away at Erie, Pa., are huge pulp mills. The vineyards in the northern end of the county require 600,000 grape posts every year. This is in addition to the wood needed for grape packages. During 1924, more than 70,000 standard cords of fuel were cut in the county and indications are that the demand can be considerably increased.

In Forest or Idle. "The other reason is that nearly one-half of the farm area is either in forest or in idle land which is potentially capable of growing forests. Farmers recognize timber as a definite source of income." In order to finance the county forester, about 60 organizations are co-operating. These include the New York State College of Agriculture, the Erie railroad, the New York Central railroad, the county board of supervisors, the Jamestown Furniture Manufacturers' association and the United States Department of Agriculture.

Pullets and Cockerels Should Be Separated

Growing stock of both sexes will do better if the males are removed and kept by themselves as soon as they can be distinguished. On many farms it is the practice to allow pullets and cockerels to run together until the cockerels are large enough to be marketed as broilers. Better results will be obtained, however, if these males are removed from the pullets sooner, in fact, as soon as they can be identified. In flocks of teghorn chicks some of the males can be identified at three weeks of age, but it is better to wait until they are four or five weeks old so all of the males may be detected, as some are slower to develop. Cockerels removed at this age should not be removed from heat, but should be taken to another brooder house or compartment. By removing these males, the pullets will be given more room in which to develop and they will have a better chance, as the males will not bother them. The males, too, will have more room, which should help them to develop quicker to broiler age.

Cutting and Storage of a Crop of Soy Beans

Soy beans can be cut with a blinder if the crop stands up well, care being taken to cut only when the dew is on or on a cloudy day so as to reduce shattering. The bundles should be small, and loosely tied and the shocks should be made small or long and narrow. Threshing may be done with ordinary thrasher properly adjusted to avoid breaking the seed. This may be accomplished by using special pulleys to reduce the speed of the cylinder without changing the speed of the fan and separator. The beans must be stored with considerable care if they are not dry, as they are apt to heat and mold. After being thoroughly dried there is no danger. The best plan is to spread them out on the floor and shovel them over from time to time until dry. They may then be put in sacks and bins. Finding a market has been one of the problems growers have been confronted with in recent years.

Self-Feeder Favored for All-Mash Feeding

Many readers are using the all-mash system of feeding their chicks this year. This method offers distinct advantages, particularly to those crowded by other work. All-mash feeding might better be called the self-feeder method. The biggest virtue of the all-mash method is that it is adaptable to the use of self-feeders, thus reducing the time and trips required to look after the chicks. Those who are using the all-mash plan of raising their chicks certainly are overlooking the largest advantage unless they use self-feeders.

Spray Material for Controlling Insects

Nearly All of Pests Found in Gardens Are Chewers.

The kind of spray material to use for controlling insects in the vegetable garden depends upon whether the insects obtain their food by chewing or by sucking, says the New Jersey State College of Agriculture at New Brunswick.

Nearly all of the insects attacking vegetables, however, are chewers. The chief exception is the plant louse, which procures its nourishment by drilling into the plant with its beak. It takes constant vigilance and daily examinations of the plants to keep insects from destroying the vegetable garden.

Beetles, grasshoppers and the immature stages of certain insects indiscriminately called "worms," feed on the stems, leaves, and fruit of vegetables and kill or greatly weaken the plants. These chewing pests must be combated with a stomach poison sprayed on the part of the plant where the insect is most likely to feed. Use arsenate of lead if you want a poison that is not likely to burn the foliage. The following formula is easy to mix and effective in its results. Arsenate of lead, one tablespoonful of paste or half tablespoonful of powder; water, one gallon. Mix the arsenate of lead thoroughly with a small quantity of water, then add the rest of the gallon. The solution should be stirred occasionally during the spraying.

Plant lice are not only sucking insects, but prefer to work under cover, so when searching for them, look on the under sides of the leaves. A contact spray which entirely covers them is necessary for effective control. Either nicotine sulphate, alone or in a soap solution, or pyrethrum is the best material for this purpose. A strong soap solution alone such as that remaining from a washing may also be used successfully.

Standard Grades Needed in Selling Live Stock

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.) Standard market classes and grades have become a prime necessity in connection with successful marketing of live stock, says the bureau of agricultural economics, United States Department of Agriculture.

Live meat animals show such wide variations in all essential respects that it is impossible to determine accurately the value of a given lot unless the animals making up the group are sorted in such a way as to present a high degree of uniformity. Before such sorting can be satisfactorily accomplished it is necessary to set up definite fixed standards for the various groups. The department has been studying this problem of grade standards for many years, and has worked out standards which it is believed will serve the purposes of the live stock industry. The standards have been used in the conduct of the department's live stock market news service for the past eight years. They have worked successfully in that connection and have met with virtually universal approval on the part of the live stock trade. A complete explanation of the basis of the department's grade standards and detailed descriptions of the various classes and grades of slaughter, stocker and feeder cattle have been published in Department Bulletin No. 1404-D, "Market Classes and Grades of Cattle." Copies of the bulletin may be obtained, as long as the supply lasts, upon request to the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Hens Often Injured by Toenails of Male Bird

Hens are often injured by the long toenails of the male birds ripping open the back. When this happens, cleanse the wound, apply a healing ointment, and cover with a pad of antiseptic gauze fastened down with adhesive tape. It is economy to have a large spool of the adhesive tape in the medicine closet. It tears as easily as muslin and is about as useful. Of course the feathers about a wound should always be pulled. If it is necessary to sew a wound, use surgeons' needles and white silk floss. The nails of the offending cock or turkey gobbler should be manicured with a file. A foot injury for which the gauze pad and adhesive tape are useful is bumble foot—caused by a bruise to the sole of the foot from flying down on a hard surface. For this, if there is pus in the bruise, make two crisscross cuts like an X. Press out the pus gently, and apply salve, a pad and the adhesive.

