

Railroad Rumbblings

Fireman and Mrs. J. L. Lee left yesterday morning on an extended tour of the east and Canada. Their trip will be lengthy and they will visit many places of interest, therefore, they will be absent about two months.

Trainman J. W. Vickory left yesterday morning on No. 2 for his old home in Ramsay, N. C., to pay a visit to his parents and will spend about 60 days with his folks and his old friends.

Trainman Tex Loughrey tells about a goof who used to get up early in the mornin' so he'd have more time to loaf.

Mrs. A. C. Hines and children came up from El Paso this week where they had been for several weeks, visiting friends and have returned home to make ready for school.

Conductor Pat Dolan says he's referred to statistics—and they show more people engaged in golfing at present than any other form of labor.

B. L. Stimmel is in receipt of a letter from his son, Lee in Los Angeles and among other things of interest, he says that he visited Earl Carl at the hospital and found him recovered to the extent that he was ready to leave the hospital and will be able to resume his work in a short time.

Conductor Hardin is now on the El Paso local.

A certain Trainman, who was then a stranger, accosted one of the most prominent Dispensers of Conversation Water we have in town, and asked him if he knew where a guy could get a drink. The said Dispenser, thinking that he was speaking to a prohibition officer, drawled "I dunno, but if you mosey down street, kinda easy-goin' like, you might run across a Bootlegger."

Frank Nowak of El Paso is the new temporary car inspector.

S. F. Miller was an El Paso business visitor, leaving on No. 1 Tuesday morning and returning on No. 12 that afternoon.

Roundhouse foreman and Mrs. J. E. Farley returned Sunday on No. 12 from Los Angeles, where they had been visiting their daughter, Mrs. I. D. Baker and family for two weeks.

Fireman Bert Holland tells that during and World War, a German band serenaded a gathering of the American Legion in New York City — it caused quite a riot, especially when they attempted "Die Wacht am Rhein."

The most miserly man that I know of, says Trainman Patrick Collins, is one who will stop the clock of nights to save the wearing out of the works.

Fireman Wayne Richard thinks that Trainman Collins' story is plausible, but he would like the readers' opinion of this one: A certain fellow decided his canary bird was eating too much — so he put the bird on a diet.

Mrs. D. A. Saunders, mother, Mrs. A. Shipman, daughter, Georgia and son, David, are here from El Paso visiting friends and will remain until tomorrow. Night Dispatcher Saunders at El Paso is setting chief dispatcher, relieving chief Harry Dixon and Geo. Young, who has been here for two weeks, will act in the capacity of night dispatcher for chief Saunders until chief Dixon's vacation is over, after which night chief Saunders will take his vacation.

More About the New Ford

Details of the new Ford car have been received by the Western Motors Co., Inc., agents. The report confirms a former with regard to the car having 4-wheel brakes, gear shift and being able to travel 70 miles an hour.

The motor is 34 horsepower, instead of 32 horsepower, the report states. The motor is dust-proof. All cables are encased. The report states that tests have shown the motor will run in any position and under the most severe climatic conditions. For example it has been run in an ice box with the temperature gradually dropped to 20 degrees below zero and in a furnace room with varying high degrees of heat.

The fan is 2-blade. The fan belt operates fan, water pump and generator.

The crankshaft is counter-balanced to reduce vibration.

The generator is an entirely new design of the dynamo type, similar to the dynamo used for electric power.

The car has an oil pump.

The report states "Tests have shown the new carburetor to give 30 miles and better on a gallon of gas. It must be borne in mind, that these tests might prove high as compared to public results."

The car has a Lincoln clutch in a smaller size.

The timing gears are a special composition with cotton as a chief material, and said to be tougher than steel.

The rear axle is banjo type, welded and seamless.

The springs are cross or transverse design. They have been flattened out and made longer with an extra leaf.

Wheel base is 4 inches longer than the old car. The car has wire wheels smaller than wheels on the old car.

Balloon tires.

The instrument board is fully equipped.

Fenders are crown type. Car is all-steel, streamline.

Mr. Burkett Will Continue Crystal Management

According to an agreement between the school board and Prof. J. C. Burkett, he will continue to manage the Crystal Theatre for the fall and winter seasons. This announcement will be glad news to the patrons of this popular resort and in return for the public confidence he wishes to thank the patrons for past favors of patronage and courtesy, promising to give the public the best pictures he can procure from such prominent film companies as Paramount, United Artists, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Universal, Film Booking Offices and Vitagraph. The Crystal begins the fall season with a good bill for next week which includes "The Bat," the serial story of which is now running in the Outlook, beginning with last week's issue.

Ft. Stanton Notes

W. S. Wunsch and mother of Topeka, Kansas have been visiting here for several days.

Miss Harris arrived Tuesday and reported to the O. T. Dept. for duty.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Pettit of Tulsa, Okla., arrived last week for a week's visit with Dr. and Mrs. Nesbit. They will leave this week for Los Angeles.

Mr. and Mrs. Howson gave a bridge party in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Pettit, Tuesday night.

Mrs. R. S. Faget gave a very interesting and delightful birthday party for her son, Max, last week-end. There were about 40 children present to celebrate his third birthday with honors of contests extended to Rod Tappan.

Dr. Sprague, who has been confined to his home for a few weeks is improving rapidly.

Mrs. Kensler left Friday for an extended visit to Memphis, Tenn., Louisville, Ky., Atlanta, Ga. and New Orleans.

Miss Charlotte Rice will spend the week-end in Lincoln.

Percy Parker who has been in California for several months returned last week.

Mrs. Frank Berry and daughter, Jean were Carrizozo visitors on Thursday.

White Oaks Whispers

By Miss Willie Kelt: E. M. Brickley of the First National Bank of Carrizozo was here last Saturday on a business visit with Judge John Y. Hewitt.

Mr. and Mrs. Rolla Ward visited at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Sherwood Corn at Carrizozo last Saturday.

Mrs. Anna Brazel of Carrizozo was a guest at the Ira Robinson home Saturday and Sunday.

H. E. Kelt, daughter, Katherine and niece, Willie Kelt, were business visitors at the county seat Saturday, returning home in the evening.

We have had several good rains here of late and the grass is the best we have had for years past. Stock of all kinds are in the best of condition.

Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Van Scoyck were business visitors to the county seat the latter part of last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Ira Robinson, Alfred Fletcher and D. L. Jackson made trips to Carrizozo Friday and Saturday.

Mrs. M. O. Longfellow and daughter, Marion, who have spent the summer here with the Charles Joyce and A. W. Steinbring families, will leave tomorrow for their home in Lawrence, Kansas. The Longfellows have been here so long and have become so well known and much admired by our people, that it seems like losing old residents to have them depart. Let us hope that they will visit us again next year. Miss Marion has always desired to see a good sandstorm and we regret that we have not been able to produce one with the proper amount of kick, since the folks have been here. "No ketch'em"—maybe so, next time.

E. O. Prehm of Prehm's Bargain Store returned Monday from a business trip to Emporia, Kansas, where he spent a week transacting some business and visiting friends.

Capitan News

Miss Jennie Bohne of Alamogordo spent Sunday with her mother, at the Buena Vista Hotel.

Miss Edith Rockwell left for Las Vegas Tuesday of this week where she is employed as Spanish teacher for the fall and winter term.

Mrs. J. L. England returned a few days ago from a visit with her sons in Washington.

The Misses Mary and Frances Fritz spent Sunday with the home folks.

Mr. and Mrs. Coffee and family of Arizona are here visiting their daughter and old friends. They paid a visit to Carrizozo Wednesday, accompanied by Prof. J. E. Koonce.

The Capitan Public Schools and the Capitan Consolidated High School will open Monday, Sept. 5, with a well-chosen faculty and a carefully selected program of studies.

People of Capitan anticipate the best school they have ever had. The unusual interest everyone seems to have, along with the new gymnasium seems to have all of High School age in this part of the County anxious for school to start.

Supt. C. V. Koogler is working out with great care a program of studies and curricula that will conform in every way with the state board requirements and also meet the needs of all the students.

Mr. and Mrs. George Titworth and daughter, Elizabeth, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Brubaker, and Mrs. Catherine Bilbo of Capitan, Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Anderson, Mr. and Mrs. T. B. Kincheloe, Miss Catherine Rice of Fort Stanton, Mrs. D. A. Saunders of El Paso, Mrs. George Melton and Mrs. S. L. Mills of Gran Quivira, were out-of-town visitors at the big Eastern Star meeting last night.

Mrs. W. C. Austrey of Hondo was here yesterday, accompanied by her sister, Mrs. W. B. Pistole, who had spent the summer with her sister's family and left on the evening train to join her husband, Col. Pistole of the U. S. Army, who is stationed at Chicago for the coming three years.

