"What is it, Bob?" he asked at length.

Scott, lifting his eyes, answered with a broader smile and another question: "Got any money?"

No inquiry could have surprised Selwood more. "Not a whole lot," he confessed with abating interest. "How much do you want?"

"Two thousand dollars."

Selwood took it for a joke. "Well, I'm broke just at present; but if it's coming to you, you'll get it. What do you want with two thousand dollars?"

"I've got a man down below the barn you been wanting to see."

"Who's the man I want to see?" asked Selwood, with only moderate interest.

"The old padre."

Curpy was stowing his instruments away in his bag. He looked up with an exclamation of astonishment, Selwood regarded Scott searchingly. "You mean the old padre I wanted to see?" Scott nodded.

Selwood, who had taken a chair, rose to his feet, and with one hand picked up his coat to throw over his shoulders. Scott helped him, "Where in thunder did the old padre turn up?" asked Carpy.

"McAlpin passed him on the Calabasas trail about an hour ago, when he was bringing in Dave. He had a couple of Gunlocks with him." Scott designated the Indians from Gunlock reservation. "McAlpin told me he met a black-robe and that he was on his way up here and going to camp along the river. So I rode down there and talked with his guides. They told me they had a very old black-robe along. So I talked to him. They're heading for the Black-foot country. I saw the big fire in the sky," he told me, "and I said to my men the new town is burning; many people are in distress. We will go there before we start up the river."

"I held my lantern into his face," continued Scott. "He is the same man whose picture you had in your room up at the hall. And I told him there was a white man here wanted to see him. And to go to the horse barn if it wasn't burned. But he said he would camp down by the river. He's there."

If there was a surprise for Carpy in the recital there was a greater one awaiting him in Selwood's reception of it. For a moment Selwood did not speak. When he did, Carpy stood open-eyed. "Well," said Selwood deliberately. "If you've got the man, the money is coming to you—when I can dig it up. But don't hold him on my account—I don't care about seeing him."

Carpy was well nigh speechless with amazement. "What!" he exclaimed, recovering his breath. "Don't care about seeing him? Man!" he cried. "Don't want to see the man—if it is the man—that's got your whole story? Have you lost your senses?"

Selwood, standing unmoved, parried the attack with stubborn indifference. He felt that Christie had cast him off—what did a name, good or bad, mean to him now? But he would say not one word, and Doctor Carpy, unable to stir him with eloquent reproach, in the end lost his own temper. "Here after all these years," he protested, "that blamed old martinet floper has been running over you, and you get a chance to nail him, by Jingo, you won't take the trouble to do it!"

"All right, I'll do it myself," the doctor exclaimed. "I won't let that old back run over me any longer. Bob," continued the increased surgeon, pointing his finger at Scott, "hold on to your black-robe and his red-skins. If we can't find anything else for breakfast, bring 'em up here for a cup o' coffee, anyway." And with Selwood staring at the wall, and the half-breed grinning perplexed, Carpy dug out of the room.

In the gloom of the hall, Carpy, still exasperated by Selwood's obstinacy and talking respectfully to himself, almost ran into Christie, a pathetic figure, he thought, waiting for a chance to speak to somebody. As he stopped with an apology, she seemed encouraged, for she stepped close to him. "Doctor!" she exclaimed, in a frightened whisper, "is Mr. Selwood terribly hurt?"

Carpy laughed as he looked into her appealing eyes—one of those reassuring laughs that would bring life and hope to a dying man. "Christie," he murmured, "there's more the matter with that fellow than just Starbuck's slapping. I think," continued the doctor, eyeing her with a significant expression, "that if you'd talk you could tell—better than anybody else—what's a matter with him. Christie, you're a fine girl, good enough for the best, or I wouldn't talk to you so plain. But you're in love with John Selwood and you're here with you. There, there! I didn't mean to make you cry, child."

She looked up. "What can I do, Doctor?" she pleaded. "I thought the world of him—why shouldn't I see him to you? You wouldn't be any use, I do yet. Now he has saved me—how do you think I felt when I was told by that vile man—and by him—that he was a gambler?"

The doctor looked perplexed. "I knowed it, Christie. I knowed that was what made the trouble 'tween you," he said. "I couldn't blame you so much, neither," he added regretfully, "even if I'm nothing but a poor drunken doctor myself."

"You shan't say that!" she exclaimed indignantly. "You're nothing of the kind! You're the kindest, best doctor in the whole world!"

He shook his head. "Tell the truth, girl, and shame the devil. If I wasn't I wouldn't be wasting out my life in this hell-hole. But I want to say only this: I wish somehow it could be fixed up. I may not be able to speak it in words, but I know what goes into the making of a man, my girl; and whatever it is, it's in John Selwood. And if he ever quits the business he's in, you'll see a man all through him."

A flood of words broke through Christie's pent-up feeling. "Oh, I believe every word of it, Doctor. You've no need to tell me that. He's just the finest man in the world, if he'd only—!" A timid suggestion occurred to her. "You, Doctor, if you'd ask him to give up that business—you have more influence with him than any one else—"

Carpy cut her off. "Christie," he said, emphasizing every deliberate word with a shake of the head, "you've got more influence over him in your one little finger than I have all over me."

"But, Christie, I've noticed this: it ain't so good when somebody coaxes a man to quit anything—even if he does quit it—as when he quits a thing himself, out of just his own free will. Now if John Selwood ever quits the game of his own accord—bet on him!"

"The look Christie gave him as she went back to her room made him ten years younger. He strode toward the stairs, only to encounter Margaret Hyde hurrying to meet him.

"Why, yes, the boy's clipped up a little," grumbled Carpy in answer to Margaret's manifest anxiety—for he was thinking of his own perplexities—"nothing to hurt much," he added. "You look queer; what's a matter with you? Ain't shot anywhere, are you?"

The drawn face and the sunken, anxious eyes of his housekeeper made his question almost an involuntary one. She answered to reassure him, but she could not hide her distress. "I'm not wounded, Doctor. But might I, I wonder," she managed to say in her low, restrained voice—a voice that, no matter how often it broke, never wholly lost a note of once gentle breeding—"might I, she added, repeating her plea, "speak to John Selwood right away—just for a few minutes?"

Doctor Carpy lifted his eyebrows with a grating laugh, and as if things were getting too complicated. "So that's what you're hanging around for? Why didn't you say so? Well, now, I'll tell you; if you're worrying about John, don't do it. That boy ain't hurted none to speak of. Shucks! I never thought—"

She caught her breath. "It's not about him," she exclaimed, in distress, "far from it! But I must speak with him."

"Fraid it's too late to catch him now," objected the doctor, still mystified by her strange interest. "The boys are waiting to set up another telegraph pole party. And they're waiting for John to come down to the station before they begin. See him when he comes back, Meg."

His lips could scarcely frame words. "I must see John Selwood," she repeated, with a supreme effort at self-control. "I must see him now. Who is in there with him?"

"Bill Pardole and Bob Scott."

"Doctor," she exclaimed, stepping closer in her almost frantic appeal. "Help me! Ask them to stop out a moment—I tell you, I must talk to him alone—now."

It was impossible not to acknowledge her extremity. "Carpy reopened Selwood's door, he spoke to Pardole and Scott. "Look here, boys," he said, peering with his head, "both of you. Step out here a minute. Meg wants to talk to John, private."

