Capitan Notes

Miss Hummon, the English and Commercial teacher of the high school, arrived Sunday.

Miss Hummon is from Oklahoma.

Mesdames Will Titworth, Koogler, Misses Hunt, Fain and Mr. Koogler motored to Glencoe where they were entertained by the Woman's Club at the home of Mrs. Louise Coe, Saturday, Sept. 10.

Miss Frances Fritz spent the week-end at home.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Reilly were business visitors in Capitan Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. G. S. Hoover were business visitors Tuesday.

The new gymnasium, we were all so anxious to see completed, is under way.

The young people gathered at the Buena Vista Hotel Friday evening, Sept. 3, and enjoyed dancing and other games.

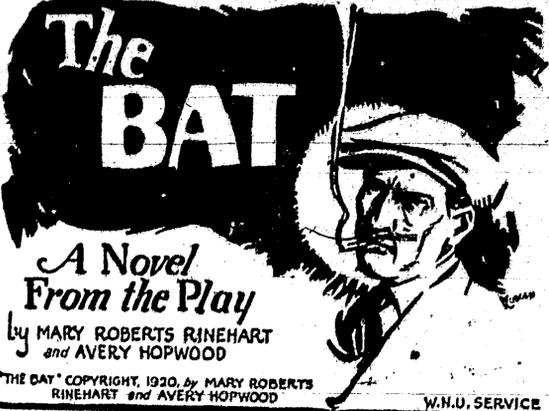

Mrs. Beulah Boone, the charming hostess, served delicious refreshments.

The Capitan schools opened Monday, Sept. 5, with the largest enrollment in years. We feel that this is to be one of the best school years in the history of Capitan with our efficient and highly qualified corps of teachers.

Supt. Koogler has a complete program in physical education already organized, and many other additions are being made.

D. L. Byron, pharmacist, visited his son Ray and wife at their ranch above town Sunday.

County Assessor John Bryan says that Moscow is very much displeased with the Sacco-Vanzetti execution, and even goes as far as to say they'll never forget it. Well, that's too bad! This is America, not the land of the Bolsheviks, says Mr. Bryan.

SOUTH-WEST NEWS NOTES

J. E. Fleming, formerly a practicing attorney in Santa Rosa, New Mexico, was disbarred by the State Supreme Court recently.

"Blanco" White, who has been elected principal of the Carlsbad High school, is a graduate of the University of New Mexico.

Elvis Ashby, Lowell barber, was acquitted of a first degree murder charge in connection with the slaying of Jas. O. "Budd" Gilman, 19-year-old Blaine youth, by a jury in the Cochise county Superior Court at Tombstone.

An attempted jail break at the Phoenix city jail, which had progressed as far as the sawing through one steel bar and partial severing of another, was nipped by Chief of Detectives Jack McGrath and other officers.

Borden Horman of Mesa, sergeant of the Howitzer company of the 168th infantry regiment, Arizona National Guard, whose back was fractured in three places when he fell from a bridge at the rear of a Nogales, Ariz., hotel, will live, according to attending physicians, unless complications set in.

A New York City Fifth avenue manufacturer of silks has created a new design of cloth known as "Carlsbad cavern chiffon voile." The photograph of the Nectar fountain in the caves has been reproduced in the dress goods and the effect is said to be startling when the material is made into clothing.

Several score of persons, including scientists, artists and journalists gathered at Orbit Trading Post on the Navajo reservation in Arizona or camped on the trail side leading to Walpi, Hopi Indian village where the antelope and snake priests staged the famous tribal snake dance in a prayer for rain.

The State Highway Department recently reported the completion and final acceptance of federal aid project No. 122-A between Acme and Elkins, Chaves county. The final inspection was made by L. C. Rockett, engineer from the Bureau of Public Road, and B. F. Kelly, district engineer for the department at Roswell.

Judgment of a Colfax county, New Mexico, court in ordering the Slovene National Benefit Society to pay benefits to Alcega Nikolich, a miner holding a benefit certificate, was affirmed by the State Supreme Court at Santa Fe in an opinion by Justice John C. Watson and concurred in by Chief Justice Parker and Justice Bickley.

New Mexico onyx mines said to be the best onyx properties in the United States for commercial purposes, are being developed by Alamogordo men. George Warnock of Alamogordo, who is principal owner and manager of the onyx quarries located near Columbus, N. M., returned recently from St. Paul, Minn., where he accompanied the first carload shipment.

Reports from Kingman, Ariz., state that the Gold Ore Mining Company has taken over on purchase seven mining claims adjoining to the north and west of the Goldroad mines from W. A. Brooks, the deal being made on a cash basis. The claims were held by Mr. Brooks for many years and are partly on the strike of the Goldroad north spur.

The Southwest Presbyterian sanatorium at Albuquerque is one of a long list of institutions included in the beneficiaries named in the will of Miss Emily O. Butler, aged philanthropist, who died recently at her home, Fox Meadow, Scarsdale, N. Y. The Albuquerque institution is one of a number of beneficiaries which will receive $5,000 under the will.

Kunda Singh, a Hindu, was arraigned in Phoenix, Ariz., before Justice Nat T. McKee on a charge of "child stealing." The complaint was sworn to by Guadalupe Lopez, foster mother of 13-year-old Rose Delgado, who Singh married at Florence. He was arrested two days later at Yuma and returned to Phoenix by the Maricopa county sheriff's office.

That the New Mexico state game department is able to accomplish some good in its fight for game conservation now because of the support given the department by New Mexico sportsmen, was the statement made to members of the Albuquerque Game Protective Association by Charles Proebstel of Santa Fe, chairman of the State Game Commission.

Douglas H. Nichols, member of the East Las Vegas police department, under $10,000 bond to appear during the December term of District Court and stand trial on a charge of first degree murder in connection with the fatal shooting of Zenon Gurule in a Sapello dance hall, was released from San Miguel county, New Mexico, jail and will resume his duties with the police department.

The opening of the Las Cruces-Cambray cutoff on U. S. Highway No. 50, which will be the first completely surfaced transcontinental route crossing New Mexico, was announced recently by State Highway Engineer W. C. Davidson.

A writ of certiorari in the case of former Governor Arthur T. Hannett, who was recently suspended from the New Mexico bar for one year, was issued recently by former Attorney General Fred M. Wilson of counsel for Hannett, by District Judge H. A. Kibbe of Taos.

the pointer grew more rapid her mouth dropped open—wider and wider—prepared for an ear-piercing scream.

"Keep quiet!" said Miss Cornelia, tensely. There was a pause of a few seconds while the pointer darted from one letter to another, wildly.

"B-A-T-B-A-T-B-A-T," murmured Miss Cornelia, trying to follow the spelled letters.

"It's Russian!" gasped Lizzie, breathlessly, and Miss Cornelia nearly disgraced herself in the eyes of any spirits that might be present by inappropriate laughter.

"That's queer," she said with a forced laugh. She glanced at Lizzie to see how Lizzie was taking it.

All she said was, "Bats indeed! That shows it's spirits—there's been a bat flying around this house all evening."

"I wish you'd tie it up with a handkerchief now," said her mistress, absent-mindedly, still pondering the message that the pointer had spelled.

"B-A-T-B-A-T," she murmured. Thought-transference—warning—accident? Whatever it was, it was nerve-shaking.

She placed the lettered board in Miss Cornelia's lap with a sigh of relief. "You can do it yourself! I'll have none of it!" she said firmly.

"It takes two people and you know it, Lizzie Allen!" Miss Cornelia's voice was stern—but it was also amused.