"Service with a Smile"

The B & B Service Station, Mike Barnett, Prop., who has for his slogan "Service with a Smile," handles the renowned General Cord Tires, and the best brands of gasoline, oils, etc.

Visitors coming in from our neighboring towns will find him conveniently located without going in a round-about way to reach his Station. Home people, coming and going are invited to try his service—which, he says, "is Always with a Smile."

F. R. (Flossie) Zumwalt left yesterday for Malaga, N. M., where he will teach school for the fall and winter term. Flossie, as we have said before, taught there for the last term and the board requested him to sign a contract for the coming term, to which he consented. This shows that Flossie "knows his cats."

Mrs. Brack Sloan and children have moved to Carrizozo from their ranch near Ancho, so that their son, Mark, can have advantage of our schools. This will be Mark's beginning and we strongly predict that he will make good in excellent order.

Children Will See Lindbergh

El Paso Gateway Club:

El Paso, Aug. 31—"The school children of the Southwest will be given an opportunity to see their hero at close range when Col. Charles Lindbergh visits El Paso Sept. 24," according to Mr. M. Coblentz, Chairman of the Lindbergh Committee.

"We are acquainted with the Colonel's love for young America and we are going to see to it that every child in El Paso on Sept. 24 is given an opportunity to see him and wave their greeting. About 10 blocks along the line of the parade have been reserved for school children, and half the seating capacity of the High School Stadium will be reserved for them," he continued.

Col. Lindbergh has often expressed himself that so many school children were interested in his plane and aviation. "The children of today will be the fliers of tomorrow," the Colonel is reported to have said.

Special attention will be given the children from outside of El Paso, according to the committee in charge. While there will be perhaps the largest crowd that El Paso has ever known on Sept. 24, every effort will be made to see that every child is properly cared for.

Special police will guard them against injury and place them in advantageous spot for viewing both the parade and hearing Lindbergh at the Stadium.

Loudspeakers with a carrying distance of at least half a mile are being erected at the Stadium. This same equipment will be connected with the banquet hall, and an overflow crowd will hear the banquet program by remote control.

Miss Evelyn French spent the week-end in El Paso and returned Sunday evening and on Monday evening, left with Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Kudner for Chicago, where she will be their guest for several weeks, after which the party will return to Carrizozo. While at home, Mr. Kudner will make final arrangements for bringing his airplane to Carrizozo, the same to appear here after the landing field mentioned in last week's Outlook, has been finished.

E. H. Sweet, Mrs. Sweet and daughter, Louise of the Carrizozo Eating House, returned Wednesday from an extended tour through the state of California, covering a period of several weeks. They report a delightful trip.

Highway Service Station Puts on Asbestos Roof

The popular Highway Service Station is putting on a new roof of asbestos shingles — said improvement being a tan or brown which makes a decided striking appearance.

L. A. Whitaker of the Western Motors, Inc., will leave tomorrow for El Paso, where he will meet his father and mother, who are returning from California. Mr. Whitaker's parents will, after a short stay, return to their old home in Charlotte, N. C., after a visit with their sons, L. A. and Rev. Whitaker, who is conducting a series of evangelical meetings at Logan, N. M.

Crystal Theatre

J. C. Burkett, Prop.

Friday—Douglas MacLean in "Let It Rain."

Saturday-Monday—Irene Rich and Willard Louis in "The Honeymoon Express."

Tuesday - Wednesday—"London,"—a Paramount picture.

Thursday-Friday—"God Gave Me Twenty Cents."—Paramount.

Saturday-Monday—Sept. 10-12—Mary Roberts Rinehart's mystery story, "The Bat."

Special orchestra music on Friday nights.

Orchestra music on Monday, Wednesdays and Fridays.

Shows start at 7:30, beginning Friday night, Sept. 2.

Odd Fellows Work and Eat

On Monday night, a car load of local Oddfellows journeyed to Alamogordo in Meyer Barnett's big Buick and attended a big meeting of the lodge in our sister city, where after the regular order of business was transacted, work of initiation was performed in the second degree by the lodge team, the candidate being William Hightower of Carrizozo lodge No. 30.

The seating capacity of the hall in the Masonic Temple was taken up and after the initiatory ceremonies, the Oddfellows headed by Mayor A. J. Newsom of Alamogordo, repaired to a local cafe, where the innerman was abundantly refreshed. The local Oddfellows arrived home at 2:30 Tuesday morning, tired and sleepy, but happy in remembrance of the good meeting they attended and grateful for the many courtesies shown them by the neighboring brethren.

On Tuesday night, Sept. 6, a delegation of Alamogordo Odd Fellows will be here and the third degree of Oddfellowship will be conferred at the Oddfellows' Hall in the Masonic Temple and all members of the order are requested to attend. Those attending the Alamogordo meeting from here were: Meyer Barnett, W. J. Langston, William Hightower, Lewis A. Burke and A. L. Burke.

Stars Initiate

At a well attended meeting of Comet Chapter O. E. S. held last night at Masonic Temple, Mrs. W. C. Pittman of Carrizozo and Mrs. Howard and Miss Elizabeth Titworth of Capitan, Mrs. S. L. Mills of Gran Quivira were initiated. After the initiation ceremonies, refreshments were served in the banquet rooms. The Five Points of the Star were hostesses and color schemes of the same were carried out in the decorations and also in the refreshments. This was the largest and most enthusiastic meeting held since the visit of the Grand Matron.

Judge Colin Neblett and J. Stockley Ligon came in Wednesday from Santa Fe and motored up to the Bonito to be guests of Judge Hawkins at his summer home, where they will spend the week-end. They will then go to Albuquerque, where Judge Neblett, who is president of the New Mexico Fish & Game Association, will open the annual convention of that body which convenes in the Duke City on Sept. 6-7-8.

THE BAT

A Novel from the Play
By Mary Roberts Rinehart and Avery Hopwood

"The Bat" copyright, 1925, by Mary Roberts Rinehart and Avery Hopwood.

WNU Service

STORY FROM THE START

Defying all efforts to capture him, after a long series of murders and robberies, a super-crook known to the police only as "The Bat" has brought about a veritable reign of terror. At his wit's end, and at the man's own request, the chief of police assigns his best operative, Anderson, to get on the trail of the Bat.

CHAPTER II—Continued

She had skimmed the paper hurriedly now a headline caught her eye. "Failure of Courtleigh Fleming had been president of?" She settled down to read the article, but it was disappointingly brief. The Union bank had closed its doors—the cashier, a young man named Bailey, was apparently under suspicion—the article mentioned Courtleigh Fleming's recent and tragic death in the heat vein of newspaper-ese. She laid down the paper and thought—Bailey—Bailey—she seemed to have a vague recollection of hearing about a young man named Bailey, who worked in a bank—but she could not remember where or by whom his name had been mentioned.

Well—it didn't matter. She had other things to think about. She must ring for Lizzie—got up and dressed. The bright morning sun, streaming in through the long window, made lying in bed an old woman's luxury—and she refused to be an old woman.

"Though the worst old woman I ever knew was a man!" she thought with a satiric twinkle. She was glad Sally's daughter—young Dale Ogden—was here in the house with her—the companionship of Dale's bright youth would keep her from getting old womanish if anything could.

She smiled, thinking of Dale. Dale was a nice child—her favorite niece. Sally didn't understand her, of course—but Sally wouldn't. Sally read magazine articles on the Younger Generation and its wild ways. "Sally doesn't remember when she was a Younger Generation herself," thought Miss Cornelia. "But I do—and if we didn't have sports reporters in the eighties we had bugles—and youth doesn't change its ways just because it's bobbed its hair."

Before Mr. and Mrs. Ogden left for Europe, Sally had talked to her sister Cornelia. . . long and weightily, on the problem of Dale. "Problem of Dale indeed!" thought Miss Cornelia scornfully. "Dale's the nicest young thing I've seen in some time—and she'd be ten times happier if Sally wasn't always trying to marry her off to some young snip with more of what fools call 'eligibility' than brains! But there, Cornelia Van Gorder—Sally's given you your lunings—rambling off to Europe and leaving Dale with you all summer—and you've a lot less sense than I flatter myself you have, if you can't give your favorite niece a happy vacation from all her immediate family—and maybe find her some one that'll make her happy for good and all into the bargain!" for Miss Cornelia was an incorrigible mischief-maker.

Nevertheless, she was more concerned with "the problem of Dale" than she would have admitted. Dale, at her age, with her charm and beauty—"why, she ought to behave as if she were walking on air," thought her aunt, worriedly. "And instead she acts more as if she were walking on pins and needles. She seems to like being here—I know she likes me—I'm pretty sure she's just as pleased to get a little holiday from Sally and Harry—she amuses herself—she falls in with any plan I want to make—and yet—And yet Dale was not happy—Miss Cornelia felt sure of it. "It isn't natural for a girl to seem so lack-luster and—and quiet—at her age—and she's nervous, too—as if something were preying on her mind—particularly these last few days."

