Railroad Rumbings

S. P. Station Clerk and Mrs. R. E. Lemon motored up to Eagle Creek last Sunday and returned accompanied by their son, Maurice, Mack Shaver and Don Lemon who had been sojourning at the resort for about ten days. The boys did their own cooking and made quite a reputation for themselves during their stay. They also caught between sixty and seventy trout.

Last Saturday, conductor C. A. McCammon, Mrs. McCammon and daughters, Helen and Ardene, took a trip to the Tabor ranch in Nogal Canyon and after the evening meal, Miss Helen decided to take a short walk. She had not gone far before a storm came up suddenly and in her haste to get back to the house, she lost her way. The driving rain made it difficult for her to find a familiar spot and she wandered about for five hours before she was found by Messrs. A. B. Zumwalt and Floy Skinner. Shortly before they appeared, she had seen lights in the distance, which came from cars ascending and descending Nogal Hill and had started in the direction of the lights. She was badly drenched with the rain, but suffered no ill effects from the experience.

Rue and Helen Shulda came in from Los Angeles Tuesday after paying their mother a visit at that place. They will remain here at the home of their father, engineer E. J. Shulda and Helen will enter school at the beginning of the fall term.

Engineer and Mrs. Oscar Clouse, Mrs. Nellie Branum and sons Rufus, Linza and Clint, returned Tuesday evening from a trip to the Carlsbad Cavern, where they spent Sunday and Monday. They, like others who have visited the glories of that celebrated cavern express themselves as being pleased beyond what they could express.

Fireman James Saulsberry is expecting Mrs. Saulsberry and the children home this week from their fishing trip in the mountains near Dawson. Fireman George Strauss, who is also on the bachelor list, is looking forward to the return of Mrs. Strauss and the children the latter part of this, or the first part of next month.

Trainmaster J. P. Nash of the Tucumcari district was a guest of the local Trainmaster B. H. Horton for two days this week.

Mrs. Amos Phillips, wife of engineer Phillips of Tucumcari and daughter, Miss Mildred, were guests of Mrs. A. C. Hines at her summer home on the Bonito this week, returning home yesterday.

Dr. Shaver reports the following: BORN—To Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Reader of Corona, on July 11, a 10-boy. Mother and son are doing nicely.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Mayer, and Mrs. Mayer's brother, Carl Anderson are here this week from El Paso and will remain for about one week, during which time they will seek the coolness of our mountain resorts.

Commissioners' Proceedings

The Board of County Commissioners met July 1, 1927, 10 a. m. Present: R. E. P. Warden, Chairman; C. F. Grey, member; W. B. Rose, member; Lotah Miller, Clerk.

The following bills approved and paid: Salary, $1,422.95; General County, $785.04; Health, $336.10; Road, $1,413.06; Court house and jail, $261.65; 1925 undistributed tax, $38.20; 1923 and prior, $23.91.

The resignation of Clifford Ferris Arnold as Constable of precinct No. 10 accepted. The Board here rescind the action taken in reference to contribution to Baron Auriemma, Field Representative home service of the Salvation Army advisory board.

The bill of W. B. McDonald for the amount of $26.50, constable fees rejected by the board as same was not authorized.

The Justice of the Peace and Constables report of A. H. Harvey, J. H. Kingston, A. L. Hulbert, O. T. Gallegos, D. C. Heath, examined and approved. The bill of M. L. Torres rejected on account of there being no case and it must have the approval of the Justice of the Peace, also no report filed. The J. P. bill of J. H. Kingston, rejected for reason it should have been deducted from the proceeds of the property attachment sale.

The Board approves the installation of phone and extension in deputy sheriff's room and moving sink from basement to jail; also electric light drop and shade for clerk's office.

By recommendation of the Grand Jury the Board instructs the Assessor to straighten up the vault and arrange records in an index manner.

Moved that the Sheriff be ordered to enforce the Automobile Tax License Law and direct his deputies to enforce same.

July 1, 1927—To the Honorable Board of County Commissioners, Carrizozo, N. M., in session have today appointed Miss Velma Estes Deputy County Treasurer subject to her making the required deputy's bond. M. B. Paden, County Treasurer.

Cowboys Entertain Mr. and Mrs. Claude Branum

After the wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Claude Branum, which occurred here on July 2, the couple left for Tularosa to attend the big Rodeo which closed the 4th.

After the celebration, they were taken to the ranch home of Senator A. B. Fall, where the cowboys of Three Rivers took them in charge. A big covered wagon was drawn up, and the evening meal was prepared by the cowboys. Then the call was sent out to "come and get it"—the cowboys showed them a good time, after which they came to Carrizozo and settled down to married life, and received the congratulations of their many friends. Mrs. Branum was formerly Miss Georgia Rustin of this place.

ing for the appointment of viewers for the purpose of having road vacated, said road running from Tecolote west to Spade ranch through Secs. 19, 20, 21, 22, Twp. 3 S. R. 12 E., upon which the board approves and appoints John Dale, A. W. Montgomery and Wayne Johnson, viewers, without any charge to county.

Carrizozo as a Central Point for Wool Storage Seems Now Assured

We have talked with most of our wool growers concerning making Carrizozo a central point for wool storage and shipping

Boy Scout Notes

By Eli Goodreau:

Have you smelt wood-smoke at twilight?
Have you heard the birch-fire burning?
Are you quick to read the noises of the night?
If so, follow the others; for the Boy Scouts' feet are turning To the camps of their desire and their delight.

—Apologies to Rudyard Kipling.

Over three hundred Boy Scouts and Leaders have registered for the Boy Scout summer camp, according to a report received from Minor Huffman, Boy Scout Executive. This camp is located in the Sacramento Mountains, ten miles west of Weed. It can be reached by way of Artesia or by way of Cloudfroft. Three ten-day periods will be held and each troop has the privilege of selecting their own period. First period opens Friday, July 15, Scouts from Carlsbad, Tularosa, Dexter, Mescalero, Clovis, Fort Sumner and Tucumcari have registered for that period.

A worth while program of interesting activities has been arranged, covering Scoutcraft, Woodcraft, Campcraft and Handicraft. Specialists will direct each of their departments and a doctor will supervise and look after the boy's physical means.

A number of horses will be in camp for the older Scouts. Parents and Scouts desiring more complete information, consult with your local Scout Leader.

and without an exception, they are heartily in favor of the project. Such growers as Frank Maxwell, T. M. DuBois, Brack Sloan, the Red Canyon Sheep Co., J. E. Freeman, W. R. Lovelace, and others who now have their clips stored at different places in town are loud in praise of the same.

As we have said before, Carrizozo is, in all reason, the ideal centralization point for wool storage. It is so centrally located that growers have short hauls to reach it from any direction over the county. It is a good point for buyers to gather, inspect the different clips, make their bids and purchases, load and ship direct from here on the Southern Pacific and the business is completed all at the one point. Mr. Henry Lutz has charge of all the wool stored here and all clips are carefully weighed, and placed in separate lots with weight marked on each bag. All clips are snugly stored awaiting the buyers who will be here Monday, at which time the big sale will begin.

Fort Stanton Notes

Dr. G. T. Sprague, Assistant Surgeon who was recently transferred from Marine Hospital No. 19, at San Francisco, reported to the Medical Officer for duty on Wednesday.

Miss Episteine, former nurse here who is now in the Indian Service at Albuquerque has been visiting friends here for several days.

Mrs. Tohill of Clovis spent Tuesday with Mrs. R. Merrill.

Mr. and Mrs. Coolidge of Topeka, Kan., and Mrs. W. Wunsch returned Sunday after spending several days at Santa Fe.

Former patient Hermanson reports that he is back on the sea and is getting along fine.

Monroe Howard of Alto was at the Fort on business.

Mr. and Mrs. M. T. Coolidge, who have been visiting with Mr. and Mrs. Wunsch will leave Friday for their home at Topeka, Kansas.

Patient Jose Veiga has received a discharge and will leave for Galveston, Texas Wednesday.

Mrs. Wunsch gave a six table bridge party Wednesday night, in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Coolidge. Mr. and Mrs. Howson spent Wednesday in Roswell.

R. Merrill was a caller in Carrizozo Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Coolidge, parents of Mrs. Wunsch and sister Gertrude of Topeka, Kans., are expected to arrive the first part of the week for an extended visit.

Do We Appreciate it?

Have we noticed and do we appreciate the good condition of the courthouse yard? Do we remember how bare it was before Sheriff Kelsey went into office? If we can remember that bare and desolate condition, we should be pleased to the utmost with its present beauty; its healthy young trees; pretty lawn; handsome flower beds beaming with color beauty of every description. The yard, in its present condition, is truly a thing of beauty and if so attended by the sheriff's successors, could be made a joy forever. It has taken pains and work to make the yard what it now is. The young trees have been nurtured by the water from the big windmill and tank, while the lawn and flower beds have been fed with soft mountain water from the city water service. The sheriff has planned and directed the work, oftentimes taking a hand in it himself; likewise has his painstaking deputy, Pete Johnson and jailor, Porfirio Chavez, Jr. The remainder has been done by the sheriff's guests in the hotel known as the 'hoosgow'.

These guests have made their terms seem shorter by performing honest labor and kept themselves out of mischief. Do we appreciate the young trees, lawn, flowers and gold fish in the fountains? If so, give Sam a hand.

Mack Shaver went to El Paso Monday and returned Wednesday, accompanied by his sister Nellie, who has been taking Methods since the close of the Junior College.

Crystal Theatre

J. C. Burkett, Prop.

Friday—W. C. Fields in "The Pottery," a Paramount comedy of American home life.

Saturday—Monday—Richard Dix in "Paradise for Two."

Tuesday—Wednesday—Evelyn Brent, Lawrence Gray and Louise Brooks in "Love 'em and Leave 'em."

Williams—Carver

At the return of Mrs. Ed Williams and small son "Bun," who were in Chicago for about 2 weeks, came Curtis Williams and also Mrs. Curtis Williams, the couple being married in Las Vegas on July 6.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Carver of Roy, N. M., where she has a large circle of friends.

The groom has been in the employ of the S. P. at Torrance for about one year. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Williams, the family being so well known among our people here.

Curtis left Tuesday for El Paso, where, with his charming bride, they will make their future home. They have the best wishes of our community in the beginning of their married life.

Prince of Good Scouts

Conductor D. A. MacKenzie, whose suggestion "El Puerto" as a name for the new Summer Playground in Nogal Canyon, has decided to give the lot which he won to the Girl Scouts. He also requested that this paper make the above announcement. This shows that the conductor is a Prince of Good Scouts.

Mrs. D. L. Jackson was a business caller at Carrizozo Monday. Wayne Van Schoyck was also a business visitor at Carrizozo Monday of this week.

Mrs. H. E. Kelt, who has been on the sick list last week, is improving.

Little Miss Willie Day Standhart of Roswell, is a guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Brack Sloan this week.

Selwood of Sleepy Cat

By FRANK H. SPEARMAN

"What do you mean?"

"I mean," submitted the big fellow, "when you're headin' for Sleepy Cat, I'm headin' likewise. I ain't easy in my own mind, not a bit, since what the Scotsman says about a girl I'm not namin'—no matter who she is. But she's worth a whole wagon-load of old buffalo bones like Dave's—not meaning no disrespect to nobody, whatever, at all."