Selwood, cleaned up and brushed up as decently as he could be with his bandaged arm and hands, stood before the table preparing to go to the barn. He was buckling on his cartridge belt; his coat was thrown over his shoulder. Hearing Margaret's footsteps, he looked around. One glance revealed the agony in her face. He laid unlighted on the table a cigarette that Scott had rolled for him, and spoke. "What is it, Margaret?" He pointed to a chair. "You're not hurt?"

Looking at him like one dumb with emotion, she sat down. When she spoke, she had already forgotten the question she had just asked. "Mr. Selwood—"

He interrupted her. He had taken his revolver from the table and was slowly slipping cartridges back into the cylinder. "Since when," he demanded with good-natured unconcern, "did I stop being just plain John?"

"Never, to me—never," she said brokenly. "But tonight I come to beg my life at your hands—hoping, praying you won't deny me. Let me tell you what I mean—tell me my story. I was married ten years ago, when I was eighteen. Oh, yes," she said, to cut off his surprise, "I know how old I look—trouble has done that. For three years I had the best husband in the world—kind, considerate, devoted. His friends persuaded him to go into politics. They elected him city treasurer of the little town where we lived in Michigan. That was his undoing; it meant being out nights, being a good fellow, drinking, spending, wasting."

"It lasted two years. And during that time I fell sick. I was very sick, a long time, and he did everything he could in the world to care for me—to relieve me. I cost him so much, oh, so much for doctors—more than I wanted him to spend; but he would try everything that gave me the least hope. He said I should have the best care, and he gave it liberally, extravagantly, to me. Then—on one night he came home. He had been drinking." She stopped an instant. "It was the first time in my life, John, I had seen him in drink. He went on. 'He told me that night his accounts were short—that the next day his books would be examined; that he must face the penitentiary—or run away.'

In her agony she sat, now twisting and clasping her fingers, now her hands; now looking at the floor, now looking at Selwood imploringly—her words wrung from her reluctant lips. "When he told me that," she faltered on, "I was frightened. I was so weak that night! And I was wicked. I told him to go, John—to go at once. But to write me. And that when he found some safe place far away in the West, I would join him."

Selwood only looked at her—not unfeelingly, but as one who could say nothing because he knew of nothing to say. Margaret insisted her parched lips. "He never wrote me," she said, in a low, hard voice; "if he did, I never got the letter. I made up my mind he must have been hurt, or killed, and that I would find out, or find him, myself. And after weary, weary months of search I did find my husband—here—in Sleepy Cat."

Her eyes had dropped from her listener's eyes. Her head hung. Her voice fell still lower. "He was not hurt, nor dead. But worse for me—his feeling—for me—was dead. He cared nothing for me—nothing—"

"But you," interposed Selwood coldly, "you cared for him. It's an old story. Well, what then?"

"I stayed here while he was here; then I went to Thief River to be near him—not chasing him, not bothering him—hoping sometime to repay him for his old goodness to me. But he had chosen bad company, and through drink was going from bad to worse. I can't excuse him for the evil. But I know there is good in my husband. I've come to you to plead for his life."

"To me?" echoed Selwood, mildly astonished. "Why to me? What's his name?"

It took all her courage to speak. "He doesn't use his real name here," she said in a strained, broken tone. "You wouldn't know it if I mentioned it. He is known here—as Cliff Starbuck."

"Starbuck!"

She heard the name blurted out in hushed amazement. With dry, despairing eyes she watched the passionate features before her harden into the cold refusal that she saw was coming.

Leaning against the table, with his back to it, the gambler shifted from one foot to the other, his eyes, that he might avoid her eyes, fixed on the floor; he followed his left hand at his side on the table, and his right hand rested on the grip of the revolver he had slung in the scabbard at his hip.

"I'll tell you, Margaret," he said at last—speaking with apparent unconcern but with deadly point—"I'm sorry you're mixed up with that fellow. But I couldn't do a thing for you, if I wanted to—and I can't honestly say I'm looking to do anything for that man. They're going to hang him—and it's almost too good for him—that, if you want it, is my honest opinion. But you might go and talk to the two Cole boys, John and Abe, if Abe's alive yet; and to the teamsters. If they're willing to let him go—he shifted again on his feet—"I won't say anything."

"But, John," she pleaded in heart-breaking tones, "if you won't say anything, I'm lost. None of these men would have any mercy for me; or for him—but to hang him. They have no hearts, no feeling—you know, I might as well go out and beg the stones in the streets for mercy."

Selwood stood motionless. "He pulled a knife on me in that clunch tonight," he muttered.

Her plea was so swift. "He was thinking tonight—"

"He dragged Christie Eyer out of this hotel down to that—!" Words could convey no more of hateful, bitter anger than his words carried.

"He was drinking, John—drinking! And the others were going to burn the hotel—I was here, I know—and I went with her to protect her, John. I went with her! I'd have given up my life rather than she should come to harm. I thought of her, I thought of you—"

"My advice to you would be to let him hang."

She sprang up from her chair, and clasping one of her bony hands in the other, at the waist of her worn dress, stood, dry-eyed, before him. "John, listen! Have you never done things you wish you hadn't done?"

He snorted. "I hope they don't claim me with that—"

"You know what whisky will do to a man—"

"For God's sake, don't blame his meanness—on whisky—whisky's got enough to answer for!"

"I don't, I don't. I blame it on myself. When I should have told him that terrible night to do right, I told him to do wrong. Pity me! Have a little mercy for me, John. Think of the old padre whose picture you kept here on the wall so long—who has spent his life forgiving men, helping them. Oh, I'll pray that you find that padre, John. If he were here, he would ask you for the sake of Christ and His Mother to pity me tonight, to let Cliff go. Think of Christie, John. You love her, she loves you. Would you spare him if she asked you? I've told her all this. She's in my room bow down the hall. She'll beg for his life of you this moment if you'll let her—she told me she would. She has forgiven him. Oh, God!" Her words poured out in a torrent—low, tearless. She sank before him on her knees. "I'll do anything for you you could ask of a woman, John. I'll pray for you every day and night of my life. Have pity on me! Spare him to me for one more—just one more chance!"

She had caught his bandaged hand in her thin, knotted fingers and covered it with her forehead. He stood irresolute, wanting to pull it away and ashamed to—uncertainly listening and thinking. A long time he stood. Then, suddenly, his face darkened. He jerked himself angrily up.

"What do you want me to do?" He threw the words at her with a rude savagery that would have frightened another. But Margaret knew what his words meant. She scrambled to her feet and caught his hand again in her hands, and broke into a flood of tears. "Oh, I don't know. I don't know," she sobbed; then she lifted her streaming face with the tender confidence of a child. "You will know, John."

"Sit down," he snapped. She shrank away. From her chair she only looked her hope and her gratitude and watched anxiously the play of his features. Selwood with a vacant expression, took up from the table Scott's cigarette, put it between his lips, and slowly fell for a match.

"I'm doing something I don't approve of," he said sulkily. "Nobody else will approve of it, that's a clinch."

Commercial inquiries answered and information gladly furnished without cost. Address any firm above.

Assay Course Given
Golden.—A special six-weeks' course in assaying and surveying is being given at the Colorado School of Mines in connection with the annual summer session.