Then Miss Cornelia's mind seized upon a sentence in a hurried flow of her sister's last instructions—a sentence that had passed almost unnoticed at the time—something about Dale and "an unfortunate attachment—but of course, Cornelia, dear, she's so young—and I'm sure it will come to nothing now her father and I have made our attitude plain!" "Pshaw—! but that's it," thought Miss Cornelia shrewdly. "Dale's fallen in love, or thinks she has, with some decent young man without a penny or an 'eligibility' to his name—and now she's unhappy because her parents don't approve—or because she's trying to give him up and finds she can't. Well—" and Miss Cornelia's light little white curls trembled with the vehemence of her decision, "if the young thing ever comes to me for advice I'll give her a piece of my mind that will surprise her—and scandalize Sally Van Gorder Ogden out of her wits. Sally thinks nobody's worth looking at if they don't come over to America when our family did—she hasn't grasped enough to realize that if some people hadn't come over later, we'd all still be living on crullers and Dutch punch!"

hand to ring for Lizzie, when a knock came at the door. She gathered her pale eyes more tightly about her shoulders. "Who is it—oh, it's only you, Lizzie," as a pleasant Irish face, crowned by an old-fashioned pompadour of graying hair, peeped in at the door. "Good morning, Lizzie—I was just going to ring for you. Has Miss Dale had breakfast—I know it's shamefully late."

"Good morning, Miss Nelly," said Lizzie, "and a lovely morning it is, too—if that was all of it," she added, somewhat tartly, as she came into the room with a little silver tray whereupon the morning mail reposed.

We have not yet described Lizzie Allen—and she deserves description. A fixture in the Van Gorder household since her sixteenth year, she had long ere now attained the dignity of a Tradition. One could not imagine Miss Cornelia without a Lizzie to grumble at and cherish—or Lizzie without a Miss Cornelia to baby and scold, with the privileged frankness of such old family servants. The two were at once a contrast and a complement. Fifty years of American ways had not shaken Lizzie's firm belief in banquets and leprechauns or tamed her wild Irish tongue—fifty years of Lizzie had not altered Miss Cornelia's attitude of fond exasperation with some of Lizzie's more startling eccentricities. Together they may have been, as one of the younger Van Gorder cousins had irreverently put it, "a scream"—but apart each would have felt lost without the other.

"Now what do you mean—if that were all of it, Lizzie?" queried Miss Cornelia, sharply, as she took her letters from the tray.

Lizzie's face assumed an expression of doleful reticence.

"It's not my place to speak," she said with a grim shake of her head, "but I saw my grandmother last night. God rest her—plain as life she was—the way she looked when they waked her—and if it was my doing, we'd be leaving this house this hour!"

"Cheese-pudding for supper—of course you saw your grandmother?" said Miss Cornelia, crisply, sitting down the first of her letters with a paper-knife. "Nonsense, Lizzie—I'm not going to be scared away from an ideal country-place because you happen to have a bad dream!"

"Was it a bad dream I saw on the stairs last night, when the lights went out and I was looking for the candles?" said Lizzie heatedly. "Was it a bad dream that ran away from me and out the back door, as fast as Laddy's pig? No, Miss Nelly—it was a man—seven feet tall he was, and eyes that shone in the dark and—"

"Dixie Allen!"

"Well, it's true, for all that," insisted Lizzie, stubbornly. "And why did the lights go out—tell me that, Miss Nelly? They never go out in the city."

"Well, this isn't the city," said Miss Cornelia, decisively. "It's the country—and very nice it is—and we're staying here all summer. I suppose I may be thankful," she went on ironically, "that it was only your grandmother you saw last night. It might have been the Bat—and then—where would you be this morning?"

"I'd be stiff and stark, with candles at my head and feet," said Lizzie gloomily. "Oh, Miss Nelly, don't talk of that terrible creature, the Bat!" She came nearer to her mistress, "Oh, Miss Nelly, Miss Nelly—do let's go back to the city before he flies away with us all!"

"Nonsense, Lizzie," said Miss Cornelia again, but this time less firmly. Her face grew serious. "If I thought for an instant that there was any real possibility of our being in danger here," she said slowly, "but—oh, look at the map, Lizzie! The Bat has been—lying in this district—that's true enough—but he hasn't come within ten miles of us yet!"

"What's ten miles to the Bat?" the obturate Lizzie sighed. "And what of the letter you had when you first moved in here? 'The Fleming house is unhealthy for strangers,' it said. 'Leave it while you can.'"

"Some silly boy—or some crank," Miss Cornelia's voice was firm. "I never pay any attention to anonymous letters."

"And there's a funny-looking letter this mornin'—down at the bottom of the pile—"

Lizzie assumed an attitude of prim rebuff. "Miss Dale's gone into the city, ma'am."

"time in the mornin'?" said Lizzie. "But it's yourself knows well enough the doors in this house is thick and not a sound goes past them."

"I should hope not," said Miss Cornelia, rebukingly. "But—tell me, Lizzie—did Miss Dale seem—well—this mornin'?"

"That she did not," said Lizzie promptly. "When she came down to breakfast, after the call, she looked like a ghost. I made her the eggs she likes, too—but she wouldn't eat 'em."

"H'm," Miss Cornelia pondered. "I'm sorry it's well, Lizzie, we mustn't meddle in Miss Dale's affairs."

"No, ma'am."

"But—did she say when she would be back?"

"Yes, Miss Nelly. On the two o'clock train. Oh—and I was almost forgettin'—she told me to tell you particular—she said while she was in the city she'd be after engagin' the gardener you spoke of."

"The gardener? Oh, yes—I spoke for her about that the other night—the place is beginning to look run down—so many flowers to attend to. Well—that's very kind of Miss Dale."

"Yes, Miss Nelly," Lizzie hesitated, obviously with some weighty news on her mind which she wished to impart. Finally she took the plunge.

Her Fingers Trembled a Little as She Turned the Misive Over.

"I might have told Miss Dale she could have been lookin' for a cook as well—and a housemaid—" she muttered at last, "but they hadn't spoken to me then."

Miss Cornelia sat bolt upright in bed. "A cook—and a housemaid? But we have a cook and a housemaid, Lizzie! You don't mean to tell me—"

Lizzie nodded her head. "Yes, ma'am. They're leaving. Both of 'em. Today."

"But good!—Lizzie, why on earth didn't you tell me before? I'm really very much annoyed with you because you didn't. I shall get up immediately—I want to give those two a piece of my mind. Is Billy leaving too?"

"Not that I know of—the heathen Japanese!" said Lizzie sorrowfully. "And yet he'd be better riddance than cook or housemaid."

"Now, Lizzie, how many times have I told you that you must conquer your prejudices? Billy is an excellent butler—has been with Mr. Fleming ten years and has the very highest recommendations. I am very glad that he is staying, if he is—with you to help him, we shall do very well until I can get other servants."

Miss Cornelia had risen now and Lizzie was helping her with the intricacies of her toilet. "But it's too annoying," she went on, in the pauses of Lizzie's cleft ministrations. "What did they say to you, Lizzie—did they give any reason?"

"Oh, yes, Miss Nelly—they had reasons you could choke a goat with," said Lizzie, viciously, as she arranged Miss Cornelia's transformation. "Cook was the first of them—she was up late—I think they'd been talking it over together. She comes into the kitchen with her hat on and her bag in her hand. 'Good mornin,' says I, 'pleasant enough, you've got your hat on,' says I. 'I'm leaving,' says she. 'Leaving, are you?' says I. 'Leaving,' says she. 'My sister has twins,' says she. 'I just got word—I must go to her right away.' 'What?' says I, all struck in a heap. 'Twins,' says she, 'you've heard of such things as twins.' 'That I have,' says I, 'and I know a lie on a face when I see it, too.'"

"Lizzie!"

"Well, it made me sick at heart. Miss Nelly—her with her hat and her bag and her talk about twins—and no consideration for you. 'Well,' says she, 'you can see that Anne, the housemaid's leaving, too.' 'Has her sister got twins as well?' says I and looked at her. 'No,' says she, as bold as brass, 'but Anne's got a pain in her side and she's feared it's appendicitis—so she's leaving to get back to her family.' 'Oh,' says I, 'and what" about Miss Van Gorder? 'I'm sorry for Miss Van Gorder,' says she—the falseness of her!—'But she'll have to do the best she can—for twins and appendicitis is acts of God and not to be put aside for even the best of wages.' 'Is that so?' says I and with that I left her, for I knew if I listened to her a minute longer I'd be giving her bonnet a shake and that wouldn't be respectable. So there you are, Miss Nelly, and that's the gist of the matter."