"If that's the way you feel, Bill, what about me?" demanded Selwood, almost angrily. "I'm here to look out for Christie Fyler."

"That's just it, John," persisted Pardaloe, placatingly. "And to look out for Christie Fyler, now, single-handed, you know what you're up against—same as I know," snorted Pardaloe, "same as everybody here knows. That's why I say to hell with 'Chief River and Tracy; I'm trailin' you."

"But this is my fight, not yours."

"I'm makin' it mine, John."

"Stop talking, you old tub. If they can dig a grave up there big enough to hold you, I can edge into one corner of it. But, Bill!"—Selwood raised one hand, simply—"who rides with me tonight ought not to care much about coming back."

Pardaloe was chewing slowly, but with the steadiness of fate. "Nomin' particular, as I know of John, callin' me anywhere back."

"Come along, Bill!"

A further parley was held; Tracy at last pleaded to be taken back to Sleepy Cat, and as everybody else was for it, Selwood gave in. It was arranged that Pardaloe should ride with Selwood and Scott, and that McAlpin should follow in the wagon with Tracy.

While Tracy's cot was hastily set back in the wagon and the horses were being got up, Selwood took the ammunition out from under the seat—a slender store, but, like a shower, a life-saver in a drought—and apportioned it into three parcels among Pardaloe, Scott, and himself.

It lacked but little of daybreak when the three men reached the river again. Forging the stream, the horsemen secreted their horses in the undergrowth below the river bench, and climbed up the nearest gully to the flats, that were being laid out for a railroad yard. Spreading out again, the three men circled this open space singly and without molestation, and came together on higher ground, where they could reconnoiter the town.

The fire that had lighted the sky earlier in the night had died down—chiefly for lack of material for the flames. An important part of Sleepy Cat lay in ruins, though the extent of the destruction was hidden in the darkness. One quarter of the straggling settlement had escaped the torch and the Vigilantes and the reprisals of the outlaws—this was the corner embracing the stage barns, Carpy's hotel, and the new railroad station.

From the hill where they had halted, Selwood and his companions, recovering their horses, made their way under such cover as they could singly, to the stage barns.

Lefever met them. Selwood asked for the news. Lefever pointed to a pile of smoking ruins down the hill. "Some of them river rats have burned the bunk-house on us, John," said Lefever. "That's the way they keep their promises!"

"McAlpin told me nothing of that," exclaimed Selwood, looking angrily down the hill.

"Didn't know it was on fire when he started," returned Lefever. "But I'm telling you the teamsters are farin' to go. They're only waiting for you."

"Just hold 'em till I get some bearings," was all Selwood replied.

Bull Page took the steaming horses back to their stalls, and Scott was sent out to scout. Lefever told Selwood and Pardaloe what more he could of the situation; Starbuck, who had been missing for a time at the outset, had taken the gamblers' fight in hand at a moment when the Vigilantes were driving all before them, turned the tables on the clean-up men, and now held the survivors of their disorganized force at bay in the unfinished railroad station. Starbuck had sent word by messenger that he would give them an hour to get out of the station and out of the town—coupled with the threat that if they didn't move they would be burned out by daylight. Starbuck's men, Lefever added, held the only building left in the Silver Quarter, where most of the burning had been—Buntz Bartoe's place down next the river; it had escaped the flames. In the upper town Carpy's hotel, which had been gutted, the gamblers had spared. He knew nothing about Christie.

Pardaloe had been dispatched to the station with the ammunition. He came back with a long face, but a long face was nothing new for Pardaloe. Carpy, wounded, was there treating the wounded, who lay on the floor in the freight room. There was only a pretense of a guard kept about the building; within it, disgruntled Vigilantes nursed their grievances, rallying chiefly at one another; and in one corner, with nobody to command, owing to lack of ammunition, Old General Roper, though hit, was maintaining headquarters, with neither head, as Pardaloe tartly put it, nor quarters. The only thing that prevented the refugees from running away was the fear of getting shot if they put their noses outside.

Selwood felt he must first of all see and learn what he could from Carpy. Directing his few companions to stick together and telling Lefever to throw out a stronger guard about the barn, Selwood started for the station.

By skirting the river bank and working from one to another of the breaks in the beach, he reached the rear door of the station without drawing any fire, either from its defenders or its besiegers. He pushed open the door and entered the hall without being opposed or observed. A glance was enough to reveal to Selwood's unsympathetic scrutiny the complete demoralization of the Vigilante element. It was almost by accident that Abe Cole, the bandaged but still fighting blacksmith, saw Selwood and, running toward him, greeted him with a shout that drew attention to the long-hoped-for arrival of the taciturn gambler. As men, wounded and unwounded, crowded about him, he eyed the scar-faced, blurring blacksmith, coldly, paying no attention whatever to his effusive welcome.

"You running this thing, Abe?"

"Running it?—nobody's running it. They wouldn't do a thing I told 'em to do," declared Cole, with a plentiful sprinkling of profanity; "now they're cornered, jus' as I told 'em they'd be if they didn't obey orders, and there's about as much fight in 'em now as there is in a bunch of Jack-rabbits!"

Selwood, ignoring impatient interpleaders that raised their voices, some abusing the blacksmith and some one another, looked about the two rooms. The figure that instantly arrested his attention was that of Carpy, his head swathed in a wild-looking bandage, moving about among his wounded, who, filling one corner, lay on the floor in various attitudes of prostration, anger, and disgust.

Selwood, silencing those closest, spoke to Cole. "I sent what cartridges I could rake up, Abe; it's all I know of this side of Medicine Bend, outside what Starbuck's got. So I'd advise you not to pass any 'em out to the Jack-rabbits; put 'em in the hands of men that will use 'em."

"The teamsters, your men, are standing up," blurted out Abe. "They stopped 'em from rushing us an hour ago. But they ain't got six rounds apiece left. Starbuck will come back."

Selwood's glance had wandered. "Hello, Doc," he said as he saw Carpy elbowing his way toward him.

Carpy, wounded and infuriated, was grateful but glad. Selwood reached for the bloody hand stretched out. He listened with patient attention to the wrought-up surgeon, who tried to explain the wreck of their plans, though with an expression in his eyes that indicated his mind wandered.

Looking over the shoulders of those around him, Selwood saw the cowed spirit of the Vigilantes. One exception attracted his attention: one man appeared profoundly indifferent to the fortunes of the night. In a comfortable chair in the farthest corner of the second room, his bald head in a huge fur cap well pulled down, and his hands clasped in his lap, sat the queer pioneer trader of Sleepy Cat and of the mountain country—old man Van Tassel. Everything he had in the world had but just gone up in the smoke of Fort Street, but the tragedy laid apparently failed to shake his spirit. Composed and collected he struck Selwood as an odd contrast to the welter of wrangling, confusion, and cowardice about him. The gambler silently laughed.

He turned his eyes on Cole. "Well," he said in response to Cole's words from several mouths, "you've made a mess of it. They've got you cornered. Where are the boys that licked you hanging out? Does anybody know?"

He was assured that Bartoe's place was the only building that had escaped the flames in the River Quarter.

"That's where they are, then," was Selwood's comment.

"What are you going to do?" spat-tored Cole.

"I'll take what men I've got with me at the barn and go after 'em."

"Wouldn't it be better to fight 'em here, John?" asked Cole.

"You're licked here," retorted Selwood. "If Starbuck stuck his head in the door most of these fellows would jump into the river. Get back to your wounded"—he took Carpy's arm—"looks to me, they're about all the fighting blood you've got left here."

As he spoke, he drew the surgeon apart. "You know the reason I'm in this mess, Doc," he said sternly and without wasting words. "Where is Christie Fyler?"

Carpy, controlling his excitement, caught Selwood's arm in his hand. "That's why I wanted you, quick as you could get here. So help me God, I don't know where the girl is, John. I only wish I did. This evening she and her father took supper at the hotel. I warned Christie privately to stay close—I couldn't trust Fyler with anything," Starbuck said Carpy with a curse, "was prancing around her and had the gall to try to stay to supper with 'em. I knowed Christie would stick close and would be all right, but I never figured on us getting drove like this. When I seen what was coming I run up to the hotel and told all hands to light out for the depot. I run to Christie's room myself and told her what was up, and to make for the depot."

"Why didn't you bring her there yourself?" demanded Selwood.

"She wouldn't leave without her father," protested Carpy, defending himself, "and the dashed old mule wouldn't budge—I couldn't take her from him—she wouldn't go."

"So you left her there!"

"What else could I do?"

"Knock him on the head and drag her here, yourself," said Selwood savagely. He made no effort to restrain himself, and his words fell like whip lashes. "You know her danger," he thundered; "she didn't! So you left her there!" exclaimed the gambler, sardonic in his wrath. "A fine mess you've made of it!"

"John," protested Carpy, "I'll go over there this minute with you, myself."

"Stay where you are. What was the number of her room?"

"Twelve, at the top of the front stairs. John, I don't want you to go off mad this way, I did what I could—I tell you she wouldn't leave her father."

Selwood paused only to make a brief appeal for his outbreak and to promise to return; he told Carpy he was going to look for Christie at the hotel—though in his heart he had no hope of finding her there.

On a table close at hand, where the doctor had set his instrument-case and dressings, stood a lighted pocket-lantern. Selwood, picking it up, closed the slide, put it out, and slipped it into his coat pocket.

"Hey!" exclaimed Carpy, "don't take that!"

"I may need it," said Selwood.

Walking toward the door with Selwood, Carpy pointed to one of the wounded men on the floor near where they were passing. He lay on his back, with his eyes closed, and his stertorous breathing was noticeable. "There's the old general," he said, "hit pretty bad, too; want to speak to him?"

"No," blurted out Selwood.

"He may die," observed Carpy critically.

Selwood was brutally resentful. "He won't need me to help him," was all he said. And slipping open the back door, he took one look out into the hall, slammed the door behind him, and slipped out into the night.

On the town side of the station he could hear sporadic firing, answered at intervals by the fringe of guards defending the railroad building. He met no opposition on the way to the hotel. It was far enough out of the line of fighting to have been overlooked. He scouted about the building for a minute, and entered through a side door which he found unlocked, opening into the dining-room. Without risking a light, he felt his way across to the hall, picking up a wood-bottomed chair as he did so, and pausing at intervals to listen for sound. He could hear nothing anywhere, and walking up the front stairs without much attempt to avoid the inevitable creaking of the treads, he felt along the wall, for the door of room number twelve. Laying his hand after a moment on the knob, he tried it. The door was unlocked. Without opening it, he knocked softly. There was no response. He listened intently for sounds of breathing, but could hear none. He then set the chair in front of the closed door, lifted from his coat pocket the dark lantern, lighted it, set it facing the door on the chair, pulled back the slide of the lantern's eye, drew his revolver, and, standing to one side, threw the door quickly open; if a shot were to come from within, the lantern should draw it.

But no shot was hurled at him, no response of any sort was made to the rude intrusion; the silence was almost ghostly. Selwood picked the lantern up from the chair, threw its light rays from side to side of the room, and, crossing the threshold with unabated caution, looked about him.