Lizzie groaned, but she knew her mistress. She obeyed. "I've been working for you for twenty years," she muttered.

"You haven't got a mind. Sit down," she commanded.

Lizzie sat—her hands at her sides. With a sigh of tried patience, Miss Cornelia put her unwilling fingers on the little moving-table that is used to point to the letters on the board itself.

"Now make your mind a blank!" she commanded her factotum.

"You just said I haven't got any mind," complained the latter.

"Well," said Miss Cornelia magnificently, "make what you haven't got a blank."

The repartee silenced Lizzie for the moment—but only for the moment. As soon as Miss Cornelia had settled herself comfortably and tried to make her mind a suitable receiving station for outlandish messages, Lizzie began to murmur the horrors of her heart.

"I've stood by you through thick and thin," she murmured in a low voice. "I stood by you when you were a theosophist—and I seen you through socialism, fetherism and freemasonry—but when it comes to carrying on with ghosts—"

"Do still!" ordered Miss Cornelia. "Nothing will come if you keep chattering!"

"Maybe," said Billy blandly. He seemed quite unperturbed.

"Well, what was the reason?" "All same the same thing—house haunted," Billy's reply was prompt as it was calm.

Miss Cornelia gave a slight laugh. "You know better than that, though, don't you?"

Billy's oriental placidity remained unruffled. He neither admitted nor denied. He shrugged his shoulders.

"Funny house," he said laconically. "Find window open—nobody there. Door slam—nobody there!"

On the heels of his words came a single, startling bang from the kitchen quarters—the bang of a slammed door!

Miss Cornelia dropped her newspaper. Lizzie, frankly frightened, gave a little squeal and moved closer to her mistress.

Only Billy remained impassive—but even he looked sharply in the direction whence the sound had come.

Miss Cornelia was the first of the others to recover her poise.

"Stop that! It was the wind!" she said, a little irritably—the "stop that!" addressed to Lizzie, who seemed on the point of squealing again.

"I think not wind," said Billy. His very lack of perturbation added weight to the statement.

It made Miss Cornelia uneasy. She took out her knitting again.

"How long have you lived in this house, Billy?" "Since Mr. Fleming built."

"I'm," Miss Cornelia pondered. "And this is the first time you have been disturbed?"

"Last two days only." Billy would have made an ideal witness in a court room—he restricted himself so precisely to answering what was asked of him in as few words as possible.

Miss Cornelia ripped out a row in her knitting. She took a long breath.

"What about that face Lizzie said you saw last night at the window?" she asked, in a steady voice.

Billy grinned, as if slightly embarrassed.

"Just face—that's all." "A—man's face?" He shrugged again.

your mind to that. I'm going to find out what's wrong with this place if it takes all summer. I came out to the country for a rest and I'm going to get it."

"You'll get your heavenly rest!" murmured Lizzie, giving it up. She looked pitifully at her mistress's face for a sign that the latter might be weakening—but no such sign came.

Instead, Miss Cornelia seemed to grow more determined.

"Besides," she said, suddenly deciding to share the secret she had hugged to herself all day, "I might as well tell you, Lizzie. I'm having a detective sent down tonight from police headquarters in the city. I dare say he will be stupid enough. Most of them are. But at least we can have one proper night's sleep."

"Not I. I trust no man," said Lizzie. But Miss Cornelia had picked up the paper again.

"The Bat's last crime was a particularly atrocious one," she read. "The body of the murdered man . . ."

But Lizzie could bear no more.

"Why don't you read the funny page once in a while?" she wailed, and hurried to close the windows in the billiard room. The door leading into the billiard room shut behind her.

Miss Cornelia remained reading for a moment. Then—was that a sound from the alcove? She dropped the paper, went into the alcove and stood for a moment at the foot of the stairs, listening. No—it must have been imagination.

But, while she was here, she might as well put on the spring-lock that bolted the door from the alcove to the terrace. She did so, returned to the living-room and switched off the lights for a moment to look out at the coming storm.

It was closer now—the lightning flashes more continuous. She turned on the lights again as Billy re-entered with three candles and a box of matches.

He put them down on a side-table. "New gardener come," he said briefly, to Miss Cornelia's back.

Miss Cornelia turned. "Nice hour for him to get here. What's his name?"

"Say his name Brook," said Billy. Miss Cornelia thought. "Ask him to come in," she said. "And Billy—where are the keys?"

Billy silently took two keys from his pocket and laid them on the table. Then he pointed to the terrace door which Miss Cornelia had just bolted.

"Door up there—spring lock," he said.

"Yes," she nodded. "And the new bolt you put on today makes it fairly secure. One thing is fairly sure, Billy. If anyone tries to get in tonight, he will have to break a window and make a certain amount of noise."

But he only smiled his curious enigmatic smile and went out. "And no sooner had Miss Cornelia seated herself when the door of the billiard room slammed open suddenly—and Lizzie burst into the room as if she had been shot from a gun—her hair wild—her face stricken with fear.

"I heard somebody yell out in the grounds—away down by the gate!" she informed her mistress in a loud stage whisper which had a curious note of pride in it, as if she were not too displeased at seeing her careful predictions so swiftly coming to pass.

"That's Queer," she said, With a Forced Laugh.

Lizzie off for her reading glasses. Miss Cornelia got the evening paper and settled down to what by now had become her obsession.

She skimmed through the article with cool fascination, reading bits of it aloud for Lizzie's benefit.

"Unique criminal—long baffled the police—record of his crimes shows him to be endowed with an almost diabolical ingenuity—so far there is no clue to his identity."

"Pleasant reading for an old woman who's just received a threatening letter," she thought ironically—ah, here was something new, a black-bordered "box" on the front page—a statement by the paper.

She read it aloud. "We must cease combing the criminal world for the Bat and look higher. He may be a merchant—a lawyer—a doctor—honored in his community by day and at night a bloodthirsty assassin."

The print blurred before her eyes—she could read no more for the moment. She thought of the revolver in the drawer of the table close at hand and felt glad that it was there, loaded.

"I'm going to take the butcher knife to bed with me!" Lizzie was saying. Miss Cornelia touched the outboard. "That thing certainly spelled flat," she mused. "I wish I were a man. I'd like to see any lawyer, doctor or merchant of my acquaintance juggling a double life without my suspecting it."

"Every man leads a double life, and some more than that," Lizzie observed. "I guess it resists them, like it does me to take off my corsets."

Miss Cornelia opened her mouth to rebuke her, but just at that moment there was a clink of ice from the hall, and Billy, the Japanese, entered carrying a tray with a pitcher of water and some glasses on it.

STORY FROM THE START

Defying all efforts to capture him, after a long series of murders and robberies, a super-crook known to the police only as "The Bat" has brought about a veritable reign of terror. At his wife's end, and at the man's own request, the chief of police assigns his best operative, Anderson, to get on the trail of the bat. With her niece, Dale Ogden, Miss Cornelia Van Gorder is living in the country home of the late Courtleigh Fleming, who until his recent death had been president of the Union bank.

It was too much. Miss Cornelia found vent for her feelings in crisp exasperation.

"What's the matter with you anyhow, Lizzie Allen?"

The nervousness in her own tones infected Lizzie's. She shivered, frankly.

"Oh, Miss Nelly—Miss Nelly!" she pleaded. "I don't like it! I want to go back to the city!"

Miss Cornelia braced herself. "I have rented this house for four months and I am going to stay," she said, firmly.