New Nebraska Line Planned
Denver.—A new transportation link, binding Denver with the rich trade territory of the North Platte valley, is being forged by the Union Pacific railroad.

Lives After Electric Shock.
Pueblo.—Though shocked and burned when a 6,000-volt electric current passed through his body, Adam Griesmer, Jr., Pueblo, is reported recovering at Minnequa hospital. Griesmer, an electrical worker, was struck down while walking under the high potential line at the steel works. He was unconscious eight hours before being revived.

Air Line to Grand Canon
Denver.—A new passenger-carrying air line, to be known as the scenic Airways, Inc., will be in operation soon over the Grand Canon of the Colorado and Mesa Verde national park, Charles Boettcher of Boettcher & Co., a prospective officer in the company, stated here recently. Two Ford all-metal trimotored planes, carrying ten passengers and two pilots, will be used.

America Plans to Be Rebuilt
New York.—The trans-Atlantic monoplane America, which during the reception to Commander Byrd and his associates lay dismantled and crated in the hold of the Leviathan, will have its day of glory in due time. John Gillespie, spokesman for the commander, announced here. The storm battered ship will be rebuilt, he explained, and placed on exhibition, probably in Central Park, New York City.

Cattle Receipts Increase at Denver
Denver.—Cattle receipts at the Denver stockyards for June showed an increase of 2.3 per cent over the same month last year, reports compiled by the John Clay Co. show. Last month 23,322 cattle were received at the stockyards, compared to 22,780 in June last year. Decreases of 2 per cent for Omaha, 1.5 per cent for Kansas City and less than 1 per cent for St. Joseph, Mo., were reported.

UNITED STATES FARMERS INCOMES DROP 5 PER CENT
Washington.—Farmers had a gross income of $12,682,000,000 for the crop year ended June 30, a decrease of 5 per cent from the previous year, the agriculture department announced here a few days ago. The decline was attributed to lower cotton prices and smaller returns on feed grains, apples and potatoes. The net income of farmers was placed at $2,440,000,000 after deducting expenses; compared with $2,682,000,000 in 1926. Expenses of production increased only 2 per cent, while the net income decreased about 20 per cent. Of the gross income, $9,549,000,000 was computed as cash income from sales and $2,531,000,000 as the value of food and fuel consumed on farms. Cash from sales included $3,774,000,000 for dairy and poultry products, $3,322,000,000 for meat animals, $1,511,000,000 for fruits and vegetables, $1,448,000,000 for grains and $1,291,000,000 for cotton and cotton seed.

Grafting Process to Reduce Rubber Cost
New York.—A system of bud grafting, following principles laid down by Luther Burbank, is now being tried in the Dutch East Indies. It may reduce the cost of crude rubber delivered in New York from the present 26 cents a pound to less than 10 cents. Frank R. Hildebrand, president of the New York Rubber exchange, is stated in an interview with the New York Herald-Tribune.

"Spare Him to Me for One More—Just One More Chance!"

promised her his life—but I've been just blamed fool enough to do it—that's all. And—he spoke low and with stubborn intoning—"when I make a promise, I don't allow any man to interfere. To begin with, Starbuck is my own personal prisoner. I want to get him away without hurting some people's feelings—you can understand that. Will you help?"

"Well," he continued, as he listened to their protests of loyalty with an ungrudging assent. "I thought maybe you would. Now call in Meg."

Scott opened the door, and Margaret Hyde, looking questioningly from one to the other, as if to read her fate in their eyes, stepped inside, and the door was closed behind her. Selwood spoke again. "Starbuck and Big Haynes," he said to her, "are tied up and locked in the harness-room at the barn. Lefever's men are guarding them. I'll go down with you all and take care of Lefever. He'll call off his men and leave me to look after my prisoner. Bob, you cut Starbuck loose. McAlpin, you have horses saddled at the back door of the barn, and Bob will ride with Meg and him to the east end of town. Nobody," he spoke now to Margaret Hyde, "will bother you beyond that. Keep out of the way of travel and of our men, but get east as fast as you can. If you can get to Medicine Bend, you'll be all right—nobody there to bother. But between here and there you'll have to look out. Any of our boys or the Vigilantes will shoot him on sight. Leave the horses at Medicine Bend in our barn—Well, I guess that's all."

Under one pretext or another, Lefever, amenable to Selwood's plea for Meg Hyde, who, for Lefever, had never refused to take care of a sick teamster, got rid of the guards. It was more trouble for Lefever to dispose of the remainder of his fighting men, but on the strength of burning rumors, in the invention of which the wagon boss easily excelled, the men were sent on various but pressing wild goose chases, and Selwood's way was cleared.

Addition to List of Fruits Without Seeds

There have long been seedless oranges, lemons and grapefruit, and now there are seedless apples.

A seedless fruit does not propagate its own species. It grafts itself on branches grown from fruit with seeds. The seedy mother provides the fecundity; the seedless fruit gives the pulp and the flavor.

The idea of a seedless apple comes from the seedless orange of California, a freak of nature discovered over a hundred years ago. About 1820 a missionary of Bahia, Brazil, discovered a new kind of orange growing wild which contained seeds of propagation yet in its own body, but in a little sac at the top. He sent 12 of the trees to the United States, and although they did not live long, others were budded from them, and are budding still.

A Mrs. Eliza Tibbets gave us Washington Navela oranges without seeds. One of the trees she planted in 1873 is still alive and producing good fruit.

Next in favor come Valencia, with about a seed apiece. It is as well they retain it, for California grows most of the best oranges of the world, and if there were no seeds there would soon be no oranges.

Napoleon Rude to Women

Seeing that the emperor was inclined to be talkative (1815, after the return from Elba), I told him that in general women did not like him because he did not bother to be agreeable to them; although they influenced the minds of men far more than he perhaps realized.

Napoleon laughed and said: "Do you think the empire ought to fall into the hands of the women? When I compliment them on their appearance, or tell them they are not becomingly gowned, what more can I say? I have other things to think about. They have changed beyond recognition since I have been away. Now they all talk politics, whereas before they talked about clothes."—From the Memoirs of Queen Hortense, in Bernes des Deux Mondes, Paris (Translated for the Kansas City Star).

Mrs. Eliza Tibbets, go further west than they are accustomed—Napoleon.

Telephone on Organ

The organ at the Liverpool (England) cathedral is equipped with a complete telephone system. The instrument is so vast that, when the toners are at work, 17 telephones are required in order that those engaged on outlying parts of the organ may communicate with the main manipulator in the neighborhood.

"So I Talked to Him."

PASTED FEATHER SKULLCAPS AND HANDPAINTED FROCKS

AND now it's the feather toque or skullcap, more properly named, which is the newest star in the millinery firmament.

picturesque. Catch a fleeting glimpse of one of these new pastel feather toques as worn with fluttering garden party frocks of flowery print and—well it's a woman's privilege to change her mind.

There's another number on the mid-summer millinery program which is eliciting much favor. It is the Agnes toque of white violets—so called because of the artist modiste who created it.

This white violet chapeau lends itself beautifully to the season's all-white ensembles which are so def-center figure in this picture, is hand painted, showing a nautical scene of a proud ship sailing over some very blue waves—all this in the name of fashion.