Contaminated Soil

The soil where chicks are ranging is not as easily contaminated if it contains a thick mat of green clover sod when the chicks are first turned out of the brooder houses. A dense grassy growth of that type is not easily killed out by the scratching and feeding of the chicks. It furnishes plenty of green feed and brings some insect life and it does not become caked with fertilizer as quickly as bare ground, or ground covered with a very sparse growth of vegetation.

Place for the Chicks

We do not know of a better place for growing chicks than out in the growing corn fields. Their colony houses can be placed along the cornfield and if a good clover or alfalfa patch happens to be alongside the cornfield also, so much the better. They would have both sunshine and shade, grass and raw dirt in which to play, hunt bugs, fresh green vegetables, etc. All they would need in addition would be a hopper of good growing mash.

POULTRY FACTS

SAVE BEST MALES FOR NEXT SEASON

When the hatching season is over, remove the male birds from the flock but take good care of them if they are to be used next season. "Infertile eggs are no better as food than fertile eggs but the infertile eggs keep better in hot weather," says Dr. B. F. Kaupp, head of the poultry department at the North Carolina State college. "When a fertile egg is subjected to high summer heat, it will begin to develop a young chick. If this development goes on long enough and then the egg is placed in lower temperatures, the germ dies and a blood ring is left. This ring of blood settles at the lowest point of the arch of membranes which cover a part of the yolk."

Doctor Kaupp states that just as many eggs will be laid when the males are removed from the flock and so it is a good practice to take away the males from the hens as soon as the breeding season is over. Those birds not wanted for breeding another year may be placed in a lot where they may be fattened for the pot or for market. Those needed next year should be placed in a house with ample run where they may forage for bugs and worms and green feed. To shut up a desirable breeding bird in a small, dry lot with poor housing facilities, is to reduce his health and vigor and make him worthless for the next season.

Then, too, Doctor Kaupp advises selecting out the best of the early hatched young cockerels and keeping them for breeding purposes. Those that are square and blocky and crow early are most desirable. Early development means the transmission of high qualities of egg production and health. Such selected males should get plenty of green feed, mash in which there is animal feed and regular grain feed. Grain alone is not sufficient if best results are wanted.

Maternal Instinct Is Strong in Turkey Hen

The maternal instinct is especially strong in the turkey hen. If she is brooding her eggs near another turkey's nest, she will leave her own nest at the first chirp of poults. A battle royal will ensue between the two turkey hens, which makes the hen with the unhatched poults dissatisfied even when she is confined to the nest. We must reckon with nature. Put out nests for the turkey hens where they will find them; separate them from sight and sound of one another. Plan for her to walk in on the nest rather than to jump down. Put boards under the barrels or boxes provided for turkey nests to keep them off the ground when it rains. When the poults are hatched, if the hen is not cooped, make a triangular yard of twelve-inch boards and confine them in that till they can jump over. The hen will not leave them; they can be put on fresh ground every day by moving the pen, and the turkey mother can be trusted to protect her young.

Both Johns Honored

When Mr. and Mrs. James Calamusi of Bristol, Conn., welcomed their first baby, the father decided that the child should be named John, after the father's older brother, who had been very kind to the family. In two years another boy arrived and Mrs. Calamusi said it was her turn. She, too, had a brother John, who had been a boon to her family. So the second boy also was named John.

Noiseless Screen Doors

The constant banging of a screen door in summer is unpleasant, and it is very hard on the door. It can be prevented by fastening one-inch pieces of felt or very thin pieces of cork on the part of the door-frame where the door strikes. They may be nailed on, but are best glued, and when glued will remain in place a long time. There should be one piece near the bottom. This applies also to any other door and to cupboard or bookcase doors.

Had Learned Wisdom

A father was called on the carpet because he never gave his children written excuses when they were absent from school. "I won't write notes to no school teacher; that's how I got stomach trouble," said the man, to strengthen his position. The school authorities looked puzzled. "I married her afterward," he continued.

HOW MRS. WEAVER WAS HELPED

By Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

As Mrs. Weaver herself says, "I was never very strong." This is a mild statement describing her condition, for, according to her letters, she was subjected to no small amount of ill health. Fortunately, her sister was familiar with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and begged Mrs. Weaver to try it. After three or four weeks," writes Mrs. Weaver, "I felt great difference in myself. I would go to bed and sleep sound, and although I could not do very much work, I seemed stronger. I kept on taking it and now I am well and strong, do my work and take care of three children. I sure do tell my friends about your wonderful medicine, and I will answer any letters from women asking about the Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. LAWRENCE WEAVER, East Smithfield St., Mt. Pleasant, Pa.