"You were born on a brick pavement," she said crushingly. "You get nervous out here? Night whenever a cricket begins to sing or scroops his legs—or whatever it is they do!"

Lizzie bowed before the blast of her mistress's scorn and began to move gingerly toward the alcove door. But obviously she was not entirely convinced.

"Oh, it's more than that, Miss Nelly," she mumbled. "I—"

Miss Cornelia turned to her fiercely. "If Lizzie was going to behave like this, they might as well have it out now between them—before Dale came home."

"What did you really see, last night?" she said in a minatory voice.

The instant relief on Lizzie's face was ludicrous—she so obviously preferred discussing any subject at any length to broying the dangers of the other part of the house unaccompanied.

"I was standing right there at the top of that terrace staircase," she began, gesticulating toward the alcove stairs, in the manner of one who embarks upon the narration of an epic.

"Standing there with your switch in my hand, Miss Nelly—and then I looked down and," her voice dropped, "I saw a gleaming eye! It looked at me and winked! I tell you this house is haunted!"

"A flirtatious ghost?" queried Miss Cornelia, skeptically. She snorted. "Humph! Why didn't you yell?"

hours had not been hours but years. "Miss Dale won't be home for half an hour," she said reflectively.

"And if I have to spend another thirty minutes listening to Lizzie shiver," she thought, "Dale will find me a nervous wreck when she does come home."

She rolled up her knitting and put it back in her sewing bag—it was no use going on, doing work that would have to be ripped out again—and yet she must do something to occupy her thoughts.

She raised her head and discovered Lizzie returning toward the alcove stairs, with the stealthy tread of a panther. The sight exasperated her.

"Now, Lizzie Allen!" she said sharply, "you forget all that superstitious nonsense and stop looking for ghosts! There's nothing in that sort of thing."

She smiled—she would punish Lizzie for her obdurate timorousness. "Where's that outboard?" she questioned, rising, with determination in her eye.

Lizzie shuddered violently. "It's up there—with a prayer book on it to keep it quiet!" she groaned, jerking her thumb in the direction of the farther bookcase.

"Bring it here!" said Miss Cornelia, implacably; then as Lizzie still hesitated, "Lizzie!"

Shivering, opey movement of her body a conscious protest, Lizzie slowly went over to the bookcase, lifted the prayer book, and took down the outboard. Even then, she would not carry it normally, but bore it over to Miss Cornelia at arms-length, as if any closer contact would blast her with lightning, her face a comic mask of loathing and repulsion.

She placed the lettered board in Miss Cornelia's lap with a sigh of relief. "You can do it yourself! I'll have none of it!" she said firmly.

"It takes two people and you know it, Lizzie Allen!" Miss Cornelia's voice was stern—but it was also amused.

Lizzie groaned, but she knew her mistress. She obeyed. "I've been working for you for twenty years," she muttered.

"You haven't got a mind. Sit down," she commanded.

Lizzie sat—her hands at her sides. With a sigh of tried patience, Miss Cornelia put her unwilling fingers on the little moving-table that is used to point to the letters on the board itself.

"Now make your mind a blank!" she commanded her factotum.

"You just said I haven't got any mind," complained the latter.

"Well," said Miss Cornelia magnificently, "make what you haven't got a blank."

Scraps of Humor

HOLLYWOOD HORROR

Phyllida had gone to an exhibition of pictures. Not that she knew anything about art, but it was the thing to do.

"Hallo, Miss Phyllida," said a clever young artist, as she stood gazing at an oil painting. "I see you are interested in art."

Phyllida turned her lovely, vacant eyes on the speaker.

"Me?" she said, "Art who?"

AWFUL PREDICAMENT

"Vivian's in an awful predicament."

"What's the matter?"

"The man she was engaged to at the summer resort is actually writing love letters to her now that she's home."

Homes

Palaces grow in the cities, but homes grow in the little towns. And dot the countryside.

He Knew His Stuff

Examining Officer (explaining magnetism to candidate for navy)—Jack, how many natural magnets are known of?

Jack—Two, sir.

"And will you please name them?"

"Blondes and brunettes, sir."—U. S. Navy.

The Other Way Round

The sergeant paused on his slightly round and prodded the sleeping policeman.

"What, asleep, again?" he growled.

"Can it be from force of habit?"

"No, sir," answered the drowsy constable, "it's just a habit of the force."

Following Orders

"I can't imagine why Smith should be so angry with his son. The boy acted on instructions."

"In what way?"

"His father told him to go out and find an opening and the next thing the youngster did was write and tell his father he was in a hole."

HE OUGHT TO KNOW

"I wonder how old Satan is?"

"I thought you said you had a complete family tree."

Machinery

Machinery each day we see, now thrills framed to deliver. A printing press may prove to be more fearsome than a fiver.

Do Your Stuff, Judge!

Liza—Judge, if'n you grants me a divorce you will save me from committin' a terrible crime.

The Judge—What crime do you mean?

Liza—Bigamy.

Composite Case

Aunt (in Passing Show)—And how many patients have you, James?

Young Doctor—Only one, so far, ammie; but he's given me a good start—he has 25 complaints.

Quick Thinking

"To think this is our honeymoon trip and you went to the station and bought a ticket for only one."

"Well! Well! Now, dearest, what do you think of that? I had forgot, tes myself entirely."

Not Worth the Run

Prime Aunt (at the resort)—No man would catch me running along the beach in a costume like that.

Pert Niece—I don't think any man would try, auntie.

Lesson for September 18

THE KINGDOM DIVIDED

LESSON TEXT—1 Kings 12:1-24.
GOLDEN TEXT—Pride goeth before destruction, and a haughty spirit before a fall.

PRIMARY TOPIC—God Punishes a Foolish King.

JUNIOR TOPIC—God Punishes a Foolish King.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Folly of Pride.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—How to Prevent Divisions.

The movements leading up to the disruption of the kingdom had begun in Solomon's reign. He saw in Jeroboam the leader of insurrection and endeavored to kill him. Jeroboam fled to Egypt until Solomon's death (1 Kings 11:40). Having been informed by the prophet Ahijah that he was to have ten tribes over which to rule, as soon as he heard of Solomon's death he returned to be ready to take up his work.

I. The Demand of the People (vv. 1-4).

This was occasioned by the burden of excessive taxation and enforced labor, which was required by Solomon in order to build costly houses and temples for his heathen wives. The people were groaning under its weight. Upon the accession of the new king Rehoboam, the people, through their leader Jeroboam, came with the request that their burdens be made lighter, promising loyalty to him on the condition of lightened burdens.

II. Rehoboam's Foolish Decision (vv. 5-15).

1. Rehoboam consulted with the old men (vv. 6-7). These were men of experience who had been Solomon's advisers. Being acquainted with the condition as imposed by Solomon, and knowing the temper of the people, they advised that the people's request be granted.

2. Rehoboam consulted the young men (vv. 8-11). These young men had grown up with him, possibly were his half-brothers, sons of Solomon's many wives. Being thus brought up in the luxury of the harem, they were ignorant of the legal right of the people. Therefore they advised that the burdens be increased.

3. Rehoboam followed the advice of the young men (vv. 12-15). At the appointed time he announced his purpose to the people. He even answered them roughly, asserting his purpose to increase their burdens and sorrow. He assumed that it was his right to rule and that it was the people's role to obey regardless of conditions.

III. The Revolt of the Ten Tribes (vv. 16-24).

Upon Rehoboam's announcement of his rash purpose all Israel cried out, "What portion have we in David? . . . to your tents, O Israel."