Miss Cornelia laughed. "Lizzie—you're unique," she said. "But I'm glad you didn't give her bonnet a shake—though I've no doubt you could."

"Humph!" said Lizzie, smothering the fire of battle in her eye. "And is it my Black Irish from Ulster would play impudence to a Kerry woman without getting the flat of a hand in—"

but that's neither here nor there. The truth of it is, Miss Nelly, her voice grew solemn, "it's my belief—they're scared—both of them—by the haunts and the banshees here—and that's all."

"If they are, they're very silly," said Miss Cornelia, practically. "But it doesn't matter. If they want to go, they may."

An hour or so later, Miss Cornelia sat in a deep chair in the comfortable living room of the Fleming house, going through the pile of letters which Lizzie's news of domestic revolt had prevented her reading earlier. Cook and housemaid had come and gone—civil enough, but so obviously determined upon leaving the house at once that Miss Cornelia had sighed and let them go, though not without caustic comment. Since then, she had devoted herself to calling up various employment agencies without entirely satisfactory results. A new cook and housemaid were promised for the end of the week—but for the next three days the Japanese butler, Billy, and Lizzie between them would have to bear the brunt of the service. "Oh, yes—and then there's Dale's gardener—if she gets one," thought Miss Cornelia. "I wish he could cook—but I don't suppose gardeners can—and Billy's a treasure. Still, it's inconvenient—now, stop—Cornelia Van Gorder—you were asking for an advertisement only this morning and the moment the littlest sort of one comes along, you want to crawl out of it."

She had reached the bottom of her pile of letters—these to be thrown away—these to be answered—ah, here was one she had overlooked somehow. She took it up. It must be the one Lizzie had wanted to throw away—she smiled at Lizzie's fears. The address was badly typed, on cheap paper—she tore the envelope open and drew out a single unsigned sheet.

"If you stay in this house any longer—DEATH! Go back to the city at once and save your life!"

Her fingers trembled a little as she turned the misive over, but her face remained calm. She looked at the envelope—at the postmark—while her heart thudded uncomfortably for a moment and then resumed its normal beat. It had come at last—the adventure—and she was not afraid!

She knew who it was, of course. The Bat! No doubt of it. And yet—did the Bat ever threaten before he struck? She could not remember. But it didn't matter. The Bat was unprecedented—unique. At any rate, Bat or no Bat, she must think out a course of action. The detection of cook and housemaid left her alone in the house with Lizzie and Billy—and Dale, of course, if Dale returned. "Two old women, a young girl and a Japanese butler to face the most dangerous criminal in America," she thought, grimly. And yet—one couldn't be sure. The threatening letter might be only a joke—a letter from a crank—after all. Still, she must take precautions—look for aid somewhere. But where could she look for aid?

She ran over in her mind the new acquaintances she had made since she moved to the country. There was Doctor Wells, the local physician, who had jotted with her about moving into the Bat's home territory—he seemed an intelligent man—but she knew him only slightly—she couldn't call a busy doctor away from his patients to investigate something which might only prove to be a mare's-nest. The boys Dale had met at the Country Club—"Humph!" she snorted, "I'd rather trust my gumption than any of theirs." The logical person to call on, of course, was Richard Fleming, Courtleigh Fleming's nephew and heir, who had rented her the house. He lived at the Country Club—she could probably reach him now. She was just on the point of doing so, when she decided against it—partly from diffidence, partly from an indefinable feeling that he would not be of much help. "Besides," she thought sturdily, "it's my house now, not his—he didn't guarantee burglar protection in the lease."

For a moment she felt very helpless, very much alone. Then her courage returned.

"Pshaw, Cornelia, if you have got to get help—get the help you want and hang the consequences!" she adjured herself. "You've always hankered to see a first-class detective do his detecting—well, get one—or decide to do the job yourself—I'll bet you could, at that."

She slipped to the main door of the living room and closed it cautiously, smiling as she did so. Lizzie might be about—and Lizzie would promptly go into hysterics if she got an inkling of her mistress' present intention. Then she went to the telephone, and asked for long distance.

When she had finished her telephoning, she looked at once relieved and a little naughty—like a demure child who has carried out some piece of innocent mischief unobserved. "My stars!" she muttered to herself. "You never can tell what you can do till you try." Then she sat down again and tried to think of other measures of defense.

"Now, if I were the Bat, or any criminal," she mused, "how would I get into this house? Well, that's it—I might get in most any way—it's so big and rambling. All the grounds you want to lurk in, too—it'd take a company of police to shut them off. Then there's the house itself—let's see—third floor—trunk room, servants' rooms—couldn't get in there very well except with a pretty long ladder—that's all right. Second floor—well, I suppose a man could get into my bedroom from the porch if he were an acrobat—but he'd need to be a very good acrobat and there's no us borrowing trouble. Downstairs is the problem, Cornelia—downstairs is the problem."

"Take this room, now." She rose and examined it carefully. "There's the door over there on the right that leads into the billiard room. There's this door over here, that leads into the hall. Then there's the other door by the alcove—and all these French windows—what!" She shook her head.

Great Roman Ruler in Advance of Age

Appius Claudius Caecus, who appeared in history in 312 B. C., was called by one German historian the boldest innovator in Roman history. By law the tenure of office of a censor was limited to eighteen months, but Appius Claudius seemed so much the superior of all other men of his age that he was censor for five years and he carried through, despite frantic opposition from the conservatives, a law to bring new blood into the governing classes.

The aristocracy was jealous of its prerogatives and made birth the essential to a senatorial career, but Appius Claudius broke down the admission requirements. He put into the senate the names of many plebeians who had recently attained wealth and even free men of distinction who were not especially prosperous.

Probably the greatest contribution to Roman progress was his building of two great public works on a scale that Rome had never known. They were the famous Appian way, the great road that led from Rome to Capua, and the vast aqueduct to bring water to the city. Few tourists who visit Rome have failed to drive out upon the historic Appian way or have failed to catch sight of the tremendous ruins of the once mighty aqueduct that strikes across the Campagna.—Kansas City Star.

Shoes of Robert Burns
When Robert Burns, the Scottish plowboy, was breaking the soil on his father's farm, he probably did not think that the shoes he then wore would be objects of curiosity 5,000 miles away long after his death. But the shoes that the great poet wore when a lad are owned by a gentleman who lives in Portland, Maine, and many of the boys of that city have inspected them. The shoes have wooden soles, which in turn are shod with thin plates of iron. The uppers are tacked to the soles in a rude but strong manner, and the historic footwear is in a good state of preservation.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Schoolboy "Howlers"
Extracts from written answers to English schoolboys' examination papers: "The Nile is the only remarkable river in the world. It was discovered by Doctor Livingston, and it flows in Musgo Park." "Constantinople is on the Golden Horn, a strong fortress, had a university, and was the residence of Peter the Great. Its chief building is the Sublime Port." "Cyrus came into our possession in 1871, and was given to Lord Beauchamp." "Julius Caesar invaded Britain 106 B. C. The condition of the British was in a rude state. The people lived in huts made of straw, and the women wore their hair down their backs with pebbles in their hands."

SOLOMON'S WISE CHOICE

GOLDEN TEXT—1 Kings 3:4-15. Happy is the man who findeth wisdom and the man that seeketh understanding. PRIMARY TOPIC—Solomon's Wise Choice. JUNIOR TOPIC—A Young Man's Wise Choice. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Choosing Things Worth While. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Best Things in Life.

Following the death of David, Solomon was anointed king (1 Kings 1:5-40). "David had fallen to show the people who should be king after him (v. 20). Though an old man, he is stirred into action by the combined appeals of Bathsheba and Nathan. He immediately sent for the faithful three—Zadok, Nathan and Benaiah, and commanded them to anoint Solomon king."

1. God's Gracious Offer (vv. 4, 5). Solomon makes a lavish sacrifice to the Lord. The magnitude of the offering shows that he had strong impulses toward God and that he was unwilling to hold anything back from God. Following the sacrifice, the Lord made to him this gracious offer. This offer was not on the basis that the Lord cared for the number of animals, but the attitude of the man's heart toward him. "Ask what I shall give thee," placed very wide possibilities before the king. God, as it were, signed blank checks and turned them over to Solomon to fill in any amount that his heart desired. This was not a reckless act on the part of God, for He foreknew what was in Solomon's heart to ask. This offer to Solomon is no exceptional one, for opportunities equally limitless are placed before us. God is saying to every one of His children, "Ask and it shall be given you." The matter with its limitations is placed before us in John 15:7. "If ye abide in Me and My words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you." These unlimited offers are open to those who abide in Christ and let His words abide in them.