If you know that thousands of women suffering from troubles similar to those you are enduring had improved their health by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, wouldn't you think it was worth a trial? In some families, the fourth generation is learning the merit of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

EDITORIAL COLUMN

Leaders Must Assume Responsibility

The present high taxes in most states and because the actual financial plight of the treasuries of most of them, is said to exist because "the people demand all things done by the government."

Is this a fact, or do the constantly increasing number of boards, commissions, functions, and officials that are forced upon the taxpayers by legislatures and the politicians who want jobs for their friends, pile up the debt burden slowly but surely? The average politician recognizes no obligation to economize along the line of Pres. Coolidge's theory of government in federal affairs.

When a public deficit is created, it is wisely referred to as "the grave financial dilemma of the state." The situation is at once seized upon as an excuse for proposing new laws to raise more taxes and incidentally, create more jobs which add to the expense of the government. Budget-makers create deficits and legislatures appropriate money which is not in the treasury to spend.

Is there no moral responsibility in public office? Do constitution limitations on amount of taxes that can be levied and collected have any meaning to the lawmakers who create illegal deficits? Is there no obligation to so manage public affairs that the burdens of the taxpayer may be reduced?

Cartoonists and would-be wits have poked fun at Pres. Coolidge's New England thrift, but he has worked with Congress to constantly reduce taxes and reduce deficits by paring appropriations, and has toiled with his budget-making department to maintain a surplus in the national treasury and constantly reduce taxes. State officials could employ a little of his thrift to the great benefit of local taxpayers.

Just as it takes brains to have campaign tactics. Both of the private businesses show a profit, so does it take to operate a state on a solvent basis without constant and increasing assessments on the taxpayers.

Public officials blaming "the people" for the taxation dilemma, is on a par with the officers of an army blaming the soldiers for an ill-advised campaign tactics. Both the people and the soldiers follow their leaders.

Democrats Say South Will Vote for Any Old Candidate

The South is now a victim of political expediency. In the general elections, it votes the Democratic ticket regardless of beliefs or who is on the same, as long as they are Democrats.

And it is because the national democratic leaders recognize this fact that the South fares no better in the selection of national candidates.

Nobody would expect the Republican leaders to go South for a candidate, because the Republican strength, as expressed by the poll vote, is negligible there.

The Democratic leaders feel the same way about it. "Why" they ask themselves, "should we go to Georgia or Mississippi or Alabama for a Democratic candidate for President or Vice-President?" These states under their laws and customs will vote for any set of candidates that we nominate, as long as they are

Saving Money For Taxpayers

Congress has created a committee to study and report on what curtailment can be properly made without loss of efficiency in the printing of documents, in the maintenance of certain obsolete offices and the continuance on the congressional payrolls of certain unnecessary employees and officials.

There is no doubt, but this committee will be able to make a report, which, if adopted, will make for a very accessible saving in the expense of congressional maintenance.

The interesting feature of this demonstration is that congressional action has been inspired by the general administration policy of economy. Notwithstanding retrenchments made by Gen. Lord, director of the budget, there is still opportunity for further retrenchments. — St. Louis Times

Three Divergent Schemes for Naval Limitation Offered at Geneva.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

THREE great powers, in conference at Geneva, through their representatives, for the purpose of devising further limitation of naval armament, are considering three widely divergent plans, and if they get together on any scheme it will be only by making big concessions and after long debate. The initial positions of the three powers may be succinctly stated thus:

United States Extension of the 5-5-3 ratio to all warships, with definite tonnage limits for cruisers, destroyers and submarines.

Great Britain Further limitation of battleships, reduction in size and armament of both capital ships and cruisers and extension of the 5-5-3 ratio to 10,000-ton cruisers, but no mention of application to auxiliaries.

Japan A naval holiday on the basis of the status quo, and a ban on battleship construction.

Ambassador Hugh Gibson opened the conference and presided as chairman because it was called by President Coolidge. In submitting the American plan he suggested the following allocation of tonnage:

Cruisers—United States and Great Britain, 300,000 tons; Japan, 150,000 tons.

Destroyers—United States and Great Britain, 250,000 tons; Japan, 150,000 tons.

Submarines—United States and Great Britain, 60,000 tons; Japan, 54,000 tons.

In polite terms, Mr. Gibson hinted that if an agreement among the powers for naval limitation was not reached, the United States was prepared to resort to an extensive building program.

According to American experts, adoption of the British plan would enable England in time of war to swamp the American fighting ships through utilization of her mercantile marine as auxiliary cruisers; her big passenger liners would be capable of carrying airplanes and transporting troops as well as mounting 6-inch guns. In the Japanese proposal to adopt the status quo the Americans found a joker in the fact that Japan possesses considerable more cruisers and destroyers in commission or capable of utilization than the United States and the legalization of this strength would place Japan just below Great Britain and above America for these categories.

Admiral Sir Frederick Field, British delegate, explained the British point of view. He declared Great Britain requires more light cruiser and destroyer tonnage than any other power because England relies on her food supply from overseas and also for marketing the dominions' products and safeguarding the long routes of communications.

All this was set forth at length when the proposals were turned over to a committee of expert technicians who were instructed to try to find a common ground for discussion. The British claim to greater tonnage of light craft was supported by elaborate charts showing how England's trade routes and lines of communication crisscross every body of navigable water on the globe.