It is really quite exciting the way white sails speed over wild waves pictured with paint and brush, across the ends of one's scarf, or perhaps upon the front of one's blouse, or on one's necktie or kerchief square for the neck.

Considering the vogue for hand-painted apparel, it behooves the artist, either amateur or otherwise, to lose no time in getting out palette and brush preparatory to taking up the fascinating pastime of embellishing frock, blouse, smock, coolie coat, hat and also parasol with wonderful birds of para-ately representative of the present season's fashions. Speaking of the modern new feather turbans, as shown at the top in this picture, they apparently are the prototype to a coming vogue for feather millinery.

Then, too, scores of little jaunty hats have their colour diversified by conspicuous feather side-trims of the shaving brush type. Women always like this type of trimming, for not only does it "carry style" in the truest sense of the word, but it is very becoming to the woman. If you dise, or exotic flowers, or if your taste runs that way, flamboyant modernistic motifs. And would you believe it, some modern maidens there are who, doing so unique and pretty underthings, are decorating their step-ins and their nightgowns with butterflies, birds and flowers.

If there is one place more than another where bizarre hand painting finds placement it is on the back of one's coolie coat, which, by the way, is extremely popular either for board or beach. Students at the art schools, too—what delight they are taking in wearing coolie coats which are enlivened with gay paintings of a chinoise. The picture shows two such pretty coats adorned in this way.

Now that wide ribbons trim so many hats, they are frequently hand painted with garlands of flowers or quaint figures. It is also quite the fashion to paint directly on the straw, felt or seersucker visor hat.

Lesson for August 7 DAVID SPARES SAUL

LESSON TEXT—1 Sam., chap. 24. GOLDEN TEXT—Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good. PRIMARY TOPIC—David's Kindness to His Enemy. JUNIOR TOPIC—David Shows Mercy. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How to Treat Those Who Wrong Us. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Overcoming Evil With Good.

1. Saul in Pursuit of David (vv. 1-3). Ever since David took his departure from Jonathan (ch. 20), when that crowning act of friendship was shown, Saul had been hunting him as a wild animal. He now pursues him with 3,000 chosen men. David flees from place to place and is in hiding as an outlaw. Sometimes he is in the enemy's country doing disreputable things. This is the period of his schooling, which fitted him to be the future eminent king. It was a bitter period in his life, but God sent him to this school, and adapted the instruction to his needs. David could never have been the broad man that he was had he not been prepared in this crucible of bitter experience. He learned many lessons, among which may be mentioned:

1. His own weakness. It was necessary that he be humbled under the sense of his infirmities. Before any one is fit to be raised to a position of prominence he must be made to know his limitations and weaknesses. Unless a man has learned this lesson, sudden elevation to power will utterly ruin him.

2. His dependence upon God. David's many miraculous escapes caused him to realize that the Lord had redeemed him out of his adversity.

3. He learned the country and people over which he was to rule. By knowing the grievous afflictions which Saul had heaped upon the people, he could sympathize and remove them.

4. He learned the magnanimity of self-control. This a man must know before he can be a true king. He that ruleth his spirit is better than he that taketh a city (Prov. 10:32).

1. Saul in David's Hands (vv. 4-20). 1. David sends out spies (v. 4). This he did to find out whether Saul was come in very deed.

2. David in Saul's camp (vv. 5-11). He took with him Abishai and went in the night to where Saul was sleeping. Abishai asked to be allowed to kill Saul, but David forbade him because Saul was the Lord's anointed.

3. David takes Saul's spear and cruse of water (vv. 12, 13). Once before at Engedi (chap. 24) David spared Saul's life. Now again he was at his mercy. This David did that he might show tangible evidence to the king that he had no evil intent.

4. David taunts Abner, the king's bodyguard (vv. 14-16). He calls to Abner and taunts him for his listlessness—his failure to watch over the Lord's anointed, the evidence of which is the cruse and spear in his hands.

5. David reasons with Saul (vv. 17-20). David reasoned with Saul, showing that he had nothing but good intentions toward the king. He asked that he would show what wrong he had done, or what evil intent was in his heart. If the Lord was directing Saul he was willing to appease His wrath with an offering. If Saul was only hunting him because wicked men were urging him, a curse should be pronounced upon them. David is very humble and begs Saul to relent, for surely if he had any wicked purpose he would not have saved his life twice when the Lord had placed Saul wholly at his mercy. David recognized the fact that the Lord had delivered Saul into his hands not to kill, but to save. He did not kill, neither did he allow his servants to kill.

1. Saul's Confession (vv. 21-25). 1. He confessed that he had sinned. The sad feature about his confession is that it lacked conviction, for he went right on sinning.

2. He confessed that he had played the fool and erred exceedingly. We see about us daily many using such expressions, but still they go on repeating their sins. David shows his magnanimity of spirit, however, in delivering the cruse and spear to Saul's servant. He knew that Saul's confession was not genuine, so he was afraid to go near. He still appeals to Saul's kindness to him, and they part never to meet again.

Praying "It is better to do a little with prayer and in the Spirit than to be busy with many things in your own strength."

If you are planning to trade-in your present car for a new car, remember these facts:

- 1 When you trade-in your used car for a new car, you are after all making a purchase, not a sale. You are simply applying your present car as a credit toward the purchase price of the new car.
2 Your used car has only one fundamental basis of value; i. e., what the dealer who accepts it in trade can get for it in the used car market.
3 Your used car has seemingly different values because competitive dealers are bidding to sell you a new car.
4 The largest allowance is not necessarily the best deal for you. Sometimes it is; sometimes it is not.
5 An excessive allowance may mean that you are paying an excessive price for the new car in comparison with its real value.
6 First judge the merits of the new car in comparison with its price, including all delivery and finance charges. Then weigh any difference in allowance offered on your used car.

Report from General Land Office at Santa Fe

The amount of business handled by this office during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1927, shows a substantial increase over that of for the preceding fiscal year.

The total number of applications for all classes filed during the year was 2025 while the total for the preceding year was 1490. New applications filed during the year were as follows:

Homestead entries	885
Oil & gas permits	905
Coal permits and leases	53
Small Holding Claims	54
Applications to purchase	34
State selections	29
Isolated tracts	30
Potash Permits	8
Miscellaneous	24

Total 2025

During the year there was received 1095 patents covering 330,667 acres and in the previous year 863 patents were issued, covering 227,379 acres. This does not include patents issued for State or Railroad lands or Indian allotments, so it will be noted that a considerable area has been added to the taxable lands of the State.

A total of 721 final proofs for entries under the public land laws was submitted during the year, and 7769 miscellaneous letters were received and answered. The total number of letters written during the fiscal year was 16,820. 463 permits to prospect for oil and gas were granted and delivered.

There has also been a marked increase in the receipts and earnings of the office—the former showing an increase over 1926 of $10,580 and the latter $3,943.

The total expense of maintaining the office averages a little less than $1300 per month.