1. Rehoboam's attempt to collect tribute (vv. 18, 19). As he endeavored to collect tribute from the ten tribes, Adoram, his tribute gatherer, was stoned to death. So violent was the opposition on the part of the people that Rehoboam had to flee to Jerusalem to save his life.

2. Jeroboam made king over Israel (v. 20). They seem to have lost no time in selecting a head so as to be strong in their opposition to Rehoboam.

3. Rehoboam's attempt to compel the ten tribes to return to David (vv. 21-24).

To effect this, he assembled his army of 180,000 men. Through the prophecy of Shemaiah, which forbade them to go against their brethren, they were persuaded to return.

IV. Jeroboam's Scheme to Unify the Ten Tribes (vv. 25-33).

1. He established calf worship (vv. 25-33).

(1) He built houses and high places (v. 31). This was against the direct command of God. God had directed His people to destroy the high places and to break down the idolatrous centers. So we see that Jeroboam, by the demands of his sinful heart, disobeyed God.

(2) He changed the day of the feast of the Tabernacle (v. 32). The time of this feast was set by the Lord (Lev. 23:35, 34). Jeroboam argued that the change in the time would be better suited to their northern climate, but God, who made the climate ordained the time of the feast. It was His business, therefore, to obey God.

(3) Jeroboam himself intrudes into the priest's office. The act of presumption on his part was the climax of his godless acts, all of which grew out of his wicked heart.

Cornstalk Test Has Been Tried

Practical Application of Method Reported by Purdue Specialist.

The new "cornstalk" test for determining plant food requirements of the soil is receiving a great amount of attention following the completion of an extensive survey in which the test was applied in Pennsylvania, Ohio, Kentucky, Indiana, Illinois, Missouri, Iowa and other states. Announcement is made that the hundreds of tests thus made agree remarkably well with the results of field experiments in these states.

Apply Certain Chemicals.

The test is made during the latter part of the season by cutting down the stalk and applying certain chemicals to the tissues. Abundance or lack of nitrogen is indicated by one test, while the presence of excess iron in the joints, as shown by another chemical, indicates a deficiency of potassium.

The practical application of this method is well illustrated by the experience of R. F. Rauth of Warrick county, Indiana, as reported by Prof. C. T. Gregory of Purdue agricultural experiment station.

Three years ago Mr. Rauth was much discouraged with his corn crop, and had about decided that his clay soil was not fitted for corn. Yields were very low as were those of his neighbors on the same kind of land. Learning about the proposed new tests of Dr. G. N. Hoffer, at Purdue university, he sent stalks in to be tested and received the reply that the stunted condition indicated lack of potash and the iron in the joints showed serious need of potash.

Produced Better Corn.

In 1925 he used a 2-12-2 fertilizer and produced much better corn, but still it was not quite what he wanted. Stalks were again sent in and this time the reply was to use more potash in the fertilizer. In 1926 Rauth used two analyses, 0-10-10 on part of the field, and 2-12-0 on the rest of the field. The results showed that lack of potash, as well as of phosphoric acid, was causing his difficulty. He also found that his corn was free from root rot, indicating that this disease is due in large part to nutritional defects.

Superior Layers Made by Proper Attention

To insure good layers next fall, keep the young birds healthy and keep them growing, advises L. M. Black, assistant poultry specialist at the New Jersey College of Agriculture. Everlasting attention to every detail should be the rule of the range during the summer months.

"The growing birds must have a constant supply of fresh water and sufficient mash hopper space must be provided," says Mr. Black. "Mash is responsible for maximum growth and it should be always available. If the birds will not eat sufficient mash in the houses, place some sheltered hoppers on the range.

"Our two great disease troubles, coccidiosis and intestinal worm infections, can be controlled only through sanitation. Clean and disinfect the houses frequently. That flies are spreaders of tapeworm cannot be overlooked, and every effort should be made to discourage their presence on the range. Don't allow rubbish and manure piles to accumulate, for they furnish ideal breeding places for this pest. Treat the manure piles liberally with hydrated lime.

"Finally, attempt to adjust the mash and grain ration so that the pullets do not come into production too early. Aim to allow five months for the growing period of Leghorn pullets. Then, before they come into a heavy lay or when they are laying about 10 per cent on range, move them to the laying pens and endeavor to get them in prime condition by feeding scratch grain heavily. Rest assured that the care and pains thus taken will be repaid, and that a flock of well-grown, healthy pullets is not only a source of profit but also of deep satisfaction."

There Should Be Plenty Hopper Space for All

There should be enough hopper space to feed all the chicks at one time if they want to eat at the same table. They won't, but having the space means that the stronger chicks will not have opportunity to trample on the weaker chicks and make cowards and runts of them. It is better, but not always practical to keep the chicks of different ages separate. Home-made devices for giving the baby chicks the front row at the hoppers are varied and successful. Any system that keeps the droppings from the mash and gives the baby chicks a chance is good. Keep the mash hoppers filled. Alternate feed and famine plays the mischief with chicks.

Feed for Fattening

In Wisconsin and other northern states they oftentimes report that pound for pound ground barley is fully equal to corn for fattening hogs. In the corn belt, however, a pound of corn usually seems to be of more value than a pound of barley. There is so much variation in the quality of both barley and corn that it is pretty hard to make any very definite comparisons. Barley feeds almost but not quite as much protein supplement as does corn.

Many Farmers Are Picking Seed Corn

Make Selection in Field Before Ears Ripen.

Selecting seed corn in the field before frost and preferably before all the ears are ripe affords a better opportunity to determine the relative time of maturity and freedom from disease, say agronomists at the Kansas State Agricultural college.

It is always a good plan to select more seed than will be needed, agronomists say, as replanting may be necessary and there is also the possibility of selling surplus seed to neighbors. Many Kansas farmers have been able to add considerably to their income by selling seed corn.

Ears with poorly filled tips or with poorly rounded butts have been found to yield just as well as the better appearing ears. Tapering ears, which were formerly discriminated against, appear to yield just as well as the preferred cylindrical ears. There seems to be a definite relation, however, between indentation of the kernel and yield.

Experiments show that kernels only slightly indented, and therefore on relatively smooth ears, produce better yields than deeply dented kernels from rough ears. This is accounted for by the fact that rough ears usually have deep kernels and are late in maturing.

The shape of the ears and depth of the kernels does not seem to be especially important so long as well-matured, disease-free ears, of a large size and depth of kernel as can safely be matured, are selected. It is desirable to select those ears which have straight rows and uniform kernels. Kernels from ears with zigzag rows are uneven in size and shape and will not be planted uniformly, especially if the edge drop planter is used.

No special care in storing seed corn is essential so long as the seed is thoroughly dried before frost and kept dry until planted. The matter of prompt, thorough drying, however, is important. Usually, hanging the corn in a machine shed or attic where there is good ventilation is all that is necessary. Protection from the weather and rodents, and good ventilation are about the only essentials.

Give the Broody Hens Plenty Air and Feed

There are two things that will cause a broody hen to quit sitting quicker than any amount of rough treatment. They consist in giving her plenty of fresh air from underneath and an abundance of good egg producing ration. Air can be supplied by building a crate with a slatted bottom. This should be placed in a shady spot where the hens will feel like eating. It should be set on the ground as when the birds are more apt to sit. When the hen must sit on slats that allow the air to come up through the bottom she is very apt to lose her desire for sitting.