2. Solomon's Wise Choice (vv. 9-11). The Lord's gracious offer brought the king face to face with the responsibility of making a choice. There was no middle course open to him. God deals with all His children in such a way that a choice must be made by them. Solomon was keenly aware of the difficulty and responsibility of his position. David was a great king. For a young man to take up the work of an illustrious father and push it to completion is a most difficult task. Comparatively few ever succeed. Besides this, he had to deal with the disturbing elements which had been set in motion by the usurper, Adonijah. Being made to shoulder so great a responsibility so suddenly, brought him to keenly feel his insufficiency. In his reply to God he pleaded that his being king was not of his own choice but an act of God's loving kindness. He argued that, since God had made him king, He was bound to qualify him to fill the place. All who have been called of God to fill positions of honor and trust can surely exercise that same boldness of faith. When called to positions of honor and trust we should humbly present ourselves before God for help. To feel ourselves unworthy and unfit for great and responsible work and to cast ourselves upon God for help is not cowardice, but a good sign that we shall not fall at the critical moment. Solomon's object in asking for wisdom was not for display but for the good of others.

3. God's Unstinted Gift (vv. 10-15). Solomon's speech pleased the Lord. God gave him more than he asked. Because he put wisdom first, God saw that he could be trusted with material good also. Christ saw the same thing when He said, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God, and His righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you" (Matt. 6:33). He who puts God and spiritual things first in time and importance can be trusted with temporal things. That which God promised him above what he asked was riches, honor and length of days. All who feel the lack of wisdom can go to God with confidence (Jan. 1:5). God blessed Solomon with a singularly comprehensive mind (1 Kings 4:29-34). He was a botanist, zoologist, architect, poet and moral philosopher.

Spirit of Labor Day

pening upon its mutant strength alone for its success is doomed to failure.

Such utterances as these are evidence of the fact that Mr. Gompers' warning so long ago that "Intelligence must prevail," has been heeded by American labor, and a part of the American laboring man's prosperity today is due to the fact that he has brought to his task an intelligent conception of both its rights and its obligations. For that reason Rodin's famous statue, "The Thinker," is not an inappropriate symbol of the American working-man, a man of brains as well as brawn.

Rev. Charles Steble, an eminent sociologist and student of labor problems, once wrote:

When the last chapter of the story has been written, it will be found that the chief glory of labor has not been in what its leaders or men gained for themselves or for their generation, but in what they secured for those who followed. This fact should make us more generous in our estimate of the value of the services of those who are today giving their hearts and lives to many a cause which seems to make but little progress. The normal man, be he rich or poor, educated through books or through experience, be he black or white, yellow or red, no matter what his circumstances—so long as he's a man who is doing a man's job in the world, is helping the other fellow in a way which is rarely appreciated. The poorest, neediest man in the world, who is doing his best, is rendering a real service to the richest man in the world. He is making a contribution to the world's work which more wages do not repay. Even the despised immigrant who doesn't understand a word of English, but who is contributing his share to the common good by shoveling dirt in a construction camp, is making a debtor of the man who will later ride over that railroad track in his comfortable Pullman, made smooth-running because that Italian did a good job of his shoveling. But everywhere in human life, in the lowliest places, in shop and factory, on the street and on the road, everywhere, men and women and even little children are bringing their contributions to the great treasure house to which we all come and freely draw—some more, some less; and he who draws most becomes the greatest debtor to all mankind.

Here's the point, then: Let's talk less about helping and let's talk more about "exchange" of service—for that's what it is.

Read these words again: "The man who is doing a man's job in the world—who is doing his best—making a contribution to the world's work—contributing his share to the common good." They lead inevitably to one phrase—"the dignity of labor." That phrase has been given a slightly different wording by Thornton Oakley, writing in the American Federationist on

THE DIVINITY OF TOIL

Toller, toller of the mine,
Draving Pluto's impost shrine,
Pushing down a depth-of-earth
As some god of mystic birth,
Wrestling from deep-hidden pyres
Food for man's insatiable fires,
Toller, toller, dost thou see
In thy toil Divinity?

Toller, toller of the mill,
Molding matter to thy will,
Rearing towers crowned with flame,
Esemers of Titan frame,
By thy force, all-potent fires
Forging man's proud, cloud-tung
spires,
Toller, toller, dost thou see
In thy toil Divinity?

Toller, toller of the rail,
Flouring crag and spanning vale,
With thy engines' headlong roar
Girdling nations shore to shore,
Binding close in mesh of steel
Man with man for common weal,
Toller, toller, dost thou see
In thy toil Divinity?

Toller, toller of the sea,
Cleaving black immensity,
With thy bulks, majestic, vast,
Scouring waves and typhoon's blast,
Bearing north, south, east and west
Man upon his ceaseless quest,
Toller, toller, dost thou see
In thy toil Divinity?

Thou that through the year's swift flight,
Led by soaring visions' light,
Conquering earth, sky and main,
Buildest toil's enduring fame,
Ever lifting man's desire
To the pure, celestial fire,
Thou, O toller, thou shalt see
In thy toil Divinity.

And this is the spirit of Labor Day—the consciousness of the man who works that in HIS job there is the dignity of labor, the divinity of toil.

Third Rail Stops Engine

By means of a third rail that develops electricity during the movement of the train, a device recently invented by an Italian, stops trains without the action of the engineer. When anything obstructs the track a light shows in the engine cab. If this is ignored a bell rings, and should the ringing escape attention the engine is automatically stopped by the device that applies the brakes. The third rail can also be used for a telephone service for drivers.

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON
WHAT is the spirit of Labor Day? There may be as many answers to that question as there are answerers, but from several of them, though phrased in different terms, it may be possible to arrive at some statement which will come near expressing the meaning, not only to labor but to all other divisions of human society, of this day of days for the working man.

Labor Day was first suggested in the New York City Central Labor union in May, 1882. It was decided to observe the first Monday in September of that year as a festival day, with a parade, speech-making and picnic. Labor held that, whereas there were other holidays representing the religious, civil and military spirit, there was none which stood for the industrial spirit. Accordingly this first celebration was held, and it was a big success.

In 1894 the American Federation of Labor officially proclaimed the first Monday in September as Labor Day. All wage earners, irrespective of sex, calling or nationality, were urged to observe it until it should be as common for a man to work on Labor Day as it would be for him to toil on the Fourth of July. State legislatures were urged to make the day a legal holiday, and 32 of them eventually did enact laws to that effect. Congress made it a legal holiday in 1894 for the District of Columbia and the territories and, although a number of states have no Labor Day law, the federal act has been accepted by all of them, and this holiday is generally observed throughout the United States.

Perhaps one of the first interpretations of the spirit of Labor Day was that uttered by the late Samuel Gompers, the "Grand Old Man of American Labor," in the first Labor Day editorial which he wrote after congress had made it a legal holiday. The editorial, which appeared in the American Federationist for September, 1894, follows:

In the cycle of time we are again on the dawn of our most important national holiday—Labor Day. Most important, since it for the first time in the history of the world devotes a day to the recognition of the fact that the wage earners must hereafter be regarded as the important factor in the economy of life. In this day when so many look upon the dark side of the progress of the labor movement and predict worse things in store for the laborer, it is not amiss to direct attention to the fact that the life of the human family is one vast struggle, and that though the progress is not as swift as we, as well as our impatient brothers and sisters of labor, would like it to be, yet the fact that in our decade we can see the rights of labor more clearly defined, the vantage ground obtained, and obtaining a clearer insight into the existing wrongs, the more intelligent perception and determination to achieve labor's rights.

The past year has witnessed several contests, some of them defeats, but though defeated in the immediate object sought, they have awakened a new conscience in the American people, and will contribute more to the thorough organization of the wage workers of our country than hundreds of meetings, speeches or pamphlets. The great

Exercise as a Duty

When should physical exercise for the elderly cease? Old dogs don't romp, old horses don't roll. They know better. Young people carry on their athletics because they like to—not from any sense that it is for their welfare. As soon as persons of accumulated years feel that they have no desire to cavort and cut up stunts with their legs and arms, perhaps they'd better not. Taking exercise as a duty is a gruesome and usually a lonesome activity. For this reason, no doubt, golf is a boon to those on the shady side of life's noon. It is about the only hiking that they can enjoy. Chopping down trees, though they have the trees, invites the catastrophe that blood pressure always threatens, and mountain climbing has its penalty of heartburn—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

The Big Fight

Prize-fighting is generally outlawed in the United States, but there are always ways of getting around the law when the great American public wants to see a fight.

To tell the truth, even a lot of pugilistic pacifists wouldn't mind seeing such a scrap - for the 'experience and education' of it, you know.