A large number of small holding applications were filed as well as applications to purchase under the Act of Congress approved June 8, 1926, which is a modification of the original Small Holding Claims Act. Proofs required for this class of claims are extremely difficult, much more so than for proofs under the various homestead Acts, for, whereas, under the homestead law the entryman needs only to show compliance with the requirements of law for a period of three years, the claimant under said small holding and purchase acts must show continuous, bona fide, adverse possession for a period of 20 years, prior to the survey of the lands. Proofs for practically all of this class of claims are taken at this office because of the necessity of securing full and complete showing of all the necessary facts covering a period of many years and because few if any of the claimants can speak or understand the English language sufficiently to go before an outside officer to have their proofs taken. This is practically the only office in the United States having this class of business and while it makes up a very large part of the work of the office, it produces no revenue as under the law no fees are attached to

GENUINE NAVAJO INDIAN RUGS

AN UNUSUAL GIFT WHICH WILL LAST A LIFETIME

The Rugs of the Navajo Indians are unlike any other rugs ever produced, as art of weaving has been brought to a perfection with this tribe of the Southwest. The designs are of their own figures and symbols, and are seen nowhere else. These Rugs are of a texture and quality that will outlast Oriental Rugs. The wool used is sheared from live sheep, which insures strength and firmness. They will wear a lifetime and becomes heir looms. The time is not far distant when genuine Navajo Rugs will no longer be woven, as the old Squaws who do this work are getting fewer, and the present generation does not take up the work. For this reason, the rugs now on the market are much sought after by lovers of Indian Relics.

Outlook Art & Gift Shop

There has been considerable activity towards the development of oil and gas on government lands within this district. During the year a total of 908 applications for oil and gas prospecting permits have been filed and during the same period the Secretary of the Interior issued 466 prospecting permits. While at the present time there is only one producing well in this district located upon land in a government prospecting permit, drilling is now being done upon a considerable number of permits.

During the year plats of survey and resurvey involving lands in 43 townships have been filed and there has also been a considerable area restored to the public domain from stock driveways or other forms of withdrawals so that the total area of unappropriated and unreserved lands available for entry has been largely increased.

The total area of unappropriated and unreserved lands within the Santa Fe district on June 30, 1927, was 4,965,853 acres of which 4,740,924 acres is surveyed and approximately 254,445 unsurveyed.

This age finds Camel worthy of leadership

THE people of this modern, busy age are always anxious to recognize quality, and they have placed Camel first among cigarettes.

Modern smokers have an experienced taste that quickly learns to know good tobaccos. Camel is their favorite, because they recognize in it the choicest tobacco grown, blended to bring out their exquisite taste and fragrance.

Camel has won its way to the top in the hardest-to-please age ever known because it has the qualities of goodness that make smoking a pleasure. You will revel in the enjoyment of these cigarettes. No better smoke can be made.

Cattle & Horse Growers' Association Will Meet

Albuquerque, Aug. 4—The announcement that the executive board meeting of The New Mexico Cattle and Horse Growers' Association would be held at Deming, N. M., August 12, has been the occasion of the receipt of several letters in the office of the association telling of the meeting in Deming when the association was organized at that place, under the name of the Southwestern New Mexico Cattlemen's Association, in 1914.

The Deming Chamber of Commerce has arranged to hold the meeting at the Deming Club rooms and the interest being shown indicates a large attendance of livestock men. Many of the original members of the association which has since been changed to The New Mexico Cattle and Horse Growers' Association will attend.

The association points with a great deal of pride to the growth and accomplishments of the association since its organization. The cattlemen have been represented at the Legislatures; committees have met with the State Tax Commission where tax valuations have been adjusted; state land, forest service and public land questions have been looked after; an attorney of the association assists in the prosecution of cattle thieves stealing from its members; and many minor problems have been taken care of.

Problems at the present time taking the attention of the cattlemen are freight rates; bedding charges; and the value of co-operative marketing associations. The prosecution of cattle thieves is always a major question, and one that is always before the association.

The activities of the association show beyond all doubt the necessity of organization among cattlemen.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Mr. Hoover Offers Flood Relief and Control Plan to President.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD
FLOOD relief and control work by congress, covering a period of ten years and costing more than $100,000,000 is recommended by Secretary of Commerce Hoover in the comprehensive report on the Mississippi valley disaster of this year which he laid before President Coolidge at the summer White House. His control project, besides providing for taking over and improving the levee system, embraces a plan for completion of the navigation program of the Mississippi and its main tributaries which he says can be carried out at an additional cost of fifteen to twenty millions a year.

Mr. Hoover declared that the flood control program must embrace the following principles:

1. Higher and consequently wider levees and the extension of federal responsibility for levees in some of the tributaries.
2. A safety valve upon the levee system by the provision of a spillway or by-pass to the gulf to protect New Orleans and southern Louisiana—most probably the Atchafalaya river for this purpose.
3. For further safety measures the engineers are examining the possible extension of the by-pass to the northward from the Atchafalaya toward the Arkansas, the possible erection of emergency food basins, and the possibility of store in the tributaries.

Concerning the relief work Mr. Hoover said in part:

"The financial situation on relief is that we can complete all these programs—seed, food, feed, furniture, animals, house construction, sanitation. By the first of November we estimate we shall have spent $15,400,000 Red Cross funds, $7,000,000 federal and supplies from the equipment government, $3,000,000 free railway transportation, and provided $1,100,000 for county health cleanup units. We should have left $3,000,000 from the $18,800,000 subscribed to the Red Cross with which to face continued necessities after November 1. It is impossible to determine what the necessities will be after that date."

A NOTHER caller on the President was Senator Smoot, chairman of the senate finance committee, who presented his plan for tax reduction. This program is based on a tax cut of $800,000,000 and includes the following items:

- Reduction of the corporation tax from 15 to 12 per cent, totaling off $150,000,000 annual revenue.
- Mitigation of taxes on admissions and club dues, cutting the nation's income $67,000,000 yearly.
- Reduction of tax on passenger automobiles from 2 per cent to 1 1/2 per cent, costing $60,000,000.
- Graduated scale reduction on incomes between $15,000, and $60,000.

MICHAEL, a golden-haired child not yet six years old, is now king of Rumania, for the picturesque King Ferdinand succumbed on July 20 to the malarial fever that made his death imminent for many months. Until the new monarch reaches his eighteenth year the country will be ruled by a regency comprised of his uncle, Prince Nicholas, Mirza Cristea, patriarch of the Rumanian orthodox church, and Judge Buzdugan of the supreme court.

In announcing the death of Ferdinand the government issued an official statement saying it will not waver from the decision of the crown council on January 4, 1928, at which Prince Carol was disinherited and Prince Michael, his son, proclaimed crown prince, and that the government will support the regency, and "if necessary, resort to arms to prevent the reinstatement of Carol."

The commander of the second army corps, stationed in Bucharest, issued a statement indicating the country that the state of siege continues, and warning newspaper men that if they spread false alarms they will be liable to court-martial.

Prince Carol, at his home of exile in Neuilly, near Paris, received word of his father's demise and at once concluded himself, sending word to the press that he expected to be recalled to Rumania and calling himself "king."

Ferdinand's last words, as he died in the arms of Queen Marie, were: "I am feeling tired." His body lay in state in Cotroceni palace outside Bucharest until Saturday, when the state funeral was held. Then the casket was placed in the family vaults at the monastery of Curtea Arges.

Premier Bratianu took strong measures to prevent any uprising, public buildings and strategic points being occupied by troops and meetings being forbidden. Queen Marie received messages of condolence from all over the world, including one from President and Mrs. Coolidge, and the British and Belgian courts went into mourning.