Naval experts in Washington openly attacked both the British and Japanese plans, and their view was shared by Congressman Britton of Illinois, ranking member of the house committee on naval affairs. Mr. Britton predicted that failure of the Geneva conference will result in increased naval building by the United States but this view is not shared by Senator Borah, chairman of the senate foreign relations committee. Mr. Borah feels there is little likelihood of the conference achieving real results, but that even if it does fail, this government will not enter upon a large building program.

POLAND'S firm and dignified stand against the demands of Russia in connection with the murder of the Russian minister in Warsaw seems to have had good results, for it is now reported that the two countries are in a fair way to negotiate a treaty of amity. But the Soviet government's savage reprisal in the way of wholesale executions of counter-revolutionists and others accused of being spies in the pay of foreign governments has aroused widespread indignation. An instance of this is the resolution adopted by a joint meeting of the executive committee of the British Labor party and of the general council of the British Trades Union congress.

"While recognizing the Soviet government's indignation at the murder of M. Volkef," the resolution said, "we are obliged to protest against the execution of persons innocent thereof as a reprisal. We are of the opinion that meeting murder by murder is a degradation of the standards of civilized life and can produce nothing but harm to Soviet Russia."

In this connection it is interesting to read that Pope Pius XI in an allocution before a secret consistory denounced bolshevism as an insidious, subversive doctrine that is permeating the ignorant classes throughout the world. Basing his remarks on knowledge gained by him through evidence gathered by his diplomatic outpost, the pope charged bolshevism with being chiefly responsible not only for the troubles in China but also in Mexico.

MARSHAL CHIANG TSO-LIN is now the absolute dictator of northern China—though he may not enjoy that pre-eminence very long. In a twenty-word speech in Peking he announced that he had assumed the office of generalissimo in order to work for the regeneration and unification of the country. The diplomatic body was absent from the brief ceremony and so avoided official recognition of Chang's new status. In a circular telegram to the provinces the marshal pledged himself to fight against communism while breath remains in his body. He added that any seeking to undermine the nation's foundations or acting in collusion with foreigners for a like object, will be regarded as public enemies deserving death.

There are indications that the Hankow and Nanking nationalist factions will soon get together, at least for the purpose of getting possession of Peking and Shantung provinces. The Shanghai bankers are reported to have raised two-thirds of a $30,000,000 loan to assist General Chiang in his drive northward.

FAILURE to reconcile the National peasant and Liberal parties in Rumania resulted in the downfall of Premier Babu Stirbey, favorite of Queen Marie, who only recently was elevated to that position. He handed in his resignation and the former premier, Ioan Bratianu, was called on to form a new cabinet pending elections. The National peasants not only refused to co-operate with the Liberals but announced that they are publishing a manifesto making scandalous revelations against the government party.

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE, who caught his first mess of rainbow trout by using worms as bait, has heard the sorrowful protests of the Frank Walton league members and now is landing the fish with the regulation equipment of fly and casting rod. And Mrs. Coolidge has proved herself no mean angler. The Chief Executive has been receiving various groups of citizens, including the members of the National Editorial association and their wives, and on Tuesday he motored to Rapid City and reviewed the South Dakota National Guard at its camp near there. He took back to the summer White House as an over-night guest former Gov. H. H. McKelvie of Nebraska, who is the editor of a farm paper. Mr. Coolidge accepted an invitation to attend the Belle Fourche roundup on July 4, which is his birthday, and promised to go to Ardmore on July 16 for a big gathering of farmers from South Dakota, Nebraska, Colorado and Wyoming. Governor General Wood of the Philippines was the President's next important individual caller of the week, having been invited to report on conditions in the islands. Other visitors included several congressmen.

REPRESENTATIVE W. R. GREEN of Iowa, chairman of the house ways and means committee, went to Washington for a conference with Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, and told the correspondents that there was small hope of a substantial tax reduction in 1928. Present indications, according to Mr. Green, are that, if there is any surplus in the national treasury at the end of the fiscal year, it will not be large enough to permit such reductions as were made in the last revenue bill, which authorized cuts aggregating $400,000,000.

In this view Mr. Green takes sharp issue with other Republican leaders, notably Senators Edge of New Jersey and Reed of Pennsylvania, who have predicted a surplus exceeding $300,000,000, and probably running as high as $400,000,000.

BECAUSE of his refusal to return to the United States and testify in the trial of Albert B. Fall and Harry F. Sinclair in the Teapot Dome oil lease fraud case, the Department of State has put Harry M. Blackmer much in the position of a "man without a country." The former chairman of the Midwest Refining company has been deprived of his passport by order of the department and so is without the protection of the government on his travels. While his passport has been revoked he has one chance to recover it, namely, to apply for a passport to return to the United States. But as Blackmer evaded service of a subpoena for a long time and finally actually refused service, officials here do not believe he will seek a chance to come home, knowing that this would mean facing another subpoena on landing, or arrest for contempt of court, or confiscation of his American property under the drastic Walsh law, recently enacted by congress to meet this very case.

COMMANDER BYRD and his three fellow aviators waited all week for weather conditions favorable to the start of their flight to France in the Fokker monoplane America. Heavy fogs and fluctuating winds prevailed over the north Atlantic, and Byrd saw no object in starting as he was not planning a record-breaking flight or contemplating any sensational performance.