Anyway, the big fight is evidently coming off in September, and it will establish a new record in many ways. For size, particularly. An audience of 150,000 people is expected.

Chicago's conscientious objectors are answered with the argument that its good business to pull a fight there.

Merchants expect the crowd to spend $5,000,000. Patrons may spend half that much on the fight itself, seeing the admission tickets are to run from $5 to $40 - and probably higher, if the speculators get hold of them in true New York style.

One Chicago woman, president of the Gold Star Mothers' Association, protests against using the Soldiers' Field Stadium for 'a brutal fight between professional fighters,' and thinks it shames the soldiers now dead. Her feelings may be appreciated.

Yet perhaps most of the soldiers that are now dead, if they were alive, would rush joyfully to see the fight.

"Air Derby" to Honolulu Is Won by Art Goebel in the Plane Woolaroo.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

SOMETHING new under the sun— an "Air Derby" across the Pacific ocean from Oakland, Calif., to Honolulu— was the feature of the week's news. After a deal of preparation eight planes started in the race for the James Dole prize of $35,000, of which $10,000 was for the second to reach the goal. Four met with disaster at the take-off, but the other four winged their way over the waste of waters. The Woolaroo, piloted by Art Goebel, won the race. U. S. N., as navigator, won the race. The Aloha, with Martin Jensen of Honolulu as pilot and Paul Behluter as navigator, was second.

At this writing the two other planes are missing, and are being sought by airplanes and naval ships. These are the Miss Moran, with Augie Pedlar as pilot, Lieut. V. R. Knops as navigator and Miss Mildred Doran of Detroit as passenger, and the Golden Eagle, of which Jack Frost was the pilot and Gordon Scott the navigator.

The Woolaroo made the flight in 23 hours 10 minutes and 31 seconds. The Aloha took 24 hours 17 minutes. Lieutenants Molland and Hagenberger of the United States army made the trip in 23 hours and 50 minutes several weeks ago, while Ernie Smith and Emory Brenton, the first civilians to fly to Hawaii from California, landed at Molokai Island 23 hours 20 minutes after leaving the mainland.

Goebel's plane was equipped with a radio outfit that functioned well and he was in frequent communication with ships. The army navigation officers at Honolulu, who charted the course of the aviators as the radio reports were received, agreed that the flight of the Woolaroo was almost perfect and was a triumph of the highest order for scientific practice in air navigation. The plane was kept in line constantly with the radio beam beacon at San Francisco.

Lieut. Jensen took the Aloha by the northern route and overrode his mark somewhat. He said he skimmed the surface of the sea nearly all the way, while the Woolaroo was kept at an altitude of between 600 and 800 feet. The successful aviators were given a warm welcome in Honolulu, but the celebration was marred by anxiety concerning the missing flyers.

DOWN at San Diego, Calif., the navy's PN-10 seaplane broke two world records and established a third. The plane weighed at the time of take-off approximately 11 tons. It carried 1,100 pounds of sand, 1,222 gallons of gasoline and 120 gallons of lubricating oil. For a plane carrying this dead weight, these records were established:

Duration—20 hours, 45 minutes, 40 seconds.
Distance—1,563 miles.
Speed—78.6 miles an hour.
The plane was piloted by Lieut. Byron J. Connell. He was accompanied by Lieut. H. C. Hodul, radio engineer, and Omar Vincent, aviation chief machinist's mate.

EARLY in the week two big Junkers planes, the pride of Germany, started from Dessau to fly across the Atlantic. One, the Europa, had New York as its goal, and the other, the Bremen, was to fly as far as Chicago if its gasoline lasted. The Europa ran into stormy weather and after getting over the North sea it developed motor trouble and was forced to turn back, landing at Bremen. The Bremen kept on until it had crossed Ireland and out over the ocean—some distance. Then the storm grew worse, the gasoline was being used up too fast, and the aviators gave it up and with great difficulty made their way back to Dessau. It was thought a third Junkers plane might attempt the Atlantic crossing, but on the other hand experts thought the time for such a flight had passed for this year.

THE full bench of the Massachusetts Supreme court overruled the exceptions by Sacco-Vanzetti defense counsel to decisions by Justice George A. Sanderson of that court and by Judge Webster Thayer of the Superior court and refused to grant a writ of error.

This meant that the two men must be executed after the termination of their respite, midnight of August 22, unless some further means of saving their lives were found.

AMERICA'S greatest "captain of industry," who might better be termed a generalissimo, passed with the death in New York of Judge Elbert H. Gary, chairman of the board of the United States Steel corporation. Though almost eighty-one years of age, he was still in active control of the mighty concern which was the creation of his imagination and genius and whose destinies he directed from its beginning. Gary was one of the most important figures in modern finance and business, and his part in the affairs of the nation, in both peace and war, had much to do with present industrial conditions. Though long the advocate of the eight-hour day in the steel mills and fought for many years by labor leaders, he was held by many as a real friend of humanity, the maverick in particular, and as a philanthropist and a benefactor of church and science. During the World war he was the indefatigable aid of the government. Judge Gary's body was taken to his old home in Wheaton, a suburb of Chicago, and the funeral was held in the beautiful memorial church which he built there. His successor as chairman of the steel corporation has not yet been announced.

J. Ogden Armour of Chicago, another of America's leading business men, died in London after several months' illness. The son of P. D. Armour, famous pioneer meat packer, he succeeded his father as head of the business and expanded it into a worldwide organization, winning one of the country's great personal fortunes. In the period of post-war deflation this fortune dwindled with astonishing swiftness, and Mr. Armour withdrew from active participation in many of the concerns with which he was connected, these including banks and railways.

John Oliver, premier of British Columbia, died in Victoria at the age of seventy-one years. He had been ill for some time and had been relieved of his official duties by the naming of J. D. McLean as acting premier and leader of the Liberal party.

Other deaths worthy of note were those of James Oliver Curwood, popular American author, and Hinkelander Waldo, well-known New Yorker.

FOLLOWING a conference with Mr. Coolidge in Rapid City, Director of the Budget Lord announced that the President had approved large increases in appropriations for both the army and the navy. Among the expenditures for national defense authorized by the President were: Funds for completion of the six cruisers authorized by congress in the last session; funds for completion of the remodeling of the battleships Oklahoma and Nevada; and funds for 1,500 first-class planes for the army and 1,000 planes for the navy. There was only one naval appropriation which the President did not approve. That was for three submarines, asked for in 1916, on which investigation work still is being done.

Pessimists at once began figuring that the increased defense estimates, together with the necessity of spending a lot for farm relief, would make impossible any extensive reduction in taxes by the next congress. But the official opinion in Washington was that taxes would certainly be cut at least $300,000,000 during the coming session. In order to bring this about the Democratic leaders and some Republicans will, if necessary, combat the practice of applying all receipts from foreign debts to national debt reduction. President Coolidge holds that tax reduction next year is feasible if congress does not indulge in excessive money spending.

GENERAL PERSHING called at the summer White House and discussed with Mr. Coolidge conditions of American cemeteries in France, also submitting to him the accepted designs for various memorials and chapels on the battlefields. The President went to the Pine Ridge reservation Wednesday and saw a pageant and parade in which some ten thousand Indians participated. He received from the Sioux national council a memorial reciting the loyalty and complaints of the Indians and in reply assured them of the government's sympathy and close study of their problems. Next day Mr. Coolidge, accompanied by Mrs. Coolidge and their son, John, inspected the government hospitals for World war veterans at Hot Springs, S. D. Plans were made for the Presidential family to spend a week in Yellowstone National park.

COLLAPSE of the Nanking Nationalist group in China seems imminent. After his armies, which were advancing on Peking met with severe defeats and were driven back to the south of the Yangtze, Gen. Chiang Kai-shek resigned his leadership and appealed for unity of action between the Nanking and Hankow factions. But the northern troops kept on going south and at last reports had occupied Pukow and were bombarding Nanking, across the Yangtze. Both foreign and native residents of that city were fleeing. Meanwhile the foreigners in Shanghai were preparing to defend the place against invasion by the disorganized hordes of fleeing Nationalist soldiers. American, British and French troops were placed in strategic positions, the British being in an advanced line about Shanghai's environs, outside the international settlement. The barricades between the French concession and Chinese territory were reconstructed. The situation there was complicated by a quarrel between the British authorities and the Chinese officials. An English airplane had been forced to land in Chinese territory and the native officials seized the wings and refused to comply with a British ultimatum that they give them up immediately. The Chinese contended that flying British planes over Chinese territory is a violation of international law as well as the international airplane convention, to which both Great Britain and China are signatories.

Japan, asserting its preferential claims in Manchuria and Mongolia, has served notice that it will not tolerate any opposition thereto to its policy. The Chinese, especially in Manchuria, are deeply resentful of the Japanese actions and plans, and the Mukden Chamber of Commerce stated an intention to boycott Japan.