The bed had not been disturbed. Selwood lighted a lamp. One of Christie's familiar straw hats lay on the bureau. Beside it he saw a pair of gloves that he took up in his hand, felt of, and looked at. The simple toilet articles of a frontier girl, the brush and comb and lesser feminine accessories, together with a black leather belt and a handkerchief, lay at hand.

Everything gave mute evidence that the defenseless owner had been splintered away, or had fled without a moment's warning.

To find himself standing thus surrounded by her most intimate belongings—belongings so familiar, some of them, to his observant eyes that in looking at them he was stirred to a frenzy at the thought of danger coming to her—was too much.

Without allowing himself to linger a moment where sweetness seemed still to exhale from her former presence, Selwood jerked the counterpane from under the frightened cat, and dumped into it, man-fashion, Christie's belongings. He then emptied the bureau drawers, caught up and tied the counterpane corners into a sling, and, catching the bundle up on one arm, hastened down the stairs and rejoined his men at the barn.

CHAPTER XIII

Barbaret Is Persuaded.

Selwood got back without further incident, and deposited his queer-looking bundle with care inside a cupboard in the harness-room. Scott had returned and had covered the River Quarter, unmolested. His report confirmed all information that Buntz Bartoe's place had not been burned, and, Scott added, was now plying with Starbuck's following, who, pausing in and out, were celebrating their victory.

"Is Starbuck there?" asked Pardaloe.

It was a question Scott could not answer.

Selwood's mind worked as he listened. "I've got to know for sure where Starbuck is," he said, his eyes moving from face to face of those listening about him. "Where's Bull Page?" he asked after a moment's thought. "Get him here quick."

Facing Selwood within a moment and alone with him in the office, the dilapidated but amiable Bull looked as surprised in being summoned at moment by the boss as the other men were.

Selwood spoke to him kindly and without haste, and asked an odd question: "Bull, you haven't done the world very much good in your eventful lifetime, have you?"

Poor Bull, greatly taken aback, countered with a sickly smile. "Well—I—hope I ain't done nobody a whole lot of harm—have I, John?" he asked in his quavering, throaty tones.

"Not to anybody except yourself, Bull, if the truth be told," replied Selwood evenly. "Not half as much harm as I've done, Bull, by a long shot. But tonight there's a chance for both of us to do something for somebody. You've seen that young girl whose father kept the mock-auction store down street, one of the stores that were burned tonight?"

Bull nodded. "I seen her, John."

"Somewhere in this row she's got lost. I'm afraid she's fallen into bad hands. You never can tell what will happen, you know, a night like this."

"Wouldn't want no wimmin folks of mine mixed up in it."

"Then listen," continued Selwood. "I've seen you many times drunk, Bull, trying to make me think you were sober."

Bull nodded as if confessing to the indictment.

"Tonight I want you sober, trying to make everybody else think you're drunk."

Bull saw a flash of humor in the suggestion. "That," he returned, "his chin pushed well down into his throat, 'ain't goin' to be so awful hard, John, I don't think."

"There's one feature you may not like. But you're entitled, fair and square, to know it now. We may one of us or both of us, get killed."

"Willing to go where you go, John," he replied simply.

Selwood showed his own surprise at the unassuming assent by a longer breath than usual. "John Barbarey cornered a man when he got you, Bull," he observed, regarding him gravely.

Bull's smile had long been in rags, but it shone brave through the tatters of his seamy face. He said nothing.

Selwood believed that if any man at the barn could get into Bartoe's that night alive, it would be Bull Page. Bull, though janitor at Selwood's place, left his wages impartially at the various dives along the river front. He thus enjoyed a certain standing in the lower town as well as the upper, and he moved without prejudice among the different factions of the town.

"I don't want to ask you to do anything I wouldn't do myself—if I could," said Selwood, explaining to Bull what he meant to attempt. "But you can get through doors barred against me and against any stranger; and with you to guarantee a stranger, I might make it. Anyway, Bull, if you're game we'll try; and they won't get us both without some kind of a hearing."

Pardaloe and McAlpin were called in. "If you'll hold your men together here a while," said Selwood to Lefever, "we'll know exactly what we are going to do. In, say, ten minutes, John, bring all of them that want to fight down to Bartoe's and maybe they can be accommodated. I'm taking Bull Page with me, and suppose you and Scott come along, Bull," he added to Pardaloe. "If we don't all of us get back, some of us might."

"What are you going to do?" asked Lefever.

"I'm going down to Bartoe's to look around."

Scott, with the quickest instinct of his listeners, looked at the gambler with a skeptical smile. "You're not going inside?"

"I am, if I can make it," returned Selwood. He began to unbutton his coat. "And I'll borrow your hat and oor of it. But, Bill!"—Selwood raised one hand, simply—"who rides with me tonight ought not to care much about coming back."

Pardaloe was chewing slowly, but with the steadiness of fate. "Nomin' particular, as I know of John, callin' me anywhere back."

"Come along, Bill!"

A further parley was held; Tracy at last pleaded to be taken back to Sleepy Cat, and as everybody else was for it, Selwood gave in. It was arranged that Pardaloe should ride with Selwood and Scott, and that McAlpin should follow in the wagon with Tracy.

While Tracy's cot was hastily set back in the wagon and the horses were being got up, Selwood took the ammunition out from under the seat—a slender store, but, like a shower, a life-saver in a drought—and apportioned it into three parcels among Pardaloe, Scott, and himself.

It lacked but little of daybreak when the three men reached the river again. Forging the stream, the horsemen secreted their horses in the undergrowth below the river bench, and climbed up the nearest gully to the flats, that were being laid out for a railroad yard. Spreading out again, the three men circled this open space singly and without molestation, and came together on higher ground, where they could reconnoiter the town.

The fire that had lighted the sky earlier in the night had died down—chiefly for lack of material for the flames. An important part of Sleepy Cat lay in ruins, though the extent of the destruction was hidden in the darkness. One quarter of the straggling settlement had escaped the torch and the Vigilantes and the reprisals of the outlaws—this was the corner embracing the stage barns, Carpy's hotel, and the new railroad station.

From the hill where they had halted, Selwood and his companions, recovering their horses, made their way under such cover as they could singly, to the stage barns.

Lefever met them. Selwood asked for the news. Lefever pointed to a pile of smoking ruins down the hill. "Some of them river rats have burned the bunk-house on us, John," said Lefever. "That's the way they keep their promises!"

"McAlpin told me nothing of that," exclaimed Selwood, looking angrily down the hill.

"Didn't know it was on fire when he started," returned Lefever. "But I'm telling you the teamsters are farin' to go. They're only waiting for you."

"Just hold 'em till I get some bearings," was all Selwood replied.

Bull Page took the steaming horses back to their stalls, and Scott was sent out to scout. Lefever told Selwood and Pardaloe what more he could of the situation; Starbuck, who had been missing for a time at the outset, had taken the gamblers' fight in hand at a moment when the Vigilantes were driving all before them, turned the tables on the clean-up men, and now held the survivors of their disorganized force at bay in the un-

Eel Only Fish Which Seeks Prey in Packs

Among fishermen the pike is called "the tiger of the stream" because of its daring and ferocity and in the havoc it plays among the lesser denizens of the under-water world.

But, as in the jungle, the wolf pack is responsible for more killings than the solitary tiger, so the depredations of the wolves of the stream, the eels, are ten times greater, although perhaps less visible than the spectacular dashes of the pike, says the London Mail.

Eels are practically omnivorous and will eat anything—fish, flesh, fowl or insect. Nothing from a dainty spinner to a dead dog or cat comes amiss to these ravenous of the stream. They wage relentless war on all other species of fish, devouring their spawn and hunting the small fry from their hiding places under stones and weeds.

Eels are the only species of fish which actually hunt their prey in company. The pike, perch and trout are all predaceous, but in hunting they work singly. But eels, like wolves, although hunting individually where the smallest prey is concerned, do not hesitate to band together and attack victims for which they would be no match in single combat.

On the Smoker

A horse painter once sat next to the great Sargent and asked him for the loan of a match. Then, noticing the great painter's brushes, easel and box of colors, he said genially: "I see we're both in the same line."

"I see we are," said Sargent, with a laugh.

"I've been whitewashin' a barn today," said the horse painter. "How's trade with you?"

"Brick," said Sargent. "I coated a village this mornin' and gave second coats to a canal, a river and a mountain this afternoon. I finished up the day with a dash of lightning—gold-leafed her, you know."

"Good, some beauties!" said the horse painter. "You sure must be on a blackweek."

Dogs That Don't Bark

The Siberian sledge dogs, which are reported to be very efficient in spite of the fact that many of them are on the verge of starvation from time to time, do not bark as do domesticated dogs. They have a manner of howling something akin to the wail. In the summer time they subsist on frozen fish, but in winter they are hard put to it to get enough to eat.—New York Magazine.

coat and boots if you're willing Bob," he added. As he spoke he took a cap of McAlpin's hanging on a nearby hook and stuffed it into his trousers pocket.

Scott began to take off his coat. Lefever sat partly on the table, with one leg swinging over the edge. He slipped uneasily from his perch and stood before Selwood.

"John," he asked, "what are you actually going to do? You don't honestly mean you are going to try to go into Bartoe's place tonight?"

"Why not?"

Lefever eyed him with indignation and contempt. "You're looking to get yanked, sure."

EXOTIC SHAWLS FOR EVENING;
MILLINERY FOR SUMMER TIME

"SEE the new moon, make a wish and it will come true." Here's guessing the wish made by thousands of star-gazing women—Spanish shawl! Friend husband asks the "better half" to choose the gift she wants most—'Spanish shawl!' her eager reply. Daughter of the household is about to carry the "class honors." What shall devoted mother and father bestow upon their loved one as a graduating gift—Spanish shawl! Mr. and Mrs. Newlywed are on their honeymoon.

are lovely crepe de chine squares, in white or pastel color, unadorned save for long hand-knotted fringe. Silk squares with wide bands of silver or gold cloth bordering them are the smart thing in Paris. The centers are hand-painted or embroidered. This sort are fringedless.

Yes, we believe, in evolution, speaking of course from a fashion standpoint. For proof, we cite certain taffeta hats as created, this season, by renowned Parisian modistes. See in Spanish Shawls Are Popular.

What shall the proud groom buy for his happy bride—"Spanish shawl!" says she.

An exotic shawl for evening wear is the temptation assailing every luxury-loving woman this season, and fashion is giving every encouragement to this ambition. Better one simple evening frock plus one gorgeous Spanish or Italian shawl than a whole wardrobe of pretty dresses minus the shawl, when it comes to beautifying the summer moonlit scene.

"It's in the play," this keeping the frock infinitely simple so as to give all glory to the shawl. And how valiantly the ascendency for silken squares of every type and color befringed and embellished in many intriguing ways.

the picture how several of these modistes mark the evolution of grandmother's lovely log-cabin patchwork and other quaint quilt patterns into smartest Twentieth-century millinery.