TAKING advantage of a strike of protest ordered by Vienna Socialists because of the acquittal of some Fascist slayers, the communist agitators there tried to get control of the city and set up a soviet government. Mobs, stirred to riot, marched through the city, looting public buildings and burning the palace of justice, and fighting the police fiercely. The local contingents of troops were disinclined to fire on the crowds, so the Sepsel government called in troops from provincial garrisons. These, with the help of the Social Democrats, soon gained control of the situation, and the civil war which the communists were trying to stir up was averted.

The strike had stopped all transportation, and threats were received from Italy that if Italian troops were not permitted to pass through the country, troops would be sent into the Austrian Tyrol, occupying the railroad line up to the German border. The government of Austria threatened to take radical steps to end the strike, and the nationalist villages, the anti-socialist peasantry and the loyal Helmswehr or home guards gave Premier Seipel full support. So the labor unions and Socialists of Vienna yielded and the strike was called off.

The hurry, however, was costly to Austria in several ways. During the rioting scores of persons were killed and hundreds wounded; the destruction of property was great, and in the burning of the palace of justice all the nation's financial records were lost. The government was fearful lest the disturbances might keep many tourists away from Vienna.

DOWN in Nicaragua one rebel leader, General Sandino, refused to submit to the peace terms imposed by the United States, and last week he led his brigand band of 500 in attacking a small detachment of American marines and native constabulary at Ocotal. Capt. G. D. Hatfield was in command and his little force fought back desperately. Marine scouting planes carried word of the battle to Managua and five bombing planes commanded by Maj. Ross E. Rowell flew to the rescue through a severe tropical storm. With bombs and machine guns they speedily routed the rebels, of whom about 800 were killed. The marines lost only one man, Sandino, still defiant, fled to the mountains and a column of troops was sent out with orders to get him.

Delegates to the fifth congress of the Pan-American Federation of Labor, in session in Washington, denounced this killing of Nicaraguan citizens, and President William Green of the American Federation of Labor, who presided at the opening of the congress, sharply denounced American intervention in the domestic affairs of Latin American countries and wrote a letter of protest to Secretary of State Kellogg. In reply Mr. Kellogg warmly defended the action of the marines, and set forth clearly the conditions in Nicaragua which had resulted in the outlawing of Sandino, who had neither the support nor the approval of any of the leaders of the political parties in Nicaragua. The resolutions committee of the Pan-American labor congress adopted a resolution asking the immediate withdrawal of American troops from Nicaragua.

Integrator General Fland, commanding the marines in Nicaragua, has recommended that the distinguished service medal be awarded Major Rowell, who, he says, saved the little garrison at Ocotal from great loss of life and almost certain destruction.

GREAT BRITAIN and Japan reached some sort of accord on the cruiser question in the conference at Geneva and the plan was presented to the Americans, who did not seem especially pleased with it. Then the British government called Viscount Cecil and W. C. Bridgeman to London for consultation with the cabinet, and at once there were reports that the conference was on the verge of a breakdown. This was strongly denied in London, where a foreign office spokesman asserted that the hope for an agreement was stronger than at any time since the conference began. The Japanese delegates in Geneva also were optimistic, predicting that an agreement would be reached by the middle of August. The British before leaving Geneva had consented to reduce their demands for cruisers and destroyers from 300,000 tons to 500,000 tons, as insisted upon by the Japanese, and hoped this would induce the Americans to agree to bar eight-inch guns on all but 10,000-ton cruisers; but Mr. Gibson would not surrender this point.

FIVE transatlantic flyers—Byrd, A. Noville, Acosta, Balchen and Chamberlain—returned to the United States by steamer and were given New York's usual racy reception, with parade, paper confetti, banquets and medals. The two first were awarded the navy's distinguished flying cross. Lieutenants Mallard and Hegenberger, who flew to Honolulu, had a triumphant trip across the country on their way to Washington, where Secretary of State Kellogg and other government officials greeted them warmly. They, too, will receive the distinguished flying cross when President Coolidge returns to the capital.

Colonel Lindbergh picked up his "Spirit of St. Louis" at Mitchell field, New York, and started on a tour of the country to tell the people of the advance of aviation and the needs of more and larger airports. His first stop was at Hartford, Conn., where he spoke at the Hartford club.

Capt. F. T. Courtney, British aviator, was all ready for his attempted flight from England to America, with a stop at Valencia, Ireland, but was delayed by unfavorable weather. He was to carry a crew of two men and intended to fly from the Irish town direct to Newfoundland.

JACK DEMPSEY, former heavyweight champion, "came back" in the fight with Jack Sharkey in New York and won the right to challenge Gene Tunney for the title. He knocked out the Boston lad in the seventh round with a hard left hook to the jaw. The battle was lively and aroused the enthusiasm of 85,000 persons who were present. Sharkey claimed that he was fouled in the final round, but this was denied by Dempsey and by Referee O'Sullivan.

IOWA'S Lowden-for-President club announces that more than 100,000 persons in that state have signed the petition asking Frank O. Lowden to seek the Republican Presidential nomination and pledging him their support. Among the signers are Gov. John Hammill and more than 90 per cent of the employees in the Iowa state capitol building. Action of the governor in signing the petition nullified the hopes of his friends that Mr. Hammill, who, like Mr. Lowden, has been a leader in the farm relief fight, might become a vice presidential candidate next year on a Coolidge ticket.

SHY DOODLE BUGS

"Daddy," said Nancy, in a pleading tone, "tell us a story about some new bug."

"Well," answered Daddy, "how about the spider?"

"Oh, dear, no," laughed Nick and Nancy together, "we know all about spiders!"

Daddy smiled and said:

"I'm sure now that you've never heard about the doodle bugs, for they are very shy bugs, and very few people ever see them."

"Do tell us about them!" said Nancy. "I've never even heard of a doodle bug."

"The doodle bug," commenced Daddy, "is a little gray bug with sharp, beady black eyes.

"He is so gray that his back almost looks fuzzy. The doodle bugs always have their homes in the ground—usually in as sandy a place as they can find.

"I suppose they have their homes in the ground because they are afraid that the storms may blow over their homes or that people might walk over them as they do over the homes of ants.

"The doodle bugs like to be alone most of the time. Neither do they like to come out of their homes, for they're so used to the underground world that the light above hurts their eyes.

"Sometimes, however, the little ants give a party and invite the doodle bugs to it.

"Now, the ants are the only playmates the doodle bugs like, but the ants have to beg hard before the

One of the most interesting and yet one of the simplest new products in the food field is called minute jelly. It is pure fruit or berry juice already boiled down and concentrated. To this concentrated juice, fruit pectin in the right amount, has been added. The pectin is that part of fruit which makes jelly "jelly." It is as pure and wholesome as the fruit juice.

To make the jelly take the little bottle of concentrated juice, pour in a sauce pan, add water and sugar according to directions on the bottle and boil a few minutes. Then pour into jelly glasses and when it has become cold you have the most delicious pure fruit jelly you ever tasted.