WHAT is denominated an "economic Locarno" in the form of a commercial treaty was signed by France and Germany after three years of dickerings. The pact provides for a mutual favored nation agreement on practically all products passing between the two countries and paves the way for intertrade such as the two nations have never experienced. French agriculture will receive the greatest benefit. Practically all the tariffs are lowered, while Germany agrees not to increase the existing ones on cotton, wool, silk, leather goods and metallurgical products, soap and perfumery.

PRESIDENT COCHRANE'S government of the Irish Free State narrowly escaped overthrow at the hands of a combine of three parties after De Valera and his followers had taken the oath of fealty to the king and occupied their seats in the Dail. A resolution of lack of confidence was introduced and the vote was a tie which was broken when the speaker cast his vote in the negative. As a matter of fact, Cochrane was saved by Alderman John Dinks of Sligo, a member of the Redmond party, who slipped away just before the vote was taken. He says he never had any intention of voting the government out. Cochrane is expected to gain strength in the general elections in October.

BOLIVIA was greatly alarmed by a big uprising among the Indians, who largely outnumber the whites in that country. But quick action by the government troops isolated the disaffection in certain sections of three departments and gave assurance that the trouble would soon be quieted. Many chiefs were captured and heavy penalties were inflicted, and thereafter thousands of Indians returned to their work in the fields.

SOUTH-WEST NEWS NOTES

Tentative total assessed valuation of property in Arizona for 1927 is $666,741,885.

Otero county, New Mexico, county commissioners have purchased new machinery amounting to $6,000 for use on county roads.

Traffic on the Palomina highway near Douglas, Ariz., has been diverted over the new seventy-five-foot bridge which was completed recently, according to a report of the board of supervisors.

Two tracts of land totaling 1,120 acres in Maricopa county, Ariz., will be sold by the Department of War under competitive sealed bids to be opened Sept. 7, according to word received at the Denver land office from Washington, D. C.

Organization of the southwest lumber sales corporation, which will market the output of three of the leading lumber companies of the southwest, totaling approximately 310,000,000 feet annually, was announced in Albuquerque recently.

The industrial employment survey report recently issued from the office of the U. S. Employment Service of the U. S. Department of Labor at Denver states that seasonal outdoor employment in New Mexico increased during July, particularly agriculture, building, oil field development activities, and highway construction. Ample labor available for all requirements for the next thirty days. Harvesting and other agricultural activities, during July caused absorption of many of the unemployed seasonal workers. Within thirty days there will be quite a demand for apple and cotton pickers, particularly in southeastern sections of state. Industrial plants reported operating normally. Metal mining, other than copper, continues active, with considerable new metal mine development and construction work under way. Metal mine labor supply ample. Coal mining indicated to show a slight increase in activity within thirty days. Coal mine labor supply, will probably be adequate. Building and general construction showed a slight increase during July. Building labor of all classes, reported ample. Municipal improvement construction of particularly street paving is quite extensive in many cities and towns, local labor being ample for this work. Highway construction is expanding and contracts for several additional highway projects were recently let. Highway labor supply ample. Steady forces are being maintained in railroad shop, maintenance-of-way and train service departments. For Arizona the report states that industrial expansion which continues in many lines, is more particularly noted in building and general construction, agriculture, metal mine construction and developments, and municipal improvement and highway construction. The labor supply is adequate for all indicated demands, until the cotton picking season commences thirty to forty-five days hence, at which time a considerable number of additional workers will likely be needed in the Salt River and Yuma valleys. Agriculturists were busy during July in grain harvesting and also in the harvest and shipment of cantaloupes. Metal mining, other than copper, shows increased activity. Copper mining continues to show a more or less sluggish condition. There is, however, quite a considerable amount of new metal mine construction and development work under way in several mining districts of state. Several ore milling plants are under construction. Metal mine labor of all classes, ample for immediate demands in all sections, and a surplus of approximately 100 experienced mine workers exists at Jerome. A large building and general construction program is under way in several sections of the state. The more important event in industrial lines, was the recent completion of the Horse Mesa Dam, where operation of $4,000,000 horse power hydro-electric plant commenced full capacity operations the first part of July. Other construction under way or indicated to commence soon includes enlargement of a lime quarry plant at Puntencia, a $2,500,000 irrigation expansion program in the Salt River valley, a $300,000 bridge across the Colorado River at Lees Ferry, and a $250,000 tourist hotel at Nogales. The railroad between Bouse and Swansea is being put in shape to handle increased ore output in this district. Building and construction labor ample. A considerable number of workers are employed on municipal paving work, in many cities and towns. Highway construction is increasing, with plenty of labor available for this work. Lumbering is steady in the Flagstaff district. Railroad labor supply and demand well balanced.

Sheep and wool shipments from the Farmington district will be 25 per cent greater than for any year in history, according to recent estimates. Most of the sheep are owned by Indians.

The Carlsbad, N. M., city council at its last regular meeting provided by resolution for the legal requirements preliminary to paving Canal street for a distance of seven blocks in connection with the proposed slight extension concrete slab which will be placed when the new federal aid highway is built this fall.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale by MARY GRAHAM BONNER

GRASSHOPPER CIRCUS

The grasshoppers gave a circus for the fairies a few days ago.

When the day came all the fairies were escorted to their benches on the lawns.

The benches were made of pine needles, and the fairies thought the grasshoppers were very hard workers to have carried the pine needles from the woods to the lawns just for them.

First of all came the circus parade—for even the grasshoppers know that they must give a parade the first thing.

There was the grasshoppers' band, it was especially funny.

About fifty grasshoppers played on blades of grass—the music sounded like whistling, but it was quite a new kind of music and the fairies enjoyed it.

They were the grasshopper clowns. They went around doing all sorts of regular clown tricks—just as if they'd always been clowns in big circuses—but it seems they had been around and watched a number of circus clowns.

And little grasshoppers rode on the backs of some of the big ones, and there were grasshoppers dressed as policemen.

On their hats in large green letters were written the words:

"We keep order."

After the parade was over the band settled itself in a corner while in a large ring in the middle the grasshoppers came out and did their tricks.

They turned somersaults—they had swings made of blades of grass—and they did all sorts of tricks such as you can see performed on the trapeze in a circus.

One of the finest tricks of all was little Greeny Grasshopper's trick of walking a long, long blade of grass—or rather a great many blades of grass that had been fastened together.

He walked on this just as the rope-walker does in the circus. And he carried a parasol made of a beautiful apple leaf.

The fairies clapped and clapped when they saw his trick, and he had to come out again and again and bow.

But, as you may easily guess, the most wonderful of all was the jumping.

Such jumping as you never saw in all your life was done by the grasshoppers.

For when you see them, of course they are not trying to do their very, very best.

The day of the circus, though, every single grasshopper did the best jump he possibly could, and then they jumped in pairs and in fours and even in sixes.

The fairies thought that was quite the most marvelous act they had ever seen and they sang out in glee:

"Wonderful, wonderful! We are so glad we're at your circus, grasshoppers!"

And the grasshoppers were absolutely delighted that their circus turned out to be such a big success.

Arranged With the Clock

When Jean goes to Billy's house to play, another always tells her at what hour she must return home.

"One morning Billy's mother announced: "Well, Jean, it just struck 11, so I suppose you'll have to skip home now."

"I don't it isn't 'even at our house yet," replied Jean calmly. "I arranged it with the clock 'fore I left." (The little mischief had set her mother's clock back an hour.)

Obvious

In the practical gardening lesson the teacher was instructing the boys in the art of protecting plants from frost.

Jones was observed to be paying no attention to the master's remarks, so the teacher asked him sharply: "Jones, what is the best way to keep the May frosts from plants?"

"Plant them in June, sir," was the ready reply.

Couldn't Make It Match

Helen, aged four, sings a great deal. One day she tried to accompany herself on the piano, but, being unable to play or sing correctly her music was extremely discordant. After playing a few moments she began to cry.

"Why are you crying?" asked her mother. "Oh," sobbed the little one. "I can't make it match!"

Golden.—Sale of controlling interest in the Rubey National bank here by J. W. Ruboy to E. A. Pihlman, last Tuesday, was announced recently.

Fort Collins.—A method of improving germination of alfalfa seed has been discovered at Colorado Agricultural College here in experiments conducted by Miss Anna M. Lute, state seed analyst, and Dr. L. W. Durrell, head of the botany department. In the investigations conducted by Miss Lute and Dr. Durrell, it was found that by heating the seed at a low temperature, the cell walls were changed so that they would absorb moisture and the seed would germinate readily.

Rush to New Diamond Field

London.—Only about 5,000 people are participating in the rush to the new diamond field at Wolvordland, Transvaal, as compared with 25,000 in the recent rush to Grasfontein.