Perhaps it is Italian art—mosaics which furnished the inspiration for the intricately interworked taffeta, also ribbon hats which are glorifying present-day millinery modes. Come the inspiration from what source it may, one thing is apparent—a new beauty note has been sounded by the milliner who is using taffeta in such unique and alluring ways as exemplified in the hats in this group.

Taffeta is a very important medium for the making of the better class of millinery this season. Many of our loveliest hats are built patch upon patch, fold upon fold of taffeta, displaying not only a fine workmanship, but also resulting color schemes which furnish subject matter for artist and poet.

Note the hat in the center of the picture. Isn't it reminiscent of the silk log-pattern patchwork you have been treasuring for years in that cedar chest of heirlooms? The narrow ribbons work out a delicate rainbow coloring, while the contour of the hat is the "very latest." Especially consider the stylish model, a side-back view of which is here given below to the left. The darker stripes are navy

Control Disease of Cucumbers

Eliminate Agencies by Which Destructive Ailment Is Wintered.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The most effective means of controlling this mosaic disease of cucumbers, according to the United States Department of Agriculture, consists in the elimination of the agencies by which this destructive disease is carried over the winter.

The cause of the disease is unknown, but diseased plants contain a form of infection which may be transmitted to healthy plants by such insects as the melon aphid and the striped cucumber beetle. The disease does not live in the soil and is not carried in the seed of the cultivated cucurbits, but is known to live from year to year in certain wild plants, some of which occur in most of the cucumber-growing sections.

Wild Plants Carry Disease.
The known wild plants which carry the disease are the wild cucumber, milkweed, pokeweed, two species of wild ground cherry, and catnip. The disease is carried over winter in the roots of these plants, except in the case of the wild-cucumber which carries the infection in the seed. Insects feeding on these infected wild plants and on the cucumbers in the field spread the mosaic disease. In a number of fields where the average mosaic infection had been approximately 40 per cent, eradication of the wild host plants in and near the fields reduced it to 3 per cent.

Before planting, the field itself and all land within 75 yards should be carefully inspected and all wild host plants, whether healthy or diseased, should be pulled out. If the cucumber field can be surrounded by other cultivated crops, the work of eradication will be simplified and insects are likely to be less prevalent.

Plants Are Dwarfed.
Mosaic cucumber plants are dwarfed, the younger leaves are mottled with green and yellow, and the fruits are mottled and misshapen; the darker areas forming warty projections on the surface. When such plants appear early in the season they should be removed immediately to prevent further spread of the infection by insects. It is also advisable to use insecticides to reduce the number of insects. Where several fields are adjacent to one another it is essential that all growers co-operate in removing the wild host plants about their fields.

Dusting for Insects Is Popular and Effective

Dusting insects has become so popular, and the dust guns so easy to use and effective, that dust is taking the place of liquid sprays. For ordinary garden use a coarse cloth sack tied to the end of a stout stick is a very effective duster for leaf eaters, but for some of the sucking insects that require a contact poison like nicotine a blower is best, for it will force the dust up under the leaves as well. You can get almost any kind of insecticide now in the powder form. The best time to use is very early in the morning before the dew dries off, or it will be needful to sprinkle or spray the foliage with water to make the dust stick. There are combination dusts that will serve for both eating and sucking pests, and most gardeners will be wise to use them and use them freely.

Danger Spots in Roads Are Now Clearly Marked

Danger signs in the Minnesota system of yellow-and-black markings on trunk highways, have general meanings conveyed by their shapes in addition to the specific warnings they give. Diamond-shaped signs warn of actual dangers on the road, such as a sharp turn. When the careful driver sees one ahead he always slows the speed of his car.

Square signs mark dangers near the road but not part of it, such as schools. They put good drivers on the alert the instant they are sighted.

Octagonal and round signs always require a full stop. The eight-edged signs are posted in most instances at intersections of arterial routes to avoid collisions. Round signs of the same import but in a class by themselves, are used to mark railroad crossings, all of which are always dangerous.

Fresh Straw Is Liable to Stunt Plant Growth

Fresh straw plowed under sometimes stunts the growth of the following crop, according to soil specialists of the New Jersey agricultural experiment station. The straw acts as a medium for certain kinds of bacteria which multiply rapidly and which feed on the nitrogen that would ordinarily go to the crop. This explanation is borne out by the fact that when nitrogen is added with the straw, the harmful effects are prevented.

In very sandy soils, injury appears before a shortage of nitrogen can make itself felt. Apparently, the straw also introduces poisons which affect the tender seedlings.

The soil specialists of the station are now endeavoring to find methods of treating the straw so that both forms of injury will be prevented.

Determine Hay Grade by Time of Cutting

Some Common Hays Are Allowed to Stand Too Long.

Late cutting and improper curing are the most common cause of low grades and low prices of hay, says Prof. L. A. Dalton of the department of agronomy at the New York State College of Agriculture at Ithaca. The usual difference between No. 2 and No. 3 hay is that No. 3 was allowed to become over-ripe or was cured in such a way that it lost its color and aroma.

The time when the common hays should be cut are as follows, according to Professor Dalton:

Timothy should be cut when it is in full bloom. If allowed to stand longer the leaves and stems turn brown. If allowed to stand too long many of the leaves turn brown and fall and the stems become woody.

Mixtures of clover and timothy should be cut when the clover has reached full bloom. Red clover usually blooms ten days to two weeks earlier than timothy, but if the cutting is delayed until the timothy is in bloom the clover will be over-ripe.

Alfalfa should be cut when one-tenth to one-fifth of the crop is in full bloom. If allowed to stand longer the plants that flowered first lose many leaves and become hard and woody.

Hay should be raked into windrows while it is still supple so that its moisture will evaporate without the excessive loss of green color, which occurs when all the hay is exposed to the sunlight in the swath.

Silage More Palatable Than Fodder for Cows

An acre of corn has a much higher feeding value when fed to dairy cows as silage than it has when cured and fed as fodder. The superior value of silage over fodder is attributed largely to the smaller waste in the handling, curing, storing and feeding of silage and to its greater palatability. Principally because silage is much more palatable than corn fodder, more of it is consumed, thus making more nutrients available for milk production.

These facts are borne out by an experiment made by the Iowa Agricultural experiment station in which corn silage was compared to corn fodder in well-balanced rations fed to dairy cows. By giving corn silage a feeding value of $4.50 a ton, or $36.00 for an acre yield of eight tons, the relative value of corn fodder was found to be $17.17 for a production of 34 tons per acre. However, as there is about 5 per cent greater additional loss resulting from curing fodder than there is from curing silage, the acre valuation of the fodder is reduced to $10.21. An acre of corn fodder in these trials, therefore, was given but 45 per cent the value of any acre of silage for feeding to dairy cows.

Handling Soy Beans for Both Hay and for Seed

Soy beans should be cut for hay soon after the seed pods have been formed and before the seeds have been fully developed, about the time the lower leaves begin to turn yellow and drop.

For seed soy beans should be allowed to become fully mature before harvesting. At this time the leaves will have largely dropped off. If they stand up well it is more satisfactory to cut and bind and shock them and let them stand in the shocks until dry enough to thresh. They may be cut with a mower and shocked until ready to thresh, but care of the seed will shatter and be lost and they will be harder to thresh.

In making hay of soy beans they should be allowed to become well wilted in the swath before raking and shocking, but should not be allowed to become dry enough to shatter off the leaves. The shocks will shed water better if put up when the hay is a little green.

Agricultural Notes

Well-bred cows leave profits—monkeys pay no rent.

Even if low-grade truck doesn't spoil on the market it spoils the market.

A good cow well fed will do her best—a poor cow poorly fed will do her worst.

While they are small, carrots should be thinned so they stand three or four inches apart in the row.

Growing chickens and laying hens need green feed the year round to grow best, keep in good health or to lay eggs.

Keep after the weeds. It has been a rainy spring and ideal weather for them. If it is too wet to hoe, pull them by hand.

Time for the soil appears to be one of the best-paying propositions for farmers, for records from 17 states show an average return of 138 per cent on the investment.

All animals like fresh fruit. It is a good succulent for them, and should be used. Last year thousands of bushels of peaches were fed to hogs; this got rid of the fruit and helped the hogs.

Colors by Wireless

Pictures in three or more colors can now be transmitted by wireless and reproduced with delicate shadings. Engineers have been experimenting for a year on colored telephotos on the same principle as black and white photos. Separate transmission is necessary for each color.

IS A HEALTHIER STRONGER GIRL

Because She Took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

The fertile valleys of Oregon help to supply the tables of America. This is possible through the magic of the humble tin can.

In one of the canning establishments, Julia Schmidt was employed. It was complicated work because she did sealing and other parts of the work. It was strenuous work and she was not a strong girl. Often she forced herself to work when she was hardly able to sit at her machine. At times she would have to stay at home for she was so weak she could hardly walk. For five years she was in this weakened condition.

She tried various medicines. At last, a friend of hers spoke of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and she gave it a trial.

"Everyone says I am a healthier and stronger girl," she writes. "I am recommending the Vegetable Compound to all my friends who tell me how they suffer and I am willing to answer letters from women asking about it." Julia Schmidt's address is 112 Willow St., Silverton, Oregon.

Girls who work in factories know just how Miss Schmidt felt. Perhaps they, too, will find better health by taking the Vegetable Compound.

Where Will It All End?

Demonstrations recently made in aircraft, first by Lindbergh, the "Lone Eagle" and afterwards by Chamberlin and Levine and Byrd have developed so rapidly that we may expect more startling sensations in the near future, from the fact that these are but a forerunner of what aviation will bring.

Where will it end, or whether it will ever end, remains to be seen. Some one has predicted, and we have no sane reason for doubting it, that the time is coming when airplanes will gather all the electricity they need from the air, taking just what is needed from time to time from the inexhaustible storehouse above and around us. Can we doubt such a thing?

After years of expeditions sent out to find the North Pole, Byrd sailed over it, and made careful observations of the surroundings; and now he is returning from his flight across the ocean, to sail over the South Pole.

Will he make it? Certainly he will, and after this feat is accomplished, others will follow, so that in a few more years it will be no news to read of hopping off for the Poles and taking electric energy from the air to provide the supply, no matter what the destination is.

The day has come when a man who will doubt anything, should be canned and left standing, and the fool-killer told to get his meat. Soon it will be "Good night, America," "Good morning, Paris" but will it end at that?

How "Phunny"

Here and there—a great ways apart, just a few Democratic papers are taking what they call a "fall" out of President Coolidge while he is seeking rest and recreation in the Black Hills and calling it a "political trip."

If that was as far as they had gone it would have amounted to but little, but not being able to criticize his tax-saving administration, they are making attacks on his personal appearance, much like the fellow who called the other a mean nomo and ran; or like the one, who knew of no other way of attack, muddled his shoes and wiped it on his neighbor's doorstep. How phunny! Such rot will only make friends for the President and lose votes for the Democrats.

Me Too!

Gov. Dillon's refusal to take a parachute jump at a 4th of July celebration because he "wanted to enjoy the party" places him in a class with most of us. There are few of us who, untrained in the ways of aviators, would care to "walk the plank" from an airplane. Perhaps we'll all be doing that in a few years—but let's not cross the bridge before we get to it.