Colonel Lindbergh had a few days to devote to his own affairs, and then was summoned to Washington to confer with officials of the Army, Navy and Commerce departments. He flew there from St. Louis in an army plane, making one stop, at Dayton, Ohio. A committee of St. Louis business men has offered Lindbergh the presidency of a projected airplane manufacturing company with large capital.

CITIZENS of Indianapolis grew tired of the doings of the city hall ring there and, being given the opportunity at a special election, they smashed it by voting, five to one, in favor of abolishing the council and mayoralty system and substituting the city manager form of government. In March the anti-manager forces persuaded the legislature to amend the law so that the change cannot be made before January 1, 1930. If this legislative action is held unconstitutional the city manager will take office next New Year's day.

UNQUALIFIED approval of the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence waterway project is given by the joint New England-St. Lawrence waterway committee of business men, financiers, economists, and engineers in Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, Vermont, Maine, and Connecticut.

After months of study this committee has concluded that the all-American waterway route through New York, proposed as an alternative to the St. Lawrence route, is impractical from a financial and engineering standpoint, and in a formal report the Washington government to initiate negotiations with the Canadian government upon a treaty which will speed completion of the St. Lawrence project.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

MARY GRAHAM BONNER

FAIRIES' GLOVES

Foxgloves, you know, are the fairies' flowers—or rather they are the fairies' gloves.

Years and years ago there was a most wonderful big reception given in Fairyland.

You know, a reception is like a big tea-party such as mother and all the grown-up ladies go to so often.

Well, they have these in Fairyland, too.

The day of the reception, which, by the way, was being given by King Toadstool the Red, and Queen Toadstool the Yellow, at last arrived.

The red toadstools you see in the woods belong to the royal family of toadstools, and very distinguished they are, too.

The yellow ones are the queen's favorite color, so all her ladies-in-waiting are the small yellow toadstools you see—the bright, bright yellow ones.

Well, on this fine day, when they were all getting ready for the reception, one of the fairies said:

"Oh, where are our gloves?"

The Queen of the Fairies never had a moment to think for the answer.

As quickly as you can jump up when you find your foot has gone to sleep, she replied:

"The folks' gloves are always for us to use, of course."

"And you are quite right, 'little fairy,' at this reception we must all wear gloves."

These folks' gloves are what you know now as foxgloves, the flowers you find in the woods.

They are called the gloves of the "little folks" or fairies.

The fairies wore the lovely wood gloves to the reception and looked very fine indeed.

They liked them so much that they wore them afterwards for lots of their parties, and there were just ever and ever so many of them which had to grow as quickly as possible for the fairies—for there must always be plenty of everything for fairies.

One day some little boys and girls picked the foxgloves or fairies' gloves and planted them in their gardens.

The foxgloves grew very strong and fine in the gardens of sunshine and good care, but they lost their lovely, graceful looks, their fairy looks, for they said they would be loyal to the fairies, and in the gardens they would just look strong, but not nearly so pretty.

Their right homes, they said, were in the woods!

And it is there that they are happiest, for their greatest delight is being used by the lovely fairies.

So, if you think of bringing them from the woods and transplanting them in your gardens, remember that they will grow and be strong but they wish you would have other flowers in your gardens, for their real home is in the woods.

And it is there that they are happiest, for their greatest delight is being used by the lovely fairies.

So, if you think of bringing them from the woods and transplanting them in your gardens, remember that they will grow and be strong but they wish you would have other flowers in your gardens, for their real home is in the woods.

A BATH TUB that tests automobiles

S-P-L-A-S-H through the bath tub goes the General Motors car. Out onto the slippery road it dashes. On go the brakes!

What is the reason for such torture of an innocent automobile?

The answer is that the engineers at the General Motors Proving Ground take nothing for granted. They want to know what happens when a car ploughs through water. They insist too on measuring, with special machines which they have built, just how quickly the car can be stopped and just how much pressure of the foot is required to stop it.

Altogether General Motors has 136 different tests by which cars are proved as they never have been proved before; nothing is left in doubt. All of which means that you are buying doubly assured safety, reliability and comfort when you choose a General Motors car.

THIS what we finish—not what we begin,
By which we rise;
To try is good, but not enough where-by
To gain the prize.
We win by what we do—not by the thing
We meant to do;
The where we stand—not where we ought to be,
That makes our view.
For power is given every one to be
The man he would;
A mere intent will count for naught,
though it
Be fine and good;
But effort must be followed up by work
Accomplished, done;
For only by completed tasks is life's
Great victory won.

WHEN I WAS TWENTY-ONE

BY JOSEPH KAYE

At 21—Ex-Senator Sherman Was a Detective Force Unto Himself.

AT THE age of twenty-one I was a college student. Not long after I began practicing as a country lawyer in Illinois. I remember I had no detective force to help me in my cases, I had to be my own witness. I had to go after my own witnesses. I had to penetrate the mask of delinquent character in the interest of public morals by examining, divining, analyzing human motive. In this way, the habit of tracing the personal elements of private ambition, of revenge or power in the minds of others became a legal asset.—Lawrence X. Sherman.