Utility Association Elects

Cheyenne.—The Wyoming Utility Association at their recent meeting here elected the following officers: J. Keegan, Cheyenne, president; W. D. Johnson, Casper, first vice president; E. H. Soule, Laramie, second vice president; H. L. Williams, Evanston. J. J. Withrow, Sheridan, and J. H. Jacobucci, Green River, members of the executive committee. George Shaw, Denver, told the utility men that if the present tendency of the government to enter private business continues, the butcher, baker and candlestick maker soon will be under federal control.

Western Range in Good Condition

Pueblo.—Col. C. E. Parker, state land inspector, recently made public a report of the U. S. division of livestock and crop estimates dealing with western range and cattle conditions. According to the report, "the cattle industry now appears to be about the same as it was in the years 1887, 1888, 1891 and 1892," when it was in excellent condition, according to the bureau of agriculture economic reports.

SELL FEATURING SNAKESKIN; CLOTH DRESSES FOR GIRLS

It would seem as if the fashion-world had become snake-charmed. At the beginning of this vogue women looked askance at carrying a bag or wearing shoes or gloves made of snakeskin; gradually they yielded and so the mode has continued to weave its fascination, which has not yet been broken.

When early in the spring, snakeskin apparel appeared, it did not seem to is happening to tots' dresses these days. It is very apparent that little American girls are adopting the French fashion of dresses, oh! so short. There's plenty of color in the juvenile style picture this season. To achieve novel color effect, designers are employing artful fabric treatments, the inset method especially proving successful. That is, a contrasting-color of the same material as bespeak other than a flash of the sensational—a mere passing fancy. However, midseason and fall styles disclose the fact that serpents reincarnated into coats and hats and such smart details as handbags, belts and shoes are still moving about on the stage of fashion.

Indeed so popular have snakeskin effects become that some of the newest silks for blouse and for scarf, for coat linings and dress trimmings are printed in snakeskin patternings—which prove again that "imitation is the sincerest flattery."

Now comes along a new tribute to the fashionable serpent—the snakeskin raincoat made of rubberized fabric imitating reptile effect.

As a trimming snakeskin is really wonderfully attractive. Some of autumn's smartest jersey dresses in two-piece styling are detailed with pockets of snakeskin with narrow bands inserted at wristline and on the collar, also finishing the ends of a scarf tie.

Included in recent showings of early fall accessories one finds many snakeskin bags, both genuine and imitation, both of cobra and watersnake variety. One sees also snakeskin patternings on felt hats, done by handpainting on beige and string-colored felt grounds. The snakeskin coats in the picture bear the seal of Paris approval.

that of which the dress is made—is inlaid, so to speak, with clever seamings.

A close study of the frock in the picture will reveal an interesting inset styling. This little dress is of chestnut colored wool rep with insets of a lighter brown ingeniously seamed into the body of the garment.

These inlay constructions present vast possibilities for intriguing design. For instance, a navy blue jersey frock has inserted strips of French blue, so seamed as to radiate from a point at one side, like spokes of a cart wheel.

Another simple interpretation of the inset treatment is that of making a deep yoke of a light tone with a darker portion sewed below, the hemline displaying a third-degree coloring.

Dresses for children not only employ inlays of one color, but of many. Ingenious seamings is given to squares, triangles and other conventional motifs of various shades until a gay and modernistic patterning is the result. Unbroken lines from neck to hem is the most approved styling this season. In the soft crepes and gingham this is accomplished by means of smocking, shirring, tucking and plaiting, which allows the fullness to fall from the shoulder. Not only is the peasant-type frock heavily smocked, but this same form of handwork is very popular throughout all juvenile styling.

TWO WOMEN FOUND HELP

Their Sickness Banished by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Mrs. Nina Matteson, Box 208, Oxford, N. Y., writes: "It had not been for your medicine, I could not have done my work as it should have been done. Mother told me of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I had read in all of our papers what it had done for different women. She wanted me to try it, so my husband got me one bottle at first; then I took two others. Now I am feeling quite strong again."

Mrs. Ernest Tanguay of Adams, Mass., says she was ill for four years and could not sleep nights or go out on the street. She read about the Vegetable Compound and decided to try it. After taking eight bottles she was able to do all her work and go anywhere and is quite herself again.

This dependable Vegetable Compound is a household word in thousands of homes. The fourth generation is now learning the merit of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

For more than half a century, this reliable medicine has been used by women with very satisfactory results. If the Vegetable Compound has helped other women, why shouldn't it help you?

To Patrol Forests

William Finlayson, minister of lands and forests for the Province of Ontario, reports that his department has purchased and is bringing from England, four seaplanes "moths" for use in connection with forest patrol work in northern Ontario, and for detection and fire-fighting work in the northern forests. These planes have a wing spread of 80 feet, compared with a wing spread of 50 feet of some of the airplanes now in use by the department. They have a speed of from 80 to 90 miles an hour.

Wonderful Animal Is the Sea Crab

The sea crab is a wonderful animal and could teach man something that would greatly enhance his chivalry, says Robert O'Neal of Tampa, Fla. The females shed their shells during the early spring, which leaves their bodies white and tender and a lure for small fish, at whose mercy they would be in short order, but Mr. Crab attends to all this in true husband style. While his mate is feeding along the shore in shallow water he follows closely and guards every attack with his strong claws. I have watched this performance often with interest from the shore for some distance. The female wanders leisurely along apparently unconcerned, while the male is kept busy grabbing at the numerous fish as they constantly make a rush for a bite. Should he cease his vigilance for a moment his mate would soon be seized and devoured. When the male crab eats or sleeps is a mystery.

Panama "Home of Orchid"

The designation, "Home of the Orchid," has been applied to Panama because of the great varieties of orchids found there. It has been explained that this is due to the fact that, though Panama is small, it has a great variation of climate, ranging from the humid lowlands of the jungle to the mountains of Chiriqui, which attain an altitude of more than 5,000 feet. From the earliest times Panama has been a fruitful field for the orchid collector, and the first professional collector of which there is a record was Luis Nee, a French botanist, who visited Panama in 1784 and in 1789.

Endless Track for Plane

Landing skids consisting of endless belts are being tried on airplanes in France. Preliminary tests have indicated their feasibility. The belt, or "traveling track," is mounted on a set of ball bearings between two aluminum shells. The belts are said to reduce the chance of the plane's overturning, to simplify the task of landing on rough ground, and to ease the shock of alighting.

FACTS

-AND THE OPEN MIND

THE MOST important element in business success—and the most difficult—is to be sure that you have all the facts before you act.

TO GET them all, from every possible source, is the first objective in General Motors. The Research Laboratories contribute some. These are nuggets, left in the crucible, after hundreds of ideas that looked good have been burned away. The Proving Ground contributes others. Dealers contribute. The public contributes. Every department contributes. Through the whole organization runs a spirit of inquiry and of rigid insistence on proof.

OUT OF such thinking come the new models announced from time to time by Chevrolet, Pontiac, Oldsmobile, Oakland, Buick, LaSalle, Cadillac—all with Fisher Bodies. And by Frigidaire. Each new model is a tested step forward. Nothing goes into it as a result of habit or guess or pride of opinion. Nothing counts but hard-won facts, gathered and used with an open mind.

After vacation, then what? Outfitting the little folks for school answers the query. Considering that children are so decidedly in the foreground of fashion these days, it becomes imperative that their frocks be well styled, not only for "dressup" occasions but for school wear and play-time hours as well.

Stylists are using for children's daytime autumn frocks such woollens as jersey, kaaba, wool-crepe, serge, rep and velveteen.

For coats, suede cloth, broadcloth and velveteen are choice for dressy types, with novelty checks and plaids for sports cloaks. The new coats are featuring chin collars, some of them fur-bound, others adding scarflike trim made of self-fabric.

Mrs. James Senter and daughter, Avis of Fort Worth, Texas, who had been guests of the T. E. Kelleys for three weeks, left Tuesday for their home, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Kelley and daughter, Ruth, who went as far as the Carlsbad cave, where after exploring that wonderful underground mystery, the Senters proceeded on their journey to Fort Worth and the Kelleys will arrive home today or tomorrow.

Rev. John Skinner was a Las Cruces visitor last Saturday, visiting his son, Roy and family. He was much delighted with his trip and says that in his estimation, better results would be obtained from the soil near Las Cruces if people could only realize what wonderful opportunities await them in that locality, but it takes incentive and proper amount of good hard work, which will harm nobody.

Miss Alene Thompson, teacher of music in the Carrizozo schools, arrived here Monday from her home in Alvarado, Texas, where she had been since the close of the summer term at the American Conservatory of Music at Chicago.