Notice of Hearing of Final Account and Report

In the Matter of the Estate of Jacob J. Hicks, deceased. No. 3324

In the District Court of the Third Judicial District of the State of New Mexico within and for the County of Lincoln.

To Edna C. Hicks Littleton, Clara Mae Zunwalt, Ruth Pearl Gatewood, Ada Gatewood, George Lee Gatewood, Lawrence Lloyd Hicks, Jacob Mason Hicks, and Claud Lee Hicks and to all other persons whom it may concern,

GREETING:

You, and each of you are hereby notified that on the 14th day of June, A. D. 1927 there was filed in the said Edna C. Hicks Littleton, executrix of the estate of Jacob J. Hicks, deceased, the final report and account of the said Edna C. Hicks Littleton, executrix of the estate of the said Jacob J. Hicks, deceased, and that the court has had the 31st day of August, A. D. 1927 as the time for hearing of objections to such final account and report of Edna C. Hicks Littleton, executrix of the estate of Jacob J. Hicks, deceased, and the settlement thereof.

You, and each of you are hereby notified that on said 31st day of August, A. D. 1927, at the hour of ten o'clock A. M. of said day at the court house at Carrizozo, Lincoln County, New Mexico, the said District Court of Lincoln County, New Mexico will proceed to hear any and all objections to such final account and report of the said Edna C. Hicks Littleton as executrix of the estate of Jacob J. Hicks, deceased, and will hear and determine the heirship of said decedent Jacob J. Hicks, deceased, the ownership of his estate, and the interest of each respective claimant thereof or thereof and the persons entitled to the distribution thereof, and that said court will also finally pass on said final report and account of the said Edna C. Hicks Littleton as executrix of the estate of Jacob J. Hicks, deceased, for the purpose of approving said final report and account and discharging the said Edna C. Hicks Littleton, as executrix of the estate of Jacob J. Hicks, deceased, and her official bondsmen, and for the purpose of making distributions in accordance with the last will and testament of the said Jacob J. Hicks, deceased, to the heirs, legatees and devisees as have been finally determined and declared by said court.

Now, you and each of you are hereby notified ordered and required to file any objection that any of you may have against the approving of said final report and account as above set forth by this court on or before the 31st day of August, A. D. 1927 at ten o'clock A. M. of said day as said final report and account will be finally passed on and approved and the executrix finally discharged and the distribution finally made in accordance with the last will and testament of Jacob J. Hicks, deceased, and of the statutes in such cases made and provided on said above date.

That the address of said Executrix is Carrizozo, New Mexico.

That the name and address of said Attorney for said Executrix is H. B. Hamilton, Carrizozo, New Mexico.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the seal of the District Court of Lincoln County, New Mexico, at my office at the court house of Carrizozo, Lincoln County, New Mexico, this 25th day of June, A. D. 1927.

CHILDREN CRY FOR "CASTORIA"

Especially Prepared for Infants and Children of All Ages

Mother! Fletcher's Castoria has been in use for over 30 years to relieve babies and children of Constipation, Flatulency, Wind Colic and Diarrhea; allaying Feverishness arising therefrom, and, by regulating the Stomach and Bowels, aids the assimilation of Food; giving natural sleep without opiates.

The genuine bears signature of Charles H. Fletcher.

Suspicious!

The loyalty of a magician's assistants is frequently put to the test by people who would like to learn his secrets, but the helpers are usually equal to the situation.

George White has been with Thurston ever since the magician started around the world with his show. One day an inquisitive busybody slipped George a cigar and said to him:

"How does Thurston make the woman float in the air without any support?"

"I don't know," George replied, "but I think there must be some trick about it."

Hat Gave Warning of Oscar's Temper

One of the eccentricities that made the late Oscar Hammerstein, the noted theatrical impresario, such a picturesque figure on Broadway is recounted by George Blumenthal in an article in Liberty. "When you saw Oscar Hammerstein coming down the street wearing his funny silk hat, you knew he was in a good humor. But if he were wearing a slouch hat—look out!"

"I recall that at the Manhattan opera house there was a little place beneath the stage which had never been finished," the writer tells. "This 'cave' would admit about six persons and was a great place to be when Hammerstein went on one of his many rampages. We employees called it the Cave of Refuge. Before Hammerstein arrived for the day, we generally had a lookout posted. He would come back and report something like this: 'It's all right—the boss is wearing his high hat.' Or: 'Watch out—he's got on that slouch hat!' The slouch hat meant the Cave of Refuge for us."

Charleston in Ireland

The Charleston has been included in the annual dancing tournament between cities of Ulster, Ireland. It is not classed as one of the regular dances, such as the fox trot, waltz and tango, but is given a special and separate competition. The tournament this year was conducted in Victoria hall, Belfast, by the Ulster Amateur Dancing championship, and every amateur dancer in Ulster was eligible. The first prize was a loving cup presented by the lord mayor of Belfast when the contest was inaugurated three years ago. Miss Katherine Watson of Derry judged the trials, and admitted that Belfast had better dancers than Derry.

Preachers' Pay Raised

Every clergyman in Rhodesia is to have his annual allowance raised. The minimum pay is to be $1,000 a year. This will be for bachelors, while a married man will be allowed $500 additional for maintenance of his wife and $150 for each of his children. These innovations were decided upon at the recent diocesan synod held at Mafabury. During the discussion the bishop of southern Rhodesia, who presided, asked: "If these attractive conditions, which I wholeheartedly endorse, come into force, what guarantee have you that all the bachelor clergy in the diocese will not be married by this time next year?" None could answer, but the step was voted.

Recovered Radium

Some detecting that would make Craig Kennedy proud was performed by Prof. J. B. Edwards of Georgia Tech. in Americus, Ga. Several tubes of radium valued at $4,000 were lost from the hospital. With mechanical devices perfected for detection of radium waves, Professor Edwards traced the receptacles and their precious contents to the city incinerator five miles away. Unscathed, the radium was returned. Hospital attaches believe the tubes became entangled in cotton that was scarded and thus were tossed into refuse receptacles.

Suit We're Born With

To find out how many yards of skin it takes to cover a human body, Doctor Takahira, Japanese physician, had a special variety of this strong paper which adheres closely to curved surfaces pasted over his nude form. This was dried, then removed, cut into flat pieces and measured. In this way Doctor Takahira discovered it took 10 square feet of skin to cover him, although he is only 5-feet-6-inches tall. That is another thing you shouldn't have to worry about from now on. Capper's Weekly.

Novel Wireless Equipment

In an attempt to study the effect of the atmosphere on wireless waves, French scientists are planning to send a transmitter ten miles up into the air by means of a balloon. The apparatus will send out signals automatically. More signals from a similar set will be sent from ground level and will be compared with those emanating from the upper regions.

Money isn't everything, but it reduces earthly fears one-half.

POULTRY

CULLING CHICKENS AIDS BUILD FLOCK

It seldom pays to raise a weak or crippled chick. One of the secrets of successful poultry culture lies in discarding weaklings as soon as found. Often the owners of chicks are too "chicken-hearted" to kill weak chicks but they should consider that such action is really more humane than nursing sick or crippled ones along, letting them die later after they have consumed a lot of feed and a lot of labor has been spent on them.

Generally speaking, weak chicks are the result of some specific trouble. Often it is a disease such as white diarrhea or coccidiosis. Both these diseases spread through droppings, and leaving weak chicks in the flock invite further spread of disease. If the trouble is caused by some fault in management or feeding, it is usually best to cull out the weak birds and try and correct the fault.

Culling chicks helps to rid a flock of weak vitality. On several occasions we have had letters from our readers telling about white diarrhea in their chicks this year, and later in the letter they mention that they had a little trouble last year. They have saved birds that recovered from the disease, and they have spread the disease to chicks this year through the egg. These diseased chicks have, in turn, spread the disease to their mates with heavy loss.

Good feeding and management must be combined with culling. Even the best chicks cannot make a satisfactory growth if they do not have the proper feed. Culling helps owners who practice proper feeding and management.

Duck Eggs Incubated in Much Same Way as Hens

Duck eggs are incubated in much the same way as are hen eggs. The temperature of the machine should be kept at 101 to 102 for the first five days, after which it should be kept as near 103 as possible. After the first five days the eggs must be turned and watered daily. A great deal of water is used, many people sprinkling so much on that it runs out of the bottom of the incubator. The period of incubation is 23 days.

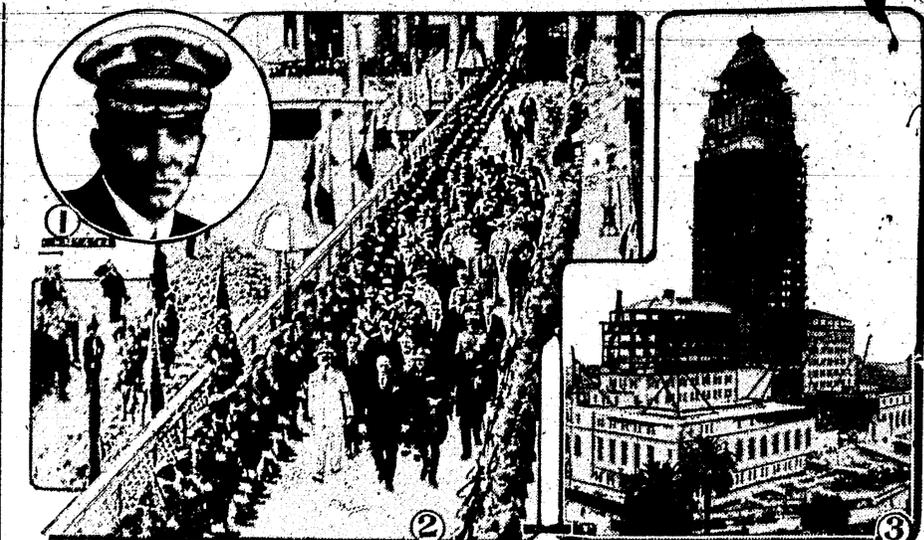

A good feed mixture is the following: 200 pounds corn meal, 100 pounds low-grade flour, 100 pounds bran, to which is added 10 per cent of beef scraps. If milk is available, the beef scraps may be reduced. Plenty of sand and greenfeed should be provided at all times.

Of Much Importance to Keep Chick Rations Dry

Each year finds an increasing number using a factory-mixed or home-mixed mash in the starting and growing of their chicks. The use of a feeder or mash hopper is a part of this method of feeding. If the feeder is placed outside the house it is very important to see that the top and sides of the feeder are tight. Keeping the mash or starter dry is very important. There is nothing worse for young chicks than sour, wet mash. It is frequently a cause of digestive trouble that stunts the growth of a large number of chicks, even if no death loss results.