A feed trough should be attached to this broody crate so that plenty of good egg mash can be provided. Feeding sour skim milk will prove helpful. Broody hens may be released from such a crate every other day about five o'clock in the evening and the few that go back to the nest may be given a return trip to the broody pen.

Milk and Meat Scrap in Ration of Laying Hen

According to the Missouri poultry department, two gallons of milk are equal to one pound of meat scrap in the ration of the hen. It means that hens must drink quite a lot of milk each day to obtain protein equal to the amount received in a dry mash containing 20 per cent meat scrap. One hundred hens would need four gallons of milk.

It is sometimes difficult to make the hens drink enough milk to replace all the meat scrap, but if the meat scrap is reduced one-half, and the hens have all the milk they can drink, it seems to produce good results in egg production.

Agricultural Facts

Keep out of the bean patch while it is wet if you don't want rust.

After clover is grown for two years, crop yields on average lands are practically doubled.

Pulling the "suckers" off the corn results in nothing but a labor cost of from three to six dollars an acre.

Longer days and better work on the farm mean longer days of leisure when the leisure time rolls around.

Lime sweetens the soil and makes it possible to grow good crops of clover and alfalfa and other legumes.

The farmer who grows his food and feed at home doesn't need to gamble quite so much on a questionable cash crop.

The largest item in cost of producing corn is labor, plowing and cultivating requiring 67 per cent of this labor cost.

Don't be parsimonious with your fertilizer, but be sure that you get fertilizer of quality. The other kind will not make quality fruit.

SMART WOOLEN SPORTS COATS; TRIMMING FOR AUTUMN HATS

TO AUTUMN'S first call for chic, there is no answer so timely as that of a smart-looking sports coat. This is the time of year when the warm tones of the modish leaf browns and other intermingling ruddy shades of the new wooleens tune in most harmoniously with nature's own color scheme.

Patterned wooleens, plaids, checks and interesting geometrical figures are having "their day" this season; that is, for sports wear. For dressy coats, suede cloth, velvet and broadcloth are receiving highest acclaim.

Very clever things are being accomplished in fabric design such as the globe? Quite a foolish question, to be sure, unless it serves its purpose of calling attention to the fact that the early autumn hats are lavishly stitched row upon row.

The new feature of this stitching is that much of it is done with metal thread. The effect of this glint and glitter on velvet or on felt is arresting.

Another attractive note sounded in this season's advance models is the softness of crown and brim. Even hats broad of brim can be folded up without injury to them, so flexible are they.

These outstanding style items are Woolen Coat for School, Sports or Travel.

tapestry effects, ombre colorings, chevron stripes, with tweed and basket weaves coming in for a full share of notice.

While the now flare lines are being adopted for the more formal models, the straight silhouette is retained for the sports type. Saddle shoulder sleeves appear most often in these travel and sports coats. There's a display of genius in clever pockets, in discreet trimmings of solid-colored fabric, and all signs point to a season of lavish fur trimmings, though conservative types often show merely a fur collar as here pictured. As to linings, either crepe de chine or natural kaasha is in favor. There are many belted coats in the advance collections. Often the belt is of self nected in the collection of lovely autumn chapeaux presented in the illustration.

The top hat is a machine stitched felt shape, done row and row about the brim and the crown band, also on self-trimming at the side.

The hat to the left has a soft flexible brim with undulating edge. There are rows of fine machine stitching done in gold thread both on crown and on brim. A wreath of gilded leather leaves at the base of the crown is in harmony with the gold and black theme of the design.

There is some tendency to off-the-face brims as shown in the model to the left of center in this picture. This brim has no stiffening whatever. It is cleverly held in place by a bow of fabric, but just an often colorful and unique suede belts are worn, which contrast strikingly with the novelty-patterned material of the coat.

Diagonal stripes are one of the new items among coats which strike an introductory autumn note.

Not only are shaggy furs used for collars on tweeds and novelty wooleens, but some of the very smart newer modes are collared and cuffed with seal or beaver.

Coats after the style of the one illustrated are ideal for the schoolgirl, as well as for sports or travel.

For the mind that does on statistics here is an interesting problem to figure out. If all the rows of stitching which appear on the new felt and velvet hats were to form in one continuous length, how many times will this new-so-stylish stitching reach around the circumference of felt cloth drawn through slashes in the velvet of which the hat is made. Machine stitching smartly makes its appearance in rows about the brim edge.

In the lower left corner is a fetching model of grosgrain ribbon for the crown with velvet scallops for the brim which are also outlined with rows of stitching.

The crown of the last hat in the group is plaited with machine stitching corresponding to rows on the brim.

Death-Dealing Ocean Flights Prevented

To prevent further loss of life in attempts to make airplane ocean voyages have not only been discouraged, but a sudden stop has been put to all arrangements for further flights, to which the public, with one accord, will say Amen. As Rome was not built in a day, neither can we expect airplane flights overseas to be successful until air navigation has passed beyond its infancy and reached a point toward perfection and safety so that human life may not be sacrificed to such an alarming extent as this and other countries have lately experienced.

Even then, as in other forms of travel, can we expect to escape some casualties, for with all the perfection in railroad, steamship and automobile travel, dangers often lurk in their pathways and in spite of the many safety first devices for saving human life, accidents happen, baffling the minds of experts to explain. With the last two mentioned, there is a much lesser amount of danger to encounter from the fact that should machinery become unmanageable or out of commission, repair shops can be reached in short order while with airplane, especially over the high seas, no relief can be obtained and loss of life where machinery fails to function, is bound to occur.

Overseas flight attempts, as conditions now are, should not only be prevented, but considered criminal until those who now have the leading knowledge of air navigation shall have devised ways and means whereby the deep seas may be flown over with at least some degree of safety, where as it now is, there is none whatever.

"Spreading Bull" Denies Some of His Own Children

Ex-Governor Arthur Hannett, the hard loser, who knocks everything and everybody except himself, has about run out of material, and in one of his recent 'columns' in the Albuquerque Journal, he assaults the present highway department and says that it has purchased costly road machinery, but has no mechanics to operate the same. He also says that the state highways are in bad condition, compared with the time when 'I' was the Governor.

"Spreading Bull" has perhaps forgotten that some of the ones he is now denouncing as incapable of operating road machinery are the very men he praised so highly for efficiency during his administration and are still on the payroll. He has overlooked the fact that tourists who avoided our highway when 'I' was Governor, are loud in their praise of our highways built and being maintained by the Republican administration with Republicans directing the work. What did 'Spreading Bull' do for Lincoln County and what is the present administration doing for our highways? The good work speaks for itself.

The Club held its first meeting at the home of Mrs. Louise Coe Sept. 10.

In connection with the meeting, the ladies gave a reception to the teachers of the vicinity, which was enjoyed by about 40 guests.

Mrs. Mims conducted the program which consisted of piano and vocal music, with short addresses by Mrs. J. V. Tully, Miss Wiladeen Brown and Mrs. Geo. Dixon was also very much enjoyed from the Alamogordo guests who were Mrs. Tom Charles, Mrs. A. E. Thomas, Mrs. Todd, and Mrs. Strickland.

At the close of the business session, Mrs. J. H. Mims was elected as delegate to the State Federation Meeting. Mrs. J. V. Tully and Mrs. Louise Coe are expected to attend also, as state officers.

Refreshments of ice cream, strawberries and cake were served. The next meeting will be held Oct. 1, at the 'Tea Room' of Gililand's Tavern, and Mrs. J. H. Mims will be the hostess.