TODAY—Mr. Sherman has retired from official politics and has resumed his law practice. He has had a distinguished political career. At the age of twenty-eight he was made county judge and some years later elected to the Illinois house of representatives, becoming speaker of that body. The lieutenant governorship followed and then he was elected to the United States senate.

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

By F. A. WALKER

LAYING A FOUNDATION

IF YOU are a close observer and given to winnowing the golden grain from the sheaves that are falling all about you, you are laying a solid foundation on which to build your structure of success.

You have noticed how carefully masons select stones which are to bear the weight of skyscrapers, with what precision these stones are placed side by side, kept level and plumb, and imbedded in cement.

Every layer, mark you, must be level and plumb. And mark again that no building can be stronger than the base upon which it rests.

What is true of stone structure is likewise true of mental and moral formation.

If the groundwork is weak, the fundamentals slatternly, the corniced and capiteled summit is in danger of falling.

The reason why so many men and women fail in their efforts to reach the apex of their dreams is because they failed to construct substantial supports in early life.

There has been much newspaper discussion ament the value of college education, and whether it really fits young men and women for the practical duties in professional and industrial pursuits. In a series of questions, Edison some time ago tested numbers of university graduates. The result, it is alleged, was not satisfactory.

Schools and colleges should not be censured for these shortcomings, but rather the students themselves, who had overlooked the vital importance of laying in their early days a solid foundation on which to build.

Whatever you attempt, begin at the base and build solidly.

Test the strength of this base at every stage of your progress.

Don't be afraid of hard work and long hours.

In music you must first master the elementary principles, embodied in the active; in surgery you must acquaint yourself with the location of the 263 bones in the human body. And so in all branches of art, science and industry, you must dig deeply and erect an enduring foundation.

Work, work, work and have faith. Dig through the difficulties and if you falter not in your endeavors your building will survive the storms and stand unshaken while the world tumbles all around you.

EVERYDAY GOOD THINGS

PEAS are one of our valuable protein foods and when served will take the place of meat.

Green Pea Soup.

Rub a can of green peas through a sieve; a pint will be sufficient for an ordinary family. Season to taste with salt and pepper and add a tablespoonful of scraped onion, or cook a small onion minced in a little fat; add to this one tablespoonful of flour and a pint of stock or water; use the stock on the peas with water. Cook five minutes, add the puree of peas, heat all together and serve with croutons or fingers of toasted bread.

Sour Cream Slaw.

Shred cabbage very fine, plunge into cold water until crisp, drain and cover with a cupful of thick sour cream heated and added to two well-beaten eggs. Add two tablespoonfuls of vinegar, two tablespoonfuls of butter, a teaspoonful of salt and a few dashes of cayenne. Cover the drained cabbage with the hot sauce and serve.

Cabbage Salad.

Shred very fine one small firm head of cabbage, add one-half cupful of chopped almonds which have been blanched and four or five ripe bananas finely cut; mix with one cupful of sour cream; if cream is not very sour add a dash of vinegar. Serve with crackers and cheese.

Different Dried Beef.

Take dried beef, cut into strips with scissors and fry in a tablespoonful of butter. Place on a hot platter and surround with halved and quartered bananas also fried, long enough to become thoroughly hot.

Unusual Dessert.

Take a pint can of condensed milk and put into a deep dish, cover with boiling water and keep boiling for two and one-half hours. Remove, cool and slip out the contents by cutting the can carefully. Slice and serve well chilled with a cherry on top. Several cans may be cooked at once and opened when needed. This will serve four to six persons and has a flavor much like maple.

Sour Cream Icing.

Take two-thirds of a cupful of sour cream, add two cupfuls of granulated sugar, and boil gently until it threads. Cool until tepid, add a teaspoonful of orange extract and beat until creamy. Spread on the cake, or use as filling.

Sunstorms

How can one, who is bewildered and appalled by the fury of our planet's cyclones and volcanic eruptions, form a conception of the terrible energy of natural operations on the sun? Newcomb suggested that if we call the solar chromosphere an ocean of fire we must remember that it is an ocean infinitely hotter than the fiercest furnace and as deep as the Atlantic is broad. If we call its movements hurricanes we must remember that our hurricanes blow only about 100 miles an hour, while those of the chromosphere blow as far in a single second.

There are such hurricanes as, coming down from the North, would, in 30 seconds after they had crossed the St. Lawrence river, be in the gulf of Mexico, carrying with them the whole surface of the continent in a mass not simply of rain, but of glowing vapor.

Cave Without Bottom in Colorado Hills

In the Sangre de Cristo range in Colorado is Marble cave, an unexplored and bottomless pit.

Scientists are of the belief that it is the opening to a volcano that was active many millions of years ago. In the same range is the Medano river, known as the "disappearing river," for it is a stream in one part of the forest and then it disappears to reappear many miles away.

The Sangre de Cristos are remarkable for many other freaks. Twenty miles south of Westcliffe is a vast red sandstone bed where fossils are found of early sea life, indicative of that far period when this great inland range of mountains was the bottom of the sea. This bed has been of especial interest to geologists and scientists, and students interested in the formation of the world.

The range is the longest, straightest and highest in the United States and the most spectacularly colored, with 100 peaks from whose summit the snow never leaves.