Chick Precautions

- Do not crowd at any time.
- Avoid moldy litter or feed of any kind.
- Kill all weak, crippled or deformed chicks.
- Get chicks out on the ground as soon as possible.
- Feed sparingly, but often, during the first two weeks.
- Be sure chicks are not chilled while being transferred to brooder.
- Be sure the house and all equipment is thoroughly clean and kept clean.
- Do not remove chicks from incubators until they are at least thirty-six hours old.
- Remember that crowding means losses with the youngsters. See to it that they have ample room at all times in their brooders or hovers.
- Do not feed chicks before they are forty-eight hours old. They will eat and may appear hungry, but they are sicker off with no other feed than that provided by nature for at least 48 hours after hatching.
- Be sure your brooder stove is regulated before chicks are placed under cover.
- New ground is far safer for chicks than ground where poultry has been previously grown.
- Plenty of green feed and milk are essential for the natural and normal development of the baby chick.
- Don't allow the chicks to become chilled. Keep them growing by feed with wholesome rations.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Army Lieutenants Fly to Honolulu, and Byrd Hops to France.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

TWO more great feats in aviation marked the week, and both were American accomplishments. First and of more importance was the flight of Lieuts. Lester J. Matland and Albert Hegenberger from San Francisco to Honolulu. Taking off from the Oakland municipal airport in a huge three-motor army Fokker monoplane early Tuesday morning, they reached Wheeler field on the island of Oahu, their destination, in 25 hours and 50 minutes. The distance is about 2,400 miles.

The army aviators thus made the longest transoceanic airplane flight on record, and made it without mishap. The passengers and crew of the steamer Sonoma, 740 miles from the Golden Gate, were electrified when Matland brought his plane out of the mist and dropped to within 200 feet of the water as he passed by. He had then been more than nine hours on his way.

The next report from the flyers came from the steamship President Pierce, 1,100 miles from California, which reported hearing their radio asking for a bearing to be sent to establish location. At 5 a. m. the plane radioed that the flyers were 700 miles off Honolulu.

The landing was made on a rain-soaked field. The huge plane taxied the entire length of the field. Then, circling it came back to the front of the review stand, where army, navy and civil authorities were waiting to extend congratulations to the flyers. The crowd went wild with joy and enthusiasm. Guns thundered in salute as the plane stopped before the reviewing stand.

Colonel Howard, department air officer, rushed to the plane, grasped Matland's hand and shouted, "You did it, and I congratulate you."

Major Gen. Edward M. Lewis, commander of the Hawaiian department of the army, clasped hands with Matland and Hegenberger. The eyes of both aviators filled with tears as he said: "My boys, I congratulate you."

Matland said that the radio beacon on the island of Maui failed to function.

"Our compass," he said, "is what got us here. If we hadn't had that we should have been out of luck."

The flyers were presented to Gov. Wallace R. Farrington, Rear Admiral John D. McDonald and other dignitaries, who loaded them with beautiful Hawaiian flowers and leis, the native emblems of greeting.

Cablegrams and radio messages of congratulation were showered on the happy young men, and they were especially pleased by a congratulatory wire from Commander Byrd, who learned by radio of the success of their flight while himself winging his way across the Atlantic. Army officials in Washington were especially pleased by the achievement of two of the army's birdmen, which supplemented the almost successful attempt of Commander John Rodgers of the Navy in the fall of 1923. Secretary of the Navy Wilbur, in his dispatch to the lieutenants, said:

"I can't help alluding to the fact that coming on top of the Byrd polar flight and the Lindbergh and Chamberlin flights, this latest flight again demonstrates the reliability of the air-cooled engine and represents a distinct advance in aviation."

HAVING waited many days for favorable weather, Commander Richard E. Byrd of the navy hopped off Wednesday morning from Roosevelt field, Long Island, on his scientific flight to France. With him in the big three-motor Fokker America were Bert Acosta, Lieut. George Noville and Bernat Halchen, formerly of the Norwegian navy. In the earlier stages of the flight the America made faster time than did Lindbergh or Chamberlin. Radio messages from Byrd were received frequently, and told of passing through continuous dense fog and low-lying clouds which completely cut off the vision of the aviators.

Friday morning at 8:30 the aviators made a forced landing on the beach near Hayra. The plane was wrecked, but none of the men was injured. The America approached near Paris at 3 a. m. Friday, and in the rain and fog lost its way and turned to the north, finally coming down within 650 feet of the beach at Ver-sur-Mer.

AFTER several days in Washington and New York, conferring with officials and business men concerned with aviation development, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh flew back to St. Louis for the purpose of getting his Spirit of St. Louis and making a non-stop flight to Ottawa, Canada, where he was to be the guest at the jubilee celebration of the Confederation of Canada. In New York, Harry F. Guggenheim, president of the Daniel Guggenheim Fund for the Promotion of Aeronautics, made this announcement:

"Arrangements have just been completed under which Col. Charles A. Lindbergh will undertake a country-wide airplane tour of the United States for the purpose of furthering public interest in aviation development."

PROSPECTS are growing brighter for some good results from the naval limitation conference in Geneva. Great Britain had been steadfastly demanding virtual revision of the Washington agreement in a way the United States could scarcely accept, and Japan caused surprise by coming out in favor of the British proposals. But unanimity is a requisite and the American delegates showed not the slightest sign of yielding. Then the British apparently, though tacitly, recognized they could not put across their plan, though they still hoped that the question of the size of battleships might be discussed at a plenary session of the conference. The technical committee announced that "a considerable measure of agreement between the three delegations" concerning destroyers had been revealed.

In the matter of cruisers, the English delegates proposed that those vessels be divided into two classes. Only a limited number of the 10,000-ton 8-inch gun cruisers would be allocated, the balance of the cruiser tonnage going into ships below 7,500 tons, carrying 6-inch guns. These lighter ships would be worthless to the United States because it is without naval bases and the ships are incapable of accompanying a battle fleet into combat operations any great distance from a base. As the technicians decided against any limit for small craft under 600 tons, the Japanese and British could set the seas swarming with little boats jammed full of torpedoes, any one of which is capable of disabling a capital ship.

SACCO and Vanzetti, the Massachusetts radicals whose conviction for murder has attracted international attention, will not be executed during the week of July 10. Governor Fuller, who has been studying the case carefully, has granted the men a reprieve of 30 days. He has also given a 30-day respite to Celestino Madefros, sentenced to death for another murder. Madefros has asserted he was a member of the gang that committed the murders for which Sacco and Vanzetti were convicted and that they were not involved.

THREE years of trouble over the defunct Grain Marketing company and the Armour company was in a fair way to be ended when petitions were filed with the Illinois commerce commission to bring into existence a corporation to control eleven grain elevators in place of the Grain Marketing company. The Armour Grain company asks permission to quit operating public warehouses in Chicago and the Rosenbaum Grain corporation asks authority to enlarge its business and to issue $2,500,000 of bonds. The documents are in the names of the "Export Elevator company, an Armour property, and the Postal Elevator company, a Rosenbaum organization."

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE may include in his next message to congress a recommendation that an insular bureau be established under which the Philippines and our other Island possessions would be gathered together under one civil department head. He told this to the correspondents after his conference with Governor-General Wood. The idea is not now and has been suggested before by Mr. Coolidge.

The President said he had no change in Philippines policy in view as a result of his conversation with General Wood. He was encouraged, he said, by the report that the general gave as to conditions. The general result of the administration's attitude has been, he finds, an acceptance of the policy on the part of the Filipino people (political leaders excepted) and a feeling of security and stability. He pointed out that 95 per cent of the local government is in the hands of the natives; they hold nearly all the offices and carry on most of the government.

SOCIETY, especially in the East, was intensely interested in the news that Miss Grace Vanderbilt, twenty-seven-year-old daughter of Gen. and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, and Henry Gasaway Davis III, a mining engineer, had eloped in New York and were married first in the municipal building and later in the Little Church Around the Corner. The bride, according to report, had been sought in marriage by many men of high position, including Prince George of England, Lord Ivor Spencer Churchill and the marquis of Donegal. Her brother said that General and Mrs. Vanderbilt were strongly opposed to her marriage to Mr. Davis. The groom is a grandson of former Senator Davis of West Virginia. He was graduated from Princeton in 1924 and has been a post-graduate student at the Columbia school of mines.

REPRESENTATIVES of 45 nations gathered in Stockholm for the twenty-fourth convention of the International Chamber of Commerce. King Gustaf and the crown prince attended the opening session and the delegates were given a reception in the royal palace. The 400 German delegates were greeted with special warmth by the other members, since this is the first time Germany has been represented at the international business parliament.

INDICTMENTS against three of the most prominent bankers in Los Angeles in connection with the investigation of the overissue of stock of the Julian Petroleum corporation were returned in Superior court there. Fifty-five others already had been indicted in connection with the case.

The indicted bankers are Charles F. Stern, president of the Pacific Southwest Trust and Savings bank; John E. Barber, president of the First Securities company and vice president of the Pacific Southwest, and Motley H. Flint, executive vice president of the Pacific Southwest Trust and Savings bank. Stern and Barber are charged with felonies—three counts of embezzlement and another count of accepting a banker's bonus. Flint is charged with usury.

SHANGHAI cablegrams say that the Nationalists suffered a tremendous reverse at the hands of the northern army, losing hundreds of thousands killed, wounded and captured. But not much reliance should be placed on such stories until they are confirmed. Peking dispatches indicate that Chiang Kai-shek's offensive in Shantung is in full swing. Japanese along the Shantung are in a state of panic and calling for troops from Tsingtao. The moderate branch of the Nationalists has formally charged the Japanese with breach of neutrality, asserting that Japanese troops were sent into Shantung province for the purpose of enabling Marshal Chang to maintain the dictatorship of North China. Immediate withdrawal of the troops was demanded.

BOTH major political parties were warned by the Anti-Saloon league that, under the league's guidance, the drys in both parties will be organized to demand the nomination of "satisfactory" candidates for President and congress and on state and local tickets in the 1928 campaign. The proclamation of the league, issued by its general counsel, Wayne H. Wheeler, asserts that "the Anti-Saloon league will use its well-established and successful methods in the coming political campaign."

GOOD THINGS FOR THE JAM POT

By CAROLINE B. KING
 Culinary expert and lecturer on household science.

Strawberry and Pineapple Conserve

Allow two quarts of berries to one medium sized pineapple. Pare the latter and cut it in small pieces. Put over the fire with just enough water to keep the fruit from sticking, and cook for half an hour. Then add the berries which have been hulled and washed. Cook ten minutes, stirring often so that the berries will become broken, add an equal amount of sugar as the fruit are mixed, and cook till thick, stirring frequently.

Polychrome Conserve
 One-half pound of dried peaches, one-half pound of apricots, one-half pound of prunes, one orange, one-quarter cupful seedless raisins, one-quarter cupful nut meats, one and one-half pounds of sugar. Press the dried fruits, which have been cooked in the usual way, through a sieve, add grated peel and juice of the orange, and the raisins chopped fine, nutmeats and sugar and simmer altogether until thick.

Sunshine Chips
 Pare carrots and cut them into the thinnest water-like slices, and allow three-quarters of a pound of sugar to each pound of the vegetable; also half a cupful of lemon juice. Place the carrot slices in layers in a saucpan, sprinkling the layers with the sugar; pour the lemon juice over all and leave to marinate for twenty-four hours. Then add water just to cover, and drop in a few pieces of ginger root cut in slices. Simmer till the carrot slices are tender, then set aside to cool. After three or four days, drain the syrup from the vegetable and cook it slowly till very thick. Then arrange the carrots in sterilized jars, pour the hot syrup over them and seal when cool.