A few bottles kept on hand, selected according to your taste for jellies, and you can make up a few glasses just as you want it. One small bottle makes two glasses of jelly. If you wish to try two bottles send us twenty-five cents and we will give you your choice of grape, mint, pineapple, orange, raspberry, strawberry or blackberry. Or four bottles—all different—for fifty cents. Address Department WU, General Packing Corp., Cranford, New Jersey—Adv.

Amsterdam Jews Hold High Municipal Posts

Holland is the ghetto of western Europe. Latest figures show 115,228 Jews living there—54,691 men and 60,537 women. Amsterdam was the first Dutch town in which the Jews settled and its Jewish community today is famous the world over. Rotterdam, The Hague, Utrecht and other places also have important Jewish quarters. In Amsterdam, however, the Jews hold an extraordinarily prominent position. Three of the six sheriffs are Jewish, as is a heavy representation in the municipal council. Parliament has many of them, including Henri Polak, leader of the Socialist party and president of the Diamond Workers' federation. State Councillors Visser and Limburg, who formed an extra-parliamentary cabinet in 1926, are both Jews. A portion of the Jews are of Spanish and Portuguese origin, their ancestors having come when the Dutch republic freed itself from Spanish tyranny in the sixteenth century.—Chicago Daily News.

WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE

Praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Mrs. Annie Kwinski of 536 1st Avenue, Milwaukee, Wis., writes that she became so weak and run-down that she was not able to do her housework. She says the name Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in the paper and said to her husband, "I will try that medicine and see if it will help me." She says she took six bottles and is feeling much better.

Mrs. Mattie Adams, who lives in Downing Street, Brenton, Ala., writes as follows: "A friend recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and since taking it I feel like a different woman."

With her children grown up, the middle-aged woman finds time to do the things she never had time to do before—read the new books, see the new plays, enjoy her grand-children, take an active part in church and civic affairs. Far from being pushed aside by the younger set, she finds a full, rich life of her own. That is, if her health is good.

Thousands of women past fifty say they owe their vigor and health to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and are recommending it to their friends and neighbors.

The Pay Streak

By EVELYN GAGE BROWNE

THERE'S a pay streak that's big In great and in small; You've just got to dig To find it—that's all.

But there's one thing true, That pay streak of gold, Is somewhere in YOU, To have and to hold.

So dig!—for you're bound To find it in YOU, And then when it's found, Make use of it, too.

And believe in YOURSELF! For the pay streak that's there, It laid on the shelf, Will get you nowhere.

Then whatever you do, Don't ever forget— That the pay streak in YOU, May be the BEST YET.

For the richest find That the world has known, May be just the kind That's in YOU ALONE!

Mother's Cook Book

These are the things I prize And hold of dearest worth, Light of the sapphire skies, Peace of the silent hills, Shelter of woods and comfort of the stars, Music of birds, murmur of little hills, Shadow of clouds that swiftly pass, And after showers, the smell of flowers And of the good brown earth And best of all, along the way friendship and mirth. —Henry VanDyke.

CHOICE DISHES

HERE is something nice to dress up ice cream on occasion: Japanese Suya for Sundae. Take two ounces each of dates, figs and raisins, pecans and almonds and one-fourth cupful of maple syrup and one cupful of marshmallow paste. Chop all the fruit and nuts, blanching the almonds. Mix all the ingredients and let stand overnight. Serve over any kind of ice cream.

Cream of Asparagus Soup.

Take one-half cupful of cooked asparagus, one-half cupful of the liquor in which it was cooked, one and one-half cupfuls of milk and two tablespoonfuls each of butter and flour to bind. Serve well seasoned with salt and pepper to taste. The asparagus should be put through a puree sieve.

Sallebury Steak.

This is best made from the trimmings of beef tenderloin; however, the top of the round is often used. Put the meat through the finest cutter. For each pound of meat take one-fourth pound of beef marrow, crush the marrow and mix it evenly through the meat. Then for each pound of the meat work in one-half cupful of cold water. Press into a shape not too compactly, keeping the edge as thick as the center, so that it will cook evenly. Broil over coals or in a gas range. Let the meat cook on one side until a drop of meat juice appears on the top, then turn to cook on the other side. Season well with salt, pepper and butter. Serve with French fried potatoes.

Eggs a la King.

Take six hard-cooked eggs and one-half cupful of finely minced chicken or ham, one and one-half cupfuls of medium white sauce, two tablespoonfuls of shredded pimento. Prepare the white sauce, to this add one-half of a green pepper chopped, and the shredded pimento. Cut eggs in halves lengthwise, remove the yolk, mash, season and add the minced chicken; refill the egg white, piling the mixture high. It may be forced from a pastry bag. Place the stuffed eggs on a platter and pour the hot sauce over them. Serve at once.

WHEN I WAS TWENTY-ONE

By JOSEPH KAYE

At 21—Rudolph Friml Had Abandoned His Ambition to Be a Barber.

AT THE age of twenty-one I was in America, touring with Kubelik, the famous violinist, as a concert pianist. By that time I had settled resolutely into a musical career. Profoundly music was the subject I most pursued. My parents, in Bohemia, made me take up piano study and even they got the idea in an indirect way.

It happened that my father was very fond of the harmonica and one winter's day he went into town from the village where we lived, to buy a load of coal for the stove in our cottage. While he was there he cast his eye upon an old piano in a store window and calmly went in and bought it—with the money he should have spent on the coal.

There was music when my father arrived home, but the piano remained and so, to get some use out of it, my mother arranged that I should be given music lessons.

After this I resorted to everything I could think of to get out of piano playing. First, I was determined to be a car conductor, which seemed to be a more manly business; then, when that failed to move my parents, I told them I wanted to be a barber, being fascinated by the various perfumes that emanated from the shop of our local hairdresser.

Nothing prevailed, however, and I was forced to make such good progress at the piano that I was sent to the Prague Conservatory of Music, where I at once struck up a close friendship with Knubelik, primarily because we were both woefully thin—so thin that the military authorities gladly excused us from service.—Rudolph Friml.

TODAY—Rudolph Friml is the successor to Victor Herbert in the field of operetta. Never overfond of the life of a professional pianist, Friml gravitated, when he found himself in the gay atmosphere of Broadway, into writing operettas. His first, "The Firefly," scored a great success, and he has been writing successes ever since. His "Rose-Marie" was one of the biggest musical hits in years. (E. by Western Newspaper Union.)

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

By F. A. WALKER

VIBRATIONS

A WESTERN inventor announces that he has perfected a machine which he calls an "oscillophore" by means of which he claims to be able to "group the electronic vibrations" of human beings and by them detect any number of things.

He says he can determine age, race, sex, ancestry and personal characteristics and generally pry into things which a good many of us go to some pains to keep to ourselves.

Another, or it may be the same inventor, alleges that by a study of the vibrations emanating from the human body he can detect the approach of diseases, external symptoms of which have not yet appeared, and that by treatment of these incipient conditions further development may be arrested.

The real value of these inventions has not been established to the point of general recognition; but fanciful as they seem they may have in them the germ of real merit.

Whether each human body has a characteristic vibration all its own may be questionable, but it is certain that a thousand other creations have this very thing and that we recognize it.

Light, heat, sound and electricity all have established vibrations. We know and recognize them and we differentiate between the different varieties of these demonstrations of energy by the wave lengths of their vibrations.

The idea is only another name for the vibratory motions of the waters of the seas.