Professor Forgot All About Dinner Party

The absent-minded professor who, starting to dress for a formal dinner, thought he was getting ready for bed and was found there by his wife, has a rival for wool-gathering honors in a certain English dean. This dean had invited some friends to dine at his house, and on their arrival a little ahead of time he suggested that in the interval of waiting they might like to walk through the grounds.

After spending a quarter of an hour admiring the flowers, shrubs and greenhouses, they came suddenly upon a door in the wall. "Ah," said the dean to his astonished guests, "this will be a much nearer way home than going back to the front," and all unconscious of his invitation he opened the door and bowed them out.—Boston Transcript.

Unappreciative Relative

"My nephew, Oliver Tolliver, wrote me the other day that he intended to commit suicide, because the world lacked appreciation and didn't care for his poetry," stated Farmer Fumblegate. "At noon yesterday he would be dead and gone. I was busy when the letter came and stuffed it into my pocket and forgot it for a time. Just now, since I have read it, I have just telegraphed him, 'Much obliged!' and let it go at that. He already owes me all I ever want him to, and if he wasn't dead by the time my answer got to him he probably died right away after from what they call in medical schay-grin. Anyhow, I hope so."—Kansas City Star.

PERSONALS

Ranger and Mrs. Lee Beall, accompanied by their little son, were visitors here the first part of the week from Capitan.

Mrs. Chloe Fisher of the Fisher Lumber Company of Capitan, was a Carrizozo visitor here Wednesday, returning home in the afternoon.

County Clerk Lotah Miller, County School Supt. Mary Fritz, Mrs. Zoe Glassmire and Miss Frances Fritz, spent the 4th at the Carlsbad Cavern. They had a pleasant trip and greatly enjoyed the wonders of the great cave.

A. C. Koeppe of Sagerton, Texas, was here last week from his summer home on Little Creek in the White Mountains. Mr. Koeppe is a merchant of Sagerton, but in recent years, the idea of having a summer home where he could pass the heated season with his family lured him to our mountain scenery and he now has a beautiful home hid far away from the din, roar and dust of city life, where he spends the summer season, returning to his business affairs in Texas as each season ended. Mr. Koeppe was called home last week on account of business, but will return shortly.

Mr. and Mrs. L. A. McCall and family and M. B. Foreman spent last Sunday and Monday as guests of the T. E. Kelley and W. W. Stadman families at Eagle Creek.

Mrs. A. L. Burke left Wednesday evening for Lawrence, Kansas, where, after visiting her youngest daughter, Rosalind, who is attending the Kansas University; Miss Burke having taught school in Kansas City for the past two terms. Mrs. Burke will then go on to Kansas City to visit Dr. and Mrs. R. T. Lucas for about two weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. C. N. Eaton, daughter, Uraula, son, Merle and baby daughter, Chlora, arrived here Monday from Waburg, Wash., for a visit with the B. L. Stimmel family. Mr. Eaton, who has extensive farming interests, returned to Waburg after a few days stay, to supervise the harvesting and will return for his family after that period is over. Mrs. Eaton is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stimmel. To further increase the pleasure of the home folks, Charles Stimmel came in Wednesday morning from attending the furniture dealers' convention, but left yesterday morning for his home in Los Angeles.

Mrs. Alma Coe and nephew Francis Blivens of Glencoe were visitors at this place Tuesday, returning home in the afternoon.

Miss Geneva Benfeldt, sister of Mrs. J. M. Beck, came in from Holyoke, Colo., Monday and will visit for a week or ten days with her sister's family.

Mrs. J. E. Farley has returned home from a visit to her mother, Mrs. Sarah Lindberg at Denver, where she spent about three weeks.

The R. E. P. Warden and Bryan Hightower families spent the 4th at the Rodeo at Tularosa, returning to their ranches Tuesday.

The Board of County Commissioners met Tuesday and adjourned until Monday, July 11.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Thornton of Oscura were up from their farm and ranch home yesterday. Charley said, "Yes, thank you, we've had some nice rains of late, but need all we have."

WHAT PRICE

HEALTH

VALUE of health may not be reckoned in dollars and cents. Two thousand years ago there was perhaps some excuse for the gastronome, but today there is none. The way to health lies in a balanced diet. Hippocrates, the father of medicine, figured along the same lines back 450 B. C. He expressed the belief that the science of medicine had its beginning in the efforts of men and women to find better and smoother diets.

Diet in the home today is becoming a matter of premier consideration. Women are taking cognizance of those important food elements known as vitamins. They have learned, also, the benefit to the human body of such minerals as iron, calcium and phosphorus.

This knowledge has resulted in the housewife planning her menus with an eye open to dietary values, which is the big reason why milk has assumed such a large place in the menu of the American family. Milk contains every structural element for body building. It is an almost perfect food. Despite the best refrigeration facilities, milk will keep sweet only a short time. Millions of American housewives have solved this big problem by using evaporated milk, which is simply fresh cow's milk sterilized in cans to achieve keeping qualities, and with sixty per cent of the water removed.

Evaporated milk is not the same as condensed milk, although many persons confuse the two. The condensed product is a combination of milk and sugar cane in a two-fifth milk sugar and three-fifth milk proportion. Evaporated milk has nothing but water taken from it and nothing at all added. Sugar is the preservative used in manufacturing the condensed product, while heat only is the preservative for evaporated milk. For this reason the evaporated product may be used in any way in which market milk is used.