Amber Marmalade
 One grapefruit, one orange and one lemon are required for the marmalade. Wash the fruit well and cut it in slices, removing all seeds. Run the fruit through the food chopper, using the coarse blade and save all the juice. Measure the fruit and juice and cover it with three times its quantity of water. Let it stand for twenty-four hours, then put on the fire and cook for twenty minutes. Let stand again till cool, then measure and allow a cup of sugar for each cup of fruit and juice. Mix well and let stand again for twenty-four hours, then bring slowly to the boiling point and simmer for three hours. This amount of fruit and sugar will make nine or ten glasses of delicious marmalade.

Prune and Date Jam
 1 pound prunes
 1 pound dates
 1/4 cupful sugar
 2 tablespoonfuls of lemon juice
 2 tablespoonfuls of orange juice
 Cook prunes until tender in a small amount of water. Remove stones and add dates, which have been stoned and chopped. Add lemon and orange juice and sugar. Cook the mixture until thick.

Caliph Serves Fruit To His Favorite Wives

WAY back in the days of the Arabian Nights pineapples were on the menu. They were not the "Smooth Cayenne" which Hawaii offers today, but if we are to put faith in the tale of a pineapple grown for Haroun-el-Raschid, Caliph of Bagdad, "bigger and better" pineapples were then in demand.

As the story goes, at certain holiday seasons it was the privilege of loyal Mohammedans to present rare and costly gifts to the Caliph. Two horticultural geniuses of that day, Hassan and Abdul, entered upon a bitter rivalry when each started to grow, as his offering, a fruit which would be larger and better than any fruit ever known in Persia or Arabia.

Hassan was a banana specialist. He set out to grow a giant banana which would outdo all other bananas on earth. Abdul was the only man in all Arabia who could grow pineapples. He sought to please the Great Caliph with the biggest pineapple ever beheld in Bagdad.

Nature was kind, and both fruits grew even beyond the fairest dreams of their planters. Daily, great crowds of Arabs gathered to watch the plants of the rival camps, and report progress. When word was brought to Hassan that the pineapple of Abdul was expanding to an alarming extent, Hassan became troubled. Abdul, however, was sorely conscious that he had the better won, for was not the pineapple monarch of fruits?

It was the eve of the great feast. Imbued with a secret plan to steal a march on Abdul, Hassan crept into his garden, cut down his choice banana, and leaping upon his feet, dramatically sped away into the night.

Arriving at the castle, Hassan presented his giant banana. The Caliph took one look at the fruit and fell into a rare horrible swoon. For that day Haroun-el-Raschid was afflicted from a frightful attack of indigestion.

"The unfeeling wretch!" cried the enraged Caliph. "Shove his banana down his throat!"

The attendants grabbed the astonished Hassan and started shoving the fruit down his throat, when one of them called it out suddenly and asked: "Why do you smile, Hassan?" "Because," replied Hassan, "My enemy, Abdul, is tomorrow arriving with a huge pineapple."

But Hassan's hope for Abdul's punishment was unfulfilled, for when Abdul arrived the following day, the happy Caliph caused the huge pineapple to be cut and served to him and his favorite wives.

The moral of this tale might be that pineapples are good for indigestion — but happily Arabian Nights tales have no morals. A physician, however, diagnosing the case of a Caliph's digestive disturbances, would no doubt have agreed that pineapple was the one fruit which the great Haroun-el-Raschid needed.

Hawaii grows a pineapple, "the Smooth Cayenne", which would make Hassan and even Abdul envious, for it is not only the largest pineapple produced, but the juiciest and sweetest. Were the Caliph alive today, he would have a can of this Hawaiian pineapple, shipped to him, fresher, perhaps than the one which made the Journey via "The Camel Route."

For in Hawaii the canneries are right on the edge of the plantations and thus the fruit is allowed to linger in the fields until the sun has bestowed on it the very last ounce of flavor and health-giving properties. It is then packed into cans within twelve hours after it has been picked.

And since pineapple, the sweetest canned fruit, is second in popularity only to canned peaches, the oldest canned fruit, it is now packed in a variety of ways for the convenience of its ever increasing number of consumers.

The market affords both Fancy and Standard grades of pineapples packed in the following styles:— slices for serving plain or in desserts and salads; crushed, especially adapted to culinary purposes; tid-bits for salads or dishes where the slices are to be broken; and juice for delightful drinks.

The ancient Arabian custom of enjoying choice fruit at holiday seasons is a custom which can be followed today, all year round. Hawaiian canned pineapple suggests luxury and delicacy, although it has rich food value, and its sunny color makes it an addition to so many dainty desserts. It is also delicious in meat, salad and in the vegetable dishes which we serve every day, and because of its appealing taste, it bears the distinction of being the monarch of fruits.

A SAFEGUARD AGAINST A LIGHTLESS NIGHT WHEN MOVING

A PRIME necessity before moving into a new house, apartment or summer cottage, is to assure oneself in advance that during the eventual first night or so, while things are being put into order, there will be sufficient light on hand.

In the city, the gas and electric lighting company is prepared to turn on the light as required but even with their promise of prompt service, they are so pressed that, with the short notice they are sometimes given, miracles should not be expected of their hard-working service men. And in summer cottages, frequently the lighting facilities are such that you must either create your own light, in the form of oil lamps, or current or gas from a home generating plant which may not be in complete operation on your arrival. At any rate the possibility of being without light, and of having to stumble over chairs, sofas, tables and bric-a-brac, in the dark interior of your new abode, is too displeasing a situation to contemplate without immediately making some provision to guard against it.

The best insurance against such a dismal contingency is to carry flashlights to the new home or outing place, prepared to use them if needed, in much the same way that policemen, firemen and other guardians of the public safety use their handy contrivances. With a flashlight, you can discover dangerous steps and obstacles lurking in the dark and protect yourself and others from stumbling over otherwise unseen barriers, while at the same time lighting their way to bed, to the pantry or to a restful chair, as the need compels. Nothing is quite so cheering in a darkened household as the ruddy gleam from one of these little safes from the light beams.

Caloric Requirements of the Child

DIETITIANS declare that the average boy or girl of four years should receive about forty calories a pound of body weight per day. The average weight of a child of four years is forty pounds. Therefore the total caloric requirement would be approximately 1,600 calories. Calory is merely the name for a certain measure of heat derived from the burning of food.

Necessarily, the caloric requirement of the child is dependent on his temperament, since a child who plays hard and long requires more nourishment than one who leads a quieter life. Rate of growth also has a bearing on caloric requirements. The child who is growing rapidly should be given more food to meet his caloric needs than the boy or girl whose growth is normal.

Mothers know the daily diet should consist of the essential foodstuffs, protein, carbohydrate, fats, minerals and water. The important thing for her is to learn the foods that contain these essentials in a balanced diet. Below is a well-balanced menu for any child six years old compiled by an authority on home economics.

Children often become wearied of drinking plain milk. Mixing their milk with fruit juices is a welcome change. Following is the recipe for a refreshing milk drink: Mix 1/2 cupful orange juice, 1/2 cupful evaporated milk, three teaspoonfuls of sugar, 1/4 teaspoonful of lemon juice and a few grains of salt. Shake well in a fruit jar before serving.

GENUINE NAVAJO INDIAN RUGS

AN UNUSUAL GIFT. WHICH WILL LAST A LIFETIME

The Rugs of the Navajo Indians are unlike any other rugs ever produced, as art of weaving has been brought to a perfection with this tribe of the Southwest. The designs are of their own figures and symbols, and are seen nowhere else. These Rugs are of a texture and quality that will outlast Oriental Rugs. The wool used is sheared from live sheep, which insures strength and firmness. They will wear a lifetime and become heir looms. The time is not far distant when genuine Navajo Rugs will no longer be woven, as the old Squaws who do this work are getting fewer, and the present generation does not take up the work. For this reason, the rugs now on the market are much sought after by lovers of Indian Relics.

COMPANY PIES FOR EVERY DAY TASTES

By CAROLINE B. KING
Culinary expert and lecturer on household sciences.

PRUNES make a very nice and delicious dessert. Soak and stew as usual one pound of prunes, cool, drain and remove the stems. To the pulp add two-thirds of a cup of sugar, a pinch of salt, a tablespoonful of melted butter, a tablespoonful of orange juice, and the prune juice reduced by cooking to one cupful. Line a pie pan with pastry and place the prune mixture in it, bake until the pastry begins to brown slightly, top with a meringue made by whipping the whites of two eggs to a stiff dry froth, then add four tablespoonfuls of sugar, beat again vigorously and finally fold in four additional tablespoonfuls of orange juice. Arrange over the pie and brown in a very slow oven, 250 to 300 degrees.

Cocoanut Apple Pie
Peel and slice thin, four large tart apples, place in a sauce pan with one-fourth cupful water, add a cup of sugar and a tablespoonful of butter. Boil gently, until just tender, cool, then a pie pan with half pastry and fill with the cooked apples, sprinkle with a little powdered sugar, pour in a little melted butter, and bake in a moderate oven, 350 to 400 degrees.

Coffee Nut Pie
Scald two cupfuls milk and pour it over half a cupful of sugar mixed with three tablespoonfuls very-soft, one-fourth teaspoonful salt, and add one small slice whole nut. Cook over the water until slightly thickened, then add two cupfuls coffee with one-half cupful sugar, and one-half cupful evaporated milk. Cook until thickened and pour into a pie pan and bake in a moderate oven.

Know Your Cook Book, Girls, Advice of Diva

Margery Maxwell, prima donna with the Chicago Civic and Ravinia opera companies, and who enjoys the distinction of being among the first American girls to be recognized in grand opera circles, takes particular pride in her culinary skill. Cooking, in her estimation, is a fine art which is rapidly being lost.

"Doubtless one of the big reasons for this condition is that modern young men don't expect the girls they marry to know much about cooking," said Miss Maxwell.

"In the future, before men pose the question, he's going to find out whether the girl knows what calories are and whether she's wise to the elements of a balanced diet."

"A few questions before the minister asks, 'Do you take this woman?' would save a thousand matrimonial disasters."

There are certain dishes to which Miss Maxwell is partial. As she explains them, they are readily prepared. Miss Maxwell has her own recipe for a delicious chicken.

Two 2 1/2 lb. chickens (broilers) 1 cup bread crumbs
1/2 cup butter
1 cup evaporated milk
1 cup sugar
1 cup salt
1 cup pepper

Wash, clean and cut up chickens. Sprinkle with salt and pepper, dry in a pan, and cook. Place in a hot oven, pouring pan, and bake 1 hour, add a 1/2 cup of F. O. S. (fat oil salt) and the ingredients to the chicken. Cook until tender, then serve with a hot sauce.

Echoes from the Crystal on the night of the concert given last week by Baron Aurelma, in which the singer seemed to have outdone any effort of the past, and our own Raymond Lackland, who so greatly pleased the audience in the beginning of his career as a baritone singer, and Prof. J. C. Burkett entertained the audience with several select solos for clarinet, came Major Alden, director of the band at the State College of New Mexico. The Major, who is here on a piano-tuning trip, is quite a violinist, and on Monday, Wednesday and tonight will give the patrons of the theatre a real treat.