The falling rain is one phase of the vibration of moisture between the earth and the clouds, rising by evaporation, falling by the force of gravity. The action of the heart and the flow of the blood through the arteries and veins is pulsating, which is another way of saying that it is vibratory.

Vibration is the essential principle of a thousand and one of the mechanical devices without which modern life would be impossible.

Were all vibrations to stop the world itself would halt and the whole universe perhaps go totally awry.

We smile at the idea that a man can tell by a mechanical contrivance whether or not we are honest and truthful, but it may be that the emotions and the desires are, after all, mysterious demonstrations of vibratory energy about which we are shortly to learn something hitherto unknown.

No deliver in science was ever smiled at more universally than was the Englishman, William Harvey, when he announced his discovery that the blood of the body circulated in a steady stream from one side of the heart through the arteries and veins back to the other side of the wonderful pumping machinery which maintains life.

It may be that thought itself is made up of vibrations, that memory is a strange and unexplained form of stored-up energy giving off its emanations when we will it to do so.

The western man who has announced his discoveries may yet take his place among the pioneers of an entirely new science, a new knowledge which will be the means by which we shall come to really know ourselves. (E. by Western Newspaper Union.)

How Silly Grownups Puzzle Small Boys

"Children are inclined to take things very literally," remarked Anne Wheeler, the settlement worker. "Take for instance the case of little Billy. His father had brought home a big box of candy but the child had been told by his mother that he must never eat candy without her permission.

"When a guest tried to make the little fellow take some," he said, "he must ask my muddle," and started off for where she was, over half a mile away.

"But," said the guest, "why not ask your father? He's right out here on the porch."

To which Billy replied with indignation: "Don't you know me fuddle isn't me muddle?"

Aching, Swollen Feet

Money Book If Emerald Oil Doesn't Do Away With All Soreness, Swelling and Distress in 24 Hours. One Bottle Prevails.

No sensible person will continue to suffer from those intense agonizing throbbing foot pains when every well stocked drug store has Moon's Emerald Oil and sells it with an absolute guarantee of satisfaction or money back.

Your feet may be so swollen and inflamed that you think you can't go another step. Your shoes may feel as if they are cutting right into the flesh. You feel sick all over with the pain and torture and pray for quick relief. What's to be done? Two or three applications of Moon's Emerald Oil and in fifteen minutes the pain and soreness disappears. A few more applications at regular intervals and the swelling is reduced.

And best of all any offensive odor is gone for good—it's a wonderful formula—this combination of essential oils with camphor and other antiseptics so marvelous that thousands of bottles are sold annually for reducing varicose or swollen veins.

Bird of Great Strength

Hunters near Killdeer, N. D., noticed a bald eagle acting queerly and shot it. They found one of its legs held in a coyote trap to which another trap had been caught by a piece of wire. News of the incident disclosed the two traps had been set 150 miles apart. The eagle apparently pulled up both traps and carried them away. Then relentless men ended the uneven contest with a bullet.—Copper's Weekly.

Science Seeks Origin of Polynesian Races

The determined search of scientists for the answer to a great historic puzzle—the origin of the Polynesian races—is about to try a new channel. Edward W. Gifford, associate professor at the Museum of Anthropology in the University of California, has been added to the staff of the Bishop museum, Honolulu, for special race research in the Pacific. He will voyage to the Fiji Islands in a new effort to discover Polynesian traits, or remnants of them. The Bishop museum has been collecting a vast amount of material dealing with prehistoric days in the Pacific, and has sent a series of scientific expeditions into the South seas and to the Asian coast. A friendly working agreement has been reached with the government of Dutch East Indies for an investigation of early vestiges in the Dutch possessions. A large and well-equipped bureau of ethnology has been established there.

Libeled the Dead

Did you know there was a law against libeling the dead? A placard reading "Good Riddance of Bad Rubbish," was placed on a grave in a Los Angeles cemetery. Special Edition of The Alamogordo News

In one of the best, neatest and most professionally designed special editions we have ever seen issued by a country newspaper, the Alamogordo News of Thursday, July 23 was a credit to its town, county and to this section of the state, as a whole. It gave exhaustive accounts of the different industries in Otero county, such as its lumbering, quarrying, recreation, livestock, agricultural, as well as the industries of a local nature at Alamogordo and Tularosa. Special editions like this, not only should receive the praise of the home people, but the fact must be considered, that such undertakings which require pains and a great amount of work, speak well for local interests and are a great asset to surrounding localities. The edition abounded with vivid illustrations of the different industries and was something for Alamogordo, especially, to be proud of.

Judge W. A. Hawkins was a business visitor from the offices of the Southern Pacific Wednesday, transacting the same, and returning to the border yesterday morning.

Mr. and Mrs. Champ Ferguson, Jack Brazel and Wallace Ferguson were visitors from the Nogal-Mesa Wednesday, returning home in the evening. While in Carrizozo, Wallace purchased a new Chevrolet truck.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Ziegler will leave Sunday evening for the east. Mr. Ziegler to spend several weeks in making purchases for fall and winter goods for his store and Mrs. Ziegler to visit her daughter, Mrs. John Gutknecht, at her home in Chicago. It has been customary to make two eastern trips each year to visit the eastern markets and make his selections of goods suitable for his fast increasing trade and this time, Mrs. Ziegler will accompany him as far as Chicago, visit her daughter and be ready to return when Mr. Ziegler has transacted his business affairs.

Mrs. Juan Osorio and sons, Ernest and Florentino Lopez left Sunday morning on No. 11 for Los Angeles where they will visit for about three weeks with Mrs. Osorio's father, Mr. Frank Jaurigue and the Louis Vidaurri family.

CAPITAN NEW MEX.

From Cellar to House-top

The Albuquerque Journal says: "Within or less than three decades, the United States has emerged from the position respect to highways and has become the leader in road building."

The above statement by the esteemed New Mexico daily, is wonderfully true. Many of us coming of the automobile roads which are now smooth public highways, were nothing short of trails, and in bad weather, farmers and ranchmen would be compelled to remain at home, sometimes until their supplies were exhausted before they could venture into town, so tollsome and inconvenient was the effort.

Now for the change: Bad weather is now spoken of as a matter of fact and we welcome it in most cases, rather than to bemoan the fact of its visitation. Farmers and ranchmen reach towns and cities as well in one kind of weather as another, because there is no fear of bad roads to encounter. There is more to road building than the mere fact of construction, for without being properly maintained, our highways, without being graveled, surfaced and properly maintained, would avail but little for endurance, but this is being done more and more every year as the necessity is made apparent. This is not an advertisement for Ford, but the fact is undeniable, nevertheless, that good road building followed in the wake of the Ford automobile. We can all remember when one of these machines would come toddling over one of the old rough bog paths, it resembled a huge rubber ball bouncing its way along in its endeavor to get over the road.

Compare this condition with the present system of smooth highways and it can be seen, what a blessing we have at our doors in the way of good roads. People who once yelled, "graft," when taxes were levied for road purposes, are now more than willing to pay the same, because they see that the money is going to the best of use and they gladly welcome the tax. Tourist travel increases each year, production increases, more employment is had for our farmers and business greatly benefited. A hundred other things could be mentioned, which have been omitted and which have been