THIS NURSE NOW HAS GOOD HEALTH

Praises Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for some time and would not be without it in the house. As I am a child's nurse, I have to be on my feet a great deal and your medicine has helped me wonderfully. I was hardly able to do my housework when I began taking it, and now I am a strong and well woman, able to do all that and go out nursing besides. I have also used the Sanative Wash and found it beneficial."—Mrs. Gertrude L. Stewart, 103 Davis St., Grandfield, Mass.

Valuable for Weakness
"I have found Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a valuable medicine for weakness."—Mrs. J. A. Frazier, Box 307, Lancaster, Pa.
Hundreds of letters like these are received by the Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. Grateful women from Pennsylvania to Washington, from Texas to Illinois and from Rhode Island to Nebraska say that their health has improved since taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Housing Conditions of New York's Poor Bad

With the general increase of luxurious apartment houses for the wealthy the New York city health department is endeavoring to bring before the public the fact that housing conditions in certain parts of the lower and extreme upper East side have not kept pace with the sanitary progress of the rest of the city. The infant mortality and general mortality rates and the tuberculosis rate of these parts is considerably higher than the rates for the city as a whole. Field nurses from the department have recently completed a house-to-house survey of these districts. The conditions disclosed, Louis I. Harris, health commissioner, describes as menacing and intolerable. Bedrooms are crowded and badly ventilated. Many families live in basements. Saturated throughout the sections are factory buildings which the commissioner regards as having a definite influence upon the health of the children. Doctor Harris hopes to arouse the city to the need of remedial measures.

DADDY'S EVENING FAIRY TALE

Mary Graham Bonner
COPYRIGHT BY WESTERN PUBLISHING CO.

THE APPLE TREE

"Of all the trees in the orchard," began Daddy, "every spring this old apple tree I am going to tell you about had the most beautiful blossoms."
"And when midsummer came along the apples that came out on that tree had, somehow, a better taste than the apples from any other tree."
"And one day I found out the reason."

"I thought the hammock, which hung under the apple tree, looked very comfortable, and so I made myself most cozy and happy."
"It was not long before I dozed off into a nice little nap, and then I heard what the apple tree was saying to the little unripe apples on the boughs."

"You must grow to be fine and ripe, and you must keep all the little apple seeds good and warm so they can be just as brown as brown can be."
"That will mean that little boys and little girls can eat all they want."

for as long as the seeds are brown they can never do any harm.
"And you, apples, you must be very sure that you turn around and have the sun warm you and make you bright and red."
"As the old apple tree was talking, I noticed that the apples just grow a little bit bigger, and redder, and fatter, and looked as though—oh—they were so juicy and wonderful inside."

"I was certain, too, that the little seeds were growing browner every minute."

"You see," he continued, "it's such an honor for us. You know that on the day we're ripe, the Fairy Queen brings all the little fairies to admire us."

"They sit on the boughs and wave about with us."

"And more than that—you know the apple that is first ripe goes to the Fairy Queen and then some more go to the little fairies!"

"The fairies are too kind to take away the apples that real people like to eat—and so the old apple tree has arranged to have a great many more that we can't see—they're called the apples of Fairyland."

"And the tree still went on talking: "I, too, am working hard. I am practicing my best bow to make to the Fairy Queen when she arrives the first day all the apples are ripe."

"She is to come very, very early in the morning while everyone else is sleeping."

"And when the children get up and find the apples are ripe so quickly, won't they be delighted!"

"Now, get around so Mr. Sun will help you along. He's the greatest help in the world to us—such a dear old soul!"

"Of course, that flattered Mr. Sun so he helped still more, and just as I could feel him shining down with all his might—I woke up."

"I moved away from the apple tree then—for it was no longer shady—the sun had come around and told me to get up!"

"But as I walked away and saw the apple tree waving around I knew it was practicing for its bow and making the little apples hurry up and ripen."

Sister Was Too Loose
Bob was given the care of little sister while mother made a few purchases. At the end of five minutes he appeared in the store forcibly towing the baby.

"Oh, mamma," said he with weary patience, "but her in the cab. This way she's too loose."

G. O. P. Men in Legion Plan to Boom Pershing for President of U. S.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

POLITICAL leaders in Washington have learned that there is a full-fledged movement within the American Legion to promote the nomination of General Pershing for the Presidency by the Republican party. The general is to go to France on the Leviathan as the guest of the Legion, and it is said that influential members of the organization who are also influential Republicans will be aboard with him and will take the opportunity to arrange the details of the plan. Then, at the Legion's convention in Paris, the boom is to be sprung as the climax of a series of demonstrations. It will be easy to keep the former commander of the A. E. F. in the limelight over there, and the boom will be brought back to the United States all developed, according to the plans of its promoters.

Ever since General Pershing returned from France after the war he has been intermittently boomed for the Presidency. In 1919 a movement for his nomination in the 4020 convention was started, but it failed to develop sufficient momentum to place him actively in the field in the pre-convention contest. His name figured occasionally in the discussions during the convention, which finally selected Warren G. Harding.

If General Pershing should become a serious contender for the nomination next year he would be the oldest candidate in the field. He will be sixty-seven years of age on September 13, Frank O. Lowden was sixty-seven next January, Charles E. Hughes was sixty-five last April, while Charles G. Dawes is sixty-two and Herbert Hoover fifty-three.

Vice President Dawes and Secretary Hoover are still leaving their booms in the hands of their friends, both having said they were not seeking the nomination. Mr. Lowden, on the other hand, is out in the open as a contender and has appointed as his pre-convention manager Fred Starck, former director of the war finance corporation. Just before President Coolidge left Yellowstone park he was visited by a party of Wyoming editors, nearly all of whom told him they and their communities favored the nomination of Hoover because he helped frame the Coolidge policies, is a good administrator and, they believed, would safely carry on the present national prosperity.

Reports have been current in official circles in the summer capital in Rapid City that Secretary Hoover will offer his resignation to President Coolidge within the next few months and devote his energies to winning delegates. Campaign committees for Hoover are ready to spring into existence in many states and headquarters will be opened in Washington and directed by his present secretary, George Ackerson.

DEMOCRATIC leaders hear that there is a prospect that many states, especially in the South, will send unstructured delegations to the Democratic national convention for the purpose of avoiding, so far as possible, the bitter factional strife that characterized the convention of 1924. Some of the backers of William G. McAdoo in that contest are among those responsible for the unstructured delegation policy. Their original thought was to bring about harmony by agreeing in conference at convention time upon the nomination of some one other than either McAdoo or Gov. At Smith of New York.

EARLY among the President's callers after his return to the Black Hills was Senator Wesley Jones of Washington. He is chairman of the senate merchant marine committee, and after his talk with the Chief Executive he declared himself in favor of keeping the American merchant marine afloat and isolated that if it were necessary to accomplish this the government would continue to operate the fleet and would provide funds for replacement. He said he agreed with the President's view that the government should get out of the business, but did not think the United States should get off the seas. "It appears to me now," said the senator, "that unless we continue to operate the ships that is what will happen. Other plans of placing the American shipping on a parity with foreign shipping by a subsidy such as exists in most countries have failed to enlist the support of congress. It appears that we can do nothing through a subsidy to help private concerns engaged in shipping. Therefore, the situation is plain to me the government must continue to operate the ships and vast sums must be expended to keep our fleet abreast of competition."