On Monday and Tuesday nights, Frankie Dean, boxer and wrestler, who was here some time ago with the Greenburg Shows, gave exhibitions, assisted by Messrs. Corbett and Hudson of the telephone repair service.

These athletes wrestled and boxed with Dean, giving exhibitions which delighted the fans and the same was done without remuneration, they showed themselves as good sports by staying with the wily Dean in excellent fashion and gave the patrons an abundance of returns for their patronage.

Rita Norman Drowned at Las Cruces

Dr. F. H. Johnson received a phone message last night from Pres. Kant of the State College to the effect that Miss Rita Norman, who had been attending summer school at that place, was drowned while bathing in the Rio Grande river with a party of girls.

Pres. Kant said that Miss Rita was a well-known student, and she was a very popular girl. She was a member of the Y. W. C. A. and was very active in its work.

ed, said that the body was recovered about 11 o'clock last night — no further particulars had been received up to the time of going to press.

Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Nichols of Philadelphia, who had been visiting Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Hoover of Capitan for the past three weeks, left yesterday evening on No. 4 for home. They were well pleased with our mountains and people, but said they were not sure they would ever return.

THE IMPORTANT GARNISH

IT WAS a little New York city school girl who raised her hand in the cooking class when the teacher asked, "What is a garnish?" and all the rest of the class looked dumfounded. "I know, teacher," piped Yetta. "It's parsley."

There are a good many women like Yetta, who think that parsley is all there is to the entire subject of garnishing foods to make them more attractive. Parsley and lemon are the housewife's stand-bys for garnishes, because they are always obtainable, twelve months out of the twelve. The housewife who has not access to large markets can grow her own parsley in a pot on the kitchen window sill. Of course, lemons are always to be found in every well-stocked kitchen, and there is scarcely a day when it is not needed for something. Fish, whether canned or fresh, is one meat which seems to demand a few drops of lemon juice to bring out its flavor, and for such garnishes the lemon should be cut into sections lengthwise, six sections from one lemon. These long sections are much easier to use than slices are, though slices are decorative.

Cold meats look very tempting when carefully arranged on a large platter garnished not only with parsley, but with other decorative foods as well, such as slices of firm red tomato, each with a slice of olive in its center, disks of carrot or cucumber, rings of sweet green pepper or onion, or tiny disks of sliced sweet pickles. Tiny red radishes, either plain or cut into buds, and whole olives are always good looking, either on a platter of cold meats or decorating a salad.

In garnishing salads and desserts, nut meats and candied or maraschino cherries are a pretty garnish. Stiff jelly may be cut into tiny cubes with a sharp knife, or scooped into balls with a vegetable scoop. This little tool is very useful in making balls of apple, banana, watermelon, beet, etc., to rim up various dishes. Capers and tiny pickled onions are also piquant as well as attractive garnishes.

YOU

By EVELYN GAGE BROWNE

THERE'S nothing to fear—you're as good as the best, As strong as the mightiest, too; You can win in every battle or test— For there's no one JUST LIKE YOU!

There's only one YOU in the world today, So nobody else, you see, Can do your work in as fine a way, You're the only YOU there'll be!

So face the world and all life is yours To conquer and love and live, And you'll find the happiness that endures, In just the measure you give.

There's nothing too good for you to possess, Nor heights where you cannot go; Your power is more than belief or guess— It is something you have to KNOW!

There's nothing to fear—YOU CAN AND WILL. For you're the invincible YOU! So set your feet on the highest hill— THERE'S NOTHING YOU CAN NOT DO!

WHEN I WAS TWENTY-ONE

By JOSEPH KAYE

At 21—Tom Mason was a Traveling Salesman.

AT ABOUT this time I was a traveling salesman, and I believe, one of the worst salesmen that ever happened.

I was always ambitious to edit a humorous paper and I particularly wanted to edit Life, but I did not take any aggressive action. I contributed very frequently to the paper when it was started by Mr. Mitchell and it happened that occasionally some of my items were misplaced, or something else would happen, and then they would send for me to come to the office to straighten things out.

One day, after such a visit, Mr. Mitchell asked me to edit the paper. I asked why he had thought to offer me the position when I had not asked for it and he replied that I had shown such a readiness to locate the little troubles regarding manuscripts, and such ability to get things right that he decided I had the type of mind to keep the office going smoothly.—Thomas L. Mason.

TODAY: Mr. Mason bears the enviable reputation of being America's premier joke-smith, having written literally thousands of jokes. He was the editor of Life for over a quarter of a century and has produced many books on humor. As a creator of the jokes you read in newspapers and magazines he has few peers in the world.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

PLANNING THE TRIP

Sam and Peter lived along a rocky coast. They knew the woods, too, that were just back of the coast.

They had been used to doing so many things, but never had they beef off camping or on a trip quite by themselves, and now they were considered old enough to take a little trip.

Of course they would go about the section of the land that they knew, and they were allowed to take it because they had often had to do men's work, although they were only boys, living as they did along the rough, wild coastline.

They had heard of buried treasure and of gold to be found, and they had thought they might go in search of some that was to be found, so people said, not so far away, even though no one had ever found any.

They were talking of the strange island where sheep had been sent one winter and when the sheep came back they didn't act the same at all.

"Sheep are never so awful bright," Peter commented.

"I know that, and they knew it, too, but these sheep just acted as though they had seen something and knew something they'd give anything to tell about and just felt their dumbness something fierce.

"I've never been so anxious to go there."

"Do you think we can get off for a week, maybe?" Peter said.

"Sure, we've got all our chores done and our people have said we could take a trip by ourselves.

"We know the woods and we know the coast and if we don't bring back anything we can say we've had a nice time camping, which will be quite true, and if we bring back something—well, then, that's that!"

They finished digging for clams.

They were very quick about it, knowing almost by instinct which stone to lift up and in an instant where the little holes in the wet sand were where the clams resided.

They Had Enough Provisions.

They didn't talk much about their plans for several days to come.

Then they found they could take a trip without putting more work on anyone and they decided from all the talk they had been listening to for years what they would do.

They were going to seek for one, two or more of the money chests which had been brought out by the French to pay their forces and then the country had passed into the hands of the British and the French had been supposed to bury all their gold and treasures.

Sam and Peter had heard all the talk about this treasure. They had heard of the vast, vast amount that was there—enough to make their whole community rich.

They had heard, too, of the Spanish ship that had for-ed the French ship most heavily laden with wealth into a nearby harbor. It was then that the French had buried the treasure of one of their richest vessels of all.

In the battle that followed the Spanish had been the victors, but had saved the life of only one French sailor who was willing to tell where the treasure was in return for his life.

He had revealed this but the Spanish, pursued by another French ship, had had to sail hastily away. He had left a letter telling the spot, but the letter had much later been lost and in handing down the story from person to person the location had become more indefinite.

Still in a week they could accomplish a good deal as they had heard so much that they had a good idea where to start to look.

It was dazzlingly clear and sunny when they started on their camping trip. They had enough provisions. But they were not worrying so much about these.

"There has been so much gold and silver and money left by those people long ago that has never been discovered that I don't see how we can miss it," Sam said, as they started off.

"I have a hunch we're going to be lucky," Peter replied.

Robert Was Playing

Billy's mother had company in the living room and as she had left two-year-old Robert in the dining room she said to Billy: "Go and see that Robert is all right and that he doesn't hurt himself."

Billy came back and said: "Oh, he isn't, hurting himself. He is just playing on the floor with all the leaves off your fern that he picked off."

Ask for POST TOASTIES

—corn flakes that stay crisp in milk or cream

Delicious hearts of corn

toasted oven-brown and double-crisp

During those warm days, enjoy the cool and crunchy crispness of Post Toasties, the double-crisp corn flakes. Made from the hearts of succulent white corn, delicately seasoned, these corn flakes are toasted double-crisp by the special process of the Postum Company. They stay crisp in milk or cream down to the last inviting flake in breakfast bowl or luncheon dish. Serve Post Toasties often these summer days. You'll find a cooling freshness in their double-crispness, and an appetizing goodness in their true corn flavor. When you want the double-crisp corn flakes that stay crisp in milk or cream, ask for Post Toasties. They come in the red and yellow, wax-wrapped box that keeps them fresh and double-crisp.

For This Once Mandy

Had to Compromise

Mandy was an incurable optimist and the embodiment of kindness. She would never admit that anything was wrong with anyone, although sometimes facts pushed her hard. Her young mistress had many suitors, and the latest recruit to the ranks could boast as little in the way of good looks as was humanly possible.

"Grand looking chap, isn't he, Mandy?" queried Miss Marie's mischievous brother when the guest had departed. Mandy teetered perilously between truth and charity. "Case he was," she answered presently with dignity. "Handsome grandman—handsome gentleman." At that point honesty got the upper hand. "Ceptin'," she added conscientiously, "to his features."

The ascent may then be made in two hours and without guides. Construction of the elevator cableway was started 17 years ago, but was interrupted by the war.

The Joy of Being the Editor

Getting out this paper is no picnic. If we print jokes people say we are silly; If we don't, they say we are too serious. If we clip things from other papers We are too lazy to write them ourselves. If we don't, we are stuck on our own stuff. If we stick close to the job all day. We ought to be hunting up the news. If we do go out and try to hustle. We ought to be on the job in the office. If we don't print contributions. We don't appreciate true genius; And if we do print them, the paper is filled with Junk. If we make a change in the other fellow's write-up, we are too critical. If we don't, we are asleep. Now like as not some guy will say. We swiped this from some paper: WE DID.—X.

Be Charitable; It Gives Better Service

The forces at work on the improvements in our telephone system, the particulars of which we gave to the public some time ago, are making rapid progress towards the finish.

When you pick up the receiver and hear something like this: "Yap tick tok yuck yock," remember that it is only for an instant, and also remember that the telephone men are working to give you a better and more convenient public service.

There has been very little annoyance in consideration of the good work done by the men, and besides all of this, they are fine set of boys, too.

Be charitable—the slight annoyance will soon disappear, and a better phone service will be the result.

Better to be a Live Coward Than a Dead Hero

—A certain colored gen'man, on being invited to take a ride in an airplane (there were a good many high-brown babies present). The dusky man tried to act real brave and unconcerned, when he asked the name of the airship. On being informed it was "The Falling Star" he said "GOODNIGHT—A'd sooner have 'em say 'There he goes,' than 'There he lies.'"

The Girl Scouts met at the home of Glenneth English July 18. Three girls qualified as tender-foot scouts. They were: Charlotte Emerson, Elwyna Bryan and Lois Stadman. After the meeting refreshments were served. Next meeting will be held at the home of Charlotte Emerson.

"Paradise for Two" Unique Situation

How would you feel if you were a rich young bachelor with an ideal, and likewise a legacy, that you couldn't collect until you got married? There's the situation in which Richard Dix mount starring vehicle, "Paradise for Two," with Betty Bronson as his leading lady. And then he takes a chance and tries a ruse, falls in love with a girl and nearly loses her. And then what happens...? See for yourself! It's worth it! "Paradise for Two" will be shown at the Crystal Theatre Saturday.