Nourishing Drink for Children

BABIES and children, the same as adults, grow weary of being fed the same food in the same way each day. It is true that most children take naturally to milk, but that does not mean that they must be fed it ad nauseam. On the contrary, that is the very thing to be avoided.

Pediatricians advise consumption by children of a quart of milk a day in one form or another. This does not mean whole milk, but whole milk, for the skimmed product is lacking both in butter fat and the essential food element known as vitamin A, which is found in butter fat. Many mothers do not appreciate that removal of cream from the top of a bottle of milk results in skim milk.

In evaporated milk, a product recommended by many leading doctors for the use of infants and children and which is simply pure cow's milk sterilized in cans and with sixty per cent of the water removed, there is no cream line. The milk in the top of a can is the same as it is in the bottom of the container. This results from a process called homogenization, in which the fat globules in the milk are broken up into such microscopic bits that they remain in homogeneous suspension. Every drop of homogenized milk has a buttery taste because it contains butter fat. For this reason, in evaporated milk, there is none of the fat taste one finds in drinking from the bottom of a bottle of market milk.

In order to avoid feeding the baby or child plain milk three or four times a day, many authorities recommend the use of a mixture of fruit juice and milk, a highly palatable and refreshing drink.

Following is a recipe worked out by experts for an orange-milk drink: Mix in a fruit jar 1/2 of a cupful of orange juice, 1/4 of a cupful of evaporated milk, three teaspoonfuls of sugar, 1/2 teaspoonful of lemon juice and a few grains of salt. Shake well before serving.

W. D. Armstrong and F. C. Jackson were here from Holywood yesterday. They said that rain had fallen in that locality, but none is highly probable.

Card of Thanks

As it will be impossible for us to meet and individually thank each of the many friends who with act of kindness, beautiful floral offerings, and words of sympathy, contributed to our comfort and consolation in our recent bereavement in the loss of our father, F. E. Mudge, we take this means of collectively thanking all whose kindness will ever be cherished in our memories.

Respectfully,
Mrs. C. A. Flower

Ward-Corn

Among the 4th of July attendants at the Tularosa Rodeo were Rolla Ward of White Oaks and Miss Dollie Corn of Carrizozo. They mingled with their friends, drank the Rodeo dust, the same as other visitors, but when the time came to return home, they gave their friends the slip, went to Alamogordo, and quietly entering the parsonage, were united in marriage, springing a complete surprise on everybody here.

The young couple are both Lincoln County products. The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sherwood Corn, who have long been residents of this place and her friends and admirers are many. She was one of the 1927 graduates of Carrizozo High School. The groom is from our neighboring town of White Oaks and is in the employ of the Lincoln Light & Power Co., at the power plant north of town.

They arrived here Tuesday morning and in the afternoon, went to White Oaks, where they will make their future home. The many friends of the newlyweds are offering their congratulations and best wishes for future welfare and happiness.

Hal Young and Ed Comrey were business visitors in Carrizozo for several days this week from their ranches at Nogal. Ed is contemplating a trip to see the California Bathing Beauties pageants.

Fatsy Ruth Miller is "Broken Hearts in Hollywood" Saturday.

GENUINE NAVAJO INDIAN RUGS

AN UNUSUAL GIFT WHICH WILL LAST A LIFETIME

The Rugs of the Navajo Indians are unlike any other rugs ever produced, as art of weaving has been brought to a perfection with this tribe of the Southwest. The designs are of their own figures and symbols, and are seen nowhere else. These Rugs are of a texture and quality that will outlast Oriental Rugs. The wool used is sheared from live sheep, which insures strength and firmness. They will wear a lifetime and become heir looms. The time is not far distant when genuine Navajo Rugs will no longer be woven, as the old Squaws who do this work are getting fewer, and the present generation does not take up the work. For this reason, the rugs now on the market are much sought after by lovers of Indian Relics.

HOWE ABOUT—

By ED HOWE

(Copyright by The Bell Syndicate, Inc.)

I know a woman who is a lady in everything save a card game. It is foolish to spoil a nice woman for a foolish game of cards, so I shall play no more with her, and make up.

It is easy to be good to babies a year or two old, they are so innocent. . . . But babies seventy or eighty years old are a great trial, they are so sophisticated and insolent.

Men no more than half believe in the big ideas; and half the time the big ideas are stolen.

Everyone of fair intelligence knows the importance of modesty. Bragging will not do, if one hopes to get along; people themselves are braggers, and quickly condemn the habit in others.

I have often observed the studied attempts of people to be modest, and that it comes hard with them; they want to brag, but know it is not advisable to do so, and so refrain as much as they can.

Modesty is a civilized, a cultivated habit; a man's natural instinct is to advertise impudently, and claim more than he is entitled to.

But he has somehow learned the value of modesty, and tamely tries to practice it.

It is an old saying that if you remain quiet, and permit a man to talk freely, he will give himself away; but his secrets, for how his motives, display his weaknesses. . . . Some way with a writer; you can tell what sort of man he is by looking over his compliments and notices. I can always tell—of that I am sure—whether I would like to personally know a writer. I was reading a woman lately, and noticed she is the sort of woman everyone runs from.

An old saying is "I know my own weakness." . . . The only way to get out of a hole is to dig out of it.