Senator Jones told the President that in his opinion it would be wise to call a special session of the senate in October for the consideration of the cases of Senator-elect Smith of Illinois and Senator-elect Vane of Pennsylvania. He said the pressure of business made this advisable so that legislation should not get jammed. Senator Reed of Missouri, chairman of the senate campaign funds investigation committee, while in Chicago to attend the funeral of J. Ogden Armour, issued a call for a meeting of that committee in Chicago on September 7 to take up the matter of destruction of the Pennsylvania ballots. He said there had been no developments that called for further consideration of the case of Smith by the committee.

TRANSOCEANIC flights, succession flight and otherwise, are becoming matters of almost daily occurrence. W. S. Brock and E. F. Schileo in the plane Pride of Detroit made a fine flight from Harbor Grace, Newfoundland, to Croydon, the London airport, and then continued their journey to Munich, to Belgrade and to Constantinople in their projected flight around the world in what they hope will be record-breaking time. Another pair of flyers started from London, Ont., for London, England, but were turned back by bad weather. Charles A. Levine, gird of waiting for Drouhin, his French pilot, jumped into his Columbia plane at Paris and flew alone to Croydon where he just barely managed to make a safe landing. The British airmen were astonished by his nerve performance. Levine selected Capt. W. C. Hinchcliffe, an English war ace, to pilot the Columbia back to America but afterward said he might change his mind and fly eastward.

The spectacular flight of the week was that of Capt. Leslie Hamilton and Col. F. E. Minchin of England, with Princess Lowenstein Wertheimer as passenger, from Upaven, England, across the Atlantic to Ottawa, Canada. The princess, who financed the flight, is sixty-one years old and has been a licensed pilot for thirteen years, usually flying under her maiden name, Lady Anne Saville. Minchin and Hamilton are old-timers at the flying game.

RENEWED hope that Paul Redfern, who disappeared in his flight from Georgia to Brazil, might be found came with the report that a plane was seen two days after his start, over the delta of the Orinoco river in Venezuela. It was said to be moving south-easterly, and later another report from a government telegraph operator at Ciudad Bolivar said a plane had been sighted flying over the village of Macarito. It was believed Redfern might have landed safely and was making his way out to civilization.

DESPERATE fighting in China took place between the northern troops of Marshal Sun Chuang-fang, and the armies of the south which were trying to keep possession of Shanghai. Though the northerners were reported to have met with a severe defeat in a four-day battle along the Yangtze, later advised said they were hanging on and steadily pushing west across the river. The southerners apparently had abandoned Nanking and withdrawn to prepared positions south of that city. Chinese cruisers in the river at first fought against the northern troops that were crossing, but afterward held aloof, probably having been bought off by Marshal Sun.

The Twenty-sixth Nationalist army is in and about Shanghai, under the command of Gen. Chou Feng-chi, but its loyalty to the Nationalists was questioned. This matter worried the foreigners there, for the men of that army were supposed to be anti-foreign as well as communist.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY LOWMAN intends to stop the smuggling of liquor from Canada if it can be done, and has been conferring with members of the royal Canadian commission with that in view. The United States is seeking a supplementary agreement under which Canada will attempt to prevent liquor shipments to the United States instead of limiting its activity to merely giving notice that such shipments have been declared. Canada, on the other hand, wants the United States to do its utmost to stop smuggling of industrial alcohol to Canada, for the reason that such shipments are seriously cutting into the dominion revenues.

Mr. Lowman said the border patrol westward from Buffalo, including the Detroit river area, would be increased from 200 to 400 men, and that it might be necessary to enlarge the coast guard fleet on the Great Lakes. The prohibition bureau instead of the customs service is now handling the liquor smuggling prevention work.

VISCOUNT CECIL, chancellor of the duchy of Lancaster, created a sensation by resigning from the British cabinet, giving as his chief reason the attitude of the cabinet toward the United States in the recent futile naval disarmament conference. He also let it be known that he expressly opposes the tyranny of the big powers over the affairs of the League of Nations, in the procedure of which he has been a dominating factor.

"I have resigned because of the handling of the disarmament question generally, culminating in the failure of the naval conference," Lord Cecil told the correspondents. "I was not in sympathy with the instructions I received from the British cabinet and I believe an agreement could have been reached without any sacrifice of the British interests."

Lord Cecil's withdrawal from the League of Nations, and the resignation of M. de Jovenal, the French delegate, were believed in Geneva to open the way to Foreign Minister Stresemann of Germany to become the dominating figure in the league. It was said he would have the solid support of the smaller nations and the war-time neutrals if he would honestly stand by the covenant regarding disarmament.

CHICAGO'S moving picture theaters, 350 or more in number, were shut up tight last week by their owners because of disputes with the Motion Picture Operators' union. A few independent houses undertook to operate, but film distributors cut off their supply of pictures. Both sides were apparently determined to make it a fight to a finish, and there were prospects that the strike and lockout might be extended to other territory. It was estimated that the theaters were losing $225,000 daily, and that 25,000 employees were out of work. Attorneys for the union applied to the Federal courts for an injunction against the film distributors to force them to deliver films to the independent theaters.

ECHOES of the Sacco-Vanzetti case are heard daily, in the form of riotous demonstrations, quarrels among the radicals over the defense fund, and threats against the American Legion by French communists. The General Confederation of Labor, representing a great majority of French unionized labor, gave way to the radical element and voted after a stormy meeting not to participate in the national holiday activities in connection with the Legation on September 15.

WANTED: A MAN

By EVELYN GAGE-BROWNE

WANTED—A man who likes to work.
And who can find things to do Without his needing a manager's help,
And several assistants, too.

A man who gets to work on time,
And who doesn't endanger the rest,
By being 'the first one' to rush away—
But all day long does his best.

A man who listens to what he is told,
Then does that thing just right;
Who puts his heart and soul in his job,
And hustles with all his might.

A man who never pities himself
For having to pitch in and dig,
But who is determined to just "make good"
And be worthy of being BIG.

A man who always tells the truth
And looks you straight in the eye,
A man you can bank on every time
To scorn deceit and a lie.

A man who gives you service-plus,
And whose work is A Number One,
Who never kicks at "overtime"
When his regular work is done.

A man who works for vastly more Than so many dollars a day,
Who is ready for rapid promotion, too,
Whenever it comes his way.

WANTED, such a man to get to the top
And sit in the President's chair;
If interested, apply any time
To just anyone, anywhere!

WHEN I WAS TWENTY-ONE

BY JOSEPH KAYE

At 21—"Uncle" Joe Cannon began his Legal struggles.

AT TWENTY-ONE I was a law student and was admitted to the bar a year. In Shelbyville, Ind., where I was practicing, I waited a whole year for a client who never came so I went to Tuscola, Ill.—because that was as far as my money would carry me on the railroad.—Joseph G. Cannon.

"Uncle Joe," as Mr. Cannon was popularly known, was made state attorney for the Twenty-seventh Judicial district of Illinois when he was only twenty-five and from then on until some years ago he had been in public office, becoming one of the famous political leaders in the country during his incumbency as speaker of the house.

Do You Know

...??... That ...??...

HOBSON'S CHOICE is a phrase denoting a choice without an alternative?

Hobson's Choice, so called in reference to the practice of Tobias Hobson. It is said that he was the first man in England to hire out hack horses. When a customer made his appearance, it was his practice to lead him into the stable and show his goodly array of beasts. The customer, however, was obliged to take the horse next to the door so that every one should be served alike, or according to his chance. Thereafter it became a byword to say, "Hobson's Choice" when what ought to have been one's choice was in reality forced upon one.—Anna S. Turnquist.

Every occupation lifts itself with the

The occupation that will not do that no man really has a right to occupy himself about.

SEASONABLE IDEAS

NOW that the mushroom season is on, it is wise to put up for winter use the surplus found in the fields.
They make delicious sauces, and various dishes when served with a few mushrooms are quite out of the ordinary. They may be spiced and pickled like any other vegetable.

Mushroom Catsup.

Gather fresh mushrooms and pack them in alternate layers of salt in a stone jar. Let stand for twenty-four hours. Chop fine after standing and mix well. Let stand for two more days, then drain. Place the strained liquid in a kettle and bring to the boiling point and boil three minutes.
To every four cups of the liquid add one cupful of good vinegar (elder vinegar is best). Add one tablespoonful of cayenne pepper, three of allspice, two of ginger, one of cloves and one-half of mace. Boil until reduced to half the amount, then bottle and seal while hot.

Pickled Onions.

Put boiling water over small white pickling onions to loosen the skins.
Peel them, soak in strong brine twenty-four hours. Wash and place in a preserving kettle and cover with one part skimmed milk and two parts water. Boil gently for ten minutes. Drain, wash again and pour into bottles. Fill with hot spiced vinegar. Seal in the usual manner. The milk keeps the onions from turning yellow, it is said.

Scrambled Eggs With Corn.

Take one cupful of freshly grated corn, one cupful of milk, one tablespoonful of finely minced green pepper, one tablespoonful of butter and one-half teaspoonful of salt. Put the corn, pepper and half of the milk in a saucepan and cook five minutes.
Beat the eggs and add the rest of the milk, add to the corn and cook slowly until set. Add butter and salt if needed and serve on slices of buttered toast.

Ginger Punch.

Chop three-fourths of a pound of canton ginger, add one-quart of water, one cupful of sugar and boil twenty minutes. Cool and add three tablespoonfuls of ginger sirup, three-fourths of a cupful of orange juice, one-half cupful of lemon juice and large pieces of ice. Stir until well chilled and add one quart of spillimaris water.

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

By F. A. WALKER

PICKING FLAWS

EVER since the world began and the serpent convinced Eve that the Garden arrangements were not at all what they should be, criticism has been one of the most popular activities of the human mind.
Did you ever notice how many
"I's" there are in the word?
Criticism.

It is the "I's" that make it so popular. Listen to a habitual critic, a well-developed fault-finder. Every one of his criticisms begins with "I think" or "I believe" or "I see," and then follows his opinion, fully and freely expressed.

Criticism, when the critic knows what he is talking about and delivers his opinion in a constructive and helpful way, is well worth while. When it is offered without a basis of information and experience and without a service of betterment it is harmful and worse than useless.

Too often the critic measures the learning and wisdom of others by the yardstick of his own ignorance or prejudice.

One of the greatest statues carved by Michelangelo was the colossal "Young David," which he cut from a block of marble which another sculptor had rejected some forty years before.

This statue of David and his superlative figure of Moses are the greatest statues since the days of Praxiteles and worthy to rank with the best Greece produced.

When Michelangelo had finished
"David" he asked some of his artist friends to view it, among them Soderini, of little talent and soon forgotten.

Vasari, who was a great admirer of Michelangelo and whose stories of the art world at that period are interesting reading, tells the anecdote of Soderini's criticism as follows:

"When he saw the statue it pleased him much, but he said to Michelangelo, who was engaged in retouching it, that he thought the nose was too thick. Michelangelo, seeing that Soderini was below the statue, and could not see it truly, and seeing that he went up on the scaffold, taking with him a chisel and a little marble and made believe as if working, letting a little dust fall from his hand as he did so, but not at any time touching the nose of the figure. Then looking down at Soderini he said: 'Look at it now!'

"It pleases me much better," said
Soderini, "you have given it life!"

"So," says Vasari, "Michelangelo came down, pitying those who make a show of understanding matters about which they really know nothing."

Do not think that because a man accepts your criticism he really thinks your judgment better than his. He accepts it, perhaps, because you are his boss or because he would rather endure your wrong judgment than to waste his time in argument.

Disraeli, earl of Beaconsfield, who had his full share of criticism, said:
"It is much easier to be critical than to be correct."

Socrates, when he was told by the Delphic oracle that he was the wisest man in all Greece, which was undoubtedly true, replied: "It is because that I alone of all the Greeks know that I know nothing."

To criticize that which you yourself cannot equal is impudence.

Measure yourself before you estimate others.
There is no surer way to prove your ignorance and establish your little-ness than to deride your life to the criticisms of those whose efforts and accomplishments are beyond the capacity of your own endeavors.

Poultry Victims of Floods

Human beings, generally, are the chief recipients of aid from the Red Cross in times of disaster, but in the recent floods on the Mississippi, animals were rescued and cared for in great numbers, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. At Opelousas, St. Landry parish, La., the largest temporary hen yard in the United States was constructed to feed 100,000 chickens driven from their roosts by the flood waters. The feathered refugees were fed by the Red Cross, as were 20,000 hogs, 10,000 mules and some 50,000 head of cattle. One of the problems arising from the work was to find the owners.

Reaper's Centenary

This is the centenary year of the

of which, obviating the necessity of large numbers of sycophants, was bitterly resented by agricultural laborers.
Dr. Patrick Bell, a minister of Car-myle, Arbroath, Scotland, invented it while he was a student at St. Andrews' university, and the presbytery of Arbroath has appointed a committee to consider the best method of celebrating the centenary of Bell's invention.

the executioner's ax. The bride said she loved to munge in the chapel in her childhood and was more fond of it than of any place she knew.—

"What is my present car worth in trade?"

OCCASIONALLY you hear a car owner say: "I'm going to buy such and such a new car because the dealer has offered me the best deal on my present car."

But without understanding the economics of trade-in transactions, you cannot be sure that the largest allowances offered means the best deal for you.

These are basic facts:

- 1 Your present car has only one fundamental basis of value; i. e., what the dealer who accepts it in trade can get for it in the used car market.
- 2 Your present car has seemingly different values because competitive dealers are bidding to sell you a new car,
- 3 The largest allowance offered is not necessarily the best deal for you. Sometimes it is; sometimes it is not.
- 4 An excessive allowance may mean that you are paying an excessive price for the new car in comparison with its real value.
- 5 First judge the merits of the new car in comparison with its price; including all delivery and finance charges. Then weigh any difference in allowance offered on your present car.

Remember that when you trade-in your present car you are after all making a purchase, not a sale. You are simply applying your present car as a credit toward the purchase price of a new car.

Attorney and Mrs. Geo. Barber, son, Geo., grandson, Ben West, Jr., and granddaughter, Mary Josephine, left this morning for Tucson, Arizona where they will visit at the home of Mr. Ben West, who is first police sergeant of the Tucson police force. Mr. Barber will return in two weeks, but Mrs. Barber will remain until Mr. West's sister arrives and takes charge of Mr. West's household interests. We regret the departure of the West children, as little Ben and little Mary Josephine have been big factors in the child life of this community and have a warm place in the hearts of Carrizozo people. Their stay will be but for the fall and winter and will return to their grandparents in the spring.

Geo. Titaworth of the Titaworth Co., Inc., of Capitan, was in Carrizozo last Sunday to meet Mrs. Titaworth, who was returning from a trip to Santa Fe and Socorro. They arrived home Sunday evening.

Camel

The cigarette that makes smoking a genuine pleasure

You can smoke Camels all day long without thought but of the pleasure and refreshment that each one brings. That's the advantage of choice tobaccos and skilful blending.
